The Class of 1990 bids farewell to ND/SMC

The Observer/E.G. Bailey

Seniors gathered Sunday night to celebrate a final class mass at the Grotto. Father Michael Himes was the celebrant for this special mass. This Sunday approximately 2,400 will receive degrees at Notre Dame's 145th commencement exercises. At Saint Mary's, 435 women are expected to receive degrees during Saint Mary's College's 143rd commencement.

ND hosts 145th commencement, 2,400 to graduate

The University of Notre Dame will celebrate its 145th Commencement Sunday, May 20 at 2:30 p.m. in the arena of the Joyce ACC.

Entertainer and author Bill Cosby will address some 1,800 undergraduate and 600 advanced degree candidates.

Cosby, who has been a major benefactor of traditionally black colleges and universities, will receive a honorary doctor of laws degree from Notre Dame.

Cosby was chosen because, "he's been very much connected with the idea behind the celebration of the Year of the Family," said University President Father Edward Malloy in an earlier interview. Cosby's number-one rated television show, along with numerous books, offer humorous accounts of everyday family life.

His career began 25 years ago in stand-up comedy. He went on to become the best-selling comedian of all time on records. The NBC television show, "The Cosby Show," has been number one in viewership for the past five years.

Others receiving honorary degrees are as follows:

Saint Mary's to graduate 435 at 143rd commencement

Four hundred and thirty-five seniors are expected to receive degrees during Saint Mary's College's 143rd commencement ceremonies.

Commencement Ceremonies are scheduled to begin at noon on Saturday in the Court of Le Mans Hall. In the event of inclement weather, the commencement will be moved to Angela Athletic Facility.

The Valedictorian for the class of 1990 is Amanda Zenk, a Spanish major from Butler, Ind.

U.S. Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio) will deliver the commencement address, according to Brett McLaughlin, public information officer.

Oakar has held a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives since 1976, when she became the first woman Democrat from Ohio to be elected to Congress.

Oakar has been an active campaigner for social and economic improvement programs for women and senior citizens, according to McLaughlin. She has chaired both a House subcommittee on economic stabilization and a task force on social security, the elderly and women.

Ladies' Home Journal named Oakar one of "America's 100 Most Important Women," while columnist Jack Anderson rated her among "The Ten Best Legislators in Congress."

The College will present Oakar, a native of Cleveland, with an honorary doctor of laws degree. Also receiving honorary doctorates will be Sister Gerald Hartney, special consultant to the Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., and biblical scholar Father Roland Murphy.

Hartney presently serves as a financial management and gospel values consultant to the Washington D.C., Archdiocese.

She is also the director of a video evangelization project in Zimbabwe, Africa, and is recognized as a pioneer in the field of financial management within hospitals and religious communities.

Murphy is considered one of world's foremost authorities on the Bible. Currently an professor emeritus of biblical studies at the Duke University Divinity School, Murphy was one of the

Schmitz named ND '90 valedictorian

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Assistant News Editor

An "A-" in organ lessons is the only imperfection on the academic record of David Schmitz, 1990 valedictorian of the University of Notre Dame.

Schmitz is a math major in the college of science and is from De Land, Fla., where he was valedictorian of his high school class. His cumulative grade point average is 3.996.

Although he did not enter ND with expectations of being valedictorian, Schmitz said, after he received good grades throughout freshman and sophomore years, he decided to make it his goal.

"I realized I'd have a good chance, and I thought I might as well go for it," he said.

He thinks he has been adequately prepared for graduate school by his education at Notre Dame, he said, although he admits that it is difficult to know until you face it. "The undergraduate program in math is very good here," he added.

Schmitz will enter the University of Chicago in the fall, and plans to obtain a Ph.D. in mathematics, so that he can become a mathematics professor.

The other highest ranking graduates from the University's four colleges are:

In addition to Schmitz in the College of Science, Jeffrey Derr of Saux Rapids, Minn.; and Christina Koonce of Mayfield, Ky. Both Derr and Koonce are pre-professional studies majors.

In the College of Arts and Letters—Kenneth Scheve, an economics major from Prairie Village, Kan.; Mary Brown, a philosophy and psychology major from Lafayette, Colo.; and Mathew Slaughter, an economics major from Minnetonka, Minn.

In the College of Business Administration—Scott Brachmann, an accounting major from Sheboygan, Wisc.; Edward Pelican, an accounting major from Arlington Heights, Ill.; and David Alexander, a finance major from East Brunswick, N.J.

In the College of Engineering—Paul Dankoski, an electrical and computer engineering major from Midland, Mich.; Larissa Wenning, a chemical engineering major from Lexington, Ky.; and Matthew Grayson, an electrical and computer engineering major from Charles Mo.

INSIDE COLUMN

Graduation is an end and a beginning

This is it. Our four years of self-inflicted torture at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are finally coming to a bitter-sweet end.

Chris Donnelly
Editor-in-Chief Emeritus

While I was reflecting on my time here I was reminded of a story Robert Fulghum tells in his best-selling book about the first flight of a hot-air balloon.

Ben Franklin, then American ambassador to France, was invited to watch the first hot air balloon take-off from a field outside Paris. On board the balloon there were three assorted barn-yard animals since people still feared the unknown gases in the atmosphere. From all accounts the flight was nothing spectacular. Not unlike the Wright brothers' maiden voyage, the balloon only travelled for a couple of hundred yards before landing in an adjacent field.

A dignitary standing next to Franklin in the viewing stands was quite unimpressed and remarked to those present, "That's nice, but what good is it?" Franklin, however, was somewhat in awe and quickly replied, "That's like asking, 'what good is a newborn baby?'"

In many senses we are now like the newborn child Franklin referred to. We are not so much ending a portion of our lives but we are beginning something new. We are entering the uncharted waters of post-college life and many, including ourselves, wonder about how prepared we are for our futures.

We often complain that Saint Mary's and Notre Dame are like parents — always telling us what to do and when to do it. In many ways they have been. However, just as the newborn comes into the world well-equipped to grow, we are leaving college well-prepared for the future has in store.

In a drug-induced state I decided to be a philosophy major many years ago. Over the course of the past couple of years every time I tell someone my major they invariably respond quite quizzically, "Why?" Philosophy majors are not alone in this by any means. Few people see the practicality of being an Arts and Letters major in such a business-oriented society, and even many of my friends in more "practical" majors question the value of their education when their prospective employers are just going to spend time retraining them.

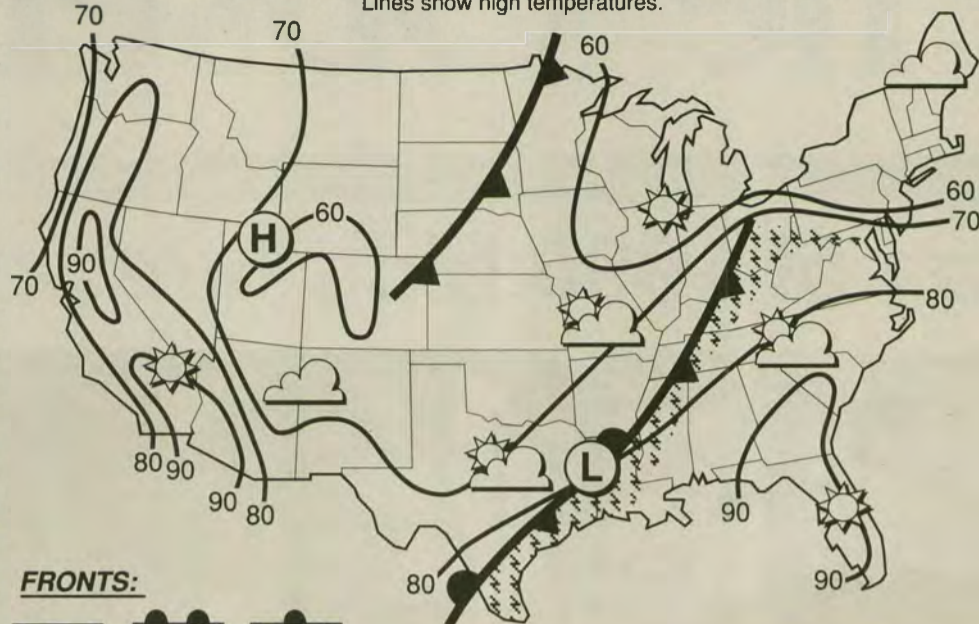

During the past four years, however, we have learned more than how to get a job. We have learned how to think, how to enjoy life, how to make lasting friendships, and how to live on our own.

Our futures, for sure, will be growing experiences. Like the history of flight that took a giant step way back in the 18th century with the launching of the first balloon we are taking a giant step now. We may not immediately fly around the world but we will start to go somewhere and our college experience will help us more than we could ever have imagined.

CAMPUS

The 1990 Commissioning Ceremony of the Army, Naval, and Air Force ROTC units at the University will be Saturday, May 19, at 9:30 a.m. in the Joyce ACC. Donald Rice, a Notre Dame alumnus and secretary of the Air Force, will address the newly commissioned officers. Receptions will follow the ceremony: Army in the Monogram Room of the JACC, Navy/Marine Corps in the University Club, and Air Force in the North Dining Hall.

