What's Your Answer

The Deluge written of in the Bible could not have covered the entire earth. Does this statement shock you? At San Francisco State recently it provoked some of the students to walk out of a class in protest. This statement by a professor had attacked a tenet of their faith. Would you have joined the walk-out? Is it contrary to Catholic teaching to admit the possibility -- or probability -- of the professor's contention?

As Catholic college students you should know the answer. If you don't, find out for yourself the Catholic interpretation of this passage of Scripture. One reason why Catholic college students sometimes feel at a loss when confronted with such questions touching on their belief is that the answers have been spoon-fed to them and consequently are easily forgotten.

In Your Charity

Deceased - uncle of Fran Juda of Dillon; aunt of Fred Fischer of Dillon. Ill - grandfather of Don DelManzo of Dillon; aunt of Melba Faucett, University Library.

Poor Souls Novena

For more than forty years Notre Dame students have made a novena of Masses and Holy Communions for their relatives and friends who may still be in Purgatory. This year, because of the intervening Navy game weekend, the novena will begin on Monday, November 5, and will continue through Tuesday, November 13.

Fill out the form provided below and deposit it in the envelope you will find on your hall bulletin board. Off-campus residents may deposit theirs in the envelope in the vestibule of Sacred Heart Church.

Every day during the novena the souls of those you list below will be remembered in the Masses offered at the main altar in Sacred Heart Church.

Why not make the special effort to assist at Mass and receive Holy Communion every day during the novena. Someone needs the assistance of your prayers -- perhaps a parent, a brother, a sister, a dear friend, or even an abandoned soul.
