The Eighty-Second Annual Commencement

ANOTHER group of men has been presented to the world. It is difficult to tell this story for the eighty-second time and give it newness. There were new faces, new numbers, new names; but the fundamentals were the same as they were when the first degree was given in 1844. The story, even with its variations is old. But like old gold, it has a richness, a beauty, and a value, and it's going to be told again as Notre Dame men hope to hear it told until the world no longer needs men. Then, perhaps, Notre Dame's work will be done.

The 1926 Commencement was set apart by some events that are symbolic of the growth of the entire school. They are not a departure from the old things that Notre Dame has always meant, but an addition to those things. One of the outstanding ones was the graduation of the first class in Boy Guidance to be graduated by an American University. This interesting phase of the Eighty-second Commencement is treated in a separate article.

A second interesting event was the granting of six honorary degrees to six men whose work has been particularly outstanding in their field. Upon Samuel Insull, famous electric and public utilities magnate, of Chicago, Ill.; James A. Flaherty, Supreme Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus, of Philadelphia; Hon. Dudley G. Wooten, A. M., LL. D., Notre Dame, Ind.; E. R. Graham, nationally famous architect, of Chicago, Ill., and Rt. Rev. William H. Turner, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, N. Y., the University conferred honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws, and upon Augustus F. Meehan, eminent Southern manufacturer and a loyal Notre Dame alumnus, the University conferred an honorary degree of Master of Science.

A third feature of the Commencement was the bestowing of the Laetare Medal upon Hon. Edward N. Hurley, LL.D., '18, at special ceremonies in the University parlors on Sunday afternoon.

Aside from these features old grads will recognize the account of the activities that follow. It must be added, however, before going farther, as an outstanding departure from the custom of recent years, that, despite a terrific rain and electric storm at the psychological moment, the Notre Dame Club of the St. Joseph Valley went ahead with the Alumni Dance on Friday night at the K. of C. Ball-room and came out $1.34 ahead, at last report. This event was considered in itself a favorable omen for the following two days. These subsequent days, battling the same climatic opposition, achieved the same triumph, thereby giving the prophets much honor in their own country.

SATURDAY

At 8 o'clock the old students gathered in Sacred Heart church to honor the dead classmates of years gone. At 9:30 o'clock the members of the class of 1926 gathered for the last visit, a private ceremonial in which the members of the senior class pay their final homage at the altar that has played so important a part in their four years at Notre Dame. Rev. George Finnigan, C.S.C., vice-president of the university, presided at the short prayers of this ceremony.

At 10 o'clock the annual class day exercises were held in Washington Hall. President Francis Bon, Cheyene, Wyo., extended a welcome to the visiting relatives and friends of the class of '26. Victor Lemmer, Escanaba, Mich., delivered an excellent oration, "The Lay Apostolate." Mr. Lemmer's thesis was the importance of the Catholic laymen in the affairs of the church and the need of the church for a high-minded group of trained laymen to carry on the serious work of the church.

Dennis J. O'Neil, son of W. P. O'Neil, Mishawaka, who has been a prominent figure in poetic circles on the campus and whose poetry has won praise from many sources outside the campus, read "Encounter," the senior ode of 1926, one of the finest bits of poetry of this nature that Washington Hall has heard in the many years that seniors have read their metrical tributes and hopes.

Paul J. Harrington, Indianapolis, Ind., with the prospect of an aeroplane dash to Chicago to compete in the national collegiate track and field meet, gave the valedictory, the farewell of the class of '26. In his closing remarks Mr. Harrington paid this beautiful tribute to Notre Dame and voiced the hopes of his class when he said "We, the graduates of 1926, shall not return, but we know that our sons and our sons's sons will find here, as we have found, the life abundant, and will drink as deeply as we from the true fountain of perpetual spiritual youth."

An overture by the university orchestra provided a beautiful opening and close for the ceremonies, which were attended by a large audience of the friends and relatives of the members of the graduating class.

