A College Youth

He was a busy college youth
Whose classes kept him on the run;
The day was never long enough
For all the things he would have done;
And yet despite his many tasks
He went at least once every day
Down to the Grotto after class,
And stopped in at the church to pray.

And when his graduation came
Besides the honors he had won
He had acquired a deep love
For Mary and for Mary's Son,
So that he went to meet the world
Not only with a well-stored mind,
But with the two most loyal friends
That any youth could ever find.

And they were with him through the years
In all his conflicts and his cares,
And he discussed his plans with them
As often as he said his prayers;
And when the time at last drew nigh
When all man's earthly knowledge ends,
He had to leave all else behind
Except his two devoted friends. (T.E.B.)

Do You Pray for Everyone?

It took a Swami preacher to change the praying habits of a pious American woman. The lady discovered that this Hindu used to sing his prayers while making his morning ablutions, and his songs were not for himself, but for God's blessing upon all creatures. This expression of selflessness awakened the good woman to her lack of charity. Thereafter she prayed for everyone, and placed herself at the end of the list.

If you want to know how to pray, study the prayers of the Church. This good Mother does not forget any of her needy children. Here is an example of her all-embracing love. This is a prayer She gives her priests to say as a preparation for their Mass.

"And now before Thee, O Lord, I Lay -- the distress of the poor -- the trials of nations -- the groanings of prisoners -- the desolation of orphans -- the weariness of wayfarers -- the helplessness of the weak -- the despondency of the sick -- the failing strength of the aged -- the ambitions of young men -- the high desires of maidens -- and the widow's tears."

PRAYERS: (111) Father Joseph McCartney, CSC. Three Special Intentions.

The Moreau Choir will sing the 6:00 A.M. Mass, after
