Tickets debate goals, administration

By BUD LUEPKE
Copy Editor

Seven candidates for student body president voiced their ideas and opinions Sunday night in a debate that focused on "realistic goals" and criticism of the administration.

Each of the candidates began with a two-minute opening statement and then answered two questions from each of the two panelists, Joe Murphy, editor-in-chief of The Observer, and Kathleen McKernan, news editor for Scholastic magazine. The candidates ended with two-minute closing statements.

The Unknown candidate, whose running-mate is also unknown, spoke first. He said he was not running "another joke ticket, not just another Switek and Montanaro." The Unknown candidate proposed more "world-record attempts" on campus and more outdoor band concerts.

He also said he wants to develop a student-run television station. "We've got a $450,000 budget and we're definitely going to spend it," he said.

The Unknown candidate was the only candidate to speak on the gay-lesbian issue. He said he was opposed to any school-sponsored gay-lesbian club.

The next speaker, Marty Rodgers, characterized he and his running-mate Buzz Eckelkamp as "normal, laid-back guys who know how to get the job done." Rodgers, the executive coordinator for Student Affairs, said he believes student government should confront the University administration

Ballot items set for Tuesday election

Campaigns for the 1987 Notre Dame student government elections are near completion for the Tuesday elections as students compete for positions including student body president and vice president and five senatorial seats.

There will also be two referendums for students to vote on.

Students will vote in their own halls for the Tuesday elections. Voting can be done from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Off-campus students can vote in the lobby of LaFortune from 12 to 5 p.m.

According to Ombudsman chairman, Dan Gamache, "We should know the results no later than 11 p.m. Tuesday night."

"The winning ticket simply needs a majority vote to win: 50 percent plus 1," Gamache said. In the event of a tie, there will be a run-off on Thursday, Feb. 19.

Seven tickets are running for the positions of student body president and student body vice president. Junior Vince Willis, currently manager of Theodore's, is running for student body president with Cathy Nonnenkamp, currently junior class president. Sophomore Class President Pat Cooke is running for student body president, and junior Laurie Bink, chairman of Junior Parent's Weekend, is running for student body vice president.

Dissidents kept under house arrest

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Three Soviets were kept under house arrest Sunday after sending a protest to a Kremlin-sponsored peace forum, and the official media said Jews demanding emigration rights were trying to "poison" the meeting.

The wife of jailed Jewish dissident Josef Begun, meanwhile, said she had no word on a Soviet official's statement on U.S. television that her husband was freed. Demonstrators in Moscow last week demanded Begun's release and were roughed up by security agents.

The peace conference entered its second day Sunday with a star-studded guest list of about 1,500 Soviet and foreign artists, film stars, writers, politicians, scientists and other participants.

Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, who spoke to participants Saturday, took the floor again Sunday to criticize the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative and the Soviet position in superpower arms talks, participants said.

The forum, held at various sites throughout Moscow, was due to end Monday with an address by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Some participants said they expected Gorbachev to focus on arms control.

Writers Norman Mailer and Gore Vidal, actor Gregory Peck and industrialist Armand Hammer were among the Americans at the gathering, called the Moscow Forum for a Nuclear-Free World and the Survival of Mankind.

A group of Soviets who want to join relatives abroad were kept at home by police Sunday after sending a telegram to the forum in which they said the protesters seeking Begun's release were beaten by security agents.

"We want this inhumane and illegal action against peaceful people to be known by all members of the forum, including Mikhail Gorbachev and Andrei Sakharov," said the telegram, sent Saturday by Galina Gerasimov, Alexander Zhdanov and Vladimir Pimonov.

Gerasimov told The Associated Press on Sunday that all three were being kept from leaving their apartments by plainclothes security agents.

She said she was not sure if the telegram, sent to the president of the forum, was ever received.

Leonid Yuzefovich, a Jewish activist, said he and two women got through security at one forum site, the Kosmos Hotel, and distributed an appeal for free emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

Yuzefovich said Soviet officials there refused to accept the appeal, and he was detained for an hour by militiamen.

GLND/SMC knew nothing of flyers, says spokesman

By ANN MARIE DURNING
Staff Reporter

A spokesman for the group calling itself the Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's stated it was not responsible for the flyers posted last week that bore the group's post office box number.

Although the flyers carried the approval stamp of the Office of Student Activities, Adele Lanan, assistant director, said, "We did not approve them. We never saw the flyers (before they were posted)."

Lanan said, "We do not know if a stamp was stolen. Security is investigating the matter."

Student Activities must approve all flyers that are not from clubs and organizations of Notre Dame before they may be posted on campus, Lanan said.

The poster bore the box number and stamp but no group's name, according to several people who saw the posters before Security removed them.

Michael Dini, chairman of the public relations committee of GLND/SMC, said he had no idea who might be responsible for the flyers.

Dini said the posting of the flyers "was done at a time when the Student Senate was debating the issue (of homosexuals' rights). There are lots of people on campus, I suppose, who would want to see that our group doesn't get any official recognition."

