This Week's Red Hat.

This week's red hat is conferred urbis et orbis on the lay cardinals who apologize to their broadminded friends for the Index of Forbidden Books. They are of three classes.

1. The Kings, who maintain that art is neither moral nor immoral, simply unmoral;
2. The Jacks, those brave souls who "dare to think" - the flat-chested school;
3. The Deuces, who "Face the great realities of life" (meaning the unrealities) without flinching - the flapper school.

Lenten Devotions Tonight.

7:00 - upperclassmen. The sermon will conclude the series begun during Forty Hours.
7:45 - freshmen, and students from St. Edward's and Morrissey Halls. Father Clancy will preach the whole series.

The Novena For a Happy Marriage.

This annual Novena, which is directed to St. Joseph, will begin Friday, March 10, and end on the eve of the feast. (The Bulletins issued during this Novena last year will be found at the pamphlet rack - a bound set of eight.)

The Religious Survey.

The results of the survey made last March will be ready for distribution by Saturday of this week. Envelopes for mailing them may be had at the pamphlet rack in Dillon Hall. Send a copy home. The Catholic high schools and colleges, the alumni, and the pastors of the dioceses in the central states will receive copies from this office.

Thanksgiving.

If you can't spend at least seven minutes in thanksgiving after Holy Communion you need to review your catechism and examine your conscience.

Why You Should Make The Novena.

From the Echo, via the Ligourian, we take the following story presented by Ella Frances Lynch, founder of the International League of Teacher-Mothers:

"Newspaper Despatch, Dec. 15, 1932.- Robert _____, twelve years old and honor student in Junior high school, hanged himself with the belt of his Boy Scout uniform from his closet door early today. Robert had intended to be a surgeon and had built a biological laboratory in his room. He had read a great deal in anatomy, chemistry and physics. His teachers said he was four years ahead of his classmates in mental development.

"'Heaven help the poor mother,' exclaims one. 'Where was she?'

"The mother was in Washington attending the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. She writes on problems of child training for popular magazines. The boy lived with a neighbor."

Don't you think you'd better make the Novena for a Happy Marriage?
