ND settles suit with Umbrella Graphics

By KENDRA MORRILL
Senior Staff Reporter

Umbrella Graphics can no longer use Notre Dame trademarks without the University's written permission, according to a settlement agreement reached by Umbrella Graphics and the University last Thursday.

The University filed a lawsuit against the South Bend screen printing company in January alleging Umbrella Graphics infringed upon Notre Dame's federal, state and common law trademarks and engaged in unfair competition under Indiana and federal law.

A court order had allowed the seizure of goods bearing Notre Dame trademarks from the Umbrella Graphics store at 2925 Mishawaka Avenue on Jan. 12.

The University is satisfied with the outcome of the lawsuit, according to Carol Kaesebier, assistant general counsel. "As in any lawsuit these things take time," Kaesebier said, "but it went smoothly and was resolved satisfactorily."

Kaesebier would not comment on whether Umbrella Graphics was satisfied with the settlement. "They agreed to it," she said.

Todd Garrison, a spokesman for Umbrella Graphics, said he could not comment on the case according to the terms of the agreement.

The settlement states: "Umbrella Graphics... agrees to refrain from

TENURE: SET FOR LIFE

Tenure important in terms of quality of the University

By JOHN O'BRIEN
Senior Staff Reporter

Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part series on the Notre Dame tenure system.

After many years trying to balance research and teaching, faculty members are waiting for the decision that will confirm or terminate their careers at Notre Dame.

"I wouldn't say I'm nervous, but I am anxious," said Vicki Martin, assistant professor of biological sciences. "It's been a long year with a lot of stress," she said.

Martin is one of 60-70 junior faculty members who is awaiting a tenure decision. If she receives tenure, she is, in effect, insured of a job for life. If she is denied tenure, however, she has one year to find another position.

University Provost Timothy O'Meara called tenure "one of the most important things in terms of the quality of a university."

"When I first became provost of the University, I felt that the time had come to raise the standards of the University," O'Meara said he accomplished this by requiring stronger qualifications and denying tenure to those faculty who didn't meet them.

O'Meara added, "But at the same time, I had two missions: raise the standards, but also pay more."

According to Thomas Mason, vice-president for business affairs, the salaries of Notre Dame faculty are among the top quartile (25 percent) of American university professors.

"The cost of living around here is so low compared to the East coast and West coast, and that makes Notre Dame an even more desirable place to work," said O'Meara.

O'Meara, however, said that a faculty member must not only be qualified but must also have strong qualifications. "There's no point in rewarding unless you're getting better quality," he said.

When speaking of quality, O'Meara discussed both quality of teaching and quality of scholarship and research.

According to O'Meara, Notre Dame tries to emphasize both research and teaching, unlike other institutions.

"At some institutions, pressure to publish and get research grants is so strong that people get so preoccupied that they neglect their teaching," O'Meara said.

O'Meara said that Notre Dame has an added pressure to excel in research.

"At a university, scholarship and teaching are important last year to make up the difference. 'If that's done again this year, I'm in favor of the idea,' she said.

Morton Fuchs, chairman of the biological sciences department, said that his department's committee on appointments and promotions looks for both teaching and research.

"I can't get into a person's head, but I suppose the

Zang leaves position of Investment Officer

By MICHAEL WELLS
Staff Reporter

Father Richard Zang has left his position as the University's Investment Officer, effective this week.

Scott Malpass, the assistant investment officer, has been named acting Investment Officer until a replacement for Father Zang can be named.

Zang, who received his B.B.A., A.B. in Philosophy, and M.B.A. from Notre Dame, administered University investments for 18 years. According to the University's Office of Public Relations, Zang also acted as rector in student residence halls for 11 of the years he was here.

"We are grateful for the stewardship of Father Zang during a period of unprecedented growth in the University's endowment, and we wish him well," said Father William Beauchamp, vice president of the University.

Zang refused comment on his departure.

The Investment Office administers the University's endowment, those funds donated by alumni and friends of Notre Dame. During the time Zang held the position of Investment Officer, the endowment has grown to a little under half a billion dollars, said Malpass.

Malpass, a 1984 Notre Dame graduate, came to the office in August from his job as a portfolio manager with the Wall Street firm of Irving Trust Company.

He said he believes that as the endowment grows, the of-

WORLD BRIEFS

Rolls of toilet paper were the prizes for the winners of a lottery in the Ukrainian city of Stakhanov. The rolls didn't top the $115 million jackpot offered last week in Pennsylvania, but the winners seemed happy with their prizes. The newspaper Literary Gazette on Wednesday told the story of Ira, a girl who bought three tickets and walked away with several rolls of toilet paper, a towel and a small bowl. The lottery tickets cost 50 kopeks-- about 81 cents-- more than the actual price of many of the prizes. "But, don't forget that there are great shortages," Literary Gazette said. "In the city of Stakhanov, except for the lottery, one cannot get these goods."

NATIONAL BRIEFS

The desperate Oral Roberts struggles to raise more than $4 million by Saturday to save Oral Roberts ministry, his religious empire of television evangelism. Roberts said in late March he had five weeks to raise $11 million to pay past-due bills or creditors would "start dismantling" the ministry. Richard Roberts, the evangelist's son, said more than $4 million still is needed by Saturday, when Oral Roberts University graduates nearly 1,000 of its 4,300 students. Roberts announced Tuesday he was pulling the university's athletic teams out of NCAA competition and applying for admission in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics to save money.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Emerson Electric Co. of St. Louis has forwarded its first installment of a $100,000 commitment to the University of Notre Dame to establish a junior faculty fellows program in the College of Engineering's Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering. "We are grateful to the Emerson Electric Co. for its timely and significant contribution to the work of a very important department in the University," said Father Edward Malloy, University President. Funds from the Emerson Electric Junior Faculty Fellows Program will be used to support the research of the department's young faculty members and also to underwrite fellowships for graduate assistants.

The John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation's Selection Committee has selected 198 artists, scholars and scientists from among 3144 applicants for Fellowship awards totaling $5,251,000. Notre Dame Faculty members receiving the award include Kent Emery, assistant professor, Program of Liberal Studies, for his work on the life and works of Denys Ryckel, and Thomas Kselman, associate professor of history for his work on death and the afterlife in 19th-century France. Emery was also awarded a $65,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities for a project entitled, "A Critical Edition of Henry of Ghent's 'Quodlibet III.'"

Father Richard McBrien, Crowley-O'Brien-Walter professor and chairman of the University of Notre Dame's Department of Theology will receive an honorary doctorate of letters from Quincy College in Illinois on May 14. McBrien, a native of Hartford, Conn., was ordained a priest for that city's archdiocese in 1962. After receiving his doctorate in theology from the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome in 1967, he taught at Boston College and was a visiting professor at several Catholic colleges, universities and seminaries. He has been a member of Notre Dame's faculty and chairman of its theology department since 1980. Author of a syndicated column in the Catholic Press and a frequent commentator on ecclesial affairs, he is author of several articles and books on ecclesiology including the bestselling "Catholicism."

Cold fusion is a lofty illusion

The recent claim by two scientists who said they achieved cold nuclear fusion has blown the fuses of their angry colleagues.

B. Stanley Pons, a chemistry professor at the University of Utah, and chemist Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton, England, said Mar. 23 that they achieved nuclear fusion in a jar of water at room temperature.

If true, their experiment could tap an unlimited source of cheap energy, or worse, the Congressional checkbook. That could mean an end to the energy crisis, inexpensive material for advanced nuclear weapons or research megabucks.

That's power one doesn't trifle with.

But physicists at a two-day conference of the American Physical Society in Baltimore, Md. fused together to show evidence debunking the claim.

Dozens of attempts to reproduce the Pons-Fleischmann experiment have failed. Physicists at Caltech, MIT and other research institutions say Pons and Fleischmann's conclusions were wrong. Some have even questioned their colleagues' competence, making sarcastic remarks.

One physicist was ingenuous enough to recite verse:

*Tens of millions of dollars at stake, Dear Brother,
Because some scientist put a thermometer
At one place and not another.*

What are Pons and Fleischmann talking about? How can they be right and so many others wrong? Has science gone mad?

But the only talking either scientist is doing is to the U.S. Congress, after the University of Utah requested $25 million for further research.

Small wonder. Msrs. Pons and Fleischmann could get a lot of taxpayer dollars if they convince Congress that cold fusion research is worthwhile.

Some things in this world are worth $25 million, but watching a jar of water for temperature fluctuations isn't.

Of course, if cold fusion can be achieved, the payback in energy savings might be worth it.

'Some things in this world are worth $25 million, but watching a jar of water isn't.'

Regis Coccia
Managing Editor

Yeah, yeah, without researching it, we'll never know. But without proof that cold fusion is possible, Congress shouldn't give out cold cash.

Fusion, the opposite of atom-splitting, occurs when atoms join together, producing heat and neutrons. This usually happens at very high temperature, like 10 million-plus degrees Fahrenheit.

Cold fusion, however, can be produced at room temperature with deuterium, a form of hydrogen, and palladium. At least that's what Pons and Fleischmann say.

The effect of fusion is tremendous power, like the feeling military leaders got when it was developed for hydrogen bombs.

Think what life could be a century from now, when tabletop fusion apparatus is available for fourth grade science projects. Everything electrical could be run on the marriage of two atoms.

