

University of Notre Dame
RELIGIOUS BULLETIN
May 4, 1933

STUDY SUGGESTION:

Berlingske Tidende, Copenhagen

No, dear reader, this is not a Movie Of A Man Who Forgot To Send His Mother A Spiritual Bouquet For Mother's Day And Then Got Desperate About It (he still has nine days for that); no, it is a graphic presentation of Oscar Liljencrants Edstrom's immortal lyric, "How To Keep Your Mind On The Books After Easter":

Your gorgeous charms, dear girl,
Have made my young head whirl;

And since you've jilted me
In spite of love's last plea

Behold, I raise my gun
And soon the deed is done —

And you, my pretty belle,
Are busted all to heck!

FIRST FRIDAY TOMORROW

Reserve a place in the line for confession tonight. What with the show and one thing or another you might forget — and if you don't start your Mother's Day Novena tomorrow your mother will conclude that, after all, it was hardly worth while.

PRAYERS: Deceased — Brother Malachy, C.S.C., a former prefect in Brownson Hall; Rev. John Broderick, Adams, Mass.; an aunt of Ed Lynch; a friend of a student. A sister of Ed Butler (Badin Hall) underwent an operation yesterday. Four special intentions.