The University band appeared on the campus at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and gave the concert which the rain of Friday night cancelled. The band and its interested audience adjourned to Cartier field at 3 o'clock where the old grads were treated to a fine display of baseball by Coach George Keogan's team.

"Teamwork," was the keynote of the annual alumni dinner. From the time that William P. McPhee, president of the alumni began the introduction to the first speaker, teamwork was emphasized, a maintenance of the strong ties existing between the alumni and the university.

Arthur W. Stace, '96, Grand Rapids, Mich., was the principal speaker of the evening. Mr. Stace's talk was on "The Old Boys and New". His speech was filled with reminiscences and sparkled with the stories he interspersed in his talk. Notre Dame of '96 and Notre Dame of '26 are changed only in externals, said Mr. Stace. There is the same spirituality today, the same desire for knowledge, as existed in his day, he remarked. He spoke on the splendid achievements of the university on the athletic field and in the making of men.

The first speaker of the evening was the Right Rev. John F. Noll, D. D., bishop of Fort Wayne diocese. In his short talk he dwelt on the growing lack of religious enthusiasm among the American people, and the opinion of college presidents at this spirit which is entering the colleges of the country. He praised Notre Dame as an oasis in this wilderness of irreligion. He emphasized the necessity of the spiritual training gained at this university.

He was followed by the Right Rev. William H. Turner, bishop of Buffalo, N. Y., diocese, who emphasized the words of Bishop Noll. Rev. Matthew Walsh, C. S. C., president of the university, explained the growth of spirituality under Rev. John O'Hara, C. S. C., briefly, stating that for the last month of the school year there was an average of 1018 daily communions. He emphasized the necessity of the alumni working together and with the university. He told how Notre Dame has reached limits that requires intensive work from now on. He spoke of the growing fame of Notre Dame in scholastic and spiritual fields.

Timothy Galvin of the class of 1916, premier orator during his Notre Dame days and little changed, gave the alumni an interesting speech. He was followed by Rev. John Cavanagh, C. S. C. The beloved former president, much improved in health was given a great ovation when he appeared and his talk indicated the fulness of his recovery.

During the alumni banquet, the Studebaker Corporation band played on the main quadrangle for the benefit of those visitors who were unable to attend the banquet. Following the banquet, alumni and visitors adjourned to Washington Hall where the University Glee club and orchestra presented a program.

SUNDAY

The seniors, arrayed in cap and gown, assembled Sunday morning at the administration building. At 8:30 o'clock they marched to the Sacred Heart church, led by the officers and faculty of the university in their academic robes.

At the end of the line came the prelates and priests who were to take part in the mass. Bishop William H. Turner, of Buffalo, in his robes of office, with his chaplain, Rev. James McDonald, C. S. C., was followed by the celebrant of the mass, Rt. Rev. John F. Noll, bishop of Ft. Wayne, and his assisting priest, Rev. George Finegan, C. S. C., and the deacons of the mass, Rev. Patrick Haggerty, C. S. C., and Rev. E. Vincent Mooney, C. S. C., Deacons of honor were Rev. Francis Butler, C. S. C., and Rev. Henry Glueckert, C. S. C.

As the procession entered the church, the Notre Dame Glee club sang the processional, Gounod's "Laudate Patrem". After the seniors had been seated and the episcopal procession had reached the sanctuary commencement guests were admitted to the church. Every seat in the huge church was taken, and many were forced to remain standing during the service.

The Glee club sang the ordinary of the mass, to the music of Pietro Yon's "Missa Regina Pacis." The proper of the mass was sung in Gregorian chant by the Moreau seminary choir.

At the offertory the glee club sang Vittoria's "Ave Maria."

The baccalaureate was delivered to the seniors by Rt. Rev. William H. Turner, of Buffalo, N. Y.