Cities could be powered for years without relying on Saudi Arabia. Who knows, in 2089 maybe the Middle East will have been obliterated by cold fusion bombs.

Fusion could give a whole new meaning to "crude oil." Disinherited Saudis might need to buy our oil. OPEC would join the dinosaurs. Jazz would never be the same.

And to think, it would all have started with two chemists keeping vigil over a jar of water.

Innsbruck celebrates 25th

By SARA MARLEY
Senior Staff Reporter

The Notre Dame Foreign Study Program in Innsbruck, Austria, recently marked its 25th anniversary.

The 27 students currently on the program celebrated with representatives from Notre Dame and the University of Innsbruck.

The program was started in 1964 and a friendship agreement between Notre Dame and the University of Innsbruck was signed in 1982.

Sr. John Miriam Jones, associate provost, represented Notre Dame at the anniversary celebration, said Isabel Charles, associate provost and director of the Foreign Study Programs.

A bilingual Mass, a commemorative tree planting and a reception with the students were held on March 24.

Each year between twenty and thirty students participate in the program, although nearly sixty have participated at one point. They are joined by a professor who serves as director.

The current Austrian coordinator of the program is Helga Horak and the current director is Brian Pavlac. Past directors still at Notre Dame include Klaus Lanzinger, professor of modern languages, Albert Wimmer, assistant professor of modern languages, David Schindler, associate professor in the Program of Liberal Studies, Norlin Rueschhoff, professor of accountancy, and Alexander Hahn, professor of mathematics.

The Innsbruck Program is the oldest of Notre Dame's Foreign Studies Programs. Students may study in Innsbruck; Angers, France; Tokyo; Mexico City; Cairo or Jerusalem. A summer program is also held in Tiajin, China.

Two students are studying in Toledo, Spain, currently and eight will be next year as a part of an experimental program, according to Claudia Kselman, assistant director of Foreign Study Programs.

Both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students may participate in the programs, and Notre Dame students are eligible for the Saint Mary's programs in Rome and Maynooth, Ireland.

The Arts and Letters London Program and the Rome architecture program are run independently of the Foreign Study Office.

Shuttle for Venus to launch on Thursday

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—The countdown marched smoothly Wednesday toward a second attempt to launch the shuttle Atlantis with a crew of five and a space probe destined for Venus. NASA's only worry was a worsening weather forecast.

"All in all, things look good for a 1:48 p.m. launch tomorrow (Thursday) and the start of our trip to Venus," launch test director Albert Sofge said of shuttle preparations.

The weather outlook, however, was not the greatest, with forecasters saying Wednesday afternoon there was a 40 percent chance that either rain or high winds would prevent a launch during the available 64-minute launch period. That was up from 30 percent in the morning and 20 percent two days ago.

The first launch attempt last Friday was aborted just 31 seconds before the planned liftoff because of a short circuit in a fuel pump. NASA said the delay cost about $300,000.

The mission to take the Magellan spacecraft into orbit will revive a U.S. planetary program that has been dormant since the launch of Pioneer-Venus in 1978.

"After an 11-year gap in the planetary program, we're anxious to get started," said John Gerpheide, project manager for Magellan.

Shuttle chief Richard Truly opened an afternoon news conference with, "Here we are again, and we're ready to fly again. We've fixed our problems."

"The weather is not going to be as good as it was last Friday, but it appears it will be good," Air Force Capt. Thomas Strange, the shuttle meteorologist, said "there is a 40 percent chance of a violation of weather constraints."

He said the forecast called for a chance of rain showers. But of more concern, he said, was the possibility of crosswinds of more than 14 mph that could be dangerous if the shuttle had to make an emergency landing on a runway near the launch pad.

On Thursday, the shuttle must be launched by 2:52 p.m., the end of a 64-minute "launch window," in order to have Magellan in the right position for a flight to Venus. If it isn't launched by May 28, Magellan will have to wait for two years before Earth and Venus are in the right position again.

Technicians working around the clock replaced the fuel pump and a suspect fuel line in half the time expected, enabling NASA to reschedule the launch for Thursday, at least a day earlier than officials thought was possible.

Engineers had thought there was a leak in the fuel line that was replaced, but tests turned up nothing. They believe a vapor cloud seen spewing from the line, thought at first to be gas, was trapped water vapor.

Sofge reported both new parts had been checked and certified for flight and that the engine compartment had been closed up. The launch team prepared to pump 528,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into Atlantis' external fuel tank early Thursday.

The five astronauts reviewed flight plans and honed their flying efficiency over central Florida in T-38 jet planes.

"This time we're going to see if we can get it right," said David Walker, who will command the mission. "We're extremely pleased the folks here at the Cape were able to do such a good and quick job getting it ready to go again."

Thousands of students march at Beijing Univ.

Associated Press

BEIJING- With a burst of firecrackers and the bang of a gong, thousands of Chinese students marched for democracy and freedom Thursday on the 70th anniversary of the first student movement in China.

Students at Beijing University, China's most prestigious college, poured out of the campus gate at 8:30 a.m.

Ten minutes later at nearby People's University, several thousand students rolled out onto the streets, carrying dozens of red and white banners calling for a free press and democratic reforms. One man wore a red headband that read: "mom, I'm not wrong."

The marchers were cheered on by thousands of people along the way, much like last week when 150,000 students and supporters staged a 20-mile march through the capital.

The students said Tuesday they would march unless the government recognized their independent student organization. On Wednesday, the government refused.

More than 40 universities around Beijing were expected to join in the march to Tiananmen Square, China's symbolic seat of power, student leaders said.

Most moved southward from the main university area in northwest Beijing, and thousands more from at least eight universities began a separate march toward Tiananmen from the northeast section of the city.

Since April 15, when the current demonstrations began, students have successfully marched to the square on five different occasions.

They also have boycotted classes the past two weeks in the largest protest Chinese Communist authorities have faced in their 40 years of rule.

Police closed off the central square early Thursday, clearing all pedestrians off the vast 100-acre plaza. Police were stationed about 15 feet apart around the perimeter to keep people off.

About 2,000 international finance officials and bankers were to gather at the Great Hall of the People, on the western side of the square, Thursday morning for the opening of the annual meeting of Asian Development Bank.

"They tried to close it (the square) on April 22, and look what happened then," Beijing Normal University student leader Wu'er Kaixi said Wednesday. On that day, more than 150,000 students and supporters occupied the square in defiance of a police order.

"Our protest tomorrow will show that Chinese democracy has arrived at a new stage," he said. "It will be a historic march."

Several hundred police gathered at an intersection just south of Beijing Normal University, a center for the pro-democracy student activism that has rocked the Chinese government since it began on April 15.

Police presence has been heavy at previous demonstrations, but police are unarmed and have made only minimal efforts to stop the marchers.

Marches also were reportedly planned in Shanghai, Tianjin and other cities Thursday, the 70th anniversary of the May 4th Movement, China's first student appeal for democracy.

About 60 journalists from state-run newspapers who signed a petition Wednesday for greater press freedom also said they planned a rally Thursday outside the gates of the official Xinhua News Agency.

The tightly controlled press has barely covered the demonstrations and has expressed the government line that the independent student unions formed by the activists are illegal.

Nation's students get poor grade

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Spending on education is up but progress is at a standstill, Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos said Wednesday in releasing a report card that rates the nation's students as "merely average."

"The good news is that the schools are not worse; the bad news is that we are not making progress," Cavazos said as he stood before his department's sixth annual State Education Performance Chart.

"We are standing still, and the problem is that it's been this way for three years in a row. Frankly, the situation scares me," he said.

The figures show a decline this year in the national high school graduation rate and falling scores on college entrance exams in half the states.

In reaction, the Council of Chief State School Officers, while acknowledging that "the task ahead is gigantic," noted that 44 of the 50 states have made college entrance test gains since 1982 and 38 states have improved their high school completion rates since then.

But Cavazos called the longer-term gains minimal. He said "scores on college entrance exams are still substantially lower than they were in the 1960s" while the graduation rate has gone up less than two points.

"As a nation our educational performance is merely average," Cavazos said. "People are still willing, apparently, to accept that we're not doing well and can't compete."

If educational progress has stagnated, the Education Department's chart shows the same cannot be said of per-pupil spending. The national average was $3,977 per student in 1988, up from $3,165 in 1982—a 26 percent hike.

"We are already spending more money per student than our major foreign competitors, Japan and Germany. And yet our students consistently fall behind the competition in competitive testing," Cavazos said. "Money alone is not the answer to our education deficit."

Cavazos said he would write to state school chiefs, governors and school board presidents and urge them to adopt specific goals such as boosting high school graduation rates to 90 percent and cutting in half the number of children who fail a grade. He said states and districts should issue annual reports on their progress toward such goals.

Specifically, the department's chart shows that national scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) fell.

South Korea to stop protestors

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea- President Roh Tae-woo on Wednesday threatened to invoke emergency powers, which could mean martial law, if students and workers continue the kind of violent protest in which six riot policemen were killed.

He said his government was determined to stop the wave of radical protest that has battered South Korea in recent weeks, but he did not outline specific action in a televised speech to the nation.

"If violence and illegal acts endanger democracy and the future of the country, I would be obliged to invoke emergency measures as empowered by the constitution," he said.

South Korea's constitution permits the president to rule by decree or impose martial law in cases of emergency.

