Guam law makes abortion a felony

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A bill creating the most restrictive U.S. abortion statute was signed into law Monday by the territorial governor. The measure was hailed by anti-abortion forces, but civil libertarians promised to fight it.

"In my heart, I believe that a fetus is a human being," Republican Gov. Joseph Ada said in signing the bill, which prohibits abortion except when the mother's health or life are endangered.

The law, which passed despite a ruling by Guam's attorney general that it is unconstitutional, makes it a third-degree felony for a person to perform or help in an abortion. Seeking or having an abortion or soliciting someone to have an abortion are misdemeanors.

The law also sets a referendum during the Nov. 6 general election for residents of this Pacific Ocean island about 1,500 miles east of the Philippines to decide whether to keep the law.

In another development in the abortion war, an agreement to end a five-day anti-abortion filibuster in the Maryland Senate apparently unraveled. Both sides held firm in the debate over a bill to guarantee the right to an abortion in that state.

And, in Idaho, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus reaffirmed his anti-abortion stance but declined to say what he would do about a bill setting tough restrictions on abortions. The House-approved bill is scheduled for a final vote in the Senate on Wednesday.

Guam's 21-member unicameral Legislature unanimously approved the bill March 8 after Archbishop Anthony Apuron threatened in an interview with a television reporter to excommunicate any Roman Catholic senator who voted against it. All but one of the senators is Catholic, as is Ada. However, most of the senators said they were unaware of the threat.

Territorial Attorney General Elizabeth Barrett-Anderson issued an opinion Feb. 26 that the bill was unconstitutional because it violates a woman's constitutional right to privacy.

Both sides of the abortion debate agree the new law could provide a direct challenge to the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 landmark Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion on privacy grounds.

The new statute can't co-exist with Roe vs. Wade, said Janet Benshoof, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project.

Roland Rivera, vice president of the anti-abortion Guamanians United for Life, said the law "is the ice pick that's going to chip away at the big block of ice" that is Roe vs. Wade.

Benshoof said she immediately violated a provision of the law by advising women in a speech at the Guam Press Club later Monday where to go to obtain a legal abortion.

"I was very specific in my breaking of the law," Benshoof told the Associated Press in a phone interview. "I said women should go to Honolulu to have an abortion and gave the address of the Planned Parent-

Tyson lifts Mexico trips ban

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Assistant News Editor

The ban on student trips to Mexico has been lifted by Father David Tyson, Vice President for Student Affairs.

Tyson sent a letter to Student Body President Matt Breslin, in response to a recent Campus Life Council resolution which asked that the Mexico ban be dropped.

Tyson said that trips to Mexico will be assessed on an individual basis and students will have input in the decisions.

Student Activities will make decisions based on "health, safety, and liability issues," he said.

He said that the language barrier and personal cost are not adequate reasons to ban trips, but health and safety issues are.

The forum of Student Activities, Tyson said, "should afford more than adequate input by the sponsoring student group."

Tyson said he found it "somewhat inconceivable" that there is a lack of communication between students and Student Activities. It is the responsibility of Student Government and the Student Union Board (SUB) to have their trips approved before contacting a travel agent, he said, to avoid a situation which forces Student Activities to take a "reactive stance."

"Since the institution requires and collects fees paid by students, which are primarily administered by SUB and Student Government, sponsorship by Trial begins today for Imelda Marcos, accused of stealing more than $100 mil.

NEW YORK (AP) — While Imelda Marcos has drawn the most attention in the weeks leading up to the start of her trial Tuesday, her co-defendant, Adnan Khashoggi, is hardly a minor player.

Once reputed to be the world's richest man, the 54-year-old Saudi financier is said to have been the main financier and middleman of the Iran-Contra affair, in which proceeds of illegal U.S. arms sales to Iran went to rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

Khashoggi's lawyers say his holdings have diminished in recent years, but don't dispute that he's still a millionaire several times over.

Extradited from Switzerland on July 19, Khashoggi posted $10 million bail so he could live in his luxury apartment on Fifth Avenue. He promised to stay in the country to face charges that he helped Mrs. Marcos and her late husband, deposed President Ferdinand Marcos, defraud the Philippine treasury.

Khashoggi has been seen dining in the city's most expensive restaurants and has taken trips with the court's permission to Southern California,

Imelda Marcos

Aspen, Colo., and Florida. He wears an electronic bracelet to alert authorities if he ventures beyond a prescribed distance.

The trial of Khashoggi and Mrs. Marcos begins Tuesday with jury selection. Both have pleaded innocent.

The Marcoses were accused of stealing more than $100 million from the Philippine treasury to buy real estate and art in New York. Ferdinand Marcos died Sept. 28 in exile in Hawaii.

Khashoggi, who allegedly posed as the owner of some of the assets as a cover, was indicted on charges of racketeering, conspiracy, mail fraud and obstruction of justice. However, the Swiss government agreed to extradite him only on the last two charges.

He faces up to five years in jail and a $250,000 fine on each of the two charges of mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

Mrs. Marcos' attorney, Gerald Spence, said Monday he might subpoena former president Ronald Reagan to testify for Mrs. Marcos.

"Certainly the former president is a potential witness in the case depending on what the prosecution's proof is," he said. "The former president and Nancy Reagan were friends of the Marcoses."

Reagan fought a subpoena to testify for the prosecution at the trial of former national security adviser John Poindexter, who faces charges stemming from the Iran-Contra affair. But the judge ordered Reagan to give a sworn videotaped statement.

Reagan and his press secretary were traveling Tuesday and not available for comment, Reagan's office in Los Angeles said.

Mrs. Marcos is accused of taking part in the illegal transfer of more than $160 million.

INSIDE COLUMN

Editor's job the stuff dreams are made of

Last night former Observer editors came to me in a dream. "Alison," they said, looking sorrowfully at me, "the AP wire is down, the band building is missing and security refuses to confirm whether an investigation of the incident is being launched, the typesetter won't typeset and all the locks have been changed on the office doors."

Alison Cocks
Editor-in-Chief

So what's the problem? "Now you have to handle everything. And put out a 16-page forum for student thought with objective news coverage, thought-provoking Viewpoint pieces, entertaining features and the sports coverage everyone loves by tomorrow morning."

Great. Is that all? "No. You also have to oversee the sale of ads to offset costs, make sure the Classifieds program is functioning, kick the computers when there are system errors and field calls from irate officers of the 'Abortion Rights for Wives of Oppressed Aborigines Coalition.'"

Do I get any help? "Remember the competent staff you hired before Spring Break? They'll put their considerable talents to work to help you maintain your sanity. Don't forget, if it weren't for them you'd be laying out the paper by yourself until 5 a.m."

True. So I have to act calmly and rationally, maintain my cheerful disposition through every disaster, keep the staff happy and motivated and continue to improve the end product. Anything else?

"Don't forget the most important people of all."

Who? The administration? The alumni? My family?

"The readers. Primarily the students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. The easiest thing for them to do is to put down The Observer and discuss the state of the salad bar. Your job is to make them want to keep reading about events on both campuses."

Any suggestions? "You can start by being receptive to the input of the public. If they pick up the paper and read it with inquisitive, open minds they are qualified to comment. Even if they don't realize what goes into producing a daily newspaper doesn't mean their criticisms aren't somewhat valid. You can't please everyone, but you can at least try to satisfy the majority of them."

(Sigh) I suppose I also have to take classes, eat meals, sleep and call home once in awhile?

"That would be nice."

Is that all or can I do anything else?

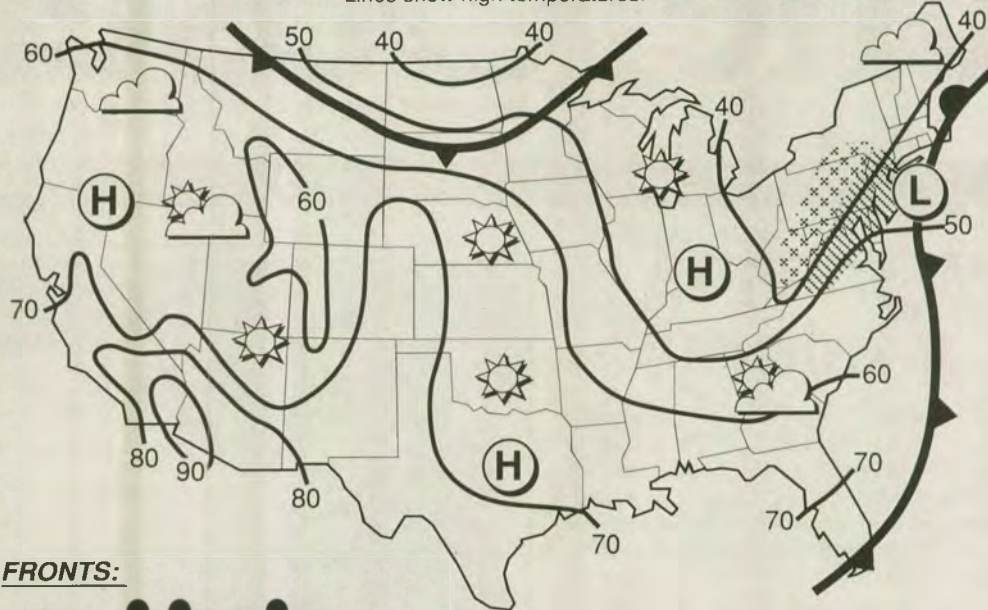

"We could use someone to jump over the moon."

