ND's '88 debate readies candidates

By JIM WINKLER
Staff Reporter

The race for the next Notre Dame student body president is drawing close as candidates prepare for the annual debate on Sunday, Feb. 14.

The nine candidates for student body president have all been invited to participate in the debate in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium at 7:30 p.m., said Erika Olmsted, presidential debate committee chairwoman.

By 5 p.m. Thursday, seven tickets had indicated to Ombudsman that they would take part in the debate. The two remaining tickets have until Friday afternoon to respond.

The debate will begin with opening statements from each candidate, not to exceed two and a half minutes in length, Olmsted said.

ND/SMC ELECTIONS '88

Candidates' statements will be followed by questions from campus media sources and a 30-minute open question session. They will then be allowed two minutes for closing remarks. The Ombudsman will serve as official

Rep. Richard Gephardt turned on Democratic presidential rival Michael Dukakis on Thursday, declaring him ignorant of the "complexities of trade policy." Vice President George Bush pleaded with Republicans to help him stem Bob Dole's tide in New Hampshire.

"I'm working my heart out here. So can you help me?" said the struggling GOP front-runner.

Dole sounded like a man on a roll, delivering a speech on the deficit and declaring, "I want to be nice to everybody this week."

Dukakis, the leader in New Hampshire's tightening Democratic contest, stressed his role as opponent of the unopened Seabrook nuclear power plant as he campaigned in front of a clam bar designated as an evacuation shelter in case of accident.

Jesse Jackson and Sen. Al Gore shunned New Hampshire, Gore touting his chances in southern states that vote next month while Jackson aimed a few barbs at his rivals.

Dukakis has "every advantage," he said. "He lives there. He is at home, he's dripping in money. And of course Dukakis, Gephardt and Simon are using money and commercials. I'm using message, service and experience."

SMC Task Force to study minority issues

By BRADLEY GALKO
Staff Reporter

A report on minority students by Saint Mary's Diversification Task Force will be presented to the College's president and Board of Regents in April, said Pamela Bethel, task force member.

The task force's purpose is "to come up with an action plan for the recruiting and retention of minority students," and "to develop ideas to promote a more culturally aware campus," said Bethel, adding that the plan will also extend to recruiting more minority faculty and staff.

Mary Ann Rowan, task force chairwoman and Saint Mary's director of admissions, was unavailable for comment.

Minority students constitute a "really small percentage" of Saint Mary's student body, Bethel said. Present efforts of the task force to increase this number have concentrated on studying and working with other schools around the country, she said. She explained that this has been accomplished through questionnaires sent to other schools, guest speakers, and attendance of regional conferences on the subject of minority recruitment by task force members.

"A lot of (other) schools have good programs . . . to recruit and serve minority students," Bethel said.

Many decisions still have to be made by the task force, said Bethel, such as whether or not only one or two minorities should be concentrated on, what services should be developed, and exactly how they should be developed. She said it will take a "well-

Making the grade: Are pass/fail courses worth it?

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

A 'P' may stand for 'passing' under the pass/fail grade option, but it also may mean 'penalty' for juniors and seniors who are considering post-graduate studies.

The pass/fail option was instituted in 1970 in an attempt to give students the opportunity to explore courses outside their majors, without the pressures of grading.

But graduate and professional schools are now questioning whether applicants are merely trying to take the easy way out in lightening his or her course load, said Robert Waddick, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

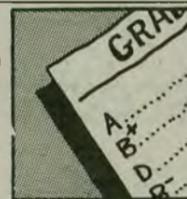

"It is understandable that many admissions officers are already discounting it (a grade-point average) more if there is a large proportion of pass/fail grades," Waddick said, citing a 1970 statement issued by the Law School Admission Council.

Waddick said law schools and graduate schools weigh the mandatory tests (LSAT and GRE) more for students with pass/fail grades. "What that report said then is still true today," he said.

Under the University's academic code, a junior or senior may take one pass/fail elective course each semester. Grades 'A' through 'D' are considered passing, and no notification of the student's intent is given to the professor.

Waddick said he discourages the 30 percent of the graduating class who seek to enter graduate and professional schools from taking pass/fail courses because of the position taken by admissions committees. "A 'P' can be read as a 'D'," he said.

Vincent Raymond, associate dean of the College of Business Administration, said he agrees that pass/fail courses are not a good idea for those applying to law school and graduate school.

Waddick advised that students interested in post-graduate studies who wish to take a pass/fail course should wait until the eighth

"Louie, Louie" may be a rock 'n' roll classic, but it's never been considered classical music -- at least until now. WQED-FM, a classical music station intrigued by an AM rival's 63-hour "Louie, Louie" marathon, had three local classical artists record versions of the 1963 garage band hit and is playing them several times an hour. Pittsburgh Symphony pianist Patricia Prattis Jennings, pianist Christopher O'Riley and cellist Carter Brey and the Con Spirito Woodwind Quintet all recorded their interpretations of "Louie, Louie" this week. -Associated Press

Valentine's Day or no: Love really stinks

*Well, you love her,
 But she loves him
 And he loves somebody else
 You just can't win
 And so it goes 'til
 The day you die
 This thing they call love
 Is gonna make you cry . . .
 Love stinks. Yeh, yeh
 Love stinks. Yeh, yeh*

Mike Naughton

Features Editor

Valentine's Day is my favorite holiday of the year, but you probably wouldn't know that from the way I act.

I don't participate in traditional Valentine's Day rituals; I haven't given anyone a card since third grade and don't intend to start now. I don't eat valentine candies because they taste like old chalk, and I don't like valentine hearts because they don't look enough like the real thing.

Despite this, I really do enjoy Feb. 14. Valentine's Day is my favorite holiday of the year because it proves once and for all, conclusively and undeniably, beyond all doubt, that love stinks.