Roh's warning responded to the killing of six riot troopers early Wednesday at Dongui University in Pusan, a southern stronghold of the opposition.

People seldom are killed in South Korean protests. Riot officers wear protective helmets and shields, along with fireproof fatigues, and normally are armed only with tear gas and batons.

The six who died were set afire when they broke into a room on the seventh floor of the university library to free five comrades held hostage. They were the first policemen killed since a riot officer died in June 1987.

Authorities said students seized the hostages Tuesday after a violent demonstration against the firing of warning shots by police on Monday when protestors menaced a police station.

Students hurled firebombs and set fire to a barricade drenched with paint thinner as the policemen were climbing over it. Some officers wrapped in flames jumped out of windows and others were burned to death or asphyxiated, police said.

Ten officers were in critical condition and police said they expected more to die. Officials said about 10 other policemen and students suffered minor injuries.

About 700 police raided the school, firing tear gas. Eighty-eight arrests were reported and the hostages later were freed unharmed.

Jo Jong-suk, chief of the national police, resigned after about 150 officers in Pusan conducted a sit-down protest.

fices duties will also grow. "I think the office is undergoing a transition," said Malpass.

Right now, Malpass explained, a major function of the Investment Office is to evaluate the performance of the investment advisers who actually do the day-to-day management of the University's portfolio. The office then makes recommendations to the Investment and Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees. It is this committee which actually sets investment policy, said Malpass.

The Investment and Finance Committee had its quarterly meeting Wednesday.

Infants die in dirty hospital

Associated Press

MOSCOW- Thirteen infants died in a two-week period in an Armenian hospital where cockroaches scuttled around the cabinets and doctors set mousetraps under the operating table, a newspaper revealed.

In a blistering attack that accused officials of indifference, incompetence and a coverup, the Armenian newspaper Kommunist said 25 children born at the Krupskaya Scientific-Research Institute in the capital of Yerevan had died this year, including 13 alone in the first two weeks of March.

In another Yerevan maternity hospital, three children died because they were given overdoses of medicine, according to the April 29 edition of the newspaper that reached Moscow on Wednesday.

A government commission established that many of the infants died of infections caused by unsanitary conditions "on the operating table, in the birth area, in areas for premature babies, on nipples, oxygen masks, breathing tubes, and even on medical lamps."

"Mothers say: cockroaches scuttle around the cabinets and under the operating table there is a mousetrap," Kommunist reported.

The commission determined that about half of the 13 children who died in March were among the highest-risk group of newborns, but that "at least five or six of these children did not have to die," the newspaper said.

It said nothing about the 12 other children born at the institute who have died this year.

The paper said the institute was closed, its director, G.G. Okoev, was fired, and other senior personnel were demoted.

In an earlier interview, the paper said Okoev had blamed the high death rate on the high-risk nature of its patients and a flu epidemic among the mothers.

Citing the case of the three other children who were given overdoses of medicine, the newspaper demanded: "is this coincidence, or is it the system? A deeper and more serious discussion is needed here."

After many years of not publishing such statistics, the official press said a year ago the infant mortality rate was about 25 per 1,000 live births. In some areas of Central Asia, it is as high as 70 per 1,000. The infant mortality rate in the United States in 1986 was 10.3 per 1,000.

The report came after other reports of abuse and neglect in recent months at maternity hospitals that shocked Soviets.

Officials said in March that 49 mothers and babies had been infected with the AIDS virus at a hospital in Elista by nurses who used unsterile syringes.

Soviet officials acknowledge the free system of health care often is poor, and they are putting more money aside to improve it. The Tass news agency Wednesday quoted Health Minister Yevgeny Chazov as saying that much of that money would be targeted at care for mothers and children.

"Considering the lag of mother and child care centers, it has been decided to spend 40 percent of public health's capital investments for the development of these institutions," Tass said.

average person looks for a balance between the two," said Fuchs.

While almost everyone seems to agree that research isn't the only thing, many agree it is vital nonetheless.

O'Meara and Martin both said that quality research and quality teaching are intricately related.

"Better researchers become better teachers," said Martin, who said that she talks to her students about her research. O'Meara added, "Scholarship is one way to keep the mind alert, provided it is not abused."

"You'll find that the better teachers are also the better researchers," said Mary Jane Clancy, assistant professor of biological sciences.

Clancy, the only member of the biological sciences department up for tenure last year, was denied tenure.

Clancy said she didn't feel hindered by pressure to do research. "There is pressure to research, but one in my position wants to do research. As a scholar, I'm always trying to learn more," she said.

Next year, Clancy will be a member of the faculty at the University of New Orleans. She said, "I'm glad to be leaving here," but refused to comment further on her reasons.

According to O'Meara, his efforts to improve the University through tougher standards for tenure have worked.

"We turned down far more people at tenure time ten years ago than we do now, which shows that our standards are being met," he said.

"We're having to compete with faculty in other universities who do nothing but research," said Martin. "Being able to keep up with them and still have a full teaching load says a lot for the quality of the faculty here."

Thus, through an emphasis on tougher qualifications and on a balance between teaching ability and scholarship, O'Meara is trying to build a highly respected and well-paid faculty.

Those faculty members who don't receive tenure must continue their scholarly work elsewhere. Those who do, however, will be set for life.

making public statements to reporters for newspapers, magazines or television or radio stations regarding this case, this settlement or the January 12, 1989, seizures which are inconsistent with the statements, acknowledgements and representations made in this agreement."

"That's the best way of explaining my position," said Garrison.

"Whatever is in the agreement is what can be published," said Arvil Howe, Umbrella Graphics' attorney. "Notre Dame doesn't say anything; we don't say anything."

Under other terms of the settlement, Umbrella Graphics:

- acknowledged it had infringed upon Notre Dame's trademarks, engaged in unfair competition and, in at least one instance, had filled an order for approximately $15,000 in illegal products

- waived all claims that its goods were improperly seized last January

- agreed not to honor orders which include University trademarks unless the customer has written authorization from the University's director of student activities

The agreement conforms with Notre Dame's policy requiring all students or student groups to obtain authorization from the Office of Student Activities before using any of the University's trademarks.

Non-students also must obtain a license or consent from the University before using any of its trademarks.

Umbrella Graphics deals primarily with students, said Garrison. "Our intention all along has been to provide a creative outlet for students," he said.

Lakeville, Ind. victims buried

Associated Press

LAKEVILLE, Ind.- As mourners crowded into a tiny rural church to pay their last respects Wednesday to the minister and three members of his family found shot to death, investigators continued to search the parsonage and countryside nearby, looking for clues.

About 250 mourners filed into the Olive Branch Church of the United Brethren in Christ for the memorial service for the Rev. Robert L. Pelley, 38; his wife, Dawn, 32; and daughters, Janel, 8, and Jolene, 6.

The Pelleys were shot to death in their home across the gravel parking lot from the church on Saturday. Their bodies were discovered Sunday morning by a church trustee.

The Pelleys' three surviving children also attended the memorial service.

In the eulogy, the Rev. Alfred G. Price, a regional superintendent of the church, read from the Bible's book of Isaiah: "the righteous are taken away to be spared from evil."

"Though his ministry at Olive Branch was a short one--two and a half years to be exact--it was a very successful one," Price said. "We, like all who know the Pelley family, are going to miss them greatly."

C. Ray Miller, a bishop of the church, said the family had served Jesus Christ in a team ministry.

"They are now in the actual presence of Jesus. Isn't that tremendous?" Miller said.

The mourners sang "Amazing Grace," which was Mrs. Pelley's favorite hymn, and "What A friend We Have In Jesus," then filed quietly out of the church.

Miller had urged the mourners to keep the spirit of the memorial service and not talk about the deaths to each other or to the media.

Many of the mourners drove the few miles to Southlawn Cemetery in South Bend, where the caskets had been taken directly from the funeral home.

At the cemetery, two larger bronze caskets rested beside two smaller silver caskets, all surrounded by sprays of roses, chrysanthemums, gladiolas and carnations.

"We commit their bodies to the grave, and their spirits to God, who gave them," said Miller in the brief graveside eulogy.

Many of the mourners wept openly during the graveside service and embraced members of the victims' families who had traveled from Michigan and Kentucky.

Robert "Jeff" Pelley, the couple's 17 year-old son, remained at the graveside for about 20 minutes after the services, accepting condolences from high school friends who surrounded him.

Hours before the memorial service, police divers resumed their search for a weapon in farm ponds near the parsonage, while a sheriff's horse patrol searched wooded areas nearby for additional evidence.

Make reservations now for graduation weekend.

Faculty Senate reforms needed

Recently some members of the faculty have been disgruntled at what they perceive as an inability of the Faculty Senate to have substantive influence in the decisions of the administration. They believe that faculty recommendations are either ignored or acted upon lethargically.

Sadly, there is a large degree of truth in these perceptions. The University listens, even acknowledges to the faculty that their ideas have merit, then somehow loses sight of those ideas when University policy is implemented.

One need not question the sincerity of some University officials in their desire to improve conditions for the faculty to believe that faculty input has been brushed aside. Some individual members of the administration have shown a genuine willingness to hear input from the faculty. Instead, the source of the problem is that the faculty voice is not heard when the actual decisions are being made.

This situation is not unique to Notre Dame. At many peer institutions faculty members are upset over their lack of input in administrative matters.