Notre Dame Head Football Coach Lou Holtz has been made an honorary alumnus of the University. The recent action of the national board of directors of the Notre Dame Alumni Association was only the ninth occasion a person has been made an honorary alumnus of the University. Holtz holds a 1959 bachelor's degree in history from Kent State University and an M.S. in education earned in 1961 from the University of Iowa.

Those unable to attend the University of Notre Dame's Commencement exercises in person on Sunday, May 20, may watch the ceremonies live and free of charge on television at the University's Center for Continuing Education (CCE). The CCE will be open to the public throughout the day and can accommodate as many as 700 Commencement viewers in its various meetings facilities. Seating for more than 400 will be available in the center's auditorium. The CCE is located on the east side of Notre Dame Avenue directly opposite the Morris Inn. Its doors will open Sunday at 7:30 a.m.

Saint Mary's College President William Hickey has been elected chair of the board of directors of Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana for 1990-91. The election took place at the group's April meeting in Indianapolis. Hickey has been a member of the ICUI board since 1987, and for the past year has served as the board's vice chair.

George Kuczynski, professor emeritus of materials science at the University of Notre Dame, died Wednesday afternoon in his home following an illness. He joined Notre Dame faculty in 1951 and was one of the first scientists in the world to establish the basic theory of sintering, the heating of fine metal particles at a temperature below their melting point to weld them together. He was educated at the University of Cracow in his native Poland, at the University of Swansea in England, and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which awarded him a doctorate in 1946.

The cost of undergraduate education at the University of Notre Dame will increase $1,275, or 8.7 percent, for the 1990-91 academic year. Tuition will increase $1,075 to $12,390 and room and board will be up $200 to an average of $3,475, according to a letter sent to the parents of undergraduates. It cited maintaining academic quality, including faculty salaries in the top 20 percent in the nation; increased cost of health insurance and retirement; upgrading of campus computing, and expansion of the physical plant as the chief factors apart from inflation in the cost increase.

A Russian-language article on the University of Notre Dame appears in the current issue of "Amerika," the United States Information Agency magazine distributed in the Soviet Union. The article, "The Soul of a Catholic University," is a reprint of a 1988 New York Times Magazine profile of University President Father Edward Malloy. The article comes on the heels of the formation of the Notre Dame Club of the Soviet Union last month in Moscow for alumni.

The Distinguished Faculty Service Award, sponsored by the College of Business Administration Advisory Council, was given to Paul Conway. Michael Morris received the Senior Class Outstanding Teacher Award for the College of Business Administration. Lee Tavis was awarded the MBA Outstanding Teacher Award and Hector Guerrero received the Executive MBA Outstanding Teacher Award.

Zenk to serve as SMC 1990 valedictorian

By JOE MOODY
Assistant News Editor

Amanda Zenk has earned the title of the 1990 Saint Mary's College valedictorian.

Zenk, a Spanish major with a minor in American Studies, is graduating with a cumulative grade point average of 3.959.

"It's a great honor," exclaimed Zenk. On her view of education, Zenk said, "Learning isn't just in the classroom but in helping others in the community and using your education to help other people," adding that if one does not go out and act on what one has learned and share it with others, it seems "almost selfish."

Zenk explained how achieving such high grades took a lot out of her social life throughout freshman and sophomore year, but said she learned how to coordinate her time effectively after spending a year studying abroad in Madrid, Spain.

An "A-" in Calculus 3 and an "A-" in Linear Algebra were the only grades that fell below the "A" level.

Zenk was the salutatorian in her high school in Butler, Indiana. At Saint Mary's Zenk volunteered her service for the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Retarded, the Community Resource Center Hotline, and worked at the local Hispanic Community Center.

Livingston to receive award

Special to The Observer

Patricia Livingston, associate director of the Center for Continuing Formation in Ministry at Notre Dame, will receive the 1990 U.S. Catholic Award, according to Father Mark Brummel, editor of U.S. Catholic, the monthly magazine.

Addressing Livingston, Brummel said, "You represent a source of wisdom often overlooked in the church. Too often, divorced, single mothers are looked upon as objects of ministry rather than as ministers themselves. You have generously shared from your experiences of intimacy and risk, tenderness and pain, in order to call the church's ministers to deeper more integrated human life. You have preached the good news that the heart of the Christian message is love, and human love is a tangible sign of God's love."

Livingston began work at the Center, a component of the University's Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry, in 1988. A 1963 graduate of Trinity College, she received a master's degree from the University of South Florida at Tampa in 1975. A private counselor since that year, she has lectured and conducted a variety of seminars, conferences and retreats since 1973. Her clients include priests, men and women religious, parents, teachers and corporate workers. She has contributed articles to two books, "Preaching Better" and "Why We Serve."

The U.S. Catholic Award has been given annually by editors of U.S. Catholic since 1978 to individuals who have "furthered the cause of women in the Church." Last year's U.S. Catholic Award was given to Sister Thea Bowman, who will posthumously receive Notre Dame's highest honor, the Laetare Medal, during graduation exercises on May 20.

CSC to host Volunteer Send-off this Saturday

By JANICE O'LEARY
Associate News Editor

The first social service commissioning ceremony will be added to the commencement activities this weekend at Notre Dame.

One hundred and fifty graduating seniors and their families and friends have been invited to the Volunteer Send-off ceremony on Saturday, May 19, at 11:15 a.m. in Washington Hall, according to Michael Garvey, assistant director of Public Relations and Information.

Mary Ann Roemer, coordinator of senior programming for the Center for Social Concerns, pioneered the service commissioning ceremony.

"There has always been a special ceremony honoring those entering the Holy Cross Associates and I thought it would be nice if it included students doing other social work after graduation," she said.

Thirty-two of the graduating seniors will become Holy Cross Associates, taking part in the domestic and international mission work of the Congregation of Holy Cross.

In addition, Notre Dame graduates will be working in the Peace Corps, the Jesuit Volunteer Program, Habitat for Humanity and several other service efforts in this country and abroad, said Garvey.

Roemer said that approximately 75 people have signed themselves and their parents up to attend the commissioning. However, she stressed that "if people are doing volunteer work and did not have a chance to sign up, they should still come to the ceremony."

She also said that any faculty, staff, administrators or friends who are supportive of volunteerism are all "cordially invited."

Participants in the commissioning ceremony will be welcomed by Senior Class President Carolyn Rey of Sarasota, Fla., who plans to work for an archdiocesan teaching program in a poor neighborhood of Seattle, Wash., said Garvey.

Also speaking will be Irene Loftus, a graduating law student. She will be talking about her own experiences of social service in the Holy Cross Associates Program following her senior year at Notre Dame.

Each senior will receive a taper lit from a large candle on the Washington Hall stage, and the ceremony will conclude with a prayer and a "supportive talk" from University President Father Edward Malloy, said Roemer.

Each year, a tenth of Notre Dame's graduates find work in social service, he said.

Gosh, if Mickey likes this, wait till he sees the party we have planned for him on Sunday at the Joyce Convocation Center.

Holy Cross Hall to be torn down this summer

Observer Staff Report

When graduates return to Notre Dame as alumni Holy Cross Hall will be no more.

Holy Cross will officially close its doors over the summer after more than one hundred years of use. It was originally used as a seminary at the University and has served as a men's residence hall for the past 23 years.

Notre Dame has leased the building from the Indiana Province of the Congregation of Holy Cross. It is considered unsuitable for future use by both the University and the province.

According to Rector William Kirk, there are several reasons for closing down the dorm. First, it will help the effort to even the ratio of male to female students on campus since admissions of women have increased greatly in the past few years.

Secondly, Kirk cited that the building itself is very old and is deteriorating both inside and out. The cost of repairs would be too great, he said. That is why the building will be torn down in July.

Holy Cross houses more than 200 students. The "Hogs" who are not graduating this year will be transferred into open spaces in almost every male dorm. Father Gerald Lardner, rector of Grace Hall, has allotted the greatest number of spaces for the transfers. Forty residents will be placed in sections of two floors in Grace. Kirk said this will help keep some of the old Holy Cross sections intact. Other dorms will be able to let roommates stay together in their old arrangements.

The dorm overlooks Saint Mary's Lake and resembles a rambling lakeside manor. Staircases are everywhere, the result of additions over the last century. Nooks and crannies abound.

The oldest sections of the building date from at least 1889, when it was Holy Cross Seminary. From the 1920s until the 1960s, it housed high school students who were studying to become priests, said Father James Burtchaell.

It was Burtchaell, a theology professor and former provost, who suggested in 1967 that the university lease the building as a residence hall. Since 1981, he has lived in an apartment created in the former hall kitchen.

Holy Cross boasts the largest dorm room on campus called "The Nine," which is a nine-man living area. The hall is known for its scenic view, relaxed atmosphere and for its residents regularly registering the lowest collective grade point average on campus, according to students.

"It's a little bit laid-back compared to the rest of the halls because we're so far away," said Kirk.

No one seems to know for sure how Holy Cross men came to be called Hogs. Some say it is because they tended to track mud from the lake area into the dining hall.

It's a name residents pride themselves on. They hope the memory lingers, even after their hall is gone.

The South Bend Tribune contributed to this report.

Faculty members to be honored

Observer Staff Report

The following faculty members will be honored at Notre Dame's 1990 commencement for excellence in teaching:

- Sonia Gernes, associate professor of English, will be presented with the Charles E. Sheedy Award for excellence in teaching in the College of Arts and Letters. "In her close involvement with student and her work to expand the curriculum of the entire university, Professor Gernes stands out as a motivator and thinker for both her students and her colleagues," said Michael Loux, O'Shaugnessy dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

- Lee Tavis, C.R. Smith profesor of Business Administration, Finance & Business Economics, will be presented with the MBA Outstanding Teacher Award.