In the sanctuary during the mass were Bishop Turner, Msgr. Britt, chancellor of the Buffalo diocese. Msgr. Nash, of Buffalo, and Msgr. Francis Gavisk, of Indianapolis, and Rev. Joseph E. Burke, C. S. C., president of St. Edward's college, Austin, Texas.

At the end of the mass, eight seniors entered the church, bearing the big American flag presented by their class to the university on Washington's birthday. The flag was carried into the sanctuary.

Very Rev. Matthew J. Walsh, C. S. C., president of the university, blessed the flag. It was then carried out of the church, and borne in solemn procession across the campus to the flag-pole.

The flag presented by the class of 1925 was taken down, and the new flag raised to the top of the pole, while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

At 1:30 o'clock, in simple but impressive exercises, the Laetare medal, awarded annually by the university to some member of the Catholic laity who had distinguished himself, was conferred upon Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago, former chairman of the U. S. Shipping board and former president of the Emergency Fleet corp. The program was held in the university parlors.

The university orchestra played an overture. Then Bishop Noll called the assemblage to order. In a brief talk, he praised the university for making such an award to encourage Catholic laymen in their work.

It is necessary, he said, that such an ideal be held up, "in these days, when so often wealth and power are idolized, no matter what amount of moral turpitude is associated with them."

The Very Rev. Matthew J. Walsh, C. S. C., president of the university delivered the formal address on behalf of the university. He explained the founding of the award, and read the list of men and women who had received the Laetare medal since its founding in 1883.

Father Walsh praised Mr. Hurley for his faith and for his patriotism, saying that he had fulfilled many important missions for the president of the United States, besides serving the nation in important posts during the war. He also commended him for his philanthropy.

Father Walsh then gave the medal to Bishop Noll, who presented it to Mr. Hurley. Mr. Hurley made a brief speech of acceptance.

Several prominent men were present at the conferring of the medal. Albert R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corp. and chairman of the lay board of trustees of the university; Bishop Turner, three monsignori, Father Burke, president of St. Edward's college, Texas, and others attended the exercises.

Officers for next year were elected by the members of the Alumni association of Notre Dame at their annual meeting held in Washington Hall at 1:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The new president is Daniel J. O'Connor, '05, of Chicago, succeeding William P. McPhee of Denver, Colo. James E. Sanford, '15, of Chicago, was elected vice-president. Alfred C. Ryan, '20, former alumni secretary, was elected to the board of directors of the association.

The directors presented a proposal to budget the finances of the association. This was discussed, and is to be presented in amended form next year.

At 5 o'clock, under threatening skies, the 300 seniors of the Class of 1926 marched to their places before the commencement platform on the main quadrangle, and the commencement proper began.

Very Rev. Matthew J. Walsh, C. S. C., president of the university, conferred six honorary degrees in the name of the university.

Degrees of doctor of laws were bestowed upon Rt. Rev. William H. Turner, D. D. bishop of Buffalo; Hon. Dudley Goodall Wooten, A. M., LL. D., professor of law at Notre Dame; Ernest R. Graham, architect, of Chicago; Samuel Insull, head of many utilities companies, of Chicago, and James A. Flaherty, supreme grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, of Philadelphia.

An honorary degree of master of science was conferred upon Augustus F. Meehan, Chattanooga, Tenn., Notre Dame alumnus and prominent manufacturer and business man.

During the conferring of the honorary degrees, it started to rain, and the exercises were transferred to Sacred Heart church.

When degrees had been bestowed upon the 300 members of the class of 1926, Father Walsh introduced Judge Wooten as the Commencement speaker.

Judge Wooten traced the development of history from the time of Christ down to the present day pointing out the milestones of progress that have been made. He also called attention to retrogressions made by the human race.

He declared that events move in cycles and cited 500 years as a cycle. In the first one, proud Rome ruled the world with the best system of government ever devised by man. The next cycle witnessed the barbarian hordes from the north and the downfall of the Roman empire. The third cycle he declared to be the golden cycle when all the great advancement was made both in science and the fine arts.

