Security call-boxes to be ready by Dec.

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

Security call-boxes are currently being installed in 18 locations around campus, according to Phil Johnson, assistant director of Security.

The call boxes are specially designed for fast, reliable response, he said. To notify Security, the user need only open the door of the call-box. Inside the box will be an extremely sensitive speaker telephone that allows Security to hear the situation whether or not the person activating the phone is speaking, Johnson said.

Because of the special wiring of the phone, Security will immediately know the location of the phone and send help, he said.

The phones were placed in locations needing better security, as proven through campus statistics. In the past, Saint Mary's Road and the parking lots have been a concern to many, he said, so call-boxes will be placed in these areas.

However, since the residence halls have phones at the front of each door, and the paths along the main quads are well lit, there is little need for call boxes in these areas, Johnson said.

The eighteen call-boxes will be ready for use Dec. 1, Johnson said, as the wiring and software are still being adjusted. Signs will be posted above the call-boxes when they are officially in operation.

"We hope these phones are taken seriously. They have been installed for emergency use only," Johnson said. He defined emergency situations as

Faculty and students debate ROTC's place on campus

By BETSY PUNSALAN
News Writer

Opinions were divided three to one in favor of ROTC at Notre Dame in a student/faculty panel discussion Thursday marking the third and final part of a Student Government lecture series.

Alan Dowty, professor of government and international studies, and Father Joe Ross, rector of Morrissey Hall, were the faculty members of the panel. The student team consisted of senior Mary Sue Twohy, a senior anthropology major, and Patrick Murphy, a senior electrical engineering and government major who is in Army ROTC.

"I'm well aware of how divisive this issue is," said Ross, the only participant who spoke against ROTC on campus. "Everybody struggles with this and no one has all the answers."

Ross noted that Notre Dame students tend to be very defensive over the issue because ROTC is a financial necessity for many. "This is entirely understandable."

According to Ross, the recent talks given by journalist Coleman McCarthy and Father Oliver Williams, associate provost at Notre Dame, regarding ROTC on campus were not very useful because they "danced around" and "oversimplified" the issue.

"I don't appreciate [Williams'] theology," said Ross, "because my main concern comes from an educational perspective."

Ross believes that the ROTC system tends to be anti-intellectual.

"The ROTC program puts our students into situations for which they might not be ready for," said Ross, citing chains of command as one example. "How can we be asking them to enter into a system where they have to follow policies...which the Church has condemned?"

"If we have to [have ROTC on campus], then the students should at least be getting good moral and theological education, he said. "They're not well enough trained. They're doing what they're told, and that's tragic."

Ross said that the Catholic tradition of non-violence goes back to Jesus, who must be the center of our tradition. "We die before we kill," he said.

According to Dowty, a non-Catholic and pacifist who is in favor of ROTC on campus, the concept has to be viewed as a lesser of evils. He believes in making the most socially acceptable choices, not in compromising with evil.

Dowty said that violence is sometimes justified, although it

Student government pushes for policy of freedom of expression

In its continuing efforts to salvage the ideas of the Student Bill of Rights, the Student Government's Legal Department will pursue a policy of free expression, but will not push for public knowledge of disciplinary hearings.

The areas of free expression and public disclosure of hearings, along with collective punishment and judgement by peers, are the main issues which the Legal Department chose to address, according to Raja Singh, executive coordinator of the Legal Department.

The Legal Department is compiling reports on each of these four areas and submitting them to the Bill of Student and University Relations Task Force. If they are approved by the Task Force, they will be assimilated into a single report which will be sent to the Campus Life Council (CLC). If the CLC accepts this report, it will be forwarded to Patricia O'Hara, vice-president for Student Affairs, for her evaluation, and could become part of du Lac when it is revised this summer.

The Legal Department is concentrating on the issue of freedom of expression because du Lac is ambiguous in its treatment of the issue, according to Singh.

"There needs to be a well-defined policy regarding campus media and freedom of expression," said Student Body President Rob Pasin.

The report is calling for a "free and open community" which will enhance the education at Notre Dame, said Singh.

"Our aim is to ensure an environment where any idea can be expressed free of censorship," he said.

The Legal Department report makes five recommendations regarding free expression on campus:

- It recommends that du Lac's statement on Student Media (page 62) be modified to take a stronger stand on a "free and uncensored media."

- It proposes the idea of "limited recognition" of campus organizations that don't reflect the "Catholic perspective" of the University.

- It recommends the continuation of the University's free speaker policy.

- It recommends that University facilities be made available to individuals as well as groups "if their purpose is to express a legitimate idea."

- It proposes the formation of a seven member "Freedom of

A&L students overlooked in job search

"Don't call us, we'll call you."

"Sorry, we only want finance and economics majors."

"Your GPA and work experience are commendable, but we aren't able to offer you a position with our firm at this time."

Christine Walsh

"It's a shame you don't have six hours of accounting..."

I started out the semester with grand visions of coasting through senior year and leaving ND with diploma in hand and an awesome job in my back pocket. Instead, all I have encountered are brick walls.

It seems that every time I say that I am a government and philosophy major, employers run for the hills. At least as a government major I may aspire to being a public servant, say, a police officer, or a postal worker, or a tax collector— certainly not an investor on Wall Street.

The very word 'philosophy' seems to throw employers into a tizzy. They are sure that we philosophy majors may put pictures of Plato on our desks, wear sandals to work and protest rigid work schedules because they stifle human beings and prevent them from reaching their proper telos.

At best, a philosophy major will be the annoying person who sits in the cubicle next to you, talking incessantly about the similarities between Nietzsche's ideas and the plot of Lethal Weapon II.

If you haven't studied 'The Four P's,' the vicious cycle and taxation in your four years of college, you are obviously not interested in working in Corporate America. Everyone knows that all Arts and Letters majors either go into the Peace Corps or graduate school. Why else would anyone take four years of Great Books seminars?

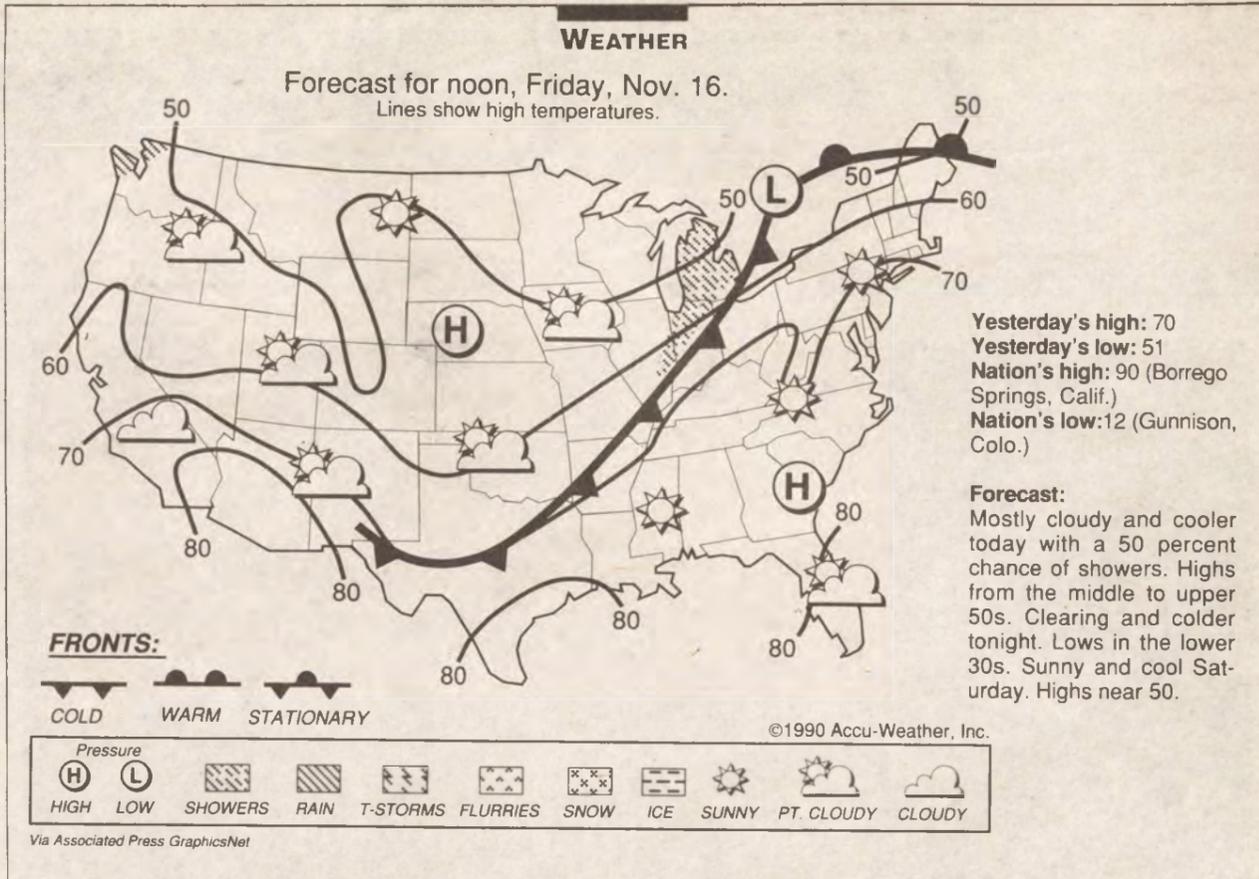

When I first came to Notre Dame I was told to seek 'a liberal education.' Don't choose a major because you think it will get you a job; choose a major because that is what truly interests you. If you like what you are studying, you will do well.

Naively, I followed this advice. I have enjoyed my four years of study here and have 'done well,' but unemployment seems an awfully high price to pay for the enjoyment gained from studying what I wanted.

No matter how well I have performed at this university, inside and outside the classroom, it never seems to be enough. I will never have that one thing that all employers seem to be looking for— a business degree.

It matters little that I can and have written business correspondence, prepared presentations, spoken in public and analyzed charts and graphs. I even have work experience with one of the largest international corporations.

Most companies have extensive training programs, claiming that they want to be able to 'mold' their own employees. If that's the case, Arts and Letters majors can learn just as well as the marketing major. Employers would be well-advised not to alienate eager students based solely on their prejudice against particular majors.

Bret Easton Ellis, a best-selling author, blasted Simon and Schuster on Thursday for the publisher's 11th-hour decision to ax his new novel about a serial killer who mutilates women, saying it smacks of censorship. "If all this had been brought up 11 months ago, I would not say that," Ellis said. "But when it comes this late in the game and it seems that it was done just because Marvin Davis does not respond to this kind of fiction, then it is censorship." Ellis was referring to the head of Paramount Communications Inc., Simon and Schuster's parent company. The publishing house announced Wednesday it would not print Ellis' third novel, "American Psycho."

So says a personal injury lawyer in his annual pre-Christmas list of dangerous toys. The list, released Thursday by attorney Edward Swartz, includes a Batmobile equipped with rocket launchers and a simulated crossbow. Swartz said the toys "have the potential to kill or injure," but officials at several toy companies disputed his allegations, saying their products meet safety standards and have adequate warnings.

Margaret Thatcher, British prime minister, pledged Thursday to stay on in office, while fellow Conservative Michael Heseltine, the man who seeks to oust her, said he can unify their party's "deep divide." They traded campaign rhetoric on the day Heseltine formally submitted his bid for leadership of the Conservative Party and the government. Heseltine, once Thatcher's defense secretary, will stand against her in a ballot Tuesday of the 372 Conservative legislators. It marks the first serious challenge to her leadership since she took office 11 years ago. "After three general election victories, leading the only party with clear policies, resolutely carried out, I intend to continue," she declared in the House of Commons.

The soldiers accused of killing six Jesuit priests in a massacre that received world attention, have yet to be brought to trial after a year since the slayings had occurred. The soldiers who pulled the triggers have confessed and are likely to go to jail. But the senior officer charged in the deaths may well go free, and the question of whether higher-ups were involved is likely to remain a mystery. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Thursday in Washington: "This brutal crime shocked the conscience of El Salvador and the world. ... The United States insists on a full investigation and prosecution. There is no issue regarding El Salvador to which the ambassador and our embassy have devoted greater effort than the pursuit of justice in the murder of the Jesuits."

An abortion clinic that had been a weekly target of abortion protesters was damaged early Thursday in a fire described as "suspicious." The 3:24 a.m. blaze destroyed a wooden stairwell and cut electricity to the Fort Wayne Women's Health Organization clinic, the only clinic where abortions are performed in northeast Indiana. The fire's cause had not been determined. "We have it labeled as suspicious at this time," said Fort Wayne deputy fire chief Jerry Bauermeister.

NASA launches Atlantis for spy mission over Iraq

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA fueled the space shuttle Atlantis on Thursday for a reported spying mission over Iraq that officials said would be the last secret military flight for a space shuttle.