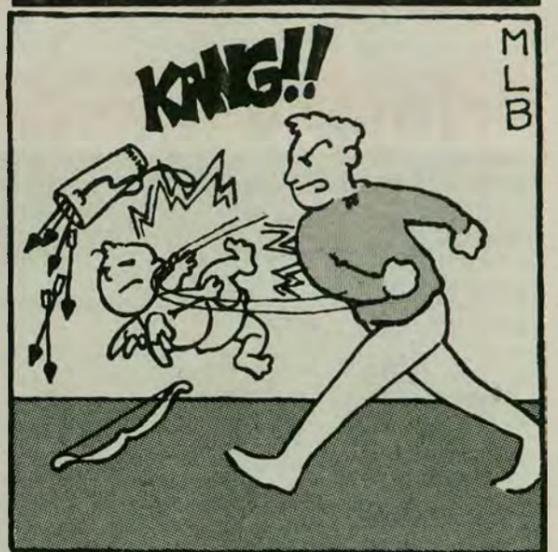

I have to confess that even I, a self-proclaimed Cupid-slayer, feel a tug at my heart now and then and begin to wonder if there really is something to this love business. But then V-day rolls around, and I regain my sense of perspective when I see what love is really all about.

Watching idiots blow their paychecks for roses which will survive one week (on a relationship which will survive two) warms my heart. Seeing crowds of students lined up like cattle as they wait to get their Valentine's Day personals in The Observer always puts me in a good mood. And nothing makes my day quite like hearing some poor slob moan about how he sent out 30 cards and hasn't got a single one himself.

You see, I really do enjoy Valentine's Day because little displays like these help me appreciate the nobility of not having a scope.

Some people have called me "cynical," and I appreciate the compliment, but in the case of love, I really don't think that I deserve the praise. From everything that I have seen, love really deserves to be hated.

If love was a good thing I would be into it whole-heartedly, I would carelessly and casually fall in love with someone new every day of the week. I would sigh and feel sorry for myself when things didn't work out and act giddy and silly when they did. I would make wishes to the moon, pick flowers, write lousy poetry, walk around the lake, and spend all my money without apology. But love isn't a good thing. It's a terrible, awful, nasty thing that makes jack-asses out of normal people. Not all love stinks. Loving your parents is natural enough. I love to go out on weekends. You can love Notre Dame, and love of country is admirable enough. God loves everyone, so does Gary Hart.

But the love I'm talking about isn't like these other loves: It's that romantic, sappy, I-can't-live-without-someone-else-to-hold-my-hand-and-sigh-when-I-sigh kind of love. That kind of love stinks.

Even though I have declared myself a contentious objector in the battle of the sexes, I am still open to the possibility of love. All that I have to is meet someone who is intelligent, beautiful, rich and generous who will be there when I need her but never make demands on my freedom.

Now, that's not too much to ask for, is it?
 Happy St. Valentine's Day.
 Love, Mike.

Former Reagan aide convicted on felonies

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's onetime political director, Lyn Nofziger, was convicted Thursday of illegally lobbying top White House aides by jurors who said they had no trouble finding evidence of influence-peddling.

"The evidence just kept coming up all the time," said Towana Braxton, the foreman of the federal court jury that convicted Nofziger of three counts of illegally representing private clients at the White House within a year of his resignation from Reagan's staff in January 1982.

The jury, which deliberated about six hours, cleared Nofziger of a fourth illegal lobbying charge and acquitted his partner, Mark Bragg, of a nation, has become a struggle to survive:

Nofziger, the first former high government official convicted under the revolving-door provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, attacked the statute as a "lousy law" and compared his offense with "running a stop sign."

"I feel I am innocent. I don't think I did anything wrong," said Nofziger, 63, whose lawyers vowed to appeal the convictions.

The former White House political director, who dates his association to the president back to Reagan's days as governor of California, could receive a maximum two-year sentence and a $10,000 fine for each of three convictions.

But lawyers familiar with the candidacy jeopardized by Robertson's strong showing in Monday's Iowa caucuses, laid plans to attack the former minister in a Washington speech on Friday.

Dole's senior aides decided tentatively not to use a commercial depicting Bush as a raise in the minimum grade to a 'C', he said, would make passfail more challenging, rather than a free ride.

About 25 percent of junior and senior business majors take a passfail class each semester, said Raymond. He said he also noted an increase in the number of students taking passfail classes in recent years.

No one in the Office of the Registrar was available for comment on the number of students enrolled in passfail courses.

Waddick and Raymond both said they would prefer passfail grading to be dropped in most instances. "I would like to see it abolished, unless students follow the true spirit" of the grading system, said Raymond.

For those moving into the work force after graduation, Waddick said passfail does not have a large effect. An employer generally does not place as much emphasis on passfail, he said.

Excitement in infancy keeps mind sharp, scientists find

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A little excitement in infancy can lead to a sharper mind and clearer thinking in old age, according to a group of researchers studying the effects of aging on the brains of laboratory rats.

Robert Sapolsky, a Stanford

University researcher, said he and a group of Canadian scientists found that giving a little handling to infant rats imprinted a hormonal response that led eventually to a smaller loss of learning ability and memory when the rats reached old age.

"This is currently a rat story, and it's not clear if this is a human story, but that is what we're working on," said Sapolsky.

He said the scientists conducted the experiment using two groups of infant rats. One group was taken from their cages and placed in a bed of wood shavings for a brief time. The other group was left in their cages and received no handling.

Later, the two groups were put through a maze to test their ability to think and learn.

After 2 years, said Sapolsky, the tests showed that the rats that had received the additional stimulation of being handled early in life were clearly able to think and learn more quickly than the rats that weren't handled.

Sapolsky said the experiment proved that the mere act of adding sensory stimulation to the lives of the rats at a very early age enabled them to more efficiently handle stress throughout their lives. And by coping more efficiently with stress, the rats secrete less of a class of hormones called glucocorticoids. He said these hormones are known to cause the loss of brain cells that are critical in the thought processes.

"Lots of these hormones and lots of stress will accelerate neuron death in the brain," he said. "And this happens in a part of the brain that has a lot to do with learning and memory. It will accelerate some of the learning deficits (associated with aging)."

Sapolsky said the simple act of handling the rats seems to determine exactly how the rats respond to stress.