Most of these schools, however, do not see faculty unions as the solution to the problem. Similarly, any proposal to unionize the faculty at Notre Dame is misguided. The ultimate threat of a union lies in its ability to strike, an option inconsistent with a teaching mission and anathema to most faculty members. Disbanding the Senate out of frustration is also not the answer to the problem.

The solution lies in allowing the faculty some measure of shared governance while leaving final authority in the hands of the administration. The emphasis should be on electing rather than appointing faculty members to positions of authority. Direct faculty election of an associate provost, for example, could give the faculty an important voice in the administration building while leaving ultimate authority unchanged.

The need for improving the faculty voice is clear, but radical solutions such as unionization or the disbanding of the senate are not the answer.

U.S. citizens must help reform American politics

Dear Editor:

Where has American integrity gone? Over the past decade, Americans have heard of an increasing number of scandalous activities within our government. Although scandals are nothing new to any government, unethical behavior has dominated politics for too long. Since the press started to openly criticize and reveal more dishonest politicians in the early sixties, we are finally becoming more aware of our elected officials' improper conduct. But these reports might only be the tip of the iceberg. Although President Bush promised to crack down on ethics, his effort might not be enough to stop the established corrupt practices which constantly deteriorate our government. The nation's citizens must help reform American politics.

The government cannot correct the entire problem by itself. As citizens, we must learn the importance of upholding the law and realize the implications of a public official's violation. Our understanding must also include supporting prosecutions of leaders who break the law. By practicing this standard, we protect ourselves from the rise of demagogues who could easily destroy our republic. Although investigations into the integrity of James Wright and Oliver North place an incredible burden on the system, our support will discourage illegal activity in the future.

We must encourage our future leaders to develop a patriotic attitude while serving the country. A sense of honor and pride should guide their activities rather than their self-interests. Furthermore, the disgrace placed on violators must exceed any personal gain that could be achieved from their positions. The recent resignation of Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and the suicide of his aide, Ihei Aoki, demonstrates the significance that the Japanese place on upright behavior. The shame they experience for their disservice to their country remains unmatched in the United States. We need to emphasize this same sense of pride within our society. Unethical behavior cannot be tolerated.

As we enter the next century, these dishonest practices may prove to be fatal to the country. With individuals simply working toward their self-interests, the government's policy will be unsuccessful in meeting the nation's needs. We must clean up our government and begin forming proper goals. Corrupt policies cannot guide our nation into the future. We must restore the dignity we once held.

Faculty unionization: A lesson for students

Dear Editor:

I had not been following the talk of faculty unionization closely until I read The Observer's front page article (May 2, 1989). What struck me as odd was that, while at a university, the primary activity is the education of students by learned faculty, these groups have a relatively minor share of the power at Notre Dame. The administration, whose role can only be secondary at best, holds the lion's share of control over the direction of the university. In recent years, this imbalance of power has led to conflict between the Administration, faculty, and students alike.

The Notre Dame faculty, through its Senate, has recently begun to complain of this imbalance. Robert Kerby even mentioned the idea of faculty unionization as a method of combatting this inequity. However, the faculty seems reluctant to consider this option as evidenced by Prof. Kerby's statement in the May 2 Observer. In reference to any possibility of a faculty strike, he said, "A professorial faculty would be reluctant to take action that would penalize teaching." Another member of the faculty senate, who requested anonymity, took an opposing view in claiming that although the faculty's job is to teach they each had the welfare of his/her family to consider.

I believe that each is missing the most important issue. The role of the faculty is to teach, but there is no better method of education than that of example. If the faculty believes that they deserve rights denied to them, then the faculty should be willing to demand the rights even to the point of unionization. And, perhaps, the students will follow.

Drunk driving: A senseless risk of life

By R. Craig Spann

Last Fall, I was looking forward to October Break with great anticipation. The day finally arrived when I made the grueling trip to O'Hare for my flight home to San Antonio. Life was a little more "awesome" than usual then. Our football team had just beaten that unspeakable team from Florida, and we had a week off from classes. The week flew by too fast, as breaks always do, but I had experienced one of the best breaks in recent memory.

Most of my friends were off at school, except the two who went to school in town. The three of us lived it up, for they didn't have all that much to do for school that particular week. Forgive the cliché, but we were having the time of our lives without a care in the world. Well, Sunday came, and so did the trip back to the wonderful South Bend climate. Break was over; I said my goodbyes to friends and family, and off I went.

Sounds like a pretty good time, huh? Well it was. School was back in session, and our football team had just become the most highly ranked team in the land. A few weeks had passed. I received a letter from one of those two friends with whom I spent my October Break, Tim. It was a typical letter from a friend. He told me the low down on some of our friends from high school, as well as the general happenings. Well I wasted no time writing him back (mail doesn't come my way all that often).

Tim never got my letter. Not because of our wonderfully reliable mail delivery, but rather because of the choice of another individual. Seems funny how other people can have such a pronounced effect on us sometimes. Tim was on a county road travelling home one Friday night early in November. The story goes that he was approaching a road onto which he was going to make a left hand turn. As he waited for the oncoming car, it began to swerve into Tim's lane. There was nothing he could do but sit there and accept what was going to happen. I'm not so sure he even knew what happened. The truck which was headed toward him did in fact hit Tim head on. Tim died instantly at the age of 20. The driver of the other vehicle escaped with minor injuries.

Death is really hard to accept. In a way, it's perpetual suffering because it can never be resolved. I can't begin to describe the suffering and pain I went through after Tim died. It was really hard to accept the fact I would never talk to him again.

During Junior Parents'

Weekend, I had the pleasure of listening to a very intelligent man speak at the closing brunch. Lou Holtz told a story of his football awards ceremony one year during high school. He told us of a speech in which his high school coach made one point which he remembered. It is a point which I will always try to remember, too. Holtz's coach said that we should let people know how much they mean to us before it's too late. I never got a chance to say goodbye to Tim. I never got a chance to tell him how great a person and a friend he was. For this I will be forever sorry.

Sometimes I really become angry when I recall what happened. Tim's death, my suffering and the suffering of his family and friends could have been avoided. The man who was driving the truck was driving under the influence of alcohol. Nothing in life should be so tough, but sometimes we make things tougher than they ought to be. We lose perspective. This man lost his perspective of how he should have behaved in the situation. And now his life has become much tougher than it should be.

I share this story with you for one very specific reason. We live in a society in which we are free to drink to have some fun, and that can be good. We live in a society in which we are also free to get behind the wheel of a car after we have had our drink, and that is bad. I want you all to do me a favor. Summer is coming up soon and the rest of our lives after that. Please, if you are faced with this decision to drink and drive, or a friend is thinking about driving drunk, don't lose your perspective. It's not that tough to find a friend who isn't under the influence, or even to find a cab. You may think you're all right to drive, but why take that risk? Is it worth just that one little mistake that could change your life, and the lives of those around you, forever? If only that man who killed Tim had the chance to make a choice like you all have.

Craig Spann is a junior electrical engineering major.

Instituting co-ed dorms at ND

Change in attitude needed for co-ed dorms to work

Dear Editor:

After reviewing the three-part article on co-ed housing (April 25-27, 1989), I can certainly see both sides of the issue but wholeheartedly promote giving co-ed housing a chance. Perhaps by experimenting in a couple of dorms to begin with, a better impression of the possible success could be determined, both from a student and administrative point of view.

Right now, however, that success seems to be judged solely on the jump from "no-ed" to co-ed. Possibly mentioned in the committee report but not emphasized enough in the articles, were the problems of the transition steps in the difficult process--that is, in deciding which dorms will be the "lucky ones" (or unlucky ones, depending on your point of view) to be made co-ed. If the survey results (April 25, 1989) are an accurate indication of overall attitudes towards the topic, it is interesting to note that while 78% favor the co-ed arrangement, 36% did not want their dorm to be the one.

It was a concern to see that "...the report states that there was 'overwhelming support for this change. ... in some of the newer North quad dorms, particularly Siegfried, Knott, and Pasquerilla East and West.'" While it is true that the L-shaped structure of these dorms would be conducive to going co-ed by section, surely they could not be the only dorms mentioned by the report to go co-ed. The fact in numbers remains that, for each dorm mentioned (which houses approximately 250 apiece) to keep an even male-female ratio close to 500 women would have to be displaced. My guess is both that there are not that many locations off-campus to house that number of people and that the next dorms to be built will be for graduate students. Will the Housing office be willing to relocate that many students on-campus, and at the same time, will the admissions office be willing to lose that many spots in the next (few) freshman class(es)? I doubt it. For those who would argue how the male Howard residents had to be relocated two years ago when that dorm underwent a sex change, think again: relocating 180-195 men in 13-15 male dorms is a little different from relocating 500 women in the remaining 7 female dorms.

In order for co-ed housing to work, we all have to be open to the possible idea of having our dorm changed to co-ed, male and female alike. Any dorm on campus would be able to go co-ed by floor, which I bet would be easier for the hall staff to monitor and to deal with than a dorm co-ed by section. While new undergraduate dorms most likely will not be built for co-ed purposes in the near future, we have to work with the ones we have now. There is also the issue of who will be the ones to move out of the chosen dorms, which will be difficult enough as it is. In the meantime, co-ed dorms could never be a reality unless there is a drastic change in the attitude that "bringing members of the opposite sex into our dorm would devalue the dorm."