Atlantis was expected to lift off with five astronauts and a spy satellite at 6:46 p.m. EST or by 8:12 p.m. EST, but wind threatened to block launch.

NASA pumped more than a half-million gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into Atlantis. The fuel will have to be drained if liftoff is delayed until Friday or Saturday, when better weather is expected.

The fueling was completed despite a last-minute problem with a unit at the launch pad used to cool the shuttle, said

NASA spokesman Dick Young. A back-up cooling unit was brought into service, and Young said the problem should not delay the launch.

Air Force meteorologists predicted a 40 percent chance of good weather for Thursday night, down from earlier forecasts of 60 percent. The biggest threat was crosswinds that might exceed the allowable 14 mph at the launch pad and emergency landing area. Other concerns were scattered clouds and possible showers.

The launch was to be the fifth in darkness in 37 shuttle flights. It also was to be NASA's fifth launch for 1990 and the seventh and probably last Pentagon mission, which are shrouded in secrecy.

A news blackout has been imposed on Atlantis' four-day flight, during which the astronauts will deploy a satellite that sources said is to spy on Iraq. Experts believe it is either a photographic imaging or an eavesdropping spacecraft.

Atlantis carried a spy satellite into orbit during its last flight in March.

The shuttle's all-military crew, commanded by Air Force Col. Richard Covey, has been waiting for months to fly this mission. The flight was scheduled for July but was delayed indefinitely when Atlantis was found during a fueling test in June to have dangerous hydrogen leaks.

It was the second shuttle to be crippled by leaking hydrogen. Columbia's astronomy mission was scrubbed in May when the spaceship sprang leaks during fueling.

During the grounding, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration replaced Atlantis' external fuel tank, plumbing between the orbiter and tank, and valve seals. In addition, Atlantis' military cargo reportedly was modified for gathering information in the Persian Gulf.

Atlantis, like Columbia, was cleared for flight during a fueling test last month.

NASA set a Nov. 9 launch date for Atlantis, but the Air Force delayed that mission because of undisclosed cargo problems. That trouble quickly was resolved, clearing the way for Thursday's liftoff attempt.

Also on the crew are Navy Cmdr. Frank Culbertson Jr., pilot; and Army Capt. Charles Gemar, Air Force Lt. Col. Carl Meade and Marine Col. Robert Springer, all mission specialists.

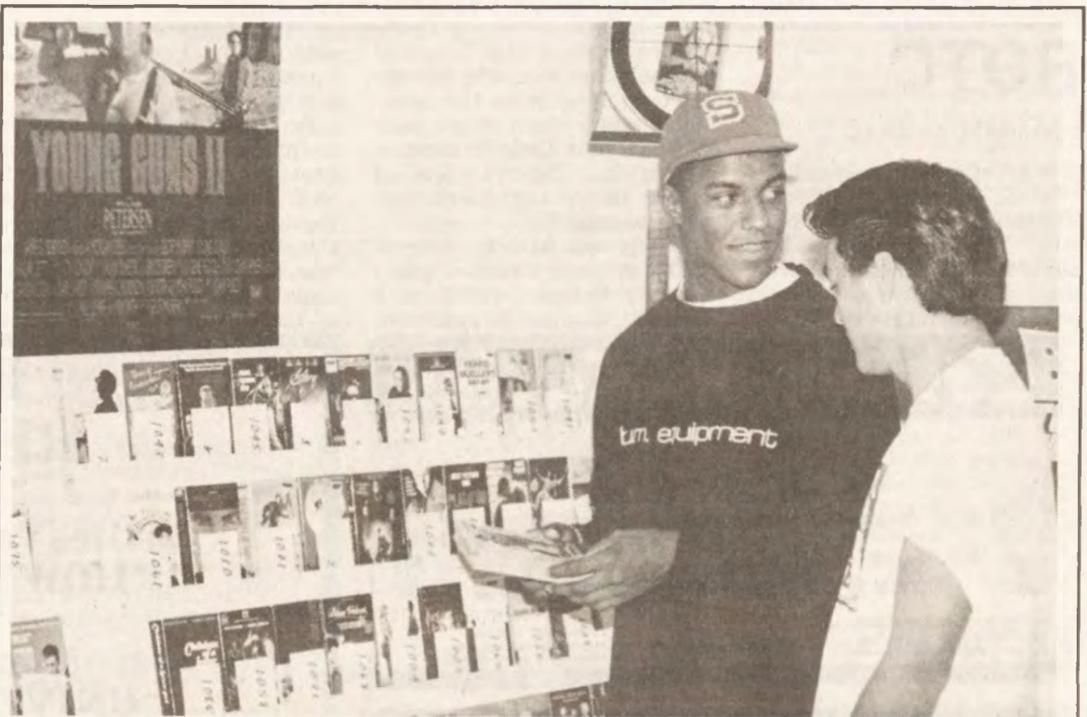

The Pentagon has imposed a news blackout on the flight similar to its six previous missions. Because of the expense in maintaining secure operations, officials said this would be the last military shuttle mission to be conducted in secrecy.

The Pentagon plans to use the shuttle two more times in 1991, but the cargoes in each instance will be unclassified. Military officials will rely on unmanned rockets — primarily the giant Titan 4 — to carry other payloads into orbit.

it is a "regrettable necessity." "ROTC is a needed profession if violence is needed," Dowty said. "If there were no justified use of force, we'd still be part of the British Empire and slavery would still be [in the U.S.]"

Dowty agreed with Ross that Williams and McCarthy did not adequately address the question posed to them on the issue of ROTC on a Catholic campus, adding that "There's a level at which these arguments are unanswerable."

Twohy was also in favor of ROTC at Notre Dame. "I personally believe ROTC on a Catholic campus is unacceptable, but because of students' financial needs, it is unfortunately necessary."

Twohy discussed the concept of "just war," explaining that it breaks down into "just cause" and "just means." According to Twohy, "just cause" is determined by government leaders who do not necessarily hold to Catholic morals. The only part of the "just war" theory that ROTC members are allowed to impact is the "just means" portion.

"The decision-making processes that goes into the just war theory will for the most part be out of the hands [of Notre Dame ROTC] students," said Twohy, adding that these are the students with a good moral education.

Twohy also pushes for making the war ethics class a requirement for all ROTC students.

In addition to ethical training, Twohy advocates other types of financial assistance programs.

"Why aren't there alternatives for students needing financial assistance that do not involve the possibility of violence?" she said.

Twohy ended her portion of the discussion with a quote from Adrienne Rich's selection of poems, "Leaflets": "All wars are useless to the dead."

Murphy, a member of ROTC, believes that our imperfect world mandates the necessity of ROTC.

"There is no situation in the world that makes murder—the taking of another human life—acceptable," said Murphy. "However, I would personally choose to kill than to let innocents die."

He advocates that Notre Dame require freshmen to take war ethics before they sign an ROTC contract at the beginning of their sophomore year.

According to Murphy, ROTC will continue to exist, even if it were eliminated from Notre Dame's campus.

"Even if we could kick ROTC off of all college campuses," he said "I don't see it ending the U.S. military."

Murphy believes the issue goes deeper than simply the existence of U.S. military programs.

"Getting rid of ROTC and the military is like cutting a branch off a tree without cutting the tree down," he said.

Sweeping arms reduction treaty awaits Bush's signature

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the most sweeping arms reduction treaty in history awaited President Bush's signature, U.S. officials on Thursday registered concern about the transfer of thousands of Soviet tanks to Siberia from Eastern Europe.

The officials stressed that the tanks and other equipment shifted east of the Ural Mountains could not be excluded from the cutbacks required by the Conventional Forces in Europe treaty.

But they said the Soviets had given assurances that some of the weapons were destroyed and most of the rest would be put to the torch.

The treaty is to be signed on Monday in Paris by Bush, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and the leaders of 20 other NATO and Warsaw Pact countries.

It is the most ambitious arms control accord in history and was aimed at reducing Cold War tensions between East and West. Even before the treaty's conclusion the Soviets under Gorbachev undertook major reductions in Eastern and Central Europe. The treaty makes many of these cutbacks legally binding.

With the signing deadline only four days away, U.S. officials said some details still had to be ironed out. They mostly concern procedures to verify that the reductions in tanks, anti-aircraft artillery, armored personnel carriers, aircraft and helicopters are carried out.

Diplomats in Vienna said, however, that negotiators for the two military alliances had reached tentative agreement on treaty terms.

The treaty will allow NATO and the Warsaw Pact each to keep 20,000 battle tanks, 30,000 armored combat vehicles, 20,000 pieces of artillery, 6,800 combat aircraft and 2,000 attack helicopters.

The cutbacks are far deeper on the Warsaw Pact side, and in that sense represents a triumph for the Bush administration.

But the transfer of Soviet tanks and other arms east of the Ural Mountains — beyond the 2.5 million square miles covered by the treaty — drew attention here even though the main U.S. goals had been accomplished.

"This is not a new issue," a senior U.S. official told reporters at the White House. "We have made it clear to the Soviet Union from the beginning that since the treaty deals only with Europe, we wanted to ensure there would be no buildup in the Soviet Union east of the Urals that would circumvent the treaty."

At the same time, the official said, the Bush administration had put pressure on the Soviets to withdraw their forces from Eastern Europe. As a result, tanks and other weapons were pulled back to Siberia.

That positions them beyond the area where East-West tensions were high and where the United States wanted Soviet weapons held to a minimum.

On Sunday, the day before the treaty signing, the two alliances will exchange information about the size of their non-nuclear arsenals assigned to Europe. Then, over 40 months, they will be obliged to destroy all weapons above the ceilings set by the treaty.

The restriction applies to material assigned to the European arsenal that may have been moved elsewhere, including the tanks in Siberia and tanks and other non-nuclear weapons the United States has sent to the Persian Gulf in a military buildup designed to force Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

"Obviously, we are concerned about movements to the East of the Urals," said the senior official, whose identity was shielded under White House briefing rules. "The Soviet Union has assured us that some of the equipment has already been destroyed and that much of the rest will be destroyed."

The treaty will establish inspection procedures and other ways of monitoring the cutbacks are carried out. The official acknowledged that Soviet territory east of the Ural Mountains would not be covered. But he said the United States had other detection means of making sure the Soviets do not store tanks and other arms in excess of treaty ceilings.

A major expansion of South Bend's Center for the Homeless will be dedicated by religious, civic, municipal and University leaders beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Among the special guests at the dedication will be Edward Hennessy, chairman and chief executive officer of Allied-Signal Inc., which last year gave $400,000 to Notre Dame to make the Center expansion possible. Also present will be Notre Dame president Father Edward Malloy; Mayor Joseph Kernan of South Bend; Father Richard Warner, chair of the Center's executive committee; Eugenia Schwartz, vice president of the United Religious Community (URC); Mary Jane Bagatini of the Junior League; and David Link, dean of the Notre Dame Law School and president of the Council of Providers of Services to the Homeless.

Also present will be the 14 members of the Center's new council of advisors, a group of area business leaders who advise on and support Center activities.

The new construction in the Center includes 13 family rooms, a new dormitory which can accommodate 40 women, a children's playroom for activities organized by Junior League volunteers, triple the office space for Madison Center programs in support of mentally ill and addicted people, a prayer room for Center guests and staff, expanded office space for a legal aid clinic staffed by Notre Dame law students and finished office space for future tenant agencies in the Center.

You know it's true—Milli Vanilli never sang

NEW YORK (AP) — The rumors are true: Milli Vanilli — those dreadlocked, hunky dudes Rob and Fab — never actually sang on their debut album that sold 7 million copies, the producer-arranger conceded.

"The record company never knew that. I never told them anything," said Frank Farian, the German producer who turned a pair of anonymous pretty boys into an international phenomenon. "Later on, after the record was out, there were some people who raised some questions."

The questions were never really answered as the Vanillis won a 1989 Grammy for Best New Artist, an award they may now lose. Rob Pilatus and Fab Morvan became international stars, lip-syncing their way through television and concert appearances.

"Girl You Know It's True" and "Blame It On the Rain" were huge hit singles for the band. At the MTV awards, the boys boasted they were better than Elvis or Bob Dylan.

Farian — who has a new album with a new group coming out in January — said he was forced to go public with the revelations when the band told him they wanted to sing on the follow-up to "Girl You Know It's True."

"I said, 'No. I don't go for that.' Sure, they have a voice, but that's not really what I want to use on my records," said Farian, describing the encounter that occurred earlier this month.

So the bare-chested vocalists once described by The New York Times as "exotically sexy" really did nothing but look good and lip sync for videos?

"Nothing more," Farian said through an interpreter during an interview here Wednesday.