"It turns out that what handling (the rats) does is make a very, very sharp, well-defined brake (on the stress response)," he said. "As a result of the brake working better" the rat throughout its life secretes less brain-damaging hormone.

Sapolsky said autopsies of the rats showed that the handled rats had fewer killed neurons than the rats that had not been handled. And the only difference in their life, he said, had been that brief period of additional attention during infancy.

He said it is not clear if the response of the rats provides a model for a similar phenomenon in humans or if this finding would have any application in better understanding senility or Alzheimer's disease.

The film is very well done, and Frears proves himself to be a superior director. However, it should be said that this film can be difficult to watch at times.

The "perfect teengage couple" at their Wisconsin high school Darcy Elliot (Molly Ringwald) and Stan Bobruzc (Randall Batinkoff) find themselves with an unthinkable problem -- Darcy is pregnant. Are all their plans for the future over? Will Stan study architecture at Cal Tech and will Darcy become a journalist at their state university? Unlike most stories which deal with teenage pregnancy, this film offers an optimistic view of the situation. Darcy and Stan are presented as strong individuals who are truly in love, so that with these characteristics they have a fighting chance.

Rock with a twist

MARK NEMEC

A publication once described one of their recent concerts as having everything a concert should have "with the exception of drugs, alcohol, profanity, topless women, and vulgar lyrics" -- and they are coming to South Bend.

Eddie DeGarmo and Dana Key are coming to Saint Mary's O'Laughlin Auditorium Saturday night, riding a wave of new Christian contemporary music that has made Amy Grant and the rock group Stryper famous. The difference is, that these two have been singing about Jesus for ten years.

DeGarmo and Key have known each other since high school and during that time, went through many different "garage" bands. Gradually they gained popularity and, while with a group called "Globe", received a recording contract with a prominent London label. However, after two of their long-time friends became born-again Christians, their attitudes towards some of the songs they were singing, changed.

These performers did not switch to Christian rock for means of success. In a recent article of Contemporary Christian Music magazine, DeGarmo stated "It's all a matter of what you are called to do. We've always felt that we were called to win kids to Jesus Christ; that's our mission and that's our goal. There are a lot of people out there who are called to make great music and to entertain people; I'm not arguing that, but evangelism is our original mission. As long as we keep winning kids to Christ, I know we are in the Lord's will."

Both DeGarmo and Key are dedicated to this mission. The release of their tenth album, "D & K", has a special feature: For every cassette that is bought, the purchaser receives an identical cassette for free with the instructions "Give one away...to a friend who needs to hear!" They are also throwing their efforts into the Mission Aviation Fellowship, a Christian organization that helps missionaries and workers reach some of the less reachable parts of 25 developing countries around the world.

The MAF is in trouble as to the type of equipment they are using. "When we were in Zaire, flying around the Belgian Congo, we were in a Cessna made in 1959," stated Key. "We're hoping we can encourage support for the MAF and raise some money and buy them a new plane." The cost: 200,000 dollars, or about the cost most bands pay for a nice tour bus.

Saturday night at 7:30 p.m., DeGarmo and Key will bring their unique style of music with a message to the O'Laughlin Auditorium. Tickets are available the O'Laughlin box office, the Century Center box office, and all area Christian bookstores. Cost is $9.50 in advance, $11.50 at the door, and groups of ten or more are $7.50 each. For more information, call 284-4626.

How to choose a valentine: a helpful job description

The feast of St. Valentine has been half-spoiled by commercialism. Hallmark and the florists grow undeservedly rich that day. Lucy, in Peanuts, complains that Christmas is a money-racket run by an Eastern syndicate.

and pounds and guineas/ But not your heart away...
Still, love is love, even if you're young; and young love is lyrical, like a song by Bobbie Burns: "Till a' the seas gang dry, my dear/ And the rocks melt wi' the sun/ And I will luv

ful. In asking a person, whom you have perceived to be dear, to be your sweetheart, you're not inviting that person to become your "Hot-lips Houlihan" or any other kind of sex object that temporarily please you. That's not love-stuff; it's seduction which could lead to a new version of the St. Valentine's Day Massacre.

my blood stream to keep me joyful. Be the love in my heart that keeps me in love with love. Be my valentine--and notice I'm no longer begging like a sick fool. Bold with love, I'm now trying to take charge of your devotion, if it's not sure of itself."

who must, as chimney-sweepers, come to dust-- all expect to meet Love before they meet Death?

Doesn't every kid grow up, aching inside to be loved, sure that some exact person has been assigned to fulfill his or her need for love. Is anyone so dull of soul that he or she doesn't have a fantasy of falling in love?

Happiness is contingent on your falling in love sometime, whether the love leads to marriage or not; or even to a renunciation of marriage, to be in loving service to God for a lifetime.

That destiny of falling in love that each of us waits for, is what, I think, is celebrated in a playful, childlike, wholesome way on St. Valentine's feast. We show around among love's likely candidates, asking: "Are you the one? Do you want to be my valentine?"

If you decide you valentine is not the one you should keep, you can enjoy the day as a dress rehearsal for love, which, next year, may be the real and lasting thing.

Knowing this, you can, if you wish, send valentine's greetings to your grandmother. She's only a stand-in for the valentine of your heart's desire, and that's all you should want her to be-- hopefully, she has already met the valentine who fulfills her.

How many of you, when you think of it, really want my cocker spaniel, Darby O'Gill, as your valentine? If he thought of it, do you think he would want you?

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

She could very well be equally cynical about what has happened to February 14, taken over by opportunists, who mass-produce cards addressed to everyone from your grandmother to the family gynecologist. The poet e.e. cummings tells us: "Lovers alone wear sunlight," whatever that means, and I hope it's good.

For the sake of love, we should decide on a job description of what it means when we say: "Be My Valentine." After that, we can decide whether it's proper to send a Valentine's greeting to an aunt or uncle, as long as we do it as a compliment, telling them that they're the last of the real great sports, and that we'd travel to the end of the earth to meet their match.

