Reagan plan requests reduction of missiles

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In a formal reply to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's arms control proposal, President Reagan has drafted a sweeping plan urging elimination of medium range missiles in Europe as a first step, a U.S. official says.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Reagan's proposal was contained in a letter signed over the weekend that would be mailed to Gorbachev at the beginning of the week. A presidential statement to the nation also is planned, he said.

White House spokesman Ben Jarrett confirmed Saturday that the White House was circulating Reagan's plan to U.S. allies, key Congress members, and the U.S. arms negotiating team in Geneva. He declined to say when the letter would be sent to Gorbachev or discuss its contents.

Reagan's proposal to eliminate medium range missiles "holds out the hope of earliest progress," the other official told the Associated Press.

The official said Reagan also proposed that the more than 100 mobile SS-20 missiles the Soviets have deployed in their Asian territories be reduced to very low numbers. These missiles are targeted on China and Japan and were not included in the disarmament proposal Gorbachev made Jan. 15.

The United States has deployed 236 Pershing II and cruise missiles in West Germany, Britain and Italy, all aimed at Soviet territory. Eventual installation of 572 missiles is planned. The Soviets, meanwhile, have about 300 SS-20s targeted at Western Europe.

Marcos denies claims that rebellious troops forced him into exile

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - President Ferdinand Marcos appeared on national television today in a live broadcast, and said claims by rebels that he was preparing to leave the country were an effort to frighten the people.

Radio Veritas, the Roman Catholic church station that has been a staunch critic of Marcos, had said he was leaving the country.

Marcos appeared with his wife, Imelda, and some of his children and grandchildren around him.

"Don't believe any of these stories," said Marcos, calling the reports "propaganda lies they are peddling through the air waves."

"They (the reports) are completely without basis. They are intended to frighten our people," Marcos said, directing his men to "use all necessary force" to defend their installations.

He directed soldiers to use small arms to defend themselves but said big weapons like tanks and armored personnel carriers should not be employed "as yet."

"I appeal to civilians to get out of the line of fire," Marcos said.

Several local and foreign reporters were in the hall with Marcos, and the president said this would prove the broadcast was not taped in advance.

As Marcos spoke, thousand of students chanted the name of opposition leader Corazon Aquino outside his heavily guarded palace.

Radio Veritas had broadcast statements by the two rebel military officials, former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos, the former deputy armed forces chief, who said "tyranny" had been defeated.

The Radio Veritas announcer then said Marcos was leaving the country. Sources at the presidential palace told reporters that Marcos was resting.

In a battle of broadcasts, the government television replied: "the government remains in full control of the situation."

Announcer Thelma Dumpit said on the government's Channel 4 that her report came from Information Minister Gregorio Cendana, who did not appear.

An Associated Press correspondent said some soldiers at the presidential palace were wearing white armbands, but they refused to talk with journalists. Rebels have said soldiers wishing to surrender or join the revolt should wear white bands.

Drivers of vehicles passing the palace honked horns and crowds gathered around the barricades.

An official at the U.S. embassy said, "I don't have any confirmation that he (Marcos) has left." He added that es are "more fluid this morning than they were yesterday." The official, contacted by phone, spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Washington, U.S. state Department spokesman Warren Magruder said, "We've heard those reports (of Marcos leaving) too, but we can't confirm them."

Meanwhile, battle-dressed marines, firing tear gas and swinging truncheons, attacked civilians manning street barricades outside the military camp where Ramos and Enrile were entrenched.

The marines dispersed hundreds of people supporting two senior military officials in an adjacent military camp who are demanding

Minority awareness topic of unity week

By CHRIS K. MURPHY
News Staff

In an effort to create a better understanding of the status of minority students, two campus groups are teaming up to present "A Focus on Unity Week" today through March 1.

The purpose of the week is to make Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students aware of the lack of unity between minorities and other students, as well as the lack of unity among the different minority groups themselves, according to Beth McCahill, executive coordinator for student government.

"We want students to know that it's everyone's responsibility to help out in unifying the gap between minorities and students," said McCahill.

She added, "A lot of students are not aware that the campus is 92 percent white and only 3 percent Hispanic and 2 percent black. This should strike some students. Hopefully, through some statistics presented in the media and through a few rallies with guest speakers, we will be able to bring to light how revealing and important these statistics really are."

Another minority group that will be participating in the awareness week is the Black Cultural Arts Council. The BCAC co-President Lisa Boykin said she feels there is a necessity for some type of minority awareness week at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

"In my opinion, there is a major problem at Notre Dame," Boykin said. "There is a lack of unity even among the different minority groups and this makes it hard to get the various groups

Station managers intend to resign after ban on homosexual message

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Assistant News Editor

The station managers at both student-run radio stations have announced their intentions to resign after the administration told WSND-FM to stop running a public service announcement from a homosexual organization, said Vito Gagliardi, executive news director of WSND-FM and WVFI-AM.

Although neither WVFI-AM station manager Reginald Daniel nor WSND-FM station manager Eileen Ridley has submitted a written resignation, both were absent at an executive board meeting yesterday, Gagliardi said.

In addition, Daniel "is no longer fulfilling his responsibilities as the AM director or even his shifts as disc jockey," Gagliardi said. "I believe the same is true for her (Ridley)."

Daniel and Ridley's resignations become effective Friday, the same day their terms as station managers previously had been scheduled to end, said Gagliardi, who learned Thursday of their intentions to resign.

Daniel declined comment, as did Ridley, who said that "the issue has not been resolved."

The station managers' announcement came after Assistant Vice President for Student Services Father Francis Cafarelli met with Ridley last week and told her that administrators no longer wanted WSND-FM disc jockeys to read an announcement from a group named Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College, Gagliardi said.

Cafarelli declined to comment, saying it was "premature to talk about it publicly." He did say, however, that he was not aware of Daniel and Ridley's intention to resign.

After Cafarelli's meeting with Ridley, WSND-FM disc jockeys stopped reading the homosexual group's announcements, he said.

Cafarelli met with Gagliardi

Friday and told the news director that several administrators, including University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, had received complaints about the announcements on the FM station, Gagliardi said.

Cafarelli "only banned the announcement on the FM station because that's the only station he was getting complaints on," said Gagliardi.

According to WVFI-AM disc jockey Tim Adams, however, WVFI-AM also had run the announcements. In addition, "there were a few occasions when (WVFI-AM) DJs did not read the announcement in a straightforward way," said Adams.

Adams added that he did not know whether WSND-FM disc jockeys had failed to read the announcement in a serious manner.

According to Gagliardi, Cafarelli and other administrators' reason for banning the announcement was

Junior Parents' Weekend more than meals, speeches

I am neither a junior nor a parent, but despite being in the minority this weekend of those who were, Junior Parents' Weekend had more meaning to me than simply directing an invasion of people to LaFortune Center or the bookstore.

Sure, Junior Parents' Weekend is filled with a great deal of small talk and introductions, speeches you have heard somewhere before, and yet another showing of "Wake Up The Echos," but beneath the superficial aspects of the weekend, there is something more.

From an outsider's point of view of the festivities, juniors and parents gathered for more than the sole purpose of eating and drinking. In fact, JPW seems to serve as a time for parents to look into a world which they previously knew only from a distance, a world in which their children have lived for almost three years.

Although JPW may appear as simply an extension of the annual high school or grade school "parent/teacher" night, in that situation parents faced the prospect of hearing "Johnny just doesn't behave in class; something must be done about him" from all of his teachers. During JPW, parents can see what "something" their son or daughter has done on his or her own to prepare for adult life.

JPW marks a time when parents can gauge just how far their children have come since dropping them off freshmen year. This is the opportunity to gain new insights about how their sons or daughters are changing in between freshmen orientation and graduation day. Although parents get glimpses of these changes at home during school breaks, JPW offers an environment of which the parents are not accustomed, an environment far removed from the area they grew up in. Parents are the guests of their children for an entire weekend; they are not here to serve as dorm room movers or to run endless errands to the local Kroger's and University Park Mall.

For alumni and regular football tailgaters, this is not another hectic visit to the campus. It seems JPW is meant to be a relaxing weekend where parents and students can just get to know each other on a more equal basis.

For almost three years most parents only can catch glimpses of their child's successes and failures at Notre Dame. Now they get to meet their junior's friends.

Students get to hear stories from visiting parents' friends that they otherwise would not have heard: about their "first love" in second grade or about the time they climbed a tree and couldn't get back down.

Scott Bearby

Assistant News Editor

Parents hear those stories that they otherwise wouldn't hear: when they knocked on Father Hesburgh's office door at midnight or when they were found sound asleep on the floor after a very long all-nighter.

More importantly, I saw parents and juniors going beyond the trivial conversations. The topics ranged from family life to terrorism... life in general. Groups of parents and children listened to each other's views in an adult, equal setting.

But JPW seemed not to be 100 percent serious. Parents and their students were just having a good time.

JPW is fun. It seems to be a well-rounded weekend well worth the travel investment and possibility of having to stay in an Elkhart motel.

However, JPW is not for juniors alone. While juniors and parents enjoy the fine cuisine of University Food Services (above the typical dining hall variety), freshmen, sophomores and even seniors labor as waiters and dishwashers.