Thursday to the group's manager in Germany was not immediately returned. Michael Greene, president of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, said the Millis may be stripped of their Grammy.

"If there's been a substantial, fraudulent, misrepresentation of the entity, I think there is a high likelihood that the academy would have to take some action," Greene said from Los Angeles.

Including taking the Grammy back?

"Sure," said Greene, adding that no one has ever been stripped of a Grammy in its 33 years.

Farian's revelation didn't bother Arista, the label that sold "Girl You Know It's True."

"Seven million albums? Embarrassing?" asked Roy Lott, vice president for operations at Arista. "I don't mean the end justifies the means. But we sold 7 million albums."

Lott said there was no reason to doubt Farian's veracity: "I certainly assume the producer would know who sang on the record."

According to Farian, the idea to hire Rob and Fab as front men for the band came to him when the fabulous bunko boys arrived at his studio in Germany shortly after the recording of "Girl You Know It's True."

"It suddenly clicked in my mind, and it was kind of evident: I had the music, there were the people who wanted to perform outside," said Farian. "And I said, 'Hey, let's put that together and make a great record out of it.'"

Farian would not say who the real singers were but added that they will appear on his next album — not a Milli Vanilli album.

Key Arab leaders dash chances for summit on crisis

(AP)-Chances for an emergency Arab summit to resolve the Persian Gulf crisis appeared dead Thursday as key leaders rejected the idea. Despite Iraqi protests, U.S. and Saudi forces launched "Imminent Thunder" — a six-day amphibious exercise reportedly only miles from Kuwait.

Two more Americans arrived in Amman, Jordan, on a regularly scheduled flight from Baghdad. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the two were U.S. diplomats, but it was unclear whether they had worked in Kuwait or Iraq.

The Americans arrived along with 24 other foreigners — 22 Irish citizens, one Dutch national and one Briton. They all were medical personnel from a foreign-run hospital in Baghdad.

The official Iraqi News Agency announced on Thursday that President Bush would go "on trial" in absentia next month in Algeria — for "inhuman policies and planning aggression against the people of Iraq."

The trial will begin Dec. 10 in Algiers, INA said, in what it called an international court of justice.

It said the verdict would be called by the U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and international groups concerned with human rights.

Iraq first spoke of putting Bush on trial in September, after Western leaders said Saddam Hussein should be tried for war crimes.

Presidents Hafez Assad of Syria and Hosni Mubarak of Egypt became the latest Arab leaders to reject the emergency Arab summit, which was billed by the king of Morocco as perhaps the "last chance" for peace.

Saudi Arabia said Wednesday it would not participate in the meeting unless Baghdad promised beforehand to leave Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2. Iraq made it clear that no such promise was forthcoming.

In a joint statement released in Damascus, Assad and Mubarak said they also rejected the idea because of Iraq's intransigence. And in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait's government-in-exile also objected, citing Iraq's refusal to withdraw.

The objections effectively killed chances for the summit. A few Arab League members, including Sudan and the Palestine Liberation Organization, had agreed to Morocco's proposal.

Both Syria and Egypt have contributed troops to the 300,000-strong U.S.-led multinational force confronting Iraq.

The appeal on Sunday by King Hassan II of Morocco for Arab leaders to gather provoked a flurry of diplomatic activity. Among those trying to promote the summit was the Soviet Union, which sent high-level envoys to the Middle East this week to discuss the idea.

The exact location of Imminent Thunder, which began Thursday, was not revealed, and a news blackout was imposed for the initial phases of the operation.

The operation involves 1,000 U.S. Marines, 1,100 aircraft and 16 ships. Iraq has termed it a "provocative act" because it is being held close to occupied Kuwait.

There have been three previous amphibious exercises in the Persian Gulf, but they were believed to have been held farther south. The Washington Times reported Wednesday that Imminent Thunder would be held 10 miles from Kuwait. No live ammunition will be fired in the operation, U.S. officials say. But it will involve the largest use of aircraft in a single training exercise since U.S. forces were deployed in the region in August.

Imminent Thunder is not intended to provoke the Iraqis, said U.S. Navy spokesman Cmdr. J.D. Van Sickle.

"The purpose is to give participating forces training in joint and combined operations and to enhance amphibious warfare skills," he said.

Military officials said there was no particular significance to the name of the operation and that its timing was not linked to any operational plans.

The United States has doubled the number of aircraft carriers in the gulf region to six, and ordered in about 200,000 additional military personnel to join the estimated 230,000 already deployed. The multinational force arrayed against Iraq numbers more than 300,000.

In other developments, Secretary of State James Baker III headed Thursday to Brussels, on his way to yet another round of consultations with foreign leaders.

Baker was to meet Friday with the 12-nation European Community, which is providing aid to countries who have been hit hard by the trade embargo against Iraq.

Over the weekend, he was to meet with the foreign ministers of three African countries as well as Romania and Finland.

Elsewhere on the diplomatic front, Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati was in Iraq on Thursday, meeting with Saddam and visiting Moslem shrines.

Velayati, the highest-ranking Iranian to visit Iraq since the 1979 Islamic revolution in Iran, said he had made it clear to Saddam and other senior officials that Tehran wanted Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

The two countries fought each other for nearly a decade during the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war.

Two youths arrested for JACC theft

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

Two individuals were arrested Wednesday night in connection with their suspected involvement in the thefts occurring outside the Joyce ACC racquetball courts, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Security.

An officer recognized these men with help from evidence Security had collected through the investigation of the recent thefts. The suspects were arrested for criminal trespassing at 8:30 p.m. inside the JACC, Hurley said. They are both white, 18 year-old males and residents of the South Bend area. They had no identification to be in the JACC at the time, he said.

According to Hurley, the prosecutor will review the evidence to determine any further arrests.

Security discussed the matter of the recent thefts with the suspects, but they denied any involvement, Hurley said.

At this time Security is unable to say whether or not these suspects are responsible for all of the thefts, but Security is believed to have sufficient evidence for one of the instances, Hurley said.

Bush endorses clean air bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, saying every American "deserves to breathe clean air," on Thursday signed an extensive overhaul of the nation's anti-pollution law to curb acid rain, urban smog and toxic chemicals.

Susan Merrow, president of the Sierra Club, described the Clean Air Act of 1990 as "a breath of fresh air after a 10-year smog alert."

Bush said the bill, which updates and tightens federal air pollution standards for the first time since 1977, was "simply the most significant air pollution legislation in our nation's history."

"This bill means cleaner cars, cleaner power plants, cleaner factories and cleaner fuels. And it means a cleaner America," Bush said at a packed White House ceremony.

The goal of the legislation is to cut acid rain pollutants by half, sharply reduce urban smog and eliminate most of the toxic chemical emissions from industrial plants by the turn of the century.

The cost of adhering to the regulations is expected to be as much as $25 billion a year.

Environmental groups temporarily put aside their differences with the president on other issues to praise his effort on clean air. But they said the effectiveness of the legislation would require aggressive implementation and enforcement by the federal government.

Richard Ayers, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, called the legislation "cause for celebration and hope."

But Ruth Caplan, executive director of Environmental Action, said Bush's signature marked "only the first step toward cleaning up our air. There are dozens of provisions that must be implemented through regulation."

Industry representatives, facing large compliance costs, were more muted in their approval.

"While business supports the act's clean air objectives, its costs to American consumers and workers cannot be sugar-coated," said William Fay, administrator of the Clean Air Working Group, a coalition of 2,000 businesses and trade associations.

Bush's signature capped a decade-long debate over anti-pollution rules. The legislation was the product of 16 months of intensive wrangling among administration and congressional negotiators over a myriad of technical provisions.

The new law requires tougher emission controls on cars, and requires service stations to sell cleaner-burning gas. It mandates new equipment in thousands of businesses and factories to capture smog-causing pollutants and toxic chemicals.

It also requires coal-burning power plants to cut in half sulfur dioxide emissions, which cause acid rain.

Some of the new requirements will begin to be phased in within a few years, but most won't be fully in place until the end of the decade. Some cities with the worst smog problems have as long as 15 to 20 years to meet federal air requirements.

Bush, fulfilling a campaign promise, proposed in July 1989 a broad rewrite of the clean air laws. Earlier efforts to revamp the laws had been blocked by strong opposition from economic and regional interests and the Reagan administration.

'Keating Five' helped S&L owner, says panel's lawyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee opened trial-like public hearings Thursday on the "Keating Five" with the panel's lawyer declaring the lawmakers helped the owner of a failing savings and loan fight an "all-out war" with federal regulators.

The senators also heard committee chairman Howell Heflin say many Americans believe "that you were bribed, that you sold your office, that you traded your honor and your good names for contributions and other benefits."

Special counsel Robert Bennett, said in his opening statement that Sens. Alan Cranston and Dennis DeConcini "were important players" in Charles Keating Jr.'s strategy to stave off federal rules and that Sen. Donald Riegle Jr. "played a much greater role" than he now contends.

Speaking in a packed hearing room, Bennett said Sens. John McCain and John Glenn played lesser roles. The lawyer spoke for about five hours Thursday, and will resume Friday morning.

Before Bennett spoke, the chairman of the six-senator committee, Alabama Democrat

Heflin, somberly told the subjects of the inquiry: "Many of our fellow citizens apparently believe that your services were bought by Charles Keating, that you were bribed, that you sold your office, that you traded your honor and your good names for contributions and other benefits."

While Bennett denied his role was prosecutorial, Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. testily told him, "You're beginning to reach personal conclusions and deciding what is relevant and what is not relevant."

Bennett responded "It's less my conclusion and more the objective evidence."

In his detailed comments, Bennett told the panel:

—Despite Riegle's statements that he does not remember such events, Keating offered to host a fund-raiser for Riegle at the businessman's Detroit hotel; the senator set arrangements in motion for an April 2, 1987, meeting between the four other senators and the former top thrift regulator, and Riegle hid from his own aides his role in arranging that meeting and the fund-raising purpose of a trip to Keating's Phoenix-based company.

Senator Alan Cranston

—Cranston continued to contact federal regulators even though former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt told the senator that Keating was "a crook."

—Evidence shows that DeConcini offered a deal on behalf of Keating to former top thrift regulator Edwin Gray, despite DeConcini's denial of a quid pro quo. Three other senators at the meeting refused to "say flatly" that DeConcini's version was correct.

—On Glenn, the lawyer "knew of no evidence" linking Keating's contributions to intervention by the Ohio senator.

—On McCain: "Was there anything improper about Sen. McCain's conduct? The evidence discovered by the special counsel suggests not."

Four of the five senators were present for the opening of the hearing in the Senate Hart Office Building. Cranston, who said last week that he will undergo treatment for prostate cancer, was not there.

The committee could vote to rebuke any of the five or to recommend a more serious punishment to the full Senate, or to take no action against any of them. All have denied wrongdoing.

While Keating was enlisting the five senators and other lawmakers as soldiers in his battle, he was liberally doling out political contributions, Bennett said. It is the committee's role, he said, to determine whether that money was driving the senators to intervene with regulators on Keating's behalf — or whether they were providing normal constituent service.

Bennett said, "I will give you many instances where acts and money were discussed at the same time and indeed hundreds of thousands of dollars in the case of Sen. Cranston passed in an office in this building."

The lawyer held up jumbled pieces of a jigsaw puzzle and promised to piece together evidence in the case just as someone would complete the puzzle.

The committee members and Bennett repeatedly described the hearings as a fact-finding effort to determine whether the five senators helped Keating because of the $1.3 million they received from the former thrift operator and his associates.

All five senators have contended they were helping Keating as they would anyone — whether a contributor or not — who complained of unfair treatment by federal regulators.

For months, the news media have reported that Bennett recommended to the committee of three Democrats and three Republicans that McCain, R-Ariz. and Glenn, D-Ohio, be dismissed from the case; and that the investigation be intensified against Cranston, D-Calif., DeConcini, D-Ariz. and Riegle, D-Mich.

In the mid-1980s, when Keating was fighting a rule by regulators limiting risky thrift investments, he enlisted the support of the five senators and many others.

Placing his hand on stacks of documents Bennett said, "It is clear from the paper and testimony that Cranston and DeConcini were important players in Keating's strategy."

U.S. bishops warn against 'unjust' war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops on Thursday told President Bush that a military offensive against Iraq at this point could violate the church's "just war" standards.

In a letter delivered to the White House, Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati wrote:

"Because of the serious moral and human factors involved, we ask you ... to intensify the determined and creative pursuit of a peaceful solution that seeks to bring justice to the region without resort to war."

The letter was dispatched after a closed-door discussion of issue at the annual meeting of U.S. bishops here.