A noted bishop has reminded Christians that the kind of language that they use for prayer should be the kind of language they use in making love. In other words, avoid the "thees" and "thous" and the circumlocutions you find in the Psalms.

I'd like to suggest another rule of thumb: valentines are meant for the sweetheart you'd send love poems to. The valentines you initially send should be shy, exploratory, tentative, and cautious; that is, you should take Housman's warning seriously: "When I was young and twenty/ I heard a wise man say: 'Olive crowns thee still, my dear/ While the sand o' life shall run."

True love is prone to exaggerate, as in a Cole Porter lyric: "You're the tops; you're the Coliseum/ You're the Pops; you're the Louvre museum..." Is the beauty here mostly in the eye of the beholder?

Shakespeare, praising his inamorata, repudiated the hyperboles: "I have seen roses damasked, red and white,/ But no such roses see I in her cheeks."

Love, like wine and cheese, grows mellow with age. The poet Donne, wanting to consult an authority, told us: "I long to talk with some old lover's ghost, who died before the god of love was born."

Yeats, a veteran at carrying torches for a love that was unrequited, wrote: "When you are old and grey and full of sleep/ And nodding by the fire, take down this book/ And slowly read.../ But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you/ And loved the sorrows of your changing face..."

Love's language, as you can see, is highly specialized and private, and has nothing to do with the appreciation you feel for the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker. This is why we should get back to the drawing board, and write a description of what is offered, what is hoped for, when a valentine is sent.

A valentine's message should be innocent, simple, and hopeful. True love, when you finally find it, is not passion; but if you're reasoning with wolfish lust dressed up as Mary's little lamb, one or both of you is dancing to the wrong music. Instead of "My Funny Valentine," one of you could be humming: "Square-shape, or pear-shape, those rocks don't lose their shape; and Diamonds are a girl's best friend."

After all, if a friend is worthy of his or her hire, the price should be right; why would you settle for Fanny Farmer's? "Had we but worldly enough and time," Marvell propositioned his coy mistress, "this coyness, lady, were no crime." The mood of that poem is too heady to be imprinted on a valentine.

Is the emotion of a valentine, then, limited to love's first fine rapture? It may begin there, but it can extend all the way to "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways," and I hope it will. But a valentine verse, I think, is to love what the baptismal prayer is to faith.

"Be my valentine? Be the one in whom my dreams can find fulfillment-- be my soul's other half. Be the wine bubbling in

The students of Notre Dame are running miles to save the lives of Multiple Sclerosis victims. A ten-person, ten-mile relay race will be held at the Loftus All-Sports Center, Saturday, Feb. 13. The men's race is at 1:00 p.m. and the women's race is at 3:00 p.m.

Each dorm may enter one team. To participate, the team must collect at least $40.00 in "pledges" from the dorm. The money raised will benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Multiple Sclerosis is a chronic neurological disease that affects young adults between the ages of 20-40. It "short-circuits" the nervous system of over 200 people every week.

An estimated 250,000 people in the United States have MS. There is no known cause or cure, but there is hope through biomedical research supported by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Students from more than 200 colleges and universities around the nation, have rallied to join SAMS (Students Against Multiple Sclerosis), a campaign to stop this crippling disease. SAMS is a student movement designed to increase public awareness of MS, and to establish long-term fund-raising and volunteer support for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

It is not too late to give your support. To enter your dorm in the race against MS, contact Tim Weber at 283-1695.

The power of the breathalyzer

The Office of Alcohol and Drug Education basked in the spotlight this week, garnering the publicity which always goes along with being the newest organization at Notre Dame. But if the office wishes to maintain student support, it must begin to make a significant impact on the Notre Dame community.

The office has taken at least one positive step toward persuading students they don't have to drink to have fun. It agreed to distribute funds to dorms which sponsor non-alcoholic events. But part of these funds were already allocated for this purpose before the office came into existence.

The Office of Alcohol and Drug Education needs to develop some creative programs on its own, and these programs should not just encourage people to participate in non-alcoholic events but should also encourage responsible drinking. No one expects everyone to stop drinking. The University already realizes this when it operates a bar on campus.

One positive step the office could take would be to provide a breathalyzer or alcosensor at the exit of the Alumni-Senior Club so patrons can check their blood-alcohol levels if they plan to drive. Many bars around the country now provide this service for their customers.

Some students drive drunk without realizing it. Others feel they are driving safely but risk being caught with a blood-alcohol level that is slightly over the legal limit. Some just lose count of how many drinks they've had. A machine at the door could help all of these people.

It could also help the University. As operator of a bar, they could find themselves liable for a death caused by someone who had left Senior Bar drunk. A quick stop at the machine might have encouraged that person not to drive.

Part of the reason the University runs a bar which is on campus is so that students are able walk back from it. Thus, an even greater good would be accomplished if the University encouraged student bars to install machines at their exits. Or the University could subsidize or donate the machines.

The breathalyzer machine is rather expensive: It may run $2,500 to $3,000. But the smaller alcosensor device costs only about $400 plus a few cents for each throw-away mouthpiece. And the smaller machine is still certified to be within plus or minus .01 percent of the actual blood alcohol level (.10 is the legal blood alcohol limit).

The office could finance the purchase of these machines through its federal grant money or could take the initiative to arrange funding through some other part of the University.

The Office of Alcohol and Drug Education is off to a good start. But it needs to begin implementing concrete programs if it is to effectively follow its mission of promoting healthy attitudes toward alcohol and drugs.

P.O. Box Q

Coke boycott not a biased move

Dear Editor:

It was disappointing to read The Observer's rationalizations for not supporting the nationwide Coke boycott.

Why did the Network choose to boycott Coke? The Notre Dame chapter of the Anti-Apartheid Network supports nationwide anti-apartheid efforts. The Coke boycott is a nationwide campaign. The reason for boycotting coke is that it is a high-profile, American company whose precedent-setting move of pseudo-divestment has undermined the sanctions and divestment movement. Coke's style of disengagement - selling plant and equipment to local managers and continuing business - reveals a lack of social responsibility on the part of the Coca-Cola company. Whatever public relations mileage they might have gone from supposedly empowering blacks by their reshuffling of control was cut short by the revelation that Amalgamated Beverages, South Africa's new bottlers and distributors of Coke, have been investing the workers' pension funds in the South African armaments industry. We should also understand that, before the "pullout," Coke's South African employees were only made aware of the rights due them from the company's exposal of the Sullivan principles after a civil rights group forced Coke to comply. These facts prove ample justification for boycotting Coke until it ceases all business with South Africa.