•Hector Guerrero, professor of management, will be awarded the Executive MBA Best Teacher Award.

•Michael Morris, associate professor of Accounting, will be presented with the Business Administration Senior Class Outstanding Teacher Award.

•Leonard Morse-Fortier, assistant professor of Civil Engineering, will receive College of Engineering Outstanding Teacher Award. He has consistently been ranked "excellent" by his students over the past seven semesters, according to Anthony Michel, McCloskey dean of engineering, and is known for his keen interest in and his obvious passion for his subject.

•Jeremiah Freeman, professor of Chemistry, will be awarded the Shilts-Leonard Teaching Award in the College of Science. The award, instituted in 1983 to recognize outstanding teaching, memorializes Father James Shilts, a long-time Notre Dame astronomy and astrophysics professor before his death in 1982.

Award established in honor of Thea Bowman

Special to The Observer

The Sister Thea Bowman Foundation has established an annual Sister Thea Bowman Award for outstanding contributions to black Catholic education, according to Archbishop Eugene Marino of Atlanta, chair of the Foundation's board of directors.

The Sister Thea Bowman Award honors the Foundation's founder, Sister Thea Bowman, the prominent Gospel singer, evangelist, and Mississippian who passed away March 30.

The Foundation was launched last year at the behest of Bowman with the help of five U.S. Catholic bishops. Its purpose is to provide scholarship opportunities from grade school through college.

In its first year of operation, the Foundation provided scholarships to 46 college freshmen. Marino called the launching of the Foundation "a turning point for black Catholics in the United States."

The idea for the Foundation began in 1988 with Dr. Leonard

Sister Thea Bowman

Jennings, a Stowe, VT, orthopedic surgeon, his wife Mary Lou Jennings, and Father Thomas Hoar, the director of campus ministry at St. Michael's College.

Bowman was widely recognized for her work with black youths. A charismatic leader who worked tirelessly to teach children in poverty both in Mississippi and around the world, said at the Foundation's inauguration, "I feel deeply honored to have a foundation named for me which gives young people a real opportunity to develop their talents."

Laetare awarded posthumously

Special to The Observer

The University of Notre Dame's Laetare Medal, the oldest and most prestigious honor given to American Catholics, will be awarded to Sister Thea Bowman posthumously on Sunday during the University's Commencement ceremonies.

Bowman died on March 30, six days after being named the first African American to receive the medal, at the age of 51.

Auxiliary Bishop James Lyke of Cleveland and Sister Dorothy Kundering will accept the award in Bowman's place. Lyke was her friend and Kundering was her companion.

"In multiple ministries of word, song, and suffering Sister Bowman has shown Church and world alike a face of Christ both black and female," University President Father Edward Malloy said in March. "In honoring her, we celebrate not only her witness but also the cultural wealth of the Catholic Church in our land."

Afflicted by cancer since 1985, Bowman was a member of the Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration, and was confined to a wheelchair. Despite this handicap, she maintained a gruelling schedule of lectures and singing performances designed to raise awareness and appreciation of black Catholic culture.

She was also a consultant for the Catholic diocese of Jackson, Miss., she helped organize the 1987 National Black Catholic Congress, an event celebrating the contributions of America's black Catholics to their Church. That same year she was the subject of a profile on the CBS television program "60 Minutes," whose host, Mike Wallace, dubbed her "the African-robbed priest."

Born in Canton, Miss., and the granddaughter of a slave, Bowman read, spoke and sang before hundreds of gatherings nationwide as well as in Nigeria, Kenya and Canada. She earned a doctoral degree in rhetoric and literature from Catholic University of America and had published, in addition to several articles on black spirituality and ecumenical relations, articles on the writings of St. Thomas More.

Bowman was a member of the faculty of the Institute of Black Catholic Studies at Xavier University in New Orleans. Admirers of her work have established a Sister Thea Bowman Educational Foundation to provide financial support and mentoring programs for black students in Catholic primary and elementary schools and Catholic colleges and universities. The foundation board is chaired by Archbishop Eugene Marino of Atlanta and Malloy is a member.

The Laetare Medal is so named because its recipient is announced each year on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday in Lent on the Church calendar. "Laetare," the Latin word for "rejoice," is the first word in the entrance antiphon of the Mass on that Sunday, which anticipates the celebration of Easter.

Established at Notre Dame in 1883, the Laetare Medal was conceived as an American counterpart of the Golden Rose a papal honor.

Gumbleton receives 1990 Peacemaker Award

Special to The Observer

Most Rev. Thomas Gumbleton, auxiliary bishop of Detroit and president of Pax Christi U.S.A., has received the Peacemaker Award from the University of Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies.

The citation praises Gumbleton as "pastor, teacher, counsellor, comforter of the afflicted, soldier of the Spirit, and man of peace in word and deed. In a world of violence, hatred and fear, he carries aloft the lamp of light and truth and offers words of love and reconciliation. He restores our souls and enkindles hope for the future of humankind."

An internationally prominent activist in a variety of peace and social justice causes, Gumbleton was a member of the committee which drafted the American bishops' 1983 pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace." Ordained in Detroit in 1956, he was consecrated as bishop in 1968.

He travelled to Vietnam during the war in Southeast Asia to investigate the plight of political prisoners there. In 1979, he travelled to Iran as the Catholic bishops' representative to visit the U.S. embassy hostages.

An outspoken opponent of American military intervention in Central America, Gumbleton has also served as spokesman for Quest and Witness for Peace, two organizations opposed to U.S. policies in that region.

Gumbleton is Detroit's regional bishop for parishes of the inner city, one of which, St. Leo's, he serves as pastor. He is also a visiting fellow of the Institute.

•Rutherford Aris, regents' professor of Chemical Engineering at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, doctor of engineering. A member of the faculty at Minnesota for more than 30 years, Aris has received teaching and research awards from the Danforth Foundation, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and the American Society for Engineering Education.

•Father George Clements, pastor of Holy Angels Church, Chicago, doctor of laws. The longtime civil rights activist has organized neighborhood protests against drug dealing and has inspired by his own example the adoption of black children.

•Jill Ker Conway, visiting professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass., doctor of laws. Historian and former president of Smith College, Conway also is the author of "The Road to Coorain," an account of her upbringing on a sheep ranch in the Australian Outback.

•Ernest Eliel, W.R. Kenan, Jr. professor of Chemistry, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, doctor of science. Author of a seminal text in his field, Eliel is a former Guggenheim fellow, former chairman of the American Chemical Society and a member of the National Academy of Sciences.

•Suzanne Farrell, ballerina, New York City, doctor of laws. Recently retired from the New York City Ballet, Farrell was a principal dancer with the company for 24 years and is renowned for her interpretations of the works of George Ballanchine.

•Emil Hofman, retiring dean of the Freshman Year of Studies and professor emeritus of chemistry at Notre Dame, doctor of science. As a graduate student, teacher and dean, Hofman has been associated with the University for 40 years and has taught more than 30,000 students.

•Ignacio Lozano, Jr., editor-in-chief of La Opinion, Los Angeles, and a Notre Dame trustee, doctor of laws. Former American ambassador to El Salvador and a Notre Dame alumnus, Lozano edits the most widely read Spanish-language daily printed in the U.S.

•J. Richard Munro, retired co-chairman and co-chief executive office Time Warner Inc., New York City, doctor of laws. A career with Time until his retirement on May 9, Munro also is known for his voluntary service as president of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, chairman of the New York Urban Coalition, director of the United Negro College Fund and in other, similar positions.

•Javier Perez de Cuellar, secretary general of the United Nations, New York City, doctor of laws. The first Latin American to serve as Secretary General, Perez de Cuellar has won praise for reinforcing the UN's role in peacekeeping and for his personal peace initiatives for the Falkland Islands, Afghanistan and Namibia.

•A. Kenneth Pye, president of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, doctor of laws. Former chancellor, dean of the law school and acting president of Duke University, Pye in August 1987 was chosen the ninth president of SMU.

•Martha Seger, member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C., doctor of laws. The first woman appointed to a full, 14-year term on the Board of Governors, she represents the Fed on the National Women's Business Council and also serves as chair of the board of directors of the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation.

Also at Commencement, Sister Thea Bowman, the late poet, evangelist and Gospel singer, will be honored with the first posthumous presentation of the University's Laetare Medal. Bowman died March 30, six days after being named the first African American to receive the medal, the oldest and most prestigious award given to American Catholics.

Auxiliary Bishop James Lyke of Cleveland and Sister Dorothy Kundering will accept the award. Lyke was a friend of Bowman and Kundering was her companion.

After the University commencement exercises, a diploma ceremony for the Notre Dame Law School will take place at about 5 p.m. on the lawn adjacent the the Hesburgh Library's reflecting pool. The alternate location, in case of rain, is the JACC, following a short break to clear the area after commencement.

Speakers at the Law School diploma ceremony are University President Father Edward

Graduates face new challenges

Dear Graduates,
 I offer you my congratulations as you complete this stage of your life here at Notre Dame. I am sure that you can look back over this span of time with a real sense of satisfaction and achievement. Not only have you risen to the challenge of a very competitive academic environment, but you also have assumed responsibility for the quality of life on our campus. In various student organizations, you have provided leadership and service. We are all the beneficiaries of your good will and creativity.