"Everything we have today," he said, "is the result of discoveries made during that third cycle, inventions which have been amplified and extended.

He deplored the materialistic tendencies of the present day saying that the world needs restoration rather than reconstruction.

"The metropolitan press of the present days is one of the greatest factors in the country for evil," he said, "printing licentious stories under the guise of news.

DUDLEY G. WOOTEN, A.M., LL. D.

"There never was a time in the history of these United States when there were more laws and less law.

He warned the graduates that they must hold to the ideals inculcated at Notre Dame, saying that those things they had been warned against would soon be learned by them first hand. As a final admonition he told them that when days were dark and the world seemed against them to recall their teaching of their Alma Mater, particularly the daily bulletins published by Rev. John F. O'Hara, prefect of religion.

"Catholic Education"

(Baccalaureate Address Delivered by Rt. Rev. Wm. H. Turner, D. D., Bishop of Buffalo, at the Eighty-second Annual Commencement of the University of Notre Dame, June 13th, 1926.)

"BLESSED is the man who hath not walked in the Counsel of the ungodly nor stood in the way of sinners . . . . And he shall be like a tree which is planted near the running waters which shall bring forth its fruit in due season . . . . and all whatsoever he shall do shall prosper". Psalms I, Verses 1-3.

This is the first note struck by the Royal Psalmist in the series of sacred songs which the Christian Church regards as inspired. In a figure which all can understand the inspired poet describes the wholesome influences which make for healthy, vigorous and successful life. Among these influences is undoubtedly religion. Among them also is education. And it is of these two as combined in Catholic education that I wish to address you this morning.

Let me first of all present side by side education.

without religion and education as we find it in our Catholic schools, colleges and universities. The one lays stress on the acquisition of ideas, the other on the clarification of ideas. The one aims at a knowledge of facts the other is equally concerned about the valuation of facts. The one limits its search to facts ascertainable by the senses and the intellect, the other brings into its curriculum facts which are beyond the power of the human mind to ascertain and are shown to us by Faith alone. The one is perhaps a preparation for life, the other is a preparation for complete life, for life here and hereafter. The one puts us in possession of power, power to achieve, power to succeed, power to conquer, power to acquire, power to enjoy: the other does all this, and in addition it emphasises the restraint placed on all acquired power by the consideration of duty, duty to God, duty to self, duty to one's Country and to one's neighbors. The one is creedless; the other lays stress on creed. The one banishes all fear, as being educationally unjustifiable; the other lays, as on the cornerstone of all moral education, filial fear of God, and upon this it builds the structure of obedience, obedience to God, obedience to parents, obedience to civil authority and to the laws of the Church. Purely secular discards or discredits religious rites and ceremonies as intellectually cheap, or bordering on the unfair in their appeal to the senses and the sentiments. Catholic education values such rites and ceremonies as intellectually and morally uplifting, as an essential part of the external worship of God. The greatest defect in secular education is that it has no theory of life; in secular education all is empiricism, all is experiment, even our moral sense of good and evil. With us the theory of life is fixed, definite, and yet flexible in the best sense. I may, go farther and say, that we not only hold a theory of life, but we inculcate a "rule of life". Not indeed the same rule of life for all, not for all young men and young women such a rule as your religious teachers themselves have adopted, and so edifyingly practice, but some rule of life such as "Mass every Sunday", "Confession and Holy Communion once a week, or once a month" as the case may be. And such a rule is not merely negative, it is not a system of "don'ts", but a positive construction rule that guides us in all the vicissitudes of life. We are not destroyers of what is human and beautiful in life, in art, in literature in robust physical and spiritual activity. We strive to control all these. We believe that it is wasteful to destroy, but that it is gainful to control, and this, we think, is manly and courageous also, because it implies a trust in human nature. We have not banished all science on the ground that science is sometimes irreverent and subversive of Christian belief. It seems indeed, as if, under the sinister magic of the word evolution, and I may say that those who use the word most vociferously have the least understanding of its meaning,—our extreme Protestant contemporaries were prepared to condemn all biology, all paleontology, all ancient history, all pre-historic investigation. Not so the Catholic Church. Let us give ourselves credit for a courage that others do not seem to possess. We do not banish paintings and statues from our churches for fear of idolatry, because we know that we can keep even the ignorant from falling into that excess. We do not, like other churches, condemn even the mildest form of alcoholic beverage as sinful on the ground that the abuse of that product of fermentation has admittedly inflicted serious evils on humanity. We do not condemn all play-going and all dancing as ungodly, although we are today the strongest and the most efficient force in opposition to what is unbecoming and sinful in the theatre, the dance-hall and in all social customs and amusements. We know that in the Sacrament of Penance we have the greatest spiritual check on all excess which is sinful, and do not need to go to the extreme of puritanical wholesale condemnation.

