Reagan nominates new justice

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, making good on his promise to pick another hardline conservative, nominated federal appeals court Judge Douglas Ginsburg to the Supreme Court on Thursday, raising the prospect of a second confirmation battle in the Senate.

Reagan praised Ginsburg as an advocate of judicial restraint and a believer in law and order. He said Ginsburg "will take a tough, clear-eyed view" of the Constitution "while remaining sensitive to the safety of our citizens and to the problems facing law enforcement professionals."

Ginsburg sits on the same bench as Judge Robert Bork, whose nomination to the nation's highest court was

WSND seeks broadcast funds

By ROBYN SIMMONS
News Staff

In an effort to defray operating costs during academic breaks, Notre Dame's student-run fine arts radio station, WSND-FM is conducting its annual fall fund drive beginning Nov. 1.

The station usually holds week-long fund drives but is extending its fall drive an extra week in order to continue broadcasting during academic breaks.

"The station is budgeted through the Office of Student Activities," said Station Manager Jesse Pesta. "We broadcast year-round and the University doesn't finance us during breaks. The money they budget for us only applies when school is in session."

Currently, WSND is close to $4,000 in debt. "We would hope to get (about) $5,500," Pesta said. "That would get us out of the red and give us a little extra over Christmas and Thanksgiving," he said.

"We have an all-volunteer staff so the money is not going for paying people," said Carolyn Gardner, the station's chief announcer and current director of the fund drive. "No amount is too small because there are always bills that have to be paid." Funds are needed to buy production equipment and new music.

"I think (the fund drive) will be more successful this year because we have some new and some revitalized programs that are very popular with our listening audience," said Gardner.

"We've just put together our program guide for November," said Pesta. "That's basically our fund-raising mailer," he said.

"(The program guide) has a form on the back page for people on our mailing list to return their comments on our programs and also to ask them to select their premium (donation amount)," said Pesta.

Contributions of $20 or more will receive a 1988 Pictorial Ireland Yearbook and Appointment Diary. A gift of $35 or more brings contributors a copy of "Go Public! The Traveler's Guide to Non-Commercial Radio." Donations of $50 or more will receive both publications.

The program guides will be mailed to approximately 1,300 people who are on the station's mailing list and extra copies

ND graduate a candidate for mayor of South Bend

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

A new era will be ushered in Tuesday with the election of a mayor in the city of South Bend.

Voters will be looking beyond the tenure of outgoing Mayor Roger Parent to the leadership of either Carl Baxmeyer or Joseph Kernan.

By most accounts, the race between the Republican Baxmeyer and the Democrat Kernan will be a close one, each running effective campaigns. Kernan's support rests with what he terms a unified Democratic party, while Baxmeyer has been publicizing Republican, as well as Democratic support.

Kernan is a former city controller for South Bend, serving from 1980 through

Carl Baxmeyer

1984 and is a former deputy mayor of the city.

Baxmeyer holds 10 years of experience as a city planner in areas of land use planning, environmental assessment, transportation planning, capital improvement evaluation, recreation planning, project management and grant management.

An undergraduate of Grand Valley State College (Mich.) in 1976 with a degree in planning/environmental science, and holding a master's in planning/hydrology from Colorado State University in 1979, Baxmeyer is a former county planning director and has said he considers his experience in the private sector a strong quality for a mayor to have.

Kernan, who grew up in South Bend, is a University of Notre Dame graduate, earning a degree in government in 1964. He also claims experience in business and industry, recently serving as a vice president and treasurer for the South Bend MacWilliams Corporation.

South Bend has not had a Republican elected to the mayor's office since 1963, which on the surface would seem to give the edge to the Democratic nominee. However, a hard-fought Democratic primary left some of the party disenchanted with Kernan.

Herman was admitted to the coronary intensive care unit of the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles on March 26 after suffering from effects of high-altitude sickness during a tour through Colorado and Utah, said his manager, Tom Cassidy. Herman "was one of the most wonderful human beings in the whole world," Cassidy said. "He never quit." - Associated Press

Costumes can't mask true nature of Halloween

Fieldhouse Mall.

Trick or treat.

In college? Are you serious? I thought I left that home in sixth grade.

No matter how old you are, there will always be something to do on Halloween. Little kids hunt for candy, college kids party in disguise, and adults deal with Suzy Lou Who from next door whispering "trick or treat" at 11 p.m.

For college students, Halloween has a different meaning. It is not so much how many snickers bars or candy corn you get, but what party you went to. In college, even costumes take on a different style.

When I was a youngster, I would panic about my costume. I never knew what to be, and I was always sure that Paul Harding, my best friend at school, would have the same get-up I did.

"What am I going to be for Halloween? Help!!"

Sometimes I would end up as a ghost, or a bum. Once I dressed up in one of those plastic jobs you buy in the local five and dime. I ripped it on my front stoop and went inside to cry all afternoon. I had to steal my sister's M&M's to save my face in school.

One time I was even Humpty Dumpty -- and that was before I developed my beer gut. I dressed up in white and wore this pseudo egg shell made of posterpaper. When I got tired of wearing the shell, I threw it away and became the Good Humor man.

At Notre Dame these past three Halloweens, I have encountered incredible creativity when it comes to costumes. Last year, one of my roommates went to Goodwill for a disguise. He bought an ugly bowling shirt, broken glass frames, and ugly plaid pants -- women's pants. I don't think he still wears the stuff, but he made a hell of a nerd.

Some enterprising friends of mine decided to be estrogen last year. That's the female hormone that makes women women and men not women. Sure, they had to explain the costume a few times, but when they did, they got more guys than the little miss muffit costumes did.

So what am I going to be for Halloween? The Observer reported yesterday that Spuds MacKenzie and Jim and Tammy Baker were the most popular costumes. I mean, be serious. One's a beer-toting dog, and the other would mean pretending to be a minister who is pretending to be a minister. So what do I do?

I could be a Minnesota Twins fan. Lord knows they've been fooling people for weeks now. All I would need is a handkerchief to wave in a St. Louis person's face. If I party indoors I'll probably be a success.

Jim Winkler

Day Chief

There's always the He-Man Woman Hater's Club to fall back on. I could dress in ratty clothes, burp a lot, and tell SMC chicks to get out of my way. I don't know if people would recognize me.

Maybe I will hop on the estrogen bandwagon and go as Michael Jackson. I'll take my whips and chains, my falsetto voice, and go spin on my toes. Bad idea. Bad pun.

I could go as Justice, oops I mean Judge Bork. All I need to do is tape a quaker oats box to my face and have everyone yell at me for being a conservative nut. They would probably send me home early, but the Joe Biden look-alike would have to lie to do it.

I could always dress up as a Def Leppard fan. I probably couldn't grow my hair long enough by Saturday. At least I wouldn't get carded at Chip's. They would think I belong there.

At a school like Notre Dame, there are to many smart, creative people here. The costume competition gets tougher each year. I would love to go as Superman, Batman, or even a member of the Laser Tag Academy, but they don't make extra large Halloween costumes. Besides, that's not creative.

Grace Hall debates raise relevant issues at ND

By COURTNEY JAMIESON
News Staff

The first of nine Grace Hall debates opened last night arguing the issue of tariffs.

According to Seamus Brennan, chairman of the social concerns committee at Grace, the purpose of the debates is to educate the members of Grace Hall and the greater Notre Dame community about the important issues of the day.

Brennan said, "We want Notre Dame students to get a better understanding of issues in the world, and the debates are the perfect opportunity to learn about relevant issues."

The debates were started by Joe McKenna then assistant rector of Grace. Brennan said, "McKenna is from Ireland where debates are very important there, and he wanted to bring some of that over here."

Brennan added, "The debates went over incredibly well last year with the guys, and there were a number of letters from faculty expressing their excitement and the fact that they were impressed."

The participants in the debates are volunteers from each floor. Each team consists of four members, three competitors and one alternate. The teams are judged in five areas:

analysis and definition, evidence, organization, reputation rebuttle and delivery by members of the various departments. Last night's judge was Professor Thomas Swartz of the economics department.

The members of the teams are given three days to research a given topic. According to Brennan the topics are kept secret between the rector and one of the R.A.'s until three days before each debate so that no one will have an unfair advantage.

The debates are structured such that the affirmative side begins, each competitor having four minutes to speak. The negative side then has four minutes to respond.

After each team has finished both sides present a two minute summary. Brennan said the debates are a knockout competition that work towards one ultimate winner.

The debates are open to the public, and announcements have been posted around campus. The debates will continue tonight through Nov. 23.

North Dining Hall still congested

By KRISTIN KOMMERS
News Staff

The construction underway on North Dining Hall, begun just after this summer's Special Olympics, will continue throughout the year and into the latter part of the summer.