I am sure that you find it amazing to recall all the changes that have taken place during your years here. Deep friendships have been formed, a wider perspective on the world has been gained, and your religious faith has been tested by experience. I hope and pray that you will be blessed in the years ahead. We will miss you, but it is appropriate that you take on a new set of challenges as you begin your life elsewhere.

You are always welcome back on campus. A part of you will always remain with us. We count on your support in your new status as an alumnus of the University. Thanks for all that you have contributed to our common life. All best wishes and congratulations.

Tyson offers ND grads prayers, best wishes

Dear Editor:
 I should like to take this opportunity to extend my best wishes and prayers to the Class of 1990 as its members prepare to move on to new ventures. Commencement is a time of mixed emotions for many who leave. Excitement, apprehension, happiness and sadness all come together during Commencement Weekend.

For those of you who are graduating seniors, it is my hope that we have achieved our goal in providing you with an education of the mind and of the heart. May your commitment to your faith in God and to service match your dedication to your chosen vocation and profession. Notre Dame has high expectations of its students. The tremendous contribution that our alumni make to our society and to the Church is a testament to the importance of those high expectations. For those of you leaving with graduate and professional degrees, it is my hope that you will take with you the best of our traditions as they relate to your discipline. If you bring to your chosen field a strong set of ethical convictions and a commitment to justice, you will represent the best of Notre Dame.

Finally, a note of gratitude to all of you. You not only take from here, but you have made a variety of contributions to your colleagues, the institution and to those of use who remain to assist students who come in the future.

May the Lord go with each of you. We are blessed to have you as a member of the Notre Dame Family.

SMC education fosters growth of mind, spirit

Dear Editor:
 This is one of the last times I will address graduating Saint Mary's students as seniors. In a few short days you will become alumnae of Saint Mary's, members of an active and committed alumnae association over 16,000 women strong. I hope that in the future I will again address you as alumnae when you return to campus for College events, reunions and maybe, one day, as parents.

But, for now, I would like to talk to you once more as Saint Mary's students. The contributions that you have made to our college have made it a better place. Whether through your involvement in student government, clubs, athletics, campus ministry or as a leader in the classroom, each has left her mark. Especially at Saint Mary's, individual effort makes the difference. You will be remembered by the faculty, administrators, staff and remaining students for your energy, talent and compassion.

I also believe that just as every student makes a contribution to Saint Mary's so does Saint Mary's make an impact in every student's life. As a Catholic women's college, Saint Mary's forms a community that fosters leadership and intellectual and spiritual growth. As members of that community, you have been given the tools to begin the lifelong process of clarifying and living your goals and values.

Apply the skills and knowledge that you have acquired at Saint Mary's. The greatest gift of your education is in the example of your life.

With the faculty and staff of Saint Mary's, I wish you all God's blessings in your future.

The Notre Dame Family:

The Abowd family has graduated 9 children from ND

accent writer

After nine graduating children, ten degrees, and about a half-million dollars in educational expenses, the family of Richard Abowd claims the world's record for Notre Dame graduates.

The last of the Abowds, Paula, will be receiving a B.S. in mathematics and computing from Notre Dame this Sunday.

The eldest of the Abowd children, John, who once served as Editor-in-Chief of The Observer, began his career at Notre Dame in the autumn of 1969. Since then over the past 21 years, only one academic year (1976-77) has lacked an Abowd studying at the University, according to Richard Conklin of the Department of Public Relations and Information.

The Notre Dame Admissions Office joked that it automatically sent an application yearly to the family.

"We've all gotten by on student loans, academic scholarships, and summer jobs," said Anthony Abowd, the second oldest who once served as News Editor for The Observer.

Why did the Abowd children have such a calling to Notre Dame? "Because dad went here. We liked it. It's a good school, and we all had a good idea of what Notre Dame was like before we went there," replied Anthony.

Richard Abowd, a 1949 Notre Dame alumnus and a research engineer at the Ford Motor Company, and his wife Sara, have sent all 12 of their children on to higher education, and only three attended schools other than Notre Dame. At one point, the Abowd family had six children in college at the same time, according to Conklin.

All in all, the Abowd offspring have earned 19 degrees in the 21 years they have been in post-secondary education, including two Ph.D.s, two C.P.A.s, and five master's degrees. Gregory, the third youngest who graduated from Notre Dame in 1986, was a Rhodes scholar who received an M.S. from Oxford in 1988 and is now pursuing a doctorate in philosophy there, according to Conklin.

"We're a pretty diverse group," said Anthony. The Abowd children have ended up doing everything from teaching economics at Cornell to owning a music store.

The Notre Dame Abowds have lived in nine different residence halls and figure they have eaten more than 13,000 meals in the campus dining halls, attended Sunday Mass about 1,100 times, and cheered at about 200 football games.

The Abowd children, in chronological order, are John and Anthony, both ND graduates, followed by David who went to Sacred Heart, Elizabeth who went to Marygrove in Detroit, Marypat who went to the University of Michigan, and James, Rosemary, Michelle, Stephen, Gregory, Peter, and Paula, all ND graduates.

Is Notre Dame another Eden, a demi-paradise?

For a full twenty years now, I've been intruding on the privacy of the God who dwells alone. In June 1970, I started to write for the Observer, and in the fall of that year, I began to turn out this weekly column, which has been published ever since then without a break. I've tried dozens of times to describe the impression Notre Dame leaves on me, or on the alums who come back, or on the seniors who are graduating. I can tell you how the place affects all of us; but I can't tell you why it affects us, agreeably or otherwise, quite so powerfully.

After twenty years, I have the itch to describe this emerald iceberg one more time, before the place is spoiled and corrupted by money, and is changed forever into a less personal and less graceful place. Maybe there's a blueprint of Notre Dame as it exists in God's mind that He shows us when we're dreaming.

Maybe Notre Dame has a destiny in store for it as Our Lady's University that we can only dimly foresee as we move through the shadowlands in search of a place in the sun, where shadows become substance. Perhaps there is no road into the future that is not paved with gold; therefore as Domers, we should not be embarrassed or nervous about the temporal prosperity that is coming our way. Still, we should stay in touch with our roots for as long as we can remember them, and trace them on paper, in words we can turn to when we start wondering where we're coming from.

Shakespeare described his damp island as "This other Eden, demi-paradise. . . this little world. . . This blessed plot, this earth. . . Renowned. . . as is the sepulchre of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's son. This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear land. Dear for her reputation throughout the world. . ."

Visitors, discovering Notre Dame as Mary's dowry, go home, touting the campus as another Eden, demi-paradise, and the rest; their praise keeps

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Notre Dame famous. If Notre Dame is, like the Ireland they write songs about, a bit of heaven on earth, this doesn't mean that the place hasn't fallen from original grace, like the rest of the country. All America was Eden when the white man came; paradise was lost, wrote Faulkner, when the early settlers started to abuse the Indians, and bring over slaves. Before Sorin and the Holy Cross brothers settled on the shores of St. Mary's lake, the Potawatamies were here, friendly to Father Badin, who died in their company. At some point in their history, they were driven off the land, though this meant disintering the dead resting in the tribal burial plots. Tragically, their exodus turned into a death march.

If we boast of standing on holy ground at Notre Dame, it's because the land has been redeemed by the sufferings of the pioneers who tamed the wilderness; and it must continue to be redeemed, as long as we commit sins daily. If you want to credit Notre Dame with an upbeat mystique, you should remember that the campus did not become Camelot through an act of magic which exempts Our Lady's children from the uncertainties of the human condition.

The cemeteries show us a history—written tersely in the birth-dates and death-dates that are carved in stone—of seminarians, students and priests, and Holy Cross sisters and brothers, who died young. The casualty list of the maimed and the dead extends back to Sorin's day when unruly minims were sent down to the lake to make bricks without straw, for the good of their souls. Every wall to which the ivy clings has served its turn as a wailing wall damp with blood, sweat and tears. Socrates, condemned for impiety, learned when he was old that the groves of academe are no bed of roses.

The lad from "The Dead Poet's Society" was green in judgement as a preppie, when he made his tragic choice, after running into a road block which is apt to be there, more or less, for all of us. Going home one night like Richard Corey, he put a bullet through his head.

As part of the real world, Notre Dame has not survived without its own chapters of sorrow; if it were otherwise, the place would be Never-Never Land, where Peter Pan lives with the boys who don't want to grow up. The fans who believe that Notre Dame exists primarily to win football games are as mistaken as the Catholics who think Notre Dame exists so that the students can attend Mass and light candles at the Grotto. nothing embarrasses students in touch with the real world more than to read the press notices which praise Notre Dame to the sky as a football factory that turns out champions whose destiny is to play on Number One teams. Or, as an angel factory that turns out muscular Christians nourished on milk laced with raven's blood, to save them from being wimps who resist the truths that make men free, and challenge their teachers in order to keep them honest as Christian scholars.

