When Tables Turn

When He agrees to meet the girl
He wouldn't think of being late,
It would be almost sacrilege
To make that gorgeous creature wait;
But frequently he's late for church
And while he's there he acts quite bored,
And doesn't seem to realize
His Sunday date is with the Lord.

He never fails to be on time
For games, although he has to race,
And when the old gong sounds for meals
You'll find him standing in his place;
But when the Sabbath Day rolls round
And church bells ring, he seems to plod,
It doesn't matter much to him
What time he keeps his date with God.

Sometime he'll want a favor when
Life's sunny skies have turned to gray,
And if he sees no other hope
He'll get down on his knees and pray;
You'll hear him pleading with the Lord:
"I need it now! I cannot wait!"
And what an awful groan will rise
If the Lord happens to be late. (T.E.B.)

Rash Judgment.

The postoffice department in New York City received a number of complaints regarding the loss of letters mailed at the La Guardia Airport. Postal inspectors set to work at once. Some posed as laborers, others as passengers; all kept their eyes open. Immediately after the inspectors reported their findings, the trash cans at the airport were removed. That ended the mystery.

It seems that the inspectors discovered that many of the foreign passengers were depositing mail in the trash cans, which resemble the mail slots at the railroad stations and airfields in Europe.

Don't be quick to judge people and their motives. It took a little sleuthing in New York to discover that no thief was stealing the airport mail. If investigation were possible, you would find good reason behind the actions of most people. So be slow to criticise. Do a little fact-finding, and if that is out of order, then charity demands that you refrain from forming an opinion of your neighbor.