Their reason is not so that everyone has a good time; the reason is money.

Because of JPW, more people can finance spring break travel every year. More students are able to work on their Florida tans.

Of course, most students choose to work or leave town since there is generally nothing else to do on campus that weekend.

Campus security once again becomes understanding as you are not obliged to provide next of kin before the gate guard lets you pass and student cars are free to use on-campus parking lots whether there are parents in the car or not (definitely not the case in most instances).

Of course the most significant point to make about Junior Parents' Weekend for those who are not juniors is that it marks the end of the very unexciting month of February.

Everyone seems to benefit from JPW somehow. For this sophomore, it makes me look forward to next year.

Congress to eye Nicaraguan aid while Reagan pleads for defense

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Much of the debate in Congress this week will focus on President Reagan's ambitious plans for military spending and his expected request for $100 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

Legislators also are expected to renew their denunciations of fraud in the Feb. 7 Philippine presidential election and press calls for President Ferdinand Marcos to step aside.

Meanwhile, the leaders of the House and Senate budget committees will be taking some informal, preliminary steps that could set the stage for movement toward a bipartisan budget compromise.

On Wednesday, Reagan is scheduled to deliver a nationally broadcast address to discuss his views on military spending and make a pitch for gaining congressional approval of $70 million in military aid and $30 million in economic assistance for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist regime.

Faced with a skeptical Congress, the president has participated in a series of events aimed at building support for the aid.

Last Thursday, the president briefly visited Grenada, where U.S.

troops participated in a military action to remove a Marxist junta in 1983. Administration officials, making arguments for aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, have pointed to Grenada as an example of how communist influence can be turned back in this hemisphere.

On Saturday, Reagan said in his weekly radio address, "Helping those fighting for their own freedom in Nicaragua is both morally right and vital to our own national security."

"If the communists consolidate their power, their campaign of violence throughout central America will go into high gear, bringing new dangers and sending hundreds of thousands of refugees streaming toward our 2,000-mile-long southern border," the president said.

Today, administration officials are expected to release an intercepted Nicaraguan government document outlining a campaign of misinformation aimed at influencing U.S. policy.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has said that carrying out the administration plan for aid would only bring "slaughter and humiliation" of the rebels, resulting in "disaster and shame" that would lead to the introduction of U.S. troops in Nicaragua.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, is expected to deliver a similar message in the formal Democratic response following Reagan's Wednesday night address.

O'Neill, Wright and other senior Democrats have said that instead of military aid, the United States should be doing more to foster negotiations among the nations in the region.

The president also is expected to use his speech on Wednesday to discuss his request for $320.3 billion in military spending authority for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. That would be about an 8 percent increase - after accounting for inflation - from the current level Congress approved last December.

Reagan has argued that the Soviet military threat and ongoing arms negotiations with the Soviet Union make it essential to maintain a high level of Pentagon spending.

However, many in Congress say such spending must be restrained if federal spending is to be brought under control.

Communist congress to convene tomorrow

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Communist Party leader Mikhail Gorbachev convenes a national party congress on tomorrow aimed at rekindling faith in the nation's leadership, spurring economic progress and setting a course for future foreign policy.

Five thousand Soviet delegates, joined by guests from foreign Communist parties, will gather at the Kremlin Palace of Congresses for more than a week of speeches and discussion of a revised party program, party rules and economic and political guidelines.

The congress will be the 27th in the party's history. Many previous congresses have marked turning points in party policy.

Gorbachev's congress will open exactly 30 years from the day that Nikita Khrushchev, at the 20th congress in 1956, denounced Josef Stalin's "cult of personality" and the bloody purges carried out in Stalin's name.

Gorbachev and many of the party officials, ministers and economic managers he has brought into power in his 11 months of rule were in their 20s then. In the ensuing years, the nation has seen a series of widely differing leadership styles.

Khrushchev boasted of huge economic progress ahead for the Soviet Union. In the 1961 party program, overseen by Khrushchev, the Kremlin promised the nation a near utopia. Khrushchev was ousted from power in 1964 and his name was nearly erased from history books.

Domenici: budget law fatalistic

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The chairman of the Senate budget committee told the nation's governors yesterday that the balanced-budget law is "a planned train wreck," but he voiced optimism that Congress would act to avoid scheduled, automatic spending cuts.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the odds are better than 50-50 that Congress will "pull the switch and the wreck will be avoided," by passing its own budget that meets the deficit-reduction targets of the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law.

"It is best analogized as a planned train wreck. No one would plan a train wreck, but we did," Domenici said.

Domenici, speaking to the executive committee of the National Governors Association, said the final budget solution may include some additional tax revenues to "glue it all together."

But Domenici, who offered few details of what he thought the budget would look like, said a major increase in taxes for the purpose of reducing the deficit is unlikely, even if included in a package of overall tax reform.

Domenici spoke as the governors began their annual winter meeting. They were attending a black-tie dinner and reception at the White House in the evening, and were going back to the executive mansion this morning for a meeting with President Reagan.

The governors, their numbers heavily dominated by Democrats, arrived at the meeting after their leaders attacked Reagan's budget proposal for fiscal 1987. But there was some agreement with Reagan on the major budget issues of taxes and Social Security.

An Associated Press survey of the governors found a substantial majority opposing a federal tax increase to whittle at the federal budget deficit, or at least saying any boost in taxes ought to be only a last resort. They were also opposed to cutbacks in Social Security to lower deficits.

Researcher says smoking habits causing shorter female life spans

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH - Women are losing their life expectancy advantage over men because of the growing number of female smokers, not because of increased stress, a researcher said Saturday.

"The life expectancy of men and women will be about the same in the next 40 to 50 years," said Gus Miller, director of Studies on Smoking Inc., a non-profit group in EBORO.

"Firstly, women are smoking more. Secondly, men in the older age have been quitting smoking double the rate of women, so they are living longer," he said in a telephone interview.

Miller, 61, a statistician and one-time smoker, studied statistics compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics for American men and women who died after age 30 between 1920 and 1983.

He found that women lived an average of one or two years longer than men in 1920, a ratio that climbed to a high of 7.8 years in the late 1970s.

The longevity difference has fallen steadily since then and stood at seven years in 1983, the latest year for which accurate figures are available, Miller said.

The average American man lived to be 71.7 years old in 1983, while the average woman lived to be 78.7.

"Smoking is the best explanation of the longevity differences," he said. "Increased rates of mortality closely correspond to the smoking habits of men and women over the past century."

Miller discounts theories that attribute the widening longevity ratio, at least until the 1980s, to a genetic inferiority among men or hormone protection among women.

"Increased rates of mortality closely correspond to the smoking habits of men and women over the past century."

He also does not accept the explanation that women's emergence in high-pressure jobs has shortened their life expectancy.

"Stress is not the answer," he said, adding that he's comparing male smokers in high-pressure jobs with their non-smoking male counterparts.

Black men and women, for example, lived to about the same age in 1920, Miller said. But once black males began smoking in greater numbers after World War II, the gap widened and peaked at 8.8 years during the 1970s, he said.

The longevity difference between black men and women stood at about 8.2 years in 1983.

"Putting these two (comparisons) together, none of the other theories can come close to explaining it," he said.

Miller, whose latest findings were reported in the February edition of the New York State Journal of Medicine, previously studied more than 1,000 people over age 30 who died during the 1970s.

He found that non-smoking males lived an average of 2 years longer than smoking males and that non-smoking females lived an average of 6 years longer than female smokers.

In a study published two years ago, Miller reported that women whose husbands smoked cigarettes died of cancer at nearly twice the rate of those whose husbands did not smoke.

He also found that non-smoking wives who worked outside the home, and thus were exposed to cigarette smokers, had a higher incidence of cancer than non-smoking wives who remained at home where no one smoked.

"that there's no way you can disassociate that (homosexual group's) message and Notre Dame because the station is named WSND and is owned by Notre Dame." Disc jockeys also say "several times each hour that they are broadcasting live from the tower of O'Shaughnessy Hall on the campus of Notre Dame."

Cafarelli also told Gagliardi that the announcement, which like all public service announcements was run free of charge, "was counter to a lot of things that a Catholic university should stand for," Gagliardi said.

According to WVFI-AM programming supervisor John Rogers, the group's announcement "gave basically who they were, what their membership consisted of, and said that if you'd like to know more, here's the address."

"It (the announcement) was like any other type announcement sent to the station just as something from the Glee Club," said Rogers.

According to Gagliardi, "Ridley has had no prior beef with the administration, whereas Daniel has had a series of conflicts and confrontations with the administration."

Daniel has asked the administration for an increase in the budget for the station next year and funds to replace WVFI-AM's problem-plagued transmitter system. Cafarelli has said the station "has a pretty good chance" of receiving a budget increase and may receive funding for the system.

The banning of the announcement, however, poses a problem beyond just the losing of two station managers, he said.

"The announcement's ban represents the potential for the administration to directly control what goes out on air," he said.

"Considering the power, especially financially, that the administration has over us, we cannot guarantee that they will not, quote, take us over," Gagliardi said. "They could tell us what music to play and how to operate. 'They haven't told that to us yet, but considering the financial power they have over us, they could,' he said. "But I don't expect it."