Citing the church's age-old criteria of "just war" — that its probable gains outweigh the resulting costs in lives, that civilian areas not be targeted, and that war be a last resort — Pilarczyk said:

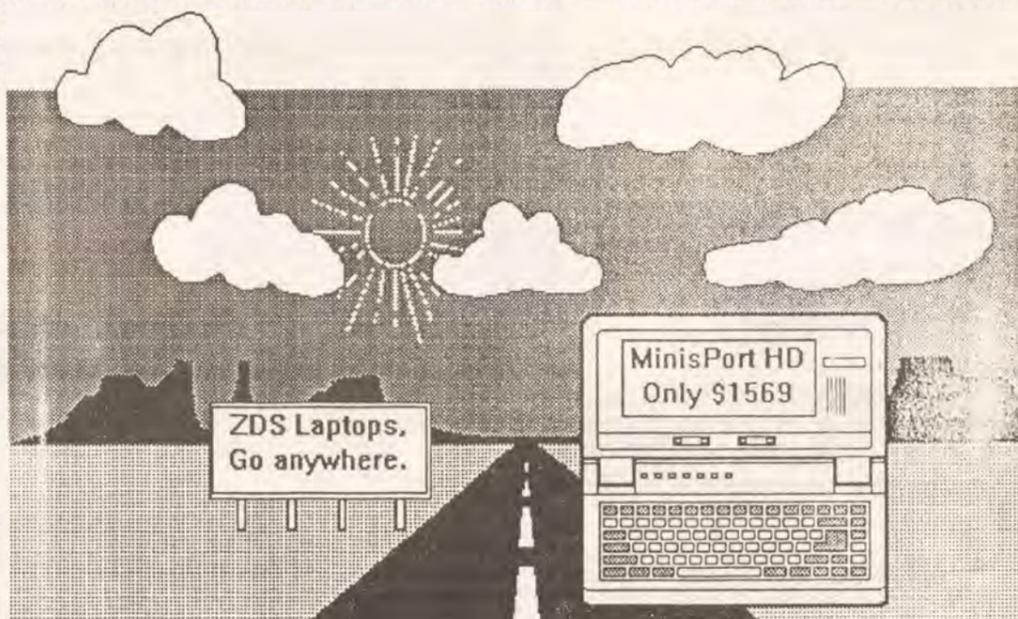

"I fear that, in this situation, moving beyond the deployment of military forces in an effort to deter Iraqi aggression to the undertaking of offensive military action could well violate these criteria, especially the principles of proportionality and last resort."

Repeating earlier condemnation by the annual meeting of bishops here of Iraq's aggression, hostage-taking and violation of human rights and support for peaceful pressure on Iraq, Pilarczyk wrote:

"We urge our government and our allies to continue to pursue the course of peaceful pressure and not to resort to war."

He said that considering the "dangers and human costs which could be the result of war in the Persian Gulf" the nation "needs to continue to assess and discuss the ethical dimensions of this difficult situation."

FBI obtains CNN's Noriega tapes to network's protests

ATLANTA (AP) — The FBI said Thursday it had obtained CNN tapes and was checking whether they are Manuel Noriega recordings at the center of a court battle. The network protested that the tapes were obtained without a warrant.

The FBI said the tapes turned up in a hotel lost-and-found department. Cable News Network said the material was taken from a room that been occupied by one of its reporters at the Omni Hotel, part of a complex that also houses CNN's offices.

The network is seeking to overturn a federal judge's order blocking it from airing taped jailhouse conversations between the deposed Panamanian dictator Noriega and his lawyers.

Turner Security, which provides security for the complex, had notified FBI agents about the box of materials, the network said.

The network said the FBI agents had no warrant and acted over the objections of a CNN attorney, and it demanded that the tapes be returned.

In Washington, FBI spokesman Scott Nelson confirmed authorities obtained some CNN tapes without a subpoena.

"We were made aware of the tapes and merely picked them up for analysis," Nelson said.

CNN President Tom Johnson said he personally protested the FBI's action "in the strongest terms" to agency officials in Washington.

The network said a Turner Security official called the FBI because agents had told him they were looking for "stolen government property." The network said the material was not stolen.

Omni hotel officials claimed the room occupied by CNN reporter Marlyn Fernandez had been vacated and that the box of materials given to hotel security, CNN said. Johnson said "it's in dispute" whether the room was vacated by Fernandez, who normally anchors CNN's Spanish-language telecasts in Washington but had been working on the Noriega case.

CNN's chief counsel, Steve Korn, said he later told the FBI that the hotel had no authority to turn the material over.

There is a group of gay, lesbian, and bisexual students, faculty, and staff that meets regularly at Notre Dame.

Our group has a three-fold mission of Support, Education, and Fellowship.

If you are interested in more information on this group, or just wondering how things have or haven't changed from when you were here, call or drop us a line.

A group for gay and lesbian people has existed in various forms on this campus since the early 1970s. This group, Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College, has existed since 1984. While officially unrecognized by the University, we are very active in working towards our goals of Support, Education, and Fellowship.

Monthly General Meetings provide a chance for everyone in our group to get together and discuss upcoming projects, lectures, and events in a friendly and welcoming forum.

Our Discussion Groups provide a group of peers to discuss the issues of being gay, lesbian, or bisexual in a world that often misunderstands homosexual people. The Discussion Groups sometimes have a topic or theme, but people are always free to talk about whatever they are feeling.

As a service to the University community, our group provides speakers for various classes, helps sponsor special events to educate the community, and works towards the day when our group is no longer necessary and gay and lesbian people are accepted as a matter of fact.

P.I.M.E. MISSIONARIES

Fulfilling one's life through a missionary vocation

The Pontifical Institute for Foreign Missions (the PIME Missionaries) is an international community of Catholic priests and laymen who make a lifelong commitment to continuing the mission of Jesus Christ in the modern world. We live the Gospel in Bangladesh, Brazil, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Myanmar, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Taiwan, Thailand and West Africa among the poor and unchurched.

Founded in Italy in 1850, a group of diocesan priests, at the encouragement of their bishops, grew in their understanding of just precisely what God was calling them to be. A missionary must be open to dialogue, prayer and selfless service, especially to the poor. The missionary must learn how to be a sign of shared faith between well established European and American local churches and peoples where the Church is just beginning. The missionary must know how to announce the Kingdom of God while being a force for transformation of those societal values which do not build up that Kingdom.

If you are a young man between 18 and 35, in good health and spirits, excited to live your faith in the missionary way described above, send in or call for information today.

Expression Committee" to make decisions regarding censorship.

On page 62, du Lac states, "Student media should be free of censorship and advance approval of copy, and their editors and managers should be free to develop their own editorial policies and news coverage...All student media are subject to the same policies that govern all student organizations."

It continues, "Editors and managers of student media which are supported by recognized University bodies...should be protected from arbitrary suspension and removal because of student, faculty, administrative or public disapproval of editorial policy or content..."

On the subject of unofficial student publications, du Lac states, "The University of Notre Dame should not prohibit the orderly distribution of student literature on campus except that which could be reasonably construed to be in violation of the law."

The main problem with du Lac's statement is that it says "should be free" instead of "are free," said Singh.

"Du Lac is too ambiguous on the issue of campus media," he added.

The Task Force plans on getting outside input on the campus media section of the Legal Department report, Pasin said.

"The Task Force will formulate a policy in consultation with leaders of the campus media," he said.

By proposing the idea of "limited recognition" of campus organizations, the Legal Department tried to please groups on both sides of the issue.

"We tried to find a balance between minority support and defending the Catholic character of the school," said Singh.

There are a lot of mixed opinions among students about recognition of groups that go against doctrines of the Church, and the recommendations had to take that into consideration, according to Singh.

The "Catholic character" that Singh mentions comes from du Lac page 54 that says a club's purpose "must be consistent with the University's mission, whether it be spiritual, moral, intellectual, cultural, social, athletic or recreational."

Du Lac adds that, "No organization, or member of any organization on behalf of the organization, may encourage or participate in any activity which contravenes the mission of the University, or the moral teachings of the Catholic Church."

Under the Legal Department report's recommendation, limited recognition could be given to groups which might contravene the mission of the University or the teachings of the Church. Limited recognition would allow these groups access to University meeting space and allow them "limited sponsorship" of "educational or awareness-type events" such as lectures or panel discussions.

However, unlike fully recognized groups, clubs with limited recognition would be denied access to funding and fundraising as well as recognition on official University listings.

The suggestions regarding group recognition were purposely not intrusive or challenging so as to avoid infringing on students who came to Notre Dame because of its Catholic orientation, said Singh.

"Student government's recommendations should embody consideration for those who come to ND for the Catholic character," he added.

Another proposal of the report is the continuation of the University's "Open speaker" policy. This policy states, "Notre Dame students and student organizations are free to examine and discuss all questions of interest to them, and to express opinions publicly and privately. They should exercise this freedom by the use of orderly means which do not disrupt the regular and essential operation of the University."

"Notre Dame students may invite and hear any person of their choosing," it adds.

The fourth proposal of the report calls for the availability of space for "any individual or group if their purpose is to express a legitimate idea."

Presently, du Lac states, "All demonstrations must be registered with the Associate Vice President for Residence Life and also must observe the following rules:

a. All demonstrations must be peaceful and orderly.

b. Only members of the University community may organize or lead a demonstration on campus.

c. Demonstrations may not impede the freedom of the University community.

This recommendation basically would give individuals not associated with any recognized group the right to express any idea of legitimate interest publicly.

In order to determine which individuals and groups should be allowed to demonstrate, the report also proposes the formation of a "Freedom of Expression Committee" to handle all decisions regarding censorship.

The committee would make final decisions "regarding all issues of censorship including, but not limited to, student media, organized activity, and group status," the report says.

The committee is made up of seven members: four faculty members chosen by the Faculty Senate, two student members chosen by the Student Senate and one administrator chosen by the Vice President for Student Affairs.

"This committee is critical to make our recommendations, many of which draw highly subjective lines, practical and effective," the report states.

These five recommendations could change drastically before they are brought before the CLC, said Singh.

The report on freedom of expression is in very rough form right now, he added.

While the issues of collective punishment, judgement by peers and freedom of expression have been worked on extensively by the Legal Department, the issue of open hearings is not really a priority, according to Singh.

Presently, on the subject of administrative hearings, du Lac states, "Hearings are conducted before a panel of two or three Residence Life staff members and are closed to all but principal parties, witnesses, undergraduate student counsel and appropriate residence hall staff."

Because they were not even sure if the students wanted their hearings open to the public, the Legal Department "decided it wasn't worth pursuing," said Singh.

The need for public disclosure of hearings brought up the issue of trust, Singh said.

"It's an issue of trust, if we need the Administration to be accountable for every facet of the proceedings, we're not showing trust in them," he said.

Singh also believes examination of other issues is more valuable.

"The issue of judgement by peers was more important than open hearings," he said.

Now, the Legal Department, the Task Force and the CLC will work on compiling a report on the issues of judgement by peers, collective punishment and freedom of expression. This report will assimilate the ideas of the original Bill of Student Rights for presentation to O'Hara.

If O'Hara accepts the recommendations, some the points brought forth last Spring could become part of du Lac, and thus, become official University policy.

"The overall aim of the Bill of Rights was to incorporate students more fully into the decision-making process," said Pasin.

This aim could become reality once the Bill of Rights is reworked to the satisfaction of all parties involved.

Americans need to take a stand against pornography

Dear Editor:
Illegal drugs and alcohol have recently been receiving the attention that they deserve for their destructiveness of human life and limb. On the other hand, pornography, for all of its magnified evil, has not had sufficient light shed on it. The problem is exacerbated when one considers that 50 percent of Americans do not take advantage of their franchise of voting in order to change persons, places and things for the better. It is axiomatic that the Soviet Union, China, Cuba and the Moslem nations do not allow pornography or obscenity to cross their borders.

In the struggle against pornography, a common ground must be found—especially for those who do not realize the seriousness of this phenomenon, those who are unable to protect themselves from this evil, and those who are confused as how to proceed in combating it.

Pornography debases, demeans and reduces the human person to the compost pile. It reinforces the subordination and mutilization of women and children. There is no division between hard core and so-called "soft core" pornography; it is all pornography. It has been estimated that pornography is a 8 million dollar industry and is growing.

Why does pornography continue to proliferate in such proportions? One study concludes that there are four basic reasons: (1) Lack of a spiritual goal in America. (2) Total pursuit of pleasure—having fun and entertainment at any price and at any one's expense, no matter who is hurt in the process. (3) Decline and disrespect for the integrity of the human person, especially women and children. (4) Lack of belief in a transcendent God, moral values or citizenship.

Pornography exploits the weaknesses of human nature. It can be the pathway to indecent, deviant and immoral conduct such as bestiality, rape, sodomy, child molestation, pedophilia, utter cruelty and a psychopathic state of mind when indulged in over a long period of time.

