Peoria, Ill. fire kills nine

Associated Press

PEORIA, Ill.- Fire swept through an apartment house early Tuesday, killing seven children and two young mothers, and investigators were seeking to question a visitor who left the building shortly before the fire broke out.

The three other occupants of the building were injured, two of them seriously. Officials said the cause was under investigation and stressed the man being sought was not a suspect.

The blaze started about 2 a.m. on the first floor and had engulfed the two-story, wood-frame structure by the time firefighters responded.

"The fire was just blazing all of a sudden. . . I can't remember hearing (noise) or anything," said Rhonda Tracy, a relative of several of the victims who lived across the street and was first to call the fire department, at 2:20 a.m.

"I had never seen people come out burned like that," she continued. "I was just hysterical."

Police and fire authorities, aided by arson investigators from the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, were sifting through the rubble in a working-class neighborhood in this central Illinois city of about 130,000.

Three families, consisting of four adults and eight children, lived in the house, and had moved there last year, officials said.

Police Capt. Mary Dunlavy said Carl Wells, who was treated at St. Frances Medical Center and released, was the only survivor to have been interviewed.

"He woke up, went down the stairs and it was hot and he had to go, of course, back upstairs and try to wake the others," she said. "And then he went out the window onto the roof and was rescued by the fire department with a ladder."

Fire Chief John Parker said rescuers found "people standing on the porch and some people on the roof. There were people already injured when we got there."

Several neighbors said they watched helplessly as the fire swept the house.

"The kid was up there waving her hands like she was yelling for help and the flames were all around her," said Charles Harris, 34, who was visiting his sister in the apartment building next door.

Three people died at the scene and six were pronounced dead at two hospitals, said Peoria county coroner Herbert Buzbee. The children ranged in age from 4 months to 10 years, he said.

"As far as we know this is the worst fire we've ever had in Peoria in terms of deaths," the coroner said.

Assistant Fire Chief Sam Sisk said he believed the cause of death was smoke inhalation.

Bush calls for tougher ethics in the executive

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- President Bush intends to call for more stringent ethical rules on executive branch officials and recommend a 25 percent pay raise for federal judges in a sweeping ethics-in-government program to be unveiled Wednesday, administration officials said Tuesday.

But these officials said Bush has decided for the time being against recommending any hike in the $89,500 salary received by members of Congress, and will recommend no change in the widely criticized system that permits lawmakers to earn thousands of dollars in speaking fees.

Bush, who promised during last year's campaign to crack down on ethical laxness in government, arranged to lay out his recommendations in a speech at the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention.

Among the recommendations is one extending the one-year ban that currently prohibits executive branch employees from lobbying their former office to have it apply to members of Congress and to judges, said a source who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

In making his proposals, Bush is expected to accept most of the recommendations made by a special commission he established, and discard some others.

The commission that Bush set up to recommend changes for an ethics overhaul had called for a ban on honoraria to members of Congress for speaking engagements or similar work. Such honoraria provide thousands of dollars in outside income for senators and representatives in a system that critics, including Bush's ethics panel, contend allows for too much special interest influence on the representatives.

But the president decided that the issue of honoraria should be considered in conjunction with the question of a congressional pay raise, separate from the ethics package he was preparing to put forward Wednesday, said the official who spoke anonymously.

Bush's proposal is expected to cover matters such as outside income, conflicts of interest, financial disclosure, enforcement and restrictions on what executive branch employees can do after they leave the government.

Troubled South Shore has 20 potential buyers

Associated Press

CHICAGO- Officials of the Chicago, South Shore and South Bend Railroad said Monday they have more than 20 potential buyers for the financially troubled carrier.

But any sale will have to be approved by a federally appointed trustee who should be named within three weeks, said Michael Feder, acting chief operating officer of the railroad.

Feder said the commuter and freight line would continue to operate despite Friday's announcement of bankruptcy.

"We concluded that the bankruptcy filing was necessary as a result of a number of difficult events which evolved over the last number of years," Feder said. "Those events will not prevent the railroad from operating both freight and passenger services."

Feder told reporters at a news conference that more than 20 parties had expressed interest in buying the South Shore, but he declined to name any of them.

He also declined to reveal the extent of the railroad's losses, but the bankruptcy filing said the carrier had assets $37.8 million and liabilities of $37.2 million. Feder said the assets represented the book value of the railroad and not necessarily what the carrier could fetch if sold.

He called the railroad's freight operation healthy, but said a number of short-term cash flow problems as well as continuing losses from the passenger service operation forced the bankruptcy filing.

Last November, the Interstate Commerce Commission ruled that the railroad could end its commuter service on May 31 if it had not reached agreements on increased subsidies with the Northwest Indiana Commuter Transportation District and Metra, the Chicago regional transit agency.

Rape self-defense stressed

By JOANNA GRILLO

News Staff

Amidst the growing concern about rape in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community, Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination (CARE) sponsored a two-part presentation Tuesday, featuring discussions on date rape and self-defense demonstrations.

Jerry Wroblewski from the Midwest Karate Academy in Mishawaka offered some safety and prevention tips with the help of some of his students.

According to Wroblewski, the key to self-defense is awareness. Since the goal of a rapist is domination, it is important for a potential victim to convey self-confidence. Wroblewski says to be aware of your surroundings.

"Walk with your head up. Don't do things that will put you in a vulnerable situation- use your head. If you isolate yourself, you are putting yourself in a potentially bad situation."

Six of Wroblewski's students demonstrated physical self-defense techniques, stressing the importance of targeting vulnerable areas such as the eyes, hair, toe line, and groin.

Wroblewski said that Karate heightens awareness and makes you more in tune with your body, more able to adapt. He does not suggest that you can become a self-defense expert overnight, but he does insist that you can be aware, and avoid putting yourself in vulnerable situations.

Molly Meyer, a Saint Mary's senior, and Pat Credon, a senior at Notre Dame led a discussion on date/aquaintance rape. Both students are affiliated with Sex Offense Services (SOS), a 24-hour rape crisis counseling service that operates out of the Madison Center in South Bend.

Both Meyer and Credon said that date/aquaintance rape is a widespread problem, although it may not be one that is well publicized throughout the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. They stressed awareness and prevention.

Much of the problem on campus is that most of the rapes that occur are not reported, and therefore other students are unaware of the existing danger.

One student expressed a familiar sentiment, "The schools are just avoiding the problem. It is up to students to put pressure on the schools- to get them to admit that these things do happen on these campuses. Just because there is a rule prohibiting sex does not mean that it is not happening."

Another observer added, "This applies to your life outside of school. It could happen anywhere- on the job, at an internship, while you are home during break, any time."

Another problem addressed was the false sense of security the students have. Because of the social stigma attached to rape, it is a problem that is not given enough attention in the NDSMC community. One student said, "Notre Dame and Saint Mary's aren't so different that these things do not happen here."

Awareness is one thing that CARE and SOS are trying to promote. Meyer said, "Rape is not a women's issue. It is a people's issue. It affects everybody."

"It is something that both sexes have to talk about. It can-

WORLD BRIEFS

Syrian gunners shelled Christian areas Tuesday in spite of a 6-day-old truce called by the Arab League, and Paris sent an envoy to work out a distribution plan for two shiploads of French humanitarian aid. Police said the howitzer shells landed in a scattered pattern in Christian territory and no casualties were reported. They said the Christians held their fire.

The Soviet navy said Tuesday it plans to retrieve a nuclear submarine that sank off Norway to learn what caused the accident that killed 42 sailors. "We consider that we must raise it," Vice Adm. Sergei Vargin said on the nightly television news program Vremya. Vargin, who is with the Soviet Baltic Fleet, said details of how to bring the submarine up from nearly 5,000 feet below the surface had not been worked out.

U.N. troops opened checkpoints Tuesday in northern Namibia, but South Africa said no guerrillas showed up to begin a withdrawal to salvage a U.N. cease-fire and independence plan for Namibia. Chief Inspector Kierie du Rand, a South African spokesman for the territorial police, said groups of more than 50 black nationalist insurgents were seen heading south, disobeying orders from their exiled leader to withdraw north to Angola.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

President Bush's minimum wage plan was defeated Tuesday as the Senate moved closer to confronting him with a proposal he repeatedly has promised to veto. The Senate, on a 61-39 vote largely along party lines, backed an amendment to legislation sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that brought the measure essentially in line with a House-passed bill calling for an hourly minimum wage of $4.55 by October 1991.

