THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

Summer service expands perspectives

By SARAH DORAN
News Editor

While many of us worked part time jobs designed to fund our weekend activities, 142 Notre Dame students emerged from the summer vacation with an experience designed to last a lot longer than nine months.

These students embarked on a summer of service.

Sponsored by 99 Notre Dame Alumni Clubs around the country, the students completed an eight week Summer Service Project which—beyond the benefit of a $1,500 academic scholarship—placed them in environments ranging from hospitals to community centers to homeless shelters as part of a valuable growth experience.

"The stories and lives of the people I lived and worked with became real—they became my friends," said junior Christi Hancock, who lived and worked at the Holy Family Shelter in Indianapolis. During her term at the Holy Family Shelter, Hancock had two primary duties—she ran a children's summer program each morning and assisted case managers help shelter residents look for housing and work options.

"We helped them to take advantage of the resources around them by directing them toward housing and jobs," she said. "We helped them break these dependencies."

But for Hancock, the most rewarding part of the experience came each night.

"The most important things came after hours when I would sit downstairs with the families and just talk," said Hancock, who had chosen to complete her project at the Holy Family Shelter because it allowed her to reside at the site.

For junior Roger Yang, the learning experience came through the people he met completing his service work at the South West Community Center in Santa Ana, California.

"It was the small, close environment that let me get to know the homeless we served," he said. "By listening to the people and talking to them, I thought I made a difference."

duties during the project's eight week duration. He helped feed two meals a day to over 200 people and also aided in donation pickups for the center and finding housing opportunities.

After completion of their Summer Service Projects, the students complete three follow up activities at Notre Dame. One option is to take Father Don McNeill's Theology and Social Ministry Course for three theology credits, another is to participate in a 24 hour retreat with others who completed a project, and another is to meet three times in small groups. Summer Service Project students also write a reflection paper on their experience.

Interested students should contact Sue Cunningham, coordinator of Summer Service Projects at the Center for Social Concerns, at 631-5923.

Saint Mary's center offers career advice

By JENNIFER LEWIS
News Writer

While student participation in the Counseling and Career Development Center (C&CDC) at Saint Mary's is not mandatory, the resources offered at the center should not be passed up, said Assistant Director of Counseling and Career Development, Karen Kyle Manier.

The C&CDC does not guarantee internships but assists students in creating a resume and provides them a list of internships available in their specific occupation, said Manier. "There is no way one could make a decision involving their future if they do not become aware of their choices," said Manier. "The sooner you start investigating your options the better."

This evening, the C&CDC is sponsoring The Junior Kick Off, located in the Little Theater in Monroe Center at 5:30 p.m. This one hour program expects to get juniors active in their future vocation before senior year.

If you are unable to attend this meeting the C&CDC encourages drop-ins during office hours 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday-Friday in Le Mans Hall or call 284-4365.

The C&CDC also puts out Pathfinders, a monthly news paper listing academic success programs and postgraduate options.

Norway leader opposes Vatican

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press

CAIRO
One of the world's few women leaders struck back at the Vatican and Muslim fundamentalists Monday by defending abortion and sex education, and made a plea to curb the population boom "for Earth's sake."

In her opening day speech, the outspoken prime minister of Norway, Gro Harlem Brundtland, framed a key issue of the U.N. population conference: giving power to women as the way to slow birth rates and alleviate overpopulation.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan, the only other woman head of state present, supported women's equality but took a far more conservative view on abortion and sexual issues.

Bhutto's decision to attend the nine-day conference and buck conservative Islamic opponents was in itself a victory for the organizers.

Two other Muslim women leaders, Tansu Ciller of Turkey and Khalida Zia of Bangladesh, backed out.

But Bhutto's rejection of sections of the proposed 20-year blueprint to curb population growth, coupled with another Vatican attack on abortion, reflected the polarized debate at the conference.

Weeks before it opened the U.N. conference exploded in controversy over the issues of abortion, birth control and sex education.

The Vatican opposes artificial birth control and abortion in all cases, while Muslim fundamentalists say the draft plan of action promotes promiscuity, homosexuality and a loosening of family ties.

In three preliminary meetings, delegates to the population conference agreed to more than 90 percent of the plan of action.

But the most contentious issues must still be resolved — reproductive health and family planning services, reproductive rights, adolescent sex education and abortion.

Vice President Al Gore said Monday that participants were "very close" to a consensus on the subjects still in dispute.

But he predicted the Vatican would not accept the final document despite compromise language being worked out by the European Union.

Me and my McJob

Don't laugh, but I flip hamburgers for a living. While other people my age toil away at summer desk job internships, I bag fries and worry about moldy hot dog rolls. My career in the "Food Service Industry" began about four years ago. In this relatively short amount of time, I've gone from counter worker to Head Cashier to Assistant Manager. I've doubled my pay and my hours and can now make two ice cream cones at the same time with one hand. (You think that's easy?)