The purpose of the construction is to relieve the overcrowding and congested lines, which will increase even more after the completion of the two new girls' dorms on the quad. Quicker, more efficient food lines and a homey atmosphere such as that of South Dining Hall are the primary goals of the construction.

Work on the building will begin indoors in early February; at that time, the long lines and waits are expected to be at their worst.

Director of Food Services Bill Hickey has offered to open Stepan Center for meals in the meantime, the most viable solution if students are open to the idea.

In addition to the overcrowding is the inconvenience of not being able to approach the dining hall from the rear from the newer dorms. The result is immense congestion at lunch and dinner because people are not using the far line closest to Haggard.

Hickey has given several dorms the opportunity to use South as an alternative, but because of the long walk, students are reluctant to do so.

Special dinners and events have been limited this year as a result of the costly food fight that occurred after the Michigan game. Says Student Life Coordinator John Wilson, "Because of the food fight, we've lost the rights to have food events that would help ease the tension and stress."

He feels the most effective solution at this time would be for students to take Hickey up on his offer and start going to South. "When the construction does move indoors, it will alleviate a lot of the difficulty if the dorms that were offered to go to South took the opportunity. They're going to be closing sections at a time, and people will be waiting in lines from 45 minutes to an hour."

Street people picked up in NYC by city

Associate Press

NEW YORK - The city moved more mentally ill homeless people from the streets into hospital beds Thursday despite accusations by civil rights activists that the program is either a sham or illegal.

Six homeless men and women were brought in to a 28-bed ward at Bellevue Hospital on Wednesday; two others were brought in Thursday morning to be bathed, deloused, clothed, instructed on their legal rights and evaluated.

Mayor Edward Koch, who observed the process Wednesday evening, defended the effort, an expanded version of a program he announced last spring. He said only one of those detained thus far had to be handcuffed because of a history of violence.

Koch has said the Project Help program is a way of treating those homeless people who are unable to help themselves, many of them patients discharged from state mental hospitals in recent years because of court rulings prompted by concern for their civil rights.

will be distributed to local businesses. Donations may be sent to Fall Fine Arts Drive, WSND-FM, 301 LaFortune Hall, Notre Dame, IN 46556.

In addition to the fall fundraiser, WSND also conducts a spring fund drive in late April. "There's a good one-third of the year that we're not being budgeted for," Pesta said. "Christmas is expensive and summer is expensive."

WSND, which has been a primarily classical music station for nearly 40 years, also broadcasts programs featuring jazz, big band, opera, Broadway, reggae, classic rock and Irish folk music.

"I think we've done a good job of distinguishing ourselves from the other public radio stations of which there are no shortage of in South Bend," Gardner said. "Our listening audience is mostly in the community (but) I would like to have a larger audience on campus."

Halloween costumes reflect 'escapism'

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Romance and horror, not necessarily combined, are the hot themes for adults dressing up this Halloween, partly because "people want to get their mind off the stock market," a leading costumer said Thursday.

"There's a degree of escapism," added Mark Beige, president of Rubie's Costume Co. in Queens, which also outfits off-Broadway and television shows.

"Everything in the Romantic period is going like hotcakes," agreed Jeanette Centrowitz, co-owner of Universal Costumes in Manhattan's theater district.

"We have ballgowns going out the door one after the other," she said. "The men are very much into musketeer outfits and Amadeus."

In previous years, said Centrowitz, "I had women walking around wearing Michael Jackson jackets and men's pirate costumes." But now, she said, women want traditionally feminine costumes and "men are wearing sequins, pink, ruffles and knickers."

Beige said many of his female customers will be dressing as harem girls, French maids, sorceresses or "she-devils." The men want to be Dracula, a gorilla or one of the Three Musketeers.

A costume that leaves little to the imagination was modeled Thursday by Elvira, the Los Angeles television personality who presides over a "creature feature" show.

During a visit to Rockefeller Center, she drew stares in her signature attire, garish makeup, a clingy black dress with a slit to the hips and a dangerously low neckline, a dagger belt buckle and black nail polish.

Elvira has marketed the outfit as a Halloween costume. So what will she wear?

"I thought I might do a complete reversal and go as Marie Osmond," she said.

Horror-movie monsters are a heavy influence this Halloween, said Beige, especially Jason from "Friday the 13th" and Freddie Krueger from "Nightmare on Elm Street."

Superpowers agree on possible December summit

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The superpowers agreed on a summit agenda and cleared the way for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to meet President Reagan in the United States later this year, a Soviet spokesman said Thursday.

No date was announced, but one official said privately that the Soviets are proposing the two leaders meet the first week in December.

U.S. officials, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the third meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev could be arranged for late November or early December.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshev told reporters the leaders would sign a treaty to scrap intermediate-range nuclear missiles and discuss cuts in long-range strategic arsenals.

He said they also would discuss limits on developing the proposed U.S. space-based missile defense program known as "Star Wars." The Soviet-U.S. dispute over the system prevented agreement on a summit date during Secretary of State George Shultz's visit to Moscow last week.

Foreign Minister Eduard

Shevardnadze, carrying a letter from the Soviet Communist Party general secretary to Reagan, was to arrive in Washington on Friday for further talks. The Soviet official said the letter contains the proposal for a summit date.

Shevardnadze was in Prague, Czechoslovakia, Thursday to meet with Warsaw Pact foreign ministers.

"Presently, we have an understanding that together with the agreement on medium-range and shorter-range missiles, questions relative to strategic offensive weapons and the ABM (anti-ballistic missile) treaty will be thoroughly discussed at a summit meeting," Pyadyshev said. "This is sufficient for a summit to take place this year."

He said a summit "is fixed for the end of this year."

Tax increase, deficit bill refused in House

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The House on Thursday temporarily scuttled a $12 billion tax increase and other parts of a Democratic deficit-reduction bill, insisting that Congressional and White House negotiators first be given a chance to produce a plan for attacking the government's debt.

Immediately after losing a 217-203 vote, Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, served notice that the House will have to face the issue again, but without an attached welfare-overhaul provision. He acknowledged that the welfare section, which has nothing to do with reducing the deficit, caused several Democrats to desert on the vote.

But welfare was only part of the problem, insisted Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, the Republican leader. "What the members have attempted to express here is (to) give this bipartisan negotiating team (representing Congress and the White House) a chance to come up with a deficit plan," Michel said.

By the vote, House members simply refused to consider the Democratic bill, since the procedures under which they were operating offered no realistic chance to amend the tax or welfare sections.

That forced the House Rules Committee, which the leadership controls, to reconvene and lay out new procedures under which the bill would be considered. The procedures and the bill will remain the same, except that the welfare provisions were stripped off and put aside for the year.

Wright assumed that change would bring back into the fold enough Democrats to pass the bill.

While the House was debating the Democratic bill, the deficit negotiators were meeting behind closed doors elsewhere in the Capitol in an effort to produce a proposal within another week. At the White House, President Reagan told his negotiators, headed by Treasury Secretary James Baker III, that "it sounds like you're talking about the right issues."

Baker later defined those issues to mean spending reductions.

The president and most Republicans in Congress want to rely more on spending reductions and less on taxes to slash the record deficit. After the stock market plunged last week, Reagan appeared to soften his anti-tax stance, agreed to negotiate with Congress and pledged to consider any Democratic plan that mixed spending cuts and tax increases.

His victory over west side opponent Richard Jasinski fostered a "Democrats for Baxmeyer" campaign in that area, causing a split within the party. Kernan and Baxmeyer have offered conflicting statements about the severity of the split.

Baxmeyer has had a much easier time gaining support within his party.

Both candidates list economic development as a high priority if elected, promoting the city positively. Baxmeyer and Kernan also have made area education and government efficiency part of their campaign promises.

The campaign has had its share of name-calling. Some supporters of Baxmeyer have been associating Kernan with out-going mayor Parent, who remains unpopular with some areas of South Bend, particularly with his role in the building of a minor-league baseball stadium.

A letter from "Democrats for Baxmeyer" to voters said "A vote for Joe Kernan is a vote for Roger Parent. A vote for Carl Baxmeyer is a vote for Richard Jasinski, our candidate in the primary."

Drunk-driving deaths on rise

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Alcohol-related traffic deaths are increasing after years of steady decline, raising concern the campaign against drinking and driving may be losing momentum, especially among young motorists, a researcher said Thursday.

The statistics from 32 states showed a 7 percent increase last year in the number of deaths among drivers who were legally intoxicated and a similar increase in the number of single-vehicle night time fatalities.

Both categories traditionally have been used as key indicators of alcohol-related traffic deaths.

“Even though you can’t put it all together, the indicators seem to be going in the same (upward) direction. It’s reason for concern,” said Professor Ralph Hingson, chief of social and behavioral sciences at Boston University’s School of Public Health.

