From The Diary of A Guardian Angel.

What a week end! When the Almighty put me in charge of "Goon" McGutsky I thought I had an easy assignment. And I did, until "Goon" started to take week ends away from the Notre Dame campus. He hitch hiked to Chicago, and I had to thumb along with him. I've never been to so many places in a single day in all my life as an angel: taverns, movies, dance floors, a date at the beach, and then to close the day - a midnight ride on the "L" "to cool off." I shouted at "Goon" time and time again to be prudent. But his mind was so set on "doing" the town before he settled down to study for the finals and wipe out those three pink slips that he could not hear me. I can't carry on like this much longer. His speed is too exhausting, and my wings wilt when he repeatedly calls girls "dames". And I swooned when "Goon" knelt down at 3:30 a.m. to say his night prayers and to ask God to protect him from harm.

Get Ready For The Exams!

The Novena for the final examinations will begin at the end of this week. Exams will be given August 31 (Mon.) and September 1 (Tues.). Start digging in.

What Two Notre Dame Men Say About Holy Communion.

"I go to Holy Communion every day because I need God's help in temptations and because I can do so much good for the Poor Souls. My Communions make me feel so much nearer God and I can not describe the wonderful feeling that comes over me."

"Frequent Communion gives, first, a peaceful conscience; second, strength against temptation; third, greater power of concentration in studies and religion."

Twelve Candles Burn In The Church.

If you visited the church yesterday afternoon or today, you no doubt wondered why burning candles spotted the walls of the church at various places. The anniversary of the consecration of the church is celebrated today. The church was blessed and the first Mass was offered in it August 15, 1875. In 1888, the year of Fr. Sorin's golden jubilee, it was consecrated. There are twelve small crosses painted on the inside walls of the church, marking where at the consecration the walls were anointed with Chrism. A bracket and candle are set before each cross, to be lit upon the anniversary of the consecration.

The Seniors Disappoint Their Pals.

The Communion records for the last five days of the Novena for the Notre Dame service men, living and dead, show that many seniors have not learned to make sacrifices for their friends.
