Passing on a tradition

A Notre Dame student passes on the tradition of Frisbee throwing to a youngster on campus. The welcome appearance of the sun yesterday brought many students onto the quads. The abnormally great weather should continue for the next few days, giving more excuses to get away from the books for awhile and enjoy the great outdoors.

Dominican conference to be attended by Healy and ND administrators

By MIRIAM HILL
Copy Editor

A trip to the Dominican Republic for a conference titled "The Expectations of Youth and the Catholic University" will provide a much-needed break from a long South Bend summer for Student Body President Bill Healy.

Healy will accompany Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, Provost Timothy O'Meara, and Michael Loux, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, to the conference, sponsored by the International Federation of Catholic Universities.

Because the theme of the conference speaks directly to students today, the University invited a student to attend - something it never has done before. In past years, Hesburgh and one other University official have attended the conferences, which are held every four years.

The conference will take place at Universidad Catholic Madra y Maestra in Santo Domingo from Aug. 5 to 9.

A tentative schedule of events includes speeches, panel discussions and workshops on such topics as: "Students in 1985: The Challenge of Encounters between Faith and Cultural Diversity," "The University as a Place Where the Gospel is Lived," and "The Catholic University Preparing Youth for the Year 2000."

The speeches and panel discussions will be presented with simultaneous translation, while the workshops will be offered in English, French, and Spanish.

The purpose of attending the conference, said O'Meara, "is to learn from the other schools there and to reflect upon and contribute to the theme of the conference. It's an opportunity for others to learn from our experience and an opportunity to get to know our counterparts at the other institutions."

He added, "The world is a much smaller place than we think and we've got to participate in it this way. It's good for us and good for our students in that without such exchanges we would be insular."

O'Meara said the conference presents an unusual opportunity for Healy. "At his age, as a person, the benefits are going to be the greatest of all because he's young."

Healy, who will spend the summer at Notre Dame working with Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence, said he was surprised when O'Meara asked him to attend the conference. "I was thrilled when they invited me, although a bit taken aback. I didn't give an immediate answer because I was sort of tongue-tied."

"I think it shows respect for the student body on the part of the administration that they would ask a student to this apparently prestigious assembly," Healy said.

Healy said he plans to take a "crash-course" in conversational Spanish this summer so he will be able to understand people at the conference.

He said he was somewhat nervous about spending five days with Hesburgh, but added, "Traveling with the man will be so interesting because he's got so much insight into the things around you. It's almost like having the best tour guide possible."

Campus painted red for ball

By MARK E. WINTERS
News Staff

Partygoers at the Beaux Arts Ball will have the chance to "paint the town red" tonight, but they almost lost that chance earlier this week when publicity for the ball included painting the campus red.

The ball was almost cancelled when publicity measures such as painting sidewalks and covering statues with red plastic were viewed as extreme by the administration, according to Joseph Pitchford, president of the Notre Dame chapter of the American Institute of Architecture.

Some publicity measures "were too loud, and smacked of vandalism" in the opinion of the administration, Pitchford said.

Members of the ball committee met with John Goldrick, dean of students, earlier this week to discuss the publicity problem, Pitchford said.

The committee took responsibility for the publicity, he said, although it had not sanctioned some of the controversial methods.

Goldrick could not be reached for comment.

The ball will be held tonight in the Architecture Building, and will feature the new wave group "Cause for Passion," whose sound resembles the Human League.

Pitchford said the event is unique because it is the only party held in an academic building. "It's a chance to open up one of the nicest buildings on campus to the students," he said.

Pitchford said he hoped the ball would "lead the charge to having fun without alcohol." Problems last year with alcohol being sneaked into the ball resulted in the committee being put on probation, he said.

This year security will be on hand to insure that the alcohol policy is enforced, he said.

Tickets can be purchased for $5 in advance and $6 at the door. Pitchford said many tickets will probably be sold today. Capacity ticket sale is 300, he said.

Proceeds from the ball will be used to pay for special architecture events such as the architecture lecture series and field trips during the year.

Science requirement will not change from two semesters

Editor's Note: Last spring the University Curriculum Committee released a report outlining several major changes in Notre Dame's core curriculum. But for the most part, the committee left alone the two-semester requirement in natural science. The issue is examined in the following story, part three of a four-part series focusing on the committee's report.

By MARK S. PANKOWSKI
Copy Editor

As luck would have it, he landed on green, and while sipping on a Michelob, he was asked to name the common term for acetylsalicylic acid.

"C'mon," he groaned. "Is this Trivial Pursuit or science class?"

Fortunately, it was just a board game, but more and more educators across the nation are worried that college graduates in non-technical fields are becoming scientifically illiterate.

Notre Dame is no exception. But after studying the problem for a year, the ad hoc University Curriculum Committee decided not to recommend another course in natural science.

Instead, the proposed natural science requirement, which will be voted on by the Academic Council on Monday, would require two semesters to be completed by the end of the sophomore year.

The University's present natural science requirement, normally satisfied by students as freshmen, is also two semesters to be completed by the sophomore year.

What's the difference?

"If the proposed natural science requirement is approved, it will remove the restraint on students and will give them more freedom in choosing," said Timothy O'Meara, who as provost is chief academic officer at Notre Dame. "At the present, if you do not take the science requirement in your freshman year, you have to take a foreign language."

The curriculum committee's proposal, according to O'Meara, would allow freshmen the option of taking an elective instead of a natural science or foreign language.

Although the committee's report recommends additional requirements in other academic fields, such as in the fine arts, it does not recommend additional requirements in science. This move has received mixed reviews among faculty and administrators.

"I was disappointed that there were not any more science requirements added," said Rudolph Bottei, professor and assistant chairman of the chemistry department. "Two semesters of science has been the requirement for ages. There's been an explosion of scientific and technological knowledge, so an additional requirement in science is not asking too much from the student."

But Morton Fuchs, professor and chairman of the biology and microbiology department, disagreed.

"Forcing non-science majors to take a second year of science doesn't accomplish much. I think it's important that non-science majors take more (than the two required semesters), but I think it's counter-productive to stuff it down their throats."

"I think if you have to force people to take courses above and beyond a certain minimum that they don't want to take, it hurts the learning process," said Fuchs. "If you're not interested in a course you're not going to learn from it."

But the committee's natural science recommendation, issued last spring as part of an analysis of the University core curriculum, has been criticized for not going far enough.

"The world is rapidly changing because of technology," said Mark McCready, a chemical engineering professor. "There are a lot of ethical questions that involve science and many decisions are based on scientific reasoning, but the people making those decisions are politicians and lawyers."