Religion is at its best at Notre Dame when it's light hearted and joyous, as in the legend of the juggler of Our Lady, which could serve us as a paradigm. The juggler offers God's Mother a performance in which he shows her his skills, as a gift to her on her feast day. It turns out to be the gift that pleases her even more than the jewels of the madonna which the king has brought to her altar. At Notre Dame, Our Lady is not the autocrat seen by visionaries, presenting herself as a queen. The royal crown sent to Father Sorin by Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III, to be placed on the head of Mary's statue on the Golden Dome, has never been used. It's kept in the sacristy of Sacred Heart Church, under a glass as a museum piece.

What need does the patron of American students have of a crown? Mary, for us, is Our Lady, God's Mother, whom we celebrate on all her feastsdays. As our intercessor, she's not an embarrassment, getting in Christ's way by demanding our most intense devotions, as though neglect of her were a mortal sin, until we would hardly have time left to pray to her Son.

Football at Notre Dame would have more charm to it, if it were played like a religious devotion, in the spirit of the juggler. That's why Gerry Faust had such great appeal as a coach: he was the juggler who tried to please Our Lady with his bag of tricks. The Gipper was Our Lady's juggler, though perhaps he was not conscious of it; and he was rewarded on his deathbed with the gift of faith.

The lovely Lady chapels attached to the mediaeval cathedrals in France were built by the merchants, so Henry Adams tells us, as tourist attractions, which devout Catholics could go on pilgrimages to see. When the Lady chapels didn't produce the hoped-for revenues, the merchants became surly and turned anti-clerical. Could football at Notre Dame ever turn out to be, like those French Lady chapels, the tail trying to wag the dog?

The fans who show up for the football games could get the idea that Notre Dame is an mindless as a movie script written in Hollywood. Parents who belong to the Establishment send their sons here to be trained as straight-arrows who could be recruited, if they wanted to be, by the FBI. Notre Dame was better off, those parents think, before their daughters came here as sex objects distracting the campus. "But golden girls and lads all must/ As chimney-sweepers, come to dust"; and if they enroll at Notre Dame, they hate being stereotyped as model Catholics, and they hate the rules which seem designed to make them measure up as stereotypes.

Sometimes, parents and students alike resist the idea of Notre Dame as a think-tank for the Church in America. The students feel that this means that they are officially forbidden to dream dreams that don't have the Pope's imprimatur on them. To the parents, academic freedom sound dangerous and fruity with heresy.

Nevertheless, despite the stresses that keep showing up in a university that is so officially religious, the students manage to survive until graduation with dignity, grace and self-respect. They tend to turn out well, to the surprise and delight of their parents, who weren't sure that they should turn out at all. Even the graduates who leave here on Commencement Day, simmering with anger, find that their anger eventually grows cold. Amnesia, as a gift of God's mercy, sets in, helping them forget the bad days, and remember mostly the good days, when they started lifelong friendships.

Maybe trauma is what is supposed to happen, when you're getting a worthwhile education. Notre Dame must do its best to see that the Catholic traumas don't leave the victims alienated from God for a lifetime. On the other hand, a Catholic conscience, with a diploma certifying it, is a good thing to leave here with, even if a conscience, spoon-fed on Catholic myth, does leave you restless, anxious about the state of your soul.

Maybe after all these years as an alumnus who writes letters to God, I still haven't got the picture straight. That only means that God hasn't finished with me yet as a member of the Class of '49. Will the new graduates come back and give me the benefit of their life experiences? Please God they will not spoil us when they leave Notre Dame their millions.

The Notre Dame baseball team is currently pursuing its second consecutive Midwestern Collegiate Conference title at Coveleski Stadium. The action continues today and Saturday.

Emotions high at Indy in May

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is part of a series of first-person columns by team-owners with cars entered in the May 27 Indianapolis 500. This column by Rick Galles, co-owner and general manager of Galles-Kraco Racing, deals with the emotions of May at Indy.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — I don't think anybody can be successful without being emotional and being something of an extrovert.

This is essentially true in Indy-car racing. Putting together a championship caliber race team requires the blending of many types of people with many types of talent.

What we do, and what the drivers do, is dangerous. But the emotion involved in racing is not so much connected with the danger, but in dedicating yourself to the preparation of a world class racing effort.

I think any coach or leader of an organization must utilize and translate his emotion into positive things. There are times I act like I'm really upset with the race officials, but I'm really just trying to get something done.

In tough situations it's important that the leader of the team controls himself so that his people — in a time of need — can depend on him.

As far as emotion during the race, well, I'm a pretty good actor.

The most emotional moment I've ever had in Indy-car racing, as you might expect, was the final 10 laps of last year's Indy 500. Our race plan worked perfectly and Little Al (Al Unser Jr.) was in position to lead the race in the final 10 laps.

He did take the lead and two laps before the end I was convinced Galles Racing was going to be the Indy 500 champion.

Half a lap later, we were in the fence, our car was trashed. Luckily, our driver was unhurt. We went from an unbelievable high to an incredible low in about 60 seconds.

But, at that moment, the first thing I did was call Al on the radio and see if he was all right. He said, 'Sure boss, I'm fine.'

Nothing is more important than the safety of my people. And in a situation like that, if Al's OK and the crew is OK, then everything else will take care of itself.

I think one of the most overlooked things in the world is the race team beyond the drivers.

At Galles-Kraco, our motto is "No one is bigger than the team." Not me, not my partner Maury Kraines, not our drivers, Little Al and Bobby Rahal, and anybody else.

Working with people, seeing them grow and develop, is my favorite thing about being involved in a professional sport like Indy-car racing.

Racing at this level, in the Indianapolis 500, requires both talent and hard work by everybody. It's important you people know you care — both about them as individuals and about the team as a unit. I want the people on this race team and in my other businesses to feel good about themselves. Happy people are dedicated people.

DiLucia makes it, but Irish ignored

Observer Staff Report

Notre Dame Sophomore David DiLucia will open play next week in the NCAA tennis championships.

This will be the second consecutive trip to the tourney for DiLucia, who finished the season ranked 23rd with a 31-11 record.

The top doubles combination of DiLucia and senior Mike Wallace did not make the tourney because of a cap on the total number of participants, despite a record of 13-3 and a final ranking of 11th in the nation.

The duo of DiLucia and Wallace will serve as second alternate at the championships.

The Irish team did not receive a bid to the tourney after a 24-4 season and a 16th ranking in the country. Northwestern received the automatic regional bid, and the selection committee then overlooked Notre Dame in picking the remainder of the 20-team field.

DiLucia has the talent to make a good showing in the singles draw. He should open next Wednesday following some preliminary matches on Tuesday.

DiLucia beat current No. 5 player Al Parker of Georgia during the spring season. He also has wins over No. 13 Joby Foley of West Virginia, No. 15 Gilles Amelime of Wake Forest, No. 19 David Kass of Michigan, No. 29 Ty Tucker of Ohio State and No. 32 Louis Ruetten of Texas Christian.

DiLucia has beaten the top two players - Todd Martin of Northwestern and Jonathan Stack of Stanford - in summer tournaments.

"I think that on any given day, he is capable of beating anybody in the tourney," Irish coach Bob Bayliss said. "Whether he can win the tourney, I don't know. This has been called one of the hardest tournaments in the world to win."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Notre Dame track team will send 15 representatives to the IC4A outdoor championships at Yale University May 17-20. Competing will be Pat Kearns, Nick Radkewich and Mike Drake in the 10,000, Mike O'Connor in the 5000, Mike Rogan in the 1500, John Cole and Paul Maloney in the high jump, Tony Smith in the discus throw, Jeff Smith in the long jump, Matt DeAngelis, Ryan Milhalko and Jon Stewart in the javelin, John Coyle in the 3000 steeplechase and the 5000.

Notre Dame was among 12 members of the College Football Association cited for the highest graduation rates of football players in a five-year period ending with the 1988-89 academic year. Duke won the award having 24 of 25 players graduate for 96 percent. Notre Dame had 14 of 15 players graduate for 93 percent.

Berticelli named new soccer coach

Special to The Observer

Mike Berticelli, the head men's soccer coach at Old Dominion the last six years and previously coach of two NCAA Division III national championship teams at North Carolina Greensboro, has been named men's soccer coach at Notre Dame.

Berticelli brings 14 years of experience with him to his fourth stop as a head coach in the collegiate ranks. He also brings along the reputation as a coach who builds programs into national contenders.

In six years at Old Dominion, Berticelli's teams compiled a 76-27-16 (.706) record to go along with a 70-9-5 (.863) mark in four years (1980-83) at North Carolina Greensboro and a 44-18-2 (.703) record in four years (1976-79) at Thomas College (Maine). His 14-year career record stands at 190-54-23 (.755).

Berticelli, who has received assorted coach of the year honors in nine different seasons, drew national attention for leading UNC Greensboro to back-to-back NCAA Division III national titles in 1982 and 1983. Prior to his arrival in 1980, the Spartans had losing seasons in seven of their first nine campaigns.

When he arrived at Old Dominion in 1984, Berticelli inherited a program that had just one winning season in its previous three years and a team that had lost eight starters. The Monarchs overcame those obstacles and posted a 12-9-1 record and earned Berticelli Sun Belt Conference coach of the year honors. The following season ODU posted a school record for wins with a 16-1-3 record, including a victory over nationally-ranked Virginia to end the Cavaliers' 44-game home winning streak. That squad established 16 school records and produced a pair of All-Americans and three players who were selected in the professional soccer draft.