ACLU blasts porn commission

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A constitutional rights group charged yesterday that a pornography commission established by Attorney General Edwin Meese dwells on "bizarre sexual practices" while disregarding fair fact-finding methods.

"Our worst fears have been surpassed," American Civil Liberties Union legislative counsel Barry Lynn said in a 31-page report on the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography.

"Even though many commissioners concede they have only a rudimentary understanding of the law, they continue to spend more time discussing bizarre sexual practices than in learning anything about the First Amendment," he said.

He said commission methods have been "so intellectually indefensible that they taint the integrity and credibility of any final recommendations."

The Justice Department issued a statement from commission Chairman Henry Hudson, Arlington County, Va., prosecutor, saying the panel has been fair and has considered a wide variety of opinion.

ACLU allegations were "not supported by the record of the hearings conducted by the commission," the statement said, adding that since the commission has made no final decisions on recommendations, specific comment on the ACLU criticism would be "premature and inappropriate."

The 63-year-old civil liberties group said hearings in six cities over the past 11 months have featured biased witnesses, "limited" social science data and "inordinate attention to aberrant sexual practices."

"The commission staff was directed to purchase several glossy, interracial sex publications and a magazine called Young Girls in Bondage" while on a Sept. 11 visit to "three Houston peep shows," the report said.

"It is as if by finding the single most despicable scene of sexual conduct ever photographed the commission would be justified in urging suppression of all sexually oriented material," it said.

The 11-member commission named by Meese in March 1985

meets next week in Scottsdale, Ariz., to draft recommendations due in June.

Meese established the panel after President Reagan called in May 1984 for a study of new evidence that has become available since a 1970 federal commission found no links between pornography and anti-social behavior and urged repeal of numerous obscenity laws.

Lynn told reporters Friday he expects the commission to urge approval of sweeping Senate legislation that would violate constitutional rights. In specific, he criticized a measure sponsored by Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., to outlaw use of home computers to transmit sexual information about children.

Lynn said the ACLU would not oppose a ban on plotting crimes against children but believes Trible's measure overshoots that target.

"Mr. Trible isn't really interested in drawing those narrow bills that do what he says his bills do," Lynn said. "Mr. Trible is interested in stopping adults from communicating about sex."

that President Ferdinand Marcos resign and hand over power to Corazon Aquino. She claims she defeated Marcos in the Feb. 7 presidential election.

Witnesses said some students tried to link arms to stop and block the marines.

Many people tumbled and fell as they tried to escape the troopers, according to radio reports from the scene. There were no immediate reports on casualties.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said last night, "The president appealed earlier today to President Marcos to avoid an attack against other elements of the Philippine armed forces. Regrettably, there are now reports of an attack."

Speakes said Reagan sent Marcos a message through diplomatic channels saying America "cannot continue our existing military assistance if the government uses that aid against other elements of the Philippine military that enjoy popular backing."

The pro-government marines launched their attack minutes before 6 am., just as dawn was breaking.

Observer corrections

Because of problems with typesetting, Assistant Vice President for Student Services Father Francis Cafarelli was misquoted. In addition, a paragraph quoting WVFI-AM and WSND-FM Chief Engineer Mike Thesing was omitted. The correct version should read:

Cafarelli said he didn't know the chances of WVFI-AM receiving any funds or the amount the station would receive if the funds were appropriated. He did say, however, that he is "going for the goal of getting the station received in all the halls as quickly as possible."

Thesing, however, said that he sees the station "getting enough money to replace a couple of things, but that wouldn't be enough."

together to achieve the common goal of unification."

Boykin said that it is the responsibility of all students to work for a feeling of closeness on both campuses. She said, "Most people come from high schools with few minorities. We can make it better for everyone in general to feel more unified. We are trying to encourage everyone to participate. We called it a 'Focus on Unity Week' because we wanted to emphasize a unity among all students including minorities."

Scheduled events for the week start Wednesday at noon when the Farm Labor Organizing Committee will hold a news conference, featuring the FLOC president. Also Wednesday is a FLOC victory party for the Campbell's boycott in the Nazz. A mass will be held Wednesday at 5 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church.

Thursday the week continues with a show by Italian dancers at 8 p.m. The location is to be announced. Friday afternoon there will be a rally on the Administration Building steps at 3:30. Saturday will feature a black cultural arts fashion show in the Monogram room of the ACC at 7 p.m. The week will end Sunday with a non-denominational service at 4:15 p.m. at the Grotto.

Failing Indiana farmer enters mental hospital

Associated Press

REMINGTON, Ind. - A farmer facing foreclosure on land that once belonged to his parents was hospitalized at a mental health center yesterday after firing shots toward officers during a four-hour standoff, state police said.

Cpl. Patrick Calkins said David Berenda, 37, of rural Remington was admitted early yesterday to the Wabash Valley Hospital Mental Health Center in West Lafayette. No charges were lodged against Berenda, Calkins said.

Berenda surrendered without force to authorities at 10:35 p.m. Saturday after an ordeal in which he first threatened suicide, led police on a short high-speed chase and then fired shots over the heads of law officers at his 1,000-acre farm, Calkins said.

"It was more a threatening action than to cause injury," Calkins said of the gunfire. No one was hurt and there was no damage, he added.

State Police Sgt. Peter Popplewell said Jasper County sheriff's deputies notified Berenda last week that the farm four miles west of Remington would be foreclosed upon. On Saturday, officials of the Federal Land Bank notified Berenda he needed to vacate the farm by March 4.

Popplewell said the farmer's financial troubles made him desperate.

"He said he was mad at the system, mad at the people repossessing his farm," Popplewell said. "He said nobody understands. He said, what's he going to do now? how's he going to support his family?"

Berenda is married and has several children, Popplewell said. Berenda had just bought the farmhouse and grew up on the farm.

The incident began about 6:30 p.m. when Berenda left the house, threatening suicide. A relative called police and there was a five-minute chase on rural roads in southern Jasper County, police said.

The chase ended back at the farm and Berenda fired several shots in the air over the heads of officers, police said. About 25 units from the state police and Jasper County sheriff's department responded and police blocked the roads leading to the farmhouse.

Yes, this is Greg Otto. He turned 20 yesterday. After all these years, he still looks the same... hasn't changed a bit. Girls stop by 104 Dillon and run your fingers through that wild hair.

Have no doubts about it—your donation makes a difference. The difference between a boy leading a normal, active life or being an invalid. These boys have a blood disease called hemophilia, which simply means that their blood cannot clot by itself. They previously led a pretty sheltered life because they could bleed to death from a minor injury. Today they can be treated with a clotting factor that their own bodies do not produce.

And that clotting factor is taken from the plasma you donate.

How much plasma is needed? A lot. For example, one unit of plasma yields less than a teaspoonful of the clotting factor hemophiliacs need, so you can see the need for large volumes of plasma just for hemophiliacs. And thousands of units of plasma are used in hospitals and emergency rooms every day to save many lives.

Robert Stormont plays Prospero in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's production of "The Tempest."

Chicago actor brings on winds of change for 'The Tempest'

Special to The Observer

Prepare yourselves for a storm of incredible proportions, a howling nightmare powerful enough to destroy anything in its path. Prepare yourselves for "The Tempest."

William Shakespeare's last and most magical play, "The Tempest," the third Notre Dame and Saint Mary's production of the season at Washington Hall, will make a stop at Notre Dame this week and next.

What is unusual about this production is that a professional actor from Chicago, Robert Stormont, will be playing the role of Prospero in the play, which is directed by Mark Pilkinton, chairman of Notre Dame's communication and theatre department.

Pilkinton said of Stormont, "It will be a great experience for our students to act with someone of his caliber. Acting opposite a professional usually raises the level of concentration in students, and consequently improves their performances."

Stormont said that a strange string of coincidences led up to him receiving this particular role. A good friend unexpectedly called him up with the offer to play Prospero, and both Stormont and his friend said, "It's a small world," and the deal was solidified. This type of coincidence happens often in acting, according to Stormont. "Besides, I thought it would be a good experience" to perform at Notre Dame, Stormont added.

"I think Shakespeare is . . . the best writer the world has ever known."

-Robert Stormont

Along with his acting role in "The Tempest," Stormont also will be conducting acting workshops, both with classes and outside of class. He said he feels that Notre Dame drama students, and actors in general, benefit more from hands-on experience with professional actors than lectures by professors with much knowledge of acting and theater.

Stormont's experience in acting is extensive, and his forte is Shakespearean theater. "I think Shakespeare is wonderful. He is the best writer the world has ever known, and his writing is warm and human - full of funny guys, bad guys and funny bad guys."

"The Tempest" is full of intriguing characters, like Prospero's evil brother Antonio, who usurps Prospero's dukedom early in the play. Later in the play, a spirit named Ariel helps Prospero in his search for his brother. Prospero himself uses his magic to seek a prosperous ending to the story.

This particular production of "The Tempest" will be slightly altered, according to Pilkinton. "We have changed a word here and there to make the play more understandable," he said. He also allows Prospero to struggle with his magical power, instead of wielding it with ease. "I would like Prospero to struggle to make his magic work . . . If Prospero believes that at any moment his power could fail and all would be lost, it will heighten the dramatic effect of his magic," said Pilkinton.