Contrary to the opinion of The Observer, boycotts can have effect. In England, Barclay's Bank was forced to withdraw from South Africa after a ten-year boycott had raised its economic, if not social, consciousness. The strategy of the boycott movement is to concentrate efforts on one company at a time for as long as necessary so as to have the greatest impact. To argue against the boycott on the grounds that it has little chance of succeeding or because Coke products are sold everywhere on campus tells more about the level of one's commitment to the struggle for justice in South Africa than about the rationality of the boycott.

The Coke Boycott is unrelated to the fact that Coca-Cola's president is also the chairman of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees. It is a nationwide campaign which has been organized in Atlanta, Georgia, and the organizers make no reference to the connection between Notre Dame and Coca-Cola in stating the reasons for the boycott. This connection, however, should be of interest to the Notre Dame community. Indeed, it helps explain why our University still hasn't divested from South Africa, despite the fact that, according to the investment policy formulated in May 1986, we should have divested in June of that year when South Africa's state of emergency, which is still in effect, was imposed.

As for the request for "...more literature, movies and presentations on the evils of the apartheid system" the Anti-Apartheid Network is currently showing an eight-week series of films on apartheid on Thursday evenings at 7:30 p.m. in the Center for Social Concerns. Later this month we will sponsor an evening of poetry by a South African woman from Soweto. We continue to meet on the steps of the Administration Building on Fridays at 12:15 p.m. to discuss news from South Africa and to stand in solidarity with the oppressed. We invite all members of the Notre Dame community to join us at these events.

One question needs to be raised here. Once we are educated about the evils of apartheid, can we sit still? If we take seriously our concern for justice in South Africa, we cannot remain idle. We can take an option for the oppressed South Africans and respond to their call. They've asked us to withdraw our support from the economic foundations of the apartheid system by ceasing all business with South Africa. Mandatory, comprehensive sanctions will have the greatest impact. Boycotting companies who continue doing business with South Africa is an effective way of keeping the pressure on.

Make the sacrifice. Stop drinking Coke products. We can convince Coke that doing business with apartheid is bad business. The sooner they see this, the sooner we can enjoy the taste of Coke again.

Then we can concentrate on another company.

Notre Dame fencers 10 head to Junior Olympics

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

It's time for the Irish fencers to show the nation they have the talent and ability to capture national titles.

This weekend, 10 members of the fencing team will travel to Cleveland to compete in the Junior Olympic Fencing Championships. The tourney, in its 20th year, is restricted to fencers under 20 years old.

The Junior Olympics also serves as one of the qualifying tournaments for the Junior World Championships, an event in which 450 athletes and 35 countries take part. Each fencer participates in a series of tournaments to collect enough points to participate in the Junior Worlds.

Last year the World Championships were held in South America. This year they will be held at Notre Dame.

On the women's team, sophomore Anne Barreda, 47-4, and freshman Lynn Kadri, 32-7, get the call. Both are starters on the 17-2 women's team.

Barreda, who won a previous qualifying tournament, is virtually assured of a spot already. She won the United States Fencing Association (USFA) National Championship in June of last year, almost guaranteeing her of an invitation to the World Championships. In fact, she is the top seed in the upcoming Junior Olympics.

"Anne has a good chance to win the Junior Olympics," said women's head coach Yves Auriol. "She is fencing well, while Lynn (Kadri) is getting some very valuable experience against high-level competition."

On the men's side, eight fencers will attend. In the foil division, the Irish send sophomores Joel Clark, 25-3, and Colin Gumbs, 19-5, and freshmen Phil Leary, 30-6, and Fred Trayers, 12-2.

Wielding the sabre will be sophomore Danny Yu, 25-5, and freshmen David Kirby, 20-1, and Chris Bauger, 15-3.

Matt Mergen, 19-13, will be the sole epeeist attending from Notre Dame.

Freshman Leszek Nowosielski from Ottawa, Ontario, who holds a perfect 20-0 record, will not join his teammates in the Junior Olympics because he already has earned enough points to represent Canada in the World Championships.

"I don't remember sending so many kids talented enough to compete in a national tournament," said men's head coach Mike DeCicco.

"This tournament is our chance to compare ourselves to other fencers across the nation," Mergen said.

"I've got to be honest," DeCicco added. "I've never had so many young and nationally-talented fencers. It augurs well for the years ahead."

Irish face Villanova

Senior Foley paid his dues

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team has won 12 games in a row, and barring a major upset, that streak will be 14 by Monday.

Villanova comes to the Joyce ACC this weekend for games with the 21-2-2 Irish at 7:30 Friday and Saturday nights. The Wildcats enter the weekend with a 7-16-1 record, and 24 of their 33 players are underclassmen.

"They lost to Mercyhurst (a team Notre Dame beat 7-3), and they're just one of the weakest teams on our schedule," said first-year Irish coach Ric Schafer. "This is one game where all the players who've worked so hard all year will finally get some ice time."

This weekend's series also features the last two-game home matchup for the Irish seniors, including defenseman Pat Foley.

Foley chose Notre Dame over Harvard four years ago, thinking the Irish hockey program was ready to return to prominence. Instead, he spent three years watching Harvard skate with the top teams in the nation, while Notre Dame was enduring three consecutive losing seasons playing far inferior competition.

"I understood it was going to be brought up to a certain extent while I was here," said the Roseville, Minn., native. "I didn't expect it to turn out how it did. The indications were that they'd try to bring it up and play better competition, and they didn't."

This year, the Irish still have a relatively weak schedule, but under the direction of a new coach, Notre Dame is finally winning.