Police found a mass grave just south of the Mexican border Tuesday containing the bodies of 12 people who were the victims of human sacrifice by a satanic cult of drug smugglers, officials said. "It was horrible," Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez told a news conference in this border city. "It was like a human slaughterhouse." Mexican federal police arrested four people, said sheriff's Lt. George Gavito. Gavito said the suspects were U.S. and Mexican citizens, but did not identify them further.

Vice President Dan Quayle will visit Australia, Singapore, Indonesia and Thailand over a 10-period from April 26 to May 5, aides said Tuesday. Quayle will represent President Bush at this year's celebration of Australian-American Friendship Week, which symbolizes the historically close relations between the two countries and commemorates the Battle of the Coral Sea during World War II, in which U.S. and Australian forces overcame great odds to gain a military victory.

INDIANA BRIEFS

South Bend police say they cannot guarantee the safety of Alan Matheney in the St. Joseph County Jail, where he will await trial in the March 4 beating death of his former wife. St. Joseph Superior Court Judge William Whitman ruled Monday that Matheney should be held in the county jail, as his attorneys requested. Deputy Prosecutor John D. Krisor Jr. and jail officials wanted Matheney to remain at the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City, where he has been held for four weeks.

Perms and near death experiences at the mall

We have a stereotype of the shopping mall containing dehumanized and faceless people going about their humdrum featureless existence oblivious to the presence of others. Many people see nothing but junk to buy and robot-like salespersons to sell it.

But, this conception of a modern day wasteland was shattered for me on Monday when I had a spiritual experience at the shopping mall (no, I did not buy a new wardrobe).

The woman who permed my hair brought up the subject of supernatural phenomena by describing a mansion in South Bend that she used to clean. It was built in 1927 as a house to host international gambling.

As the woman described the gambling room, I suddenly felt chilled (maybe from some perming solution). She told me that she saw a vapor of a person in that room one day while she dusted.

Then, she went on to tell me about the spirit of her deceased friend walking around, clattering pans and calling her name at night because she now lived in her friend's home.

"What do you think about this?" she asked me.

Well, I've never given much thought to vapors and spirits before and so I intelligently responded:

"Un. . . , hum. . . , my sixth grade Girl Scout leader told me about a spirit in her house once during story time around the campfire.

Next, she cut right to her out-of-body experience telling me that she experienced the "black tunnel" when she was 18.

"Aha," I thought, "I know something about this." I jumped in and told her "I just studied near-death experiences in my philosophy class."

"Who's your professor?" she asked.

"Professor Morris," I answered while thinking "she's not going to know who he is."

She totally surprised me then (but, I guess by now, I really shouldn't be shocked by anything she tells me). "I cut his hair once," she said.

I began thinking "this conversation is going beyond weird."

Because she was interested in what we were studying, I told her that we had just started studying something about theism and evil.

"Do you believe that evil exists in the world?" she questioned me.

Again, I respond with my intellectually excellent mind. "Well. . . , ah. . . , I haven't really thought about it, we just started the section today."

She tells me that she believes evil is very real in the world and it seems that the end of the world is near because of the diseases such as AIDS and cancer. "Did I know what the world was supposed to be like when the end of the world was proximate? Had we discussed it in class?"

I told her that I didn't know what the world was supposed to be like then, and I didn't believe that we would study it in class.

By now, I was feeling rather overwhelmed and bewildered. My stay of three hours was quickly coming to a close.

As she finished my hair, she mentioned that she doesn't talk to everyone like she talked to me. She also expressed hopes that I would come back and we could have another discussion.

I enjoyed talking to her and probably will go back (I kind of like the way my hair turned out), but, next time, I will not be astonished by the topics of our conversation. In fact, I will think about those issues before I go back.

The mall is not only a place of people selling things. So the next time you go to the shopping mall, don't be surprised if something out of the ordinary, such as this conversation, happens to you.

Panelists debate over University's divestment

By JULIE RYAN
News Staff

In a panel discussion Tuesday, Professor Peter Walshe, Dean David Link, and Professor James Carberry spoke on divestment in South Africa.

"This struggle has been going on a long time and has just gotten bad since the race riots in the 1960's and has never been as bad as it is now," said Walsh. Each member gave their opening comments, responded to questions posed by former Student Body Vice President Mike Paese, and then responded to questions posed by the audience.

Walshe took the liberal side. He said that it is Notre Dame's duty to listen and support the blacks in South Africa.

Walshe emphasized the fact that the University's help can save the 35,000 black Africans that have been detained without trial, remember 3,500 that have lost their lives, and give justice to those who face segregation and torture.

Carberry took the conservative side. His opening comments were that divestment is a "political and economic folly" and he said that "apartheid is intrinsically evil."

Carberry said that the South American blacks do not want the divestments of American corporations and that Americans have looked foolish by rushing in trying to help where they are not wanted. Notre Dame should not divest in South Africa, according to Carberry.

Link said that Notre Dame can be "effective in the area of education on apartheid."

Notre Dame could invite black South Africans and white South Africans to debate the issue of divestments. Students and faculty could have a better understanding of the situation by learning about it from first sources.

The panel was sponsored by the Student Union Board and the Year of Cultural Diversity during Apartheid Awareness Week.

Soviet tanks patrol republic Gorbachev tries to control Georgian protestors

MOSCOW - Police arrested hundreds of people and were seizing tens of thousands of hunting rifles from Soviet Georgians in an attempt to calm the republic, which on Tuesday mourned 19 people killed in a pro-independence rally.

Tanks, armored personnel carriers and soldiers patrolled the streets of the southern republic's capital, Tbilisi, to enforce a ban on public gatherings and an 11 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew.

President Mikhail Gorbachev said he considered it a "sacred" principle that Georgians and others should have the right to express their opinions freely, but said the law set limits on their actions, reported the head of West Germany's So-

Reports indicated a general strike that began Friday to back demands for Georgia's secession was easing. Some buses and trolleys resumed routes Tuesday, said Nana Natadze, the wife of a Georgian nationalist activist. She said many schools remained closed because of a boycott.

Tuesday was declared a day of mourning to mark what the Georgian Communist Party leader, Djhumber Patiashvili, called "a common grief" the deaths of civilians killed in a clash Sunday with soldiers and police at the pro-independence demonstration.

Weather improves for Valdez clean up

Associated Press

VALDEZ, Alaska— Rough seas that helped stall and break up some of giant oil spill from the Exxon Valdez became calmer Tuesday and winds shifted away from fish-rich Kodiak Island, the Coast Guard said.

"Kodiak still seems to be saved," said Jim Hayden, the state of Alaska's cleanup coordinator.

Coast Guard spokesman Ken Freeze said the spill appears to have stalled and is breaking into tar balls. "That's better than ooey, gooey oil," he said.

Equipment continued to pour into the area aboard military transports. About 67 tons of material, everything from containment booms to absorbent pads, were scheduled to arrive Tuesday.

A huge Soviet oil-skimming vessel, the Vay Dagursky, was expected to arrive Saturday, state officials said. The ship can skim 200,000 gallons an hour and store 2 million gallons of oil on board, according to the officials. But it remains unclear how effective it might be against the Alaska spill.

Despite the favorable weather, a light sheen of oil seeped into the Kenai Fjords National Park at scattered inlets and fjords, Freeze said. With a thickness measured in molecules, the sheen does not threaten serious environmental damage, he said.

The Coast Guard said it planned to deploy a flotilla of 30 fishing boats from Seward and six from Kodiak, along with the Coast Guard cutter Morganthau, to drag small-holed herring and shrimp nets through the leading edge of the slick.

Coast Guard Capt. Joe Blackett said tests Monday showed the nets break the oil into small globs, which don't reform. The operation may not begin until Wednesday, Blackett said.

Much of the cleanup operation so far has relied on floating containment booms. Cleanup crews ran into trouble when they tried to deploy a more permanent boom at Sawmill Bill, site of a salmon hatchery. Anchors weren't available in adequate numbers, Freeze said, and depth charts that hadn't been updated since the 1964 earthquake proved inaccurate.

The Coast Guard has been in charge of cleanup operations since President Bush ordered stepped up federal involvement last week.

Monday's rough weather, which saw seas to 15 feet, gale-force wind warnings and small craft advisories, turned calmer Tuesday. Aerial spotter flights resumed, seas reduced to 5 to 7 feet—still above normal—and winds shifted from the northwest. That could steer oil to the southeast and away from the coastline and Kodiak, the nation's richest fishing port last year.

the March 10 report by his eight-member ethics commission, which detailed 27 recommendations for changes in ethics laws and regulations as they apply to senior officials, judges and members of Congress and their staffs.

