

7:20 Mass in Sorin
Thursday morning for Jim Magee '38,.....

University of Notre Dame
Religious Bulletin
October 12, 1938

....seriously ill; at request of the senior Aeronautical Engineers.

Tomorrow Is Founder's Day.

That means a change in schedule and a day off from classes. Better make note of what's up:

1. Mass in hall chapels at 7:25 instead of 6:25; at 7:00 and 7:30 in the Basement Chapel for Brownson and Carroll. Breakfast at 8:00.
2. Late facilities as usual in Cavanaugh and Howard till 10:00; in Dillon till noon.
3. Solemn Mass, 8:30. Sermon by Father Miltner.
4. No Adoration during the day, except after supper, 6:30 to 7:15, followed by Benediction for those who wish to attend. (Watch this-- no bells will boom to announce it.)
5. Nightprayer in all hall chapels at 7:00 or 7:30 according to custom.

But don't think tomorrow is just a day off. It's a quasi-holyday here, commemorating the magnificent courage, faith, and hard work of the venerable Founder of Notre Dame: Father Edward Sorin, C.S.C.

What you enjoy on the campus today is the fruit-- Father Sorin would certainly tell you-- of one thing more than anything else, limitless confidence in the Blessed Mother of God. The Grotto, the Dome, the Lady Chapel are but three of Father Sorin's thanksgiving memorials to Mary. She was his best friend, guided him in everything he did. For her he built Notre Dame. Or she built it for him. It's true either way.

Nothing would please Father Sorin more tomorrow than if you were to make a little visit to the Grotto in his place. Say a decade of the beads that Our Lady's blessing may rest till the end of time on his work. A quite appropriate pilgrimage would lead you out of the Grotto toward St. Mary's. Stop off at the community cemetery. Under the large crucifix at the head of the plot lie the relics of Notre Dame's saintly founder.

It was not October 13th when Father Sorin arrived on the shore of St. Mary's Lake. How come, then, the celebration tomorrow? It's the feast of St. Edward, King of England, Confessor of the Faith, and Patron of Edward Sorin. That's why. Between Cavanaugh and Zahm you will find the saint's statue. He holds the Church aloft in his hand.

If every man in St. Edwards's Hall got up for Mass and Communion tomorrow-- after all it's their special feast, too-- probably the crown would pop off the saint's head. To avoid this iconoclasm, arrange tonight 'mongst yourselves what ONE fellow will stay in bed in the morning. A flat one hundred percent in St. Ed's might be even too much for St. Edward himself!

Another Communion Breakfast.

St. Louisans hereabouts are congregating in Zahm Chapel tomorrow at 8:00 as Father Molter celebrates the votive Mass of the Blessed Sacrament for their special intentions. That's what the Bulletin calls capitalizing well on a free day: a Communion Breakfast. Sincerest congratulations to alert, devout St. Louisans.

One of the club members will read aloud the epistle and gospel proper to the Mass of the Blessed Sacrament. This will surely make all appreciate better the meaning and privilege of their Holy Communion. (Father Schaerf will be on hand to hear confessions).
PRAYERS: Ill, (seriously) mother of Howard Essick (Carroll); Mrs. A.J. Sernett.
Deceased: Mrs. George Nawn, friend of Fr. Gartland, C.S.C. Four special intentions.