Hingson analyzed U.S. transportation Department traffic statistics in a recent paper that suggested there was a significant reversal in 1986 in the trend toward fewer alcohol-related traffic fatalities.

Those statistics show that 5,211 legally intoxicated drivers were killed last year, compared with 4,884 the previous year, an increase of 7 percent.

Bishops reject U.S. proposal for women

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY - The worldwide synod of bishops Thursday condemned discrimination against women but rejected U.S. recommendations for opening all non-ordained ministries in the church to women.

In a final document of recommendations to be presented to Pope John Paul II and in a separate message addressed to the world, the bishops spoke in mostly general terms of the role of women in the Roman Catholic Church.

The prelates also said Catholic politicians should uphold church policy and fight for social justice, human rights and religious freedom.

American bishops said their specific proposals on women, included in an early draft, had been cut out in the final stages and were not included in the final document. But they said they were satisfied that the principle of their suggestions was upheld.

"When you have to say something which will pull from every culture, it has to be couched in terms that are very general," Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee, Wis., told a news conference.

About 220 bishops from around the world took part in the monthlong synod, an advisory body convened by the pontiff to examine the role of lay Catholics in church and society. The assembly ends Friday with a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica.

U.S. bishops and prelates from other countries told the in general sessions that the church should take specific steps to give women a greater role.

Archbishop John May of St. Louis, president of the U.S. bishops' conference, last week there was a "strong consensus" at the synod that all non-ordained ministries be open to women.

These ministries include acolytes, lectors and altar servers, people who assist functions during Mass such as lighting candles and preparing the altar.

Under church law, women are not permitted to serve in these positions. But in the United States and some other countries women sometimes carry out those functions informally, without official installation.

Tragedy evokes new affection for ND

I am writing this on my last day here at Notre Dame. Last Monday night, my dad called to tell me that my mom's condition is not getting any better (she has cancer), and that it's time for me to come home. They told her that she has three months to live.

My first reaction to this news was shock—for the last year I have pretended that things were someday going to suddenly be OK and that we would look back on these times and remember how hard they were. Now I have to face the reality that sometimes you don't always get what you want in life, and that the real job begins when you learn to accept that.

guest column

And now comes the hard part. I promised myself that I wouldn't feel sad about leaving Notre Dame, but unfortunately this hasn't been easy. This place has been my home for the last three years of my life. I have become a new person because of my experiences here, and the people that I have had the good fortune to come to love are now my family. I guess you could say that my real intention here in writing this is to tell those of you out there who haven't come to love Notre Dame yet just how important it's become to me.

"I guess you could say that my real intention here in writing this is to tell those of you out there who haven't come to love Notre Dame yet just how important it's become to me."

Obviously, the first thing that enters my mind when I think of the last few years is my huge family here. I'm thinking about the friends from my dorm freshman year, classmates who helped me out with understanding something, professors who were compassionate and patient when I just couldn't seem to hit the deadlines, University officials who were there to offer advice and support, all of the workers and secretaries who had a smile on a rainy day, the landlady who became mom number 2—I think that I could fill volumes with the names and faces of those who made a difference. I know that I will never forget the love or encouragement that I felt from so many people, and I know that some of the advice I have received will always be remembered.

Withdrawing from school was the second hardest thing I've had to do these last few days (the first hardest was facing the reality of the situation), and I know that there will be days in Phoenix when I'll wish I were sitting in class trying to pay attention and keep my eyes off the clock. Even though I always told myself I would never miss all of the reading, the writing, and all of the stress of being a student, I can honestly say that I miss it already. Being a student is a wonderful thing when you compare it with other things you could be doing at this point in your life.

"I will miss being here very much. I'll miss the people, the classes, the games, the smiles, and the love that seems to hang over this place like a mist sometimes."

I think that through all of my thinking these last couple of days there has been one thing that really stands out—quit feeling sorry for yourself because you have to leave Notre Dame. I may be getting on a plane Tuesday and I may be two thousand miles away from here, but the fact is that I will never really leave Notre Dame. I may not be able to sit at the Grotto or walk by the lake or climb the stairs in O'Shag, but those things are with me—they're tucked away in a place in my heart that I'll depend on often to get me through when things seem difficult.

I will miss being here very much. I'll miss the people, the classes, the games, the smiles, and the love that seems to hang over this place like a mist sometimes. I'll miss driving to school in four feet of snow and complaining about it all the way, I'll miss waiting in line at the dining hall and wondering if there isn't some way to make them move faster, and I'll miss seeing the football player that used to make me walk into things. I'll miss going to the library for four hours to sit and drink coffee in the Pit and wonder how I was ever going to get all of my stuff done, and I'll miss the special friends who always had time to listen, or to talk, or even to yell at me to get me back on track sometimes.

These are some of the things I will never forget, regardless of how much I miss them. My hope is that those of you that are here now will see these kinds of things around you a little more clearly and enjoy them. I hope that my family in PLS will take a few minutes to see some of the deeper issues here with them now in addition to the ones they read in books, and I hope that the seniors who are planning their lives are happy in doing so and not afraid or desperate. One of my largest hopes is that I've made some small difference here—I hope that those who are closest to me will see that difference, and above all, I hope that I can come back someday and graduate.

Don't think that I'm trying to sell my rose colored glasses. I realize that everything isn't as wonderful and idealistic here as I think it is, but if one person feels a little better about what they have here, then I'll feel like it was worthwhile.

I love Notre Dame. It will never be far from me from now on, and this makes me know deep down inside that I'll make it. It may be a little tough, but I know that as long as I can sit at the Grotto within my thoughts or say hello to one of the people here or even catch a game once in a while, there's nothing I can't handle.

I wish all of you here at this special place much luck in all you do, love and happiness with your friends and families, and success in all your endeavors. Be safe and happy and look around once in a while and like what you see—believe me, you'll never be sorry you did.

Sophomore fullback Braxton Banks is laying the foundations for a successful career not only for the Irish but beyond Notre Dame as well. Here he goes in for a score against Pitt.

Irish fullback

Banks laying foundations

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

Irish fullback Braxton Banks is living proof that a structure is only as strong as its foundation. As Banks completes the foundation of his Notre Dame football career, he is creating the foundation for his future.

"I feel as though I am just finishing the basics, putting in the foundation," says Banks, a sophomore. "When you get there, you start building, and hopefully with time, everything comes around."

Banks and the rest of Notre Dame's running game have definitely come around this season. Against USC, four runners ran for over 50 yards, with Banks logging 59 of the Irish total of 351.

For Banks, the absence of one big star in the backfield is an advantage to the entire offense.

"As a unit, we work together and learn our strengths and weaknesses," Banks says. "As individual runners, we capitalize on each others weaknesses and show our strengths where others are lacking. So, as a group we are all getting better."

As a freshman, Banks played in 10 games and started two, averaging 4.3 yards per carry. He also caught 10 passes for 55 yards and two touchdowns. That's how a foundation is laid.

After spring practice, Banks was listed number one on the depth chart at fullback, one of the strongest positions on the Irish offense.

"As a freshman, there was so much to learn," Banks recalls. "You think, 'Coach wants me to do this, do that, make that cut'. But now, I feel comfortable with the system. It's almost like being back in high school. You do what you have to do, but you also have fun with it."

So far this season, Banks has had some fun, going 125 yards on 29 carries and scoring three touchdowns, despite a strained knee ligament suffered during the Michigan game. The injury was not serious enough to require surgery, and Banks was back in form after about three weeks.

Part of the foundation of Banks' game comes from working with teammates Mark Green, Tim Brown, Byron Spruell and Chuck Lanza. He says watching them and imitating their work habits has had a big effect on his performance.

Leahy plus ND equals victory

After one Notre Dame legend, Elmer Layden, gave up his post as head coach of the Irish to become the commissioner of the National Football League in 1940, another stepped right into his place to continue the unparalleled tradition of Notre Dame coaching.

His name was Frank Leahy, and his total winning percentage (.855) could only be eclipsed by that of the immortal Knute Rockne throughout the long history of college football. His prolific career spanned 11 seasons, including six unbeaten years and five national championships. A favorite with his players, Leahy, like so many of the greats that preceded him on the Irish sidelines, was much more than a coach to his players.

After his teams compiled a 24-3-3 record in three seasons from 1941-1943, with the 1943 season producing a national championship, Leahy was called to serve in the Navy for two years. Also in 1943, Angelo Bertelli became the first of Notre Dame's six Heisman Trophy winners (more than any other school).

100 Years of Irish Football

PETE SKIKO

Leahy's replacements during those two years, Ed McKeever and Hugh Devore, led the Irish admirably. Notre Dame was 8-2 in 1944 and 7-2-1 in 1945. But in both years, the number-one team in the nation, the Army Black Knights (as they were then known), annihilated the Irish at Yankee Stadium, 59-0 and 48-0, respectively.