In addition to proposals that require congressional legislation, Bush will issue an executive order covering executive branch employees, the administration sources said.

The order will include provisions to give elevated rank to a designated ethics officer in each department, and will do away with "compartmentalization" of the various agencies of the executive branch for purposes of lobbying after working for the government.

The current one-year lobbying ban for executive branch workers would remain but would be extended to cover all agencies rather than just the one in which the individual was employed.

For instance, a former employee of the vice president's staff would be precluded not only from lobbying that office but also any other executive branch agency, such as the Office of Management and Budget.

North denies role Claims conduct not deceptive

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Oliver North defended his honor and his efforts on behalf of the Nicaraguan Contras Tuesday against a fusillade of suggestions from the prosecutor that he violated the code he was taught at the Naval Academy. "At the U.S. Naval Academy you would have been kicked out for this?" Prosecutor John Kecker asked at one point. "In the U.S. Naval Academy nobody taught me to run a covert operation," North retorted. Nor about "political warfare going on in Washington in 1983-1986." On specific matters, North: •Denied he tried to help his associate, Richard Secord, make a half million dollars by renting a ship to the CIA, which turned out not to be interested in the offer. •Said he was merely following orders when he drafted a letter to Congress denying involvement in helping the Contras at a time when official aid was barred.

"At the Naval Academy you were taught falsehood included deception?" asked Kecker of the witness, a Marine lieutenant colonel until he resigned in the wake of the Iran-Contra affair.

"You were also trained to obey all lawful orders?" asked Kecker, underlining the word lawful on a large pad on an easel facing the jury.

"Did you take courses in that and learn what was meant by lawful and unlawful . . . you were trained and taught that it was a crime when in World War II at the end of the war German officers came and said they were ordered to do it?"

Said North: "I don't believe I have ever received an unlawful order."

Bush battles for S&L plan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- A house banking panel battled Tuesday over proposals to weaken the heart of the Bush administration's savings and loan bailout plan by diluting a requirement that S&L owners back loans with more of their own money.

In the first of a planned series of votes on proposed tougher capital standards, the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions adopted, 30-17, a weakening amendment offered by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla.

The administration wants to encourage S&Ls to get out of areas such as real estate and insurance by requiring owners to back those investments entirely with their own capital. McCollum's amendment exempts healthy thrifts already engaged in those businesses from the stricter standard.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, argued against the change, saying risky areas not traditionally part of S&Ls' business helped push the industry into crisis.

"What we're saying with this amendment is that vice in the past is acceptable," Leach said.

Despite the threat of a presidential veto, subcommittee members were preparing later in the day to vote on a proposal that the administration says would gut the central reform in its bill.

President Bush wants to increase S&L capital requirements by June 1991 from 3 percent of assets to 6 percent, contending that the more capital S&L owners have at risk, the less likely they will be to take undue risks.

A senior Treasury official this week reiterated the department's threat to recommend a veto if Congress waters down key elements of the bill.

TV against drunk driving

Associated Press

BOSTON- J.R. Ewing slept off a night on the town before heading for the ranch. And Alex Keaton agreed to be "designated driver" as prime-time stars took on new roles this season in a campaign against driving drunk.

The message- that drinking and driving is socially unacceptable- has been written into 32 television programs since the season began last fall, including an entire episode of ABC's top-rated "Growing Pains" to be broadcast Wednesday night, said Jay Winsten of the Harvard Alcohol Project.

"You don't change social norms overnight, but we're off to a good start," he said.

The Harvard Alcohol Project, begun in late 1987, is trying to harness the influence of Hollywood and Madison Avenue in making drinking and driving as socially passe as smoking cigarettes.

Last year, Harvard researchers targeted the small screen, making a low-key appeal to television executives to write in occasional references to designated drivers. The proposal was endorsed in April by the board of the Writer's Guild of America-West.

Gary gambling bill passed

Gary will hold advisory referendum May 1990

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS —A proposal to let Gary conduct a May 1990 referendum on casino gambling easily passed the Indiana House late Monday night.

Lawmakers voted 69-30 for Sente Bill 465, which contains the casino proposal and a series of election law revisions.

Under the bill, the Lake County city could hold an advisory referendum on primary election day in 1990 to determine residents' feelings on a proposal to allow casino gambling in lakefront hotels.

If voters approved casino gambling, Gary lawmakers would have to come back to the General Assembly in 1991 to try to get the wagering legalized.

The vote Monday came on Gary lawmakers' third attempt to win approval of a casino gambling proposal. The House voted 54-46 earlier in the session against a broader casino proposal that included language about a casino regulatory commission and distribution of state revenue from casinos. That measure also called for a binding Gary referendum on casinos.

The Senate Finance Committee also rejected the broader casino proposal.

Advocates of casino gaming then came back with the narrower proposal for an advisory referendum.

"I've said all along that the more people knew about casino gambling, the better we'll do," said Rep. Earline Rogers, D-Gary.

Rogers said she now expects S.B. 465 to go to a House-Senate conference committee. If Sen. Patricia Miller, the Indianapolis Republican and Senate sponsor of the bill, doesn't want the casino language in it, Rogers said she would consider adding the casino proposal to one of her own bills.

Rogers said it is possible she will try to get the broader casino language put back into a bill in conference committee.

She acknowledged getting any casino proposal through the Republican-controlled Senate will be difficult.

"But I expect the vote we got tonight...ought to make for smoother sledding," she said.

New S.B. phone service provides information at your fingertips

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND —Soap operas, stock markets and horoscopes all figure in the latest effort to generate more customer trips to the yellow pages and more advertising dollars.

The twist is called Touch Four, the trademark name given by Ameritech Publishing Inc. to a service offering 24-hour access to a broad range of brief, topical reports.

With the touch of a finger, callers have access to weather forecasts, financial reports, news digests, sports, health tips, and entertainment items. Anyone with a touch-tone phone can dial a seven-digit number, then enter a four-digit number from 129 listings.

"It's the kind of information people need and use everyday," says Lori Jones, a spokeswoman for Ameritech Publishing in Troy, Mich.

Ameritech, the parent corporation of Bell companies in Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio, inaugurated the service last November in Green Bay, Wis. In January, Touch Four entered three new markets—South Bend, Madison, Wis. and Grand Rapids.

Indianapolis and Evansville will be added later this year when updated directories are published.

For callers, the electronic data banks provide regular updates on sober-sided subjects such as world news and the action on Wall Street. The phone company shows it can lighten up, too, with daily horoscopes and plot digests of 16 daytime and primetime soaps.

But Ameritech hopes the real beneficiaries will be business advertisers who buy space in the yellow pages.

Ameritech is wooing potential advertisers with research that promises at least 80 percent of the adult population use the yellow pages. Four of five who look up a company follow that with a phone call, a letter or a visit, according to another survey.

"It's not a medium where (users) want to browse," says Ron Kaatz, who teaches advertising at Northwestern University. "They are in need of something."

Jones says Ameritech has some preliminary figures on the effectiveness of Touch Four in creating greater use, but declined to release the information, citing proprietary reasons. Ameritech Publishing also declines to provide figures to support its claim that ad revenue has risen 65 percent since the company was created out of the breakup of AT&T.

Ameritech's close holding of its research information—typical, says Kaatz, of the highly competitive advertising business—leaves unanswered questions about the increased yellow pages use that may be generated by Touch Four: Does the service encourage more frequent but more casual use of yellow pages, and would casual users be as valuable to the advertisers?

On the road to Moscow McDonald's

Associated Press

TORONTO —When the first McDonald's restaurant opens in Moscow, the Canadian executive who helped make it happen probably will be remembering the Montreal Olympics and a fateful bus ride 13 years ago.

George A. Cohon, a Chicago native who is president of McDonald's of Canada, recalled that the company's corporate buses were lent to Soviet organizers of the 1980 Moscow Olympics touring Montreal in 1976.

Cohon, who still quotes McDonald's founder Ray Kroc with respect and relish, went along for fun and made a stop at a Montreal McDonald's part of the tour.

"That night we started talking about the possibility of getting involved," he said.

Cohon said the plan to have McDonald's at the 1980 Moscow Olympics fell through before the U.S.-led boycott—"In a way it was the best deal I never made"—but he kept thinking about "280 million people, hungry—this has got to be a great market."