In Brief

A Notre Dame student will be formally charged today with driving while intoxicated in connection with the Dec. 6 fatal traffic accident involving junior Michael Cogswell, said Mindy McIntire of the St. Joseph County Prosecutor's Office. McIntire said a court appearance date for the 21-year-old student will also be set today. Driving while intoxicated is a Class A misdemeanor, which carries a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $5,000 fine. - The Observer

Managing the student body elections on Tuesday was discussed at the Judicial Council meeting last Thursday. According to Judicial Coordinator Maria Cintron, the Judicial Board in each dormitory is responsible for handling the ballots during the voting periods. According to Dan Gamache, election chairman from Ombudsman, any undergraduate, including those who are seniors, is eligible to vote. All ballots are then to be returned to O'Shaughnessy Hall for counting. - The Observer

Authorities were searching Sunday for a convicted murderer who fooled prison officials into thinking he was a paraplegic before diving out of his wheelchair to overpower a guard and escape. Robert Blackmon, 43, who was serving a life sentence at Avon Park Correctional Institution for second-degree murder in the 1978 slaying of his wife, took the guard, a medical technician and a fellow inmate hostage, but they escaped, prison officials said. The inmate was injured during a tour in Vietnam, but apparently not as severely as authorities believed. - Associated Press

Women who were pregnant and lived near the Chernobyl nuclear power plant when it exploded and burned last year are 50 percent more likely than others to give birth to a mentally retarded child, a researcher said Sunday. Dr. Robert Gale of the University of California in Los Angeles, who has treated victims of the Chernobyl disaster, said 300 babies have now been born to mothers who were exposed at short range to Chernobyl's radiation during their pregnancy. The estimate is based in part on studies of survivors of the Hiroshima atomic bomb in World War II, Gale said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. - Associated Press

All parking and traffic regulations for faculty and staff will be enforced on campus beginning Wednesday, Assistant Director of Notre Dame Security Phil Johnson said. Only the gold, diamond-shaped parking decals or the white hang tags are considered valid for non-student vehicles, he said. The old circular decals have expired and should be removed. - The Observer

"The Search For Peace and Justice in Ireland" will be the subject of a lecture given by the Right Honorable John Hume, M.P., today at 4:30 in room 120 of the Law School. - The Observer

Meet the candidates and a student body debate is hosted by the Saint Mary's student government tonight from 8-10 in the Haggard College Center Parlor. - The Observer

If you care enough to send the very best, send yourself

This year, I forgot to send Valentine's cards to the people I love the most. When I think about it, I realize I haven't sent my parents a card for Valentine's Day for years, although they still keep my collection of preschool paste-and-crayon Valentines.

It's not that I don't love my parents, because I do. And it's not that I don't "care enough to send the very best." This year, I did send the very best. I went home.

But this time, situations in the family-at-large were in an uproar. I got home just in time to drive with Mom to the airport for her flight to Austria. Dad and I were in such a nervous state we didn't even remember in what O'Hare lot we'd left the car.

We didn't even remember what level the conservative blue Buick was on. (I kept telling Dad that if we'd bought a Mercedes like I had wanted and had it painted pink, this type of thing would never have happened.) But somehow I am thankful for the four hours in the airport (two of them in the parking garage), because they brought my father and I closer together.

Somehow, while I was at school, I'd forgotten how interesting my father was. That's a hard thing to do because I'd grown up on his stories of life in Europe and then life in the United States. It was he who originally inspired me to want to write. I got started writing when I started writing his biography, because he's had one interesting experience after another (so now you know who to complain to . . .)

He was also the same man who infuriated me by looking down on writing, the man who wanted me to "get a real job" and be an engineer or doctor. Still, he is the man I love most in the world.

It's hard to tell my father what I feel about him, for some reason. It's much easier to tell my mother what I feel about her. She cries, I cry, and then we hug madly. But my father is another matter entirely. For example, on Feb. 13, his birthday, I tried to tell him how he is like a hot-air balloon to me. You're right if you're thinking that is no great allusion to use. He didn't take all that kindly to it either until I explained that to me he was a means of elevation, which also sounds nasty until I explain that anything I have become he has brought me to, mentally, financially and psychically. Sometimes I have succeeded to please him, and sometimes I have succeeded just to spite him.

But however hard it is for me to tell my father I love him, it's hundreds of times harder for him to tell me the same. I was an Innsbruck sophomore when I realized my father had never written me a letter. You know the type, I'm sure. Mom writes the letters and signs them, "Love, Mom and Dad."

But I saw my chance when Mom was in Europe with me, and dad was sitting at home. I wrote him and asked him to write me. What I got for the effort was a letter from Grandma (who used to live down the street from us) saying that everything was fine at home, and how was everything with me? You guessed the rest, "Love, Grandma and Dad."

I don't know where my relationship with my father will go after our weekend at home together talking. I know he is worried about where I'll go with the very liberal arts majors I've chosen, and I must admit I'm more worried now than I was when I decided on them freshman year. He's also worried about my dating and my friends, but I've finally reconciled myself to his worries. Even if he can't say it in so many words, I guess his worrying means that he loves me. So, Happy Birthday, Daddy. I love you too.

ND student assaulted early Saturday

By MARK PANKOWSKI
News Editor

Notre Dame Security and South Bend Police were continuing their investigation Sunday into Saturday morning's assault and robbery of a female University student.

The student suffered minor injuries in the incident, which occurred at about 2:10 a.m. near 1124 Eddy St., Assistant Director of Security Phil Johnson said.

The student was returning from an off-campus party with two other students when two men walked out from an alleyway, Johnson said.

The suspects demanded money, but neither displayed a weapon.