By Krista Nannery
Viewpoint Assistant Editor

I can understand the plight of the average Hardee's counter worker. You see, I know what it's like to wear polyester five days a week and carry your belongings to work in a see-through plastic bag. I know what it's like to have total strangers call you by your first name because you're wearing a name tag about the size of Rhode Island symbolically located above your heart. I know what it's like to be in the middle of the lunch rush and discover that the fries were never delivered that week and you'll have to talk everyone into onion rings. And I know what it's like to run out of straws.

I'm not much of a cook, which is pretty silly because that's basically what I do forty hours a week. It is even sillier because I don't eat red meat and about the only thing I can make is a nice, juicy burger. Actually, that's not true. I can make just about anything that can be thrown into a vat of industrial strength FryMax cooking oil. (You know it's ready when it floats.)

I've heard every complaint known to science. "It's cold" is the most common one. That's followed by "I dropped it". My favorites are "I'm not hungry anymore" after they've eaten half of it and "It's too hot" —go figure. But the customer is always right so I have no choice but to refund the item with a smile.

Patrons have questioned my intelligence on more than one occasion. I've been told to get a real job and to go back to high school. I've been cursed at and spit on and sexually harassed. Men have refused to believe that I am the manager. Women have told me that I should stay at home and raise children. Jehovah Witnesses have tried to convert me on more than one occasion.

Now, whenever I go into any type of restaurant, I know exactly what and how to order. Always include the size and if you want a specific topping, tell them immediately! Don't get mad if they don't have what you want. Speak to the manager if you are really unhappy, but try to be civil. Remember, he or she is a person too. Expect to wait a little, especially if it's busy. Try to say please and thank you. It really helps to know that there are polite people out there somewhere.

Unfortunately, I'm getting on in years now and it's time to move on into the real world and get myself a desk job where love of polyester isn't a requirement and lunch breaks aren't limited to heart attacks on bread with sides of cholesterol. Truth be told, I'll miss the fast food business and it will always be a part of me. But honestly, I need a job that doesn't require a name tag.

Commissioner meets with Secretary of Labor, World Series unlikely

NEW YORK
With four days left until the deadline for canceling the season, acting commissioner Bud Selig met Monday with Labor Secretary Robert Reich, who was far from optimistic about the season continuing.

"I think there is a very good possibility we are not going to have a World Series this year and that would be the first time since 1904," Reich told a crowd of about 200 Democrats attending a fund-raiser for U.S. Rep. David Obey of Wausau, Wis.

Reich said he had a "candid" discussion with Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, earlier in the day.

"I was passing through Milwaukee and I wanted to hear from him personally," Reich said. "I am not encouraged. I think the baseball owners and players are taking their customers for granted."

Reich called the federal government's role in trying to settle the strike "frustrating. We can't make them agree if they don't want to agree."

"That we may not be having a World Series in 1994 is a testament to the fact that baseball has gone from being our national pastime to a huge industry, which there is, I hate to say, a huge amount of greed," Reich said.

As the strike completed its 25th day, President Clinton urged both sides to settle their differences. It was the first time no baseball was played on Labor Day, which was established in 1894.

"On this Labor Day, there's still time for them to go back to work and finish the best baseball season in 50 years — and I hope they will," Clinton said during an address to iron workers in Bath, Maine.

Behind the scenes, union officials and player agents were said to be talking directly with owners and club officials in an effort to establish a framework which possibly could lead to a settlement.

The most-discussed framework appeared to involve a "taxation" concept that was mentioned two weeks ago by Boston Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington, in which large-revenue clubs would have to share a greater amount of money than others.

Fehr, who was in his office on Labor Day, said he wasn't concerned about Selig's Friday deadline. Selig has said he would seek the union's input.

Thirteen more games were canceled Monday, raising the total to 324. Tuesday will mark the midpoint between the start of the strike on Aug. 12 and the season's scheduled end on Oct. 2.

Rabin critical of Bhutto crossing border

JERUSALEM
The tradition of displaying apples and honey throughout Israel to symbolize the sweetness of the Jewish New Year took on new meaning as the holiday began Monday with the promise of peace with the Arab world. The New Year started at sundown with The Days of Awe, the 10-day period for Jews to contemplate their sins against man and ask forgiveness. The year has seen Israel and the Palestinians end decades of bitter enmity, establishing Palestinian self-rule. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin looked back on the new year and told the daily Yedioth Ahronoth: "I don't feel the need to ask forgiveness from anyone." Most recently, he admonished Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to "learn some manners" when she attempted to visit the Palestinian self-rule areas without advising Israel she wanted to cross the Israeli-controlled border.

Three-year-old dies when boat capsizes

LOS ANGELES
A motorboat packed with 19 members of three families capsized during a fishing trip, killing a 3-year-old boy who was trapped in the submerged hull wearing a life vest. Two girls, ages 10 months and 4, were critically injured in the Sunday night accident outside Los Angeles Harbor. The 18 survivors were hospitalized after spending up to five hours in 60-degree water, the Coast Guard said. Firefighter John Burgan, a diver, said the boy who died was trapped against the boat's instrument panel, floating horizontally against the console as if he were sleeping. "It's the kind of thing that comes back to you years later," Burgan said. The vest probably prevented the boy, Adam Romero, from swimming out from under the capsized boat, Burgan said, adding that such a young child likely wouldn't have been able to escape.