"I guess the biggest difference is going into every game with the idea of winning it instead of wondering if we'll find a way to lose," said Foley. "We have a positive attitude. When you're winning, everything's more positive, and when you're positive, it's easier to win."

"This year's group of seniors is a pretty good group of guys. We were all tired of losing," Foley continued. "We all thought we could basically win all our games. It was just a matter of doing it."

One of the big changes this year has been the play of the defense. During Notre Dame's 12-game win streak, the Irish have allowed just 33 goals a game. That produces a goals-against average of less than 3.00, one of Schafer's objectives for the season.

"He's very important to our defense," Schafer said. "He's been a very steady force. We need him moving the puck up the ice into the neutral zone."

Foley, who ranks third on the team with 22 assists, made a name for himself on offense last weekend, scoring twice in a 5-4 win over Air Force. But he thought it was a performance that did not merit any special attention.

"It's funny how you get some recognition scoring," he said. "I don't really feel I played all that well. One of the goals I dragged off my skate, and it probably shouldn't have gone in. The other goal came when Brian Montgomery tipped in my shot."

Schafer realizes Foley's value to the team in providing senior leadership to a fairly young defensive unit.

"He's the granddad of the defense and the team," Schafer said. "He's one of the only guys balding already. He's a good leader."

And he's helped lead the Irish to a season that helps make up for the disappointments of the last three years.

"It's still really bittersweet," said Foley. "I questioned my decision to come here during my first three years."

"It's a lot more fun now to feel like we've done something for the program. The seniors all feel they've played a part in the resurgence of the program."

The Irish play host to the Dayton Lady Flyers in a North Star Conference game this Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Joyce ACC. The Lady Flyers bring with them a record of 11-9 and are led by forward Tobette Pleasant and center Michele Kruty, averaging 16.4 and 15.3 points a game, respectively.

"Dayton is a good team," says McGraw. "They just beat Kentucky last week. If we play like we did tonight we will lose. You will see an improved squad on Saturday."

Hirschfeld diving back into action for N D

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

When the swim team began practice in the fall, Adam Hirschfeld wasn't near a pool, let alone a diving board.

Now he has the chance to qualify for the NCAA Diving Championships.

Hirschfeld, a first-semester senior, decided to join the diving team almost two weeks into the season after being convinced he was making the right move from members of the team. He was so late in going out that he failed to make the team picture.

"I decided to go out for a couple of reasons," Hirschfeld said. "I had a lot of encouragement from members of the swim team, and I missed competition having not done it in college."

The first step in making the team for Hirschfeld was not a test of his diving abilities, but an interview with Irish coach Tim Welsh. After all, Welsh had to wonder why Hirschfeld wanted to be on the team after being away from a pool for three years.

"He was a bit skeptical," Hirschfeld said of the talk with Welsh. "He wondered about my motives for joining the team my last year. I told him I thought it would be mutually beneficial."

And Hirschfeld has lived up to his promise. With top diver Ed Veome academically ineligible, Hirschfeld has vaulted into the top spot. Hirschfeld's best showing on the 3-meter board came Tuesday night against Bradley, when he scored 298 points. But his big success story is in the 1-meter event.

He tallied a score of 308 on the 1-meter board against St. Louis and Oral Roberts last week, and gained a spot in the NCAA Division Qualifier in March. That performance also established a new University record.

"I'm really thrilled to get to go," Hirschfeld said. "The competition is going to be stiff. I tend to be a meet diver, so hopefully I will perform there as well as I ever have. I think with the NCAA's coming in March, I should be hitting my peak by that time."

Hirschfeld is quick to spread the credit for his success to other people. He realizes he went out late in the season, and he could have been rejected just as easily as welcomed.

"I'm grateful to coach Welsh and the swim team for giving me a chance to achieve something for myself and be a part of a tremendous group of people," Hirschfeld said.

Hirschfeld and the rest of the squad will have to be at their best again this weekend as Illinois-Chicago invades Rolf's today and Cleveland State comes to town Saturday. These are the final dual meets of the season for both the men's and women's teams.

The men have won eight of their last nine meets, while the women are looking to put a series of close losses behind them with a pair of victories. With Veome out, Hirschfeld's role increases with each meet.

Hirschfeld, though, is glad he has any role at all in the Irish program. He had a brilliant diving career at Chaminade College Prep in St. Louis, finishing second in the state his senior year as his team coasted to the state title. It seemed Hirschfeld was headed for collegiate stardom, but he had other ideas.

He turned down diving offers from Missouri, Eastern Illinois and Columbia among others because he thought it was time for a change in his life.

"Once I got accepted at Notre Dame, I never considered any other place," Hirschfeld said. "I was more set towards Notre Dame's education than I was at continuing diving. I had been diving since I was six years old, and I thought it was a good time for other commitments."

Perhaps the biggest reason Hirschfeld came to Notre Dame was the fact that Notre Dame is a tradition in his family. His father graduated from here and he is the fifth of seven children to attend here.

Hirschfeld went out for the team as a sophomore, but decided he wasn't ready to resume his diving career. After this season, he said he wishes he would have stayed with the team that year.

"It's not a good thing to look back and wish to do something over again, but I really wish I had been there all four years," Hirschfeld said. "You never know how much something is worth until it's gone."

Tolstedt provides Irish with winning combo

By MICHAEL GERARD
Sports Writer

Sophomore Stephanie Tolstedt of the Notre Dame women's tennis team has found a winning combination in the Irish program.

The native of Columbus, Ohio, who combines a solid game with some solid work in the classroom, will take to the courts this weekend in the Eck Classic doubles tournament.

The 5-10 Tolstedt proved her ability to excel on and off the court as a freshman. Expected to play No. 6 or 7 singles, she started at the No. 2 slot and posted a 9-11 record. She also played doubles with Michelle Dasso, claiming a record of 8-8.

At the same time, the engineering major has managed to build a grade point above the 3.0 mark and earned another impressive position this past semester—a spot on Dean's List.

Returning to a tougher schedule and a vital role on the tennis team as a sophomore this year, Tolstedt continues her strong play in both singles and doubles.