When one of the students said they had no money, a suspect struck her in the head with a plastic flashlight, Johnson said.

The other suspect then stole a pin from the student, and the two men fled.

Johnson said the student was taken to St. Joseph's Medical Center where she was treated for minor injuries and released.

One suspect was described as a black man, 20-21 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing 140 pounds. He has short black hair and was wearing tennis shoes.

The other suspect was described as a black man, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds. He has short black hair and was wearing new Levi's jeans, a gray ski jacket and a white stocking cap.

Johnson asked that anyone with information about the incident contact Security at 239-5555.

Franklin and Jim Magnan; as well as "Unknown."

In the senate race, there are eight candidates running. One student is elected from each district for a total of five student senators. In this year's election, three of the five districts have candidates running unopposed: sophomore Sean Hoffman of Stanford Hall in District 2, incumbent junior Brian Holst from Holy Cross in District 1, and junior Steve Wenc, off-campus, in District 5.

In District 3, two candidates are running: freshmen Dave Bruner and freshmen Mike Carrigan, both from Dillon Hall. In District 4, there are two challengers to the sophomore incumbent Steve Viz of Flanner: sophomore Laura Janke from Pasquerilla East, and freshmen Michael Schadek of Grace.

Two referendums have also been added by the senate to the ballot. The first referendum states "The University should divest of its holdings in companies engaged in business activities in South Africa - Yes, No, or Undecided." The second referendum states "Every student pays a mandatory $12 annual Observer fee. The quality of the Observer is: Very Good, Good, Average, Poor, or Very Poor."

and "work in cooperation with the administration, but we cannot be friendly with the administration. We want the ability to constructively criticize."

Rodgers distinguished his ticket from the others in saying that he and Eckelkamp "already had the respect of the administration" and knew how to deal with it.

Vince Willis said he and running-mate Cathy Nonnenkamp have realistic ideas that he promised they would implement if elected. "We will represent student opinion to the Board of Trustees and the administration where a lot of the change has to take place," said Willis. Willis said he would make sure students "got their money's worth" out of student government and stressed the need for more awareness of student programs and for more underclassmen involvement.

John Lake also emphasized the need for realism in student government. He criticized past platforms for proposing ideas that have "never been implemented. Basically you can't change the administration," he said.

Lake said he and his running-mate, Debbie Delahanty, do not have much experience, but he said he was glad that he did not because "I don't want to be involved with past governments."

Sophomore Class President Pat Cooke is matched with JPW commissioner Laurie Bink. Cooke said he wanted to "make student life a little easier." He said he was positive about the potential in student government, "potential that has not been realized in recent years."

Cooke said his positive attitude and proven effectiveness would "bring student government back to students."

Bill Sammon, who is running with Grace Giorgio, said he would stress the tradition of Notre Dame. Of the University, Sammon said, "It's Irish, it's Catholic, it's everything that's ever meant anything good."

Sammon said, "We'd like to set very realistic goals for what we think our (student government) administration can do. Student government has been basically impotent as far as student governments go."

Sammon, who came to the debate in a kilt, said he wanted to have "a lot of fun" instead of trying to change the administration. "The administration will be the same administration," he said.

Willie Franklin and Jim Magnon round out the presidential nominees. Franklin said student government needs to challenge the administration, "make them change their ways."

Franklin said, "the major obstruction to college life here at Notre Dame is the alcohol policy." He accused the administration of forcing drinking into private rooms instead of promoting social drinking. "We need a more constructive policy, one that stresses individual responsibility," Franklin said. Franklin said student government needs to have some impact on the administration. "If we can't make them change their ways we can at least make them look foolish in front of a great number of people," he said.

Group's literature protests CIA interviews

By JOE MARKEY
Staff Reporter

In reaction to the CIA job interviews held last week, a group of students organized by the campus group Pax Christe distributed information bulletins in front of Memorial Library Thursday.

"We're not trying to protest the right to interview; everyone has the right to choose who they want to work for," said Student Senator John Gardiner, who helped in what he called an "information campaign."

Gardiner said the purpose of the campaign was to create some awareness of the activities of the CIA.

"For the sake of perspective," he said, the group's point was to offer an awareness of "questionable and unethical" activities of the agency. "It was strictly an information campaign," said Gardiner.

The bulletin reviewed the activities of the CIA in the past 25 years, from its involvement in the 1965 coup in Indonesia which the bulletin said led to the slaughter of nearly one million people to its implication in the recent Iranian arms scandal.

Cooke-Bink ticket deserves your vote

We endorse the ticket of Pat Cooke and Laurie Bink for student body president and student body vice president.

Stressing "positive effective leadership that brings results," Cooke and Bink's optimism, experience and professionalism make them the most qualified for the position.

Their platform is based around two main objectives.

The first objective is to bring student government back to the students. In order to do this, Cooke plans to reach the students by sitting in the dining halls and listening to the suggestions of the student body. He wants a realistic outlook toward student government and seems to recognize that government can be effective if students want to get involved.

The second objective of the platform is to "make student life easier." Student services, such as providing shuttles to and from the airport before and after breaks and increasing parking security, were two ideas that Cooke mentioned.

Cooke and Bink's experience in student government affairs was greater than the other candidates'. Cooke has served as president of the Freshman Advisory Council and currently serves as sophomore class president. Bink is currently JPW commissioner.