A quieter issue within the debate focused on one reason the curriculum committee left the science requirement at two semesters.

"We are trying to give departments and students themselves more choice regarding what would be the most appropriate mix of courses for their educational goals," said George Howard, assistant professor in psychology and a member of the University Curriculum Committee.

"It is not appropriate for us to decide what should be the average or the best number of science courses but to specify what was the absolute minimum for someone to have a liberal education," said Howard.

Augusta offers alternative to traditional dorm living

The Alternative.
 No, it's not a ticket running for student body president at Notre Dame.

At Saint Mary's, Augusta Hall is the best alternative to traditional dorm living to be found on either the Notre Dame or Saint Mary's campus.

Most Notre Dame students don't know Augusta even exists, probably because it houses only 64 students. Yet in a community where rules and regulations often make life in the dorms stifling, Augusta stands out as a breath of fresh air.

Built in 1892 at the immediate left of Regina Hall, Augusta originally housed the novitiates studying at Saint Mary's. The hall is still owned by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, who lease the building to the College.

Today, Augusta is a "self-governing dorm," meaning there is no residence director living there, and only one resident assistant. (However, there will be two next year). Doors to the hall are locked and each resident has a key. There is no hall desk, as in other dorms at Saint Mary's, and no one on duty at night, as in Notre Dame women's dorms.

Augusta began as a dorm for only 21-year-old seniors. Years ago, even grades were taken into consideration for admittance into the hall.

A problem arose when many seniors began moving off campus, and it was hard to fill the dorm with only 21-year-old seniors.

To help solve the problem, the requirement that seniors had to be 21 was dropped. And eventually the dorm was open to both juniors and seniors.

Although comprised mainly of singles, Augusta does have some triples and quads, but only one double. Since most seniors are not partial to living in a triple or quad, those rooms usually are the only ones taken by juniors.

The building itself is divided in half, with the south side housing the convent, and the north side, the students. The halves are separated by the convent dining hall on the first floor, the convent chapel on the second floor and a small lounge area on the third and fourth floors.

Augusta's benefits are many.

Probably most important to Saint Mary's students, there is no hall desk. No reason to feel guilty as you hurry past the "desk ladies" at 4 a.m. No reason to get irritated when they yell "anyone sleeping?" into the 24-hour lounges on weekend nights.

Of course, having no hall desks can have its drawbacks. Augusta residents pick up packages and flowers at LeMans Hall, and when you can't leave a message

Theresa Guarino

with a roommate, there's no message board.

But the benefits far outweigh any disadvantages. Augusta is one of the few living arrangements on campus that makes students feel as if they are 21 or 22 years old. The same parietal rules exist there, but are upheld by the residents and resident assistants. And because most of the residents are 21, there is not usually a problem with drinking.

The real benefit is the lack of an authoritative figure inside the dorm, and the feeling of responsibility that comes with living there - the only people to enforce rules are the students themselves.

After all, in the real world after college, when your next door neighbors are playing the stereo too loud at 3 a.m., it will be up to you to tell them to turn it down. If you are bothering someone by breaking a rule or by just being loud, you have your neighbor's wrath to fear, which is often a better deterrent than the residence life punishment of putting a letter in your file for a semester.

Augusta also is known for a much more relaxed atmosphere than other dorms.

Because most students are seniors and the hall is so small, it is virtually impossible not to become acquainted with all residents. Unlike the swallowed-up feeling one can get living in dorms like LeMans, which has 540 residents, Augusta is a comfortable place to live.

Augusta President Peggy O'Brien said one of the goals this year was to make Augusta more well-known. This goal seems to have succeeded, at least at Saint Mary's. This year's Augusta lottery, which is held before the general lottery, attracted more students than ever before.

This popularity can only increase. In terms of dorm living, Augusta can claim the title of "the next best thing to living off-campus."

Five men to be ordained priests tomorrow at Sacred Heart

Special to the Observer

The long and anxiously-awaited day has finally arrived for five men, who will become fathers tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

Five members of the Indiana Province of the Holy Cross Fathers will be ordained Roman Catholic priests in Sacred Heart Church, by Father Paul Waldschmidt, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon.

The five and their families will be honored by members of the Holy Cross community and other friends at a reception following in LaFortune.

Those to be ordained are Michael Baxter, of Delmar, N.Y.; Thomas Bednar, of Kansas City, Mo.; John Kurtzke Jr., of Falls Church, Va.; Kevin O'Connell, of Brantford, Ontario, Canada; and Jeffrey Schneibel, of Minneapolis, Minn. All were ordained to the diaconate at Notre Dame on Sept. 2, 1984.

Baxter, who is co-director of the Andre House of Hospitality in Phoenix, graduated in 1977 from Allegheny College before joining the Holy Cross Fathers at Moreau Seminary.

He holds a master of divinity degree from Notre Dame and has served in University ministry on campus. Prior to his present assignment he taught at Bourgade Catholic High School in Phoenix.

Bednar, a teacher at Notre Dame High School in Niles, Ill., and assistant at St. John Brebeuf Parish in Niles, attended the University of Missouri at Columbia for three years before joining the Holy Cross Fathers.

He holds a bachelor's degree in economics and a master of divinity degree from Notre Dame. While in the seminary he served at Logan Center and as an assistant at St. Joseph's parish, both in South Bend, and at Sacred Heart Parish.

Kurtzke, an adjunct assistant professor of mathematics at Notre Dame and member of the University ministry staff, is a 1973 Notre Dame graduate. He earned a doctorate in mathematics at the University of California at Los Angeles before returning to Notre Dame in 1978.

In addition to his bachelor of science degree, he holds a master of divinity degree from the University. He has also assisted at St. Joseph Parish in South Bend and at two parishes in Colorado Springs, and has completed a course in clinical pastoral education at Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix.

O'Connell, an assistant at Sacred Heart Parish in Colorado Springs, Colo., studied for two years at Borromeo College before entering the Holy Cross Fathers' seminary program at Notre Dame in 1978. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University and received a master of divinity degree there at commencement exercises last May.

Schneibel, an assistant at St. Pius Parish in Granger, Ind., studied at the College of St. Thomas for one year before entering the Holy Cross Fathers' seminary at Notre Dame as a sophomore in 1977.

He has received two degrees at Notre Dame: a bachelor of arts and a master of divinity.

