Last Mass 7:20, Sorlin.

GOOD BYE
BE GOOD

A Thought For Draftees.

The scene, a bus station over the way,
The time, early morning snow-streaked and gray,
The players, a woman with graying hair
Who was bidding farewell to a youth straight and fair,
Just as I passed them she kissed the boy,
You instantly knew him her pride and joy,
Then she gave him a look which I understood
As she quietly murmured, "Good-bye, son, be good!"

The bus pulled away with a rumble and roar,
The woman looked after it, heart heavy, sore,
Then she braced her shoulders, and head held high,
She mingled once more with the passers-by;
I can't get this quickie of life from my mind,
I somehow can't quite leave its impress behind.
But I would not forget that prayer if I could,
That mother to boy, "Good-bye, son, be good!"