Cooke also seemed confident of his ability to deal with the current structure of student government.

The tickets of Marty Rodgers and "Buzz" Eckelkamp and Vince Willis and Cathy Nonnenkamp were also well qualified for the position.

Although Rodgers and Eckelkamp's platform was based on the strength of Rodgers' experience as student government's executive coordinator for student affairs, Cooke's work ethic and practical knowledge of the government structure make the ticket superior to Rogers'.

Despite Vince Willis and Cathy Nonnenkamp's familiarity with student government affairs, Cooke's assertiveness in dealing with student affairs and the administration make their ticket a better choice.

Pat Cooke and Laurie Bink's ticket is the best, most well-rounded ticket in this election. They seem to have the knowledge of the student government structure, the desire to begin new activities, and the competence and confidence to effectively run student government and truly make it representative of student interests.

Diversified programs increase education

Dear Editor:

Perhaps one response to Professor Charles Rice's diatribes against the department of theology might be the following anecdote.

One of the last times I taught our Introduction to Theology I had in class a bright, perceptive and sensitive son of an FBI agent. While he was home for Thanksgiving he apparently mentioned to his father some of the biographies we were using in order to illustrate various forms of Christian commitment. In addition to Mark's Gospel we were reading the lives of people like Mother Teresa of Calcutta, Dorothy Day and Daniel Berrigan to see how they embodied the Good News in our time.

The following Monday the father called me from Washington and angrily accused me of obliging his son to read the lives of "known criminals" like Day and Berrigan. Didn't I know that the FBI had suspected and trailed her for decades and that Berrigan had gone to prison for defying the U.S. government? When I attempted a parallel with the criminal activity of one Jesus, I, of course, drew a blank. At the end of a fairly heated exchange during which he insisted that I could only use right-wing materials in a theology course, I felt obliged to tell him that if he had wanted his son to get a second-rate education, he should have enrolled him in a second-rate university.

Notre Dame used to have a "religion department" much like the one Professor Rice seems to want now. It was impeccably orthodox and endured roughly from the time of Fr. Sorin until around 1960. Then, in line with other progressive developments initiated by Fr. Hesburgh, it was transformed into a department of theology designed to hold up its head in the scholarly world. To enhance its academic stature, it recruited scholars from far and wide and was soon composed of a wide spectrum of Roman Catholic thinkers and a smattering of Protestants and Jews of various stripes. Little by little it has become known for the quality of its programs and has drawn first-rate graduate students from all of North America and beyond.

The older "religion department" may have served some useful function in the past but it would be ludicrous to think it could be reinstituted in the 1980s. A sense of academic worth, duty to one's discipline and one's peers, the pressure of accrediting agencies and scholarly associations and a desire to serve a wide variety of ecclesial constituencies, all conspire to forbid such a regression.

Smaller, less prestigious schools may be able to promote the kind of parochial education envisaged by Professor Rice but Notre Dame can no longer afford to be a mere center of sectarian indoctrination. Why, even the Law School is no longer what it once was. Despite a ever-expanding Neo-Gothic facade, Natural law a la Dean Manion is no longer its forte. A '50s Law School can no longer serve our needs; neither can a '50s department of religion.

I was sitting around my room Wednesday night. Nothing much was happening. I'd done some homework, gone to visit a friend, had a beer but still there was something wrong. I was feeling restless, on edge. Something was in the air.

I sat there feeling this way for another half hour before the knock came. I opened the door and there she was, in history is in my room," I told him.

"Sure she is Murph," he chuckled, "that's what you said last Friday night."

"I'm serious damn it, Marilyn Monroe is in my room."

"Go back to sleep Murph."

I realized there was no help to be had there and I ran over to the Oak Room to get some cigarettes. When I got back to my room she was still sitting okay and everything but I was restless and all restless spirits become ghosts."

"You look pretty hot for a ghost," I offered, gaining confidence. She giggled again and moved closer.

"That's why I've come for you. I know you appreciate beautiful women and I know that you're confused, restless. But it's nothing abnormal, you're just a kid."

"So what can you do for me?" I asked, feeling confused and excited at the same time.

"I want you to come with me," she murmured huskily. "I can show you things, take you places, teach you what you could never learn anywhere else."

"I believe that," I replied "but aren't you just a product of my arts-type-weakness-for-women-mixed-up-kid-imagination?"

"Don't be a fool darling," she purred, running her hands

Marilyn Monroe. I was dumbfounded. So dumbfounded that I uttered the worst opening line in history: "Uh, hi. I thought you were dead."

"I am darling," she murmured in that incredibly sexy, on my bed. Her shoes were off and her legs were curled up under her body. She was wearing a black cocktail dress and there were diamonds in her ears. She was smiling.

"The first thing you've got to learn," she told me, "is how to husky voice of hers, "but I've come back for you. You're a special case."

"Thanks," I stammered, not sure whether I should be flattered or insulted and not really caring either way. Then I stared at her for a moment and she finally said, "Are you going to invite me in and offer me a cigarette or are we just going to stand here and stare at each other?"

"Sure, ok, come on in. I don't smoke though so I can't offer you a cigarette."

"Go get me some," she said sitting down on my bed.

"Right, cigarettes," I said, feeling like a grade-A moron. "Coming right up." I closed the door behind me and ran up to a friend's room.

"The most beautiful woman smoke."