According to one method, pornographers use basically six steps to entice children as subjects of pornography: (1) They show pornography to the child for "sex education"; (2) They attempt to convince the child explicit sex is acceptable, even desirable; (3) They convince the child that other children are sexually active, that it's OK; (4) They desensitize the child's inhibitions; (5) They initiate sexual activity in some of these sessions; (6) They take photos or movies of the sexual activity.

Part of the problem in combating pornography is that there seems to be no universally accepted authoritative definition of the term. Justice Stewart of the U.S. Supreme Court once remarked, "I don't know how to define the term pornography, but I know it when I see it."

Pornography is not rational; it is patently evil and total licentious. The limitations of freedom of expression have had little light shed upon them. Censorship may be unfortunate, but it is surely less evil than exploitation and encouragement of hate and dehumanization of women and children.

Pornography must not be allowed to spread scornful and wicked messages of sexual aggression, torture and the total disregard for the person. In a pluralistic society like America's, it is difficult to find a common ground in order to meet this menace of pornography. A common understanding must be found, however, to protect the moral lives held dear in America.

Pornography has no relationship to sex or sexuality whatsoever; It is anti-sex. It attempts to destroy the true meaning of sex and sexuality. Sex and sexuality are men and women created in God's image. Sex and sexuality are men and women joined together in Holy Matrimony, cooperating with their Creator in a tender and loving relationship. It is meeting each other's deepest needs in tenderness and warmth.

Sex and sexuality are our children. Their honesty. Their innocence. Their trustfulness. Their need to be appreciated, listened to, encouraged, corrected and praised for a task well done.

Do we not all have the moral responsibility to safeguard the moral integrity of each other? America and Americans deserve better than this blight that is pornography.

Tunnel vision of musical 'experts' often causes them to blindside others' tastes

Dear Editor:
I am responding not to one particular occurrence, but to a vice that sickens me—intolerance. To be sure, closed-minded individuals can be found just about anywhere in life, but I have had most of my interaction with them in an area that is quite important to me - music.

If you turn enough pages or lend enough of an ear, you'll see and hear the gripes of those who would deny you your pleasure. Whether they are attacking a song because it differs from their own beliefs or simply because it is a product of "right-wing, postmodern, pretentious, commercial, sellout...etc" forces, the situation is clear. Tunnel vision abounds, and it has certainly found a home surrounding this art form. Furthermore, I find it interesting that the anti-censorship faction seems to be the one most ready and willing to attack those who are only trying to exercise their freedom of choice. Under the advice of these people, I have kept my eyes and ears open for new music. I have found a bounty of great sounds, from all ends of culture. But I have also found narrow-mindedness. If it's not "cutting edge" or "underground" or even "God-fearing," then it just isn't worth a damn. Wrong.

I have a message for anyone who has ever enjoyed listening to music: find what you like and stand by it. Don't ever let anyone tell you that your tastes are wrong. Music is one of the finest art forms that we have, and there is something for everyone. So put on those headphones nice and tight. They'll keep the music in and the criticism out.

Grunwald's African art collection

By ELIZABETH VIDA
accent writer

Have you been unimpressed with Renoir lately? Has Picasso left you blue? Get a fresh perspective on your art outlook and visit the Snite Museum's new exhibit of African Art from the Rita and John Grunwald Collection. It opens Sunday, November 18 and remains in the O'Shaughnessy Gallery West until December 30, 1990.

Also on Sunday, from 3-4 p.m., Diane Perline, curator of the Art of Africa, Oceania and the Americas at Indiana University Art Museum, Bloomington, and also the exhibit's organizer will give an opening lecture on the exhibit.

Sixty-two pieces constitute the traveling portion of the Grunwald's complete collection, which is located in their home in Bloomington, Indiana. According to Douglas E. Bradley, curator of ethnographic arts at the Snite, the Grunwald's collection of African art is special because over the last 20 years, the Grunwalds "have devoted so much time and care to the collection, and also made deliberate choices in the art they wanted in their collection and pursued those pieces."

In smaller, private collections such as the Grunwalds, each piece has an even greater role in contributing to the overall statement the collection is trying to make.

Bradley said of the pieces in their collection, "The Grunwalds keep three things in mind when considering a piece for their exhibit: first, what they are doing as individuals at that time and whether the piece fits their concept of where the collection should be heading. Secondly, they rely also on what the art market dictates at the time (if a piece is overpriced, for example.) Thirdly, they try to get a sense of whether the piece is aesthetically pleasing.

Aesthetically pleasing, however, does not always imply beauty. "The Grunwalds aren't worried about whether the pieces clash with their couch", Bradley pointed out. Indeed, the Grunwalds might have to worry about positioning their pieces in their house because that's where they keep all of them, out in the open, as the art was originally intended to be viewed.

Bradley says of the way in which art can be displayed, "When a piece of art is kept in a glass case, you just can just walk by it because it's been somehow removed from your external surroundings by being encased. But, if, especially in this instance (a rather large and ugly wild boar), the piece is displayed without any glass

'Jacob's Ladder' throws re

By MICHELLE BERNINGER
accent writer

Climbing "Jacob's Ladder" gets you nowhere. Instead of a resolution, utter puzzlement lies at the top rung. Questions only multiply the further you climb.

Yet maybe the Adrian Lyne film is the inevitable result when the creators of such bizarre movies as "Fatal Attraction," "9 1/2 Weeks," "Angel Heart," and "Ghost," combine their efforts.

"Jacob's Ladder" explores the life of Jacob Singer (Tim Robbins) who is haunted by unexplainable hallucinations and terrifying events, leaving him unable to decipher reality from nightmare. However, neither can we.

For the majority of the film, "reality" is undefinable, as the scenes progress in such a unique way as to establish a number of different lives for Singer. The problem lies in trying to recognize the illusions.

As soon as the audience seems satisfied that Singer is a Vietnam veteran presently working at a New York City post office and living with one of his fellow employees, Jezzie (Elizabeth Pena), the scenes shift and he is the loving father and husband to a woman who had supposedly left him years ago.

The unexpected leaves you tense in your seat and anticipating the next surprise, but ready to doubt its validity. After awhile, however, the shifts become annoying and Singer's insanity is too close for comfort. Even we cannot find the stability that we crave.

Singer's chiropractor and loyal friend, Louis (Danny Aiello), serves as the angelic figure of the film—a desperately needed character for such a film. He continually reminds Singer of the importance of accepting death, as opposed to fearfully clinging too tightly to aspects of the past.

Not only is Louis the only one who can relax Singer, but his advice also provides one of the few hints as to the film's message—by digging into the human psyche and exposing deep fears and unconscious terror on surface, a person can be free of them.

For such a rare serious role, Robbins effectively portrays a man's attempts to escape from his personal heart of darkness. His performance adds to the film's intensity because although he becomes frantic

Collection opens at Snite

...wall around it, you can't help but stop and truly see it every time you walk by."

The personal stamp on the collection that develops from daily contact is one reason why the Grunwald exhibit is so fascinating; and as Bradley pointed out, "That's why it's such an interesting collection—because we not only get to see excellent representatives of various African art styles, but we also get an insight into the evolution of the Grunwald's interests."

And what exactly is the focus of the Grunwald's interests? Over half of the pieces represented in the Snite's exhibit deal with the human figure. "I see the focus of this collection as definitely the figure, seen through various different African cultures," Bradley said.

Bradley also highlighted a few of the exceptional pieces in the exhibit. Particularly outstanding is the Chowke Pipe figure from the late 19th century. The Chowke people live in Angola, a southern savannah region, and they tend to share broad cultural patterns that are often reflected in the sculptures they produce.

"The figure is an excellent representative of what the Chowke were trying to say about the human body in an elegant way," Bradley said. "One large Chowke warrior was sold recently for one million dollars. The Grunwalds, however, believe that instead of spending a huge amount of money on a large flashy item and then skimp on the other pieces, they should seek a more representative sampling of African art," Bradley stated.

The oldest pieces in the exhibit are from the city of Jenne in Mali and from Akan. These pieces date back respectively to 9th-10th century and 17th-18th century Africa.

Overall, Bradley believes the exhibit is enriching because it allows people to "expose themselves to a different way of looking at the world." The exhibit is also an excellent resource for the museum, because, in Bradley's words, its "good to bring in new things so you can refresh your eye."

Reality into question

...may have the key to what is (bbins), drags him away in the ladder."

...over certain incidents, he always retains a sort of numbness to the terror plaguing him. We never quite know what he's thinking behind his sneaky, demon eyes. But then again, neither does he.

The film is not always pleasant to watch. Singer's hallucinations include the disturbing images of whirring, vibrating heads, like those from a Francis Bacon painting, as well as a trip through a filthy hospital ward filled with amputated body parts.

Yet the most startling aspect of such psychological thriller gore is its occurrence solely from Singer's point of view, not from an omniscient one which tends to suggest reality. Singer can never escape through a back door or open window; the hell is inside his head.

Near the end of "Jacob's Ladder," a seemingly eye-opening explanation is given for all of the puzzling shifts in Singer's life—the results of a horrifying wartime experiment. The actual conclusion, however, turns the movie upside down, and all of a sudden you have to rethink everything.

The whole plot is called into question, and the reality of Singer's life appears to have existed only in the opening and closing few minutes of the film...or does it? If nothing else, the film, with all of its unanswered questions, lingers.

Zeppelin box set is a must for 'Led Heads'

By JOHN FISCHER
Accent Writer

It starts with a nervous giggle, explodes immediately into the notorious prototype metal riff, and lifts off into rock history. Fifty-four songs and five hours later, the journey ends with, "Sometimes..."

Led Zeppelin's self-titled four CD boxed set, released in late October, captures the various phases and moods the band moved through in their career, from the youthful urgency of "Whole Lotta Love" to the wistful, retrospective closer, "All My Love."

Ever since the band's inception in 1968, Zeppelin has been a powerful force in the blues-rock movement and at the same time has been slagged by critics through most of its flight. However, ten years after the death of drummer John Bonham and the subsequent breakup of the band, Zeppelin fans old and new are as rabid as ever, and this CD package should satisfy their appetite.

Four "new" tracks accompany 50 songs selected by guitarist Jimmy Page from amongst Zeppelin's 84-song magnum opus. These unreleased works hold their own against the rock classics appearing on the set.

One, "Hey, Hey What Can I Do," the only legendary Zeppelin song not to appear on an album, actually was previously released as the B-side of the "Immigrant Song." It appears on CD for the first time here, and the effect is noticeable. Page's acoustic guitar sounds incredibly clean, and Plant's voice melts nicely with the folk-based tune. The bizarre guitar intro is barely audible.

"Traveling Riverside Blues," a relentless, Robert Johnson-influenced slab of pure blues-rock, is the best of the new tracks. Performed in 1969 for BBC Radio, the song is textbook early Zeppelin—Plant belting out recognizable blues stanzas over a raucous Page riff, backed by sparkling performances by the rhythm section.

Bonham shuffling bass drum has a life of its own. This track is several times better than many on the compilation album "Coda," and even tops some appearing on "real" Zeppelin albums.

"Moby Dick/Bonzo's Montreaux" is a combination of two earlier releases, Bonham's two studio drum tracks. The solos fit perfectly together. Although the mix is seamless, the final product smacks of the sound created when today's bands, mostly rap groups, sample segments of Zeppelin's music as a backing track for a new song. Page tampered with this piece more than any other, and it barely succeeds.

"White Summer/Black Mountain Side" is an eight-minute, almost exclusively guitar based instrumental piece. Only axe buffs or heavy-duty Zeppelin fans will find much in this track worth listening to.

Page, producer of all Zeppelin albums, conceived of this boxed set as a reason to remaster all of the old songs for CD. The sound is quite clear and in many cases fuller than in the records and even the previous CDs.

The only clearly noticeable differences in the actual songs occur in "Heartbreaker," in which Page's mistake-laden guitar solo is cleaned up considerably, probably to the satisfaction of casual listeners, but to the dismay of hardcore fans accustomed to every missed note and the choppy continuity.

More emphasis is given to the bass guitar in several songs. These changes do not take away from the songs, but require the listener to hear an old tune from a different point of view.

For a band who rarely released singles and meant each album to be taken as a whole, the running order of the individual songs gains extra importance. Though loosely arranged in chronological order, some interesting pairings do occur.

Those who expect to hear "Living Loving Maid" after "Heartbreaker" will be surprised that playing "Communication Breakdown" directly afterward improves both songs and brings a more coherent perspective to each.

A few questionable choices were made, such as including "Candy Store Rock" and "Ozone Baby" to the exclusion of songs such as "Out on the Tiles." The most glaring omissions were "Living Loving Maid" and "Good Times, Bad Times."