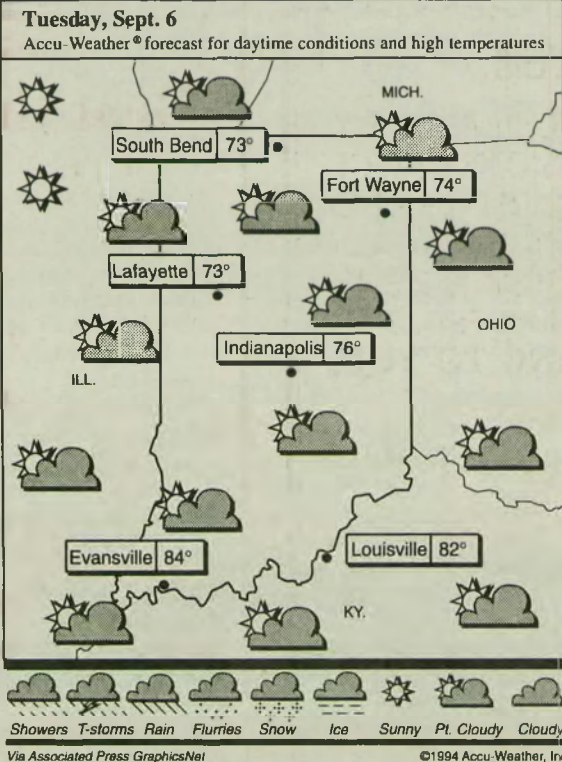

Captured terrorist refuses to answer judge

PARIS
Smiling broadly and saying he had been kidnapped, the notorious terrorist Carlos the Jackal refused to answer questions Monday at his first interrogation since being arrested last month, his lawyers said. The Venezuelan-born terrorist, wearing a grey jacket and yellow scarf, appeared before France's top anti-terrorism judge after he was whisked under heavy security from his isolation cell in a Paris prison. Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere questioned Carlos about his actions in the weeks preceding a 1982 car-bombing in Paris that killed one person and injured 65. Authorities have charged Carlos in the bombing. "I refuse to answer. I was kidnapped. I am being illegally detained," Carlos said after each question, according to lawyers Jacques Verges and Mourad Oussedik. Carlos, 44, whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, was captured Aug. 14 in Khartoum, Sudan, and jailed the next day in France. For 20 years, he had been among the world's most wanted terrorists.

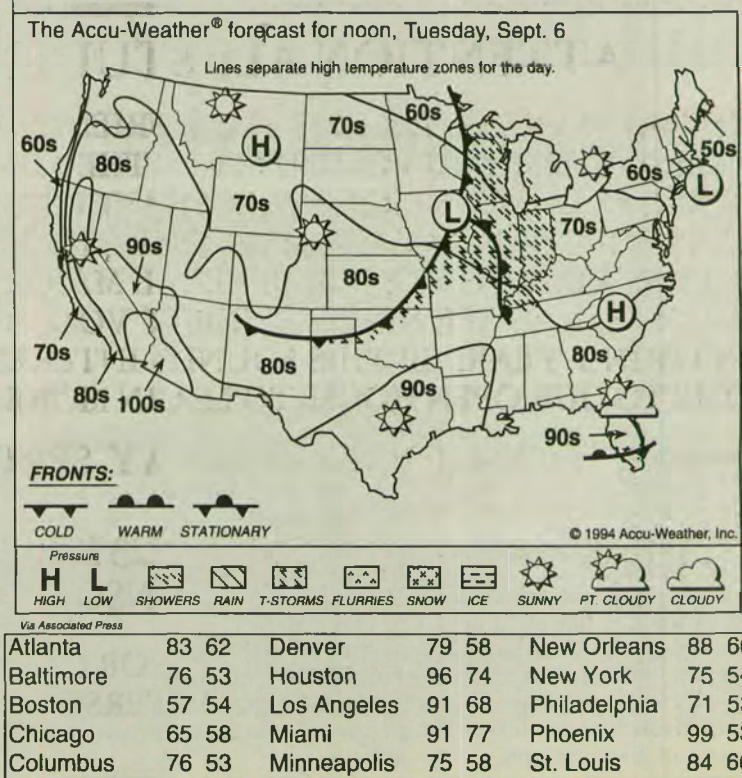

Deaf woman dreams of being Miss America

MONTGOMERY, Ala.
Heather Whitestone won't hear the roar of the crowd if she wins the Miss America crown next week. For her, a victory-walk down the Atlantic City runway would be about as quiet as a private stroll. Whitestone, Miss Alabama 1994, is deaf and can hear virtually nothing without a hearing aid. She hopes to become the first Miss America with a disability. But Whitestone, 21, says she never thinks of herself as deaf. Her goal is to inspire all people to achieve their dreams. "I want to challenge everybody, not just deaf people," she said. Whitestone and the 49 other contestants arrived Monday in Atlantic City, N.J., to begin preparing for the 74th annual pageant on Sept. 17. Whitestone has overcome her deafness to learn ballet and study accounting at Jacksonville State University.