"But smoking's bad for you," I said.

"Almost everything that's fun is bad for you," she said, giggling while lighting a cigarette and handing it to me. I took it from her and took a puff.

"Breathe in deeper," she advised. I did and it felt kind of good. There was a weird cold feeling in my lungs. "Now sit down," she whispered, "and take off your shoes." I complied and she moved closer to me. I could smell her perfume and her dress made a rustling sound against her legs.

"You're probably wondering just what I'm here for," she said.

"That question had crossed my mind."

"Well, I was dead. It was through my hair and blowing smoke in my ear, "I'm as real as a ghost can possibly be and I'm here for one person only. You."

"It's not that easy though," I said, "I go to school here. All my friends are here and my parents paid a lot of money for all of this."

"No," she said. "It is easy. Forget all this and come with me. I'll show you things that aren't in books."

"I'm sure you will," I muttered, glancing at her legs. I thought about it for a while. Here I was, sitting in my room while Marilyn Monroe blew in my ear. Millions of men had dreamed about this moment and I was having trouble making the decision.

Suddenly though, it all became clear to me. I would do it but I needed time to say goodbye. "Can I have week to get ready?" I asked as she stroked my chest.

"You can have till Monday night," she said, "but no longer."

"Will I be coming back here?" I asked hesitantly.

"That's your decision," she whispered, moving away from me and putting her heels back on. "I'll pick you up Monday night," she said. "Be dressed and ready at nine."

Then she kissed me goodbye and left. I stood in the doorway watching her walk down the hall. She was giggling again.

An interview with WNDU news co-anchor Maureen McFadden which appeared Feb. 4 stated incorrectly that the station uses the Northwest Indiana and Michigan Wire services. These wire services do not exist.

Also, McFadden has never taken a class with Notre Dame Communication and Theater Professor Reginald Bain.

WNDU has makeup rooms, but no makeup artists.

Another article which appeared on the same page stated incorrectly that McFadden's father taught at Notre Dame. He never taught at the University.

surprise me. We've looked at tapes we're he's pulled up two-on-two. That's a simple go, and he's a transition player."

In the overtime, the Irish took advantage of poor Blue Devil shooting from the line to take the win. Billy King missed a pair with the score tied at 62 and with the Irish up 68-66 and four seconds showing on the clock, the Blue Devils' John Smith, a 79-percent shooter, missed the front end of a one-and-one.

The Irish, however, used the charity stripe for all the gifts they could. The Irish shot 26-of-30 for the game, including a perfect eight for eight in overtime.

Along with the free-throw shooting, the Irish also had Hicks. Aside from his 19 points, Hicks, as is his wont, turned in a stellar defensive job on Amaker. Although, Amaker had 14 points, he hit on only six of his 16 attempts from the field.

"The game plan was to concentrate on getting open shots," said Hicks of his scoring. "When (David) Rivers would drive, the Duke defense would collapse, and I was able to get the corner shots and my rhythm going."

As for Duke head coach Mike Krzyzewski, he could only shake his head about his team's performance.

"It was a game of many opportunities for both of them, and they converted on their chances," said Krzyzewski, whose Blue Devils fell to 20-5. "Defensively, I thought we played pretty good, but we fouled a lot. (But) to get fouls means you're playing good offense, and then to make the foul shots means you're shooting under pressure.

points. Smith paced the Blue Devils with 19. Besides Hicks, the Irish also got double figure efforts from Donald Royal (16 points), Mark Stevenson (12) and Rivers (12).

IRISH ITEMS - Quin Snyder, who missed Duke's last-second, meaningless three-pointer at the end of the game, was also the same Quin Snyder whose fifth foul put Paddock on the line to hit his clinching free throws. Had Paddock missed and Snyder hit, the resulting shot and technical foul call would have created a confusing controversy that still might not be resolved.

Phelps: Irish belong in tournament

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

As soon as Notre Dame downed Duke Sunday for its second major upset of the season, speculation about the Irish chances for an NCAA Tournament bid began. Irish head coach Digger Phelps only had one question on the matter. "We're not in yet?" Phelps asked. "DePaul got in last year with a record of 16-12. I would hope that we're one of the top 64 teams in the nation. "We're ready. You want to start this week - we'll go. What more can we do? The only thing we want is to get Sean (Connor) back. These kids are ready. It's midseason, and there's nothing to look for. You just go out and play people. Let's just go. We've proved that we can go out and play with the best of the rest. "So now it's OK, we're ready for the Tournament." Phelps, who deflected questions about his team's NCAA chances at his press conference Thursday before the game, said that Notre Dame's number of wins required to make the tourney had been reached by beating North Carolina and Duke, two Top Twenty teams. "All year we've been in every game to show that we can compete with the best of the rest," Phelps said. "That's all we're trying to do, and come March we'll go for it." "You're going to see a lot of teams in with 10 to 13 losses because the balance is there. That's what we've seen today, balance. Take a look at the power ratings of the top 64 teams, and you see a lot of teams with double figure losses." Last season with a squad with fewer losses than this year's edition, Phelps refused to make a definite comment on the NCAA Tournament until the Irish downed DePaul at the ACC on Feb. 25.

Irish wrestlers' long weekend hurts

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Friday night's dual meet with Michigan was the epitome of a Notre Dame wrestling season that has included more than its share of injuries and misfortune.