"The Tempest" will play Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 8:10 p.m. at Washington Hall, both this week and next. Tickets cost $6 for main floor seats, $5 for balcony seats and $4 for students.

SHUT UP!

Dave Dvorak

Out of the lunchbox

I'm convinced that this campus is full of complainers - people who just never seem to be happy. Cynical and pessimistic, they spend their four years at Notre Dame groaning, grumbling, and griping. I think we all know the type.

Last Friday, I had the dubious distinction of eating lunch with one such individual. He's a guy from class whose personality in many ways resembles a dark storm cloud. He's always finding things about the school to fuss and rag and moan about. Some people like to call him Willie the Whiner.

Willie threw down his Observer and looked across the lunch table at me, disgust written all over his face.

"Can you believe what Holtz is doing?" he asked me. "He's got a lot of nerve recruiting that quarterback Tony Rice. Have you seen the numbers on that guy?"

Yeah, sure - 7,000 yards total offense, 40 touchdown passes, only two career losses . . .

"No, that's not what I mean," said Willie. "I'm talking about his SAT scores - 640 total. I'm shocked that this place would lower its standards like that to recruit intellectually inferior athletes."

What do you mean by intellectually inferior?

"Well, my sister tried to get into ND last year," Willie said, "and she got rejected. Her SAT scores were double what Rice got. Where's the integrity around here?"

Can your sister throw a football?

"What's that got to do with it?"

Everything. Notre Dame doesn't need another person with high SAT scores - heck, this place is oozing with high school valedictorians. What this university really needs is somebody who can toss the old pigskin, run like lightning and bring back Notre Dame football fever.

"But he'll never make it in the classroom," Willie protested.

Give the guy a chance. Charles Dickens and Thomas Edison never even graduated from grade school, much less took the SATs. They did all right for themselves, didn't they?

Willie the Whiner stared at me blankly for a few seconds, then took a bite of his fried fish sandwich.

"You know," he said. "I'm sick and tired of this university dictating morality to me. I should be able to make up my own mind whether or not to eat meat on Fridays during Lent. This fish sandwich is offensive."

Well, there's always a pretty good selection of cereal here - Apple Jacks, Raisin Bran, Cap'n Crunch . . .

"Yeah, Cap'n Crunch with no crunchberries. And those plastic cereal dispensers here in South Dining Hall have got to be the dumbest things in the world."

I might have to agree with you on that one, Willie.

"Speaking of dumb things," he continued, "when are they going to finish that Fieldhouse monument? It looks even uglier than it did in the plans."

I'm sure it'll look nice when they're finished. The same goes for that addition on LaFortune - that'll be a big improvement.

"Yeah, they'll probably finish LaFortune about the time I'm back for my 10th year class reunion," whined Willie. "Then they'll hit me up for a donation and make me pay for it. Meanwhile, our student center is in shambles, just like the whole social life here - shambles!"

C'mon, the social life isn't all that bad. How about the SYRs?

"I have a rotten time at my SYRs. My dates always leave early on me, the unappreciative wenches. They try to tell me that I'm too negative about things."

I don't know what would make them think that.

"Me either," muttered Willie. "And you know what else really peeves me? Last Monday was President's Day - all the schools and businesses in the entire nation were closed. But does Notre Dame close? Nooooo. Classes are still in session. I guess that just proves it."

Proves what?

"Proves that the administration is made up of a bunch of communists."

Communists?

"Sure. They don't respect national holidays. They slap us with the alcohol policy and the parietyals rulings. They've taken away all our freedom and all our fun. Face it, this place is run by communists."

I really think you're exaggerating a bit, Willie.

"No, it's been this way since the founding of the University. Father Sorin didn't want us to have any fun, either."

How can you possibly make a statement like that?

"Well, just look where he chose to situate this place - South Bend, Indiana - a city with rotten weather, lousy radio stations and a stinking ethanol plant!"

I don't think Father Sorin was too concerned about radio stations and the ethanol plant back in 1842.

"He should have planned ahead." Willie wiped his mouth and got up to leave. "I've gotta run," he said. "I have to cash a check at the Cashier's Office."

Isn't it amazing how the ladies that work there are always in such a wonderful mood? They're always so nice and friendly.

"Yeah, they must be up to something," Willie said. "You can never trust a smiling person. Actually, I think it's just part of the administration's scheme to make it appear like people are happy here."

Well, I'm happy here.

"I always knew there was something about you I didn't like." Willie the Whiner picked up his tray and left the table. I breathed a deep sigh of relief as the dark storm cloud followed him out.

Unlikely couples give 'Heart Day' a new meaning

Recently, we celebrated the most romantic day of the year, Valentine's Day. "Heart Day" brings to mind visions of romance, love, roses and happy couples in love - couples like Romeo and Juliet, Bogy and Bacall, Sir Lancelot and Guinevere, or maybe even Mom and Dad. These represent some of the greatest romantic pairings of all time. Great. But have you ever thought about what some of most mismatched couples in the world could be? Well, I did. And thankfully that is all I did. Think. Because if these couples really got together they could cause nothing less than "The Fall of Rome - Part II."

Carol Brown

in these times

In current news, let's say... Marcos and Aquino. If marriage is based on trust, can you imagine where these two would be? "Ferdinand, where were you last night? Stuffing the ballot boxes again, huh?" How's that for marital bliss?

As long as we are in the political realm, picture the newly wed couple of Ronald Reagan and Geraldine Ferraro-Reagan. (Warning: attempting this vision at home may be hazardous to the stability of your political identity). Granted, it is normal for even the happiest couples to experience disagreement on some issues, but these two would definitely take the cake - which after Ronnie had thickly iced it to preserve the status quo, Geraldine would promptly proceed to cut it up and distribute it to the poor. And could this couple ever give a simple party? What kind? Republican or Democrat?

And what couple could possibly form a greater "morality-mismatch" than the bible-thumping Reverend Jerry Falwell and America's most humorous sex-therapist, Dr. Ruth Westheimer? Just to think of that first night of their honeymoon gives the word a whole new meaning, honeymoon?

How about social justice and civil rights? Imagine the sparks that would fly from the union of Clare Huxtable of "The Cosby Show" with America's all-time, prime-time fascist: Archie Bunker. Clare is the sort of independent, ERA woman that Archie would definitely label as "one of those ding-bat liberated womens nuts." Their views would be as different as black and white, particularly in Archie's eyes.

Domestic tranquility? This would most assuredly be one of the few homes in America which staged civil liberties' protests rather than garage sales. Bunker definitely would not be the king of this castle.

And last but oh so far from least would be the humorous teaming up of the mother-son duo of my favorite, Erma Bombeck, with the infamous Mr. T. Can you imagine America's great "Mother Suburbia" trying to mother a man who eats rocks for breakfast? "Oh, T! How many times have I told you, chewing on rocks is bad for your teeth. You don't want to have to visit the mean old dentist again, do you?"

Or, how about this typical childhood scene: "T, honey, when Mr. Jones said he was taking Troop 732 on a survival outing in the country, I don't think he meant for you to bring all that military gear. Besides you might scare off the other little boys." "What! I pity the fool who would dare to mess with my G.I. Joe army gear!" And poor Erma would not only have to deal with the usual colds, bumps and scrapes of childhood, but... "Dr. Smith I just don't know what to do with T. All of those chains he wears are causing an awful rash on his 'little' chest."

Anyway, this just goes to show what a lot of trouble a little imagination can get you into. Oh, and how about this one... Manute Bol and Mary Lou Retton?... naaah.

P.O. Box Q

Therapeutic encounter inferior to confession

Dear Editor:

To say that I was disturbed by Ann Pettifer's Feb. 12 article, "Sexism of Confessional Turning Women Away," would be at best an understatement. Her position that, "... the therapeutic encounter is the obvious, constructive alternative to confession (for women)," demonstrates a fundamental lack of understanding of the sacrament of penance.

This sacrament is an opportunity for a man or woman to confess his or her failings to a representative of Christ on Earth, namely a priest. He has been empowered by his ordination to pronounce the sins forgiven in the light of true contrition. The slate is, so to say, wiped clean, and the penitent is admonished to live as Christ called for us to live.

Now I ask, what is entailed in this "therapeutic encounter?" A psychiatrist/psychologist discusses your failing with you. Fine. But now I ask, can he or she offer you guidelines by which to live as the Gospels suggest? More radically, do they or their profession accept the concept of "sin" as Christians know it? But most importantly, can he or she absolve you of the stain on your soul as can a priest?

I offer NO to all of the above. The only possible conclusion for a Catholic: the therapeutic encounter is grossly inferior to the sacrament of penance.

As to Pettifer's complaint that women have no voice in the control of this sacrament and should therefore abandon it, may I offer a quote from the decrees of the Second Vatican Council.

They (the faithful) are fully incorporated into the society of the Church who, possessing the Spirit of Christ, accept Her entire system and all the means of salvation given to Her, and through union with Her visible structure are joined to Christ, who rules Her through the Supreme Pontiff and the bishops. (Lumen Gentium, Art. 14).

A final thought. Those who abandon the Church and Her sacraments for the secular world should be aware that in no way are they making an even trade. In fact they lose much, much more than they gain.