"I just went back at it," he said in an interview at company headquarters in Toronto.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policies allowing joint ventures with foreigners has made the agreement possible. McDonald's of Canada, a subsidiary of the U.S. fast-food giant McDonald's Corp., holds a minority position in partnership with the Moscow City Council's Food Service Administration.

Cohon, just back from his latest trip to Moscow and planning another trip in May, said the food distribution center for the operation is under construction. After it's ready late this year or in early 1990, the first two of 20 restaurants specified in the agreement will open near Red Square.

Chrysler rebates are baloney: why not just cut prices?

By LOUIS RUKEYSER

Tribune Media Services

What a sweet guy that Lee Iacocca is. Having merely become a multimillionaire, a culture hero and a giver of August advice—and all because we taxpayers guaranteed a paltry $1.5 billion in loans for his otherwise-doomed Chrysler Corporation—Lee now wants us to know he appreciates the effort.

"You were there for us," says a typical ad from the company's new campaign, "now we perform for you."

Well, golly gee. Isn't that terrific of Lee? I can think of lots of super ways for him to show his sincere appreciation, can't you? How about a nice new convertible for your next birthday? Or maybe, say, a minivan for Christmas?

Which do you think it will be? Alas, neither, as it turns out, because as we read further, we discover that all we're going to get is a rebate. And not, of course, on the vehicles that Chrysler can sell without such concessions, such as minivans and four-door Jeep Cherokees. In fact, it's just possible that the actual rebates being offered may seem like the same tired old automotive story, under a new self-serving headline.

How dumb does Detroit think we are?

Very dumb, if we are to judge by the annual rash of misleading ads, of which the Chrysler now-here's-a-present-for-you effort is merely a particularly egregious example.

The latest phony-baloney routine concerns seemingly amazing interest-rate bargains. Chrysler has offered what appears to be the ultimate: zero-percent interest—on two-year loans. Which is absolutely terrific provided (a) you want to pay the price they're asking, and (b) you're willing and able to pay it off over two years. I'm sure a swell fellow like Lee couldn't possibly have been aware of this, but very few customers fit that profile.

The point is that all these apparent concessions by all three companies are essentially eyewash. It's Iacocconomics—aggressively call it something other than what it really is, and maybe many people will be fooled. (Subsidy? What subsidy?)

So let's do what Detroit refuses to do, and call all these "rebates" and "low interest rates" by their correct name. They are (gasp!) price cuts.

Isn't that shocking? Well, you can see why no self-respecting auto firm would want to come right out and say that, can't you? I mean, it would be like admitting that they couldn't sell the car at the price they were asking, and had to come down. Wouldn't that be just too, too embarrassing for words?

Why, if a Detroit giant honestly described its pricing policy, people might expect it to keep those prices down. And we certainly wouldn't want that, would we?

The moral, unfortunately, is a serious one. For all its ostensible efforts to get its act together, to produce more efficient, salable and reliable cars, Detroit has till not learned to play fair with its customers. And it has thus missed a substantial portion of the opportunity that has fallen into its lap over the past four years as the value of the dollar has been driven down, making American cars relatively much cheaper to produce.

Akio Morita, the brilliant chairman of Sony, told me he was stunned by the failure of Detroit's automakers to seize this opportunity to rebuild a much greater share of the U.S. auto market. Instead, he said, by keeping prices too high they had fattened short-term profits, but lost long-term possibilities.

Now the motor moguls are compounding the felony by refusing openly to reduce prices. Years ago the excuse in Detroit was that if list prices were lowered, they might be frozen there by government wage-price controls. No such threat exists today. If the American auto industry is ever truly to regain its former eminence, it might start by rebating a little more truth and having a higher interest rate in bottom-line customer arithmetic. Then we'll really be there for you, Lee.

ND contributes to apartheid and violence

Suppression.
Torture.
Murder.

These are daily occurrences in the republic of South Africa. These are the tools by which the government maintains its system of apartheid, whereby the country's five million whites hold all the power over the country's 26 million blacks. For years, the white government has used threats and violence to hold the black majority down. Virtually every major country in the world has expressed its opposition to apartheid. As one might expect, most religions have also renounced apartheid.

But this is nothing new to you.

For the past few months, you have been bombarded with news concerning South Africa. I am sure you are also quite familiar with the ongoing battle between Father Oliver Williams and Professor Peter Walshe concerning Notre Dame's investments in South Africa. Like most people, you are sick of hearing about Shell, Pagan and all the other names flying around in this rhetorical battle. Frankly, I'm sick of it myself. I wish we could just forget about this annoying little faculty spat and get on to more pressing matters.

But we can't.

What seems to have gotten lost amidst the name-calling and accusations is the fact that Notre Dame continues to invest money in companies doing business with the South African government. In doing this, Notre Dame contributes to the suppression and discrimination against blacks in South Africa. Indirectly, we support murder. Let me repeat myself. WE SUPPORT MURDER.

Wait just one second, you say. How can we, the self-proclaimed leading Catholic university in the world, condone murder? Well, boys and girls, follow closely. We invest our tuition money in the University. They in turn invest this money in companies who do business in South Africa. These companies pay tax money to the South African government. The South African government uses some of that money to buy, you guessed it, guns and bullets. Some of these bullets happen to end up in the bodies of innocent South African protesters. Frightening, isn't it? Granted, our involvement is not first hand, but consider this. In the past two years, over 2,500 people have died in South Africa protesting apartheid. It's a pretty safe bet that at least one of those deaths had Notre Dame written all over it.

The question which now must be asked is why Notre Dame refuses to divest its holdings in South Africa. Many still believe we are following the Sullivan Principles. These principles were drawn up by Rev. Leon Sullivan over 10 years ago to promote fair labor practices among companies in South Africa. These were based on the theory that by forcing the companies to adhere to the Sullivan Principles, Notre Dame's money would be helping the blacks achieve equality. Unfortunately, the Sullivan Principles have failed in this quest. These principles have failed so miserably. Rev. Sullivan himself has acknowledged their ineffectiveness. Still, Notre Dame clings to these principles. The Sullivan Principles may have once been a viable argument against divestment; however, those days are long gone.

Tom Varnum
Third and long

Some believe divestment, on a larger scale, will hurt the blacks more than help them. These people argue our money provides what few jobs the blacks have in South Africa. True, divestment will increase unemployment among blacks. Every significant black leader in South Africa acknowledges this. They also know that many whites will be forced out of work by divestment as well, and this will make the government stand up and take notice. While divestment will put many blacks out of work, in the long run it will force the South African government to end apartheid.

Another reason Notre Dame refuses to divest is plain and simple: money. Notre Dame has very significant financial ties with companies doing business in South Africa. For instance, Coca-Cola, the main supplier of soft drinks for University Food Services, has vast holdings in South Africa. Coca-Cola's president is one Donald Keough. Keough also happens to be the chairman of the Board of Trustees at Notre Dame, the very committee which decides how Notre Dame invests its money. If Notre Dame decides to divest, Keough and Coca-Cola stand to lose money. Could this be, perhaps, a little conflict of interest? Keough's position on divestment is compromised by his affiliation with Coca-Cola. So far, the board has continually ignored the call for divestment. Apparently, with Keough and the Board of Trustees, money talks and morals walk.

Sadly, the final, and perhaps most telling reason Notre Dame does not divest is student apathy. Most students are too busy with school to notice what happens outside God's little acre in South Bend. Most remain unconcerned with what happens outside their own little world. Too many do not realize their tuition money is being used, in part, to support the torture and murder of innocent people. Until more of the student body calls for divestment, Notre Dame will continue to support the horror in South Africa.

Calling for divestment is not a liberal thing to do, it's a human thing to do. By not divesting, Notre Dame supports and contributes to the violence and murder in South Africa. If this upsets you, do something about it. Learn more about the situation. Voice your opinion here, or in other publications on campus. Join others in rallying for divestment on the Administration steps every Friday at 12:15 p.m. Move outside of your own little world and get involved.

If Notre Dame's policies don't upset you, remember those three little words.

Suppression.
Torture.
Murder.

Madonna soars 'Like a Prayer'

COLLEEN CRONIN
assistant accent editor

Madonna has finally grown up. Her fourth release, Like a Prayer, is a far cry from her first album, and outshines all its predecessors.