Patients no longer at mercy of doctors when lives on line

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Staff Reporter

Patients are no longer at the mercy of a decision made by their doctors when their bodies and lives are at stake, said Dr. Edmund Pellegrino, director of the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University.

Pellegrino gave a lecture yesterday at the Notre Dame Law School on the topic of "Medical Ethics in a Pluralistic Society - The Move from Substantive to Procedural Ethics."

"Medical ethics today is the one ethical arena that will involve everyone," said Pellegrino. He said three reasons account for the relevance of medical ethics to people today.

First, he said, the power of medical technology has improved. "It makes a difference what your doctor decides. We are in a golden age of therapeutics. The physician can affect your life in its most intimate detail," he said.

Secondly, he said society in the present is one lacking in moral consensus. He said that "pluralism to large degree" exists today, as opposed to the past when people lived in a predominantly Christian society.

Thirdly, Pellegrino said there is a "democratization of every aspect of human life today." People want a say in decision-making and many distrust experts and professionals, he said.

"I believe that the move is essential and necessary and is keeping with the dignity of the human person to participate in the decisions that affect him or her," said Pellegrino.

Samora retires after 25 years at Notre Dame

By JOHN WALTERS
News Staff

Julien Samora, director of the graduate program in sociology, will be honored this weekend as he retires after 25 years at Notre Dame.

Samora is recognized as an international expert on Chicano-American studies.

There will be a reception tonight for Samora in the Library Auditorium, as well as a symposium tomorrow titled "Julien Samora: A Legacy of Chicano Scholarship and the Social World."

Scheduled speakers for the tribute include Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, Daniel Valdez, editor of "Nuestro" magazine, and more than 15 professors from around the country who studied under Samora.

The tribute was planned by Miguel Carranza of the University of Nebraska and Estevan Flores of Southern Methodist University, both former students of Samora.

The weekend will also recognize the successful growth of the Hispanic community at Notre Dame, for which Samora is primarily responsible.

"He has done more than anyone to graduate Chicano doctors in law and sociology here," said Joseph Scott, professor of sociology.

"He introduced courses that relate to the Chicano experience, and at Notre Dame, he is the only Chicano scholar around," Scott said.

Samora said he is "just delighted" about the weekend and is looking forward to the reunion with the alumni.

Looking back on his career, Samora said, "We started out to produce major scholars and scholarly contributions, and if that's what we did, fine."

He added that when he started in the field, it was almost impossible to find scholarly materials on Chicanos.

His next project will be to trace the roots of four common families of Spanish descent, including his own, back to the 16th century. He and his wife will leave for Spain on April 22. He estimates the project will take four years and may include research in Spain, Mexico and the southwestern United States.

Samora was born in 1920 in Pagosa Springs, Colorado, and received his doctorate in sociology from Washington University in 1953.

He has served during his 43-year career as a consultant and commissioner on such boards as the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, National Upward Bound and the President's Commission on Rural Poverty.

Salmonella poisons 2,200

Associated Press

CHICAGO - More than 10,000 people could contract salmonella poisoning from those already infected by contaminated milk, health officials said Wednesday, in urging extra precautions in five states.

More than 2,200 are already believed to have contracted salmonella poisoning by drinking suspect low-fat milk and many likely will pass it on, said Patricia Larsen of the Illinois Department of Public Health.

She said the bacteria is resistant to antibiotics and can remain in the system longer than five weeks.

The risk can be reduced by strict observance of hygiene rules, such as washing hands before preparing foods, after going to the bathroom and after changing diapers.

"We expect it (the number of cases) to continue increasing over the next several weeks" through secondary contagion, Larsen said.

Department spokesman Chet June said 2,827 cases of salmonella poisoning have been reported and 2,214 confirmed in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

If you're going to eat pizza once you leave school, you'll have to find some way to pay for it. And since you won't be able to write home anymore for money, you're going to have to find a job, which means first lining up interviews. Have you started interviewing yet?

And if you do find a job, you're going to need a place to live, within your budget, which means you might have to take out a loan. But first you have to establish credit. You don't have credit? Are the Democrats doomed to suffer defeats?

During the months following a Presidential election, it is common for the leaders of the losing party to get together and try to figure out what went wrong the previous fall. The Democrats, stung by a second consecutive whitewash, have recently been trying to "reconstruct" the party in hopes of regaining the White House in 1988.

This year, with talk of an emerging Republican coalition and a "changing tide" in American politics, the Democrats seem especially nervous. At a recent meeting of House Democrats, Horace Busby, a political analyst who was an aide to President Johnson, warned that the party "is in the eye of a storm . . . which is wiping out the base on which many Democrats think they stand." He went on, "I do not believe there is any credible basis to argue that the Democrats are still in a contest for the White House."

The Democrats are not exactly unified as they plan their course for the future. A number of leading Democratic officials recently set up a leadership conference outside of the Democratic National Committee to influence policy. They feel the party must change course and pull itself away from special interest groups. Many top Democrats expressed concern when Paul Kirk was recently elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Kirk is a former aide of Senator Edward Kennedy and is seen as beholden to labor interests; these Democrats feel Kirk presents the type of image the Democrats are trying to get rid of.

The signs for the Democratic Party are not encouraging. The South, once a stronghold of the Democrats, no longer can be relied upon. The whites in this region hold the key. In last fall's election, only a little more than one-fourth of white Southerners voted for Walter Mondale. The Democrats didn't help their cause by placing two Northern liberals on the ticket. Population shifts also may affect the party. A recent Library of Congress study predicted that if population trends of the last decade continue after 1990, the Northern industrial and farm states could lose up to 19 additional Congressional seats to the South and West, both strongholds of Reagan conservatism. Congressional seats determine the number of votes in the Electoral College, which actually elects a President.

Is the Democratic Party headed for a permanent decline? Perhaps. The anxiety displayed by the Democrats, however, seems a bit premature. The doomsayers seem to be ignoring some important realities. For instance, it is true that the Democrats have lost four out of the last five elections. But we must remember that two of these losses were to extremely popular incumbents (Nixon and Reagan). Another loss came at a low point in our nation's history, with American hostages abroad and inflation at a record high level. The other loss, in 1968, was by the smallest of margins, and came in a year when there was a third-party candidate.

In addition, the Democrats have yet to lose their appeal below the national level. The Democrats hold a solid majority in the House, have a good chance of recapturing the Senate next year, and hold onto a vast majority of state and local offices.

One important reason the Republicans have done so well in the past few elections is due to their tremendous organization. This has enabled them to build up large campaign treasuries, while the Democrats were scrambling to pay off old campaign debts.