Meeting between US-Cuba accomplish little

By LOUIS MEIXLER
Associated Press

NEW YORK
U.S. and Cuban negotiators met for one hour Monday on halting the exodus of Cuban refugees, and there were growing indications that the talks were at an impasse.

The two sides planned to meet again Tuesday for a fifth day of talks, but David Johnson, spokesman for the U.S. delegation, said the time and place of the negotiations had not yet been set.

One dispute was over an earlier U.S. offer to expand legal Cuban immigration, perhaps to about 20,000 people a year, in exchange for President Fidel Castro's promise to stop Cubans from fleeing to the United States.

Cuba reportedly responded with a proposal to increase legal immigration to at least 100,000 people.

A State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Cuban proposal was unacceptable. Chief U.S. negotiator Michael Skol entered the Cuban U.N. mission alone Monday to deliver the U.S. response.

Cuban diplomats did not comment after the Monday meeting.

About 200 people gathered outside the Cuban mission during the talks to protest Cuba's communist regime and urge the Clinton administration not to give in to Castro's demands.

As they began shouting, "Cuba Si, Castro No," louder and louder, Cuban mission staff began blasting pro-government popular music from loudspeakers placed outside the windows on the first floor of the 10-story building.

Cuba's chief delegate, Ricardo Alarcon, has said the refugee crisis cannot be solved unless the United States agrees to talk about lifting its 32-year-old economic embargo against Cuba.

The United States insists migration is a separate issue and refuses to discuss lifting the embargo before Castro implements democratic reforms.

Only about 2,700 Cubans are expected to get U.S. immigration visas this year. That's less than a tenth of the more than 30,000 people who have left Cuba aboard rickety rafts and boats this year, most of them in the past month.

By Monday afternoon, the Coast Guard had picked up 683 more Cubans at sea.

Haitian refugees who are being held with the Cuban refugees at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, threw rocks at American soldiers on Sunday to protest what they see as preferential treatment for the Cubans.

BUSINESS FORUM

Another step towards our goal

As we try to get back into the swing of things at the start of another year here at school, it's often hard to regain the focus we had during the last days of cramming for finals. The tan lines of summer are still with us; the frostbite of winter is still a long way away.

However, as assignments pile up and football season kicks off, we all find that somehow we have returned to the groove of our college routine.

Michael Martin
Business Editor

In the same way, we here at the Business Department of The Observer are continuing on the road to our goal of producing the most entertaining and informative section possible.

Our goals continue to be realistic; I know that there are very few people out there who grab their Observer on Tuesdays and Fridays and tear it open to the middle first so that they can catch up on the Business Briefs or the Market Roundup. Even though I myself have an overriding interest in the Business section, I don't get anywhere until I read Calvin and Hobbes and the Four Food Groups of the Apocalypse.

That said, we have still instituted some intriguing new features that we hope will become fixtures on the Business Page.

We are most pleased with the results and the response from two of these new additions in particular. The first of these is the Faculty Business Forum, a commentary by a member of the faculty on the news of the day in the world of business. Along with this we have instituted a Local Business Profile, where we engage in a deeper analysis of how a local enterprise relates to our college community and the business world around us.

The Wall Street Journal and the larger city papers like the Chicago Tribune and The New York Times all provide superb coverage of national and international business news. With that in mind, a reader is not going to turn to The Observer for the straight in-depth news reporting of economic events.

While we do provide an overview of the national news of the day, The Observer's Business section strive to specialize in analysis of the news of the business world and how it affects our unique situation as students on a college campus in a medium-sized city in northern Indiana.

If you are interested by the ways campus events relate to the business world or the ways the business world relates to campus life, I invite you to write for The Observer's Business Section. No experience is necessary, just a willingness to find out about our slice of the economic world.

There are a number of ways to go about this. You can sign up tonight at Activities Night, you can leave a message in the Business Editor's mailbox at The Observer office on the third floor of LaFortune Student Center, or else you can call the News Department at 631-5323 and tell them you want to write for the Business section. We'll give you a call back and work out exactly what types of assignments would interest you the most.

If you can write for the section, please do, because this section can only be as good as the people who put it together. I guarantee that we can arrange an assignment that will fit in with your other activities and responsibilities.

If you can't find the time, I hope you'll give the Business Section a chance when you're leaving through the paper between the Inside Column and Accent. We are getting closer to our goal every week.

Who knows, maybe someday we'll even be able to compete with Calvin and the Four Food Groups.

New York Tiffany's robbed

Associated Press

Two gunmen wearing black ski masks forced their way into the Tiffany & Co. store in midtown Manhattan while it was closed early Monday and made off with about $250,000 in jewelry, police said.

The robbers took one hour to overpower guards, pick out jeweled watches, bracelets and rings and take security video tapes, before disappearing into the empty streets, said police Capt. Sal Blando.

"They were very, very professional," Blando said at a news conference.

Detectives were questioning the guards and other employees to determine if the robbery was an inside job, Blando said. The Tiffany & Co. store was closed Monday and officials could not be reached for comment.

The unarmed guards told police that the heist began about midnight as one of them arrived at the store's employee entrance for his shift.

The gunmen ordered the guard to tell two on-duty guards that they were his cousins and needed to use the bathroom.