In a meet that began more than two hours later than its original starting time, the Irish fell, 39-7, and, more importantly, lost two 20-match winners - Andy Radenbaugh and Pat Boyd. Radenbaugh and Boyd had been among the last few wrestlers from the season's original starting lineup to survive the year with no injuries.

"This is just the craziest year I've experienced in my life," said Head Coach Fran McCann. "It's just crazy. I've never seen anything like this. You're going to get bumps and bruises, but these are all serious injuries. I've never had anyone out for the season before this year."

The match, which had originally been switched to an 8 p.m. start just this week, never got started until 9:30 p.m., causing an Irish team that had just gotten off a bus to Michigan to get even more tired.

"The meet was scheduled for 7, they called me and said it was going to be at 8, and it didn't get started till 9:30 because a women's basketball game was going on. We traveled on the bus for three hours, hung around for three hours, and got on the mat at 9:30," said McCann. "The sad part is that they (Michigan) knew all along when the meet was scheduled for and they lied to us. I would never treat a team like that, and they showed no remorse for it afterward."

Things got worse. In the first match, Radenbaugh, leading 4-1, fractured his leg just above the ankle. Radenbaugh underwent surgery Saturday, and will be out for the remainder of the season.

Two matches later, Pat Boyd hurt his shoulder in the first period of his match. He continued to wrestle, and he went on to win the match, but Boyd is now out for at least two weeks.

"We didn't know how hurt he was," said McCann. "He showed a lot of guts to continue."

The injury is similar to one suffered by fellow 20-match winner Jerry Durso earlier in the year, which sidelined him for two weeks.

"It's a little worse than Jerry's. The swelling's pretty good, and he can't raise his arm at all," said McCann. "It will be at least two weeks. We hope to have him back for regionals."

The Irish could not recover after that, as junior Ron Wisniewski's major decision was the only other Notre Dame victory.

"Ron wrestled very well. It was a nice win for him. He was wrestling a three-time high school state champ in Michigan who was highly recruited, and Ron wrestled hard the whole time," said McCann. "We were just intimidated by them, and that bothered me."

"It was not a very good weekend. Once Andy got hurt, it just cast a big black cloud on everything. I was extremely upset about the whole organization of the meet. It may have had some effect on people getting injured."

"It wasn't fair to the kids," McCann continued. "They were put in a bad situation, and I blame Michigan for it."

Freshman Joe Fredrick is fouled as he attempts to score. Fredrick hit the free throws to help the Irish upset Duke. Rick Rietbrock covers the role Fredrick and fellow freshman Scott Paddock played in the game beginning on the back page.

Elliot claims second Daytona win

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., - Bill Elliott won his second Daytona 500 as defending champion Geoff Bodine, losing a high-stakes gamble, ran out of gas three laps from the end yesterday at Daytona International Speedway.

Elliott, the 1985 winner, out-muscled the fastest field in Daytona history most of the day. But he had to watch and wait in the last 13 laps as Bodine took a calculated risk by staying on the racetrack, hoping to squeeze 45 laps of racing out of a nearly-empty gas tank.

Bodine did get in 42 laps and was about 20 seconds in the lead on the 2.5-mile track when his Chevrolet sputtered and quit. The engine stopped just after he had passed the pit entrance, forcing him to roll slowly around the track while Elliott's Ford Thunderbird and the rest of the lead cars roared past.

Elliott then held off Benny Parsons for the victory.

The winner crossed the finish line just six-tenths of a second ahead of Parsons.

Lady Vols thrash Irish, 90-55

Special to The Observer

KNOXVILLE - Notre Dame fell victim to Tennessee's relentless pressure defense Saturday afternoon and the Irish fell to the seventh-ranked Lady Volunteers, 90-55, in women's basketball.

Tennessee forced 28 Irish turnovers and converted many of those into breakaway layup baskets. Meanwhile the Lady Vols featured a balanced attack, with seven players scoring at least eight points.

Notre Dame drops to 6-15 while Tennessee improves to 18-5.

"We did not play well at all," said Irish coach Mary DiStanislao. "We were obviously undermanned and we didn't do too much to help our cause. Tennessee's pressure defense just gave us all kinds of problems and we certainly didn't rebound very well."

The Irish were beaten on the boards, 48-28.

Sophomore guard Diondra Toney led the Irish with 18 points, equaling her season high. Freshman Annie Schwartz had 16 and Heidi Bunek 11.

Notre Dame stayed close for the better part of 10 minutes, and trailed by just eight points with eight minutes to play in the half. But a Tennessee spurt in the closing minutes left the Irish staring at a 37-22 halftime deficit.

Things got no better in the second period, as Tennessee methodically built on its lead. The final margin of 35 was the game's largest.

The Irish were plagued with foul trouble from the outset. Bunek, Sandy Botham and Cathy Emigholz all fouled out, leaving Notre Dame with just six players in the final minute.

Shelly Sexton had 16, while Carla McGhee and Sheila Frost had 12 each for the Volunteers.

Tennessee shot 35 free throws while Notre Dame shot only five.

Notre Dame returns home to meet Illinois-Chicago at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

week of practice, he told me I was going to win a game and it was't going to be a little one, it was going to be a big one on television."