No, thanks, I'll stick with the task at hand for now.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Assailants strolled into an ice cream parlor in a northwestern Colombian town yesterday and sprayed it with gunfire, killing six people and wounding four, police said Monday. Authorities were trying to determine the identities of the gunmen and the motive for the shooting late Sunday in Apartado, 280 miles north of Bogota, a police statement said. It said most victims were workers on the banana plantations that cover the Uraba region on the border with Panama.

Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa of Syria met with President Hashemi Rafsanjani of Iran on Monday and Rafsanjani stressed Iran's support for Syria in its confrontation with Israel, Tehran radio said. Sharaa emphasized the close relations between Syria and Iran. Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Sharaa discussed Palestine, Lebanon and other subjects with Iranian officials during his visit to Iran. But it did not mention the issue of Western hostages in Lebanon.

The British government said Monday it is setting up a special war crimes unit of police officers to investigate alleged World War II atrocities committed by people now living in England. Home Secretary David Waddington said the British police had never investigated war crimes before and the unit would work in the same way the police investigated "any other criminal activities." He said police, legal authorities and the courts would have the responsibility for prosecutions, trials and convictions and the government would not interfere.

Romanians in Bucharest attacked an ethnic Hungarian political association headquarters on Monday and the government appealed to the military to help control the situation, a member of Parliament reported. He quoted interim President Ion Iliescu as saying ethnic Romanians from villages near Tirgu Mures went to that the ethnically mixed, northwestern city and attacked headquarters of the Democratic Union of Hungarians in Romania with axes. Mircea Dinescu, president of the Romanian Writers' Union, said Iliescu confirmed reports of the raid to him and that Iliescu asked the army for help.

Walter Mack, who rescued a largely unknown Pepsi-Cola Co. during the Depression and turned it into the country's No. 2 soft drink maker, died Sunday after a lengthy illness at age 94. Mack ran unsuccessfully for the New York state Senate in 1932 and worked on Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's mayoral campaigns. He also served as chairman of the New York County Republican Committee. It was while trying to save the New York-based Loft's candy chain that he took a special interest in its Pepsi syrup division. Pepsi was spun off and Mack became its president in 1938.

The FBI searched around the world Monday for a dozen priceless artworks stolen from Boston's Gardner Museum. Authorities said it was the biggest theft of modern times — a $100 million-plus caper exceeded only by the looting of Germany's national bank at the end of World War II. The museum, meanwhile, disclosed that the missing works were insured for damage as well as restoration and conservation, but that it had no theft insurance.

Commander James Wetherbee, Notre Dame's first graduate in space, will present a Distinguished Alumni Lecture Wednesday, March 21 at 3:30 p.m. in Washington Hall.

Wetherbee will show slides and a 20-minute NASA film and also answer questions from the audience.

Wetherbee received his bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering in 1974. He served as pilot on the crew of STS-32, which was launched from the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Jan. 9, 1990.

In the longest Shuttle mission to date, crew members aboard the Orbiter Columbia successfully deployed the Syncom IV-F5 satellite and retrieved the 21,400 pound Long Duration Exposure Facility (LDEF) using NASA's remote manipulator system. The LDEF, a large 12-sided trunk that had been suspended in space for more than five years, contained 56 experiments sponsored by scientists of many nationalities.

A number of medical tests were conducted as well — including inflight lower body negative pressure and inflight aerobic exercise and muscle performance — to evaluate human adaptation to extended duration missions.

After 173 orbits of the earth in 261 hours, Columbia returned Jan. 20 with a night landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Commissioned in the U.S. Navy in 1975, Commander Wetherbee was designated a naval aviator in 1976. In 1981 he trained in the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School in Patuxent River, Md.

He was selected in 1984 by NASA as an astronaut candidate, qualifying him for assignment as a pilot on future space shuttle flight crews.

The lecture is free and open to the public. However, no tickets will be issued and seating is on a first come-first served basis.

ND graduates to be awarded

Special to The Observer

The University of Notre Dame's Alumni Association Board of Directors selected three Notre Dame graduates for awards during its winter meeting last month.

Dr. Dennis Cantwell, a 1961 graduate, will receive the William D. Reynolds Award. Established in 1984, the Reynolds award is annually given to a Notre Dame graduate who has given distinguished service to young people.

Cantwell, the Joseph Campbell Professor of Child Psychiatry at the University of California at Los Angeles, has for 17 years administered the largest child psychiatry training program in the nation, usually graduating ten specialists in child psychiatry each year.

Only 3000 board certified specialists now practice child psychiatry in the U.S. Cantwell will receive the award on April 28 during halftime ceremonies at the Blue and Gold football game.

Father James Riehle, a 1949 Notre Dame graduate, will receive the James E. Armstrong Award. A former dean of students and member of the Notre Dame staff since his ordination, Riehle serves as director of energy conservation, chaplain to the department of athletics and executive director of Notre Dame's Monogram Club.

Established in 1978, the Armstrong award is given to a graduate employed by the University who has given long and distinguished service. Riehle will receive the award on April 28 during the Alumni Association Senate meeting.

Dr. Michael Heisler, a 1971 Notre Dame graduate, will receive the Edward Frederick

Mom protects girl from media

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — The American mother of seven-year-old Hilary Foretich shielded her from the news media on Monday and swore she would keep doing exactly that as she presses her fight for the girl in an international custody case.

Plastic surgeon Elizabeth Morgan of Washington, D.C., was reunited over the weekend with her daughter ten days after the mother arrived in New Zealand to discuss the case with her lawyers.

She has accused the father, dental surgeon Eric Foretich, of sexually molesting the child and in 1987 began serving 25 months in jail for refusing to reveal Hilary's whereabouts.

Foretich denies the charges. He saw his daughter last week for the first time in more than two years and has since returned to his Falls Church, Va., home.

Hilary was spirited to New Zealand 18 months ago to live with her maternal grandparents, William and Antonia Morgan.

Morgan flew from Auckland to Christchurch to be with her child and her own parents. The group has been staying at a motel while Hilary attends a private school.

Morgan would not allow news media near her daughter following the weekend reunion and pledged Monday to dodge the media as she continues her fight for custody.

Hilary's hiding place became the focus of world attention when her father found her here three weeks ago.

The New Zealand Family Court is to rule on the custody issue and has barred reporters from covering the proceedings. No date has been publicly announced for the hearing. Foretich and Morgan now are divorced.

Morgan refused to speak to the media Monday or let herself be photographed with her daughter.

She would not say how long she expects to stay in Christchurch and had no comment to all other questions. She drove her daughter the 200 yards from the Diplomat Motel to Selwyn House school Monday after being alerted that photographers were waiting outside.

She took a back route to the school Monday afternoon to whisk Hilary home.

Reporters have been ordered not to enter the grounds of the Diplomat Hotel, Hilary's home since mid-1988.

Also Monday, Morgan met her husband, U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Paul Michel, at Christchurch Airport. Michel told The Associated Press he arrived in Auckland on Sunday and spent the day talking to his wife's lawyer, Lyn Stevens, and her senior U.S. lawyer Stephen Sachs.

Michel said he will stay in Christchurch for one week before returning to Washington.

He said he saw a "good deal of Hilary for nearly a year before she went in hiding."

But by late Monday he still had not seen the child at the center of the bitter custody battle.

hood office there. I encouraged pregnant women to leave the island to have an abortion."

Earlier, a police spokesman said authorities had no plans to be at the speech and if someone wants to file a complaint against Benschhof, it will be forwarded to the attorney general's office.

A spokeswoman for the attorney general said she was going to issue a statement later in the day.

Benschhof went to Guam to try to persuade Ada not to sign the bill, but was unable to arrange a meeting with the governor.

"It was outrageous that the bill was signed," she said.

Rachael Pine, staff attorney for the Reproductive Freedom Project, said she expected immediate action.

"It will be either a lawsuit or a negotiated agreement to suspend enforcement pending outcome of a lawsuit," Pine said in a telephone interview from her New York office.

Among those hailing the new law was the National Right to Life Committee.

"This is great news," group spokeswoman Nancy Myers said in a telephone interview from her Washington office. "The people of Guam are largely pro-life as reflected by the unanimous vote in the Legislature, and they have made a strong statement."

U.S. Atty. Gen. will testify in drug smuggling airplane case

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A frustrated federal judge ordered Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to court to explain the government's abandonment of a settlement involving a drug-laden plane leased to U.S. agents and linked to the Contras.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Kelly said the case involved criminal conduct by the United States.

"This case stinks to high heaven," Kelly said during a hearing on a lawsuit over the loss of the twin-engine Beech King Air, which was ditched in the Caribbean Sea on Jan. 3, 1983.