Once inside, the robbers tied up the three guards, plus a fourth who arrived minutes later, before snatching about 300 pieces of jewelry, police said.

Finally, the men forced the guards to take them to a second-floor security area to get the surveillance tapes. After the robbers fled, one of the guards worked himself free and called police.

Bayh praises unions in Labor Day address

Associated Press

The United States would be a much different place today if there were no unions, Gov. Evan Bayh said Monday.

Americans have good-paying jobs, a family leave policy and health care "because of the people in this state, in this country and the UAW," Bayh said at the United Auto Workers' annual Labor Day picnic.

Bayh was joined at the picnic by Secretary of State Joe Hagerty, who is seeking for the 2nd District Congressional seat, and Jim Jontz, who is running for the U.S. Senate.

About 1,500 people turned out for the picnic, which came just two weeks after UAW Local 663 waged a three-day strike against General Motors' Inland Fisher Guide plant.

GM assembly plants across the country were idled because of the strike, which UAW officials said was over subcontracting and health and safety issues. The strike ended after GM agreed to make 19 additional products at the Anderson plant.

The Labor Day picnic began as a way for union officials to thank their members for their support, said Lillian Halsell of Anderson.

"It was a way for the union officials to let the employees and their families know how important they are to them, and it has grown and grown and grown," she said.

While the UAW may be one of the best-known unions, auto workers are not the only ones who benefit from organized labor, said Bill Whiteman of Anderson.

"Look around — three-quarters of these people don't work at (Delco Remy America) or (Inland Fisher Guide)," he said. "That's what it's all about — the common, everyday worker."

Entrepreneur couple finds Labor Day special

Associated Press

Labor Day took on special meaning this year for Andrew and Sheri Gauthier, whose dream of running their own business came true this year.

The Gauthiers began Staffing Resources Inc., a temporary and job-replacement agency, three months ago. The company has placed more than 250 people — many of them unemployed and without marketable skills — in stable jobs.

"When you're working for someone else it's hard to get change. It's hard to serve the customer the way you think is best," Sheri Gauthier said.

"We stay in contact with our customers. We never want to be this distant force that changes two months too late."

The Gauthiers said they work long hours to make their business work, often spending 70 to 80 hours a week in the office. While owning their own business is more difficult than they thought it would be, the Gauthiers said it has been worth it.

"It's an immense responsibility, but it's also an immense satisfaction that there are 250 people out there relying on us for a paycheck," Andrew Gauthier said. "It's a good feeling to go home with."

Prices down, dollar up at Tokyo Exchange

Associated Press

The dollar opened marginally higher against the Japanese yen Tuesday, while prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange slipped further in early trading.

The dollar began trading at 99.08 yen, up 0.03 yen from Monday's Tokyo close and below its overnight London finish of 99.25 yen. New York currency markets were closed Monday for the national Labor Day holiday.

The dollar was moving narrowly in early Tokyo trading in the absence of major incentives, dealers said.

Trading was quiet also because North American players were on holiday.

The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average fell 48.51 points, or 0.24 percent, to 20,360.67 in the first 30 minutes of morning trading. On Monday, the average shed 244.65 points, or 1.18 percent, to 20,409.18.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all issues listed on the first section was down 5.46 points, or 0.34 percent, to 1,613. The TOPIX had fallen 22.68 points, or 1.38 percent, to 1,618.46 points the day before.

Prices slipped because of the dollar's weakness compared to its level in overnight dealings in London.

Family-run hotel thrives

Associated Press

The owner of a small roadside hotel here said he is more worried about train tracks than he is about competing with large, national hotel chains.

The South Shore train tracks run right behind the Blackhawk and Al and Sally's hotels, two small hotels that have operated along U.S. 12 for more than 40 years.

"They take a room for five nights, pay good money, and, 10 minutes later, they want out because of the noise," said Lester Chojnacki, owner of the 20-room Blackhawk.

Chojnacki said many tourists like the convenience of the Blackhawk and the 16-room Al and Sally's. Both hotels are minutes away from the Beverly Shore beaches.

Neither hotel seems to be a threat to the other. In fact, Chojnacki said he and his wife Bozena often trade customers with Al and Sally's depending upon availability.

Terry Morton said she chose to stay at the Blackhawk while her house in Chesterton is completed because of the reasonable weekly rates, an in-room refrigerator, cable television and the homelike atmosphere.

"It was something right out of the '50s," she said. "It looks like things have never changed. It has a 1950s decor but it's spotless, like brand new."

WIT AND LMAN FROM THE TIMES - PICTURE / 1994

EDITORIAL

What is Fire Home?

Being the only time of year when student apathy is not a problem, this would seem like an unlikely time to address the issue. Tonight is Student Activities Night, the proverbial potpourri of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

There is no question that everyone wants to be a part of something; however, when football season begins to fade and the snow drifts near the window sills, boredom inevitably sets in.

Well here is your chance to beat the banal and get involved. Yes, those trite words of wisdom are back.

Beyond boredom there are other reasons for checking out the J.A.C.C. tonight, like supporting your friends and sheer curiosity.