A second important reason for the Republican success story has been Ronald Reagan himself. Whether you like him or not, Reagan is an incredibly popular figure. Most people who disagree with the man even claim to like him personally. Yet Reagan was unable to convert this popularity into any gains in Congress; in fact, the Democrats picked up seats in both houses.

The Republicans are not invincible. They will most likely experience a tough battle for the nomination in 1988 which will shake party unity. While the Republicans have potentially electable candidates in Robert Dole, Jack Kemp and Howard Baker, no one knows if the man tapped to succeed Reagan will enjoy similar popularity.

In the gloom surrounding a terrible loss, it is not uncommon for the losers to point fingers, to put the blame on this mistake or that fault. The Democrats have done an able job of this in the past few months. While of course adjustments must be made within the party, it is important that the Democrats not get so caught up with change that they become mirrors to the Republicans, betraying their basic values or ideals. To do so could shatter the party permanently.

Salute to Architecture did not receive coverage

Dear Editor:

One of the most extraordinary events to happen on campus this year took place on Tuesday, April 9. Pietro Belluschi, Philip Johnson and John Burgee visited our campus as guests of the University's Salute to Architecture. Belluschi and Johnson are recipients of the Gold Medal, the highest award given by the American Institute of Architects.

Burgee, a 1956 graduate of this University, is a partner in one of the most prestigious architecture firms in America today. Many of us know Johnson/Burgee as the creators of Century Center in South Bend and the new A.T. & T. Bldg. in New York.

These men came to Notre Dame to share their thoughts on architecture with us. Their experience, intelligence, and the quality of their work make them extremely qualified to do this. The symposium, attended by many, was a rare opportunity for architects to discuss the state of their profession. Later in the afternoon, Fr. Hesburgh conferred honorary doctorate degrees on Belluschi and Johnson, in a ceremony attended by Fr. Joyce and Provost O'Meara.

In the April 10 issue of The Observer, no mention was made of the Salute to Architecture. Not a single article - not even a photograph - appeared on any of the 20 pages on this most important occasion.

Instead, on the most prominent corner of the front page, there was a photograph of a man cleaning up a donkey's droppings. There is something intriguing about The Observer's sense of history.

Can't fool all the people all the time here at ND

Dear Editor:

I am very enraged by the events depicted on the front and back pages of The Observer of April 11.

The Bookstore Basketball Tournament rules state that only members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's faculties, staffs and student bodies are eligible to participate in the tournament. Yet in blatant disregard for this regulation, we see on the sports page a picture of Vice President George Bush with a caption describing the play of his team in the tournament. This is incredible! I know for a fact that Bush is not a member of the faculties, staffs or student bodies of the two schools, and he is still allowed to play. I do not care if he is the vice president - that does not make him special and he is still subject to the same rules we all are.

If this action isn't sickening enough, on the front page we see a lame attempt to "cover up" Bush's presence in the tournament by making it seem as if he was elsewhere at the time. On the front page is a picture of someone who is supposedly Bush while the caption describes the "vice president" throwing out the first ball at a major league baseball game.

Be serious. This photo is obviously someone masquerading as Bush at the ballgame! This may have fooled the less enlightened crowd at the game, but you cannot put one over on us. Someone wishing to enhance his team's chances persuaded the vice president to play on his team. Worried that someone might recognize Bush and report the infraction, the parties responsible sent an unnamed person to masquerade as Bush elsewhere while the basketball game was in progress, so they could pass Bush off as "a guy who just happens to look like the Second-in-Command of the greatest country on the face of the earth."

I was tipped off to this whole scheme by closely examining the page one picture. There, the imposter so exhausted from his trip to impersonate Bush, mistakenly threw out a basketball at the opening ceremonies. You will see it too if you examine the picture closely.

I am shocked not only that this sort of thing goes on at Notre Dame, but The Observer which we all admire for its fine investigative reporting failed to uncover this corruption on its own stomping grounds.

Do not prevent the CIA from interviewing here

Dear Editor:

Although the CIA's recruiting at colleges may have been protested on many campuses, not all students feel the same way. I for one support the CIA and would like to see Notre Dame graduates in the CIA. It would be an honorary way to serve this country of ours in which too many take its privileges for granted.

If students disagree with CIA actions, I feel it would be more effective if they wrote letters to their congressmen explaining their opinions. To take their frustrations out on the recruiters is childish, immature and spineless. I have not heard of any students being kidnapped to be (interrogated) interviewed by the CIA. To prevent those who wish to be interviewed the chance to interview is oppression. Those students who keep the recruiters from interviewing are resorting to the same supposed oppression that they are protesting.

Jazz Festival rhythm returns

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival continues its long tradition of showcasing this country's finest collegiate jazz talent when it opens for the 27th year this Friday and Saturday in Stepan Center.

This is America's longest running collegiate jazz festival, and the 1985 edition promises to provide as much excitement as in years past as collegiate bands perform in front of a judges' panel composed of some of the best jazz artists in show business.

This year's festival includes 15 big bands and jazz combos from 13 different colleges and universities. The special guest band, appearing Saturday night, will be the United States Air Force "Airmen to Note."

Former festival participants who have since gone on to greater fame in the music world include David Sanborn, Bob James, Randy and Michael Brecker, James Pankow and Chico Freeman.

The judges for this year's festival include saxophonist Jimmy Heath, pianist Stanley Cowell, drummer Butch Miles, bassist Dave Holland and jazz critic Dan Morganster, a judge at 15 previous Notre Dame festivals. Judging the finals will be guitarist Gene Bertoncini.

The schedule for this year's festival includes three sessions:

- Friday, April 12 beginning at 7:30 p.m.
- Saturday, April 13 from 1 to 4:30 p.m.
- Saturday, April 13 beginning at 6:30 p.m.

The "Judges' Jam" will cap Friday night's performances. This tradition-rich "Jam" begins at 11:30 p.m., when the judges will take the stage and play into the wee hours of Saturday morning. In past years the "Judges' Jam" has featured such outstanding jazzmen as "Cannonball" Alderly, Herbie Hancock and Grammy Award-winning trumpeter Wynton Marsalis.

Tickets for the 27th Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival are available at South Bend area Bonnie Doon restaurants, the Rock du Lac Record Store in Lafortune, and at the door of Stepan Center. Ticket prices for this year's sessions are as follows:

- Friday evening---$5
- Saturday afternoon---$3
- Saturday evening---$4
- All sessions---$8

As always, the Collegiate Jazz Festival promises to be an entertaining experience and a great way to add a little cultural spice to the weekend.