In 1986, Berticelli's squad, which consisted of 11 freshmen, 10 sophomores, three juniors and no seniors, went 13-5-3 and was ranked 10th nationally. The season was highlighted by a 1-0 upset of top-ranked Evansville, a member of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, on the Purple Aces' home field.

Old Dominion continued its growth in 1987 by capturing the tough Sun Belt Conference championship en route to a 14-3-2 record. His 1988 squad posted an 11-5-3 record. Last season, the Monarchs made their first appearance in the NCAA Tournament after winning the Sun Belt championship. Old Dominion, ranked 19th nationally, fell at fourth-ranked Wake Forest 2-1 in a first-round contest and finished the season 10-4-4.

A native of Lewiston, Maine, he earned his bachelor of science in English in 1973 from the University of Maine where he also played as a goalkeeper on the soccer squad. He obtained his master of science degree in physical education from the University of Maine at Orono in 1976.

He has won many coaching awards in his career, highlighted by being named the NCAA Division III coach of the year in 1982 following his first national title at UNC-Greensboro. He was the New England coach of the year in 1977, '78 and '79 and was awarded the same distinction in the Dixie Conference in 1980, '81 and '83. He won Sun Belt coach of the year honors in 1984 and '89.

The Observer/Adrew McCloskey

Spring

NFL draft.

"If we were to start tomorrow," Holtz said, "you've got to look at Culver at fullback. But Spears also made a good impression."

The offensive line was plagued by inconsistent play in the spring scrimmages, but problems with timing, technique and execution are expected this time of year.

Center and quad-captain Mike Heldt missed all of spring practice due to a dislocated elbow injured in last season's Orange Bowl. Three other linemen from last season's 12-1 squad were taken in the NFL draft, leaving quick guard Tim Ryan as the only returning starter on the offensive line.

"The offensive line will be okay in the fall," Holtz said. "We still have some concerns about that. Tight tackle Justin Hall and (tight guard) Mirko Jurkovic came of age. We're going to be able to run the ball, but we have to be more consistent."

Gene McGuire has filled in at center in Heldt's absence, but he will probably be moved to another position on the line if and when Heldt returns in the fall.

"Gene McGuire could move to split tackle or somewhere else," Holtz said. "You can't keep Heldt on the bench."

Defensively, the story of the spring has been the return of linebacker Michael Stonebreaker and defensive tackle George "Boo" Williams to the lineup after a year of ineligibility.

Williams, nose tackle and quad-captain Chris Zorich, and tackle Bob Dahl make up perhaps the most imposing defensive front in collegiate football, which explains a great deal about the early problems experienced by the offensive line. Eric Jones, who has caught Holtz's eye on several occasions, should pressure Dahl at the tackle spot.

Stonebreaker's play improved significantly throughout the spring, culminating in a six-tackle (five unassisted) performance in the Blue-Gold game, for which he earned Defensive Player of the Game honors.

"It was nice to see Michael Stonebreaker play so well in his first game back in front of a crowd," Holtz said. "If we played today, Stonebreaker would start at inside linebacker with Donn Grimm and Demetrius DuBose. Du Bose really put himself into a position to start at the inside linebacker position."

The defensive secondary, a big question mark entering the spring, had to replace three of four starters. Consensus All-American Todd Lyght returns at cornerback, but Rod Smith, George Poorman and Greg Davis are all first-time starters.

Poorman, slated for the starting free safety spot, also worked briefly at quarterback this spring to add some depth to the position. A splendid performance in the Blue-Gold game in which he blocked a punt and stole a flea-flicker pass from Ismail should keep Poorman on the defensive side of the ball.

Sutcliffe may return Aug. 1 from injury

CHICAGO (AP) - Chicago Cubs pitcher Rick Sutcliffe says he's aiming to be back on the mound by Aug. 1, despite a shoulder problem that required surgery about a week ago.

"I think I can come back and be 100 percent," said Sutcliffe, trying to douse speculation that his career may be over.

Sutcliffe, who underwent surgery May 7 to repair torn cartilage behind his right shoulder, said his doctor agrees there is a chance he can recover by Aug. 1.

The most important part of his recovery "is doing what I am doing now - resting," Sutcliffe said at a Wrigley Field news conference.

And once the cartilage is healed, he said, "it's just a guessing game as to how long it will take to get my range in motion and get my strength back."

Winfield finally joins Angels

NEW YORK (AP) - It was, Dave Winfield said, time to move on.

So, after 10 stormy seasons with George Steinbrenner and the New York Yankees, he did. He agreed to a three-year, $9.1 million contract extension Wednesday night and accepted a trade to the California Angels.

"I don't know if this is a fitting end because I'd planned to be here a long time," he said. "It just wasn't workable anymore. It was time to go."

The deal finally completed a trade that was made last Friday and came after a full day of wrangling that included representatives of the Yankees, the players' union, baseball management and the commissioner's office. George Nicolau, who was to preside over an arbitration hearing on Winfield's contract rights, was present but not needed.

"It's been an ordeal to a large degree," Winfield said. "Maybe things didn't work out here, but I know they're going to work out in California."

"Even at 38 years old, I'm a valuable commodity," he said. "You'll end up seeing a good year."

The 12-time All-Star, who missed the entire 1989 season with back problems, hadn't been doing so well this year. He was batting only .213 with two home runs and six RBIs and recently was demoted to platoon status.

Iowa downs Ohio State in tourney

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — John DeJarlal limited Ohio State to two hits over the last five innings and No. 8 batter Tom Anderson drove in the go-ahead run, sending Iowa to a 6-4 victory in the Big Ten Conference tournament Thursday.

Iowa, the regular season league champion, fell behind 4-3 after blowing a 3-0 lead, then rallied for two runs in the sixth to move into a winner's bracket game with Illinois at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

The Hawkeyes (38-15) won all four regular season games with Illinois (39-19), which got 17 hits in an 11-5 victory over Minnesota on Thursday. Minnesota (36-23-1) will play Ohio State (30-28-1) in an elimination game at noon Friday.

Both games were played in gale-force winds that blew from left field to right at 40 to 60 mph. All three home runs hit in the two games were carried by the wind over the right field fence.

Iowa's Chris Hatcher homered for an insurance run leading off the eighth and also doubled in going 3-for-4. He scored twice and drove in two runs.

Men's golf, softball teams land high school recruits

Observer Staff Report

Rick Coddens of South Bend Riley High School, has signed a letter of intent to attend Notre Dame on a golf scholarship.

Coddens is a leader on Riley's golf team that is currently rated fifth in the state. He shot a 73 to lead his team to the Kaeppler Invitational crown last month at Morris Park Country Club.

Coddens helped his team to a La Porte Regional runner-up finish, shooting a 79 in both the sectional and regional levels as a junior. He had an 81 in last year's state final.

The women's softball team signed four players to letters of intent to enroll at Notre Dame this fall.

Christy Connoyer, Melissa Cook, Carrie Miller and

Stephanie Pinter will play next season for the Irish.

Connoyer played shortstop at Civic Memorial High in Bethalto, Ill., leading her team to two regional crowns and a 10-3 mark so far this spring. Cook, a shortstop from Merrillville, Ind., had a .350 batting average with 29 RBI over three seasons and earned honorable mention all-state honors as a junior.

Miller, a pitcher from Los Altos, Calif., has helped her team to an 83-28 record over the past four seasons, including a 19-5 mark and top 10 ranking this spring. She has a lifetime record of 39-18 and is hitting .342 this season.

Pinter, a pitcher from South Bend Saint Joseph's High School, has posted a 3-2 record with 1.50 ERA this spring.

Holtz proposes academy for potential professionals

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz says professional leagues should set up a national system of 10 "academies" for college-age men whose main goal is to play pro sports.

"Let the pros run 'em," Holtz said Wednesday. "They'd have a football team, a basketball team, a baseball team, a hockey team, whatever. If you want to be a professional athlete, you go to that academy."

"You learn how to write a check, how to do TV interviews and how to pick an agent. You lift weights and you play football. And when the pros say, 'We don't think you have a chance to become a professional athlete,' you are dismissed from the academy. Now you get on with your life."

Preparing people for pro sports, Holtz said, is not the role of universities.

"That's not what college athletics is all about," he said. "We're there to educate people."

Holtz spoke at a news conference at Children's Square U.S.A., the former Christian Home in Council Bluffs. Later he received one of the home's three "Jason Awards" at a dinner at Peony Park in Omaha.

Holtz said he is opposed to a playoff to determine the NCAA Division I football champion because it would intrude on academics, and is against paying stipends to players — even though "I understand that's not the most popular thing to say in Nebraska, because Nebraska is one of the principal leaders in that fight to give them a stipend."

Lou Holtz

Financially needy athletes, he said, qualify for a federal Pell Grant of up to $1,400 per year. Holtz said an education is worth a great deal.

"I'm afraid if you start paying athletes, where do you stop? First it's $100 a month, then $200, then $500."

Notre Dame has been widely criticized for pulling out of the College Football Association television contract and striking its own deal with NBC. Nebraska and more than 60 other schools, but not the members of the Big Ten or Pac-10, are members of the association.

Holtz said Notre Dame informed the CFA early on that the Irish wouldn't "automatically" be part of the association's contract. He said he wasn't involved in the decisions, but that Notre Dame made the NBC deal so it could "educate people who don't have the monetary resources" to attend the school.

"My understanding is that the overwhelming majority of those millions will go to scholarships for the needy. This wasn't an athletic department decision. This enables us to educate people a little better."