Leahy listened to both of those games while at sea, and vowed that upon his return things would change. Almost according to script, the Irish and the Black Knights met midway through the 1946 season as the top two ranked teams in the country, with much more than a win on the line. Army came into the game having won 25 games in a row and seemed well on their way to taking their third consecutive national title. The Irish had pummeled their first five opponents by a combined score of 177-18. The stage was set for a classic confrontation.

What ensued was perhaps one of the most emotional, hard-fought battles in college football history. Some fans bought tickets from scalpers for over $200 to see Notre Dame and Army struggle to a 0-0 tie in a game whose score was not indicative of the action that took place. Notre Dame drove to Army's four-yard-line in the second quarter, but the Black Knights took over on downs. Johnny Lujack of the Irish made a diving, open-field, touchdown-saving tackle of Army's star running back, Doc Blanchard, after Blanchard had broken into the clear in Irish territory. Army never threatened again. The outcome of the game ultimately led to Leahy's second national title.

In 1947, Notre Dame steam-rolled over all of its opponents, including a 38-7 burial of third-ranked USC in Los Angeles to end the year, to capture its second straight championship. After finishing third to Army's Glenn Davis in the Heisman balloting in 1946, Lujack won the trophy in '47.

Despite going 9-0-1 in 1948, the Irish were denied a third straight title because of a season-ending tie at unranked USC. But the Irish bounced back up to number one in 1949 as they trounced ranked teams Tulane, Michigan State and USC along the way to their third national title in four years. In 1949, Notre Dame had yet another Heisman winner in end Leon Hart. Hart and Yale's Larry Kelley, the 1937 winner, are the only two linemen to ever win the award.

Three more successful seasons followed, and then Leahy capped off his incredible career by leading the Irish to yet another national championship in 1953. Notre Dame scored with six seconds left before a capacity crowd at Notre Dame Stadium to tie Iowa, preserving the unbeaten season for Leahy who left Notre Dame with an 87-11-9 record.

Terry Brennan, who had played on three national championships for the Irish under

"They are always improving, always practicing to get better," Banks says. "When I'd get down and felt it's wasn't worth it, I'd watch them plugging away. I knew that if I worked like that, maybe everything would come to me; maybe not right away, but sometime."

Banks also credits running back coach Jim Strong with helping him improve his performance.

"He pushes you when you don't want to be pushed. You might think 'what's the point?', but he knows what it takes to be successful on the football field."

Banks says he never thought of joining the Irish during high school ("I didn't know where Notre Dame was."), but the Irish offered the 6-2, 207-pound back from Hayward, Calif., what he wanted.

"As far as picking a school, Notre Dame was definitely the best option for me," Banks says. "They'd give me a good education, an ensured education. Other places didn't stress academics."

"I see football as a means to an end. I can get a future from this school, and the people here hopefully get something from me, as a football player, in return."

The future for Banks looks bright if his ambitions are any indication.

"I want to be a success," he says. "I want to make a lot of money. Football brought me here, and from here I'll go to the working world to make money. I'm going to need it to get what I want to have, which is security."

As for today, Banks has some ideas about the Irish football team. Among them are visions of a bowl game, and Banks says he'd specifically like to play on New Year's Day.

"We'd like to achieve the national championship, if at all possible," he says. "I'd personally like to play in the Orange Bowl. I've watched those teams clash it out, and that's what I want to do."

Until the bowl bids are made, Banks stresses that the team needs to keep playing the way it played against USC last week. He says the defense put up a serious fight to shut down the Trojans after the opening drive, and the offense knew what it had to do - execute.

On a more personal level, Banks is concentrating on building on his successes so far.

"Every week I want to improve, to move closer to where I want to be as a player," he says. "I want to get a few more yards, make a few more plays. If I do that and keep it up, I'll be the player I want to be."

Leahy, took over for his former mentor in 1954, and promptly led the Irish to a 9-1 record and the number-four ranking in the final AP polls. Brennan's Irish were 8-2 in 1955, but the team fell upon hard times in 1956. In the worst season in Irish history to that point, Notre Dame finished 2-8 after opening the season as the third-ranked team in the nation. Humiliating losses to Michigan State and Oklahoma at home (47-14 and 40-0, respectively) led to disenchantment with Brennan. Despite his squad's poor record, Irish quarterback Paul Hornung won the Heisman Trophy. he would later go on to NFL stardom with Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packers.

In 1959, Brennan was replaced with Joe Kuharich. But Kuharich could fare no better, and he left Notre Dame after four years of compiling the lowest winning percentage of any coach in Irish history, .425 (17-23-0). Hugh Devore then returned in 1963 as the administration searched for a permanent replacement. Devore's team stumbled to a 2-7 record, and the outlook was bleak for fans of the Irish.

No one could have known that yet another savior was about to appear to restore the Notre Dame football tradition to its accustomed winning ways - the Ara Parseghian years awaited the hungry supporters of the Fighting Irish.

Leahy doing what he did best - coach

Angelo Bertelli

The Game

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Just a couple of weeks ago, it looked like the Notre Dame football team would be able to choose the score for Saturday's matchup with Navy.

After all, while the ninth-ranked Irish were busy recording their fastest start since 1980, the Midshipmen were taking their lumps against schools like William & Mary and Lehigh and losing their first five games.

But faster than you can say, "Anchors Aweigh," the Middies have corrected themselves. Under first-year coach Elliot Uzelac, Navy toppled Penn, 38-28 on Oct. 17, and gave Pitt all kinds of fits before finally succumbing, 10-6, last Saturday.

Elliot Uzelac

The Notre Dame-Navy rivalry is the oldest intersectional college football rivalry in the country. With the Irish holding a 50-9-1 edge, it also is one of the few sports rivalries more one-sided than the Major League Baseball All-Star Game. But if Notre Dame is to reach a New Year's Day bowl, it is just about essential for the Irish to keep the year's biggest upset from occurring at Notre Dame Stadium on Saturday.

The 5-1 Irish are still 32-point favorites to make it 23 consecutive victories over Navy. But while Navy is 1-6, head coach Lou Holtz is hesitant about going up against this improved and spunkier style of Middleball.

"Don't be deceived by Navy's record, because they've been as competitive as you could want the last three weeks," Holtz says. "They gave Air Force all it could handle two weeks ago and really did a nice job of defending Dee Dowis.

"Then, they come back and beat Penn and they did everything Saturday but beat Pittsburgh. I don't think there's any question that they're playing much better now than they were the first few games of the season."

Notre Dame offense
vs.
Navy defense

Sophomore quarterback Tony Rice has led the Irish to two straight wins since the career-ending injury to Terry Andrysiak against Pitt. Rice is probable for Saturday's game after receiving a concussion, a bruised jaw and 15 stitches last weekend against Southern Cal.

Since Rice's arrival at quarterback, the offense has changed its style, but has been just as effective. In 10 quarters of football with Rice at the helm, the Irish have scored 83 points, and they have averaged over 30 points in the two games where Rice has started.

In those two games, against Air Force and Southern Cal, Rice has thrown just 12 passes, while a senior-dominated offensive line has helped a young rushing attack average over 350 yards on the ground.

No individual Irish running back has had a 100-yard rushing game yet, but Mark Green, Anthony Johnson, Pernell Taylor, Braxton Banks, Ricky Watters, and Tony Brooks all have contributed in a unit that has averaged over five yards a carry in each of the last two games. Banks and Green are the probable starters at fullback and tailback, respectively.

"It's like the Pony Express," Holtz says about the rotating back system. "You don't want to wear out one horse. It's a long trip."

Rice and multi-talented flanker Tim Brown also averaged over five yards a carry in the USC game. Brown will start at flanker Saturday and again figures to be Notre Dame's main receiving threat, with sophomore Pat Terrell starting at split end. Brown had a big game in last year's 33-14 win over Navy, catching seven passes for 184 yards.

The receivers could be featured more if Rice's injury situation gets worse. In that case, the Irish probably will turn to freshman Kent Graham and a pass-oriented offense. Graham completed four of five passes and led the Irish to a field goal in limited action last Saturday.

If the Navy-Pitt game is any indication, the Irish might have a little bit of trouble running with the ball. The Middies held the Pitt offense to just 206 total yards for Navy's best defensive performance in 47 games. This is the same Pitt offense that gained 204 yards just on the ground against Notre Dame two weeks earlier.

David Lowe

"Anytime you hold a team like Pittsburgh to 206 total yards, you've got to be playing with a great deal of emotion and having some success," says Holtz.

The linebacking corps, featuring junior Ray Worthington and sophomore David Lowe outside and junior Mark Pimpo inside, has led the defensive unit.