The pilot, convicted smuggler Michael Toliver, later testified that he flew arms to Nicaragua's Contra rebels and illegal drugs back to the United States several times under the supervision of federal agents.

Kelly had canceled a trial set for January after being told in November that the case had been settled through mediation.

But on Friday, Richard Montague, an assistant U.S. attorney general from Washington, told Kelly that Justice Department officials never approved the settlement, and said the case should go to trial.

Kelley ordered Thornburgh to appear at an April 2 hearing in Wichita to straighten out the lawsuit's status. Thornburgh aide Michael Robinson said Monday that the attorney general had not yet decided how to respond to the order.

Kelly told Montague that the case "involves the transport of drugs by agents of the United States or with the acquiescence of the United States." Montague objected, saying that Toliver was the only witness making such statements and that his credibility was questionable. The attorney said the insurance case had nothing to do with those statements.

Kelly said he was frustrated by the government's lack of action in response to Toliver's disclosures.

"I have heard nothing," the judge said. "Frankly, what I have had is stonewalling at the hands of the United States and I'm not going to have any more."

Kelly had been so alarmed by Toliver's statements that he ordered transcripts of the testimony delivered to the FBI, CIA and to then-President Reagan at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

"The president of the United States advised me in spades that the attorney general was fully familiar with it, and I don't think you are," Kelly told Montague, who was representing the Justice Department.

Montague said the question of whether a criminal investigation was warranted was up to the attorney general, not the judge.

Toliver testified in Kelly's court in 1987 that he made two trips to Honduras and Colombia the previous year with arms for the Contras and returned to the United States with loads of cocaine and marijuana.

He said he landed at Homestead Air Force Base, Fla., with one drug load and that he worked as an informant and contract employee under federal supervision.

Toliver testified that he wasn't working for the government when he crashed the plane. He said he had disconnected a U.S. Customs Service homing device aboard the plane, and took off in another direction with a load of marijuana. He ditched the craft off Grand Cayman Island when he ran out of fuel trying to avoid storms.

Toliver, who is serving a marijuana smuggling sentence in North Carolina, was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony.

The lawsuit was filed by Midland National Bank of Newton, which said it had a $198,000 lien on the plane.

Jury acquits Aguilar on one count, declares mistrial on seven others

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A jury acquitted U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar of an obstruction-of-justice charge Monday but deadlocked on seven other felony counts. A prosecutor said Aguilar would be retried on those charges.

Aguilar was acquitted of a charge that he improperly approached another federal judge, Samuel Conti, to seek favorable treatment for a friend and creditor, Ronald Cloud, in a pending bank fraud trial.

The jury reported that it was unable to reach a verdict on the other charges after seven days of deliberations. U.S. District Judge Louis Bechtle declared a mistrial and scheduled proceedings on a possible retrial for June 4.

"It is the government's present intention to retry all of the counts on which the jury was unable to reach a verdict," Justice Department prosecutor William Keefer told reporters.

Aguilar did not change expression when the jury's verdict was read, but puffed his cheeks as if to release tension. He declined to comment afterward.

Patrick Hallinan, a lawyer for Aguilar, said he was pleased that "the jury did not buy the government's allegations of racketeering and corruption in our courts," but said he was disappointed the judge was not completely vindicated.

Aguilar remains free without bail pending a retrial. The 58-year-old judge from San Jose, who was appointed to the federal bench in 1980 by President Carter, can be removed from office only by Congress.

One juror, Joan McEarlean of San Francisco, said after the verdict that the vote stood at 7-5 to convict Aguilar on one of the charges, disclosing a wiretap to its target. She said substantial majorities favored acquittal on the other counts.

"The majority felt that the prosecution did not prove its case," she told reporters. "There was no motive. They could not prove there was a meeting of the minds between the judge and anybody else."

However, she said nine jurors felt Aguilar had committed one of the illegal acts that was a part of the alleged pattern of racketeering: helping Vera Hoff, his friend and former legal secretary, remain a fugitive in Mexico on a tax evasion.

Aguilar's attorneys have accused the Justice Department of targeting him as a liberal who had ruled against the government.

Aguilar has issued rulings restricting factory sweeps by immigration agents, limiting aerial raids on suspected marijuana fields, and stopping the government from excluding people from the country because of homosexuality.

Senate discusses pow-wow

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Assistant News Editor

At the Student Senate meeting Monday, representatives of the Native American Student Association of Notre Dame encouraged student involvement in the club's Pow-wow scheduled for April 1.

Stacey Turner said that last year the event received much support from the local community, but little from students at Notre Dame. Turner described the Pow-wow as "a chance to get to know more about the Native American culture."

The event, which begins at 12 p.m., will include Native American dancing and a chance to buy Native American crafts such as jewelry. In addition to members of the club, Turner said, Native Americans from across the country will participate in the Pow-wow.

In other senate news, a mandatory meeting for students wishing to run for student senator or off-campus copresident will take place at 8:30 p.m. today in the Foster Room of LaFortune Student Center.

Judge denies Contra mistrial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Monday denied a mistrial motion by John Poindexter that was triggered by a reference in open court to testimony Poindexter had given Congress under a grant of immunity.

The information in the reference was "not new at all," said the judge in Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial.

With Rep. Lee Hamilton on the witness stand, prosecutor Dan Webb asked about a document, signed by then-President Reagan, indicating missiles had been sent to Iran in 1985 to try to win the release of Americans held in Lebanon.

Had Poindexter ever reported destroying the document? Webb asked.

"He did," Hamilton said in front of the jury.

In other testimony, Hamilton said the late CIA Director William Casey denied the very existence of the document in congressional testimony — a denial that was not true and a denial that had not been known before.

The congressman, co-chairman of a special congressional committee that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, was referring to Poindexter's July 1987 testimony to the committee, during which he said he tore up the document.

No part of the case against Reagan's national security adviser may be derived from his testimony to Congress, given under a grant of immunity from prosecution.

As soon as Hamilton answered the question on Monday, another prosecutor, Howard Pearl, stood up and Webb quickly said "I see the problem."

Webb rephrased the question, but Poindexter lawyer Richard Beckler later asked for a mistrial, saying that Hamilton had specifically been instructed not to refer to Poindexter's immunized testimony.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene denied the motion, saying that Oliver North testified last week that he watched Poindexter tear up the finding.

Greene said Hamilton's testimony was "cumulative rather than harmful."

Beckler suggested the jury might not find North's testimony credible. But Greene also noted that "both the government and the defense referred to tearing up of the finding" in their opening statements to the jury.

"And you have great credibility," Greene told Beckler.

The information about tearing up the finding "is not new at all," Greene concluded.

In November 1986, Hamilton had been chairman of the House Intelligence Committee that met with Poindexter to discuss U.S. arms sales to Iran.

The congressman said the national security adviser made no mention of a U.S. role in the November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran. The CIA-assisted delivery was authorized by the Reagan "finding" that Poindexter destroyed hours after testifying before the committee.

Casey, who prepared the finding for Reagan, appeared with Poindexter before the committee.

"Do you remember Casey in that testimony actually telling you there was no finding for that 1985 shipment" of Hawk missiles to Iran? Webb asked Hamilton.

"I do," replied Hamilton. Webb asked Hamilton, "Do you recall whether Admiral Poindexter said he could reveal all the facts?"

"Admiral Poindexter said ... President Reagan wanted to tell the full story," replied Hamilton.

The finding that Poindexter destroyed depicted the U.S. role in Iran arms sales as a straight arms-for-hostages deal, the kind of arrangement the Reagan administration declared it would never allow.

Poindexter told the Intelligence Committee members that the U.S. government didn't learn until January 1986 of the missile shipment, according to notes taken at the meeting by a congressional staffer.

Hamilton said Poindexter read verbatim a January 1986 presidential finding that did not portray the Iran initiative as a straight trade of arms for hostages.

Violence delays Greyhound talks

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound said Monday it will not resume stalled talks with striking drivers until attacks on buses and replacement drivers stop, but a union leader pledged to meet "any time" with company negotiators.

The first meeting between the two sides broke down Sunday when Dallas-based Greyhound accused union leaders of failing to negotiate and of stepping up violence in the walkout, now in its third week.

"A lot of the problem was the continuing intimidation and violence," said company spokeswoman Lyn Grayley. "The company just does not feel that they will be intimidated into (accepting) a contract."

"Maybe if the violence and terrorism and intimidation and all that stopped ... (reopening talks) would be considered," she said. "Our main concern at this point is the safety of our passengers and employees."

There have been at least 14 shooting attacks on Greyhound buses, 46 bomb threats and numerous other incidents of vandalism or threats during the 18-day-old walkout, company officials say.

Greyhound operates the only nationwide intercity bus service, and the strike has stranded many smaller communities for which buses are the only public transportation.

Unions representing 6,300 drivers and an estimated 3,000 other Greyhound workers walked out March 2 over wages, job security and grievance procedures.

In Denver, the Amalgamated Transit Union's vice president, Jim Hayes, said the union would return to talks "any time, any place," but the sticking point is Greyhound's unwillingness to compromise.

