

Rosary instructions
Cavanaugh Chapel at 8:00 P.M. Friday...

University of Notre Dame
Religious Bulletin
May 12, 1938

Missal Instructions
at 8:30 same place;
by Father Hooyboer.

... And Sudden Death.

Thank God the following telegram did not refer to any of the students on campus who have not as yet made their Easter Duty:

DAN FOX '35 KILLED INSTANTLY YESTERDAY
IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT. SUGGEST SPIRITUAL BOUQUET FOR HIS MOTHER.

WALT JOHNSON,
KINTON, OHIO.

On your behalf, the Prefect of Religion has wired Dan's Mother that you will gladly offer your assistance at Mass and your Holy Communions for Dan's repose. Everybody band together in fraternal charity. The first of you to die will surely want to be remembered in the prayers of all the rest. May Dan Fox rest in peace!

And will the local Easter Duty Boys please quit taking chances!

You Can't, Eh?

Virgil Creesebantz, in Freshman Hall, claims it's all very silly, this idea of offering up Communion for another. "How can you receive for someone else?" he throws at you, "you can't be baptized for another person."

Listen, Virgil; suppose you're digging ditches for the new annex to the spaghetti factory. Your wife is Suzie. All day you exercise your bulging muscles. Your boss sees you working very hard. At night he pays you.

You get home. True, you can't give all your work to Suzie; part of it belongs to you alone, the added strength your muscles gained, the peace of mind your hard day earned for you. But you can give her half your pay, or even all of it. And you can even ask your boss a favor for her, since you've proved yourself his friend.

The strength of soul you gained from your Communion is for you. Likewise your union with Our Lord. But with the spiritual coin you've earned, the satisfactory value of a good Communion, you're free to pay the debt another's sins incur, if God will take it. In any case, you're free to offer it. Besides, you're a friend of God's. And you can ask Him favors for your friends, best of all when you are in His Real Presence!

So don't forget, ye doubting Virgils, offer up some share at least of your Communion tomorrow morning for Dan's repose. His Mother won't forget to offer part of hers for you.

And, by the way, save a wee part of each Communion till the end of school for the Easter Duty Boys. Thanks a lot.

Statistics Up To Date.

So far the boxes in the various halls have yielded 764 questionnaires as follows:

Cavanaugh	87	Dillon	61	St. Ed's	35
Zahm	85	Edin	51	Sorin	35
Brownson	80	Lyons	49	Walsh	29
Freshman	76	Alumni	44	Carroll	25
Howard	65	Morrissey	42

Please hurry in a few more.

PRAYERS: (deceased) grandmother of George (Walsh) and Charles (Freshman) Flogger; brother of Louis Giragi (Walsh); mother of Louis Charles Brown '34. One special int.