Co-ed housing would give women equal access to ND

Dear Editor:

We, as alumnae and alumni and academic administrators of the University, praise The Observer's recent examination of the complex issue of coresidential housing (The Observer, April 25-7). Many valid opinions emerged concerning how such a policy change would affect the lives of current Notre Dame students and staff. An equally important issue, however, is how such a policy change could affect applicants for admission to the freshman classes of the 1990s.

The freshman applicant pool for admission to Notre Dame has been 39% female, 61% male for several years. However, space availability in the residence halls (within the single sex structure) has dictated that the admitted and eventually enrolled classes of freshman have been 36% female, 64% male. As a result, females do not have equal access to the University, nor do they achieve even proportional representation in the freshman class. While acknowledging the strides that have been made in realizing a greater female presence on the campus in recent years, we believe the time is right for the next step. Reapportioning the freshman class along the time-tested lines of the applicant pool would add approximately 75 more women and subtract the same number of men. In this way, we would extend the proper offers of admission to the applicants who demonstrate the strongest credentials, regardless of gender.

We perceive single sex residence hall space to be the current obstacle to equal access. Several halls experimenting with coresidentiality would help correct the present inequity. We encourage all men and women of Notre Dame to consider these points as they form and express their opinions on this important matter.

Student senators want input

Dear Editor:

Since taking office on April 2, we, the student senators, have discussed many issues of importance for the Notre Dame community. The five student senators have pursued objectives such as extending the current library hours, providing a student 24-hour lounge in LaFortune, evaluating the content of the Northeast Neighborhood rezoning plan, and formulating a realistic expansion of United Limo services on campus, such as providing transportation of student's luggage to the Main Circle and free shuttle service to and from the airport.

We want to work as a unified body to promote coherent goals. As of now, we are working to set up an advisory committee in each of our respective districts to help us accurately determine exactly what the student body desires. We encourage you to get involved in student government, and if you have any ideas, questions, or comments about the Student Senate, please contact anyone of us at the student government offices or call us personally.

Basketball fosters special spirit

Dear Editor:

When I first arrived at Notre Dame last August, I heard from many people that one of the greatest times I would have during my four years here would be playing in the Bookstore Basketball tournament. After what I have experienced over the last few weeks, I have finally come to realize the full feeling of this fantastic competition. Both of the games that I was involved in had special significance to me with memories that will not soon be forgotten.

In my team's first game, we played an overmatched team and were victorious by a lopsided score, beginning our Bookstore careers on a high note. Our happiness did not last long, though, because our next opponent was All The President's Men, a highly seeded team led by none other than Father "Monk" Malloy. We realized our chances of victory were slim, but we knew that just the fact that we were playing against such a respected figure was thrill enough. Many curious spectators showed up to see Monk's first game, so the stands were full. We brought our own contingent to cheer us on, but it did not matter. We were defeated by a pretty hefty amount, but we had fun despite the loss.

Even as I participate in the games as a fan now, I still feel the intensity of Bookstore Basketball. I think it is great to see so many athletes get the opportunity to "show their stuff." I have viewed many highly competitive games, including the exciting championship game, and I always went home thinking the same thing: win or lose, both teams left the court knowing they were involved in something special.

The Top 10 News stories of 1988-89

1 Bush appears at ND

Then-Vice President George Bush appeared at Notre Dame less than one week before his victory in the Presidential election of 1988. Bush's speech in the Stepan Center, sponsored by the Law School's White Center on Law and Government, stressed the "great divide" between himself and his Democratic opponent, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

2 New alcohol policy announced

Students arriving back on campus in the fall faced a revision in the University's alcohol policy. The revisions followed recommendations put forth by the Task Force on Whole Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol. The most prominent changes included new restrictions on SYR hall semi-formals and a ban on advertisements for alcohol and bars in campus publications.

3 Bush ticket controversy

Preceding then-Vice President George Bush's visit to campus, a controversy arose regarding the distribution of the free tickets to the event. A mix-up between the Office of Student Activities and the Public Information office caused two different times for the event to be announced. A group of Republican students managed to take advantage of the situation, causing further controversy.

4 Bush, Hiler, Bayh win in 1988 races

Republican candidates George Bush and Dan Quayle were successful in their bid for the White House. John Hiler (R) was re-elected to his 3rd District Congressional seat, and Evan Bayh became the first Democrat to occupy the Indiana governor's seat since 1964. At Notre Dame, a large turnout of student voters was somewhat thwarted by long lines at the one voting machine in Stepan Center.

5 Hiler-Ward debate held at ND

Notre Dame played host to a debate between the two candidates for the 3rd District Congressional seat. Incumbent John Hiler (R) and two-time challenger Tom Ward (D) discussed topics, provided by a student panel, which ranged from foreign policy to funding for higher education. The debate was part of a student government drive to increase students' political awareness.

6 Breslin-Kinkopf win student elections

Matt Breslin and Dave Kinkopf won the runoff election for student body president and vice president, defeating the ticket of Tom Rask and Melissa Smith. The Breslin-Kinkopf ticket won by a nearly 70-30 margin. Breslin promised to continue the programs of the Tom Doyle-Mike Paese administration which preceded him.

ND Knights of Columbus in limbo following suspension

The Notre Dame chapter of the Knights of Columbus was suspended in October 1988, amongst allegations of theft and financial misdoing. The KOC chapter was officially suspended by the University on November 1. Previously, the KOC had operated in an unusual relationship with the University, which included their own building on South Quad.

7 Men's cross-country finishes ninth in nation

The men's cross country team finished among the Top Ten teams in the nation for the second year in a row. Led by seniors Dan Garrett and Ron Markezich, the Notre Dame team placed ninth in the NCAA Championship meet after a second-place finish in the tough District IV competition.

Miami game lives up to the hype 2

The Irish football team beat Miami 31-30 in a game that lived up to the incredible pre-game hype. The campus was overwhelmed for months by Hate-Miami fever and Jimmy Johnson bashing, but the Irish came through on Saturday as Pat Terrell knocked down a Steve Walsh pass to keep the Hurricanes from rallying to beat the eventual National Champions.

4 Men's soccer gets its first bid as well

The men's soccer team won the MCC tournament and followed it up with its first-ever appearance in the NCAA Tournament. The Irish finished the season with a 17-3-2 record ranked 15th in the nation.

5 Peltier, Pesavento lead Irish in banner season

Led by junior Dan Peltier and senior Pat Pesavento, the Irish baseball team put together one of its finest seasons ever. Looking to break the team record of 39 wins, the team's regular season highlights included early-season victories over nationally ranked Texas and a baseball rematch win over Miami.

6 Young Irish team opens eyes in NCAA hoops

The young Notre Dame basketball team implemented an up-tempo style and the talents of five freshmen to race to a 21-5 record. Led by junior co-captain and team MVP Joe Fredrick and freshman standout LaPhonso Ellis, the Irish defeated Vanderbilt in the first round of the NCAA Tournament before falling to Georgetown.

8 Tradition continues in Bookstore Tournament

Malicious Prostitution surprised Adworks' All-Stars and Sparky's Franchise II clobbered An Angel, Sally's Comet and Three Other Heavenly Bodies to claim the men's and women's Bookstore Basketball championships. The tradition lived on as the annual tourney was played on the courts of Notre Dame in any and all weather conditions.

9 Wrestlers grapple for national rankings

The Notre Dame wrestling team sent seniors Jerry Durso, Chris Geneser and Pat Boyd and junior Andy Radenbaugh to the NCAA Tournament. The Irish as a team finished 21st in the nation, led by Boyd, who finished fifth and Durso, eighth in their respective weight classes. Both were named All-Americans.

10 Fencers dominate foes through regular season

The Notre Dame fencing teams continued to dominate their regular season opponents, but were disappointed in the NCAA Tournament with performances that were nonetheless characteristic of the Irish position as a national power. The men finished fourth in the nation, the women third. Janice Hynes finished sixth individually for the Irish.

YUKON HO!

We'll never have to clean a plate,
Of veggie glops and goos.
Messily we'll masticate,
Using any fork we choose!

No more of parental rules!
We're heading for some snow!
Good riddance to those grown-up ghouls!
We're leaving! Yukon Ho!

A Calvin and Hobbes Collection by Bill Watterson

COLLEEN CRONIN
assistant accent editor

Those students who immediately turn to the inside back page of the Observer everyday to catch that great little boy and his tiger will be ecstatic to hear that a brand new Calvin and Hobbes anthology has been released.

Entitled "Yukon Ho!", Bill Watterson has managed to put together a hilarious collection of Calvin's greatest moments. "Yukon Ho!" is the fourth Calvin anthology released, and each publication has topped the previous one in sales figures.

"Yukon Ho!" contains some classic Calvin antics, such as his campaign for a new dad, and trying to talk his mom into letting him have a flame thrower. Of course, Calvin and Hobbes take their well-known death-defying toboggan and wagon rides down nearby hills while contemplating the meaning of life—don't all little boys and their tigers?

Kids today can take valuable lessons from Calvin on such important matters as how to try to get away with eating cookies instead of dinner, how to escape the dreaded bath, and just making life as difficult as possible for parents and teachers.

Calvin's excuse for not doing homework is that his parents forgot to pay the gravity bill. He claims his parents are communist because they make him go to bed. He and Hobbes decide to secede from the family and walk to the Yukon so they don't have to deal with totalitarianism any longer; of course they pack chocolate syrup sandwiches for nourishment. A verse from their "Yukon Song" declares:

*We're abandoning this life
we've led!
So long, Mom and Pop!
We're sick of doing what* you've said,

And now it's going to stop!