Navy's offense
vs.
Notre Dame's defense

The last time Navy defeated Notre Dame, back in 1963, a future Heisman Trophy winner named Roger Staubach helped lead the Middies to a 35-14 triumph.

If Navy is to pull off the upset on Saturday, it will do so using a totally different offensive philosophy.

Freshman quarterback Alton Griz-

zard, one of several new faces on the offensive unit, leads a wishbone attack for the Middies. Grizzard earned his first starting assignment for Navy in a 23-13 loss to Air Force. In his last two starts directing the run-oriented offense, he led the Middies to a win over Penn and a near-upset of Pitt. The 5-11, 170-pound freshman set a school record with 225 yards rushing against Penn.

"Grizzard, their quarterback, is in the same situation as Tony Rice," says Holtz. "They're both young and a little bit inexperienced now, but they've both certainly got the potential to be very good quarterbacks."

Navy's leading rusher, Chuck Smith, who missed last year's game with the Irish, has a twisted knee that will probably keep him out of this year's game as well.

Unlike last year, when Navy could not seem to do anything offensively without Smith, falling behind 28-0 en route to the 33-14 loss, the Middies have capable runners in Smith's absence.

Curtis Brown

Sophomore James Bradley and junior Paul Parker both have averaged over five yards per carry for Navy in a rushing offense ranked thirteenth in the country.

To have any chance on Saturday, the Middies will have to get their rushing game going. While Grizzard is Navy's second leading rusher, he only has attempted 32 passes on the season, completing just 10 of those for 143 yards through seven games.

It will be the second time in three weeks the Irish have faced a wishbone attack, following a 35-14 victory over Air Force on Oct. 17.

Kevin Voss

The Irish allowed only two touchdowns to the Falcons that day despite allowing 384 yards of total offense, the greatest offensive outburst against the Irish so far this year.

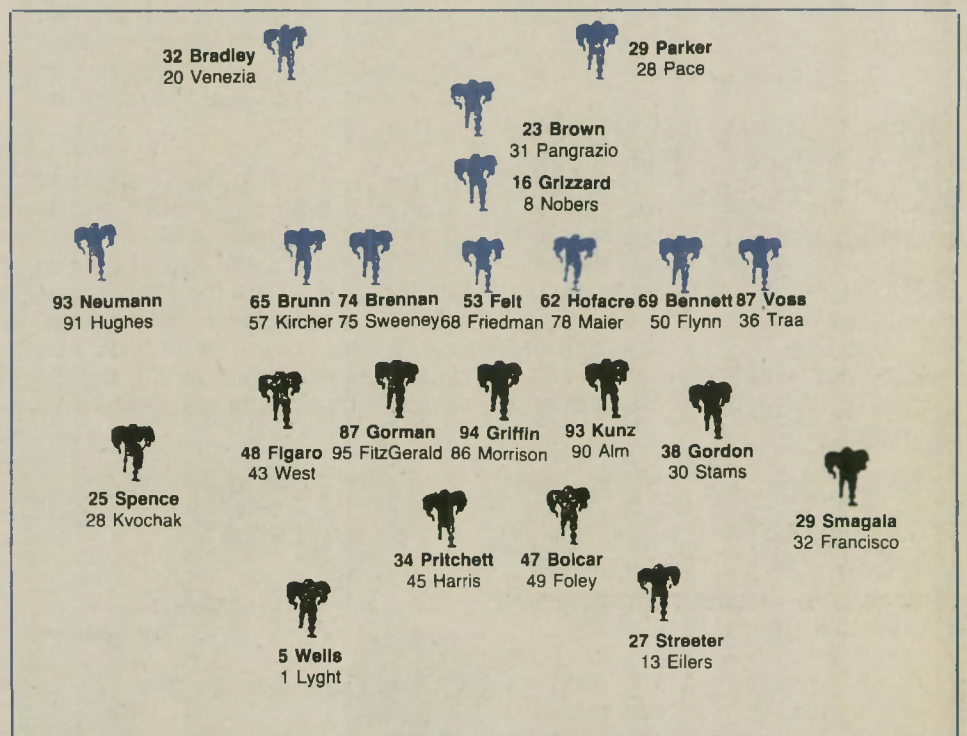

Defensive tackle Brian Flannery who had a big game against Air Force's wishbone, is questionable for Saturday's game after suffering back spasms.

Ned Bolcar, who leads the unit in tackles, will start at inside linebacker for the Irish, with Darrell "Flash" Gordon, Wes Pritchett and Cedric Figaro handling the other backer positions. Tom Gorman, Mike Griffin, and Jeff Kunz will start on the line, with Marve Spence and Stan Smagala as cornerbacks.

George Streeter will be the Irish strong safety, and Brandy Wells will start at free safety in place of Corny Southall, injured with a torn knee ligament for six weeks, at free safety.

SUMMER

Fri Annenberg Auditorium 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Eric Roemer explores the uncertainties of modern romance with this bittersweet comedy. The fifth in his critically acclaimed "Comedies and Proverbs" series, "Summer" stars Marie Riviere as an intelligent and vulnerable young woman spending a vacation alone. Her holiday becomes a journey of self-discovery which is humorous, insightful, and deeply touching.

THE GREEN ROOM

Mon Annenberg Auditorium 7 p.m.

Francois Trauffaut directs the story of a WWII veteran who believes that the dead survive only in the memories of the living and dedicates his life to mourning them. This film is a moving testament to the enduring power of the cinema and the auteur theory articulated by Trauffaut.

THE BLUE ANGEL

Mon Annenberg Auditorium 9 p.m.

The careers of both director Joseph von Sternberg and starring actress Marlene Dietrich were established with this film about a stern professor who is degraded through his love for a cafe entertainer. The mood of the film is gloomy and cruel, a shadowy tale about loss of social status.

TOP SECRET

Tues Annenberg Auditorium 7 and 9 p.m.

Another hit from the wacky team that brought "Airplane" and "Ruthless People" to the screen. Abrahams, Abrahams, and Zucker direct an outrageous and hilarious farce, satirizing various historical periods and film genres. Val Kilmer (the Iceman from "Top Gun") stars as an American rock idol who defeats the Nazis and solves the cold war.

THE PRINCESS BRIDE

Forum Cinema 1:45, 3:45, 5:45, 7:45, and 9:45 p.m.

Rob Reiner and William Goldman teamed up to produce a fairy tale of a film which is delighting audiences across the nation. Carey Elwes and Robin Wright are the star-crossed lovers Westley and Buttercup who romp through adventures and jokes at every turn. Mandy Patinkin, Andre the Giant, Billy Crystal and Carol Kane toss in sterling supporting efforts.

NO WAY OUT

University Park West Cinema 2, 4:30, 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Kevin Costner follows up his solid performance as Elliott Ness in "The Untouchables" with another role in a cop-and-robbers film. Costner plays a naval lieutenant working as an attache to the Secretary of Defense in this tight spy thriller. When he makes the mistake of falling in love with the secretary's lover (Sean Young), he finds himself accused of both murder and treason.

Liza Minelli is preparing to sign on for a sequel to "Arthur," the 1981 movie she starred in with Dudley Moore and John Gielgud. . . . Bruce Willis just began filming 20th Century Fox's "Die Hard" with director John ("Predator") McTiernan. In this projected summer 1988 release Willis plays a New York cop who follows his ex-wife to Los Angeles. . . . A sequel to the 1984 "Ghostbusters" has been under consideration for some time, but may never make it into production because of its bloated budget. Bill Murray wants $8.5 million for his work, and Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis are matching his salary demands. That brings the projected budget up around $40 million. . . . Elizabeth Taylor just finished her national Marshall Fields tour promoting her new perfume. In each city she was forced to hire an extra hotel room just to accommodate her luggage - 23 trunks. . . . Mario Puzo has completed a script for "Godfather III" but Francis Ford Coppola, the director who won best picture Oscars for his work on "The Godfather" in 1972 and on "Godfather II" in 1974, has no interest in directing the third movie. . . . Lorimar Productions are considering backing a movie which would feature NBC's alien puppet ALF. . . . During a concert in Anaheim, CA last July, singer Madonna urged the crowd of 60,000 to ignore the security guards and come "close to me." Four of the concert goers, including a pregnant woman who has since miscarried, have filed charges against the city of Anaheim, claiming that they sustained injuries in the stampede. . . . Sylvester Stallone, still in Israel filming his $40 million "Rambo III" has run into some troubles on the set. Two weeks into shooting he fired director Russell ("Highlander") Mulcahy because they had fallen several days behind schedule and the rushes weren't showing what Stallone wanted to see.

'Suspect' stumbles

ELIZABETH CORNWELL

As "Suspect" opens, the audience is treated to the deliberate, methodical suicide of a Supreme Court Justice. Next we watch a group of elderly polar bear swimmers discover the rotting corpse of a Justice Department secretary floating in the Potomac. Then the police arrest a filthy vagrant, more animal than man, who is lurking in a nearby sewer. Welcome to Christmas in our capitol.