"The company hasn't changed a thing," he said. "The company makes one cent per mile for every passenger and that comes out to about $78 million. We're asking for $40 million over 3 years."

The bus company last week began a nationwide radio advertising campaign to counter allegations by striking drivers that newly hired drivers were not properly trained.

"We've hired many new permanent drivers who are professionally qualified, thoroughly trained and committed to giving you the quality service you've come to expect from Greyhound," the radio spots say.

Grayley, the company spokeswoman, said the new drivers must have two years experience driving a bus or truck, and are certified by the Department of Transportation.

"With so many of the violent episodes that have gone on, people are nervous," she said. "And we don't want them to feel that's going to happen every time a bus goes out on the road. We want them to know we're doing everything in our power to make those buses safe," she said.

Union leaders say they condemned the violence and Greyhound is the one balking in negotiations.

"We have continually called for our members to refrain from illegal activity," said Jeff Nelson, spokesman for the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions in Washington. "But, we are not police."

"This is simply an attempt by the company's so-called negotiator to stonewall the real issue, which is negotiating a contract," Nelson said.

During talks in Tucson, Ariz. on Saturday, the union proposed a $40 million three-year package that included pay increases of 4 percent to 5 percent and the addition of new drivers to the pension plan.

But the cost would be "three times more than Greyhound could afford," Grayley said.

A union spokesman said the company has offered a plan that included no guaranteed pay raises, but would have made raises contingent on increased profits and ridership.

I can believe it's yogurt.
But, I can't believe she is thirty.

Hazlewood loses battle over a word

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Joseph Hazelwood's defense lost a legal battle Monday over a single word that could affect how jurors decide whether the Exxon Valdez skipper was drunk when his ship went aground.

The word was "noticeably," and was contained in a legal instruction that told jurors to decide whether Hazelwood was "noticeably impaired" on the night of the nation's largest oil spill.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone removed the word and said he would tell jurors they must only decide whether Hazelwood was impaired.

"There are a lot of people who can mask their impairment," he told lawyers in explaining his decision.

Defense lawyer Dick Madson appeared stunned by the ruling, saying, "This is the first time I've ever heard of this."

Madson said in his years of defending drunken driving cases in Fairbanks, the term "noticeably impaired" always has been included in jury instructions.

"My gosh, it's been around for a long time," he told the judge.

But Assistant District Attorney Sam Adams argued, "All we have to prove is that he was impaired, not stumble-down drunk."

Hazlewood is charged with one felony, criminal mischief, and three misdemeanors, reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil.

His tanker ran aground on Bligh Reef last March 24, spilling nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska North Slope crude oil, wreaking devastation over hundreds of miles of shoreline rich with fish, birds and other wildlife.

The question of whether Hazelwood showed signs of intoxication has been a key element in his trial, with numerous witnesses testifying that the skipper did not stagger, slur his words or show any other evidence that he was drunk. Three witnesses said they smelled alcohol on his breath.

The judge's ruling came during a discussion of legal instructions which will be given to jurors after attorneys deliver their final arguments Tuesday.

In other rulings, the judge said he would "take judicial notice" of the fact the U.S. Coast Guard had a regulation barring tanker crews from drinking alcohol less than four hours before sailing. But he refused to give an instruction on the point, because the regulation is not state law.

He also refused a proposed prosecution instruction that would have told jurors the Coast Guard's blood alcohol limit for operating a commercial vessel is .04, well below the state level of .10 for drunken driving. Hazelwood's blood alcohol level was below the state limit, but violated the Coast Guard's.

Kremlin counters Lithuania's split

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Monday sternly warned the breakaway republic of Lithuania not to put up its own customs posts, introduce its own currency or take over Moscow-run factories without permission.

The nationally televised announcement was Mikhail Gorbachev's first concrete step to counter Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence. The announcement did not say what would happen if Lithuania ignored the orders.

Despite the harsh words, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said in a statement issued by the republic's parliament late Monday, "I think this is an introductory stage of negotiations."

He added that his government agreed with elements of Moscow's statement, including the value of maintaining economic ties between Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

Earlier Monday, a Lithuanian delegation delivered a letter to the Kremlin that promised Soviet interests in the republic would be given "careful consideration."

A spokesman for the Lithuanian nationalist movement Sajudis, Lionginas Vasiliauskas, said in Moscow that 10 truckloads of Soviet troops were moved Monday from Kaunas, about 60 miles from Vilnius, to a military post just outside the capital.

There have been unconfirmed reports the past several days that Radio Vilnius had been either jammed or replaced with Russian programs. A loud hum could be heard during a broadcast monitored in Washington Monday night.

"We have reliable information that in the past few days, Radio Vilnius broadcasts to foreign countries have been blocked by Radio Moscow," the broadcast said.

It said Radio Moscow had been informed and that officials there seemed surprised. "This suggests that perhaps the blockade of Radio Vilnius broadcasts abroad was not conducted by Radio Moscow, but rather by the Minister of Communications of the U.S.S.R. But so far, no answer from that ministry has been received," the broadcast said.

The Kremlin's television statement accused the Lithuanian leadership of planning to turn over national factories to private owners, bring in a separate currency and put up customs posts on the borders of the republic.

It said the government was concerned especially about nuclear energy plants in Lithuania and had ordered increased security around them.

It accused the Baltic republic of trying to "undermine its links" with the rest of the Soviet Union, which it said could have "pernicious consequences" for the national economy.

The government said police, the KGB and customs agents would have authority in maintaining the existing customs situation.

A directive was issued to the management of all Soviet enterprises and agencies in Lithuania, saying under no circumstances should they begin negotiations on handing over their authority to local officials. Such talks can only be run by Moscow ministries, it said.

Many Lithuanians say they expect Moscow to impose an economic blockade, depriving the republic of the fuel and raw materials it receives only from the Soviet Union.

The government statement contained no such threats.

Gorbachev and the Congress of People's Deputies — the national parliament — declared the declaration of independence invalid last week, but Kremlin leaders have ruled out use of troops in Lithuania.

Lithuanian activist and television editor Eduardas Potashinskis said he thought most Lithuanians would take the government warning calmly.

"We say the Soviet empire is showing its teeth," he said by telephone from the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius. "But we think they can't threaten Lithuania. We'll be calm. We'll fall and get up, but we'll go on."

On Sunday, Soviet jets buzzed Vilnius in what many Lithuanians consider an intimidation tactic, and maneuvers were carried out in the countryside. Residents said Monday the maneuvers appeared over.

A Soviet spokesman in Moscow said the military maneuvers were not extensive and had been planned long in advance.

But Landsbergis told Lithuanian legislators Monday the exercises added to tensions with the Kremlin.

He said he asked high-ranking Soviet officers Sunday if he would be notified in advance of future maneuvers. One of the officers replied that he could not make guarantees.

The Bush administration said Monday it would keep an eye on Soviet military activities in the Baltics. The White House and State Department spokesmen urged a peaceful approach to secession and reminded Gorbachev he had said force would not be used.

Two die in boat explosion

LA BAIE, Quebec (AP) — An explosion on a container ship loading aluminum at a wharf in this Quebec town Monday killed two people and injured at least seven, police and company sources said.

Sgt. Maurice Girard of La Baie police said the afternoon blast rocked the town along the Saguenay River about 120 miles north of Quebec City. Some residents thought there had been an earthquake.

Alcan Aluminium runs the wharf, which is used to service its local smelter.

Alcan employee Fernard Leclerc said the two killed were members of the crew of the Pollux, a Norwegian ship.

He said they were loading containers into the ship's hold, where the explosion occurred. Leclerc said seven Alcan employees were injured.

He said he could only speculate about the cause of the explosion. He said the material in the containers — spent linings from the smelting process of aluminum — "can, under certain conditions and if not properly handled, produce toxic gases, including methane."

Girard said the ship wasn't seriously damaged.

Census of the homeless masks the casualties of Reaganomics

Dear Editor:

The war on poverty is almost over. Now it is time to do a body count of the casualties. The weapons were the trickle down theory, union busting, elimination of insurance and other benefits. The full-time employee is rapidly becoming an endangered species. Yes, the war is almost over, and government, by joining forces with business, has widened the gap between the rich and the poor, amounting to a privileged victory.

Today, there will be a "token" body count (census) of the homeless. Unlike Vietnam, the count must be understated, so the brutality of "Reaganomics" can be masked into a "kinder, gentler nation." By careful orchestration, the count can be made to appear that only the dreges of society, the fringes of lower, but human life forms, were affected.

Fortunately for the nation's budget, most of the vanquished have chosen a cloak of invisibility, not wanting to be identified with the stigma of being homeless. They accomplish this by avoiding shelters. In Chicago for instance, if understating the body count by 1,000 homeless, the government can save over $4,000,000 in the 1990s. This is done by diminishing the population's federal funding by $400 per person per annum. Therefore, it is expedient for the government to not count as many homeless by as much as the vocal minority will accept.