Despite these faults, the collection is a formidable lineup of well known classics and lesser known songs which may now enjoy a greater popularity. "Achilles' Last Stand" and "Wearing and Tearing" are two likely candidates.

The packaging of the discs does not shy away from the elements of mystery and the occult present in many of Zeppelin's album covers. The golden box cover depicts the shadow of a Zeppelin hovering over a field into which are cut strange markings. The covers of the individual discs feature the band's famous Four Symbols (from the untitled fourth album) cleverly hidden or obscured in four separate photographs.

How the martyr becomes a saint

Dr. Samuel Johnson said: "Every man has a right to what he thinks is truth, and every other man has the right to knock him down for it. Martyrdom is the test."

Cynics have told us, "Martyrdom has always been a proof of the intensity, never the correctness of a belief. There is no religion so irrational but can boast its martyrs."

Some saints might have gone unnoticed for a lifetime if they hadn't eventually given themselves away by becoming martyrs. You know it must mean something when your neighbor starts shedding his blood for a cause.

The one widely-acknowledged saint that I have stood close to twice in my life is Dorothy Day. In England, she's pictured wearing a halo. Yet none of the down-on-their-luck men and women who lived with Dorothy Day at the Catholic Worker House in Manhattan would tolerate the idea that Dorothy could be a saint. They'd grow angry and snarl at you for mentioning the idea.

Dorothy herself said: "I'm tired of hearing myself called 'saintly.' Such a way of disregarding what we all have to do in our own way—follow God's lead! To call me 'saintly' is to rob me and cheat me of my very humanity! I am as mean and nasty in my head and heart as all the rest of us here. Every day we fall spiritually. Who is an exception to that—who gets an A plus in the eyes of God? Not me! Just this morning I was thinking of someone I know with a terrible anger and scorn in my heart! I tried to forget the person. I worked on the soup line, serving others in order to help myself a little."

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Yet Dorothy had her own specialized vocation; as she explains it, "God has given us a moment to be worthy of His love. This is what we must do, all our lives, in every possible way, until He calls us back."

Mother Teresa says: "We can do no great things; only small things with great love."

Graham Greene has an essay in which he asks if Christianity is in peril. His answer begins: "I feel as though I am surrounded by shadows . . . Christianity is something that happens somewhere else, beyond my range of vision, perhaps in another country, certainly in another heart. I cannot touch the words unless they are given a human shape. The Apostle Thomas should be the patron saint of people in my country. For we must see the marks of the nails and put our hands in the wounds before we can understand . . ."

Then he gives us the scenario for a fantasy he once hoped to write. It takes place in the future, when the world is governed by a single all powerful political party. The curtain rises on a cheap hotel in a large city. It is late at night. A tired old man, wearing a shabby coat, carrying a beat-up suitcase comes into the lobby. Going up to the reception desk, he asks for a room. He signs the register, then disappears upstairs.

The house detective looks at the register, then says to the room clerk:

"Did you see who that was?"

"No."

"It's the Pope."

"The Pope? Who's that?"

Catholicism has been stamped out. Only the Pope survives, elected 30 years before at the last conclave, to rule over a Church, which has virtually ceased to exist. After the conclave, the cardinals had met the fate of the rest of the priests—a white wall and a firing squad. But the Pope was authorized to live, pensioned by the government because he is of use in demonstrating how dead the Church is.

The Pope drifts here and there, driven on by hope that somewhere he will encounter a sign to show him that the Faith has survived, and that he no longer needed to be haunted by the fear that what he had professed to be eternal might die with him.

Eventually, the World Dictator tires of the game, and he wants a place in history as the man who fired the shot which put an end to the Christian myth.

So the Pope is brought into the Dictator's secret, sound-proof room. There in the padded silence, the Dictator, after offering the Pope a cigarette, which he refused, and a glass of wine, which he accepted, told him he was going to die on the spot—the last Christian, the last man on earth who still believed.

The Dictator took a revolver out of his desk. After allowing the Pope a minute to pray, he shot him in the left side of the chest. Leaning over the body, he fired a second shot in the Pope's head.

At just that instant, in the second between the pressure on the trigger and the skull cracking, a thought crossed the Dictator's mind—"Is it possible that what this man believed is true?" Another Christian had been given the grace of faith.

Had the Dictator been greater, or had he been weaker, things might have turned out differently for the Pope. Marianne Moore said: "It is easier to be faithful than to have faith, and to act with courage than to suffer with patience."

T.S. Eliot's Beckett says: "I give my life/To the Law of God above the Law of Man./Those Who do not the same/How should they know what I do . . . I am not in danger; only near to death."

The mere martyr becomes the saint when he is able to say, "I am not in danger; only near to death."

Quit smoking.

Howard, Breen-Phillips face off for women's FB crown

By RENE FERRAN
Sports Writer

Defending champion Howard and Gold Division champion Breen-Phillips will meet Sunday at 1 p.m. for the 1990 women's interhall football championship.

Third-seeded Howard has gone relatively unnoticed throughout the season. While B.P. and Pasquerilla West received most of the attention, Howard quietly compiled a 4-1 regular season record.

"It seems like no one thinks about Howard as a strong team," said Howard running back Marianne Haggarty. "The whole year, people have been overlooking us, but we have shown we deserve to be mentioned with B.P. as a power in the league."

Howard barely squeaked by Off-Campus in the first round of the playoffs, and then came back from an 8-0 halftime deficit to defeat Blue Division champion P.W. 12-8 in the semifinals.

"I think we showed a lot of spirit. Although we were down at halftime, we came together as a team and told each other we could do it," said Haggarty.

The Howard offense started the season very conservatively, but as the weeks went by, it gradually opened up more as the team adjusted to the new blocking rules instituted this year. It is led by quarterback Elise Seguin, running back Becky Miller, and wide receiver Theresa Forst.

The defense will suffer if linebacker Kathy Keenan has to sit the game out with an injury. Howard will still shine on defense, however, with linebacker Kelly Kolodziej and cornerback Margaret Shane leading the way.

Top-seed B.P. has relied on a strong defense to guide it to a divisional championship. Led by linebackers Alicia McNeill and Kate Maphother and safety Carrie Goles, the Blitz gave up less than six points per game in the regular season.

"We have lots of unity on our team this year. When we get out there, we just won't quit," said Maphother. "The offense and the defense did a great job of supporting each other."

That offense has its own version of the "Rocket" in running back Kristi Alkidas, who can break a long gain on any given play. She and quarterback Kim Smith will need to have big games for the Blitz to win.

Co-captain Kristin Ballard believes the key to victory on Sunday will be maintaining the intensity B.P. had in defeating archrival Farley 12-0 last week.

"We just need to relax and to play strong on both offense and defense," said Ballard. "Last week was awesome, and we hope to keep it up."

This game could be similar to their regular season matchup early in the year. Howard led 14-0 with six minutes remaining when the Blitz exploded for two touchdowns to tie the score. In overtime, Smith hit Lisa Petursson from the five to give B.P. the lead, and then stopped Howard on two plays to preserve the 20-14 victory.

Both teams are evenly matched. The difference in the game may be Alkidas. She has big-play capability, and can break open a game at any time. If she gets free, she could carry Breen-Phillips right to the championship.

Another key to the game could be PAT's. Both teams have had difficulty with conversions throughout the playoffs. Don't be surprised if the margin of victory in this game is a missed PAT.

James Worthy busted in sting

HOUSTON (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers All-Star forward James Worthy was arrested at his hotel Thursday and charged with solicitation of prostitution, authorities said.

Worthy, who was arrested about 3 p.m. CST at the Stouffer Hotel in a sting set up by undercover vice officers, arrived late to the Lakers' game against Houston but scored 24 points in 39 minutes to lead Los Angeles to a 108-103 victory in overtime.

Houston Police Sgt. Ralph Gonzales said Worthy, 29, was released from the Houston City Jail at 7:10 p.m., 20 minutes before game time.

Sam Perkins was in Worthy's starting spot for the opening tap. Worthy reported to the Summit at the end of the first quarter and entered the game with 9:33 to go in the half after shaking hands with his teammates and receiving an ovation from the sellout crowd of 16,611 at the Summit.

"I never thought of not playing," Worthy said after the game. "The best place for me was out on the court, but it was tough. It wasn't a pretty situation. I haven't really had a chance to dwell on it."

Worthy hit his first shot of the game and was instrumental in the Lakers' victory.

"Obviously I went for the win so I played him. He's our leading scorer," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said. "We all got together and told him we were behind him once he got to the game there weren't any further discussions."

Police spokesman Dan Turner said Worthy consulted the yellow pages of the telephone book and called an escort service, requesting that two women meet him in his hotel room.

The escort service earlier had been shut down by police and undercover officers took the place of prostitutes.

"He made contact with two HPD undercover females assigned to the vice division," Turner said. "A solicitation by Mr. Worthy was made to cut a deal with the females to participate in prostitution. At that point he was arrested."

If convicted of the two Class C misdemeanor charges, Worthy faces up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Worthy was held apart from the other inmates as he raised bond.

"Mr. Worthy is not saying anything at all. However, he has shown a lot of remorse, therefore we're giving him as much courtesy as a professional as we would give any other dignitary or professional who came to our town," Turner said before Worthy's release.

Worthy was off to a good start this season with a 26.6 point average, although the Lakers went into Thursday night's game with a 1-4 record.

"I was very surprised," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said. "All I know is that James has been a model citizen for the Lakers and has been a wonderful person and player for me in my tenure as coach. My main concern right now is for James Worthy and his mental state."

Worthy's arrest was just another problem in the Lakers' slow start, teammate Mychal Thompson said.

"We were disappointed and surprised but a lot of these things are misunderstandings and that's the way we feel has happened today," Thompson said. "James has an impeccable reputation. We know the kind of guy he is. I'm sure it'll be straightened out."

James Worthy of the Lakers was arrested for solicitation of a prostitute yesterday, but he returned to lead L.A. to a victory.

Late score boosts Iowa, Irish next foe in the NIT

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Acie Earl scored down low with six seconds to play Thursday night to lead Iowa, the ninth-place team in the Big Ten last season, to a 73-71 victory over No. 19 Temple in the opening round of the Big Apple NIT.

Iowa will play at Notre Dame on Saturday night in the second round. Notre Dame beat Fordham 56-46 on Thursday night.

Temple had all five starters back from last year's 20-11 team which played in the NCAA Tournament after winning the Atlantic 10.

Temple trailed 46-41 at half-time and didn't take the lead until Donald Hodge put the Owls up 69-68 with 2:51 to play.

Mark Macon gave Temple a 71-68 lead with 56 seconds to play, but Val Barnes' three-pointer from the top of the key made it 71-71 with 43 seconds left. Temple took a timeout but Iowa stole the ball with 19 seconds remaining.

Kevin Smith drove into the paint and dished it off to Earl, who finished with 18 points. Macon misfired a long jumper as time expired.

Barnes finished with 15 points for the Hawkeyes, who were 12-16 last season.

Hodge and Vic Carstarphen each had 19 points to lead Temple. Hodge went 9-for-9 from the field.

don't need any superstars," explained Piante. "You just need a few guys who will do it for you every day of the week, and fortunately that's just what we have."

A modest Cahill stated that he was pleased with his consistent running this season because it has allowed him to help the team more consistently. Cahill's goals parallel the team goals, and he is hopeful about the team's chances at the NCAA Finals.

"It's great to have my last year be as good as this year has been," said Cahill, "and I hope that this last meet will be the culmination of four year's work. The fact that we won districts for the first time sums up the season, and we want to carry that momentum into the NCAA's and hopefully run our best."

The final senior is the only one who may fit the description of superstar. Senior captain Mike O'Connor received All-America honors for his 1990 track season, and it is likely that he will add to his past achievements with another All-America title for cross country this season.

O'Connor, however, avoids speculation about his own goals and tends to focus on team goals instead. His selfless spirit, along with his dedication and leadership abilities, makes him stand out in the role of team leader, and prompts Piante to call him "one of the best captains I've ever had."

"He is a great leader, and he leads by running well," he continued. "Nobody works harder than Mike. I've had kids in the past with more talent than Mike who couldn't hold a candle to him. It takes dedication to achieve what he has."

O'Connor stated that Notre Dame's past and future successes rest on the shoulders of the team as a whole.

"I don't think anyone goes into a meet with personal goals," said O'Connor. "We just go in and try to run well as a team. I think we've done some good things since we've been here, and we have an opportunity to do some real good things on Monday."

With seniors like Kearns, Cahill, and O'Connor leading the way, the men's cross-country team deserves to find success, and if the team follows the example of these three leaders, they will succeed.

Kipp gives up gymnastics to dive into Irish record books

By Becky Wood

Sports Writer

Jenny Kipp, school record holder in one-meter diving and NCAA Zone meet qualifier, would not be racking up points for the Irish if Notre Dame had a gymnastics team; in fact, Kipp wouldn't be diving at all.