"Friday, when I went into practice, he and I shot about 1,500 free throws. I just shot free throws and he told me 'You know it's going to be a little different with all the fans here but it's the same thing, just keep your routine and hit it.' He told me all week I'd be on the line with a chance to win the game. 'There's just something about him,' he continued. 'I don't know how he knows these things are going to happen.'"

After those free throws, it was time for the other freshman of the day, Paddock, to do his part. Put into the game when Donald Royal was hitting two free throws with 24 seconds left to give the Irish the lead for good, Paddock rebounded the missed free throw by Smith, a 79-percent free-throw shooter on the season, and was fouled. Paddock, shooting 36 percent from the line, then hit both ends of the one-and-one to secure the win.

"We were in the huddle and the guys said, 'Smith's going to miss that free throw and just make sure you box out,' Paddock said. "Everything worked out well, I boxed out, I got the rebound and when I went to the line, I tried to block out all the distractions and just remember what I worked on in practice. Once I made the first one, the second one was easy."

Fredrick gives a lot of credit to Scott Hicks, his roommate on the road, for curing the "freshman blues."

"He had a really big day," Fredrick said. "He's helped to keep me up. It's a big day for our veterans and I'm really happy for Scott Hicks."

The final statistics give a modest report of the freshmen's performance. Fredrick finished with four points, one foul and one turnover in seven minutes of play. Paddock ended with four points, two rebounds, one foul and one blocked shot in eight minutes of play. But those numbers hide what the game meant to the Alumni Hall roommates.

"We've been subbing in for the Gold team all week so we knew the coaches were giving us our chance," Paddock said. "I think we took advantage of it."

One is that the NBC cameras, the Dick Enbergs, the Al McGuires and the nationally-ranked teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference are gone, but they still have to play basketball.

heading into a pair of games late last week, and riding a six-game winning streak. Bailey, their main offensive weapon, was fourth in the nation in scoring with an average of 28 points per game, and the 1986 champion.

"Bailey is a tremendous talent who does everything for Wagner," said Phelps. "They're strong on the boards and right now they're just really in a groove in terms of playing well and doing the right things to win games."

At forward are a pair of players with foreign playing experience. Largest Agbejemisin (no, we're not kidding) stands 6-7 and hails from Ibadan, Nigeria, while 6-6 Dean Borges, who played high-school ball in Puerto Rico, fills the other forward slot. Agbejemisin averages better than 12 points and 11 rebounds a game, while Borges contributes 13 points and five boards per contest.

But perhaps even more powerful than Bailey, although a lot less exciting, is that invisible opponent that seemed to haunt the Irish after their last upset win over a nationally-ranked team - the letdown.

"I'm concerned about having a letdown after this big win," Phelps said yesterday. "We're playing Wagner here and everybody's going to laugh. I guarantee that, in the first half, that's not going to look like the same team that played Duke here (yesterday). That's just human nature."

The last time the Notre Dame played on back-to-back days was on a January road swing. The Irish fought back to earn a 71-67 victory against Penn, and then routed Yale by a 64-49 score.

Stanford-Lewis also won the grand-prize competition, in which eight of the 12 teams participated. Teams put in $100 apiece, and the winning dorms won 80 percent of the total. The other 20 percent, as well as all other funds raised in the evening, were donated to the St. Joseph County Special Olympics.

"We were very pleased," said Sally Derengoski, Assistant Director of Non-Varsity Athletics, which sponsored the event. "The participation level was real high and a lot of the extra events went well."

Advance entries amounted to better than 200 teams and 1,200 participants. Derengoski said approximately 1,000 people actually took part in the Olympics, which lasted from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m.

In a three-game set on Saturday, the Irish defeated Meremac, 3-1, and Sangamon State, 3-2, but fell to rival Indiana, 4-1.

A controversial goal by Indiana gave the Hoosiers a 2-1 lead. Notre Dame pulled keeper Dan Lyons for an extra attacker late in the fourth quarter, but Indiana scored twice into the open net for the 4-1 final.

"I was very pleased with the way the guys played," said Head Coach Dennis Grace. "We've finally gotten to the point where we can play with anyone. It started fall break with games like UConn, and I'm glad to see it's carried over to indoor."

In the first game Saturday morning, the Irish downed

Meremac. Forward Pat
Murphy scored one of the goals

After losing to Indiana, the Irish edged defending NAIA champions Sangamon State, 3-2. Midfielder Joe Sternberg tallied twice and Morris added one for Notre Dame.

The Irish needed a victory over Indiana to advance to the finals of the 16-team tournament. But the Hoosiers advanced with Evansville, St. Louis and either Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, Western Illinois or Quincy to the finals.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. - Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 39 points and led Los Angeles back from a 17-point third-quarter deficit to a 106-103 victory over the Boston Celtics, giving the Lakers the best record in the NBA.

Johnson scored eight points over the final three-and-a-half minutes, including two clinching free throws with four seconds to play, to lift the Lakers to their 38th victory in 50 games this season, one game better than the Celtics.

With the Lakers down by three, Johnson hit a 15-foot jumper and then made a spinning layup with 1:29 to play to give Los Angeles a 98-97 lead.

Irish dump Duke in OT, 70-66

ND adds No. 15 Blue Devils to growing ACC casualty list

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

If Notre Dame's upset of North Carolina two weeks ago was a Notre Dame Moment, then Notre Dame's 70-66 overtime upset of 15th-ranked Duke has to at least qualify as a mini-moment.