Tolstedt began her competitive tennis career as a 10-year-old, inspired by her parents love of the game.

"My parents basically taught themselves and then me and my brother," said Tolstedt.

Tennis became much more than just a sport, however, to the Tolstedt family.

"Tennis is a good way to meet people and socialize, as well as exercise," Tolstedt said. "My family has always been close to the sport. My parents have definitely been the biggest influence on me."

But tennis takes a back seat to academics for Tolstedt. That is not much of a surprise, considering the sophomore is attending Notre Dame on a full academic scholarship.

"Academics have always been a priority for me," said Tolstedt.

Named Joyce scholar and salutatorian of her class at Bishop Waterson High School in Columbus, Tolstedt anticipated a hectic engineering schedule would accompany her action on the women's tennis team.

The sophomore standout had justified reservations about handling academics and a demanding team schedule. But she has more than proven her ability to excel at both, starting the year at No. 2 singles behind freshman phenom CeCe Cahill. She is playing No. 3 singles this spring, and combines with freshman Kim Pacella in doubles.

Playing a more demanding role on the team this year, however, means even more stress and a greater challenge for Tolstedt's daily schedule. She has had to adjust to increased pressure on the court and in the classroom but says her love for the game keeps her going through the long hours.

"I enjoy tennis," she says with a smile.

Immediate success will be available to Tolstedt and the Irish in the Eck Doubles Classic this weekend.

The 3-2 squad hosts the tournament, which began at 9 this morning at the Eck Pavillion.

Notre Dame is slated to face Marquette, Miami (Ohio), Eastern Michigan, Ball State, Western Michigan and Fordham.

Irish topple Titans, 79-51; Bunek, Botham score 20

By JEFF HEILERT
Sports Writer

Sometimes you just get the job done.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team did just that Thursday night as it dismantled an inexperienced Detroit squad 79-51 at the Joyce ACC.

The job was to stay intense against a Lady Titan team which entered the contest with a 2-18 mark. The job description became even tougher considering the Irish, now 14-6, had played consecutive games against Tennessee and Duke, both Top-Twenty opponents.

While the night might have started slowly, by the time the final buzzer sounded the Irish were rolling.

Early on, however, the competition was tough. Using a full-court, box-and-one trap on Mary Gavin, Detroit forced the Irish into 16 first-half turnovers. On the other end of the court, the Lady Titans stung the taller Irish squad for nine offensive rebounds.

After a Kim Chandler three-point play, Detroit held a 19-17 lead with 10:37 remaining in the first half. The last 30 minutes, however, belonged to the Irish.

With six minutes left in the first half, Irish guards Karen Robinson and Gavin began to extend the zone full court. Leading 27-25 at the time, Notre Dame closed the half with a 16-5 run to push its lead to 13 at 43-30.

"We were a little lackadaisical on defense in the first half," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw. "We did a much better job of guarding them in the second half. It's tough to get up for a game like this, but you just have to."

Heidi Bunek led the way as she connected on 9-of-14 field-goal attempts and added two free throws to enter the locker-room with an even 20 points. Gavin teamed with the inside tandem of Bunek and Sandy Botham consistently to collect seven first half assists.

"Heidi and Mary really came to play tonight," said McGraw.

Detroit head coach Dewayne Jones echoed McGraw's words. "Bunek is a 'big time' player," Jones noted. "Their offense is pretty simple, but you don't need a whole lot. Just get the ball to the block. They wore us down inside."

Notre Dame, the NCAA leader in field-goal percentage, should stay there for at least another week. The Irish connected on 18-of-28 shots in the first half (.643) and finished the game shooting 63 percent, well above their 53.3-percent mark for the season.

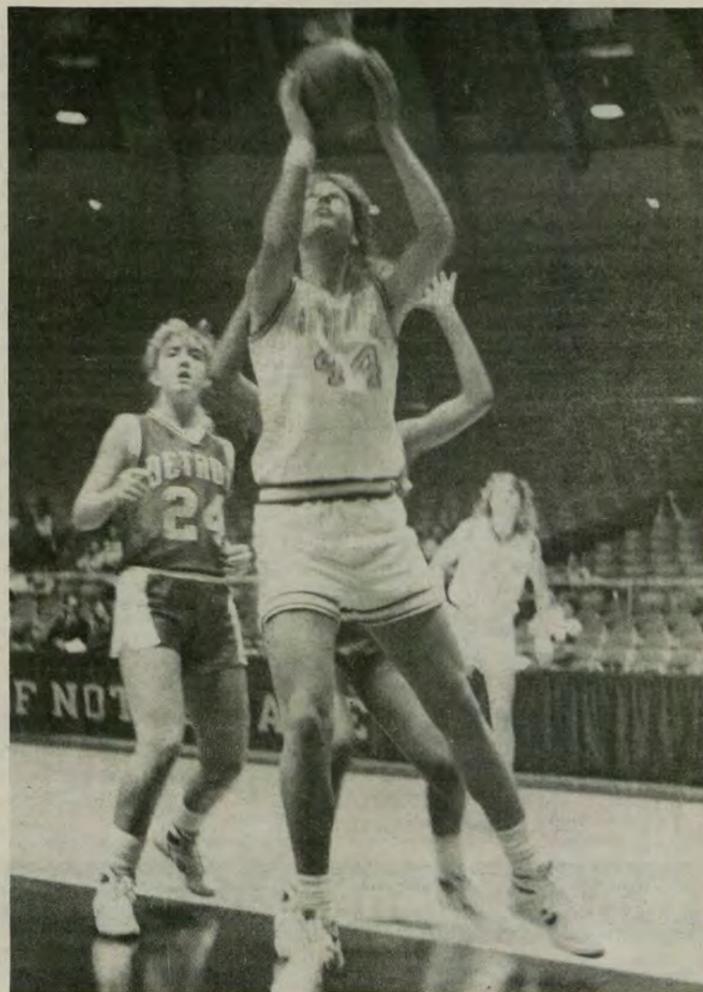

The job became much easier in the second half. The increased intensity by the Notre Dame defense held the Lady Titans to only 21 second-half points. Detroit struggled from the floor, hitting on only 6-of-28 field-goal attempts.