Like a Prayer is a very personal album-- Madonna can claim it as completely hers. She drew from many of her own experiences, past and present, for the song ideas. With the revealing lyrics in "Till Death Do Us Part" and "Oh Father" that are in sharp contrast to "Like a Virgin" and "Holiday," Madonna proves to her fans-- and to herself-- that she can have a hit album without resorting to trite topics and lyrics. Like a Prayer possesses depth and meaning, and is not simply two sides worth of mindless dance tunes. Madonna abandons the airheaded girlish voice of her first three albums for a more adult sound, though her range is still heard on Like a Prayer.

"Till Death Do Us Part" is a somewhat autobiographical tune about a rocky marriage. What makes this song so out of the ordinary is the contrast of upbeat music and revealing lyrics, such as "He starts the fight, she starts the lies/ But what is truth when something dies/ He's not in love with her anymore."

Madonna abandons the airheaded girlish voice of her first three albums for a more adult sound.

Those Madonna fans who are looking for a dance album will be slightly disappointed. Besides the title song, only three or four songs lend themselves to dancing. "Keep It Together" has a slightly black influence and is one of the more upbeat songs on the album. In "Express Yourself," one of Like a Prayer's best cuts, Madonna advocates an attitude exactly opposite that of her hit "Material Girl": "You don't need diamond rings or eighteen karat gold/ Fancy cars that go very fast you know they never last/ What you need is a big strong hand/ to lift you to higher ground."

Only two songs do not hold up to the album's standard. "Act of Contrition" opens with a metal guitar riff that would make Metallica proud. Madonna recites the Act of Contrition amid chaotic music and the Andrae Crouch Choir (a gospel choir). The only way to describe the song is interesting. According to the inner sleeve, the song was produced by "the Powers that Be". The only bad song on Like a Prayer is Madonna's duet with Prince on "Love Song." Though it is on Madonna's album the sound is definitely Prince's and so is quite out of place. The song does not flatter Madonna's voice in the least, and the album would probably be better off without it.

Another aspect of Like a Prayer that proves Madonna has grown up is the use of instruments in the background music. Her previous albums could easily be reproduced with a synthesizer. This album, however, employs pianos and stringed instruments in most of the songs, which makes for a fuller and more complex sound.

No two songs on the album are alike, which adds to its uniqueness. As with every new album, Madonna again sports a brand new image. She is now hippie-ish and, though she still flaunts her trademark belly button, she seems to be wearing clothes again (more at least than in her "Open Your Heart" video). The album is much different-- and much better-- than anything she has done before and definitely deserves a listen.

A day at the races in Old England

accent writer

Most Americans, I've noticed, tend to spend their Saturdays in London jostling fellow countrymen and other tourists at the Tower of London, in the shops at Oxford Street, or in the lines at the Hard Rock Cafe.

Along the sides of the track men stood on boxes gesticulating frantically to the bookmakers, who were just as rapidly altering the odds on the boards.

While I, too, enjoy such amusements, I have discovered an alternative form of Saturday entertainment that is infinitely more rewarding. In fact, it surprises me that few other Americans have discovered it, since it involves two pastimes many "Yanks" never tire of: elbowing crowds and spending money.

I refer to the age-old English practice of spending Saturday afternoon at the racetrack.

Horseracing satisfies the stereotypical Englishman's love of sport, while destroying any American myths about "The English Reserve." My own father is an Englishman by birth, and therefore has inherited the love of sport, along with an urge to gamble, that is characteristic of the racegoer. I overheard him planning an excursion to the Newbury racetrack and decided to accompany him in an attempt to understand his enthusiasm.

As with any sport, the best way to correctly learn about horseracing is from the experts. The virtuosos in this field are older men, who are well-known at their local pubs on the weekends, and at the local bookmakers'. They are also avid readers of the Racing Post, an English newspaper devoted solely to coverage of horseracing events.

It was with just such a group of experts that I set out early one Saturday morning. Although the first race is never before 12:30, it is necessary to make an early start as an 11:00 stop at the nearest pub is a necessity in order to have a quick pint or two of ale and exchange hot betting tips.

Once this preliminary was dispensed with, we proceeded to the track itself, where I found the adeptness I had acquired at fighting my way through crowds of tourists in London quite useful. I was handed a race card, which was a list of the afternoon's races, along with statistics on the horses and jockeys. My companions studied it religiously, and though I was convinced that Greek was more easily discernable, I began to understand the ins and outs of the statistics at my disposal. I was well on my way to expert status.

After I had translated my race card and had made what I thought to be an intelligent choice, I followed my companions to an area next to the track itself, where I was confronted with a scene that resembled the confusion of the New York Stock Exchange. There seemed to be hundreds of bookmakers scattered about. Their operations were simple: each had an open carpetbag in front of him, presumably to hold cash, and a large board with his name on it and the going price on each horse.

Along the sides of the track, men stood on boxes gesticulating frantically to the bookmakers, who were just as rapidly altering the odds on the boards. The secret to placing a successful bet comes in two parts: first of all, putting money down at the right time in order to have the most favorable odds, and secondly, picking a horse that actually wins. Betting on eyes on to victory. To my amazement, it was my horse that won. From that point on, I was hooked.

My day didn't end as successfully as it had begun, and I learned that it is necessary to be prepared to lose a certain sum of money. It is horses, I soon found, is an expensive venture, as most bookmakers will take a minimum of £5. Finally, I battled my way to one and placed my fiver on a horse that I was sure would win.

During the race itself, I watched a metamorphosis that was almost as entertaining as the action on the track. The gentlemen I had arrived with were no longer the same reserved, unassuming, tweed clad figures. They had changed into wild men, jumping and screaming as they boisterously urged their jock-cause for merriment if anyone manages to break even. Also, as my youngest sister gleefully taught me that while a knowledge of horse flesh is an asset, it is by no means a requirement. At 11, she is already proficient at reading her race card, but still has the annoying tendency to pick on the basis of the horse's name or because she likes the jockey. Generally, it is she who fares the best, much to the chagrin of the rest of us who still believe that by employing reason, we can beat the odds.

Victim testifies as trial continues for OU players

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. --The victim of an alleged gang rape in an Oklahoma athletic dormitory told a court Tuesday she came to believe suspended Oklahoma football player Nigel Clay was one of her assailants after discussing the case with prosecutors.

Clay, Bernard Hall and Glen Bell, Sooners teammates, are accused of first-degree rape in the alleged attack at the dormitory on Jan. 21. Hall and Clay face two other charges each of furnishing liquor to a minor.

The victims has testified that she and a friend had gone to Norman for a double date with two Oklahoma football players, and that said she was attacked after she came out of a bathroom in the athletic dormitory.

Sherrelyn Lynette Osborn said she and her boyfriend, Larry Medice, were in Medice's room, directly below Clay's, when she heard screams.

"It was a noise that sounded like a struggle," Osborn said. "I said, 'Nigel must be fighting somebody.'"

Osborn said the noises got louder, she heard a second scream and that the noises sounded as though someone was falling to the floor.

"We looked at each other and said, 'It sounds like some girl's getting her butt kicked,'" she said.

She said Medice went upstairs to investigate. A few moments later, she said, she went to find Medice.

"He came downstairs and told me some girl had just got raped," Osborn said.

She said neither she nor Medice called police. They later told the district attorney what they had heard, she said.

In cross-examination, Osborn told the court she had once described the screams as possibly being screams of passion.

The 20-year-old Oklahoma City victim spent seven hours on the witness stand Tuesday for the second day of a preliminary hearing which is used to determine if the suspended football players should be tried on the charges filed against them in Cleveland County District Court.

Clay's attorney, Joel Barr, began Tuesday's questioning by asking the victim when she came to believe Clay may have been one of her assailants. The woman said she had seen evidence Feb. 9 in the district attorney's office that led her to believe Clay was one of the attackers. The prosecutor's office filed charges the next day.

She said she believed, because of his size, that Clay would have been the fifth of the six people she said attacked her. An Oklahoma media guide lists Clay as being 6-foot-4 and weighing 274 pounds.

In earlier testimony, the victim had said the fifth attacker "knocked the breath out of me."

The woman often struggled with questions from Barr and from Charlie Cox, Bell's attorney.

Cox tried to determine how many men were in Clay's room and how many the woman was able to identify.

The woman told the court Monday that she could not identify her attackers because the room was dark.

Cubs extend streak to four with 5-4 win over Cardinals

Associated Press

CHICAGO --Jerome Walton homered in the first inning and scored the tie-breaking run in the eighth when Mark Grace grounded into a fielder's choice, giving the Chicago Cubs a 5-4 victory Tuesday over the St. Louis Cardinals. It was the Cubs fourth straight victory. Loser Jose DeLeon, 1-1, walked Walton and Mitch Webster to open the eighth. The two runners pulled off a double steal. Todd Worrell relieved DeLeon and got Ryne Sandberg to foul out. Worrell then walked Andre Dawson intentionally, filling the bases.