Logically the homeless are surviving without benefit of intervention at this time, so why fix something that is not broken. They do not receive welfare without an address, nor can they register to vote, and undoubtedly they do not contribute to re-election campaign funds. It is easy, therefore, to understand the political attitude of "who needs them."

Styrofoam products used at ND damage the ozone layer

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to the Environmental Action Club and to the Student Senate for passing a resolution calling for the phased elimination of styrofoam from our campus. It is extremely encouraging to see even a small part of the Notre Dame administration endorsing responsible environmental principles.

The production of styrofoam cups, containers, and other goods is a major cause of the depletion of the ozone layer of our atmosphere. The Huddle, the Oak Room, and most other food oriented services on campus all use styrofoam cups to serve items like coffee, hot chocolate and hot tea.

unlike the controversy over divestment from South Africa, the elimination of investment in styrofoam products has no immoral side consequences. Switching from styrofoam to other substitute, recycleable products would only affect the management of these businesses and possibly, increase the cost of a cup of coffee or cocoa.

I'm anxiously awaiting University Food Service's positive response to this resolution. I encourage all students to look ahead to Earth Day, April 22, 1990 where they can get involved and make an environmental difference on our own campus. Who says you can't change the world?

The purchase, as well as the production of styrofoam, is environmentally immoral and,

CSC puts politics before religion

Dear Editor:

We believe that the Center for Social Concerns, through the composition of many of its groups, and their leaders, is oriented toward a particular political persuasion, with a secondary emphasis on the possibility of living one's faith.

Wednesday night, Feb. 28, a number of salient facts about the nature of the CSC as perceived by a number of representative individuals were illustrated at a meeting of group leaders. Some of these illuminations were very interesting. It became apparent at the meeting that the image of the Center, held by many students who have not had much direct contact with it, may not be far off base.

The Center serves as a home for many organizations that do an incredible amount of wonderful works in both the South Bend area, as well as on the campus. The problem that arose that evening was that the Center, or at least the groups present, place the least possible emphasis on doing such works as a statement of one's faith. In fact, many were afraid of becoming exclusive by alienating those who do not believe in God or the teachings of the Gospels. The question was raised as to whether there should be, or why there needs to be, religion present at the CSC. From what we gathered, that answer was a resounding "no," except on an individual basis. We believe, however, that the mission of the Center for Social Concerns would be more fully accomplished by emphasizing the faith in dealing with issues of peace and social justice.

Lent is a time of introspection. We would like people to ponder whether justice or peace issues are separate from religion, or whether they coexist. As well, should the CSC foster such a union, and is it at present working at all in that direction? It is a shame that at this meeting of group leaders it was more important to respect someone's unbelief than to foster the belief of God in others—especially at a religiously affiliated university. The CSC could be a wonderful place for young people to live out their faith, rather than their politics. If people realize as they work through their faith that politics plays a role, then that is fine, and perhaps inevitable. But to expect religion to be an appendage of politics denies the importance of God.

Critics inaccurately understand ads regarding the homosexuality issue

Dear Editor:

John Warren, in his letter to the editor (The Observer, March 8), has completely misread advertisements on homosexuality recently appearing in The Observer. The ads did not invite the reader to "feel the same about ballroom dancing, golf, bowling, hunting, jogging and homosexuality." His claim to the contrary is both careless and silly. The ads point out that statistical infrequency (10 percent or less) is a suspect indicator of "abnormality." Later ads in the series challenge common stereotypes about differences in the social values of homosexuals and heterosexuals.

If when dealing with the subject of homosexuality, Warren cannot read a simple advertisement and get it right, what confidence can we have in his related opinions on sin and redemption, or such lesser topics as the role of genes in the development of complex social behaviors, the relevance of animal models, or the professional integrity of the proceedings of the American Psychiatric Association? Do the policies of Campus Ministry on this topic have a cogent advocate?

accent writer

He had decided to call his project, "A Day in the Life of a Domer." And it was to complete it that one sunny day in April of last year, that freshman Marty Sprunck left his room in Flanner, grabbed his jambox, hopped on his bike, and rode over to the Peace Memorial Fountain: the perfect place to observe typical Domers on a typical spring day. When he arrived at the fountain, Marty was out of breath. Later that day as he climbed the steps of the Administration Building to interview "Monk" Malloy, he was so winded that he had to stop. How strange, he thought. Probably allergies. Later that week after feeling short of breath while checkmarking courses, Marty went to the Infirmary to check it out.

After two hours in the waiting room, the doctor called Marty in. But without even hearing a professional's explanation, Marty could see for himself that something was terribly wrong. "It looked like part of my right lung was missing," recalls Marty. After draining the fluid on his lung—the initial problem—Marty went to St. Joseph's Hospital for tests. A few days later he discovered that he had non-Hodgkins lymphoma, and a tumor the size of a large orange in his chest.

700 miles away in Moundsview, Minnesota, Julian and Mildred Sprunck, Marty's parents, were sleeping when the phone rang. It was Marty making his regular biweekly call. But the news this time was not regular: this time Marty's parents learned that their only son had been diagnosed with cancer.

"I don't know how I functioned," Julian Sprunck told their local Minnesota paper, describing that 11-hour drive to Notre Dame. "You reel, literally reel from shock, disbelief, denial, bewilderment, confusion, anger, and helplessness at the fact that... cancer has struck your son."

After returning to Minnesota, Marty spent four weeks at St. Mary's Hospital, part of the Riverside Medical Center in Minneapolis, undergoing chemotherapy for Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, a cancer which strikes the lymph nodes and circulates throughout the blood. But after those grueling four weeks, on May 29, Marty's X-ray showed, miraculously, that the tumor was gone. Thus, Marty, though 20 pounds lighter, weak, and almost completely bald, was overjoyed. He was cured, or so he thought.

At the end of June, Marty's doctors suggested the possibility of a bone-marrow transplant, a procedure in which the patient's own malfunctioning bone marrow is first "knocked out" by massive doses of chemotherapy and radiation.

The Observer / Andrew McCloskey

After surviving chemotherapy, a bone marrow transplant, and white blood cell counts last year, Marty Sprunck takes time out to light a candle at the Grotto.

Then, either marrow from a healthy donor, or in Marty's case from the patient himself, is transfused in hope that it will take over and resume the function of producing blood cells.

Though the process is long and painful—"of those two weeks, I remember about five minutes, I was so doped up," Marty says—without it Marty's doctors suggested that the odds ran between 75 and 80 percent that the cancer would return. In addition, without the transplant he could look forward to chemotherapy every month, long hospital stays, and giving himself injections. With the treatment, his chances for total long-term remission could increase up to 80 percent.

Marty chose the transplant. Following a week-long battery of tests at the Masonic Cancer Center in Minnesota, Marty underwent the bone marrow harvest on August 7, a process Marty remembers as "pretty painful." Two massive doses of chemotherapy, a day off, and four days of radiation then readied Marty for the bone marrow reinfusion on August 17.

Marty has very little memory of those two weeks. "I remember having to sit in the radiation room like this," —Marty hugs his knees to his chest—"and they taped me up so I wouldn't move." He smiles. "This caused a big problem when I had to go to the bathroom."

Ten days later, the fateful news came. On August 27 Marty had a white blood cell count, a sign indicating that the marrow transplant was successful. "I was even ahead of schedule," Marty says. "They normally don't expect a white blood cell count for three weeks."

Then began what Marty described as "the long waiting game." Bone marrow transplant patients can only go home after maintaining a steady blood count of at least 2000 for three consecutive days. But for two weeks the cycle remained: Friday, 2000. Saturday, 2000. Sunday, 2000. Marty was frustrated. Sitting in his hospital room, its walls plastered with U2 posters, balloons, cards, and pictures of friends, he was eager to go home. Finally, after two more weeks in the hospital, making it a total of 35 days, the doctors gave Marty the go-ahead.

But going home didn't just mean sleeping in his own bed and staying up late. It also meant solid food. The first thing

Marty ate: a hot dog with mustard and ketchup. "Every time I go to a Twins game, I have to get a hot dog with mustard and ketchup. But that hot dog was the best I ever had. Even if I did only get to eat half of it," says Marty.

Having returned in January to the life he left nine months ago as an aerospace engineering freshman, Marty (now a first semester sophomore) is readjusting to life as a Domer. While once he waited for his white blood count to rise, now, bringing up his grades in a few classes and finding a date to Sophomore Formal are among his biggest concerns. And though he will have to wait on getting involved in extra-curriculars—he played the role of the priest in last year's Notre Dame production of "Twelfth Night"—he admits that what he enjoys about Notre Dame is "just being here."

Has the experience changed Marty? "Not really," he says. "People ask me, 'Did you ever think you'd die?' But I never did. Having that attitude really made a big difference, I think. Now, I don't plan ahead as much as I used to. I just take every day as it comes."

Marty feels that, for the most part, the disease is behind him, though he does have constant reminders. He must have a check-up every six months to monitor his progress. He says, "Every now and then I think it (the cancer) is something I have overcome. Then I look in the mirror and see, well, it's still there."