Movie review Suspect

"Suspect" is a courtroom thriller which follows the investigation of public defender Kathleen Riley, played by Cher, as she prepares her defense of the homeless, deaf-mute Vietnam vet being tried for murder. Dennis Quaid is Eddie Sanger, a slick D.C. dairy industry lobbyist who can't get out of jury duty and ends up more involved in the case than is strictly legal.

Riley believes her client is innocent, but the circumstantial evidence against him is strong. Her investigation is hampered by a trial judge who is about to be promoted and wants to wrap this case up as quickly as possible.

Enter Sanger, who notices a thing or two during the trial and decides to help out the pretty P.D. Never mind that contact between a juror and trial attorney is a federal offense. Eddie may be big-city slick, but he's from Wisconsin, which means he's an ethical guy at heart who just can't bear to see an innocent man go down.

Kathleen resists at first, her many years as a devoted public servant leaving her a bit leery of committing a felony. Eventually Sanger's charm and persistence pay off, and the two set out to find the real killer, in spite of all the danger, violence and romance standing in their way.

The acting is strong all around. Coming from her critically acclaimed performances in "Silkwood", "Mask", and most recently, "The Witches of Eastwick," Cher doesn't have to prove she's got talent. Quaid, playing yet another version of the hard-to-not-like charmer we've seen before in "Innerspace" and "The Big Easy" does his usual fine job. Unfortunately, these two strong leads are seriously undermined by a weak script and pretentious, contrived directing which intrudes on almost every scene.

The plot is filled with the unlikeliest of coincidences and the strangest turns of events. But besides concocting a plot which cannot hold together for more than a few minutes at a time, the writers and director indulge in soppy philosophy lectures in between each choppy action scene. Their self-impressed, petty moralizings on everything from the Vietnam war to the social life of public defenders become a quick bore, but are almost preferable to the limp behavior of the principles.

This is the sort of movie where no one does what everyone in the audience knows they should be doing. The heroine walks calmly into the clutches of the waiting bad guy without telling anyone that she knows who committed the crime. Of course the bad guy, given ample opportunity to catch her, decides he'd rather walk than run and lets her get away. "Suspect" is the sort of movie where you'll find yourself talking to the screen in exasperation as the stupid characters make every possible obvious mistake. And how does a financially strapped P.D., living in one of America's most expensive cities manage to afford that black leather wardrobe?

And why is she wearing said wardrobe to court? Enough said.

Quaid and Cher do the best they can to overcome the incredible plot and heavy-handed production team who are bent on investing their slender vehicle with all the serious depths of a Bergman masterpiece. It's not a pretty picture.

The battle for mail supremacy

We have a number of untouchables on campus. Touch any one of them, and you're left thinking you just made bodily contact with a porcupine. That's okay with me. When you tell the immediate world where the bodies are buried, you're asking for trouble. There's some jostling of untouchables you do for the thrill of it; some jostling you do for a crown of thorns, which I'm halfway entitled to wear, since half the time, I'm into good-nature, sincere, responsible pro bono jostling which makes me a credit to my religious Community.

There's something on this campus too sacredly untouchable to be jostled by anybody, and that's the mailbox. Early in a confessional. Students, mistaking it for a broad-shouldered priest, kneel down in front of it and tell it their sins.

The whole irresponsible game leaves me sick. Everyone needs a mailbox to which he gives landmark status. You put things in a mailbox that you're reluctant to put in your mouth, i.e., postage stamps, maybe a dollar's worth. You put things in a mailbox that you'd be embarrassed to show your mother, like love letters that you can't write in the sand. You put things in a mailbox that you've pinned your dreams to: lottery tickets. You put things in a mailbox that men have killed for: the payoff to your bookie. You put things in a mailbox that peace in your time depends on: an alimony check. You put things in a mailbox that could change the course of government: an absentee ballot. You put things in a mailbox that could make heroes of the lads who can't shoot straight: Digger's game plan. Why you'd be mailing his game plan, unless you yourself were Digger, or whether Digger has a game plan, I have no way of knowing; I'm not a sports columnist, and I don't attend basketball games. But you get the idea: Mailboxes have more secrets to keep than a psychiatrist. A mailbox that became self-ambulatory would have to be put out of service. Students that supply a mailbox with legs, should have their own legs tapped at the kneecap, gangland style. That's treating them so mildly, it looks like turning the other cheek.

I used to worry about putting my mail in a box that waits outside through the night in bad weather, and is in plain view, tempting J.Q. Public to get silly; the potential butt of any misfit that hates mailboxes, because he never writes letters or gets letters.

I was finally persuaded that it looked paranoid when I insisted on bringing my one weekly letter to the post office, to mail it in the inside box. All of us are partners in a covenant of trust, which may represent the final outpost of social decency. No Domer worth his salt would tolerate the idea that mail, which the post office would protect from hail and sleet, was in danger from an outbreak of Saturday night fever, which made the natives restless.

I started using the corner mailbox: the same one that was abused last weekend, and left lying in the mud looking like a beached baby whale.

What can be done to prevent a recurrence? Perhaps the postmaster could get a clue from the Food Service personnel dealing with food fights in the dining hall. Perhaps the postmaster could announce, that as a result of one postal box rendered slightly hors de combat by a dolt wanting to tilt with a windmill, the students have forfeited the right to have their Halloween and Thanksgiving mail, their Christmas packages, and their birthday cards, delivered to them or otherwise handed out; and that one more episode of mail boxes, disguised to look like ticket scalpers, holding court in the Oak Room, will be punished by the post office's refusal to handle incoming or outgoing Valentines during the week of February 14. Easter and Mother's Day cards can be looked at later.

Am I serious? I'm more than serious: I'm p----d! This country hasn't seen such an outrage since the days of the Pony Express. If I catch the idiot, untouchable with a ten-foot pole, who has been taking my favorite mailbox on clandestine walks, I'll see that he's run out of town with the junk mail. This is a war to the death in defense of mail domination, and there can be no neutrals.

Otherwise, welcome back to the Emerald City. Darby O'Gill and I never said we didn't miss you.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

for the hell of it; some jostling you do for the sport of it; some jostling you do to be noticed; some jostling you do to get people looking in the other direction, so you will not be noticed; some jostling you do in the interest of promoting jostling as an artform; some jostling you do as a marathon jostler, trying to see how many untouchables you can get ticked off at you at the same time, the same place, and for the same reason; it's more like juggling than it is jostling; but some day they'll offer a gold medal for it as a public service.

It must be plain that a catalogue of the varieties of jostling could be endless and tiring. I hope before I die to try all of them. It takeschutzpah to engage in experimental jostling, as though you were the only guy on your block to be so free of sin that you can be the first to cast stones at randomly chosen untouchables, no matter how sensitive. It takes grace under pressure to rattle the cages where the closet untouchables live behind bars, knowing all the time that you're living in a glass house which is not impervious to stones. That's fine with me, because then I can get mea-

Saturday morning, I found the mailbox near the North Dining Hall had been knocked over and left lying on its side. Mailboxes in my home were as untouchable as smoke alarms, which are no laughing matter, either. I thought: "It would be less shocking to meet vandals spray-painting the steps of the church." Vandals committing sacrilege, you figure, are answerable to God, who could punish them with an outbreak of boils. Vandals laying violent hands on a mailbox are liable to be penalized by Uncle Sam. How's he going to defend his property? Send in the Marines? Turn the North Quad into another bloody Vietnam? Drop napalm on the guerillas who treat U.S. mailboxes as toys? It could be an ugly mess that extends beyond this generation.

A postal worker I met on Monday told me of students at this Christian university who are trying to turn the ad libitum rotation of mailboxes on this campus into a varsity sport. Under the cover of darkness, the Zahm mailbox appears in back of Farley. Farley's mailbox is left at the Grotto. Dillon's mailbox makes its appearance

Mattingly an AP All-Star for fourth time

Associated Press

NEW YORK - New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly is the first player voted to The Associated Press major-league All-Star team for four consecutive years, while San Diego catcher Benito Santiago is the first-ever rookie and one of eight first-time selections.

Other first-time winners announced Thursday were Wade Boggs of the Red Sox at third base, Juan Samuel of the Phillies at second, George Bell of the Blue Jays in left, Jimmy Key of the Blue Jays as left-handed pitcher, Steve Bedrosian of the Phillies as relief pitcher, Paul Molitor of the Brewers as designated hitter, and Alan Trammell of the Tigers at shortstop.

Two other players repeated from 1986 - Kirby Puckett of the World Series champion Twins in center field and Roger Clemens of the Red Sox as right-handed pitcher.

Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs, last an AP all-Star in 1983, was named right-fielder.

Clemens' victory margin was the largest on the team, which was selected by print and broadcast members of The Associated Press. He beat Nolan Ryan of the Astros 167-12.

NEW YORK - Sparky Anderson, who led the Detroit Tigers to the best record in baseball this season, on Thursday was named American League Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America for the second time in four years.

Anderson, also named Manager of the Year in 1984 when the Tigers won the World Series, received 11 first-place votes and a total of 90 points in balloting by a panel of two BBWAA members from each AL city.

Tom Trebelhorn of the Milwaukee Brewers was second with 78 points and seven first-place votes, followed by Tom Kelly of the World Series champion Minnesota Twins with 74 points and 10 first-place votes.

"It certainly helps that they have the experience from previous years, but we're not a powerhouse team by any stretch of the imagination," said Schafer. "We're a good team that's strong at all positions. The big factor will be how hard they work in the game, and I have reason to believe they will work hard."

The lineup that will start tonight for the Irish includes senior Mike McNeill at center, sophomore Bruce Guay at left wing, senior Tom Mooney at right wing, junior Bob Bilton and senior Lance Patten on defense and sophomore Lance Madson at goal. Action starts at 7:30 in the Joyce ACC, and the two teams will meet again at the same time and place Saturday. Admission is free to both contests with a student ID.

On offense, McNeill, a South Bend native and graduate of St. Joseph's High School, is expected to be Notre Dame's top scorer for the third consecutive year. McNeill has averaged over 20 goals and 20 assists in his three years with the Irish.

scoring 27 goals and notching 40 assists over four years. Despite these impressive statistics, however, he was not intent on playing professionally.

"There is one person who stands out and poses a threat every time he steps on the ice, and that's Mike McNeill," said Schafer. "He'll get plenty of ice time."

Of course, Schafer also realizes that after the same person has led a team in scoring for two years, opponents can get a pretty good idea of who to concentrate on stopping.

"Because he's been around, he'll probably be watched more carefully than others," Schafer said. "I've moved (Kevin) Markovitz up to the forward position because he's a very clever stickhandler and playmaker."

As a freshman defenseman last season, Markovitz led the Irish with 18 assists. This year he will play center on the second front line with Matt Hanzel and Tim Kuehl. Chris Olsen, John Welsch and Brian Montgomery make up the third front line.

Bob Bilton centers the fourth line, flanked by Bob Herber and Tom Smith.

On defense, Schafer is counting on the senior leadership of Patten and Pat Foley to improve a unit that allowed slightly more than four goals a game last season. But Schafer also believes more help from the offense is necessary in improving the defense.

"Our defense doesn't rest solely on the goalie and the defensive unit, the forwards play an integral part," said Schafer. "It can't just be three forwards making a mad dash toward the goal - there still has to be a mad dash back toward the defensive zone."

Tim Caddo and Bruce Haikola make up the second defensive unit, and Mike Leherr and Roy Bemiss comprise the third unit.

some good friends from that year."

Schafer then returned to the United States and took the job of assistant coach at Notre Dame, a position he held until the end of 1979.

"After the '79 season, I saw the opportunity at Alaska-Fairbanks to be a head coach," he says. "I took the job and began to build the program, from the ground up."

But Alaska-Fairbanks?

"It definitely presented a challenge, and there was also the allure of Alaska," he explains. "Sure, I had moments when I wondered what I was doing there. There were a lot of cold, cold nights. But I'm glad I stuck it out."

In his first season as head coach at Alaska-Fairbanks, the Nanooks (no kidding, that's their nickname) finished with one win and 23 losses. The next season saw an improvement to 2-21. But Schafer persisted.

"We really had to work our tails off recruiting," he adds. "We had to build a foundation from guys that other schools passed up. We all worked our tails off."

The work paid off when Schafer's squad finished 19-7 in the 1982-83 season, and then went all the way to the NCAA Division II semi-finals the following year.

The Nanooks moved up to Division I for the 1984-85 season and won 21 games. Schafer guided Alaska-Fairbanks to 20 wins in each of the last two seasons, including three victories over Notre Dame.

"When the Notre Dame job opened up, I was really excited," comments Schafer. "I am really happy to be a part of ND again."

Junior overcomes injury

Kibelstis back for NSC Meet

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

The wait is finally over for junior cross country standout Terry Kibelstis.

After being sidelined with a stress fracture for seven weeks, Kibelstis will rejoin the women's squad when the harriers compete in the North Star Conference Meet Saturday in Milwaukee.

The return will give Coach Dan Ryan and the rest of the squad a big boost heading into the final leg of the season. Even with the impressive third-place finish at the Indiana Intercollegiate last weekend, the team has been struggling with consistency and has yet to put together a full team effort. Ryan hopes Kibelstis will be the answer to those woes.

"Her return will definitely help," Ryan said. "She looks strong. Her return will give us more depth and keep the time gap down."

Kibelstis ran the first two meets of the season, taking fourth place at Purdue with a 19:04 clocking and third at the Detroit Invitational in a time of 19:35. She first felt the injury at Purdue, and then the pain came back at Detroit.

A basic scan turned up the stress fracture, and then, to everyone's surprise, doctors found another painless fracture in her other leg. It looked as if a once-promising season was over.

"It's been really difficult," Kibelstis said. "I was in pain when it happened, but since then I haven't had any real pain. I felt like I could run, but my body wasn't ready for it."

While it may have been hard to watch her fellow runners compete from the sidelines, the road back to top form may be even more difficult for Kibelstis. She was in good condition at the beginning of the season, but now finds herself starting over.

"I didn't think I would be back this year," she said. "I haven't even run a complete workout yet, and everyone can hear me coming with my deep breathing."

Kibelstis broke onto the cross country scene as a sophomore when the program went to the varsity level. Her biggest problem was making the adjustment to the college level, the most noticeable difference in the 30-mile high school weeks as compared to the 80 miles ran the first week of college practice. She placed 27th at the Hillsdale Invitational and 26th at the Indiana Intercollegiate in what she termed an "up and down year."

While Kibelstis would like to regain the form she had at the beginning of the season, she will be satisfied with breaking into the top seven.

"The way my first two races went gave me a lot of confidence," she said. "And hopefully that will carry over. I'm just hoping to be ready for the district race (in two weeks). This race will be more of just getting back into the swing of it."

With the entire lineup healthy again, Ryan thinks the Irish can give defending champ DePaul and co-favorite Dayton a run for their money.

Soccer team battling strong field for NCAA bid

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Although the schedule lists UCLA and San Diego State as the opponents for the Irish soccer team this weekend, Notre Dame also will be battling Akron and Evansville.

The battle between the Irish, Zips and Purple Aces will not take place on the field, however. These three teams have to fight it out in the win-loss column and through their schedules for a bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Because the situation is so complicated, you have to look at several factors at once to understand why Notre Dame hasn't locked up a bid with a 14-1-1 record:

- The Great Lakes Region. The 24 bids are determined by region, with each of the eight regions getting two automatic bids (which are NOT based on the regional coaches' poll) and the final eight bids going to at-large teams. Thus it is imperative to do well in your region. And even though the Irish are the only team to beat Indiana this season, the Hoosiers have all but locked up the first automatic bid, and Evansville and Akron also have done well.

So the trio is left to slug it out for the second automatic bid and possibly one or two at-large bids.

- Schedules. The only problem with slugging it out for the bids is that Notre Dame doesn't have Akron and Evansville on its schedule this season. How do you determine which team is better than the other?

- Power ratings. A power rating not only takes into account the won-loss record, but also the quality of the opponent played (based on a 1-2-3-4-5 system). In this system the strength of the team's schedule becomes the most important factor in giving out bids. That is why Evansville and Akron have worse records than Notre Dame but still have equal if not better chances to make the tournament. Evansville has beaten three Top-20 opponents, and Akron plays several such teams in tournaments the next two weekends. The Irish have only played one ranked team before this weekend, and that was early in the season, another factor included in the ratings. The 3-1 loss to Portland also hurt.

According to Jim Byers, Athletic Director at Evansville and the head of the Great Lakes Region committee, the three teams, as well as Wisconsin and Bowling Green, all have chances to make the tournament, although it is hard to tell because there are so many good teams across the nation this season.

IH soccer playoffs set to begin

By ROB PIERCE
Sports Writer

Now the fun begins.

The drugery of the regular season is finally over in men's interhall soccer, and it's playoff time for those who survived. Two teams from each division will battle to see who will be called champion.

In the Western European Division, action went down to the wire as Stanford and Zahm A moved into the playoffs with victories in the final games of the season. Stanford clinched a berth with a 1-0 win over a stubborn Keenan Blue team Wednesday. Ted Kommers scored the lone goal and goalie John Sheehan recorded the shutout for the Studs, who finished the regular season at 4-1.