How many people actually know what Fire Home is? Or that we have a Students with AIDS Training organization, a Hapkido club or even a Baptist Student Union?

It is hard to believe that the community which offers such diverse activities and interests and has so much enthusiasm in the fall is the same community in which only 30 percent of the Saint Mary's student body voted in the last election and an overwhelming 60 percent for Notre Dame. You would think something as riveting as the NCAA women's basketball tournament would get people excited, yet only 2,296 Irish fans came to show their support.

There is plenty of time in life to do things which are in our own self-interests and, for most students, we only have four short years to be a part of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. Moreover, it is ironic that such a self-serving attitude exists to the degree that it does in a community whose founding purpose was to counter such a hedonistic mentality. At a university that is both spiritually powerful and intellectually dynamic, how can the numbness of mediocrity possibly exist?

Tonight is your chance to make a difference, to show that you care. Involvement is everything. Just remember that in February.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Women and Mass: Take a stand

Dear Editor:

On Sunday, Sept. 11, the University will have its Opening Day Mass in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart. At this Mass will be the faculty of the University, its officers, staff, and students. Fifty or sixty male priests will cocreate the Mass. As a faculty member, I have attended this ceremony for well over three decades.

This summer, John Paul II, the leader of the Catholic Church, proclaimed that women can never serve as cocreators in any Mass, including the Opening Day at our University, and further, that the question of equal, open status for women in the Catholic Church is "non-debatable."

I believe this University, its faculty, officers, staff, and students must confront a profound question: Is the Mass, as presently constituted, an appropriate ceremony for the opening of this University?

We have much talent here to develop a ceremony that is not a direct attack on the ability, status, commitment, and concern of our women colleagues, staff, and students. I hope we have the leadership and sense of solidarity to find an answer to this challenge to the University.

Commercialization disserves Irish

Dear Editor:

This is a response to the nonsensical dialogue concerning the popularization of a so-called symbol of Irishness: "The Leprechaun." As usual, someone with cultural sensitivity wrote a letter expressing his concern over an issue of utmost importance for those of us who truly value our Irish-American nature. And, of course, as usual an impetuous (and arrogant) group of ND fans refuse to acknowledge anything wrong with the Americanization, or velleitization, of their truly proud heritage.

The Leprechaun, either the movie or the cheerleader, represents an affront to Irish dignity. Along with "Irish Spring" soap and "Lucky Charms" cereal, Irishness is sold and bought. And true Irishness cannot be so! This cute, two-fisted emblem fits into the same category as the Cleveland Indians, or Florida State Seminoles. It is disgusting at times how crass and commercial our society has become. And also it is scary how "assimilated" Irish-Americans have become, forgetting a history of famine, glory, hardship, and beauty.

It is even more disturbing how these self-proclaimed druids of Irish-American culture remain blind. At a University with a supposed intellectual elite, these students represent a situation all too common close-minded, conservative, pseudo-cultural babble. Or, it could be perhaps called passive racism.

It is disgusting at times how crass and commercial our society has become.

Michael Hill ends his viewpoint ("A proud people, a rich culture," Sept. 2, 1994) with a typical close-minded approach: tie in non-related issues in an attempt to discredit a valid concern. What does Hill's call for a and end to abortions have to do with Irish-American concerns? To be truly Irish-American means to really have a concern with issues of assimilation, and the widespread ignorance of the burgeoning peace process in Northern Ireland.

If one student, Administrator, or teacher could see past the misty shroud of deceptive Notre Dame tradition, they would see the grotesqueness of a cultural trivialization. To be truly Irish-American means to be a student of the past and present, to reject and fight against commercialization of our culture, to seek one's roots, and to stand up to the racism presented in a cunning and loosely accepted form of the "Fighting Irish."

The Fighting Irish definitely have no credible link with our proud heritage. Neither does the other cute commercial leprechaun, nor the guy with the pseudo-Irish accent in a pseudo-rural Ireland peddling soap.

As the Jolly Beggarmen put it: "They met them face to face with the courage of the race. . . God save Ireland said the heroes, God save Ireland said them all." God save Ireland from the "Fighting Irish."

Prepare for the battle off the field

A party playbook to control our opponent

BY Ryan J. Grabow
N.R.E.M.T.

With the Michigan game less than a week away, most of us are busy planning for the first big "Party Weekend" of the year. Friends and relatives from around the country will be here to "Party with the Irish"—before, during, and after our victory over the Wolverines. Seniors are gearing up for their last season with the Irish, the Frosh are awaiting their first home football weekend, and everyone else is ready to party.

With cases staked to the ceiling and taps flowing freely, the campus will be rockin'. As this Bacchanalian feast of sights, sounds, and tastes quickly approaches, here's our "Party Playbook" to control "our opponent," this weekend while the Irish control Michigan on the field.

Where it Goes. Alcohol: When a drink reaches the stomach several things happen, 1) Some of the alcohol is absorbed into the bloodstream 2) Most is passed on to the small intestine, where it is absorbed into the bloodstream at a much faster rate than in the stomach and 3) The alcohol remaining in the stomach is slowly broken down by an enzyme, usually at a rate of 1 ounce of pure alcohol per hour (most beers contain 0.6-0.8 ounces pure alcohol, and most shots contain 0.5 ounces pure alcohol).