Losing his hair has been an experience in itself for Marty. "People ask me, 'Wasn't it horrifying to lose your hair?' I think it's kind of funny," he says. Take one time when Marty was shopping in downtown Minneapolis, and a man mistook him for a Nazi skinhead. The man, a passenger in a car, started hurling obscenities and was on the verge of getting out of the car to attack Marty when, luckily, the driver sped away. "He would have gone at it with me right there," Marty recalls.

Marty's black French paratrooper beret and fluorescent green smiley-face button have become somewhat of a signature for Marty, who is a familiar face about North Quad. He feels that the smiley-face with moving googly eyes is a symbol which captures him to a tee, as it reflects the positive attitude which has, with the support of many friends here at Notre Dame, pulled him through many tough moments. And what has been the toughest?

"The hardest part of the whole experience was leaving this place," says Marty. "I remember leaving Notre Dame last April, just when the flowers were starting to bloom and everything was green. When we got to the end of the road by the main entrance my Dad stopped and pointed to the statue of Mary atop the Dome. 'You bring our son back here,' he said. And she did."

and stole three bases as well as the Irish rode a five-run fifth inning to victory.

Freshman right fielder Eric Danapilis drove in four runs on three singles and also stole two bases in the 10-2 whipping of Bradley. Jacobs added another home run, drove in three runs and was walked three times as Brian Piotrowicz pitched five-hit ball for 8 2/3 innings to record the win.

Notre Dame scored four runs in the top of the eighth inning against Northern Iowa to turn a 2-1 ballgame into a 6-1 rout. Sophomore Joe Binkiewicz did a little bit of everything for the Irish, as he held the Panthers to one unearned run in 5 2/3 innings and drove in two runs with a single and a double.

Murphy seems pleased with his team's effort thus far.

"It's encouraging to be 10-4 at this point of the season, but we've still got a long way to go. Our young hitters are up and down like a roller coaster. We still have to become more consistent," says Murphy.

Jacobs stood out as a hitter who wasn't necessarily consistent, but exhibited great power nonetheless as he pounded three homers in seven games, including the game-winner in the championship against Air Force.

"I really didn't have a good tournament in Seattle," claims Jacobs. "I was struggling, and I was a bit tense, but I feel like I came out of it okay. St. Louis was a much better trip.

"We've got a lot of young talent, a lot of freshmen who don't know what to expect. These wins will give us some confidence and help us assess where our team should be."

We need you.

Next season's schedule might be tougher

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va.—Notre Dame played the 32nd toughest schedule in the country this year, and it appears next season may be even tougher.

The Irish will meet at least 13 teams which played in this season's NCAA Tournament. Twenty six dates are set with the remaining games yet to be determined.

Notre Dame will open the season in the Dodge Big Apple NIT against an undetermined opponent. The Irish last played in that tourney in 1986 and lost to Western Kentucky 80-63.

The Irish will play home games against Syracuse, Duke, La Salle, Indiana, Southern Cal, Virginia, Boston College, Rutgers, Creighton, Portland, De Paul, Dayton and Marquette.

Notre Dame will play at UCLA, Missouri, St. John's in Madison Square Garden, Louisville, Wichita State, Miami (Fla.), Butler, Dayton, De Paul and Marquette.

Kentucky will be the opponent in the 1990 Big Four Classic at Indianapolis in one of three games on neutral courts. The Irish will play North Carolina in the Meadowlands and Temple in the Philadelphia Spectrum.

Virginia dominated Notre Dame on the boards Friday night, especially in the first half on the offensive end.

In that first half, the Cavaliers had 10 offensive rebounds to just eight total rebounds for the Irish.

"They were long rebounds," Notre Dame's LaPhonso Ellis said. "The rims were tight and the balls were bouncing all around."

Virginia finished the game with 33 rebounds to just 22 for the Irish. The Irish finished the regular season with a +8.9 rebounding margin.

That was only the fourth time this season that Notre Dame was outrebounded. The other times came against Louisville, LSU and Southern Methodist.

When Virginia lost to Syracuse on Sunday, it marked the end of Terry Holland's 16-year coaching stint with the Cavs. Holland will become the athletic director at Davidson this fall.

Holland compiled a 326-173 record and was the winningest coach in Virginia history. He was 92-43 in five years at Davidson.

He guided the Cavaliers to nine NCAA and four NIT appearances, including one NIT championship.

Virginia now leads the series with Notre Dame 2-1. . . The NCAA bid marked the 17th time in Digger Phelps' 19 years that Notre Dame advanced to a post-season tournament and was its sixth straight NCAA tourney appearance. . . The Irish were 4-8 against teams in this year's 64-team field. . . Notre Dame's Keith Robinson finished the regular season as an 86.7 percent free throw shooter to rank 23rd in the country. . . Virginia this season redshirted Chris Havlicek, son of former Boston Celtic great John Havlicek.

Virginia Sports Information

Virginia forward Bryant Stith was second in scoring in the game with 21 points against the Irish, complementing teammate John Crotty's 28.

Crotty

"I know it's my job to make things happen," Crotty said.

Crotty was the floor general for 35 minutes and committed no turnovers while dishing out five assists to push his career total over 500, second on the all-time Virginia list.

"When he drives in a lot of key situations, he will make it happen," Phelps said. "He knows when to drive. He knows when to dish it off. He controls the other people well."

Said Virginia coach Terry Holland, "John Crotty coached our team tonight. When you've got a point guard playing like he did, a coach can take the night off. All I did was stand on the sidelines and clap."

Crotty did not come into Friday's game against the Irish on a roll. He struggled with his shooting as the Cavaliers finished second in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament.

In three games during that tourney, Crotty was just 9-of-30 from the field. He hit just 2-of-9 field goals and scored only seven points in a 70-61 loss to Georgia Tech in the ACC tourney championship game.

But Crotty quickly regained his touch in the big tourney.

He hit his first shot—a driving layup with just over two minutes gone—to give Virginia a 6-2 lead and set the tone for an explosive first half. He scored eight of the Cavs next 14 points to push the margin to 20-10 with 8:06 left in the half.

When the damage appeared done, Crotty struck again. He hit another driving layup with one second left and drew the second foul on LaPhonso Ellis. Crotty missed the free throw, but Virginia had a 28-18 half-time lead.

"When I found a seam I could step into, I got in and shot," Crotty said. "I just kept looking for the seams. I had to hit it fast if it was there. I was always looking to penetrate."

In the second half, Crotty went outside, inside and then used the foul line to send the Cavs into the second round.

When Notre Dame scored seven straight points to cut the lead to 44-41 with 9:51 left, Crotty nailed his only three-pointer of the game.

With the lead again three at 50-47 minutes later, he connected on another driving layup, drew the fourth foul on Ellis and hit the free throw for a six-point margin. The Irish never got closer than those six points.

Crotty then showed his composure under pressure, hitting 8-of-9 free throws in the last three minutes.

"We knew his moves and what he was going to do,"

Notre Dame center Keith Robinson said. "It was just a matter of us breaking down."

And it was also a matter of Crotty breaking out of a shooting slump at the wrong time for Notre Dame.

foul their way back into the game.

As the offense was hitting easy lay-ups, the Cavalier defense was holding the Irish scoreless for five minutes. With two minutes to go the Cavs were up 63-50.

"Coach said they never give up at crunch time," Irish guard Elmer Bennett said. "They shut the door on us."

"The key was the fact that we put points on the board when they were starting to find a rhythm," Virginia coach Terry Holland said.

Bennett was the target of Virginia's diamond-and-one defense early in the contest. He still managed eight points in the first half but the rest of the offense combined scored only 10.

"We wanted to play the diamond to slow them up," Holland said. "We knew we'd go back to man-to-man later. Notre Dame exploited it for a while."

"We came out hard and looked to attack," Virginia's John Crotty said. "The diamond took the zip out of their offense. It seemed like they'd never faced that before and it confused them. It was effective for us."

Crotty led both teams with 28 points and orchestrated the Virginia offense, setting a slow tempo that worked because Virginia hit its shots and dominated on the boards.

Bennett led Notre Dame with 17 points, while Daimon Sweet added 14.

Dickerson says it's time to retire

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Eric Dickerson, the seventh-leading rusher in NFL history, says he will not be back with the Indianapolis Colts next season and intends to retire.

"I'm through with football, and (the Colts) know it. So I'm telling you, I'm finished," Dickerson, 29, said in an interview broadcast Monday on WFYI-TV's "Indiana Tonight" show.

Jim Irsay, the Colts' general manager and son of owner Robert Irsay, said through a spokesman on Monday that the team expected Dickerson to fulfill his contract obligations.

"We don't make it a point to discuss our players' contracts," spokesman Craig Kelley said of Dickerson's obligations.

Dickerson has said his contract expires after the 1990 season.

Irsay called Dickerson's statements "a slap in the face."

"Before we made the trade with the Rams to obtain Eric, he gave us his assurances he would play out his contract," he said. "We are tremendously disappointed by his actions."

During the 20-minute interview, taped last Thursday at his Los Angeles home, Dickerson, who has spent 2 1/2 seasons with the Colts, said he has lost interest in playing football.