Senior guard and co-captain Scott Hicks scored a season-high 19 points, and freshmen Joe Fredrick and Scott Paddock came off the bench in overtime to hit key free throws to add another installment to the Irish tradition of knocking off highly-rated opponents at the ACC.

As has been the case all year, the 14-7 Irish fought and scrapped to hang in the game and have a shot at victory in the final minutes. Sunday, the lead changed hand seven times and was knotted on 11 occasions.

"We've been in every game we've played this year," said

Phelps. "We're a team right now that doesn't know how to lose because we just don't quit. Even (near the end of regulation) when we went down four, we went to zone and got back up two, that's how these kids adjust. That's why I love this group. They just do things that they're not supposed to do. That's what makes this an interesting basketball team that is not done yet with what we're trying to do."

The Irish dodged a bullet, when with 16 seconds left in overtime, Duke guard Tommy Amaker led a three-on-one Blue Devil fast break. Rather than press the advantage, Amaker pulled up and fired short on an 18-foot jumper.

"When they went down at the end of regulation and didn't score," Phelps said, "I thought the momentum went our way. I liked that juice."

Freshmen Fredrick, Paddock respond down the stretch

By RICK RIETBROCK
Sports Writer

Although few fans would have guessed it, Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps knew it all week. He told Joe Fredrick he was going to be a hero against Duke.

And even though it took a while, Fredrick made Phelps' predictions come true.

The freshman guard combined with his classmate, Scott Paddock, to seal another Notre Dame upset of a nationally-ranked team at the time when freshmen are not supposed to be mature enough to perform. The final moments.

Fredrick replaced Mark Stevenson, who fouled out just two seconds into overtime, hit a jumper and two free throws, while Paddock gathered in John Smith's missed free throw with four seconds remaining and made two more free throws to ice the game.

Phelps pointed out the contributions of the freshmen when mentioning the crucial points of the game.

"Fredrick coming off the bench and he knew this week that he was going to play along with Scott Paddock, got us six points at the end of the game. For the freshmen to get those six points was the key to the game," Phelps said. But their success came as no surprise to the Irish coach. He was telling anyone who would listen all week long that it was going to happen.

"I mentioned to people all week the hero of this game was going to be number three (Fredrick)," Phelps said. "I don't know why, I just felt it. That was just something that came out, that Joe Fredrick was going to be the guy that's not going to be afraid to come off the bench and stick them when we need them no matter what the situation was going to be."

"And I prepped him on it all week. I spent time with him on his foul shooting all week. I spent time with Scott Paddock shooting foul shots all week, and those kids were just going to step up and be heroes today."

Even though Fredrick had spent nearly the whole game on the bench, Fredrick said Phelps had not forgotten his prediction when he put the guard in the lineup to replace Stevenson.

"He said, 'I told you that you were going to be a hero, now you've got five minutes to do it,'" Fredrick recalled.

When Fredrick entered the game in the overtime, the Irish ran the same offense that had opened Stevenson for jump shots earlier. The Cincinnati, Ohio, native produced the same results as Stevenson had by burying a baseline jumper to tie the game at 62.

Then, after getting a player control foul, Fredrick got open in the lane and David Rivers found him off a drive. Fredrick was fouled and nearly hit the shot. That left him at the line for two his first free throws of the season with 1:04 left in overtime and the game tied at 64. He made both foul shots. Once again, it happened just as

The Notre Dame hockey team lost one and tied one this weekend against Michigan-Dearborn. Chris Dallavo recaps the action at right.

Hockey team remains inconsistent; loses, ties in frustrating weekend

By CHRIS DALLAVO
Sports Writer

Let's just say the Irish basketball team fared a little better than the hockey team this past weekend. Coach Lefty Smith's squad dropped a 9-1 decision at Michigan-Dearborn Friday night, but rebounded Saturday to tie the Wolves, 4-4.

"Friday's game was one of those that you see in a nightmare," lamented Smith. "We played so poorly it was pathetic."

The lone Irish goal was scored by freshman defenseman Bruce Haikola in the third period, which averted the shutout.

Contrary to what the score indicates, goaltending was not the main problem. It was more of an overall lack of enthusiasm at both ends of the ice.

"We were hurt by poor play up front, and also on defense," Smith continued. "Four of their goals came right after a face-off, which indicates how bad it was."

Saturday was a different story, however, as the Irish fought back to tie the game with only 28 seconds left. The comeback was spurred by the return of Irish captain Mike McNeill to the center position. McNeill, who had been moved to defense because of injuries, ignited the offense with two goals, including the game-tying tally.

"If we could split McNeill in half, we would be in great shape," praised Smith. "He really means a lot to this team."

The Irish got goals from Matt Hanzel and Bruce Guay prior to McNeill's crucial scores.

The game-tying goal came when the Irish pulled their goaltender, which is the first time that has worked this year.

"This team is hard to figure out," Smith said. "One day we play with a complete lack of enthusiasm, and the next, we show the heart that we were missing."

Injuries continue to plague the Irish, although Smith hopes to get three key players, Brian Montgomery, Roy Bemiss and Tom Smith, back this week.

"We're still shuffling lines around, but hopefully we will settle down when they return," Smith noted.

The Irish travel to Lake Forest next weekend for a pair of games as they try to gain some momentum for the upcoming American Collegiate Hockey Playoffs to be held at Notre Dame March 6-7.