We must not let people to take away our trust

Dear Editor:

Dateline, 1982 - Seven Illinois residents die from cyanide-laced Tylenol.

Dateline, 1986 - New York resident dies from cyanide-laced Tylenol.

What has this world come to? The Tylenol cases are only a portion of the tampering that has taken place in recent years. Following the 1982 incidents there were reports of eyedrops containing acid, and one that hits close to home for me, Hygrade Ball Park Franks were reported to have broken razor blades and pins inside them.

The parent companies lost millions of dollars and possibly many customers, not because of their negligence, but because someone decided to harm someone else. Johnson & Johnson recalls its Tylenol products for inspection. Hygrade recalls all of its Ball Park Franks in its home base area of Detroit.

Johnson & Johnson now has to go through a similar procedure again. Hopefully this time it will uncover something that will help to recover its losses, and help to keep loyal customers.

Hygrade discovered, after the recall, that all three incidents were created by the victims themselves. Hygrad was now the victim. Livonia, Mich., Hygrade's hometown, stood behind Hygrade, and in the course of almost two weeks Livonia ate more than 105,000 Ball Park Franks, one for every person in Livonia.

The people of the United States should continue to back Johnson & Johnson. I am not telling everyone to go out and buy its products, but I am saying that if you have been a regular Tylenol user, you should continue to use Tylenol when Johnson & Johnson and the FDA are satisfied that the problem no longer exists.

We cannot allow the sick people of the world to take the companies we have trusted for so long away from us.

Seniors should not be fast to condemn others

Dear Editor:

As underclassmen who attended Undergrad Night at the Alumni-Senior Club on Jan. 24, we would like to enlighten the ladies who were so quick to condemn us in their Feb. 7 letter to The Observer.

First, your choice in adjectives for the young lady you saw dancing on the table was far more "asinine" than anything she did. What type of mature college senior has to resort to publicly humiliating someone she doesn't even know by calling the girl a bimbo, just to get her point across? We believe an apology is in order.

Second, you are totally out of line with your criticism of the acts of the undergrads. Obviously, you failed to notice that Undergrad Night is chaperoned. Thus, you fail to realize that the chaperones approached the three dancing on the table, and did nothing more but ask the undergrads to replace the dislocated panels when they were finished, which they did. If the people who protect the establishment were not concerned, then what makes this vandalism?

Third, we see it as unfortunate that you seniors felt compelled to return to your "home away from home" on Undergrad Night. Are you that out of touch with the senior class? If so, we know of some big high school functions planned for this weekend.

Finally, you can take your advice and... rethink it. It is not because of people like us that the administration did away with parties. If you knew anything about the alcohol policy, you would realize how ridiculous your statement was. Moreover, it is attitudes such as yours which add to the "dryness" of this community. Need we say more?

P.O.Box Q

Hesburgh's recent talk was rhetorical exercise

Dear Editor:

Father Hesburgh's recent speech at Howard Hall was an exercise in rhetoric and, to use his term, a "simplistic" appraisal of the South African problem.

While Hesburgh did say that the University is an open forum for issues, he made it perfectly clear that he had read more than most on the issue of apartheid and that divestment is an easy answer espoused by those who have not properly considered the implications of such action.

Abandoning his "open forum" stance, he likened those who favor divestment to Pontius Pilate - a "simplistic" analogy if ever there was one.

True to past form, Hesburgh spent much of his speech comparing South African apartheid to the situation in America prior to the civil rights movement of the 1960s; still more of the speech was spent addressing the role Hesburgh himself played in the movement. Hesburgh deserves a tremendous amount of credit for his part in the civil rights movement in America, and he makes sure he gets every ounce of it.

The issue to be addressed is South Africa! And while there are similarities between South African and American history, the two are far from identical. Yet each time a member of Wednesday's audience raised a unique feature of the South African situation, such as its wholly racist constitution and government, Hesburgh played Rosa Parks or Martin Luther King as a trump card.

The time has come for Hesburgh to stop resting on his admittedly well-deserved laurels and resume his role as a civil rights leader, heading the call of South Africa's oppressed majority.

Hesburgh warned against "simplistic" ideas such as "divest now." Yet his own appraisal of the situation seems quite simplistic. He said that in moments of reflection he had often wondered what he would do if he had God's power to resolve the South African crisis; his answer involved some representational division of the land between blacks and whites. This hardly represents an informed reaction to the situation in the troubled nation.

Somehow in his assessment of the problems, Hesburgh neglected to incorporate the views of the black leadership; he implies that since the whites hold racist views toward blacks, black leaders must also harbor racist feelings toward whites. No more "simplistic" conclusion could possibly be drawn. South Africa's black leaders have been ever-mindful to keep their movement free from racist hatred of their oppressors.

In conclusion, I must say that the cry for divestment is anything but "simplistic." After much thoughtful consideration of the real injustices practiced by the illegitimate government of South Africa, there is no question but to divest. The legitimate leaders of the South African majority are calling out to Hesburgh to once again make a strong stand for human rights. Divestment might be a simple act, but it is far from "simplistic."

Article on counseling did not complete story

Dear Editor:

After five years of occasional Observer reading, I suppose I shouldn't be surprised at finding yet another error in an Observer story. Yet the misrepresentation of the Counseling and Psychological Services Center in Feb. 17 article on counseling services must be corrected.

The article states that the Center "is comprised of doctoral trainees in psychology." As a graduate student myself, I would never denigrate those graduate students in the Counseling Psychology Program who counsel clients at the CPSC, under the supervision of center staff. The incomplete article, however, implies that the CPSC is staffed solely by these doctoral trainees, and that the service as such is somehow second class.

According to the information pamphlet published by the CPSC, the center staff includes licensed clinical and counseling psychologists (a total of nine Ph.D.s), a certified social worker and a consulting psychiatrist. I have personally met a number of the CPSC staff and benefitted from their knowledge and skills in center-sponsored workshops. They have always acted in a professional and caring manner.

Indeed, the CPSC is one of the few organizations on this campus, outside the graduate school, which has recognized the special needs and concerns of graduate students. The center staff, both professional and doctoral students, provide an important service to the Notre Dame community. They, at the very least, deserve factual reporting from The Observer.

Students who exercise should do so defensively

Dear Editor:

I always have been impressed with the large numbers of the Notre Dame community exercising on campus. Warm weather will bring more out on our narrow roads. I feel it is important to remind these enthusiasts to RUN DEFENSIVELY while enjoying our beautiful campus.

As one who drives and jogs on campus, it is obvious the number of vehicles using the roads. I am amazed that a Notre Dame student has not been seriously injured on campus. We recognize that "pedestrians on campus have the right of way at all times," but common sense should prevail.

We know there are many safety rules of the road that include walkers and cyclists. Below are three rules that I am continually reminded of as I drive or jog on campus:

1. Run defensively, single file facing the traffic.
2. If you must wear a head set be sure you can hear the traffic behind you.
3. Wear bright colored clothing at night.

War memorial fountain glorifies the act of war

Dear Editor:

As I was sitting in the Lady Chapel of Sacred Heart Church at 5:30 this morning praying for peace, a monstrous contradiction came to my mind. Starting a peace institute and having such activities as a 48-hour vigil for peace go directly against the subtle form of indoctrination the planners of the new war memorial are, perhaps unwittingly, putting forth.

I was leery of the memorial when I heard that $500,000 was being spent on a bunch of concrete when there are so many in dire need of money and financial aid right here at our university, but I did not complain. I, too, believe that we should remember the individuals who died fighting for freedom, but we should never glorify or honor war.

Notre Dame's Trena Keys drives for two in a home game against North Star Conference rival Loyola (Chi.) earlier this season. Keys was a one-woman wrecking crew in Chicago this weekend, as she led the Irish to a 79-67 victory over Loyola on Friday and a 73-58 win over DePaul yesterday. Marty Strassen has all the details of the road trip, beginning on page 16.

Lendl captures Lipton title with victory over Wilander

Associated Press

BOCA RATON, Fla. - Top-seeded Ivan Lendl won the pivotal rain-delayed tiebreaker and then cruised to a 3-6, 6-1, 7-6, 6-4 victory over second-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden Sunday night to capture the men's singles title in the Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

The third-set tiebreaker took nearly 3 1/2 hours to complete, being interrupted by a 3-hour, 15-minute rain delay. The score was 2-2 when the rain began at 4:15 p.m. EST.

When the players returned to the court at 7:30, they traded points to 5-5, when Wilander made two great saves of powerful Lendl forehands, only to hit a backhand long. After using power to get ahead, Lendl then won the tiebreaker with a touch drop volley.

In the women's final Saturday, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd beat second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany 6-4, 6-2.

"I was struggling all day long," Lendl said. "I couldn't get the crunch on my serve. But I played much better once we got back out."

Keys

percentage from 44.4 percent to 57.4 percent in the final 20 minutes and pulled away.

Although the Demons boasted only a 5-5 record coming into the game, the victory was a big one for Notre Dame.

"DePaul is our big rivalry in everything from marbles to basketball," said DiStanislao.

The Irish held 5-5 guard Sally Anderson to only 12 points in the game, while Keys proved once again why she is one of the premier players in NCAA women's basketball.

