A Tribute To A Notre Dame Man.

"One of his strongest characteristics was his wholehearted devotion to Our Blessed Mother. When the talk of any of the young smart-alec doctors bordered on smut, his quiet reserve was sufficient check to put the conversation back in safer channels."

This was the praise paid to Lieut. Louis Cenni, '40, Brandy Camp, Pa., in a letter announcing his death which came from a co-worker of his internship days. Doctor Cenni was with the Medical Corps in the Pacific when death came.

Some men are heroes long before they fall from an enemy shell. They are God's heroes. They met the enemies of Christ in the workshop, over the conference table, in the smoking compartment, and they fought them valiantly. When men like Doctor Cenni appear before the Judgment Seat of God, they are not alone in pleading their cause. Our Lady and all their good works will be there to testify in their favor. God pins no medals. He gives Eternal Life, the reward that rust nor moth can consume. Pray for Lieut. Cenni, and imitate him.

Thanks To . . .

Lieut. Jack Hitchcox, '38, on behalf of all Notre Dame's Gold Star parents, for the High Mass he is having offered for the souls of all the deceased N.D. servicemen.

Bill Russell (Z), for his kindness in sending his radio down to the hospital to Ed Voll, a floormate in Zahm, who is recovering from an operation.

The Mass servers who responded to the BULLETIN'S appeal last week and are faithful to their assignments in the church.

A Pep Talk From The Pacific.

"Tell that gang of practical Catholics under your wing to get to Mass and Communion often. They will never know how precious it is until it is no longer within walking distance. Also tell your late sleepers that they don't know what a privilege they have in the comfort, beauty and serenity of the circle of Jesus and Our Lady. Often we hold Mass wherever we can find a spot to set up an altar. We seldom have anything to sit on -- and those steel decks are pretty hard. Do we gripe? I'll say we don't, because we are so darned happy to be able to celebrate Mass with Christ once more." (A Chief Pharmacist Mate)

An Axe To Grind.

You may be guilty. Take a look. Are you the student who walked into Sunday Mass with a top-piece that had all the markings of an undershirt? That was the Number 1 impropriety at Mass. There were others tho. Cleanliness is a sign of respect for the House of the Lord. Some people can't recognize lack of neatness. If you are in that class, ask your roommate to inspect your attire before you leave your room.
