Remember Joe Today.

If any boy at Notre Dame should feel he has nothing to be thankful for, let him drop in to see Joe, Eddie Mahon's brave little seven-year-old son. A weight holds his right arm up to help the knitting of a triple fracture; poor circulation has made the upper arm a mass of sores; asthma often keeps him from a wink of sleep. But Joe has a beautiful light in his eyes and the sweetest smile you ever saw and he will not complain. The roses the boys sent him he gave to the Little Flower. Three weeks he has suffered now, and it will be three more weeks before the arm can be bent back again. Joe lives at 211 Niles Road. At least pray for him.