"She's a senior and a leader," said DiStanislao. "This was a big, big game for us and she knew what she had to do. We needed her experience. She got rebounds when we needed them and points when we needed them. She did her job once again."

Keys, who was held to just two points in Notre Dame's 55-53 victory over DePaul earlier in the year, was more concerned with the victory than with redeeming herself.

"The fact that they shut me down last time was in the back of my mind," she said. "But you can't take a basketball game as a personal thing. The main thing I wanted to do was make sure we beat them. Whether I scored two points or 25 points doesn't matter, as long as we beat them."

Botham added 23 for the Irish in addition to 14 rebounds, countering the physical inside play of DePaul. DiStanislao was glad to see the 6-2 sophomore play the kind she has played all year for her squad.

"Sandy Botham came alive," she said. "She did today what we knew she could do when we recruited her. She played a great game in a big game."

Botham was not surprised with the physical play of the Demons.

"It was very physical, especially in the second half," she explained. "When they were losing, they figured their only way to get back into the game was by pushing us around. They were frustrated."

"For myself, it was just a matter of being on. It was a good night."

Bird, Celtics roll to win over Indiana

Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. - Larry Bird scored 30 points, collected 12 assists and grabbed 11 rebounds to spark Boston past Indiana 113-98 in the National Basketball Association last night.

The Celtics, who have won 22 of their last 26, broke from a 78-78 tie after three periods by outscoring the Pacers 35-20 in the fourth quarter on 17-for-25 shooting. Bird scored eight points during a 14-4 run midway in the quarter to expand Boston's 90-86 edge with 7:11 remaining.

Robert Parish added 27 points and Scott Wedman added 19 for the Celtics. Dennis Johnson added 12 including a three-point shot at the buzzer to draw Boston even after three quarters, 78-78.

Herb Williams led the Pacers with 24 points. Steve Stipanovich and Bryan Warrick added 16 points each for the Pacers, 19-37, who have dropped three in a row and are 6-6 in their last 12 games.

Boston led 55-53 at halftime despite Indiana shooting 56.7 percent from the field. Parish led the Celtics with 15, followed by Bird with 12 and Wedman with 11.

The Pacers had a balanced attack sparked by Warrick who had a dozen points. Williams added 10 points. Indiana also played all but 3:39 of the first half without high-scoring rookie Wayman Tisdale who picked up three quick fouls.

The Pacers and Celtics were tied at 25-25 after one quarter. Bird had nine for Boston while Williams and Ron Anderson had six points each for Indiana.

N.C. State upsets N. Carolina

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. - Chris Washburn scored 26 points as 20th-ranked North Carolina State sent top-ranked North Carolina to its second straight loss with a 76-65 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory yesterday.

The Tar Heels, upset last Thursday by Maryland, dropped to 25-3, including 9-3 in the ACC. N.C. state, which had lost its last three games, climbed to 18-9 and 7-6.

While the Wolfpack and the Tar Heels are equal along the front line, it was the 6-foot-10 tandem of Washburn and Charles Shackelford that forced 6-11 Brad Daugherty and 6-Joe Wolf to alter and miss their inside shots in the early stages. That allowed the Wolfpack to pull away to a 23-13 edge on two Washburn free throws at the 9:21 mark of the first half.

A Washburn follow shot at the buzzer gave N.C. State a 38-27 halftime lead. The Tar Heels shot 30 percent from the field in the first half, their worst half this season.

A six-point spurt by the Wolfpack, capped by a Bennie Bolton jumper, gave the Wolfpack its biggest lead at 48-31 with 15:05 left to play.

North Carolina staged an 18-8 comeback that cut the deficit to 56-49 on Curtis Hunter's steal and layup with 7:42 remaining. Wolf scored on a goaltending call at the 2:49 mark and the Tar Heels sliced the deficit to 62-57, but that was as close as they could get.

The Wolfpack finished its scoring from the free throw line, where it hit 10 of 12 in the last 2:13.

Bolton added a career-high 18 points.

Daugherty led North Carolina with 23 points.

Purdue 85, Indiana 68

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - Todd Mitchell scored 10 of his game-high 24 points in the first 10 minutes, sparking the Purdue Boilermakers over No. 15 Indiana 85-68 yesterday and knocking the Hoosiers from sole possession of first place in the Big Ten Conference.

The Boilermakers, who moved to within a half-game of Indiana and Michigan in the battle for the conference basketball title, took the lead for good on two free throws by Mitchell with 18:15 left in the first half.

Mitchell's early spurt and three consecutive scores by guard Mack Gadis, who had two baskets after making steals, produced a 30-15 Purdue lead with 10:19 left in the first half.

Purdue found holes in Indiana's man-to-man defense consistently in the opening half and also were near-perfect from outside in taking a 38-19 advantage on a 15-footer by Everett Stephens with 5:27 left.

A Doug Lee 20-footer gave Purdue its biggest lead at 41-19 with 3:49 remaining in the first half. The Boilermakers were 19 of 23 from the field at that point.

Indiana trailed 46-29 at halftime as Purdue hit on 20 of 27 from the field.

The Hoosiers found Purdue just as tough on the other end of the court. With leading scorer Steve Alford effectively denied the ball much of the time by Stephens and his mates, the Hoosiers were only 14 of 32 from the field at the break.

Melvin McCants scored the first three points of the second half, giving Purdue a 49-29 lead. The Hoosiers cut the deficit to 11, getting a goaltending call on a Daryl Thomas layup with 12:39 left in the game.

The score by Thomas, who had only five of his team-high 23 points in the first half, ignited an Indiana comeback. Thomas had 13 of his team's next 16 points and a pair of Alford free throws pulled the Hoosiers to within eight, 68-60, with 6:47 to go.

Purdue responded by scoring the next six points on a McCants layup and two free throws each by Mitchell and Herb Robinson. Indiana came no closer than 11 points again.

Alford, averaging 23 points per game, was held to just eight.

Purdue's fifth consecutive victory, which ended a five-game Indiana winning streak, lifted the Boilermakers to 10-5 in the conference and 21-7 overall.

Indiana, which had won 10 of its last 11 outings, dropped to 10-4 in the conference and 18-6 for the season.

Syracuse 64, G-town 63

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - Dwayne Washington hit the first of two free throws with 25 seconds to play, getting a game-high 24 points on the shot, as No. 9 Syracuse withstood a wild rally to defeat Georgetown 64-63 in Big East Conference basketball.

The 13th-ranked Hoyas trailed by up to 18 points in the first half but shot themselves back into contention in the last five minutes.

Syracuse, which lost to Georgetown 73-70 last month, solidified its hold on the Big East lead with a 13-1 record. The Orangemen are 22-3 on the season.

N.C. State's Chris Washburn dunks over Louisville's Herbert Crooks in a game earlier this month. Washburn scored 26 points yesterday to lead the wolfpack to a 76-65 upset of top-ranked North Carolina. Detail of that and other college basketball games from yesterday appear at right.

With Estée Lauder Sun you can actually sun less. And tan more!

You can come back from spring break looking like you'd been away for a month of sun-days! Say what?! Because many of the formulas in the Estée Lauder Sun system contain Biotan, an exclusive complex that works to speed up your skin's own natural production of melanin (the component in skin that interacts with the sun to make you tan), your tanning potential is super maximized.

The tested results: just 5 days of sunning with Biotan will give a much deeper tan than 14 days of sunning without!

Start with the Golden Sun Pre-Tan Accelerator with Biotan before exposure to help promote a faster, deeper tan, 5 oz. 12.50. Use one of the 7 different formulas which are available for sunning. And the apres tan maintainers afterward. (There's also a Self-Action Tanning Creme to tan you without the sun or use to even out, deepen and maintain a true tan.) And that's it! The way to have a beautiful deep tan in less time than you ever thought possible! Estée Lauder counter in Cosmetics (D.123) at Ayres Scottsdale Mall and University Park.

Men's, women's fencing teams go unbeaten over weekend

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame fencing teams head into the Great Lakes Tournament this coming weekend with perfect ledgers and an NCAA title on the line. This past weekend, the men's and women's squads travelled to Ohio to take on Wayne State and then to East Lansing, Mich., to meet Michigan, Oakland, Illinois and Michigan State. The Irish came out on top in all cases to continue the men's 53-meet winning streak and the women's 23-meet winning streak.

found their strength in the foil squad. Against Wayne State the team went 9-0 with senior Mike Vander-Velden, junior Charles Higgs-Coulthard and sophomore Yehuda Kovacs all going 3-0 against their opponents.

"This foil squad is the best we've ever had here," commented Head Coach Mike DeCicco. "They are really unbelievable. It's a good feeling to have them lead the team as we head into the Great Lakes and the NCAA tournament."

The women took a 10-6 victory from Wayne State as well, with sophomore Molly Sullivan going 4-0 to raise her season record to 43-3.

Junior Cynthia Weeks was also a key for the Irish. Weeks currently owns a 56-11 ledger which is a new record for the most victories recorded in a single season.

On Saturday in East Lansing, the team once again flexed their muscles by defeating all their challengers. The men scored victories against Michigan (27-0), Oakland (24-3), Illinois (20-7) and Michigan State (23-4). The women also handily defeated Michigan (14-2), Oakland (14-2) and Michigan State (16-0). They did not fence Illinois.