"We were really impressed with the way our team played in the first half," said Jones, "but did we come out cold in the second half."

The Irish guards continued to pound the ball inside as Botham had 10 second-half points in only 12 minutes of action. Notre Dame built the lead up to 31 at 77-46 before securing the final 28-point margin.

Detroit was led by Terri Ford. The sophomore forward hit 8-of-17 from the floor, in-

Heidi Bunek goes up for two of her 20 points as the Notre Dame women's basketball team beat the Lady Titans of Detroit 79-51 Thursday night. Jeff Heilert has the details at left.

ND, UCLA to meet in a battle for respect at JACC

By BRIAN O'GARA
Assistant Sports Editor

How do you spell respect?

Two different ways this Sunday at the Joyce ACC. For the Irish, it could be U-C-L-A. But for the Bruins, it could be N-O-T-R-E D-A-M-E.

While the records are far from similar, the motives going into Sunday's game (NBC, 1 p.m.) are the same for the 13-7 Irish and the 10-11 Bruins. Notre Dame is looking to recover from a recent string of three defeats before Wednesday's 64-59 win over Fordham, holding on to NCAA hopes for dear life.

UCLA will come into the contest looking to even its record and put bitter memories of a subpar season behind.

Like the Irish, the Bruins host the first and second rounds of the NCAA Tournament at Pauley Pavilion. Unless they pull off an unlikely upset in the Pac-10 Tournament, however, that will probably be their only affiliation with March Madness. But if honors are not on the line, pride is.

"Tell the students that this isn't going to be an easy UCLA game," said Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps. "A win for them would do a lot for what they're trying to do as far as credibility. Once again, our sixth-man is going to be important."

The Bruins will enter Sunday's game coming off a Thursday night meeting with Pac-10 and crosstown rival Southern Cal. Their three-game win streak in the conference was halted last weekend in a 73-68 loss to Oregon State.

UCLA is lead by 6-8 sophomore Trevor Wilson, who averages 15.5 points and 9.6 rebounds per outing. On the perimeter, junior Jerome 'Pooh' Richardson directs the Bruin offense, dishing out a Pac-10 leading 6.9 assists per game and chipping in with 12.5 points. Senior Dave Immel, 6-4, gives UCLA scoring punch from the other guard spot, averaging 15.2 points a game.

Irish senior David Rivers (22.9 points, 4.68 assists) should return to the starting lineup after sitting out the win over Fordham to rest an ankle injury.

Despite their misleading record, the Bruins have given a scare to four teams in this week's Associated Press Top Twenty. Early in the season they suffered a five-point defeat at the hands of now top-ranked Temple and seven-point losses to both No. 6 North Carolina and No. 8 Brigham Young. Three weeks ago they dropped an 86-74 contest with third-ranked Arizona, which leads the Pac-10.

"I don't want to hear that this is a down UCLA team," said Phelps. "They won six of their last eight games before Oregon State and they jumped out in that game."

The Bruins are one of the few teams to have a series edge over the Irish at the Joyce ACC, holding a 9-7 advantage.

They have won eight of the last 10 meetings.

While this UCLA-Notre Dame clash may not match the drama of one of the greatest upsets in Irish history, a 71-70 win in 1974 at the ACC to end UCLA's all-time 88-game win streak, both teams have a lot riding on the matchup.

Let the spelling bee begin.

February Fever: There's no cure

Quick, quick get me a doctor!

I've got February Fever. That's not the kind you get from being snowed inside your dorm for days on end. No, February Fever is much more deadly, ask Arizona, UNLV, BYU and Duke.

All those teams began last week ranked numbers one through four in the country. This week they're numbers three, seven, and eight respectively (the Blue Devils and Cougars are tied for the last position).

The fever I'm talking about is much more deadly than Asian-Swine-Yellow-Polka-Dotted Flu. It's the fever that hits when college basketball really heats up those frigid nights, and its symptoms are horrid.

You walk around saying, "I'm tellin' ya, he's a PTP; it's a real M and M'er, NC, Baby; and Upset, Baby." Your nerf ball never leaves your hand and you've ripped your rim down so many times you think you're Jerome Lane.

You're trying to figure out as many ways of counting to 64 that include your team and leave out Bob Knight. You don't sleep until you find out the final scores from the West Coast.

And you watch hours of roundball. Hours. Heck, it doesn't matter who's playing. It could be North Carolina, North Carolina State, North Carolina A & T or North Carolina School for Truckers (I'm tellin' ya, they really drive the lane). For that matter, it could be North, South, East, Coastal or German Carolina.

It doesn't matter, you'll watch anything.

Your favorite professors are named Schmuhl, McGuire and Packer. The only thing that keeps you

Dennis
Corrigan

Sports Editor

from flunking out of school is that the dorms aren't wired for cable TV. Then again, you're always off-campus at a friend's apartment. Both your girlfriends are threatening to walk out (Women, it seems, are generally immune to the disease).

You're beset by nightmares like the top three teams in the country playing on separate networks, not to mention your own team has a home game that afternoon. That's enough to make you wake up screaming.

As with most diseases of this caliber, there is no cure. Worse, February Fever is only a weak preview of what's ahead—March Madness, conference and NCAA Tournaments. You actually care about the NIT and NAIA Tourneys. But the worst thing is that when all that is over, you have to quit cold turkey.

AAAAAHHHHHHH, SHOOT ME!!!!

Why does February have to be so short?

Game of the Week—What else? One of the best rivalries in college basketball renews itself this Sunday afternoon at 1 when the UCLA Bruins visit the Joyce Center for a game with the Irish. There have been some classics in this series, and every game is usually exciting. The game's a sellout, Al's coming to town and the red light will be on.

If you can't get a ticket, the women's basketball team plays host to Dayton Saturday afternoon at 2. Muffet McGraw's team is very much in the hunt for an NCAA bid. This weekend, the Joyce Center definitely will be the place to let February Fever run its course.
