The Archbishop's Roseate View.

His Grace, Archbishop Hanna, of San Francisco, gave a cordial welcome to the team on the Sunday morning following the game. (You may have seen the picture taken in front of the cathedral.) The Archbishop said the Mass for the team and preached on Catholic education. At breakfast he wanted to talk football, and in spite of great pressure of other business, he talked about the game for an hour and a half. He had followed it by radio, and seemed to know every play. In final summary he said: "After all, the Notre Dame players simply toyed with Stanford. Only once during the entire game were they called upon to show their mettle--- on the one-yard line--- and they pushed Stanford back magnificently. It was brilliant."

The Off-Campus Mass.

It is reported that attendance at the Mass for off-campus students has increased in the most gratifying manner, and there is great devotion among those who attend. The number of Communions last Sunday was 124, and it was noted particularly that practically all the students were provided with prayer books. Campus students please take notice.

Such is Fame.

Two elderly but respectable prominent citizens of New Orleans attended the Loyola banquet to the team. Before the banquet they asked what game these boys played. They were also at pains to learn whether they had played many games this year, and whether they had won any. Chuck Collins figured it out that they came to the banquet to get something to eat.

The Sunshine Medal.
Another honor awaits the football team. It is the gold medal of the Sunshine Club of San Francisco. This is an honor reserved for such dignitaries as the Holy Father, the Archbishop, etc., but at a meeting of the club a week ago Sunday it was unanimously voted to the Notre Dame football team. It will come on for presentation in due course of time.

The Sunshine Club is an organization of youthful advocates of spiritual sunshine. Its seat is the Mome of the Aged. Its members are children of eighty years and upwards. Its founder and supreme director is the Rev. "Sunshine" Murphy, a distinguished and zealous priest, who has, by advocating daily Communion for his charges, put real sunshine into their hearts. If you don't believe it you should see them jig and hear them sing. Jim Crowley will tell you all about it when he gets back. He was green with envy when he watched a 93-year-old Scotch woman do a Highland fling.

The University of Wisconsin has had some atrocious publicity the last couple of years. Michigan held the limelight for that sort of thing for some time, but Misconsin seems to have the edge right now. The latest broadside reported in the Chicago Tribune is a statement attributed to Judge Ole A. Stolen, of the Dane County Superior Court, which alleges that "all physicians in the city agree that 60 percent of the young men in Madison are or have been infected in some degree."

If this statement is true, the outlook for an intellectual aristocracy in the state is appalling: it means physical and moral degeneracy in the educated families.—When the world casts aside and blasphemes what Notre Dame cherishes—daily Communion and devotion to the Blessed Virgin —its future is full of woe.