Twins 14, Tigers 0

DETROIT --Carmen Castillo hit a grand slam in Minnesota's eight-run eighth inning, and Kirby Puckett drove in three runs Tuesday with a double and homer, leading the Twins to their 12th straight victory over Detroit, 14-0. Allan Anderson worked seven innings for the Twins, allowing seven hits as he beat the Tigers for the fourth straight time. Rookies German Gonzalez and Gary Wayne completed the shutout with an inning apiece in relief. Gonzalez struck out all three batters he faced, and Wayne gave up one hit in the ninth.

Astros 5, Reds 3

HOUSTON --Ken Caminiti's two-run single highlighted a four-run, first inning and his fielding helped thwart a seventh-inning Cincinnati rally, leading the Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over the Reds Tuesday night.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

PITTSBURGH --Bobby Bonilla singled home the winning run off reliever Randy Myers with two outs in the 11th inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their home opener Tuesday night, beating the New York Mets 4-3.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the sixth, outfielder Marie Liddy drove in the game winning run off St. Mary's pitcher Kim Benjamin, who started and lost. Amy Folsom and Kathryn Verneti also collected RBIs for the Irish. "We struggled a bit in the second game," said Boulac. "We just weren't hitting the ball like we were in the first game but we came back in the bottom of the sixth and did the things we had to do." Notre Dame lacked the intensity in game two that the players had in game one, according to Boulac, but the Irish will take the wins anyway. "We didn't go after them like we should have, but our girls didn't want to lose," Boulac noted. "It's a big rivalry." The Irish will try to add another win to their record when they play Bethel College in Mishawaka today at 3:30 p.m.

talented bunch and they'll be the first one to tell you that, but they throw strikes. Our team ERA just goes to show that throwing the ball 90 miles an hour doesn't necessarily get people out."

At Xavier, the Irish got three wins from their four starters. In Sunday's first game, senior Mike Passilla went six innings to earn the victory, allowing one earned run. In the second game, senior Mike Coffey went 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief to pick up his third win. In that time, Coffey walked one and struck out five.

On Monday, freshman Brian Conway shut out Xavier for six innings to earn the win, allowing only three hits. In the second game, senior Erik Madsen earned his team-leading fifth win by pitching a complete game in the 6-3 victory.

The hitting remained fairly consistent over the four games as well. In the Sunday doubleheader, the Irish pounded out 15 runs on 19 hits, and in the Monday doubleheader did not lose a step by scoring 18 runs on 24 hits.

Juniors Dan Peltier and Ed Lund both enjoyed outstanding weekends, with Peltier raising his team-leading average to .429 and Lund hitting a home run and picking up seven RBI. Both picked up two game-winning RBI.

Peltier was 8-for-15 over the four games with five RBI, including three doubles. In his last six games, Peltier has raised his average 42 points.

Lund enjoyed a near-perfect game on Sunday in the 12-3 victory. In the game, he was 2-for-2 with a home run and four RBI, including three walks.

Freshman Frank Jacobs, who had a 5-for-13 weekend, has raised his batting average from .212 to .290 in his last six games.

Schramm may leave Dallas

Associated Press

IRVING, Texas --Tex Schramm is being cut out of key decisions made by the new owner of the Dallas Cowboys and may not be in the club's front office much longer.

Schramm, the glue that held together one of the NFL's most successful franchises, is considering the job as commissioner of the new international league that will develop talent for the NFL.

"I'm keeping my options open," he said Tuesday.

However, Schramm, president and general manager since the club's founding, has been on the outside since Jerry Jones purchased the Cowboys from Bum Bright on Feb. 25.

For example:

Schramm didn't know Jones gave new coach Jimmy Johnson a 10-year contract until reporters told him.

Schramm wasn't asked to join a meeting last weekend between Jones, Johnson, quarterback prospect Troy Aikman of UCLA and his agent, Leigh Steinberg.

Schramm did not attend a recent beer and barbecue session that Johnson and Jones held for the players. Jones invited some 100 business friends.

Asked about being left out in the decision-making, Schramm said, "That's the prerogative of the new owner. He said from the beginning he was going to be involved in everything from socks to jockstraps. He has."

Schramm also said from the beginning he didn't think he could handle a day-to-day caretaker role after nearly three decades of calling the shots.

"That's not my style," he said.

Schramm won't admit he has made a decision but he talks as if he has decided to do something other than be a figurehead for the Cowboys.

Schramm Tuesday was eager to reminisce about his days with the Cowboys.

Asked his proudest moment with the team, Schramm said "both winning and reaching the highest pinnacle of popularity at the same time. This franchise accomplished what few franchises have accomplished."

peted there before have been all-star collections or international squads.

USA Wrestling, the national governing body for wrestling, asked the Notre Dame team if it wanted to make the landmark tour.

"Notre Dame's a good name, a high-profile name worldwide," said McCann. "We've had a lot of kids do well at the international level in junior competitions."

Freshmen Tim Anderson and Curt Engler, who both graduated from Dowling High School in Peru, Iowa, each competed in the Junior Olympics last year. Engler won an individual championship, while Anderson placed second in his weight division.

Durso and junior Andy Radenbaugh each have won Junior National championships, and freshman Marcus Gowens placed second in a Junior National competition.

With recruiting season in full swing the last few weeks, the Notre Dame wrestlers have not had much actual mat time. They will have to adjust to the international form of wrestling, which differs from the collegiate style.

"The international style is more wrestling on your feet with more emphasis on takedowns as compared to college, where there's a lot of mat wrestling," said Durso. "The international's a lot more wide open, and you're allowed to take more chances."

McCann does not know exactly which wrestlers his team will face in the three dual meets, though he has heard theories about how the Soviets might arrange the lineups.

"The Russians will make it as close as possible as long as they win," said McCann. "I've heard that what they might do is see us wrestle and figure out how they're going to beat us, yet make it look like a close match."

The United States just defeated the Soviet Union 19-18 in a World Cup dual match. But according to McCann, the Soviet Union's large number of wrestlers makes it a bigger power in the sport than the United States.

"We can match up our elite with their elite," said the five-year Irish coach, "but they have so much more depth. A lot of times, you don't know if they're bringing their best people because they have so much depth."

"We're better in some areas," continued McCann. "Our youth programs are much better. We have intense high school and college programs. They've got them but don't stress them as much."

McCann stresses that the trip will be as much a learning experience for the coaching staff as for the wrestlers.

"We want to learn their techniques and training methods," said McCann. "We'll observe a lot of the things they're doing over there. They are the best in the world."

The Notre Dame men's and women's soccer teams held their awards banquet last weekend, where they announced juniors Dave Augustyn and Rolfe Behrje as captains of next season's men's team and juniors K.T. Sullivan and Joy Sisolak as captains of the women's team.

In awards for the 1988 men's team, senior Randy Morris took most valuable player honors, sophomore Mark Crowe was cited as the most improved player, senior John Guignon won the most dedicated award and senior Pat Murphy won the St. Joe Valley Scholar/Athlete award.

In awards for the 1988 women's team, freshman Susie Zilvitis won the most valuable player award, freshman Deb Skahan was named the most improved player, Sullivan won the most dedicated honor and senior Susan Haling won the St. Joe Valley Student/Athlete award.

Olson may jump to Kentucky

Arizona mentor to meet with UK officials later this week

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. —Lute Olson appears to be the No.1 candidate for Kentucky's vacant basketball coaching job if the price is right.

Olson, head coach at Arizona, is expected to meet with Kentucky athletics director C.M. Newton this week to discuss the details of the job.

"Hopefully, it'll work into that," Newton said of Olson becoming the school's prime candidate to replace Eddie Sutton, who left under fire. "Obviously we're interested and obviously he's interested."

Olson and Newton were expected to meet in Lexington on Thursday.

Newton, however, said Monday night that he had not offered the post to Olson.

"We've still got some more things to talk about," Newton said.

Cedric Dempsey, University of Arizona athletic director, said he gave Kentucky officials permission to talk with Olson but didn't know of the coach's intentions.

"I would hope we could bring all these rumors to a head and resolve what needs to be resolved," Dempsey said.