The speed at which alcohol is passed on to the small intestines, where the fastest rate of absorption occurs, depends on two factors: the contents of the stomach prior to drinking and the ingredients of the drink consumed.

Fat-rich meals such as whole milk or pizza help to delay the emptying of the stomach contents into the small intestine, thus indirectly slowing the rate of alcohol absorption. A greater amount of the alcohol will be broken down by the stomach enzyme the longer it remains in the stomach.

When alcohol is present in a drink high in sugar or carbonation, such as: pina colodas, margaritas, fruit punches, rum and cokes, scotch and sodas, gin and tonics, etc. the alcohol will pass through to the small intestine at a much faster rate, than if the alcohol is simply diluted with water as is the case for most beers.

Because the alcohol reaches the small intestines at a faster rate you will feel the effects of the drink faster as well. Bottom line: Have Pappa John's before you party, and pace yourself.

Why Me? Hangovers: Several myths have developed over the years concerning ways in which one can avoid the effects of a hangover. Some such fallacies are: Consuming a large quantity of fatty foods, drinking cooking oil, taking two aspirin, or vitamin B before drinking or drinking more alcohol, or taking vitamin B before going to bed or after "arising from the dead" the next morning.

The reason none of these "remedies" work is due to the "darkside of alcohol". The absorption of water by the kidneys is inhibited by alcohol, which increases urination and loss of water, causing dehydration, and the accompanying feeling of death the next morning.

In addition, the excess of alcohol in your blood caused by over consumption, forces the liver to work overtime to break it down. This interferes with the liver's ability to metabolize fats, and raises the level of lactic acid in your muscles, which makes you irritable and generally "fun to be around" all day. The alcohol still in your blood also causes the blood vessels in your head to swell and throb, adding to the headache you already have due to dehydration.

Finally, REM sleep (dream sleep which makes you rested) is also disrupted by a night of heavy drinking, causing you to have either very little REM sleep or very violent, vivid dreams, both of which bring very little rest for the body.

To make the morning after a little more bearable there are a few strategies you can employ. To combat dehydration: 1) Drink a glass of pure water (no pop or soda) during the day for each drink (shot, beer, etc.) you plan to have that night. 2) Alternate between an alcoholic beverage and a glass of water while drinking (you may mock it, but it works) or 3) After you get home drink a glass of water for each drink you had that night.

I'm sure you already know how difficult it is to drink lots of water after a night of drinking, here's why. Alcohol stimulates the production of stomach acid. Now think back to the axiom our high school chemistry teachers used: Adding water to acid is never placid—they don't mix well. That's why the water, although needed, is not a welcome addition to the party in your stomach.

If you want to take some form of pain killer at night or in the morning stick to aspirin or ibuprofen, the acetaminophen in Tylenol needs to be broken down by the liver, which is still working on the alcohol, because of this a stomach ache could result. Bottom line: If you want to play the game, you must pay the price. Drink lots of water.

The silly things we do. Drinking games: All games are not created equal. Some are childish fun, but not very dangerous, others belong on the same shelf as Russian Roulette, "Not Intended for People with a Brain". Don't put the paper down yet, you make the decisions, I'm just giving you the facts, here they are.

Jello Shots—harmless when you only do one or two, jello shots do have the potential to make last night's party your last ever. Since jello can hold a large amount of Everclear, without tasting completely gross, it is easy to suck down ten or twelve on your own, or even an entire pan if your hungry. Here comes the fun part, as the jello, mostly congealed sugar, begins to dissolve, all the alcohol in the "shots" is introduced to the stomach at the same time.

If you only have a few in you, the danger is present, but small; however, if you tried to impress everyone and sucked down ten Dixie cups you better hope your friends know rescue breathing and are sober enough to call 9-1-1.

Here's why: Suppose each jello shot has about 1/2 of an ounce of alcohol in it, if you consume 10 shots your intake of pure alcohol (I'm assuming your using Everclear) will actually be about 5 pure ounces, the equivalent of 5 Shots of Everclear or about 9 beers. This amount spread over an entire evening is large, but when consumed at the same time as is the case with Jello shots this amount can be deadly.

The sugar will speed the rate at which the alcohol is absorbed both by the stomach and the small intestines, thus very little of the alcohol will be broken down by the stomach. If all this pure alcohol enters the blood stream, it could very easily effect the respiratory center of the body causing you or your friends to stop breathing. The bottom line is limit three to a customer.

Funneling (beer bong) and chugging are dangerous forms of consumption for the same reason as jello shots, speed of consumption. Our bodies protect themselves from the stupid things our brains make them do with alcohol by making us throw-up and pass out before we can consume a deadly amount.

Funneling and chugging enable us to beat our bodies defenses, so that we can consume more alcohol than is humanly possible in normal circumstances. Basically, we're like little kids playing with fire, sooner or later we're going to get burned. Don't be stupid, enough said.

Here at Notre Dame it's difficult to discuss alcohol without feeling like someone is judging you or telling you what to do. My intention is not to tell you what to do, but rather to give you information so you can make your own decisions.