Zahm met Pangborn last night at Stepan Field, with the winner advancing and the loser left with an early vacation. The game lived up to its billing as the teams battled to a scoreless tie through regulation, two overtimes, and the first round of a penalty kick shootout. Finally, on the second sudden death kick, Zahm senior Mark McCormick scored to clinch the victory. The goal spoiled an exceptional performance by Pangborn keeper Derik Weldon, who also scored one of his team's penalty kicks. Zahm goalie John Gisleson showed equal prowess in blanking the Violence through overtime and allowing only three of seven penalty kicks to find the net.

In the North American Division, a three-way tie between Fisher, Flanner F.C., and Sorin has forced a divisional playoff to determine which two will qualify for postseason play.

Fisher defeated winless Cavanaugh 2-0 Wednesday to force the logjam at the top. Behind goals by Mike Shimota and captain Tom Cramer and the shutout by goalie Jim Turecek, Fisher charges into the "second season" coming off its best effort of the year.

Flanner received the bye in a drawing and will face the winner of Fisher-Sorin. Those teams battled on the last weekend of the regular season, with Fisher gaining a 1-0 decision, and a similar struggle is expected when they meet again.

In the South American Division, the defending league champions, the Off-Campus Hoobers, displayed a dominance which has observers talking dynasty. In an era when seemingly no team can repeat, the Hoobers are heavy favorites to recapture the title. They were 6-0 in the regular season, but even more impressive was that they did not allow a single goal in any of those games while scoring 20 of their own.

"We had a great season," said Hoobers captain Dave Thompson. "We expect to win the title again."

Morrissey A will also represent this division in the playoffs, as it finished in second place with a 5-1 record. The only blemish came at the feet of the Hoobers, who edged Morrissey 1-0 in overtime in their biggest challenge of the regular season.

Holy Cross A and Flanner B will represent the European Division in this year's playoffs. Holy Cross finished with a perfect 6-0 record, while Flanner fought to a respectable 4-2 mark and second place finish.

The final spot was in doubt until Wednesday's match pitting Flanner against Dillon A. Flanner won the game and the post-season berth, 1-0, as Doug Radtke scored the gamewinner and captain Tom Maloney registered the shutout in goal.

Irish soccer faces SDSU, UCLA in Metropolitan Life Tourney

By MOLLY MAHONEY
and PETE GEGEN
Sports Writers

The Notre Dame soccer team will try to rebound from last week's loss to Portland against national powerhouses UCLA and San Diego State in the Metropolitan Life Tournament on the West Coast this weekend.

Notre Dame enters the tourney against the two nationally-ranked schools hoping to bring home a pair of victories to end its six-game road swing.

The games grow more important to the 14-1-1 Irish as the season draws to an end and the bids to the NCAA Championships, for which only 24 teams can qualify, become scarce.

"It is very conceivable that we can qualify," said senior co-captain Steve Lowney. "If we do well against UCLA and San Diego State and win our last three games, we'll go to the NCAA's."

This tournament is one of the strongest in the nation, as all four teams are currently ranked in the Top-10 in at least one the two national polls.

The fourth team in the tournament is 15-2-0 Indiana, the top-ranked team in the nation. Because the Hoosiers play a much stronger schedule than the Irish (10 Top-20 teams versus three), Notre Dame has to prove itself all over again this weekend in order to get a bid - not with another match against Indiana, but through comparisons of Notre Dame's matches to Indiana's performances against the Aztecs and the Bruins.

"They're the young upstarts, but there's questions," Indiana head coach Jerry Yeagely said of the Irish. "They have to show they're competitive with the Far West teams. Even if they don't win or tie they can prove themselves - they just can't get blown out."

As you might expect, the games will not be easy ones for Notre Dame. The 10th-ranked Bruins enter the game with momentum after beating Santa Clara and 12th-ranked San Francisco.

"They have good individual skill and attract the top-notch athletes," said Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "They are unbelievably talented. The whole team is capable of hurting you."

San Diego State, however, is doing even better. Currently ranked first in the Far West region and eighth nationally, the Aztecs have shut out 11 opponents this season.

It will be a high-pressure weekend for Notre Dame. Not only does the squad want two more wins, but the team also must face the inevitable comparisons to Indiana this weekend and, more importantly, prove itself to the skeptics.

Randy Morris (5) races for the ball against Indiana's Sean Shapert in Notre Dame's 4-3 victory over the Hoosiers earlier in the year. The Irish soccer team is looking to earn a bid to the NCAA Tournament with a strong showing in the Metropolitan Life Tournament this weekend.

Irish hockey opens season under Schafer

Veteran team opens with Windsor, Ont.

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

For the first time since 1926, a Notre Dame hockey team will start a season without Charles "Lefty" Smith directing the Irish.

And new coach Ric Schafer, in his first year replacing the man who reestablished the hockey program in 1968, is confident the Irish will make this a season to remember.

"The will to win has been there, but now we'll just have to do more to ensure those wins," said Schafer, whose squad opens the season tonight against Windsor. "This team lost far too many close games last year - now it's our turn to to change that."

Notre Dame finished last season with a 10-19-1 record, with a 5-11-1 mark in games decided by two goals or less, and with a 2-11-1 record on the road. The Irish lost only two players to graduation, but Schafer isn't so sure the extra year of experience will make a coach Ric Schafer at the Joyce ACC. The Irish take on the University of Windsor, Ontario.

First-year skipper no stranger

By CHRIS DALLAVO
Sports Writer

Nanook of the North has come back home.

Ric Schafer, a former Irish hockey captain and assistant coach, has returned to become Notre Dame's new head coach. Schafer was the head man for Alaska-Fairbanks for the past seven seasons, starting that program from scratch.

"I've got a lot of fond memories from this place," Schafer says, "and I'm extremely pleased to be back. We are on a mission to restore Notre Dame hockey to the stature it was at."

Schafer replaces the man who guided the varsity hockey program for all of its 19 years, Charles "Lefty" Smith.

"The most important thing that I learned from Lefty was how to deal with players," Schafer notes. "He cares about his players almost to a fault, almost too much."

As a player for Notre Dame, Schafer played in 139 games,

Offensive line has Holtz smiling in '87

What a difference a year makes.

Last year, heading into the Navy game, the Irish were a gutwrenching 2-4. Close, disappointing losses were the standard.

This year's standard is winning - convincingly. Instead of glumly groping for explanations after games, Head Coach Lou Holtz has been able to smile and laugh with reporters afterward. Yes, he still has concerns with a defense beset with injuries and two quarterbacks who are, as Holtz said at his weekly press conference Tuesday, "only eight weeks old."

With a 'baby' at quarterback, Holtz has turned to the old men of his squad - the offensive line. With four fifth-year starters, the line has opened up highways for Irish ballcarriers. In two games, Notre Dame quarterbacks Tony Rice and Kent Graham have thrown the ball 17 times while handing off 137 times for 705 yards.

It's not often that a line gets attention. It's in vogue with sportswriters to say that, but this time it's deserved. They've been the reason for Notre Dame's success this season.

Last Saturday afternoon was unofficially Fruit Salad Day in the Notre Dame press box. Representatives from the Orange, Sugar, Citrus and Peach Bowls were present as were reps from the Cotton, Fiesta, Gator, Liberty, Freedom, Hall of Fame, Sun and Bluebonnet Bowls. With all those coats up there, it was more like an upholsterer's convention than a football game.

Dennis Corrigan
Sports Editor

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that the Irish are still a prime contender for any bowl on any day in America. Tuesday, Holtz reluctantly discussed the goals he and his squad laid out for themselves before the season and assessed where they stand.

"We listed four goals before the season," Holtz said. "One was to have a winning season, which we have a chance to have this Saturday. The second was to play in a bowl game. Then if we were to play in a bowl game, it would be nice to play on January first. If we were playing on Jan. 1, then we would want to win the National Championship."

"Every week I go over our four goals - where we are on them, if they're realistic and if they're still alive. All four goals are possible. I'll be the first to grant you it's one in a million, but we still have a chance."

Monday, Oct. 19, is definitely a date that will live in history. The stock market fell more than 500 points in a single day, U.S. forces bombed Iranian bases on oil wells, and George Steinbrenner hired Billy Martin to manage the Yankees for the fifth time.

The world's a strange, interesting and sometimes frightening place.

Game of the Week - As the endearing South Bend temperatures begin their inexorable climb downward, Irish athletics begin to take to the great indoors. Friday night the Notre Dame hockey team opens its season with the first of two games against Windsor University of Canada on the rink at the Joyce ACC. There's a new face behind the boards for the Irish this season in Head Coach Ric Schafer. Don't miss his debut. Admission to both games is free to students with their I.D.