A junior psychology major from Woodridge, Ill., Kipp participated in and competed in gymnastics for 15 years. While most divers begin no later than ninth grade, she didn't take up diving until her junior year of high school.

Kipp's gymnastics coach, who was also the swim coach, converted her to diving. With a strong gymnastics background Kipp had no problem switching from land to water; by her senior year she placed ninth at the Illinois State Diving Championships.

In spite of her diving success, Kipp's interest in gymnastics continued. Why did she choose Notre Dame, a school without a gymnastics program?

"I was going to pick a school for academics, I didn't plan on diving in college," said Kipp.

After Kipp decided on Notre Dame and found there wasn't a gymnastics program, she called Head Swim Coach Tim Welsh. She didn't hear from Welsh again until the August newsletter, welcoming all freshmen swimmers and divers to Notre Dame.

Although Kipp hadn't been on a diving board since the previous fall, she decided to dive because it was a varsity sport and she felt she was as good as the other divers. She didn't tell Welsh the part about not diving for almost a year.

Kipp admits she already had peaked in gymnastics and enjoys diving because "diving is kind of like gymnastics and I can work at it. . . it's different and I still have room to improve."

Since Tracy Brennan became diving coach last year Jenny has become "a lot more consistent on both boards, improving quicker on one-meter than three-meter because she's taken time off on three-meter."

Her improvement was slowed when she hit the board a month ago and sprained her fingers. The impact with the water is harder off three-meter is harder than off the one-meter board, but Kipp's fingers are healing and she's already back on three-meter.

Kipp has already reached her first-semester goals: qualifying for Zones and breaking Andrea Bonny's one-meter record. Brennan is confident Jenny can also qualify for Zones on three-meter.

What makes Kipp a good diver? Brennan feels the key to her success is a good body awareness when she's in the air twisting or spinning. Gymnastics has certainly helped, and Kipp was able to make the adjustment to diving, although the hurdle on the diving board is a lot different than the hurdle in vaulting.

"Jenny's dives are fine, we just need to improve her boardwork, so she'll get higher and have more time to make cleaner entries," said Brennan.

Kipp was diver of the meet at last year's National Catholic Championships, winning the one-meter and placing second on three-meter. Her performance was especially impressive because she never had dove three-meter until college. In two weeks she hopes to improve upon last year's performance and come out a double winner at National Catholics.

Cozen

last week against Athletes in Action, and he knew he would probably see some action in the NIT. But he probably never dreamed of being the first-game hero.

I never expected to come in and make that much of an impact," Cozen said. "I'm really pleased with my performance."

And the few people who were in attendance at the Joyce ACC - 3303 to be exact - know it was Cozen who lifted the Irish into Saturday night's game with Iowa.

Sixers' Bol seeks to end hunger in his homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manute Bol of the Philadelphia 76ers told a hunger relief group Thursday that he feels torn every day because he is living well while his relatives and millions of others in the Sudan are starving.

Bol, a Dinka tribesman from the Sudanese village of Turalei, appealed to Americans, if not to help, then to at least make themselves aware of the suffering.

"I eat good food here in America and I go to sleep at night and then when I wake up in the morning and watch something on TV, I just feel really terrible," Bol told Oxfam America, the hunger relief group. "There's nothing I can do. In my family, too, I have got about 70 people right now homeless in the capital of Sudan. They have no place to go."

Bol earns $1.3 million in salary with the 76ers. He and his agent estimate he has spent $300,000 over the past three years to keep his relatives from going hungry. He bought a house in Khartoum for $100,000 and estimates that 35 to 40 members of his extended family live there.

Bol said he wants to believe that Americans are compassionate.

"Some friends, not my teammates, they ask me do you think that Americans will help those hungry people, give them something? I say 'Why do you say that?' and they say 'There's a lot of homeless right now in Philadelphia and nobody's helping them,'" Bol said.

Bol said his teammates asked him why he wanted to attend the hunger awareness reception. The reception, held in honor of the late Texas congressman Mickey Leland, was part of activities and fasting nationwide.

Alumni, O.C. meet in IH final

By RENE FERRAN
Sports Writer

In a rematch of last year's semifinal playoff game, the Alumni Dogs and the Off-Campus Crime will meet on Sunday, this time for the 1990 men's interhall football championship.

Both teams have cruised through the playoffs so far. Alumni easily handled Stanford 26-3 and Sorin 24-0, while Off-Campus defeated Fisher 17-6 and Grace 19-7.

The Dogs have relied on a rock-solid defensive effort to lead them to their two playoff victories. Last week against the Otters' explosive offense, Alumni held them to negative-four total yards, and forced four interceptions. This week Alumni faces an offense that is slightly more predictable, but is also very dependable.

Off-Campus has used a strong running attack in its wins. Phil Couri and Brian Doherty, running behind an excellent offensive line led by Tom Sutliff and John Schoen, are the keys to the Crime offense, complemented by key completions from Bob Allard to receivers Chuck Moser and James Dillard.

Alumni's defense has been tough against the run all year, however, and Coach Tom Helms believes his team will have to vary the offense a little more to keep the Dogs guessing.

"We want to control the ball on offense," said Helms. "We need to have sustained drives to keep Alumni's offense off the field as much as possible. We'll need to run the ball well, but also mix in the pass a little more in order to be successful on offense."

The Dog offense Helms mentioned is one of the best in interhall football this year. A solid, ball-control offense keyed by a good running game with Dave Ludwig and Mark Ross, it also has big-play capabilities with quarterback Jim Passinaut often hooking up with split end Pete Parten and tight end John Carretta.

"We have to eliminate the penalties on defense," said Helms. "With their offense, we can't give them any yards. We have to make them earn everything they get."

For Alumni coach Paul

Szyperksi, the key will be the Dogs' defensive play. If they shut down the Crime running game, he believes this will hurt seriously Off-Campus' chances for victory. He also wants to get Ludwig and Ross into the game early.

"We want to establish the running game against Off-Campus to offset their hard-hitting, aggressive defense which pursues the ball well," said Szyperksi.

Szyperksi spoke specifically of the linebacking corps of the Crime, led by Antwon Lark, a former varsity scout team member. If Alumni can get the running game established, it only enhances its potent passing attack, which will have a height advantage on the smaller Crime secondary.

Special teams play also will be a major factor in this game. Sorin self-destructed in the punting game, and Alumni scored 16 easy points on these errors. The Crime have been prone to giving up blocked punts and place-kicks this year, but if they get the ball off, they have one of the better kickers in interhall football, Bob Topel.

Both defenses are strong against the run, so the game will turn on the abilities of Passinaut and Allard. Off-Campus has lived by the run this season, but will face its stiffest test yet in trying to crack the Dog defense. Allard threw only four times against Grace, but will have to throw more against Alumni in order for the Crime to win.

two feet, we missed a lot of easy shots."

The fifth-year Fordham coach said Ellis' 13 rebounds and physical play intimidated the Rams down low. Ellis allowed standout Damon Lopez just six points and four rebounds. Lopez averaged 11.4 points and over 10 rebounds a game last year.

Junior guard John Prioleau kept the Rams in the game with 18 points, but teammates Fred Herzog and Sanford Jenkins went a cold 4-19 and 3-10, respectively.

While Phelps was not pleased with his starters' shooting and the team's 19 turnovers, the performances turned in by all of his four freshmen encouraged the Irish coach, who is beginning his second decade at Notre Dame.

"The freshmen saved us," said Phelps of Cozen, Brooks Boyer and Joe and Jon Ross. "I credit the six upperclassmen for taking the kids under their wings early."

Tickets for Notre Dame's game with the Hawkeyes will be on sale from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the JACC ticket office. Students can again purchase the tickets, which are not part of the season package, for a special price of $2. The game will not be televised.

Long practices pay off for St. Mary's star Danahy

By KILEY COBLE
sports writer

The Saint Mary's swim team's number-one breast stroker, Jennifer Danahy is looking forward to another successful season with the Belles.

She currently holds the Saint Mary's record for the 200 breast stroke with a time of 2:40.52 set at Nationals on March 10, 1990.

"It's so easy for me to practice this year because we have so many new breast strokeers this year and last year we didn't," said Danahy.

The team practices twice a day. They practice two hours in the morning at Saint Mary's for individualized attention and then again in the evening at Notre Dame for several hours.

Tomorrow the team will travel to Little States at Indianapolis. Due to budgetary reasons and NCAA rules the whole team cannot go to the meet. Danahy said it will be hard for Coach Dennis Cooper to choose the 21 people who will travel with the team.

"A lot of the swimmers are freshman with great potential who have been swimming in practice for the past six to eight weeks, but who haven't been seen swimming under pressure yet," said Danahy.

Last year at the Midwest Invitationals Coach Cooper had to do a lot of compensating in arranging who would swim what event, since many of the swimmers were ill or had an injury. On the day of the meet, Danahy was scheduled to swim the 400 I.M. and she had never swam it before. It turned out that she was the last person to make the cuts at the preliminaries, and she swam again that night for the finals and dropped eleven seconds off her time.

"Because I had never swam that event before that day I dropped my time significantly between the heats and I made National cuts again," Danahy said.

Danahy has a feeling she will be swimming the 400 I.M. at tomorrow's meet. But she has earned the spot as the number-one 200 meter breaststroker on the team.

Danahy says the highest quality of competition the team will see this year will be at the National Catholic Invitational at Notre Dame on Nov. 29-Dec. 1. There will be many good Division I schools there from across the country.

Danahy is glad to be at a Division III school and to be able to have more opportunities to swim. A native of New York, many of her teammates from high school went on to receive scholarships at the schools that recruited them.

Yale, Harvard will square off in 107th annual matchup

BOSTON (AP) — A new tradition has developed in The Game — the home field disadvantage.

In Saturday's 107th matchup between Ivy League rivals Harvard and Yale, it'll be the Bulldogs turn to try and beat the Crimson at Harvard Stadium. In the last seven games between the teams, the visitors have won five, including the last three.

"One good thing about being on the road is you're together Friday night and your meetings are a little more structured," Yale coach Carm Cozza said Thursday before his team left New Haven, Conn. "We've had very good games up there. There's no explanation why it happens."

Harvard coach Joe Restic offered one.

"There are so many things you have to contend with when you're at home," he said. "There are a number of distractions. There are always people around. It's tougher to focus. I always felt better on the road."

Harvard won The Game at New Haven last year 37-20. It took some of the gleam off Yale's Ivy League title.

"Every time I look at that championship ring I think of the Harvard loss," Bulldogs tailback Kevin Callahan said. "I'm not sure I can look at that ring with a clear conscience until we do the job this year."

The loss to Harvard forced Yale to share the title with Princeton. The Bulldogs would love to grab a piece of the championship this season.

With a 4-2 conference record, they are a game behind co-leaders Cornell and Dartmouth heading into the season finale. Yale can be part of a three-way tie for the title if it beats Harvard, Cornell loses to Penn and Dartmouth loses at Princeton.

But first Yale (5-4) must beat Harvard (5-4).

"This is the only game I'm focused on. This is the only game that I care about," Cozza said. "Twenty-five seniors will be leaving us, and I would like them to leave with a win."

Harvard is tied for fourth in the league with a 3-3 record.

"We're out of the league picture, but it's a big day for both teams," Restic said.

The game matches the league's highest scoring team with the second stingiest defense. Yale is averaging 27.8 points per game, while Harvard has allowed 283.8 yards.

Yale, second in league games with an average of 333.3 yards, has the more potent offense, but Harvard has a chance to do some damage with its passing game.

Although the Crimson are last in league games with an average of 64.2 passing yards, the 188.8 passing yards Yale has allowed is the most in Ivy action.

ND hockey ices UMass-Boston

By DAVE DIETEMAN

Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team (2-5-1) survived a third-period rally by the visiting University of Massachusetts-Boston Beacons (3-1) last night, squeaking out a 6-4 win in front of several hundred fans at the JACC.

The Irish opened the scoring early, as Dan Marvin took a pass from Dan Sawyer in front of the Beacon net and dumped it into the goal only 1:39 into the game. Black had taken a pass from Sterling Black, who stole the puck from a Boston defender.

The Beacons quickly tied things up, however, as forward John Veneri beat Irish goalkeeper Greg Louder at the 3:39 minute mark, with assists going to Jim Abban and Jim Geary.

Tim Litchard notched an unassisted goal, and Curtis Janicke took a double-assist from David Bankoske and Darren D'Amato for another score as the Irish jumped out to a 3-1 lead by the end of the first period.

Yet the lopsided score of the early going did not indicate the see-saw, erratic play on the ice.