Special birthday wishes for a special woman

Rev. Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Sister Dolorilda, C.S.C., is having a birthday week. On Wednesday, she was 82. It's not polite to mention a woman's age, a lawyer's income or an athlete's grades; but having reached the landmark age of three score and ten which the Bible allows, you should celebrate the bonus years after 70 as though you were being presented with merit badges.

The older I get, the less coy I am about hiding my age. It takes stamina to survive very long in a tough world.

Every student who attends Mass at Sacred Heart Church has seen Sister Dolorilda: a small, white-haired lady with a gentle voice and wise eyes, always dressed in a blue veil and wearing the silver locket that identifies the Holy Cross sisters.

Sister Dolorilda, a recently retired receptionist at Moreau Seminary, now assists Sister Gertrudis and Sister Suzanne in taking care of the liturgies on busy feast days and resides with the two in the Student Health Center.

I met Sister twenty years ago at the Holy Cross House -- I was sick and she was my nurse. Priests, when they are ailing, are as cantankerous as everyone else. Some of us get as scared or nervous as little children.

In 1965, Sister Dolorilda was the Florence Nightingale who brought us medicine and soothed our pillows, along with some of the sweetest-tempered brothers in the world.

I could see that it must take great faith to care for the boys of summer in their ruin, because life saves its dirtiest tricks for the sick room. Some of the greatest personalities in Catholic education wasted away to leanness and temper at Holy Cross House.

"Do not go gentle into that good night," the poet Dylan Thomas urged his father at the checkout counter; "Rage, rage, against the dying of the light." A few of our Holy Cross priests, devastated physically, have not gone gentle; they raged so much that King Lear on the heath would have been proud of them.

The peace of acceptance finally comes to all. They're as meek and mild as lambs going through the valley of the shadow of death. Sister Dolorilda, watching and praying, saw dozens going home to God. There were many evenings when she must have felt tired of being a servant of the sick to the saints, though she was quick to praise them as gentlemen of the Cross, and encouraged them with her faith. If forgiveness were ever necessary, she forgave them without being conscious of what she was doing as a compassionate sister, incapable of holding a grudge.

In 1965, as a priest in his prime years, I felt very sorry for myself on the casualty list. I kept getting more and more wounded by stress. Then I broke my arm and later, my leg. I was afraid I would be an invalid forever. Sister Dolorilda helped me through the months of gloom with her kindness.

One morning the photographer came, and we were lined up to have our pictures taken. No one had to tell me that the Community wanted an up-to-date mug shot to use on an obituary card. I was beside myself with anger and fear. At age 38, out of due season, I was being processed for burial. I hated being treated as though there were a possibility of my dying.

On one of the most depressing days of my life, Sister Dolorilda cheered me up. We were both converts to the Catholic faith and remember the same Gospel hymns. She encouraged me to talk about the songs of faith I love. She left me believing that I still had a future. There's something about "Shall We Gather at the River?" that leaves you with hope, not because it promises heaven, but because it reminds you of camp meetings when you were young.

Many of us in Holy Cross owe debts of gratitude to Sister Dolorilda. Even the younger members, whom she served as morale officer at the seminary, have reasons to love her. R.L. Stevenson dedicates "A Child's Garden of Verses" to Allison, his nurse, "From her boy." His dedicatory poem almost works as the speech I could make Sister Dolorilda on her birthday:

*For the long nights you lay awake
And watched for my unworthy sake
For your most comfortable hand
That led me through the uneven land
For all the story books you read
For all the pain you comforted
Grant it, heaven, that all who read
May find as dear a nurse as need*

But Notre Dame is not a child's garden, and I wasn't a boy in 1965, and Sister Dolorilda is a professional woman who shouldn't be sentimentalized as an ex-nanny.

She didn't enter the religious life until she was 42. You couldn't mistake her for one of the old-fashioned sisters who used to kiss the pastor's hand out of reverence for alter Christus. She has the good sense of the convert who was neither startled nor liberated by the changes of Vatican II.

Converts have the wisdom not to be surprised at doing things as Catholics that they were used to doing as Protestants. All traditions are full of grace; and in the worship of God, there is nothing new under the sun. I'm amused at how much of the old luggage gets thrown overboard by old timers frantic to be liberal and modern.

Sister Dolorilda's style of religion seems timeless as a faith for all seasons of her life. She knows Christ wisely; and He's the same yesterday, today and forever. Christians need to be tolerant with their God, and patient with the Church.

I can only write what I feel in my heart about Sister Dolorilda. She doesn't talk about herself, and I can't be sure how well I know her. It surprises me to realize I only know her by her religious name. I've never heard her family name or the name she was given at birth. I wouldn't want to embarrass her. She may not want her name in the paper. I just want to let her know in a special way that I admire and love her. She is a representative of the Holy Cross nuns who have had essential roles at Notre Dame since the time of Sorin. I'm sending them this thank you note in Sister Dolorilda's birthday week.

She said to me yesterday: "I'm waiting for Halley's comet to come back. It will be visible to us soon. I saw it with my father in 1910. He said: 'When it comes back again, you'll be an old lady.'"

The earth has spun around a few times since 1910. Sister Dolorilda has lived through difficult decades of a turbulent century. Nowadays, Halley's comet is not the sign in the sky that we're waiting for with dread. It was a long time ago that she lived on a farm in Michigan, making bread in her mother's kitchen. She grew up in the years before the country lost its innocence. I would love to have known Dolorilda as a young woman from America's heartland.

Halley's comet may make as many curtain calls as a vaudeville star. I hope there will always be Holy cross sisters like Dolorilda to get excited at something that has the appearance of a fallen star. The constellations stay fixed in the firmament to declare the glory of God like a choir. They are not more faithful than the American women of the Catholic Church.

Rehder, Plantz adjust to new positions for 1985

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

This spring, many changes are being considered for the 1985 Notre Dame football squad in regards to assignments for players on the field.

Many of these changes are being made in order fill vacancies created through the graduation of senior starters from this past year's squad.

On offense, a big gap that is being looked at is the tight-end spot formerly filled by graduating senior Mark Bavaro. In order to provide depth an increase the competition at the position, sophomore Tom Rehder has been moved from a back-up role as a defensive tackle to tight-end.

"The Rehder switch was a very important move because we're looking for a specific person to fill that void due to the graduation of Mark Bavaro," explains offensive coordinator Mike Stock. "Tom's adjustment has been good for him and for us. Right now, he's working very hard, and each day, he's getting a little bit better. The competition that he's had with himself to learn the position has been very good, and the competition that he's had with Joel Williams has made Joel Williams better, and that, I think, can make the team a lot sounder down the road."