Another factor, he said, is that 47 of the 52 games in the CFA television contract were to be regional games, and Notre Dame has a national audience.

Opponents will do well financially, he said. "Everybody who plays the University of Notre Dame will take home $600,000 to $700,000 in addition to their share of the gate receipts."

Holtz also said he opposes efforts to eliminate spring football practice.

"The worst thing we can do is dismiss spring practice," he said. "That is the time when you have the opportunity to work and develop and improve everybody. Coaches have the opportunity to develop a relationship and rapport with play-another unforgettable moment. That's why we came to Notre Dame.

Let's face it. We came for football. It sure wasn't the social life.

Just by showing up at Notre Dame, Holtz gave us a new start. And before long, we were witnessing the best players, the rowdiest crowds, the biggest hype, the most attention, and the best team in college football. We saw teams whose entire season could be made if they beat Notre Dame get spanked and sent home to supper. No one has more arch rivals than Notre Dame.

Diminutive Reggie Ho kicked off the National Championship drive with four field goals to lead Notre Dame past Michigan under the lights at the stadium. The positive attitude that game instilled lasted through the Fiesta Bowl.

And what a time it was in Tempe, as the brash Major Harris brought the undefeated and third-ranked West Virginia Mountaineers into Sun Devil Stadium to try to claim the national title. Notre Dame's Tony Rice outshone the highly-touted Harris in the showdown that cemented the National Championship.

Think way back to November of freshman year, when we saw, or rather heard about, John Carney's last-second field goal that propelled the Irish to a 38-37 win over Southern Cal. It was a great moment, one that spoke well for the future of the football program and gave us hope for the next year. Too bad we were watching a station break at the time.

There was also the 1990 Orange Bowl, when both Colorado and Notre Dame sputtered offensively at the outset before the Irish took control and beat the Buffaloes 21-6. This moment was short-lived as Miami took the National Championship, but there was a time when a spot in the Orange Bowl was just wishful thinking.

But the moment to top all moments, the brief seconds that will speak for our four years at Notre Dame, had to be when Pat Terrell knocked down Steve Walsh's pass in the end zone to preserve Notre Dame's 31-30 home victory over the dreaded Miami Hurricanes. The swaggering 'Canes and the upstart Irish were the cream of the crop in 1988, but Notre Dame prevailed in the game that was more important than the National Championship, more important than any of the 49 games we witnessed.

Lou Holtz gave us a 37-12 record in four years, something we may not have thought possible in the early 80s. So, whenever strains of the fight song and the alma mater (that you never learned the words to) go wafting through your now-enlightened brain, you'll always remember one thing...how cold it was in the Stadium in previous season and recorded back-to-back 20-win seasons, leading the Irish to the women's NIT in 1989. But she may have turned in her best coaching performance this season.

With only eight players on the roster for the vast majority of the season, McGraw's team still posted a 23-6 record, winning its last 12 games. Like the tennis team, the women's basketball squad was left without an NCAA Tournament berth.

Murphy may have pulled off the biggest turnaround of them all. The 28-year-old rookie coach led the Irish to their first winning season in eight years during the spring of 1988. The following year, the Irish were playing in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1970.

To reach the tournament, the Irish had to win four consecutive games during a 22-hour span - including one contest that started at 1:30 a.m. - to win the Midwestern Collegiate Conference title. Murphy, the lifelong lover of Notre Dame who couldn't attend the school as a student, had created his own "Notre Dame moment."

Schafer had been a student at Notre Dame, where he also starred for the hockey team. Since leaving, he had coached in Alaska and watched his alma mater's hockey program go to pieces.

When longtime coach Lefty Smith retired after the 1986-87 season, Schafer pursued the job and finally won himself the position. He took advantage of a creampuff schedule and his own marketing skills to direct the Irish to a best-ever 27-4-2 record and put fans back in the stands during the 1987-88 seasons.

Schafer still is trying to build the hockey program to the status it enjoyed a decade ago and now is working with limited scholarships and a strengthened schedule.

Those four coaches are not the only ones who have helped make the University's athletic program more well-rounded. Second-year coach Kevin Corrigan's lacrosse team earned its first berth to the NCAA Tournament this spring, and Art Lambert helped the volleyball squad reach the Final 16 of the NCAAs in 1988. Former men's soccer coach Dennis Grace's squad also made the NCAAs in 1988. Veteran men's cross country coach Joe Piane led his team to consecutive Top 10 finishes in 1987 and 1988.

In addition, the women's tennis team has seen Tracy Barton and CeCe Cahill make the NCAAs, the women's swim team had Tanya Williams and Becky Wood reach nationals, and Pat Boyd was an All-American in wrestling.

And of course, the fencing teams continue to be national powers every year.

In the meantime, Notre Dame has made a mockery out of the MCC, the conference it joined in 1987. Since gaining membership into the conference, the Irish have dominated the league in virtually every sport.

Now students have no more excuses when they think their school's athletic program consists entirely of football and basketball.

Seeking redemption

Summer Squall, one of the fallen favorites in the Kentucky Derby, will look to redeem himself in Saturday's Preakness Stakes.

Drivers slow down as time trials near

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Speed was hard to come by Thursday as practice resumed for the Indianapolis 500.

The track was open for a full day of practice for the first time since Monday. The rain that had closed down the track for all of Tuesday and all but 45 minutes of caution-flag running Wednesday was finally gone.

But a steady, often gusty, wind blew out of the west, hampering the on-track activities as drivers prepared for the resumption of qualifications on Saturday or worked on getting their cars ready for the May 27 race.

"We had a couple of days of rain and now it's windy," said Dominic Dobson, one of 15 drivers already qualified for the tentative 33-car lineup. "That makes it hard to get anything done."

"Wind makes cars unpredictable. If you are not careful, you can end up chasing your setup. ... It's especially dangerous on the turns when the wind hits you from the side. If you can get under your sidepods and lift you off the ground. They are saying that J.R. (Johnny Rutherford) and (Jim) Crawford's crashes (last week) were attributed to the wind."

"But we still have Friday, Saturday and Sunday," he added. "If we have a couple of hours of dry time we can go out and get what we need to get done."

John Andretti, another driver already qualified for the race, ran only a handful of laps in his March-Porsche, getting up to 208.594 mph late in the day.

"There's not much you can learn with that wind out there," Andretti said. "You're just hanging on so much, you can't really get anything accomplished."

"You don't want to take any chances out there with a qualified car. In the wind, the car is understeering, it's oversteering, you don't even go straight down the straightaways any more."

He is currently part of an all-Andretti second row, with cousin Michael on the inside at 222.055 mph, Uncle Mario in the middle at 222.025, and John on the outside at 219.484.

"I don't want to sound greedy," John Andretti said with a smile, "but I just hope it's like this for the rest of the first-day qualifiers. I think it'll be real hard to run over 220 (mph) in this."

Rain cut short the first weekend of qualifying, leaving 17 cars eligible to run for the front of the lineup when time trials resume on Saturday. Qualifications are scheduled to wind up Sunday with the fastest 33 cars in the field.

Mario Andretti, the 1969 Indy winner, turned the fast lap of the day at 218.696 mph in the final minutes of Thursday's practice. Arie Luyendyk, who has not yet qualified, was the fastest driver on the 2 1/2-mile oval Thursday, turning a lap at 217.854, followed by another non-qualified driver, Al Unser Jr., at 216.789.

Provisional pole winner Emerson Fittipaldi, who set a four-lap qualifying record of 225.301 mph, was next in his backup car at 215.714. The defending champion was

May means dollars in racing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - May is the richest month in American racing by far.

The May 27 Indianapolis 500 is expected to pay out more than $6 million, with the winner earning more than $1 million for the second straight year.

Last year, Indy paid a total purse of $5,713,725. Winner Emerson Fittipaldi received a check for $1,001,604.

For the first time, every one of the 33 starters took home more than $100,000.

Add to those numbers a cool $2 million to be shelled out this month at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

The Winston, an all-star NASCAR stock car event scheduled Sunday at Charlotte, has a posted purse of $875,000, with the winner getting a minimum of $200,000. That race follows the Winston Open, another special event, paying $200,000 and $30,000 to the winner.

Leading up to the featured Coca-Cola 600 Winston Cup race on the same day as Indy will be two Sportsman class races totalling $55,000 in payouts, and the $277,000 Champion Spark Plug 300 Busch Grand National race on May 26.

Finally, the 600-miler — the longest race on an oval anywhere — has total posted awards of $913,000. The winner will earn close to $200,000.

Chevrolet also is having a good month in American racing.

Dale Earnhardt drove a Chevy Lumina to victory on May 6 in the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala. That was the anniversary of that model's debut in the NASCAR Winston Cup stock car series.

Luminas have won 13 of the 30 races they have been entered in since replacing the Monte Carlo — NASCAR's all-time winning car.

At Indianapolis, the Chevy Indy V8 remains the dominant engine. Cars with that engine swept the front row for this year's Indianapolis 500.

The Chevrolet engine that was in Bobby Rahal's Lola when he qualified last Sunday for the Indianapolis 500 made an unscheduled trip to England early last week.

The Chevy Indy V8 was shipped to Indianapolis to be used in the 1986 Indy winner's qualifying effort, but was knocked off a loading dock by a forklift. Upon arrival at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, crew chief Barry Green discovered the block had sustained a hairline crack.