"We are really loaded for boar right now," said DeCicco. "The win against Wayne State certainly added to the intensity, and we have to keep that level high as we head into tournament time."

The Irish will be looking to defend their title in the Great Lakes Tournament as they send 11 fencers to compete in Appleton, Wis. In the men's foil division the team will be represented by Kovacs (40-4), Higgs-Coulthard (32-5) and Vander-Velden (36-6). DeCicco will send seniors Tony Consoli (40-8), John Edwards (28-4) and Don Johnson (28-9) to compete in the sabre. And in the epee division, DeCicco will send seniors Christian Scherpe (34-7) and Mike Gostigian (17-7) and junior John Haugh (27-11).

The women's delegation includes Sullivan and Weeks. In addition, women's coach Yves Auriol will send junior Vittoria Quaroni (32-14) and freshman Janice Hynes (39-9).

The NCAA tournament begins on March 25-29. Last season the men's team lost by one touch in the final bout to Wayne State while the women finished ninth.

Belles' basketball team loses pair as 1985-86 season comes to a close

By CHRISTINE FORTIN
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team closed its season with two losses last week, but in retrospect, the Belles' season was a good one.

Last Wednesday the Belles played host to Aquinas and suffered a 52-76 loss. Senior Beth Kreber led the team in scoring with 14 points in the last home game of her career. Rachel Bir led the team in rebounds, pulling down six, and Kris Pantelleria lended a hand with five assists.

The Belles travelled to Purdue-Calumet the following evening for their final game of the season, but they were handed a 60-73 loss. Tammye Radke led the team with 8 points in a losing cause. Pantelleria aided the team with five assists, and Jennifer Harte, Radke, and Kreber each pulled down seven rebounds.

For the season, Kreber was the team's leading scoring with 298 points from the field and 19 points from the line for a season total of 317. Kreber also led the team in steals, with 37, and rebounds, grabbing 130. Radke was the Belles' assists leader with 86.

With the season at an end, Saint Mary's players expressed some remorse.

"I'm sad to see the season end," commented Kreber, "but I'm happy with the way it went."

"The season went well and we had a lot of fun," Radke echoed Kreber's comments.

We had a good season," said Radke. "It was better than last year's, and I'm sorry to see it end."

A DYNAMIC ENGINEERING ENVIRONMENT

Our design engineering department currently includes 150 engineering professionals, both new and experienced, and it continues to grow. At Tellabs, talented engineers can find challenging opportunities to work with state-of-the-art technology in a vigorous organization that rewards creativity and innovation.

Unlike most high-tech companies, Tellabs offers a small-team work environment that encourages professional development. Our engineers aren't confined to working on a small piece of a project -- they are involved in a team effort through all phases of product development.

If leadership is your interest, Tellabs can offer you both project and group management opportunities. We're a flexible company that recognizes commitment and offers a diversity of professional development opportunities.

Miami coach Bill Foster, shown here accepting the job in March, 1984, is trying to restore a once-proud basketball tradition to the University of Miami. Larry Burke details the rebuilding of the program in his story at right.

Miami's coach Foster sees hope despite successive blow-out losses

By LARRY BURKE
Assistant Sports Editor

MIAMI - Bill Foster was trying hard to see the silver lining in Saturday night's cloud. But as has often been the case this season for the Miami head coach, it wasn't easy.

"I never dreamed we'd go to our 25th game before going below .500," Foster said after watching Notre Dame drop his Hurricanes to 12-13, with a 126-73 romp. "We lost our third game in a row for the first time this year but I think if you look at the total picture for this team, there's a little something to be happy about each game. It's tough after a game like this, though. Tonight we just didn't do anything very well."

Whippings such as the one the Irish administered Saturday are something that the new kid on the block has got to expect - at least once in a while. But that doesn't make defeat any easier.

"I just told my players to wash it out and try to forget it," said Foster. "I know they don't like to get beat like this, especially with a lot of people watching on national television (ESPN)."

Miami is back in the basketball business for the first time since the 1970-71 season.

The Hurricanes were 7-19 that year, winding up the season with a 94-75 loss to nationally-ranked Jacksonville in Miami's Dinner Key Auditorium. The day before that final game then Miami head coach Ron Godfrey had announced his resignation, effective at the end of the season.

Seven weeks later, on April 22, 1971, it was all over. The University of Miami Board of Trustees voted to drop basketball "temporarily until such a time as a permanent fieldhouse could be constructed on the main campus." Sagging attendance figures and serious financial losses were also believed to contribute to the board's decision.

The program that had produced All-Americans Dick Hickox, Rick Barry and Don Curruent, and the team that set an NCAA record by averaging 98.4 points per game in 1964-65, was gone.

The revival began a little over 12 years later, on July 15, 1983, with the hiring of Athletic Director Sam Jankovich. Jankovich, A.D. at Washington State for seven years, immediately announced that the resurrection of men's basketball at Miami would be the top priority of the early months of his tenure, in order to give Miami "one of the nation's most complete and visible overall programs in the country."

Three months later the University Board of Trustees voted unanimously to reinstate men's basketball at Miami. The key factor in that decision was Jankovich's report stating that men's basketball could be a revenue-producing venture. He had plenty of evidence, starting with the $500,000 which had already been raised in support of bringing basketball back to Miami.

Foster was named head coach on March 21, 1984. Three weeks later he had his first player - 6-10, 240-pound Tim Harvey, a transfer from Georgia Tech. When Foster completed his roster a year later, it was made up of nine freshmen, one sophomore, and one junior, along with four non-scholarship walk-ons.

On ept. 2, 1985, six weeks before the first day of practice, construction of the Knight orts Complex, iami's new practice facility, was completed.

On Nov. 22 Foster's squad won its season opener, 85-77, over The Citadel. An 82-72 win over Georgia State and a big 81-78 upset of Georgia followed.

From that point on, however, it's been an up-and-down season. The Hurricanes haven't won three in a row since then, and up until Saturday they had never lost three in a row.

Youth and inexperience are the primary reasons for the inconsistency. The Hurricanes start the youngest lineup in the country, with five freshmen. First-year players have gotten better than 84 percent of the playing time this season.

"Miami has got good young players. It's just a matter of experience," said Irish head coach Dig- ger Phelps. "It's similar to how we were when our seniors - Barlow, Kempton, Dolan and Price - were freshman.

"Bill is doing a great job. He deserves a lot of credit. His players work hard and they'll do well by the time they're juniors and seniors."

Foster agreed that it might not be all that long before Miami starts opening some eyes on the basketball court.

"Give us a little time," said the Hurricane coach, who will add seven-footer Tito Horford to his lineup next season. "I can see us improving, particularly those first six guys, I can really see them starting to have a feel for each other and doing little things that make you feel good about what they're learning."

"In the Duke game (a 104-82 loss), in stretches and in certain possessions, we did things better execution-wise against good pressure than we've done all year. And our guys are aware of that, too, which is good. I mean, there are some people we played early that if we went back and played them now and did things the way we did at Duke, we'd pound them."

"If we keep on working with the weights and add a few guys, next year should be a little different. And the third year should be a lot different."

But at a school which has won two national championships in baseball and one in football in the past four years, it's going to take a big difference to attract some attention.

we needed to, and we also had some outside shooting strength."

Miami coach Bill Foster agreed that his team had been pretty much outplayed.

"Dennis Burns (23 points) played well early but overall we were physically whipped," said Foster. "We considered playing man-to-man defense, and we tried matching it up at times. But we had to go to zone to keep the big guys in. We went back to man for the last two-and-a-half minutes, but we can't guard this team that way - we'd foul out a lot of guys inside."

"The refs seemed to be letting a lot go, and I think our kids were a little gun-shy. That type of game suits their style of play a lot better than it does ours. We don't have any real physical players, whereas most of their players are physical."

Miami was without the services of 6-7, 210-pound forward Tim Dawson, who was lost for the season with a thumb injury suffered in late January. That left 6-10, 245-pound junior Tim Harvey as the only beef in the Hurricane lineup. Because Harvey has been fouling out during the national anthem lately, Foster figured all along that it was going to be a long night for Miami. Harvey fouled out with 10:53 left in the game, after playing just 17 minutes.

It doesn't get any easier for the Hurricanes, who have a visit to bruising Marquette on March 5 to look forward to.

"I watched Marquette and Notre Dame play, and it was like watching the Packers and the Bears - they're the same kind of physical team," said

Foster. "If we all get back from Milwaukee alive, it'll be a miracle."

Irish storm past Miami, 126-73

The Observer/Pete Laches

Irish forward Donald royal goes up for a dunk against Dayton earlier this season. Royal had two dunks and 17 points in Notre Dame's 126-73 thrashing of Miami Saturday night. Larry Burke has game details at right and talks about revenge for Notre Dame's 58-7 football loss to Miami in his column below.

By LARRY BURKE
Assistant Sports Editor

MIAMI - No, it wasn't the NBA, although there was plenty of running, gunning, scoring and slamming. It was NCAA basketball and when it was over, Notre Dame had turned in one of its best efforts of the season, good enough for a 126-73 rout of Miami.

The win came in front of a crowd of just 4,016 at Miami's James L. Knight Center - about 1,000 under the arena's capacity. The game was, however, televised nationally by ESPN.