"We played just poorly enough to lose," wryly commented Notre head coach Ric Schafer, whose squad faces the Beacons again tonight. "But we did win, and that makes me glad. We needed this win. We have been working hard and we got the win we needed—this is what the doctor ordered."

Despite the fact that the Irish garnered a much-needed victory, Schafer remains concerned, as Notre Dame must take the ice again tonight to face the same Beacon squad.

"I'm still worried about us," said Schafer. "I hope that the players are worried too. I think that we're a better team than we showed—we're supposed to be a better team than that—but this team could beat us if we don't really play well."

Given the Beacon performance in the final period, Schafer has good reason for concern. The UMass-Boston put together a three-goal assault, as they pulled to within 6-4 of the Irish.

Notre Dame had apparently landed its knockout punch just 2:56 into the third period. Dan Marvin took an assist from Sterling Black and beat the beleaguered Boston goalie for a 6-1 Irish advantage.

Yet the Beacons rambled back with poise, as Steve Goslin scored twice and Jim Geary scored once, putting the game within reach. The Irish defense, however, rose to the occasion and held UMass-Boston scoreless during the final 1:47 to preserve the win.

Coach Schafer hypothesized about his team's sporadic performance.

"We are not approaching our best efforts at the same time," said Schafer. "We are not all together yet. I am so worried about how we will become a better hockey team. I'm just so critical of our performance right now, however, that I can't really pinpoint what we have to do."

Despite his lack of satisfaction, Schafer was quick to point to a rosy future.

"I definitely see better days on the horizon," remarked Schafer. "We can play better than we have played. Right now, I am worried. This team will play us tough tomorrow, and I hope that we play good hockey."

Notre Dame again faces UMass-Boston tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the JACC.

The Irish hockey team won the first game of its two-game series with UMass-Boston last night, 6-4. The two teams play again tonight.

Irish wrestle at St. Louis, hope to keep momentum

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame wrestling team will travel to St. Louis this weekend to compete in the St. Louis Open on Saturday, November 17. The Irish are coming off a victory at the Michigan State Invitational two weeks ago. The Irish had many strong performances including victories by junior Marcus Gowens in the 126-lb. division, sophomore Jamie Boyd in the 142-lb. division, senior tri-captain Todd Layton in the 150-lb. class, and sophomore Steve King in 190-lb. division. Last year, the Irish placed strong in the St. Louis meet, receiving a victory in the 167-lb. from one of this year's senior tri-captains Mark Gerardi. Also, the now graduated All-American Pat Boyd took second pace in the 142-lb. weight class. The Irish will also look to freshman Chris Jensen in the in the 118-lb. division. Jensen has impressive high school credentials having compiled a record of 126-1 at Hoquiam High School in Washington. In the 134-lb. division looks to be the most competitive with sophomores Kyle Cadman and Mike Donnino competing with freshman Mike Ahern for the starting spot. The surprise of the season could come from sophomore Emil Soehnlén, who has shown great improvement in the 158-lb. class. At 177-lb. wight class, two freshman will vie for the starting spot. J.J. McGrew and Bill Hunter both had distinguished high school careers and was impressive in the preseason. The heavyweight division appears to have the most depth for the Irish with three strong candidates competing for spots. Junior Chuck Weaver appears to have the edge since he started last year, but he will be pushed by juniors Curt Engler and Tom Salvino.

ND volleyball goes for MCC title

By RENE FERRAN
Sports Writer

The Irish volleyball team travels to Cincinnati today to compete in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships hosted by Xavier University.

Notre Dame (8-23) will face the Loyola Ramblers (24-9) in the first round at 3:00 p.m. Friday.

Notre Dame received the fifth seed in the tournament after tying for third in the MCC this year because it lost to both Dayton and Loyola in the regular season. The Ramblers are the fourth seed.

Loyola is led by sophomore setter Julie McShane, who leads the team in assists (1391), and sophomore middle-hitter Therese O'Neill, the team leader in kills (402).

In their regular season match, Loyola defeated the Irish 15-6, 15-4, 11-15, 15-10 in Chicago on October 9, in the first of two matches that evening for the Irish.

Sophomore middle blocker Jessica Fiebelkorn, who did not make the trip to Cincinnati due to an injury, believes the Irish are ready to atone for their earlier defeat at the hands of the Ramblers.

"We played awful that night," said Fiebelkorn. "We did not play anywhere near our capabilities in the first match, although we picked it up in the second-half of the double-header. The team is looking good. We played well Tuesday night, and it should carry over."

So far this year, Notre Dame has been guilty of lapses in key situations. For example, against Northwestern on Tuesday, the Irish lost two of three games on mistakes at game point. This topic has been stressed at Irish practices lately.

"We've been working in practice on eliminating our errors during critical times of our matches," said senior outside-hitter Colleen Wagner. "If we focus on the fundamentals, and play a relatively clean match [against Loyola], we'll be in good shape."

Seniors lead men's cross country chase for NCAA title

The Observer / David Lee

The Notre Dame men's cross-country team, currently ranked fourth in the nation, will run in the NCAA Championships Monday at the University of Tennessee

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

When the men's cross-country team steps off the starting line at the NCAA Championships on Monday, three runners will mark the path for the rest.

Seniors Pat Kearns, Ryan Cahill, and Mike O'Connor, though not all superstars, have proved themselves champions throughout this nearly perfect season. While each athlete plays a different role on the team, each takes, in part, the role of leader.

Since his freshman year, Kearns, an art major, has held the position of team comedian. Head Coach Joe Piane describes Kearns as "definitely one of the more free-spirited fellows on the team," and Kearns agrees with his coach's summation.

"I'd say I play the role of lightening up the team," said Kearns. "Freshman year that role was given to me immediately. A lot of guys on the team are accounting majors, so I don't fit into the mold. I definitely have a different personality than Mike or Ryan, but when it comes down to doing a job we can mesh together and get it done."

Kearns has proved that he can get the job done, consistently running as the third or fourth man throughout the season. Piane stated that despite Kearns' sense of humor, "when it comes to racing, he's ready to go," and Kearns' strong season and 15th place finish in last week's NCAA district meet proves his coach's opinion.

Another role-player for the Irish is Ryan Cahill. Piane described Cahill as a model of consistency and dedication; and explained that this type of constant dedication is the backbone of the Irish squad.

"The bottom line for any cross-country team is that you

Irish move into 2nd round of NIT

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

No one ever would have expected it to go the way it did, but Notre Dame still prevailed over Fordham, 56-46, on Thursday night to advance to the preseason NIT's second round.

Because of the inspired shooting of freshman Carl Cozen in the first half, and junior guard Elmer Bennett in the second half, the Irish will play Iowa this Saturday night at 9 p.m. in the JACC.

It was a night full of surprises, beginning and ending with the Rams' ability to shut down Notre Dame superstar LaPhonso Ellis, who finished the game with just six points.

"Whenever (Ellis) got the ball, we collapsed on him," said Fordham coach Nick Macarchuk. "Three guys, four guys, our manager, we threw everyone in."

Macarchuk was exaggerating, but only a little. Ellis was constantly double-, triple- and even quadruple-teamed.

The Rams forced the Irish to go to their outside shot, which, unfortunately for Notre Dame, decided not to fall for most of the first half. The Irish shot under 35 percent in the first stanza and only 41 percent for the game, causing Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps to insert some of his freshmen into the lackluster offense.

Cozen answered the call almost immediately. Just over two minutes after he entered the game, the Chicago native sunk a three-pointer from the right corner. A play later, he sunk another trey from the same spot, single-handedly turning a 14-10 deficit to a 16-14 lead that the Irish would keep for the rest of the game.

Phelps said he wasn't surprised by the play of Cozen, who finished the game with 12 points, all from the perimeter. What did surprise Phelps, however, was "that we went 9 for 26. We shoot the ball better than that."

Elmer Bennett must have seen the stats at halftime and thought the same thing. After scoring just three points in the first half, which the Irish led 24-20, Bennett went on a scoring frenzy, landing three of five trifectas and finishing as Notre Dame's leading scorer with 16 points.

"Bennett's run in the second half broke our back," said Macarchuk.

While Ellis did not score a field goal until the second half, both coaches cited his defensive play as instrumental in shutting down the Fordham offense, which had some shooting problems itself. The Rams made 25 percent of their first-half attempts and just 30 percent for the entire game.

"We had some difficulty shooting the basketball tonight," said Macarchuk. "Whether it was from 21 feet or Daimon Sweet looks to make a pass in the Irish home opener versus Fordham, which the Irish won 56-46.

Cozen stars in his first ND game

Notre Dame freshman Carl Cozen stood in the Irish locker room and probably found it hard to believe he was the center of attention after playing in his first college game.

He had scored 12 points - all on three-pointers - moments before to lead Notre Dame to a 56-46 victory over Fordham in the first round of the Dodge/NIT.

"My goal was to just get in the rotation," Cozen said.

Instead, Cozen gave the Irish a big spark late in the first half with a trio of three-pointers. He added another in the second half that helped them pull away into the second round against Iowa on Saturday night.

"Thank God for Carl Cozen," said Irish senior Keivn Ellery, who struggled from the field with 1 of 11 shooting. "He hit three big three-pointers."

Cozen entered his first game with 7:50 left in the first half when Notre Dame was struggling from the field and trailing 11-10. Fordham was double- and triple-teaming LaPhonso Ellis, and no one else could find the range from outside.

"At the beginning of the game, we were planning on going inside to LaPhonso," Cozen said. "It wasn't there tonight. Coach Phelps told me my role was to shoot the threes and rebound."

Greg Guffey
Sports Editor

And Cozen wasted little time in putting up those shots.

With Fordham leading 14-10, Cozen nailed his first three-pointer from the corner and then followed with another just 40 seconds later to give the Irish the lead they would never relinquish. He added a third with 2:28 left in the half.

"I was surprised at being as wide open as I was," Cozen said. "They were doubling down and that made my shot available."

Said Fordham coach Nick Macarchuk, "Cozen killed us in the first half. Those three shots he made were the difference in the first half. That broke our back. He plays older than a freshman."

At one time in the first half, it was a freshman smorgasbord. Cozen, Brooks Boyer and Joe and Jon Ross joined Irish captain Tim Singleton for the last three minutes. Those freshmen finished with 13 first-half points.

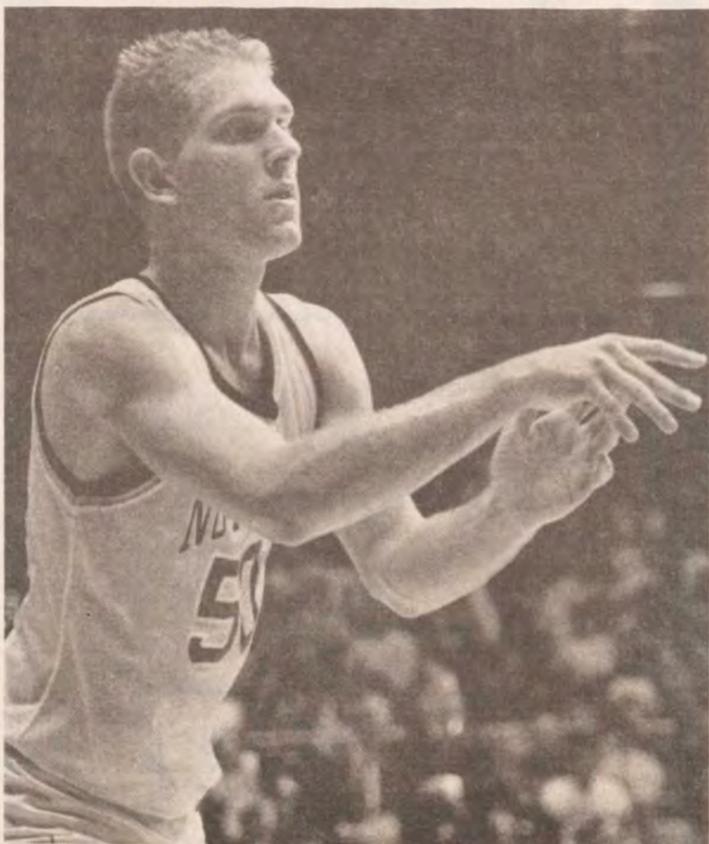

"That was like a practice situation," Singleton said. "Sometimes Kevin (Ellery) and myself work with the freshman squad. They felt really comfortable out there. They gave us a little spurt tonight."

And it was Cozen who led the freshmen. It was Cozen who came off the bench and answered Notre Dame's wake-up call.

This looks like a Notre Dame team that might have a different leader each night. Cozen was the hero - albeit an unlikely one - against the Rams.

Cozen did hit one shot in the exhibition game

The Observer / Kenneth Osgood

Carl Cozen was a deciding factor in the Notre Dame win over Fordham, Cozen's first game in an Irish uniform.