"Right now I really don't love the game that much," he said. "I don't love it like I did at one time. But rather than stay in Indianapolis and take the pounding that I'm taking, I'd rather quit.

"I mean, it's like taking a revolver and putting a bullet in it and spinning it around and sticking it to my head, and sooner or later a bullet is gonna come out and kill me. And that's the chance I'm taking," he said.

"I just can't do that. I like my health. I'll take my health, and no amount of money in the world can buy my health."

Dickerson has gained 11,226 yards, 10 behind O.J. Simpson, and has rushed for more than 1,000 yards in each of his seven NFL seasons. He holds the single-season record of 2,105 yards, set with the Los Angeles Rams in 1984, one year after he set the rookie record with 1,808 yards.

Lacrosse gets battered by brawny opponents over break

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's lacrosse team hit the road over spring break, and then proceeded to hit rock bottom, suffering three defeats by a combined score of 57 to 13.

The Fighting Irish, now 2-3 on the season, began break with a 13-5 reversal at the hands of the Villanova Wildcats in the Philadelphia Lacrosse Classic. Bright spots for the Irish were two goals by senior attacker Brian McHugh, now seventh on the all-time scoring list, and one goal by senior co-captain Dave Carey.

Next for the Irish was the Loyola Tournament in Baltimore, Maryland, where the Irish took on host team Loyola in the first game. Loyola, ranked second in the nation, throttled the Irish 18-3, despite the strong effort of the Notre Dame defense, already exhausted by the onslaught it had suffered at Villanova.

As in the match against Villanova, the silver lining in the clouds for the Irish were Brian McHugh and Dave Carey. McHugh, with one goal tallied, showed why he is steadily climbing the Notre Dame lacrosse all-time scoring list, and Carey again chipped in a lone goal to support the Irish cause.

In the Consolation match, Notre Dame battled and fell to Adelphi, by a score of 16-5. Adelphi, who had been ranked fifth in the nation in 1989, and currently resides in the Top 10, simply overpowered the Irish. Again, senior Brian McHugh came through for the Irish with a goal. Yet the high-scorer for the Irish was sophomore attacker Mike Sullivan, who beat the Adelphi goalkeeper for three goals.

Despite the bushels of goals which the Irish surrendered on their three-game swing down the Atlantic coast, the Irish defense performed well. Freshman goalkeeper Chris Parent made many very good saves, but he and the Irish defense repeatedly encountered difficulties in clearing the ball, putting Notre Dame at a significant disadvantage.

"Against teams this good, you simply must control the tempo of the game," noted second-year Notre Dame head coach Kevin Corrigan. "But when you play all defense, it is very hard to control the tempo. These losses were the fault of the whole team."

"Our defense was not bad, for as much of it as we played. I can honestly say we did not do a bad job, but when you spend eighty percent of the game playing defense, you will give up some goals. Really, our defensive problems were offensive problems. We didn't score well when we had man-up penalty advantages, which you have to do against teams of this calibre," said Corrigan.

Notre Dame next duels with Wooster, on Saturday, March 24, at the Loftus All-Sports Center, before heading to the San Diego State Tournament in San Diego to battle the Air Force Academy.

Arizona assesses lockout losses

PHOENIX (AP)—As players returned to Arizona for an abbreviated spring season Monday, cities around the state began adding up the cost of baseball's 32-day lockout.

Some of the eight Cactus League teams planned to begin workouts Tuesday and start playing a five-game schedule next week.

Bob Howard of the Scottsdale Charros said the San Francisco Giants told the Charros to get ready for March 26 and March 28 home games against the Cleveland Indians and Seattle Mariners, respectively.

The Giants said they would play three others games in Scottsdale Stadium, he said.

"If you're trying to figure the loss, you could take the 14-game season as being an average and say you were going to salvage five-fourteenths of the season, but it really depends on who's your opponent and whether they give you any weekends," Howard said.

Geoffrey Gonsler, who serves on the Cactus League Task Force, said other factors would determine the amount of loss.

"One of the major variables is that a lot of the winter visitors who normally stay here through March when we have spring training games have decided to return home," he said. "This is the month when everyone starts gathering up their belongings and gets ready."

The task force has estimated the worth of spring training in the state at about $160 million annually. Other estimates range downward to about half that amount.

Robert Brinton, director of Mesa's Convention and Visitors Bureau, said the state figured the absolute value of spring baseball in Arizona and left out revenue which could be offset by tourists who visited the state despite the absence of baseball.

A survey found about one-fourth of Mesa's winter visitors travel there solely for baseball, Brinton said.

"The answer for 27 percent was, 'No baseball? We're out of here,'" Brinton added.

The Chicago Cubs have trained in Mesa for more than 30 years and represent the biggest spring training attraction in the nation, drawing 126,000 fans last year. The California Angels train at Mesa's Gene Autry Park before moving to Palm Springs, Calif., about mid-March for home games, and the Milwaukee Brewers, who play in nearby Chandler, room in Mesa, leading to an estimate of $37.5 million for baseball's impact in Mesa.

However, Binton said the city had projected a loss of $6 million to $10 million for a spring training wipeout.

He said he expected the loss to be about $5 million now that some baseball will be played.

"Mark lost to a couple of kids earlier in the year that he shouldn't have, and that hurt him in the national rankings, but those rankings don't mean a whole lot. I think he can beat anybody he believes he can beat, and he wrestled a great tournament (in the Regionals)," says McCann.

King, meanwhile, edged Greg Gardner of Illinois State University by a 6-5 score in the 190-pound championship. King's record is now 18-15-1, and McCann says he wasn't surprised that his big freshman came through with a win.

"I felt Steve had a legitimate chance to beat Gardner because he had beaten him earlier in the year. Gardner had also beaten Steve once, but Steve's a freshman, and you never know what to expect from a freshman," says McCann.

McCann said he was disappointed that Radenbaugh and Gowens didn't perform better in their Regional final matches, but says that now that they have qualified, they have to be confident in their abilities.

If they are confident, perhaps they will even surprise themselves in the NCAA championships this weekend.

NCAA tourney selection committee 'snubs' 23-6 Irish

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women's basketball team did everything they had to do—yet it still wasn't enough.

The Irish completed their first season March 9-10 by winning the Midwest Collegiate Conference Tournament in Dayton, Ohio, and upping their overall record to 23-6, only to be overlooked the next day by the NCAA Tournament Selection Committee as it doled out invitations to its national tournament. Despite ending their season undefeated in the MCC and riding high on a 12-game winning streak, Notre Dame did not receive a bid, even after downing Dayton 67-59 and pulling out a 67-66 last-second victory over Butler to claim the tournament championship.

"They told us afterwards that we were right in there until the very end," said head coach Muffet McGraw of the committee that determined the 27 schools receiving at-large bids. "There were about seven teams at the end and they picked four of them. It was very disappointing for us."

McGraw explained that Notre Dame's weak schedule, especially towards the end of its season, and a 71-64 loss to DePaul Jan. 27, were key factors in the decision.

"When DePaul made the tournament, we thought we had a chance," said McGraw, "but our last big win was against Vanderbilt (Jan. 4) and even though we won our last 12 games, they chose teams like Ohio State and UCLA who played schools in the top 15 down the line. They lost those games, but it didn't matter to the selection committee."

"We got snubbed." Part of McGraw's frustration stems from Notre Dame's impressive statistics. The Irish beat UCLA and Vanderbilt in non-conference match-ups and won their MCC contests by an average of 16 points. In addition, Notre Dame led the MCC in total offense and defense, field-goal percentage, rebounding and 3-point percentage.

"We did go 5-6 outside of the conference and 2-3 against top-ranked teams," continued McGraw, "but all that really matters is that you play those good teams. Ohio State and UCLA didn't win their games against the ranked teams and Ohio State lost its last three of five. We felt like we did everything we could."

The Irish did receive an invitation to the NIT tournament, but opted not to attend, a decision McGraw claimed was made even before the MCC championships.

"They (the NIT) had asked us if we would still be interested in their tournament if we didn't go to the NAAs," said McGraw. "But at that time we only had seven healthy players and the idea of playing three games in as many days didn't appeal to us."

Despite the lack of recognition by the NAAs, the MCC tourney did honor the accomplishments of individual Irish players. After leading the team in scoring (437/15.1pg.), assists (137) and free-throw percentage (.789), Karen Robinson was named MCC Player of the Year.

While she made the first-team all-MCC squad, classmate Krissi Davis was a second-team selection. Davis led the league in field goal percentage at .580 and her 233 rebounds (8.0 pg.)

topped Notre Dame's stat sheets, placing her fourth in the MCCs. Freshman Coquese Washington rounded out the the Irish award-winners by making the All-Newcomer squad and pacing the team in steals with 67.

"I was so happy Karen got player of the year," said McGraw. "She really deserved it. Margaret Nowlin and Sara Liebscher should have made all-conference as well, but I don't think most coaches vote for more than two players from each team for that. And Krissi should have been first-team with the year she had."