As an incoming freshman, the 6-7, 251-pound Rehder was recruited as a tight end. Last season, however, he was switched to a back-up role at defensive tackle. This coming season, the Santa Maria, Ca., native will look to compete for the starting tight-end spot.

"I'm excited about moving back," said Rehder. "I played it in high school and in my freshman year here. Playing is the goal - I want to play, and if the coach feels that we have a surplus on the defensive line, then my chances are much greater at a position where we are weak."

Spring Football '85

On the offensive line, there will be a shift in the duties of junior Ron Plantz. Plantz, who was listed as a guard and quick tackle last year will make a permanent move to the center spot on the line.

A vacancy at center was created by the graduation of all-American Mike Kelley. With Plantz listed at 6-4, 271-pounds, Stock is confident that he will step in and do a more than adequate job.

In the offensive backfield, receivers Milt Jackson and Tim Brown have switched assignments. Entering his senior year, Jackson will move out to the split end while the freshman Brown will move to flanker.

Both receivers are happy with their new assignments. Brown is pleased because he will be in motion more and will run more options.

"I see it as a positive move because we still will run reverses, says Jackson. "I like split end because you're right on the line, and you can close the gap on the defensive back more easily."

On the defensive line, the Irish are looking to replace all-American Mike Gann at the left tackle spot with junior Eric Dorsey.

The 6-5, 265, Dorsey was a standout at contain tackle in his sophomore year with 19 tackles and three sacks. In 1984, Dorsey was moved to the nose tackle spot where he split time with sophomore starter Mike Griffin.

This year, Dorsey is making the move outside where he hopes that he can win a starting assignment and get some playing time.

"I'm too tall to be a nose guard, and now that I left (that position), all of our nose guards are under 6-3, explains Dorsey. "The more stockier a person is, the more ideal he is as a nose guard. I think that I could use more of my abilities at tackle than I could at nose guard because I don't consider myself as being very 'quick'."

Elsewhere on the defensive side, the Irish have moved junior Pat Ballage from cornerback to the strong safety position in hopes of filling the gap left by senior all-American Joe Johnson with a seasoned veteran.

Until the fall season rolls around, nothing is for sure. With half of the spring practice season left, the Irish coaches are confident, however, that they can fit their players with the proper assignments and achieve adequate depth at each position.

"DePaul is considerably weaker than the Big 10 schools," admits Fallon. "We haven't had much trouble with them in the past. However, their coach, George Lott, is a very astute coach, and it is a long-time rivalry, so we'll have to play well.

"Western Michigan, on the other hand, is one of the favorites in the Mid-America Conference," Fallon continues. "We expect them to be very tough. Most of their players are pretty highly ranked, and their No. 1 doubles team was ranked in the top five in the country earlier in the year."

the Midwest so far this year," says O'Leary of the 2-6 Scots. "They've scored a lot of goals this season (111 in eight games), but they've also given up a lot (108). I think they'll be pretty close to the level of Lake Forest (a 9-2 loser to the Irish earlier this year)."

Attackman Bob Trocchi played a major role (four goals, one assist) in last year's Notre Dame win, and he should do the same this year. The senior has 39 points (24 goals, 15 assists) this year to lead the team in scoring, giving him 123 for his career. If he picks up three points against the Scots, he will move into first place on the all-time Irish scoring list, passing Steve Pearsall's total of 125.

O'Sullivan pleased with finish

Golf team places 7th at Purdue

By SEAN MURPHY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame golf team raised its record to 17-8 last weekend with a seventh place finish among 15 teams competing in the Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind. Next weekend, the Irish will travel to DeKalb, Ill., where they will face a 22-team field in the Mid-American Invitational Tournament.

The Irish golfers finished last weekend's rain-shortened tournament behind six powerful Division I schools, as they recorded an impressive score of 774.

Purdue utilized its home-course advantage in the tournament, winning with a score of 748. Bradley finished second, followed by Ohio State, Indiana, Eastern Michigan, and Iowa. Notre Dame, in seventh place, was followed by The University of New Orleans, Western Michigan, Michigan, Michigan State, Illinois State, Western Illinois, Wisconsin, and Louisville.

Junior captain John O'Donovan led the Irish with a 36-hole total of 146. His score earned him a fourth-place finish among the 88 golfers competing in the tournament.

Chris Bona finished second for the Irish with a two-round total of 154; Rich Connelly and John Anthony were next, both recording scores of 158. Steve Fuhrer shot a 159, while Lon Huffman recorded a 165.

Irish head coach Noel O'Sullivan had nothing but praise for his team following their performance last weekend.

"These teams are the cream of our district," said O'Sullivan. "For us to be competitive with such powerhouse golf schools is quite an accomplishment. I couldn't be more proud of our performance last weekend.

"We've got something going," said the Irish head coach. "We're gaining confidence with each victory, and now we just need to maintain this level of play through next week's Mid-American Invitational."

Next weekend's tournament promises to be the toughest tournament of the young spring season for the Irish. Twenty-two teams will be competing, including all the Big 10 schools, many Mid-American conference teams, and other major independents.

If the young Irish golfers can display the same scoring consistency that they have in the past, they could be vying for top honors next weekend.

SMC track team performs well

By ANDREA LAFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's track team travelled to Marion, Ind., yesterday to compete against Marion and St. Joseph Colleges.

"The meet went as well as could be expected," said Saint Mary's coach Jean Kerich. "We only took half of our girls."

The highlight of the meet was sophomore Megan McMonigle's throw in the javelin event. She set a new school mark with her 115-foot, 7-inch effort, surpassing her previous record of 103 feet, 4 inches.

In the 1500-meter race, freshman Tina Reid took fourth place, and freshman Julie Novak placed fourth in the 400-meter race.

Senior Diane Hartwig finished third in both the shotput and discus events. Junior Barb Blanchette took fourth in the discus, and freshman Karen Walker placed fourth in the shotput.

finished third in both the high jump and the triple jump. In the 800-meter race, Novak placed fourth, and in the 200-meter race, McMonigle took fourth. Sophomore Mariclaire Driscoll finished fourth in the 3000-meter race.

The Belles began their season at the Manchester College Invitational track meet on March 30. Saint Mary's, one of ten teams that competed, placed in four events at the meet, held in North Manchester, Ind.