Galles-Kraco Racing decided to send the otherwise undamaged engine for repair at the Ilmor Engineering factory in England. With the help of the freight company responsible for the accident — at a cost of about $50,000 — the engine was back in time for Rahal to practice with it Friday night and qualify at 222.694 mph on Sunday.

Caution flags are often a cause for alarm at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Sometimes, however, they are a source of amusement.

In the opening week of practice for the May 27 Indianapolis 500, there were four caution flags brought out by the presence of wildlife on the 2 1/2-mile oval.

First, last Monday, a mother duck and two of her ducklings, all of them seemingly unperturbed, waddled down the middle of the track as roaring race cars sped past. The caution flag came out and the ducks were given safe passage back to the infield grass.

The next day, a rabbit hopped out of the infield and brought a halt to the practice session until he could figure out a way to get under another fence and back to safety.

Finally, on Wednesday, there were caution periods for two more uncredentialed strollers — first a squirrel and then another of the ducklings.

All of the wildlife survived the dangers of the racetrack.

Talk about bad luck. Rich Vogler can't seem to catch a break this month.

On Sunday, Vogler, a short track ace and a five-time starter in the Indianapolis 500, crashed halfway through a four-lap qualifying run for this year's Indy classic.

At virtually the same moment, according to a friend who was on the phone with someone at nearby Indianapolis Raceway Park, Jeff Gordon, attempting to qualify Vogler's sprint car for a race Sunday night, also hit the wall.

Vogler walked away from his Indy-car uninjured and will try again this weekend to qualify it for the race, but his sprint car was too badly damaged to run last Sunday.

Bobby Unser, a three-time Indianapolis 500 winner who retired after the 1981 season, was inducted into the Auto Racing Hall of Fame in Indianapolis, along with the late J.C. Agajanian, a longtime car owner.

As a living member of the Hall of Fame, Unser's portrait will hang in the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Museum along with those of four-time winner A.J. Foyt and three-time winners Johnny Rutherford and Al Unser, Bobby's brother.

MCC teams battle for tourney crown

Observer Staff Report

The Midwestern Collegiate Conference Tournament will continue today at Coveleski Stadium in downtown South Bend.

Three games are scheduled for this afternoon and evening.

The winner of Thursday's late contest between Notre Dame and Butler will play at 6 p.m. tonight against Evansville. The loser of that Notre Dame-Butler game had to play again Thursday night against Dayton.

The 2 p.m. contest Friday will feature the winner of the Xavier-Detroit game against the late-night Thursday winner.

In opening games Wednesday, Butler downed Xavier 5-1, Detroit beat Dayton 8-4 and Evansville crushed St. Louis 11-3. Dayton defeated St. Louis 10-6 in 15 innings Thursday afternoon in a completion of a suspended game. Evansville downed Detroit 6-4 in the early game Thursday.

The double elimination tournament will end with the championship at 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon.

The Irish had eight players on the 22-member All-MCC team, and Notre Dame coach Pat Murphy was selected Coach of the Year.

The Notre Dame battery of freshman David Sinnes and senior Ed Lund were first team selections. Sinnes was 9-1 and among the nation's leaders with a 0.98 ERA. Lund batted .325 and topped the MCC with 18 doubles.

The Irish placed six players on the second team. Topping that group were outfielder Eric Danapilis and Frank Jacobs. Danapilis led the Irish with a .430 batting average, but missed 18 games due to an injury. Jacobs, a tight end for the Irish football team, hit 10 home runs to top the league and set an Irish season record with 43.

ND lacrosse team falls to Harvard in first round

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team lost to Harvard 9-3 Wednesday in the first round of the NCAA Tournament at Harvard Stadium.

Senior co-captain Dave Carey led the Irish (9-7) with two goals. Junior attackman Mick Cavuoti paced Harvard with three goals and an assist.

Harvard jumped to a 3-0 lead and then expanded that to 5-0 at halftime.

The Irish fell behind 8-0 with just 11:07 remaining in the game before Carey scored the first Notre Dame goal of the game. Carey scored again three minutes later.

After Harvard scored again to make it 9-3, Irish senior Brian McHugh passed to an open Mike Quigley, who scored the final goal of the game.

Harvard will play North Carolina in the quarterfinals.

Notre Dame fans will see this face often as Rick Mirer is the lone Irish quarterback heading into the fall practice after Jake Kelchner broke his collar bone in the Blue-Gold game.

Holtz gets answers in spring

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz is high on freshmen quarterbacks Kevin McDougal and B.J. Hawkins. But he didn't expect to see either of them as the backup to Rick Mirer heading into September's Michigan opener.

Holtz may have no other alternative now that Jake Kelchner is expected to be out of action for as long as four months with a fractured clavicle suffered in the April 28th Blue-Gold game.

Mirer, who was named the starting quarterback following the third spring scrimmage, is currently the only healthy quarterback remaining on the Irish roster.

"The most discouraging thing that happened today was the injury to Jake Kelchner," Holtz said following the Blue-Gold game. "The guys respond to Jake when he's in the huddle. There's no doubt about that. He has some qualities you really like."

Kelchner was injured when he was hit by defensive tackle Bob Dahl following an incomplete pass to flanker Adrian Jarrell. On the next series, Mirer donned a yellow jersey and completed the intrasquad game playing for both teams.

Mirer should have a talented set of receivers to throw to next fall, including prospective Heisman trophy candidate Raghil "Rocket" Ismail, tight end Derek Brown and either Ray Griggs, William Pollard or Jarrell at split end.

Quad-captain Ricky Watters, who saw action at both tailback and split end during the 20 spring practice sessions, worked out of the backfield in the Blue-Gold game. Still, his future remains uncertain.

"If we lined up right now, I don't know where we'd put Ricky," said Holtz. "Dorsey Levens has had an awfully, awfully good spring. He's made a strong bid for the tailback position."

Indeed, Levens was one of the biggest surprises of the spring, compiling 415 rushing yards on 63 carries (a 6.6-yard average) in the six spring scrimmages. His competition for the starting tailback position might also include Tony Brooks, who has applied for readmission to the university next fall.

Rodney Culver and Kenny Spears comprise a talented fullback tandem which should help alleviate the loss of Anthony Johnson, a second-round selection by the Indianapolis Colts' in the recent

Highlighting four years of Notre Dame athletics

When the Notre Dame men's basketball team came out of the locker room to face Vanderbilt in the Providence Civic Center in the first round of the NCAA Tournament on St. Patrick's Day, 1989—in bright green uniforms with white trim—now that was the greatest moment in our illustrious four years here at Notre Dame.

Theresa Kelly
Sports Editor

No, maybe not.

Maybe it was the orange that beamed baseball coach Pat Murphy in the head as he stood on the sidelines during the Notre Dame-Pitt football game, or Lou Holtz's famous pep talk before the 1990 Orange Bowl. Maybe it was Notre Dame-Valpo in December, 1988.

Maybe it was when I woke up in the infirmary in February, 1989 to see the Notre Dame men's basketball team playing well against...Notre Dame.

When Ellis dunked on Robinson, it was either a drug-induced hallucination or Houston's uniforms got left behind. ("Once they got in those red uniforms, then it was Houston," said Elmer Bennett cryptically.)

Under the tutelage of Lou Holtz and Digger Phelps, the revenue-generating sports here at Notre Dame have given us some memorable moments.

The basketball team started us off on a high note, defeating top-ranked North Carolina 60-58 on February 1, 1987. David Rivers was back in top form after an August accident that nearly cost him his life, scoring all of his 14 points in the second half. The Irish defense held the 18-1 Tar Heels at bay to come back from a 32-16 first-half deficit. This, we thought, in the massive on-court celebration that followed, was why we came to Notre Dame.

But there was more to come. After two seasons of basketball success, the Irish hit some hard times in 1989-90, but watching Bennett's buzzer-beater stun fourth-ranked Syracuse was see

When we arrived at Notre Dame four years ago, most of us knew little about the athletic department aside from the football and men's basketball teams. To be rather blunt about the situation, there wasn't need to know much more.

Aside from a fencing program that contended for the national title every year, Notre Dame's so-called "Olympic Sports" (i.e. everything but football and men's basketball) were not worthy of any acclaim. The women fencers won the national title and the volleyball team won more than 30 matches our freshman year, but those were all the highlights.

Then the University hired four coaches during the summer before our sophomore years. Notre Dame's "Olympic sports" never were the same again.

The quartet of coaches - Bob Bayliss for men's tennis, Muffet McGraw for women's basketball, Pat Murphy for baseball and Ric Schafer for hockey - came to symbolize the arrival of Notre Dame's athletic program as a complete package. By the time 1990 had arrived, the University's athletic department was recognized across the nation for more than football.

After replacing Tom Fallon, the legendary 35-year coach of the Irish men's tennis program, Bayliss vowed to turn Notre Dame into a national tennis power. Using the Eck Tennis Pavilion as a recruiting tool, Bayliss lured David DiLucia, the nation's top prospect, to South Bend in the spring of 1988. Bayliss also put together a schedule stocked with Top 20 foes.

His work paid off, as the Irish recorded a 24-4 record this spring and barely missed a bid to the 20-team NCAA Tournament. DiLucia will play in the men's individual competition.

McGraw inherited a women's basketball team that had finished 12-15 the