Dempsey said that before the Olson-Kentucky linkup, he had recommended that Olson's contract be extended three years and his base salary be increased, and that the Board of Regents had approved the measure.

The current contract has two years to go, meaning Olson would have a five-year contract at Arizona. The Arizona Republic in Phoenix said Olson's current base salary is believed to be between around $85,000 to $95,000 with a total package reported to be worth between $400,000 and $500,000.

The Republic also reported that one unidentified source said the Kentucky package for Olson would be more than $750,000 each season.

Olson, 54, was offered the Kentucky job in 1985 but turned it down.

He has compiled a 137-55 record in six seasons at Arizona.

Olson also has said the sanctions Kentucky could receive from the NCAA committee on Infractions as a result of 18 alleged violations of NCAA rules could influence his decision. University officials are scheduled to meet with the NCAA committee on Infractions on April 22.

Knight now his wife's caddy

Associated Press

The caddy shouldering the golf bag looks familiar, but out of place.

Shouldn't he be wearing a baseball uniform, and swinging a bat?

For 18 years, until this spring, he did.

Ray Knight, MVP of the 1986 World Series, is caddying for his wife, Nancy Lopez, on the LPGA tour.

"It's something I've always wanted to do. I can be with her out here and the family more. I've enjoyed it," said Knight, recently retired from an 18-year career, the last 13 in the major leagues.

"I know a lot of people tease him about carrying my bag, but he's my best friend, not just my husband," said Lopez, an LPGA hall of Famer. "I want him here."

"With Ray out here, I can play a lot of tournaments and try to become the leading money winner again."

"I'm leaving the game feeling I can still play," the 33-year-old former infielder said. "But I don't want to be a part-time player. I'm not good at that. I've always been an intense player, keyed up."

"I can't sit and wait. The more I sat on the bench last year, the more I thought about retiring. I think I made the right decision, but it's going to take awhile to get used to it."

"I've never lost that enthusiasm, never lost that joy," said Knight, who, in addition to his World Series MVP year with the New York Mets, had .300 seasons earlier with Houston and Cincinnati.

In past years, Lopez adjusted her tour schedule so she and her husband could spend time together. But when Knight was traded from Baltimore to Detroit last year in spring training, it threw their plans into disarray.

"Nancy's schedule was already set according to Baltimore's schedule," Knight said. "It didn't match with Detroit's schedule and we wound up seeing each other only five weeks during the entire summer."

Knight said his new job, "is not as easy as it looks."

"He knows what he's doing out there," said Lopez, who will be among the favorites in the $450,000 Ai Star-Centinel Hospital Classic that starts Friday at Rancho Park in Los Angeles.

"He's good for my game. He gives me the yardage and keeps me from making mental mistakes."

So far there have been virtually no family spats on the course.

But, recalling the Kemper Open earlier this year, Knight said, "We had a disagreement with club selection; I thought she should use a 4-iron to the green and she wanted to hit a 5-iron."

Lopez proceeded to hit the 5-iron short and into the water.

"I ended up saying, 'See, you never listen to me. If you don't, why ask me?' It was a stupid statement for me to make, very stupid," Knight said.

THE STORY OF THE IRISH CLADDAGH

The Irish Claddagh story began in the 16th Century when Richard Joyce, a native of Galway was captured by Algerian Cosairs while on his way to the West Indies. He was sold as a slave to a wealthy Moorish Goldsmith who trained him in the craft. His master took a great liking to him and offered him his freedom which Richard very happily accepted.

He returned to his native county and settled down in the ancient village of Claddagh, just outside Galway city, where he designed and made the first Claddagh.

The design of the Irish Claddagh is simple, but yet unique: The Hand Signifies Friendship, The Crown Loyalty, And The Heart Love.

The Irish Claddagh, because of its tradition and design grows daily in popularity and is being used internationally as a token of great friendship and love.

ND lacrosse faces tough road stretch

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team takes its five-game winning streak on the road today, facing off against Lake Forest College in Lake Forest, Illinois at 3:30.

The Irish (5-3) are playing possibly their best lacrosse of the year as they look to peak for four tough games following the match against the Foresters.

Four of the last five Irish games are on the road, and the team has had most of its problems away from home. They opened the season with three losses on eastern trips before struggling to defeat the College of Wooster 8-7 after an emotional win over Air Force.

But the Irish should not experience a similar dropoff in intensity against Lake Forest following last week's big win over Kenyon, according to sophomore defenseman Dave Barnard.

"I don't really expect a let-down. I don't think anyone will look past Lake Forest," Barnard said. "We beat them pretty well in a scrimmage before the season, but I'm sure they've improved."

Barnard cited the team's ability to capture a quick lead and maintain it in the 14-7 rout of Kenyon as an indication of an improved team confidence and intensity.

"We're a lot more confident now as far as being able to keep a lead," Barnard said. "Against Georgetown and Stony Brook at the start of the year we got the upper hand and lost it. That's a sign of a young team.

"But when you're able to come together and keep a lead that's a great sign of mature leadership."

The Irish attack will again count on their leading scorers, senior tri-captain John Olmstead (17 goals, 10 assists) and junior Brian McHugh (18 goals, 6 assists). The team can also now consider getting some scoring off the bench, as shown by freshman Mike Sullivan's four goals against Kenyon.

Freshman Tom Duane is averaging 12 saves a game and will start his third game in the Irish net. Senior tri-captain defensemen Kevin O'Connor and Doug Spencer will lead the defense, which has allowed only seven goals per game this year.

Notre Dame is in contention for the NCAA tournament western bid following an emotional win over Air Force on March 29. The Irish could capture their first NCAA tournament invitation if they beat Division I rivals Michigan State and Ohio State on the road April 26 and 29, respectively.

But Irish head coach Kevin Corrigan said his team has learned the importance of not looking past any opponent.

"Our biggest concern is Lake Forest," Corrigan said. "We're not looking past them because we've found this year that we're not a good team unless we concentrate on what we're doing at the moment."

Irish concentration was seen in many areas in the win over Kenyon. Notre Dame dominated in groundballs and faceoffs, with sophomore John

The Observer / John Studebaker

The Notre Dame lacrosse team travels to Lake Forest today. It will be the first of an important season-ending road swing that will determine the post-season fate of the Irish.

Capano securing 8 of 12 and freshman Scott Musa winning 9 of 11.

The Irish offense, meanwhile, scored 14 goals on 32 shots to finish far above their goal of 35 percent. Corrigan said the team will need a similar shooting effort today.

"Lake Forest has an excellent goalie and we will have to shoot well," he said.

"They are also a good fast break team so we will try and get back and make them play '6 on 6' in settled situations," he continued. "I think our defense will give them troubles if we can keep them out of fast break situations."

Olmstead has 134 career points following his two goals and five assists against Kenyon and is closing in on Irish second all-time leading scorer Bob Trocchi (143 points). Beyond Trocchi's mark is Joe Franklin's career leading 161 points. Olmstead would need to average over five points per game to capture the top spot as the Irish enter the most difficult part of their schedule.

Patterson keeps title bid alive

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS --Tracy Patterson, the son of former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, overcame a slow start to knock out Kim Jackson at one minute of the seventh round Tuesday and keep his bid for the world featherweight title alive.

Patterson, 30-1-0, nearly had a knockout in the second round when a solid left hook sent Jackson to the canvas. Patterson had Jackson wobbling after an eight count but the bell ended the round seconds later.

Patterson began training under the guidance of the former world heavyweight champion in New Paltz, N.Y., when he was 11 and was adopted by him three years later.

Patterson, who weighed 137 pounds, has a May 14 date to fight former world featherweight champion Stevie Cruz in Atlantic City. He won every round and was in command from the start.

"It took him longer to loosen up than usual for some reason," said the elder Patterson, who manages, trains and does promotion for his son. "He really didn't get going until the third round. I'm not sure why."

Nearly every punch Jackson, 15-2, threw early landed on Patterson's gloves and Patterson spent most of the opening round throwing harmless jabs to the body.

The pace picked up in the second round as a left jab staggered Jackson into the ropes midway through the round. Patterson, who has had nine knockouts in winning 10 consecutive fights since losing a controversial 10-round decision to Jeff Franklin in October 1987, then began getting more aggressive.

Patterson seemed to be going for the knockout from then on and most of Jackson's efforts were wild flurries aimed at pushing the unrelenting Patterson back. Twice in the third round, Jackson was backed into a corner and did nothing other than attempt to shield his face.