Driscoll finished fifth in the 10,000-meter race, and freshman Cathy Kennedy took fourth place in the 1500-meter race. The Belles' 1600-meter relay team, consisting of Kennedy, Novak, sophomore Anne Bianco, and freshman Erin Burke, placed sixth at the meet. McMonigle's first record javelin toss placed her fourth in the event.

The team travelled to Goshen College in Goshen, Ind., on April 2 to compete against Goshen, Defiance, and Spring Arbor Colleges.

McPartlin placed in three events at the meet, capturing first place in both the high jump and triple jump, and setting a new school record for her 31-foot, 5-inch effort in the triple jump.

McMonigle took second place in the javelin, and Driscoll finished third in the 5000-meter race. The 400-meter relay team of Bianco, McPartlin, Kennedy, and McMonigle came in second place at the meet.

Kennedy finished first in the 800-meter race and third in the 1500-meter race. Bianco placed fourth in both the 200- and 400-meter races, and Driscoll took second in the 3000-meter race.

Sophomore Cris Cox finished second in the 100-meter hurdles and placed third in the 300-meter hurdles. The 1600-meter relay team of Bianco, Cox, Kennedy, and Reid finished second for the Belles.

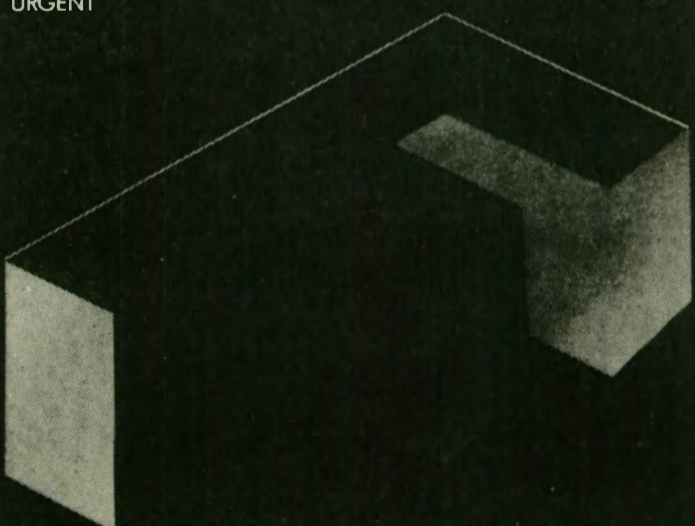

The Belles will compete Saturday at 12:30 p.m. in Holland, Mich., against Hope and Aquinas Colleges.

The Abood brothers, Chris and Tom, shot a combined 2-of-17 as Thanks Alot Luke lost to Two Rods and 3 Other Tools 21-7. Their team didn't fare any better, as it went 7-for-49 overall.

John Stein of Red Barons looks to drive on Fran O'Malley of Indira Gandhi and 4 Guys That Can Shoot in first-round Bookstore action yesterday afternoon. Stein and teammate Bubba Cunningham (at right) helped the Red Barons to a 21-10 win on the Bookstore courts. Nick Schrantz details yesterday's action at right.

Red Barons take first-round Bookstore game convincingly

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The 14th annual Bookstore Basketball Tournament completed its third day with 40 teams advancing to the second round, while 40 others must wait until next year.

Red Barons proved itself as one of the teams to beat as it shot down Indira Gandhi and 4 Guys Who Can Shoot by a 21-10 score. Marty Roddy employed a deadly hook shot and a strong inside game to make 11-of-16 from the floor. Varsity basketball player Casey Newell only hit on four of ten shots, but Tom Antonini and John Stein each sank three hoops to contribute to the victory.

Still Virtually Unknown made a name for itself in easily handling Pits by a 21-7 score. Jim Reed poured in six baskets, while Dave Machtolf and Mike Zaske each added five for the winners.

Shysters, another seeded team, out-fought The Bully Bunch by the score of 21-15. Tom Lange popped in nine shots on only 14 attempts, while David Corrigan added seven baskets.

Two Ionic, Two Doric, and One Early Corinthian blasted Campus United by a 21-4 score. Two Ionic... made an incredible 21-of-29 from the field, as varsity player Barry Spencer hit on seven of his eight shots and Dave Sassano was a perfect five-for-five.

We're Only Here For the Beer wasn't there for the basketball as they were clobbered by Tofu Vegetables I by another 21-4 score. Bill Zadell and Matt Hanley each connected on six shots to lead Tofu Vegetables I to a fine 21-of-32 shooting performance. Tofu Vegetables I also displayed a fine defense, as it held its opponents to only 16 shots.

Next Thursday's second round game between Tofu Vegetables I and 2 Ionic, 2 Doric, and 1 Early Corinthian has shaped into one of the top second round games, as each team was impressive in their big victories yesterday.

Ideal weather conditions, with warm temperatures and no wind, prevailed throughout the afternoon's games. The fine weather contributed to several fine shooting performances.

Steve Nicgorski of Let's Go Crazy did just that and poured in 14 baskets on only 20 shots. His 14 points tied for the high of the day, and enabled his team to easily defeat Bink by a 21-10 score.

Peewee and the Wee Bees flew high in beating Big Dan and the Eight Balls 21-3. George Hardart shot 8-of-10 while Dave Adams added seven to lead the victors' 21-of-34 shooting.

Rehabilitate and Rebuild felt the wrath of Raging Ray's CPA's and went down to defeat by an embarrassing 21-3 score. The victor's connected on 21-of-42 shots, but the losers had no hope of winning as they only attempted 21 shots.

Mrosky had good reason to leave his team, as Abandoned By Mrosky fell to The Uncoachables by a 21-8 score. The Uncoachables must have been taught by somebody, as they poured in 21 baskets on 35 shots, and held their opponents to only 24 shots.

Bernie Goetz and the Subway Alumni lost in a close shootout to Hey, Shi- Happens by a 21-19 score. While Bernie Goetz shot four-of-four in his battle, John Vrdolyak also had a fine day in gunning down 14-of-25 shots for the losers.

John Murphy's Slime Train VI needed 69 shots to get their 21 baskets, but that was good enough to defeat 9 Kidneys by a close 21-19 score.