Similarly when we deal with science, with literature, with philosophy and with all the other subjects on our programme of studies, we are not afraid of science, though we are afraid of the cheap popularizer, of the immature dogmatist in science; we are afraid of his influence on the popular mind and especially on the growing mind of the pupil or student. Our fear is not for the Church, which is divinely defended and has withstood every onslaught. Our fear is for the Church's children, for the little ones of the household of the faith, who are defenseless unless we defend them. Therefore we do not fear the big men in the field of biology, physics, chemistry, astronomy or sociology. Because the big men are reverent and, as a rule, they mind their own business. But, for the sake of those whose faith is easily disturbed, we fear the small men, the small men in the pulpit, the small men in the University chair, the small men at the teacher's desk, who wield an unearned authority, not because of their ability but because of the receptivity of young minds and the susceptibility of young souls committed to their care beyond our ability to shield and protect them.

And as we do not fear science, so on the other hand we do not glorify it beyond its actual value. For science in last analysis, is to be valued solely as a contribution to the happiness, the well-being, the uplift of humanity. In other words, it is to be judged a blessing or a curse according to how it is applied, according to the way in which it functions. And, with all the splendid progress of science in our day we must regretfully admit that this progress is not an unmixed blessing. A most familiar instance is science applied to locomotion. This application of science has, it is true, contributed to human comfort and to material prosperity. But who does not realize that it has on the other hand made the commission of crime easier and the detection of the criminal much more difficult? More than that, modern means of travel have been directly the occasion of sin as well as crime, to a degree that ought to give fathers and mothers of families occasion for sad and serious reflection. But we do not on that account condemn science or its applications; we have learned to distinguish the use and the abuse of these things as of all other things that are liable to abuse. For the religious conscience is a clear conscience, it is an educated conscience; and this is one of the most notable and important results of religious education.

It has been said of us that we are less concerned than we ought to be about the difficulties of reconciling our position with the results of modern thought, that we are somewhat highhanded in our disposal of the conflict between science and religion. If this accusation is justified, it is justified for two reasons. First, we stand on the rock of faith with a feeling of security that faith alone can furnish, a feeling of security that gives courage and a kind of stoic calm. And, second, we are not disturbed, because we realize that the world is not really dominated today by scientific thinking, but by popular, slipshod and mostly superficial thinking. We are not affrighted at the catch word "freedom of thought", for as we see it, the world of our day is not so much characterized by freedom to think as it is by the inability to think at all, that is, to think clearly and accurately. Freedom to think? There is plenty of it, even among ourselves. But when we hear of freedom from faith, freedom from the restrictions of a powerfully organized Church, freedom from the Inquisition and the ban of Pope or Council or Bishop, we are inclined to ask which is more desirable, freedom to think or the ability to think: which is worse, restraint of thought, or slackness of thought, superficial, sensational, utterly inaccurate thought? Which is the higher control, that of the Church, or that of the newspaper paragraph, the popular magazine, the cheap high school professional, quasi-pontifical dictator in the realm of thought?

