Off To A Good Start.

With 950 students at Holy Communion yesterday morning the Mission which began last night has the blessing of God and promises splendid success.

Confessions in the Morning.

There are physical limitations to the hearing of confessions during the morning Mass. Not more than 120 students can be accommodated. Wherefore it behooves one to use ordinarily good judgment and attend to this detail the night before.

Your Mother's Wish.

Students who may be in doubt about the propriety of making a Mission would be well to consult their mothers, as they would in any great worldly matter.

Q. E. D.

Ninety-eight students received Holy Communion at the eight-o'clock Mass for off-campus students yesterday--All of which goes to show once more that opportunity and environment are the two great factors in the religion of the Notre Dame man. 275 students attended the Mass. The other 300 will learn gradually that the University is trying to do something for them and will show their appreciation.

Mission Goods.

A few religious articles have been placed on sale at the door of the church. If what you want is not there, you may leave a note and have your want supplied, at least before the end of the freshman Mission next week.

Art, Artistically Presented.

The book store and the news stand are now supplied with the handsome brochure listing the paintings in the art galleries of the University. A competent guide escorts visitors through the galleries every afternoon. There is great spiritual advantage in the study of some of the masterpieces which have been gathered here for your inspiration. This is a good week for such spiritual diversion.

Reading is Good for the Soul.

Spiritual reading helps to make solid the impulses received during the Mission. The pamphlet rack, the general library and the Apostolate of Religious Reading (in the Brownson Study Hall) have suggestions for you.

Thy Brother's Keeper.

Thy Brother's Keeper.

When St. Ignatius was a student at the University of Paris he nagged the life out of his pal until he got some spirituality into him. His pal, a vain society worldling, became one of the world's greatest missionaries. He is called St. Francis Xavier. He is said to have baptised one million people.