The conference tournament highlighted the depth of the eight-member Irish squad. In the first game against Dayton, all five of Notre Dame's starters finished scoring in double figures. Robinson had 15 points and 10 assists while Davis and Nowlin dominated inside, each scoring 12 points and tallying 11 and nine rebounds respectively. Liebscher, still nursing a sore ankle, added 10, as did Washington.

Despite the effort, the Irish stumbled at times. After a slow start that left the score at 8-7 midway through the first half, Notre Dame went into the locker room with a 34-21 lead. The Flyers then pulled to 54-50 with 7:16 to go in the game before the Irish pulled away for the final margin.

"We played well, but we were really tense," commented McGraw. "Dayton was confident and relaxed with nothing to lose, while we knew we had to win if we wanted the NCAA bid. The girls really felt the pressure."

After getting off to a slow start, we finally relaxed. Even though Dayton played probably their best game of the year, we never felt like the game was in jeopardy."

The next night the agony continued as Notre Dame squeaked past Butler in the championships. Robinson's basket with 11 seconds remaining put the Irish up 67-66. McGraw attributed the near-upset to one factor: the loss of Krissi Davis, who missed much of the second half due to foul trouble.

"When Krissi came out after her fourth foul the momentum totally swung their way," said McGraw, whose team lead by 14 at the half. "They hit two three-pointers in a row and it put them right back in it."

"Without Krissi the team together, we had troubles breaking their press and getting the ball underneath. She's always there to calm us down. I'm happy we had enough composure to pull out the win."

Making up for Davis's early departure were Robinson and Nowlin. Robinson scored 20 while Nowlin took over down low. The sophomore, who was named to the all-tournament team, finished with 15 points and 12 rebounds.

Despite the disappointment of not receiving the NCAA bid, McGraw pointed out the success of this year's squad, which finished with Notre Dame's best record ever.

"This is the first season when we could look back and see the way each player improved," said McGraw. "The attitude was tremendous. This unit played so well-together and had such chemistry, you never knew who was going to shine when. Each person had great games just when we needed it."

"The girls didn't care about individual stats. We've got tons of individual talent, but that doesn't win games—attitude does. We just had a cohesive team."

While losing just Lisa Kuhns, the trio of Robinson, Liebscher and Davis should have no trouble filling the leadership roles and incorporating the incoming freshmen into the squad. In addition, Notre Dame will combat the problems of a flimsy schedule next season by challenging Louisiana Tech, Stanford and Tennessee, three of the NCAA's top four seeds this year.

Virginia ends Notre Dame's season with 75-67 triumph

Cavaliers control game early, starve Irish rally in 2nd half

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Editor Emeritus

■ NCAA Notes / page 14

RICHMOND, Va.—It seemed that the University of Virginia men's basketball team played a near perfect game in the first round of the NCAA Tournament Friday.

Or maybe it just looked that way because it seemed the Notre Dame team didn't show up.

The Irish team that trounced third-ranked Missouri at the Joyce ACC and edged Syracuse in the Carrier Dome was back at the hotel when Virginia beat Notre Dame 75-67. Everyone who said the Irish didn't belong in the tournament said, "I told you so."

The Irish were looking for a rematch with the Orangemen, who had beaten Coppin State in the first evening game. But it was the Cavaliers who were to battle Syracuse—and lose—Sunday.

Virginia dominated the lack-luster Irish in the first half, especially on the boards. Despite a height and weight advantage, Notre Dame was out-rebounded 18-8 in the first half including 10 offensive boards by the Cavaliers. For the game, Virginia had 17 offensive rebounds to Notre Dame's eight.

"We realize we're outsized when we take the court," Cavalier Bryant Stith said. "We have to be the aggressor. Sheer determination makes us go after every loose ball and every rebound. That was a factor tonight."

"In the first half our problem was giving ten offensive rebounds," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said. "We didn't box out. That was the difference at the half. We adjusted."

They adjusted and played with more intensity, whittling the 28-18 halftime lead down to two with eight minutes to play. The cool Cavaliers refused to be ruffled, maintaining a snail's pace tempo and waiting for a can't miss shot.

Kenny Turner hit a three point basket to widen the margin to five and four straight Cavalier lay-ups left the Irish with nothing to do but try to

Defense can't stop Crotty

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va.—Notre Dame men's basketball coach Digger Phelps tried to recruit John Crotty, but the point guard opted for Virginia.

The Irish then tried to stop Crotty in the first round of the NCAA Tournament, but the Virginia junior captain was unstoppable.

Crotty scored 28 points and was the general of Virginia's offensive attack as the Cavaliers downed Notre Dame 75-67 Friday night in Richmond Coliseum.

"I think John Crotty is an excellent point guard," Phelps said. "I think he did a great job of generating their offense."

More impressive than Crotty's point total—two shy of his career high—was his ability to direct and guide the Cavalier offense. His penetration early in the game allowed Virginia to build a lead they never relinquished.

Baseball team wins College Baseball Classic

By KEN TYSIAC

The Notre Dame baseball team capped a 6-1 Spring Break road swing on Saturday with a 6-5 triumph over Air Force in the championship game of the College Baseball Classic in the Seattle Kingdome.

Junior first baseman Frank Jacobs blasted a solo home run in the bottom of the 11th inning to power the Irish to victory and improve the team's record to 10-4 for the season. Reliever Mike Coffey pitched 5 2/3 scoreless innings to record the victory.

"The Kingdome tournament was indeed a real addition for our program," Irish coach Pat Murphy said. "We're still not a good ballclub, but we're coming into our own. I can see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Coffey and the rest of the pitching staff have had a lot to do with Notre Dame's recent success. The team ERA is down to 2.98 after the weekend's action.

The Irish reached the finals by winning two of their first three games in the tournament. They needed extra innings to escape with a 4-3 victory over Air Force in their first tournament game on Saturday and worked overtime in the nightcap, an 8-4, 11-inning triumph over the University of Washington.

the 13th inning to give freshman right hander David Sinnes his first collegiate victory in the first game against Air Force. Sinnes pitched 4 2/3 innings of scoreless relief to earn the win.

Later that same night the Irish scored four runs in the top of the 11th to defeat Washington as relievers Tony Livorsi, David Legus and Chris Michalak combined to shut out the Huskies over the final five innings. Michalak raised his record to 2-0 with the win in a game that lasted until 3 a.m.

The Irish rose at 8 a.m. for a clinic the following morning and were understandably sluggish in a 4-2 loss to Duke at 3 in the afternoon. Notre Dame could only manage four singles in the loss to the Blue Devils, but still managed to bounce back against Air Force later that night to win the championship.

Notre Dame won three games in St. Louis the previous weekend, defeating the University of St. Louis 10-2 on Saturday, March 10 and pounding Bradley 10-2 and Northern Iowa 6-1 on March 11. The Irish rapped out a total of 28 hits in those three convincing victories.

Jacobs, who performed designated hitter duties in the 10-2 win over St. Louis, drove home five runs in that contest with a single and a home run. Sophomore center fielder Dan Bautch smacked three singles

Wrestlers qualify five to NCAAs

Squad places second in West Regional Championships

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

Five Notre Dame wrestlers qualified for the NCAA championships on Saturday, March 10 as coach Fran McCann's Irish wrestling squad took second place in the NCAA West Regional Championships in Lantz Gym at Eastern Illinois University.

The Irish took second place overall in the Regional, which was basically a two-team race between Northern Iowa and Notre Dame. The Panthers won the Regional with 96 1/4 points, while Notre Dame finished in second place with 67 3/4 points. Illinois State (36 3/4 points) was a distant third.

Three Irish wrestlers won individual championships at the Regional. Senior Pat Boyd conquered the 142-pound division, junior Mark Gerardi raised his record to 34-5 by dominating the 167-pound division and freshman Steve King delighted McCann by winning the championship at 190 pounds.

By virtue of their victories, Boyd, Gerardi and King advanced to the NCAA Championships, which will be held at the University of Maryland March 22-24. Senior Andy Radenbaugh and sophomore Marcus Gowens also qualified for the NCAAs as they gained at-large bids by finishing in second place at 118 and 126 pounds respectively in the Regional.

"I thought we wrestled a decent tournament," said McCann. "Our goal was to get as many people to the (NCAAs) as possible. We figured we had a shot at getting between five and seven guys in, but unfortunately Todd Layton tore knee cartilage and was only at 70-75 percent of his potential and Todd Tomazic got to the semis but lost a critical match to a wrestler from Northern Iowa."

Layton lost to T.C. Dantzler of Northern Illinois in the first round in the 150 pound division, while Tomazic dropped a 10-6 decision to eventual champion Jamie Byrne of Northern Iowa at 158 pounds.

Boyd, ranked third in the country at 142 pounds by Amateur Wrestling News, defeated Bret Helmkamp of Drake 9-3 in the championship match. Boyd obliterated opponents Jeff Chumbley of Northern Illinois and Mark Krause of Southwest Missouri State by scores of 23-7 and 19-5 respectively in his first two matches.

Gerardi fought back from a 5-0 deficit to score a 12-8 triumph in the finals at 167 pounds. The El Cajon, California native is ranked 13th in the nation, but McCann says that this ranking is deceiving.