We're all in the same boat here at N.D. School is rough and most of us get stressed out after a tough week. Going out to the bars or hanging out with friends and tilting a few back is not only fun, but it helps many of us relax and unwind after a tough week.

Enjoy yourselves and have a good time. My only goal is to give you the facts you need to know so that everyone makes it to their graduation.

We pride ourselves on being a family here at Notre Dame, so we owe it to each other to be responsible when we party. Take a moment before you start partying this weekend to remember Mara Fox and what it means to be part of a family.

Good Luck and Stay Healthy!

stellar game for Taylor. He already had an interception and ended with three tackles.

"Bobby Taylor had an excellent game," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "He was a bright spot."

A spark on an otherwise damp day for the Irish defense. Praise from Notre Dame's coach was thin towards a defense that allowed Wildcat tailback Dennis Lundy to run rampant and Northwestern.

But there has always been praise for Taylor. It began his freshman year when he started seven games, and highlighted this year when Holtz gave Taylor his choice of assignments. Notre Dame's coach had Taylor penciled in at free safety, but then asked the defensive back for some advice.

"I asked Bobby coming into fall camp which one of our defensive backs he would like to see cover the opposing teams top receiver," Holtz said. "He said 'me,'"

Taylor was back at left cornerback the next day.

"The defensive system we play in puts a lot of pressure on the cornerbacks because we have to play a lot of man-on-man defense," Taylor said. "I have the most experience doing that."

Experience is thin across the Notre Dame secondary, making Taylor the anchor this season. Three-fourths of last year's starting secondary graduated, leaving Taylor and three players who had started a combined two games going into the Northwestern matchup. It is an athletic group, but one needing time to develop.

Time which Notre Dame doesn't have with Michigan visiting South Bend Saturday. Mercury Hayes and Amani Toomer head a talented Wolverine receiving corps.

"A lot of people have been putting down our secondary," Taylor said, "but I think we have a good group."

"We'll be ready for Michigan."

Taylor made

Irish cornerback Bobby Taylor is the cornerstone of the secondary.

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Editor

It's too bad such a play will never be recognized in the stat book.

In the third quarter of Saturday's Notre Dame-Northwestern game, cornerback Bobby Taylor scampered down the sidelines, ball cradled in his arms, and two points on his mind.

He had done what he has become best at in the country. . . cover wide receivers. Northwestern quarterback Tim Hughes had looked to his right and thrown to what he thought was an open target. The Longview, (Tex.) native saw it differently. He stepped up, took the pass between the numbers and was off to the races. A two point conversion failed for the Wildcats and an opportunity for Taylor to get his name in the scoring column.

"I was going along but then I got cramps or something," Taylor said smiling.

It was an excuse, but an acceptable one. Hughes cut Taylor off and herded him out of bounds. No two points, not even credit for an interception.

Scoring would have been icing on a

Despite the stats showing just one interception, Bobby Taylor did plenty to prove his worth.

Irish top Mountaineers, bump record to 5-0

Peters and Harris lead again as Irish continue their early streak

By BETSY BAKER
Sports Writer

Their record is unscathed. Their play remains sharp as a tack.

With a combination of fundamentals and smarts, experience and youth, the Notre Dame volleyball team is off to a 5-0 start. After sweeping the Shamrock Invitational last weekend, the Irish continued their winning streak with a victory in four games over the Mountaineers of West Virginia.

The Irish success was led once again by the experience of senior Christy Peters and the talent of freshman Angie Harris, who had 17 kills each in last night's victory, but Harris and Peters are not the only players to wreak havoc against Irish opponents.

Sophomore middle blocker Jennifer Briggs contributed a strong performance at the net and in the back court, while senior co-captain Nicole Coates came in off the bench and supplied the Irish with 9 kills.

"Jen has been making good digs for us," said coach Debbie Brown of Briggs, "and has been a very effective blocker. She makes the outside more effective."

Brown attributes the success of the team to strong outside hitting performances and consistency in the setting and serving of the team.

One of the keys of Irish success thus far this season has been its outside attack, and it has been nearly flawless.

Whether referring to jump serves that seem to travel the speed of light, or "short" serves that leave opponents flustered and frustrated, diving to get a piece of the ball before it hits the floor, the Irish have used both power and intelligence to catch opponents off guard, manipulating their weaknesses and taking advantage of their mistakes.

Coach Brown is pleased with the great start of the season, but agrees that although it should get more exciting as the competition heightens, the road will definitely begin to get tougher for the Irish.

They are looking ahead to Wednesday's match against Georgia Tech to be much more of a challenge than anything the Irish have seen in their first five games.

"Georgia Tech is a very versatile, well-coached team," says Brown. "They play smart and execute the concepts of the game. We definitely look for them to be more of a match for us."

The Observer/Jake Peters

Freshman Angie Harris continues to shine for the undefeated Irish, with 20 digs.

49'ers rout Raiders 44-14

Ricky Watters (right) scored for San Francisco, while Tim Brown hauled in a TD catch for Los Angeles. Also, Jerry Rice broke the NFL record for most career touchdowns.