Negative gets the award for the worst shooting of the day, but it somehow was able to deny a victory to You Can't Always Get What You Want by a 21-19 score. Negative needed 94 shots in order to win, while the losers still couldn't win after taking 77 shots. Dave Wolf only made one basket in 15 attempts, while Corey Hutchison could only contribute three baskets after shooting 22 times. John Wackowski didn't

Men's tennis team looks to rebound today vs. DePaul

By MARTY BURNS
Sports Writer

The Big 10, that ancient conglomerate of big midwestern universities, has been nothing but big trouble this season for the Notre Dame men's tennis team. Wednesday afternoon at Ann Arbor, Michigan, the Irish suffered their third straight defeat to competition from the Big 10, as Michigan cruised to an easy 9-0 victory. Prior to the Michigan match, the Irish had fallen to Indiana, 5-2, and then to Ohio State, who drubbed the Irish by an 8-1 margin.

Irish coach Tom Fallon and his 14-9 tennis squad can now take big consolation in the fact that they will play two teams that are not members of the Big 10. The Irish will play host to DePaul this afternoon at 3 p.m., before traveling to Western Michigan on Sunday for their match against the Broncos.

Although both DePaul and Western Michigan are capable of giving the Irish a tough time, they do not figure to play as well as did Michigan on Wednesday. The Wolverines simply tore into the Irish, drawing blood immediately on Notre Dame's No. 1 singles player, Joe Nelligan. The junior captain tried to rebound from his 6-3 loss in the first set, but he did not have enough to tame his opponent, Jim Sharton, as he went down 6-3, 6-2. No. 2 singles player Mike Gibbons then tried to rally the Irish, but he fell short also, 7-5, 6-2.

After those losses, Fallon was disappointed, but not upset with his two players.

"Michigan's Jim Sharton is probably the number-one player in the Big 10 right now," says Fallon. "Also, Gibbon's opponent played very well. They were just too tough for us."

When the Michigan contest was all over, the Irish had lost all six singles matches, and all three doubles matches. In one of those doubles matches, Notre Dame's No. 2 doubles team of David Obert and Tom Grier made a valiant effort to ruin Michigan's shutout hopes, but they eventually gave way 6-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Fallon, needless to say, was anxious to get away from the Big 10 for awhile.

"The Big 10 is very tough this year," notes the 29th-year Irish mentor. "Michigan is one of the five teams that could win the conference. They were simply too good for us. The guys played pretty well, but it was just a combination of our lack of experience, and the fact that the Big 10 is too tough."

The Irish will not have to worry about the Big 10 for a couple of games, but the problem with the lack of experience is one that, unfortunately, cannot be dodged through the schedule. Two freshmen, Dan Walsh and Paul Daggs, have been called on by Fallon to play key roles for this year's squad, and No. 5 singles player Tom Grier, although a sophomore, is playing for the first year on the squad, after playing on the B-team last year.

"Our problem seems to be that we have a lot of new faces on the squad," says Fallon. "We're getting experience the hard way. I do think that we're improving with each game though. We're making mistakes but we're learning from them."

Fallon hopes that the Irish learned well from their competent foes from the Big 10, as they may need everything possible to get by a talented Western Michigan team. But before the Irish can worry about that match with the Broncos, they must put away Catholic-rival DePaul. Looking ahead to these two matches, Fallon seems confident, especially concerning the DePaul contest.

Lacrosse team takes on MLA rival Wooster

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team will try to extend its Midwest Lacrosse Association record to 4-0 tomorrow when it travels to Wooster, Ohio, to take on the Fighting Scots of the College of Wooster.

The contest will mark the beginning of a tough MLA road schedule for the Irish who also must play away games with Denison, Michigan State and Ohio State. Because Rich O'Leary's squad has a poor 1-5 record on the road this season, the team's chances of repeating as conference champions could hinge on its ability to win away from Cartier Field.

"The fact that we're playing on the road makes this game very important," says O'Leary, who is hoping his team can win its 10th straight MLA game tomorrow. "We haven't won yet on the road in the Midwest, so we need to show that we can do it."

In order to win, though, Notre Dame will have to beat Wooster on the same field where the Scots handled the Irish, 22-16, two years ago. In that game, Notre Dame could not keep Wooster's offense from wiping out a four-goal Irish lead.

The high-scoring Scots also will have revenge on their minds after dropping an 11-6 game to Notre Dame at Cartier last year.

"More than likely, Wooster will be the toughest team we've played in

Baseball team gets timely hitting, solid relief in doubleheader sweep

By CHUCK FREEBY
Sports writer

At times this year, the Irish baseball team has had timely hitting. At times, the Irish have had fine relief pitching. Yesterday, the Irish finally had both those ingredients at the same time and turned it into a doubleheader sweep of visiting Bethel, 9-6 and 8-5, at Jake Kline Field.

The bullpen was the key for the 9-15-1 Irish, as Jason Schomer and Steve Powell each came in early to record their first wins of the year. In the opener, Schomer had some rough going relieving starter Mark Watzke in the fourth. However, the senior fireman settled down after that inning, giving up only three singles the rest of the way. In the nightcap, Powell pitched 3-1/3 innings of shutout relief, until the Pilots notched three runs in the seventh.

Irish skipper Larry Gallo was pleased with his bullpen's performance. "The kids came in and threw strikes, and that's what got the job done."

While the bullpen held things in check, the Irish bats rallied for come-from-behind efforts in both games. In game one, the Irish took control with four runs in the fifth, two scoring on Mike Dorning's bases-loaded double. Mike Trudeau also contributed to the Irish cause with three RBI.

In game two, the Irish also benefitted from a four-run outburst, this one coming in the third. If walking is good for the heart, the Irish should be extremely healthy now, as four bases on balls helped the inning along, two of them coming with the bases loaded. Tom Shields and Mike McNeill each drove in a pair of runs, as four Irish players collected two hits.

"We've had difficulty scoring runs at times this year," commented Gallo. "We've been getting men on base, and today we got the key hits. We got a good effort from people like Tom Shields who had sore shoulder and Jackie Moran who was sick as a dog, but still played. That's the kind of leadership we've been looking for."

Notre Dame now prepares for its first Midwestern City Conference action this weekend, when the defending North division champion Xavier Musketeers come to Jake Kline Field for twinbills on Saturday and Sunday beginning at noon. Gallo is well aware of the task ahead for his club.

"This weekend is a key for us this year," remarks the Irish mentor. "Xavier likes to run a lot, and has a veteran ball team. We're going to have to get some good outings from our staff, and keep the bats going."

Probable starters for the Irish will be Buster Lopes (2-3, 7.36 ERA) and Kevin Chenail (1-0, 0.75 ERA) on Saturday. On Sunday, Brad Cross (0-3, 8.14 ERA) and Joe Dobosh (0-3, 8.21 ERA) should get the nod.
