GEORGE OBERMEIER DIES IN NEW YORK

George Obermeier, a junior aeronautical engineer of Dillon hall and a resident of Pontiac, Michigan, died a few hours after the game last Saturday. He suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, according to the report sent to the campus.

George fell ill during the second quarter of the Army game. His roommate and friend took him to the First Aid station in the stadium for medical attention. When George failed to respond to treatment, the doctor transferred him to Morrisania Hospital near the Yankee Stadium. He was in a coma. Death came at seven o'clock that evening.

George took the student special to the game, and he went with the other students to St. Agnes' church in New York to assist at Mass for the team. We do not know what went on in George's mind during that Mass. His friends knew that he was slightly ill during the later part of the train trip. God could have used that sickness as a premonition of impending danger and death - He often works that way - so that when George assisted at his last Mass, he may have very generously offered the sacrifice of his life to God the Father in union with Christ's re-offering of Himself, thus sanctifying his death, and preparing the man for a quick entrance into Heaven.

A man's actions tell what is going on in his heart. And so the small crucifix that George placed on his desk where his eye would always see it, lets us understand what motivated his life.

Tomorrow morning every student should rise on time to assist at Mass and receive Holy Communion for George in Sacred Heart-Church at 6:30.

The Train Accident.

When the special student train came to a jerky stop in the South Bend station last Monday night, a coupling broke on one of the cars and detached the steam line. Larry McLafferty and Marshall Prunty of Badin hall were thrown off the train to the ground. Both were caught in a blast of steam. They are in Epworth Hospital with second degree burns. Larry suffered a gash in his head which required a number of stitches to close. Both are resting comfortably. Your prayers will shorten their stay in the hospital.

The Poor Souls.

On Wednesday a Novena of Masses started for the deceased persons you want included in these nine Masses. Write out a list of names you want remembered and drop the slip in the envelope attached to your bulletin board. There is still time for your friends and relatives to be helped by seven Masses.
