Don't Go Scotch.

There are two senses to the phrase. Both are important. Please take note of them.

1. "Don't be stingy." Say a generous No if someone tries to set you up to one of these tricky parties-after-the-game.
2. "Don't be stingy." Say a generous Yes tomorrow when that early bell rings. Up right away. Wash, dress, down to chapel. Skibos have nice, strong, big backfield. Notre Dame boys, also nice, strong big defense, still need prayers, your help. Get behind them.

St. Christopher Docks The Queen Mary.

You read about it in the papers, how the tugboats went on strike. Commodore Robert B. Irving, master of the Queen Mary, wondered whether he should try to dock alone.

"The weather conditions were ideal," he said." (quoth the New York Times) "It was high water and there was no wind. Even then I did not feel so certain about it when I was swinging the Queen Mary toward the pier from the middle of the river. Then I took out my little gold medal of St. Christopher, the patron saint of travelers, which I always carry in my pocket on a small chain. I looked at his kindly face and asked: "Shall I do it?" and it seemed the saint smiled at me and replied: "Carry on, old man, and you'll do it" and I did."

Well, it would be hard to say how much St. Christopher really had to do with landing the large liner safely. Much would depend on skipper Irving's faith. The medal cannot be used the same way as a rabbit's foot-- like a charm or a good luck omen. That is why we take this occasion to remind you about your own St. Christopher medal. It is a sacramental, blessed by the Church. You gain indulgences, because of it, only when you are properly disposed to gain indulgences. That means the state of grace, a right intention, faith in the power of the Church's prayer.

Which further reminds us: the combination medal you wear invokes not only protection from good St. Christopher but is also a substitute for the scapular. Now, in order to gain the indulgences proper to the scapular confraternities you must be properly enrolled by a priest endowed with the faculty to enrol you. Many of you, particularly freshmen, have received your medal but have not yet been enrolled.

Enrollment in the scapular and in the Miraculous Medal will be announced shortly. Meantime those who have not obtained their medal, please do so at once. Then you and we will both save time: there will be no needless repetition ad infinitum of enrollings.