Calvin is not always a deranged maniac—there are some very touching moments such as when he loses Hobbes in the woods, or when he scratches a sleeping Hobbes just to make him smile.

"Yukon Ho!" will be a favorite for Calvin and Hobbes fans. Though lacking the color strips of "The Essential Calvin and Hobbes," this book will still bring many giggles and outright laughs.

"50's diner wanna-be's" beware--Bonnie Doon

MATT GALLAGHER AND

accent writers

Move over, 50's-diner wanna-be's. Bonnie Doon is the real thing.

At five locations in South Bend and Mishawaka (mysteriously numbered randomly from one through seven), Bonnie Doon has been serving up good and cheap burgers, hot dogs and sandwiches, but most of all, ice cream since before most of the locals who frequent it can remember.

The Mishawaka-based company has an exclusive contract with Notre Dame, so all the ice cream served on campus is Bonnie Doon's. They manage to do things with it though, that University Food Services just can't.

This is the place to get shakes, malts, floats and Bonnie Doon is the perfect place for a finals study break, offering an inexpensive and welcome change from the Huddle and fast food.

sundaes, all priced inexpensively from the Kiddie Sundae ($1.10) to the Banana Boat ($2.25). Our request that a chocolate shake ($1.35) be made with vanilla ice cream and chocolate syrup was met with a puzzled look from our bleached-blond, hair-netted, white-clad waitress who said, "That's the way they're made."

The Tin Roof Sundae ($1.55) is a perennial favorite made with an ice cream of choice, either chocolate syrup or hot fudge, spanish peanuts and whipped cream.

The Doon adds a few squirts of syrup in the bottom of the glass too and gives you a spoon just long enough to reach it.

They must get a kick out of cleaning their tables, because the sundae was so full that ice cream and syrup gushed out when we tried to take the first few bites.

Bonnie Doon isn't just ice cream as a varied and equally inexpensive menu backs up dessert.

We went with the standard Bonnie Burger Platter ($2.80) which presented us with two patties, cheese, lettuce, tomato and mayonnaise. Like all Bonnie Platters, the entree came with two choices of fries, cottage cheese, coleslaw, tomato and lettuce, applesauce or peach slices.

The fries are of the thick and slightly underdone variety, but everything else was very good.

We also sampled the Chicken Fillet ($2.25) for those Domers who just can't get enough of them here. We recommend it, finding it more tender than its dining hall counterpart.

All of the platter entrees are also available as sandwiches with reduced prices, including the Bonnie Burger ($2.05) and the Chicken Fillet ($1.50).

Also available are soup, chicken and tuna salad, green salads, Fillet O' Fish, B.L.T.s and grilled cheese to name a few.

Store number 7 is located on U.S. 31 North, just north of Denny's and Tivoli's. It is the smallest and most unassum-ing of the five stores, with about eight booths and a counter.

The ambiance is, well, genuine, with old-time separate drive-up windows that look a little complicated. You expect someone on roller skates to bring your food out, but unfortunately they don't.

The restaurant is clean and in an effort to keep its employees the same there are no fewer than three separate signs in the bathroom reminding them to wash their hands.

Bonnie Doon is the perfect place for a finals study break, offering an inexpensive and welcome change from the Huddle and fast food. If you can't make it there by next week, store number 5 (the location, or indeed existence, of a number 6 eludes us) is located on Lincoln Way West, just east of Michiana Regional Airport.

Montreal earns shutout, knots series with Flyers

After dropping Game 1, Canadians resume quest for Stanley Cup with 3-0 win over Philly

Associated Press

MONTREAL-- Patrick Roy stopped 24 shots for his second career playoff shutout and Montreal's sputtering power play accounted for two goals as the Canadiens defeated the Philadelphia Flyers 3-0 Wednesday night, evening the Wales Conference finals at one win each.

Roy, whose 34-game unbeaten streak at the Forum was ended in the opener, earned his first playoff shutout since a 3-0 victory over Calgary in Game 4 of the 1986 finals.

The Canadiens, who entered the game 6-for-36 during the playoffs on the power play, got a first-period goal from Stephane Richer during a 5-on-3 advantage and added another from rookie defenseman Eric Desjardins in the second.

Only the play of goaltender Ken Wregget, the hero of the Flyers' 3-1 opening-game victory, kept the score down. Wregget made 36 saves as the Flyers were outshot 39-24. The series resumes Friday night in Philadelphia.

Montreal, which has allowed only two power-play goals in 11 playoff games, shut down the Flyers' league-leading unit, holding Philadelphia scoreless on four attempts. The Flyers are 0-for-9 with the man-advantage in the first two games.

Roy earned an assist on Richer's goal, which gave the Canadiens their first lead of the series.

Richer took a Saint from Roy, skated the length of the ice and fired a slap shot from 45 feet. Wregget made the save but Richer raced in and took the rebound away as Wregget tried to pull it under his pads with his stick. The Montreal forward flipped the puck into the open net at 5:31.

Two straight for Mohan

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame golfer Pat Mohan was recently named to the Golf Coaches Association of America Academic All-America team for the second-straight year with a 3.066 GPA in Accounting.

Mohan is only the third Irish golfer to win this award two years in a row. The others were John Anthony ('84,'85) and Dick Connelly ('86,'87).

Mohan, who finished with the best average on the team for the second year in a row, also was named team MVP for the second consecutive year.

Smoltz tosses six-hitter, hits homer to help Atlanta end losing streak

Associated Press

ATLANTA-- Rookie John Smoltz pitched a six-hitter and hit his first career home run Wednesday night as the Atlanta Braves ended an eight-game losing streak, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3.

Smoltz, 4-2, gave up Juan Samuel's home run to start the game but did not allow another hit until the sixth inning. He struck out nine and walked two.

Smoltz went 2-for-3 and his two-run homer put Atlanta ahead 3-1 in the fifth. His 428-foot drive to center field came after Bruce Benedict singled with two outs against Don Carman, 1-4.

Dale Murphy and Jeff Blauser also homered for Atlanta. Murphy tied the score at 1 with his fifth home run in the second and Blauser's first homer led off a three-run seventh.

Reds 6, Mets 4

NEW YORK-- Chris Sabo snapped a seventh-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and Barry Larkin followed with another sacrifice fly Wednesday night, leading the Cincinnati Reds past the New York Mets 6-4.

Reds manager Pete Rose missed his third consecutive game with bronchitis and flu symptoms. Coach Tommy Helms is managing in his absence.

Expos 6, Astros 5

MONTREAL-- Spike Owen hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning Wednesday night, rallying the Montreal Expos over Houston Astros 6-5.

The Astros took a 5-4 lead in the top of the 11th on Ken Caminiti's run-scoring single before Montreal came back. Nelson Santovenia singled with one out and Owen hit a 2-0 pitch from Juan Agosto for his second home run.

Indians 6, Royals 2

CLEVELAND-- Shortstop Kurt Stillwell dropped Joe Carter's two-out pop fly, allowing two runs score during a three-run fourth inning, as Cleveland beat Kansas City 6-2 Wednesday night and snapped the Royals' four-game winning streak.

Tom Candiotti, 3-1, pitched a seven-hitter for his second complete game, striking out six and walking one to give the Indians their fifth victory in their last six games.

Blue Jays 2, Athletics 0

TORONTO-- Mike Flanagan pitched a four-hitter for his 19th career shutout as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Oakland Athletics 2-0 Wednesday night.

The Blue Jays entered the game having lost four straight games and eight of their last nine. The victory was the first for Toronto over the A's in the last eight games at Exhibition Stadium.

Angels 2, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE-- Jack Howell homered on Bob Milacki's first pitch of the ninth inning to snap a scoreless tie and California beat Baltimore 2-0 Wednesday night.

Milacki, 1-2, pitched eight-plus innings and allowed six hits in losing his first game in five career starts at Memorial Stadium.

Brewers 7, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS-- Gary Sheffield and Rob Deer each hit two-run homers during a five-run third inning as Milwaukee beat Minnesota 7-2 Wednesday night to snap a five-game losing streak.

The Brewers sent the tumbling Twins to their 10th loss in their last 11 games. Prior to their losing streak, the Brewers had swept a three-game series against the Twins in Milwaukee, outscoring Minnesota 27-8.

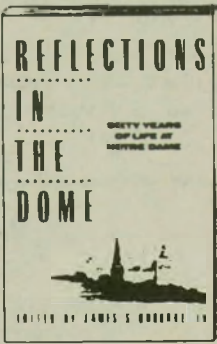

Mariners 3, Tigers 2

SEATTLE-- Jim Presley hit his first home run in 207 at-bats and rookie Erik Hanson allowed four hits in 6 2-3 innings as the Seattle Mariners beat the Detroit Tigers 3-2 Wednesday to complete a three-game sweep.

The last time the Mariners swept a three-game series from the Tigers was May 30-June 1, 1986, also in the Kingdome. Detroit has lost seven of its last eight games.

Hanson, 3-2, allowed two runs, one earned. He struck out six and walked four walks before Dennis Powell relieved with the bases loaded in the seventh.

Powell struck out pinch-hitter Gary Ward to end the inning. Mike Schooler pitched 1 1-3 innings for his fourth save.