Hurdler will accept 90-day suspension

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS --Tonie Campbell, admitting he was wrong to refuse a drug test, says he accepts a 90-day suspension by The Athletics Congress in order to keep other athletes from using his case as a precedent.

Campbell, the 1987 world indoor high hurdles champion, decided not to appeal a March 11 ruling by TAC, the national governing body for track and field in the United States.

Campbell called the incident "a silly mixup" that stemmed from his refusal to take a drug test after the Mobil One Invitational Feb. 5 in Fairfax, Va. He told officials at that time he had only 40 minutes to catch a plane for which he was holding a non-refundable ticket issued by the meet promoter.

He said he left when it couldn't be resolved who would pay the difference for a new ticket.

"I was innocent (of drug use), but I was wrong in what I did in refusing the test," said Campbell, 29, of Ontario, Calif.

The suspension was announced on Tuesday by TAC, which made it retroactive to March 11 when Campbell appeared at the TAC hearing. He had until Monday to appeal.

Streaking baseball squad has tough week

Irish have won eight of last nine games

As the Notre Dame baseball team travels to Illinois-Chicago today for a doubleheader at 4 p.m., it takes with it a full head of steam.

The Irish (20-6), coming off of a four-game sweep against Xavier, beating the Musketeers 12-3, 3-2 on Sunday and 12-1, 6-3 on Monday, have been victorious in eight of their last nine contests and in the last month have won 14 of 17 games.

This, according to Head Coach Pat Murphy, has given the team confidence and added experience for the remainder of a season that shows much promise.

"I think this team is growing in confidence," said the second-year head coach. "We've got a demanding week with a number of games and so few pitchers on our staff. We're gaining confidence and we're going to need it."

In the next five days, Notre Dame will play eight games. On Thursday the Irish are at home for a doubleheader against Butler, and then travel to Dayton to take on the MCC Eastern Division rival Flyers.

Today, as Notre Dame faces Illinois-Chicago, the Irish will be looking to avenge a 5-0 loss suffered against the Flames on April 5. On that day, the Irish split a doubleheader with the Flames, with the Irish taking the first game by a score of 13-2.

In the loss, the Irish were shut out by an Jim Shortall, who at that time had an 0-1 record and a 6.94 ERA. The Irish could only manage four hits in that game.

"I think our kids were embarrassed by the one loss we had to them, and the way that we lost," said Murphy. "I have a feeling they'll be ready for them."

"I just think our kids will speak for themselves, and that they'll go up and do the job. I'm sure they're sitting home and waiting for that (Shortall) to pitch," continued Murphy. "I think it would be a big mistake to start (Shortall) against us."

Despite this determination, due to the great number of games that the Irish will be having, Murphy will be starting pitchers "without any experience" in the two games with the Flames.

This decision is due in part to Murphy's faith in his pitching staff and due in part to the strength of the team's hitting.

"I really feel like if our team continues to improve, stays confident, and backs up that confidence with day-in and day-out preparation and hard work, we're going to be around after graduation."

One key to the team's success will be its pitching, which has been keeping the team in every game and saving it when offensive production is less than adequate.

This squad, lacking much depth with only nine players on its roster (including first baseman Joe Binkiewicz, who has pitched 2 1-3 innings), has an exceptional 3.43 team ERA.

"The pitching has been a real key for us," said Murphy. "And again, they're not a really Bookstore Basketball XVIII continued first-round action Tuesday afternoon. Three games went into overtime, while two others were decided in less than 15 minutes.

Father-son tandem boosts Fightin' Iris in close game

The milestones continued in Bookstore Basketball XVIII Tuesday afternoon.

A great-grandfather ended a 41-year sabbatical last Thursday, and a father-son combination followed by leading its team to a victory Tuesday.

Pat and Tony Leonardo helped The Fightin' Iris to a 21-18 win over Strapper Prissy and the Leather Monkeys in first-round action. It's not the first time for a father-son team in the tourney, but it is a rare occurrence.

Pat works in the admissions office, while Tony is a sophomore at Saint Joseph's High School and an employee of the University. Tony scored the last three hoops in the contest, and Bob Mundy was the leading scorer with six.

"I think it's magnificent," said Pat, a 10-year veteran of Bookstore Basketball. "A victory is a victory in Bookstore Basketball. It's nice to have someone young and energetic on the team."

In other games, it was a day of extremes. Two favorites won in under 15 minutes each, while three games were decided in overtime battles.

Clockwork Orange, led by Dan Sharp and Dan Madison with six baskets each, routed Freedom Rock 21-3 in 12 minutes. The winners connected on 21-of-34 shots from the field.

"It was unbelievable competition," said Frank Stams, a member of the winning team. "What really threw us was the Freedom Rock Dillon music in the background. Their gameplan was all mental. This is the Year of the Malaysian Orange."

Malicious Prostitution also won handily, destroying 4 Skins and a Shirt 21-4 in 12 minutes. Joe Sternberg paced the winners with eight hoops.

Maureen McFadden Is a Fabulous Babe went overtime to defeat Malodorous Bad Athletes 24-22. The winners led 5-4 early in the game, but did not regain the advantage until late in the contest at 23-22. George Fish paced the victors with eight baskets.

"We did it for Maureen," Fish said. "We'd like to invite Maureen to our next game."

In another overtime contest, Ocean Motion edged Butt Kickers and Name Takers 22-20. Three players on the winning squad scored at least five baskets. Boob Leffler and Shamokin Heat also won 22-20 in overtime against Dr. Edwin Justice and the Green Kareems.

We Can't Think of a Good Name showed it's not the name, but how a team plays that counts with a 21-12 victory. Too Drunk To Play evidently had a few too many before the game, losing to Air Borden and the Milkmen 21-8.

Licensed To Brick put up plenty of bricks in its contest, falling to Ted Bundy and the Electrics 21-8.

Basses of Death brought some comic relief to the day by playing tubas during the game. The gimmick almost worked, as they lost only by a 21-17 count to The Monsters: The Disciples of the Death Ball.

Irish softball sweeps Belles

By MARY GARINO

The Notre Dame softball team claimed the local bragging rights by sweeping St. Mary's in a doubleheader Tuesday.

The Irish improved their record to 16-13 by shutting out the Belles in game one, 10-0, and outscoring them again in game two, 4-2.

Notre Dame jumped out to a quick 5-0 lead in the first inning of game one when St. Mary's pitcher Michele Pinter lost control of her pitches, allowing five walks, two wild pitches and hitting one batter. The Irish scored all five runs on only one hit as the Belles made two errors.

Notre Dame added another run in the third inning and three more in the fifth. Meanwhile, senior captain Barb Mooney held the Belles scoreless for the entire game. Stephanie Nomura scored the last

MCC honors Boulac, ND players

Notre Dame softball coach Brian Boulac has been named Midwestern Collegiate Conference Coach-of-the-Year. Boulac has guided the Irish to a 16-13 record in their first year on the varsity level.

The Irish also placed several members on the All-Conference teams. Outfielder Rachel Crossen earned first-team honors.

Irish players named to the second team were pitcher Missy Lynn, catcher Amy Folsom, infielder Laurie Sommeriad, outfielder Megan Fay and designated player Mia Faust.

run for the Irish in the bottom of the sixth to end the game on the 10-run rule.

Hitting stars for Notre Dame were Rachel Crossen and Megan Fay. Crossen had two RBIs to add to her team leading total of 13. Crossen also leads the team in batting. Fay had an RBI.

"We played really well in the first game," said head coach Brian Boulac. "We played to win, and Barb Mooney pitched as well as she has all season."

Amy Raczkowski started the second game for Notre Dame and pitched well, allowing only one hit in four innings. Freshman Missy Lynn replaced Raczkowski and did not allow a hit for the remainder of the contest, winning her 14th game against nine losses.

ND wrestling squad will travel to USSR

What began as an inside joke has turned into reality for the Notre Dame wrestling team.

Irish coach Fran McCann will take 12 of his wrestlers to the Soviet Union on May 22 for a 10-day tour that includes dual matches in Moscow, Leningrad and Minsk.

McCann had told seniors Pat Boyd, Jerry Durso and Chris Geneser when he recruited them that the team might make a trip overseas in mind. This trip fulfills that promise. . . with slight variations.

"Coach McCann said we might be going to Japan," said Boyd, who earned All-America honors last month with a fifth-place finish in the NCAA 142-pound division. "It was kind of a joke among Chris, Jerry and myself that it was just a recruiting ploy they came up with."

"Then they mentioned last year the possibility we might go to Russia."
