Maid In Armor.

The renowned chaplain of the Catholic students at Yale University, Father T. L. Riggs, will talk in Washington Hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock on Saint Joan of Arc.

To Notre Dame.

O, wondrous Dome, of radiant glistening gold
What wealth of charm and culture you unfold!
What beauteous art, entrancing to the eye,
Directing souls of mortals to the sky,
God's firmament of mysteries and light,
Reflecting loveliness each day and night.
True symbol of the Christian spirit here,
Dispelling doubt and prejudice and fear;
Ennobling all the visions of mankind
And helping them the heavenly way to find.
Blest spirit, be our guardian to the end,
Our counsellor and sympathetic friend,
That we, with all the saints, shall find
the peace
Of our Divine Redeemer, with release
From all the stress and cares of life and see
The grandeur of love's immortality!

(Lines penned by a non-Catholic minister, visiting Notre Dame, "enroute to Rome.")

Remember....

As you romp over the golf course in 69 (or 169); or walk (?) to town; or work up a healthy sweat in the "Rockne," remember there are others who can't move a limb or swing a club or sock a ball because they must lie quietly on their backs in bed...

Two recent grads, Pat Degan and George Bates, are both forced to take it easy in the Green Hills of Vermont..... They want your prayers..... Every Notre Dame man will want to respond to their request.... Why not Mass and Communion tomorrow for them both and a frequent visit to Grotto or Calvary or Log Chapel for their recovery?

Yes, There Is A Danger.

Somebody begs to disagree. "There's no harm in kissing. I'll kiss whom I want and when." This favorite of the lassies is trying to out-valentine Rudolph Valentino. Here is a quatrain for the mighty breaker of hearts to scan:

Alas, how easily things go wrong!
A sigh too deep or a kiss too long.

There follows a mist and a weeping
rain
And life is never the same again.