Kline

Dame fanatic. "He's a true legend in Notre Dame baseball. I just hope I can touch half as many people as Jake has."

Kline posted a lifetime coaching record of 558-449-5 at Notre Dame. His former players include future Hall of Fame inductee Carl Yastrzemski, Notre Dame Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal, South Bend Mayor Joe Kernan and Montreal Expos President John McHale.

All those former players learned a song about Kline that the Irish teams passed on from year to year. It dealt with a 1917 game against Michigan in which third baseman Kline hit three home runs.

"We beat Michigan 14-6 that day," said Kline, who still has that afternoon's game ball in his South Bend apartment. "The kids used to sing 'Coach hit three home runs... and the fourth was foul by inches.'"

Kline captained that 1917 team and also earned monograms in 1915 and 1916. The Williamsport, Pa., native posted a career average of around .350.

That impressed the Pittsburgh Pirates enough to draft Kline, but he passed up the offer to go to France and serve with the 23rd Engineers in World War I.

"I had small hands, but I could hit and had a good arm," said Kline, who also played Interhall baseball against Knute Rockne. "I might have had a chance (in the pros)."

Notre Dame named Kline the Director of Athletics and offered him a teaching job in the math department when he came home.

The Notre Dame job did not prevent Kline from doing some moonlighting in semipro leagues.

"I managed baseball in California, I won a pennant in the Southern Minnesota League, I played in Nova Scotia," said Kline. "I was a baseball bum."

When the Notre Dame Athletic Department finally handed Kline a full-time job, however, it came in football.

"When Rockne was killed in '31, Jess Harper met me on campus and asked me what I was doing," said Kline. "I told him I was teaching math. He asked if I would come out and coach freshman football."

It did not take long before Kline got the opportunity to coach in the sport he enjoyed the most. The 39-year old Kline replaced George Keogan, who left in 1934 to concentrate on his job as basketball coach.

Kline also continued jobs as freshman football coach and math professor, but his teams managed to win. After an 8-11 campaign in his debut season, the Irish assembled six consecutive winning seasons. Notre Dame went on to earn its first berth to the NCAA playoffs in 1949.

Kline's connections with the football team helped him put together strong teams with a limited amount of scholarships.

One of the best players to take the field for Kline—Joe Theismann—earned more acclaim as quarterback for Notre Dame and the Washington Redskins.

"We made a southern trip, and the scouts there said, 'Jake, the kid with the best potential is that third baseman, Theismann,'" said Kline. "He happened to be a quarterback, and when we got back, Ara said, 'Jake, I gotta have him.'"

Notre Dame never played many more than 20 games per season in those days. The University would not allow Kline to expand that schedule.

"I played most of the Big Ten schools," said Kline. "With the schedule down to 20 games, you didn't have the chance to play anyone else."

Because the University offered the baseball program as few as one or two scholarships, Kline also had to rely on inside contacts to draw athletes.

Former Notre Dame player John McHale became one such inside contact. After ending his major league career, McHale started a career working on teams' staffs.

"I knew Jake very well, and we've remained friends a long time," said McHale, who worked as farm director for the Detroit Tigers and as general manager with the Milwaukee/Atlanta Braves before arriving at Montreal. "He told us about the people he liked. He was a very good judge of talent, and he saw a lot of good players because he was playing Big Ten teams."

According to McHale, this practice also worked the other way around. McHale claims responsibility for bringing Carl Yastrzemski to Notre Dame.

"I encouraged Carl Yastrzemski to go to school there," said McHale, who worked with the Detroit Tigers at the time. "We had a bonus rule in the major leagues then which limited how much you could pay a person. We thought they'd repeal the bonus rule, which they did."

Yastrzemski only stayed at Notre Dame for his first year, and freshmen were not eligible to play varsity sports at the time. He still managed to leave a lasting impression on Kline.

"He came out on his own, and I told him that freshmen weren't eligible, but I let him walk on the freshman team," Kline said of Yastrzemski, who will enter the Baseball Hall of Fame in August. "When I saw his arm and the way he could hit, I told him I'd give him a scholarship for the next year."

"In his sophomore year, his family came to my office and told me he was getting professional offers," Kline said. "I told him he'd better go see a lawyer. He signed with the Boston Red Sox for $110,000. They certainly weren't the poor potato farmers they made themselves out to be."

Yastrzemski, the only American League player to have more than 400 career home runs and 3,000 career hits, never played for the Notre Dame varsity team or for McHale's team.

"I called (McHale) and told him he ought to get this kid," said Kline. "He said he could get him $60,000. I told him, 'John, forget it.'"

ally competitive team. Coming off a .414 batting average in his sophomore campaign, people had high expectations for him this year.

He was a preseason All-America choice by the Copper-tone Collegiate Baseball poll, and had the third-highest batting average among all returning Division I baseball outfielders. He also was named an Academic All-American, with a 3.4 GPA and a major in Accounting.

With all of these expectations, Peltier hasn't missed a beat. He leads the team with an amazing .458 batting average, and is also the team leader in home runs (9), doubles (20) RBI (57), hits (82), on-base percentage (.523), and slugging average (.754).

And who says hard work and dedication don't pay off? Peltier has just been selected to be one of 40 players who will try out for the 25-member Team USA, a club that plays teams from around the world, including Mexico, Japan, Canada, Korea and Cuba. If he makes the team, Peltier will play 32 games from June through August, travelling to 11 different states and two foreign countries.

"Dan Peltier leads the team with the bat," says Murphy. "Every game he's out there to play, and we can expect one or two hits a game from him. He's a fantastic, first class worker who has been a major contributor to our recent success in baseball."

Murphy has ingrained an attitude of winning into his team, and Peltier is no exception.

"When I go to the plate," says the 6-1, 205-pound junior, "I have the attitude that I'm not going to get out. That's the attitude you've got to have, and that's what Coach Murphy has taught us to do. He's honestly the best coach I've ever had in any sport."

Peltier has had his share of coaches, playing both baseball and football at Shenendehowa High School in New York. In baseball, he set a school record .554 batting average in his junior year, and was named MVP on the baseball team in his junior and senior years.

Besides the honors in baseball, Peltier played quarterback and led his high school team to a 10-0 record and state championship in his senior year. He was recognized for his contribution by being named to the New York All-State team.

All of these accomplishments behind him, Peltier now has to look ahead to the possibility of pursuing a professional career in baseball. Professional teams have shown a great deal of interest in him, and Peltier has a tough decision ahead of him whether to turn pro this year or wait until he has graduated.

A Letter from ND baseball

Dear Notre Dame Students,

The tradition of excellence in Notre Dame athletics speaks for itself, and you, the students, have always played an indispensable role in that excellence. The 1988-1989 year has been a great one for Notre Dame athletics, beginning with the national championship in football last fall. Now we have a chance to cap the year off by winning the Midwestern Collegiate Conference baseball tournament and earning an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

The MCC tournament will be held May 17-20 in downtown South Bend at Coveleski Stadium, and Notre Dame is the official host of the event. We all know how impressive you, the students of Notre Dame, can be as the 12th man in football and the sixth man in basketball, so I am asking that you be the 10th man on the diamond for us at the MCC tournament.

We've had a great year, starting with our sweep of the Miami Hurricanes last fall, continuing with our wins at Texas and again at Miami this spring, and including the program's first-ever national ranking. I can think of no better way to continue the success of the baseball program and the entire athletic department than by winning the MCC tournament and advancing to the NCAA tournament. But there is no doubt that we need your help to do so.

In particular, I would address this to the seniors, who will be in town during the week of the tournament awaiting graduation. Helping us win the MCC tournament would be a tremendous way for you to make a farewell gesture as part of the Notre Dame family.

Pat Murphy
Head Baseball Coach

"It's all going to come down to whether it's right for me," says Peltier. "Obviously money is important, and the organization has a lot to do with it. I'm going to have to weigh it (turning pro one year early) against finishing my education."

"Whatever decision I make I know it will be the one that's right. If it's right, then I'll do it."

His coach knows he has the talent to go to the professionals now, and only hopes Peltier thoroughly considers his options.

"It will take a lot of money and a great situation to take him away from the greatest university in the world," says Murphy. "Dan has to do what's right for him right now. He's got to consider whether the organization, placement, and overall situation is right, and he has to thoroughly research what he's doing."

"There's no question he can hit in the pros. He could be put in double-A ball right now," continues Murphy. "He's the best college baseball hitter right now, that I've seen."

Peltier should not be a high risk for professional scouts, because he has maintained excellent performance against the best pitchers in the country, including a 4-for-4 effort last season against Andy Benes, the number one pick in last year's professional draft. Benes currently has four wins and a 0.44 ERA at Wichita (San Diego's class AA affiliate).

Peltier's dedication in the classroom makes it all the harder to leave prior to achieving a degree.

"They (baseball and education) are both important," says Peltier, "but this year I think my priorities have switched because my baseball future is more definite, but in no way am I neglecting studies."

"The bottom line is that if I'm well prepared, then I know good things will happen."

Nothing's certain in Bookstore anymore

You can't count on too much in Bookstore Basketball. The weather is unpredictable, the courts have fault lines and your first-round opponent could range from the defending champions to five guys wearing tutus.

About the only thing you can count on is that it takes 21 points to win.

Until Sunday.