Notre Dame raised its record to 19-5 with the win, while Miami fell to 12-13, the first time the Hurricanes have been under .500 all season.

Ken Barlow paced the Irish with 28 points and eight rebounds, all in just 28 minutes. Barlow connected on 12-of-17 shots from the field and hit all four of his free throw attempts. David Rivers added 19 points and nine assists in 25 minutes, and Donald Royal chipped in with 17 points and seven rebounds in just 20 minutes.

The loss was the second worst in Miami history, outdone only by its 127-69 thrashing at the hands of UCLA in 1970.

The 126 points were the most ever scored on the road by a Notre Dame team. The previous best on an opponent's court occurred in Notre Dame's 125-90 win at Villanova in 1975. The all-time high came in a 135-88 pounding of St. Peter's in the ACC in 1970.

"I think if you look at where we're coming from, and where we're going, we're playing pretty well right now," said Irish coach Digger Phelps, in one of the night's bigger understatements. "I knew that Miami played well at Duke (a 104-82 Blue Devil win last Wednesday), and that concerned me coming into this game."

He need not have been overly concerned. The Irish toyed with the Hurricanes for the first seven minutes before going on a 21-7 tear midway through the first half to open up a 17-point lead, 40-23. Notre Dame closed out the first half with a 12-3 spurt in the final 2:20 to open up a 66-40 lead.

It wasn't that the Hurricanes played that poorly in the first half - they hit 55 percent of their shots from the field (17-of-31). The Irish were simply better. Notre Dame sank 67 percent (30-of-45) of its shots and outrebounded Miami by a 24-11 margin in the first 20 minutes.

The second half was more of the same, as the Hurricanes hit on just 29 percent (11-of-38) of their shots. Miami managed just eight points in the first nine minutes, while Notre Dame poured in 30 to take a 96-48 lead with 10:53 remaining. By then the only question was when the Irish would break the 100-point barrier. That happened with 9:45 left, when Scott Hicks canned a jumper from the foul line.

That made it the second straight game that Notre Dame had eclipsed the century mark. The Irish crushed Manhattan, 102-47 last Wednesday and are averaging 101 points over their last three games.

Along with good shooting, rebounding was the key to Saturday's win. Notre Dame was ranked seventh in the nation in rebounding margin going into the game with a 9.1 average and certainly did nothing to hurt that standing by outbounding the Hurricanes, 55-30.

"I think we've seen this team get into a good groove the other night in New York, and our defensive intensity seemed to carry over," said Phelps.

"We were able to push the ball up the floor and dominate the boards tonight. We got the ball inside when

Keys leads Notre Dame women to pair of wins on road

By MARTY STRASSEN
Sports Writer

CHICAGO - Perhaps Loyola and DePaul can find some consolation in the fact that they will never have to play against Trena Keys again.

The 6-1 senior stormed the Windy City this past weekend, lighting up the scoreboard and leading the Notre Dame women's basketball team to a pair of important victories. The Irish downed Loyola, 79-67, on Friday, then victimized DePaul yesterday afternoon in a 73-58 win.

Notre Dame boosted its record to 17-7 overall and 9-1 in the North Star Conference.

Keys began her weekend domination of Chicago teams at Loyola's

Alumni Gymnasium, exploding in the second half to spark the Irish to a big victory over the Lady Ramblers. Loyola, which dropped to 7-3 in the conference, stayed close in the first half, but it was only a matter of time before Notre Dame took charge.

Keys, whose seven first-half points put her team on top by four at 33-29, took matters into her own hands in the second half. She found her mark shooting over the Rambler zone, netting 23 points in the second half to lift her game total to 30 on 13-of-21 from the field and 4-of-5 from the free-throw line.

Irish head coach Mary DiStanislaio has come to expect such performances from Keys.

"Trena took over and that's what you expect from your senior all-America candidate," DiStanislaio said. "There wasn't anybody in the country better than her tonight."

"In the second half she really worked to get open. She went after her opportunities and got them. She was really aggressive and it paid off."

Keys' 30 points were one short of her own Notre Dame record for points in a game, and she set a new record for career 10-point games in the contest, surpassing Shari Matvey's old mark of 70.

"In the first half I wasn't shooting well," Keys said. "In the second half I stopped thinking about it as much and just played my game. The shots just started falling."

Diondra Toney and Mary Gavin added 11 points apiece for the Irish, while Sandy Botham and Heidi Bunek chipped in 10 each. Toney, a 5-9 freshman, pulled down a personal-high 14 rebounds with the Irish front line in foul trouble.

"We dodged a bullet with the big people getting in foul trouble," said DiStanislaio. "Didi (Toney) is doing a good job. She did a great job on the boards and took advantage of her weak-side positioning."

Toney credited her success to a recent increase in playing time, as Friday's game was her second consecutive start.

"I'm getting more into the offense," she said. "I decided that this was my time to contribute to the team. I'm starting to do more because I'm getting more playing time. It's just coming naturally now."

"I've been working on my rebounding in practice. I know I can't jump over anybody so I just try to get position and make sure I'm around the basket."

The Irish turned their thoughts to DePaul yesterday and expected a physical contest. They were not disappointed.

Keys scored 20 of her 25 points in the second half, once again turning a close game into a decisive victory. In fact, the Irish trailed the Lady Blue Demons by a point at the half, but they raised their shooting

Miami fans were the only ones talking football

MIAMI - Football flashback: Nov. 30, 1985. The Orange Bowl. Notre Dame vs. Miami. The final: Hurricanes 58, Irish 7.

Saturday night the two schools went at it again, but this time it was a different sport, a different setting, a different cast and most of all, a drastically different outcome.

That football game of three months ago was on a lot of people's minds Saturday night when the 'Canes played host to the Irish in men's basketball at the James L. Knight Center. But oddly enough, the Miami students were the only ones bringing it up.

If there was any doubt that Hurricane fans were looking for their team to stick it to the Irish once more for old times sake, it vanished before Saturday night's game even began.

Chants of "58-7!" greeted the Irish as they took the court for pre-game warmups, and again immediately before the Notre Dame players were introduced.

Later, during a second-half timeout and with the game already "competitively out of hand," football allusions again found their way onto the basketball court. This time it was a Miami cheerleader having her punt blocked by "the Miami Maniac," the Hurricane mascot who looks sort of like an orange Phillie Phanatic.

With the Irish on top 115-64 at that point, it seemed more than a little ironic for anyone wearing orange and green to be staging a stunt like that. But perhaps there's something to be said for saving face.

Whatever the case, the Hurricanes had very little face left after Saturday's pounding. Hurricane coach Bill Foster put things pretty well in perspective when he said his club was "physically whipped."

Afterwards, Irish coach Digger Phelps found himself somewhat on the defensive when someone hinted that his team may have been guilty of pouring it on.

Larry
Burke

Assistant Sports Editor

"We subbed often," Phelps said. "We can't concern ourselves with the margin of victory. We've got to give our starters a decent amount of playing time, especially with the stretch drive coming up."

"And when our guys come in off the bench I can't tell them to lay off. They're in there to play as hard as they can. That pass from Michael Smith to Gary Voce in the second half is one example. (A picture-perfect alley-oop pass with 44 seconds left.)

"If our guys are out there zone-pressing all over the floor, then you can look at me," Phelps continued. "But tonight I was just letting the kids play. When you've got guys that work hard in practice every day you can't tell them to stop scoring just because you're up by 30."

Foster, meanwhile, tried unsuccessfully to hide his dejection. Did the humiliating loss bother him?

"Nothing bothers me," he said. "It'll all come back around someday. I can't worry about things I can't control. I know Digger's trying to get his team ready for post-season."

Does this all sound a little familiar? If not, consider the following quote from a noted football coach.

"You stay in the offense that you run. We're a passing team. Everybody knows that. We school our quarterbacks to take advantage of what defenses the opponents run, not to be governed by the scoreboard.

"We didn't even have a punt block in our game plan. We had punt-return-left and punt-return-right on. We had two men rushing the punter and that block for the touchdown just happened."

Then consider this quote from another coach that same evening.

"Football's football. You play to win. These are the decisions a coach has to make. I don't fault him. What's three points or 30 points? You've still lost."

In case you hadn't guessed, the first quote was from Hurricane coach Jimmy Johnson on that warm night in November. The second was from former Irish coach Gerry Faust. Coaches remarks were another way in which Saturday night's outcome bore an ironic resemblance to what transpired back on Nov. 30.

But was the revenge factor on Notre Dame's mind Saturday night? If so, nobody was admitting to it.

"Sure, this is a big rivalry," Irish captain Ken Barlow said afterwards. "But we're not concerned about the football game - it was nothing like that. That was just something unfortunate that happened early in the season. We're just concerned about playing well to get ready for the tournament. (The revenge factor) was more of a distraction than anything else."

Whether anyone would admit it or not, the "score" is evidently settled. The Irish beat Miami 126-73 Saturday night, and for those of you scoring at home, that's a 53-point margin of victory, two points better than Miami's 51-point bulge on Nov. 30. That would seem to put an end to things.

Of course there's always the next Notre Dame-Miami football game on Nov. 28, 1987 to look forward to.