While the Stepan crowd celebrated an apparent upset by Malicious Prostitution over Adworks All-Stars, one very important thing was overlooked.

The game was not over. The score still stands Prostitution 20, Adworks 19.

Brian O'Gara
Marty Strasen
Sports Writers

Both WVFI radio and The Observer had 11-9 scores, and at least three known videotapes of the game verify a two-point Adworks halftime lead.

The rest of the story is well-known. Prostitution rallied and won the game despite actually scoring only 20 points.

"It's too bad that the tournament had to end that way," said Manning. "We had a conflict in the score, and we had to go with the official scorecard. We thought it was right. As it turned out, it was wrong."

It was an honest mistake. It was unintentional. We're not trying to throw stones at the Bookstore officials or scorekeepers, and we're certainly not trying to diminish the accomplishments of Malicious Prostitution. They played like champions.

But we want more Bookstore.

One way to settle this is to pick up the game at 20-19 Prostitution. But the mistake was made much earlier, and it would be silly to send everyone back to Stepan for one or two points.

We could start over at halftime, but we want to see more basketball than that.

Let's play a best-of-five series, starting Monday. Next week is perfect. There are no classes, it couldn't possibly snow, and there would be no problem with biased coverage because The Observer is taking the week off.

We could use the electronic scoring scanner from Pop-A-Shot, which automatically registers points when the ball falls through the net.

Maybe Father Hesburgh could ref. How could you possibly give that guy a hassle?

OK, perhaps this is a little far-fetched. All it would really take is for the two teams to get together with two hoops and a basketball—first to 21 wins.

What do you say, guys?

We'll keep score.

University. The school (hereafter referred to as CSU) awarded Tyson an honorary doctorate of humane letters during commencement ceremonies.

After Tyson was given his doctorate, he showed why he never has and never will earn any kind of degree on his own.

"I don't know what kind of doctor I am," he said. "But watching all these beautiful sisters here... I'm debating whether I should be a gynecologist."

The school, which shrugged off the comment, said it gave Tyson the degree "because of the circumstances he overcame." What about all of the ones he has created?

Tyson's new degree did not improve his common sense much. The next night, Albany, N.Y., police awarded Tyson a speeding ticket after his 1989 Lamborghini was clocked at 71 mph in a 30 mph zone.

Tyson was apparently dragging a Chevrolet Blazer. Like most of his fights, Tyson really picked some tough competition in that race. If he was going to get a ticket, he should have at least dragged Jose Canseco in Jose's infamous Jaguar.

The degree makes Tyson's resume that much more impressive. Along with this prestigious degree, Tyson can also boast of soundly beating under-matched and helpless opponents, wives and mother-in-laws.

CSU continues to support its decision to give Tyson the degree. In fact, the school has already listed its candidates for honorary degrees in the coming years.

Here's the list, to be finalized soon:

Jay Edwards: CSU says it can sympathize with Edwards because of all the people trying to set him up. And besides, CSU tried to lure Bobby Knight to coach its basketball team but he refused, if it even has a basketball team. I doubt that it does because Digger would have had them on his schedule by now.

Pete Rose: This degree depends on Rose being found guilty of betting on Cincinnati Reds baseball games. CSU says it admires a millionaire who wants to make more money, even if it means being banished from the game he dominated for years. If Rose is innocent, Art Schlichter is waiting in the wings.

Ben Johnson: The school feels this will increase its commitment to foreign exchange students. No matter how many times you show those Olympic replays, Johnson always beats American Carl Lewis.

Jimmy Johnson, Dennis Erickson and Larry Brown: They get a joint doctorate for commitment to football and basketball. CSU says the commitment doesn't need to be with one school, just with the same sport within the same continent.

Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom: The above athletes and coaches need someone to represent them. The degree may have to wait awhile, in case the two are serving time in a federal prison.

Irish set for Wildcat attack

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

The Irish take their 37-12 record into Evanston, Ill., for their second game with the Northwestern Wildcats this season.

The last time the two teams met, the Irish defeated the Wildcats on their home field on April 19. In that game, the Irish overcame a mediocre performance and relied on help from underclassmen to win 10-8.

Notre Dame possesses a 49-47 all-time record against the Wildcats.

"Northwestern is an excellent Big 10 baseball team," said Irish coach Pat Murphy. "Baseball is the best sport they have on campus. (Northwestern coach) Paul Stevens does an excellent job with that program."

Northwestern currently owns a 19-25 record, 10-10 in the Big 10. On Wednesday, the Wildcats beat Valparaiso 5-2, a team that Notre Dame struggled to beat earlier in the week.

The Irish will be trying to regain a little of the confidence that they had early in the season. In the last 13 games, the Irish are 8-4 and have dropped out of the Top 25.

The Irish will also be limping into the contest, with starters Ed Lund (foot) and Mike Moshier (ankle) out with injuries. When they will return is uncertain, and the MCC tournament is right around the corner, May 17-20.

Jake Kline an ND sports legend

Courtesy of ND Sports Info. Dept.

Jake Kline, a legendary figure in Notre Dame sports history, coached the Irish baseball team from 1934-75 and was offered a professional baseball contract by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1917, but passed on the offer to join the American war effort in France.

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series profiling Jake Kline, who coached the Notre Dame baseball team from 1934 to 1975.

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Associate Sports Editor

Former University of Notre Dame Professor of Mathematics Clarence "Jake" Kline likes to play a numbers game whenever anyone asks his age.

"I've only got six more years till I turn 100, but if you reverse the digits," I'm only 49," said Kline, who is better known for his 41 years as the Irish baseball coach. "I'll be only 59 next year."

Kline used a similar trick in 1972, when sportswriters and peers wondered how a 77-year old could continue to coach effectively.

"I'm not 77," said Kline, born Feb. 18, 1895 (the same day as George Gipp). "You just multiply seven times seven, and it comes out 49."

Anyone who watched Kline coach at the time might have fallen for that line. Until he retired in 1975 at the age of 80, Kline still was hitting fungoes at infield practice and producing winning teams.

"I got goosebumps meeting him," said current Irish coach Pat Murphy, a lifelong Notre Dan Peltier, pictured earlier this season against Illinois-Chicago, is presently considering the possibility of pursuing a professional baseball career next season.

Peltier brings meaning to term student-athlete

Most people do not realize the kind of hitter Notre Dame has in Dan Peltier.

"I don't think the players on the team realize that they're playing with one of the best hitters in the game," says Head Coach Pat Murphy. "Sometimes even I don't realize what a gem I've got."

This statement may come as a surprise to someone not familiar with the junior centerfielder. After all, being called one of the "best hitters in the game" is no small compliment. But just ask his teammates.

"People should come out and see for themselves," says leadoff hitter Pat Pesavento. "I love to watch him hit, and I like to get on base because I know he's going to knock me in."

Indeed, the junior from Clifton Park, N.Y., has been coming through with the bat this season. He leads the team in seven offensive categories, and is second on the team in three more.

"I like the feeling that people have faith in me," says Peltier. "If people have confidence in my abilities, I'm going to perform better. You can't let the pressure build on you because if you do, you're not going to play as well."

Thus far Peltier has dodged the pressure associated with being a star hitter on a nationally competitive team. Coming

Tyson's behavior not worthy of doctorate

I think it was Freud, or some other guy with a lot of time on his hands to do nothing, who said dreams are only fantasies that cannot come true.

I hope Freud was right because the dream I had the other night turned into a nightmare.

It was May 1989 at graduation ceremonies when Father Malloy began to distribute the honorary degrees. The first names seemed deserving—President George Bush and former NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. Then Malloy paused for the kicker.

"It gives me great honor to award this diploma to heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson," Malloy said.

Mike Tyson, the man involved in more fights outside the ring than in it? Mike Tyson, the man who probably could not even complete the application to get in here?

While hopefully this could never happen at Notre Dame, it did unfortunately occur last week at Ohio's Central State

Graham leaving Notre Dame

Quarterback seeks offense best fitting his passing style

Observer Staff Report

Quarterback Kent Graham has announced he is leaving Notre Dame and transferring to another school to continue his football career.

Graham has narrowed his choices down to Ohio State and South Carolina. He has visited both schools in the past week. He will be required to sit out one season but will have two years of eligibility remaining.

"My main reason for leaving is the offense going away from a passing style," Graham, a junior from Wheaton, Ill. said. "It's not because of the other quarterbacks coming in. I want to go to another offense and give it a shot. I just want to find an offense that's more suitable for my talents and abilities."

"It was a hard decision. I love Notre Dame, and I love the players and the coaches.

The education you get here is awesome."

Graham was the No. 2 quarterback for Notre Dame's national championship team, playing behind junior starter Tony Rice. He played in 17 games for the Irish, starting once, against Boston College in 1987. He completed 33 of 50 passes over the two seasons good for 402 yards.

"Tony Rice has done such an awesome job," Graham said.

"Coach (Lou) Holtz has been really cool about the whole thing. He helped me any way he could to come to a decision."

"Only a couple of close friends on the team knew," he said. "I tried to hide it. I wasn't sure what I wanted to do. The guys helped me think about it. They understood where I was coming from."

Graham said he wanted to have his transfer decision made as soon as possible, having other things on his mind. He's getting married May 20 to Courtney Kriegbaum, a student at Wheaton College.

"I want to emphasize that I really love Notre Dame, and it is a really tough decision to leave. I'm still looking around, trying to find the best possibility."