And I carry this arraignment of science as applied to popular thinking on step farther. I say that it has resulted not merely in confusion of thought, almost in the inability to think, but also in a disturbance that reaches beyond mere thinking into the conduct of life and the standards of living. A stone cast into a pool clear as crystal at its surface, but muddy and slimy in its depths of human passion, has raised a roil of murk and filth, of bestiality and blood lust, and that stone cast into the depths of the pool of life is modern science. You know and I know that science must reach down into the fundamental problems of our physical and mental life. But I know, and you will know,—you hardly, realize it yet—that in your University when science does so reach down, there is, perhaps, a temporary disturbance of the soul that there are temporary ripples on the surface of your thoughts, that these ripples spread, and gradually readjust the soul to the same placid level. There is no noise-some stirring of the depths, which we know to be there, or, if there is, Your University, in its spiritual direction of your temptations and your difficulties, knows well how to restore a calm placid surface to the sea of your soul. Need I say that in this figure

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association of the University of Notre Dame was held in Washington Hall, Campus, Sunday afternoon, June 13, 1926. Before the meeting a final call for ballots for the election of officers was issued. Mr. William P. McPhee, president of the Association, called the meeting to order. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

President McPhee then appointed the following tellers to count the unusually large number of ballots that had been cast for the officers of the Association for the coming year: Fred Steers, '11; Tim Galvin, '16; Max St. George, '08; William P. O'Neill, '06; Gilbert Coty, '25; and Mark Duncan, '15.

A committee consisting of Francis O'Shaughnessy, '00; Mark Foote, '73; and Thomas McKeon, '90, was appointed to greet the Class of 1926. It was announced by President McPhee that the Class had been declared eligible for membership and on motion they were admitted. The oath of fealty to the United States and to the Alumni Association was administered by Frank O'Shaughnessy, '00. President McPhee gave a short address of welcome to the new members.

The secretary announced the names of the following members who had died during the preceding year.

Henry P. Brannick, C. E. 1890; died December, 1925.

Thomas A. Dailey, B. S. 1874; M. S. 1876; A. M. 1882; died November, 1925.

William A. Guilfoyle, LL. B. 1900; died November, 1925.

John R. McCoy, LL. B., 1914; died March, 1926.

Henry J. McGlew, LL. B. 1905; died February, 1926.

Hon. Edmund H. Moore, LL. D. 1925; died December, 1925.

Rev. Joseph F. Nugent, LL. D. 1895; died December, 1925.

Rev. Arthur B. O'Neill, C. S. C.; A. M. 1891; LL. D. 1917; died August, 1925.

Max Pam, LL. D., 1910; died September, 1925.

Stephen B. Pickett, LL. B. 1899; died July, 1925.

Rev. Daniel J. Spillard, C. S. C., A. M. 1864; died February, 1926.

John B. Sullivan, Litt. B. 1891; died September, 1925.

Thomas J. Waters, B. Arch. 1920; died April, 1926.

A committee consisting of James E. Sanford, '15; Rev. W. C. O'Brien, '96, and Dr. J. B. Berteling, '80, was appointed to draft a resolution of condolence. They reported as follows:

"Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, our All Wise Father, to call from earth our brothers of the Alumni Association: Henry P. Brannick, '90; Thomas A. Dailey, '74;

William A. Guilfoyle, '00; John R. McCoy, '14; Henry J. McGlew, '05; Edmund H. Moore, '25; Joseph H. Nugent, '95; Arthur Barry O'Neill, '91; Max Pam, '10; Stephen B. Pickett, '99; Daniel J. Spillard, '64; John B. Sullivan, '91, and Thomas J. Waters, '20.

"Therefore, Be it resolved that the Association extend to the bereaved relatives heartfelt sympathy with the assurance that the prayers of the members will be offered that God, in His mercy and goodness, will take them to the eternal home of those who have served Him faithfully."

Reports of officers followed. Warren A. Cartier, treasurer of the Alumni Association, read the essential features of a carefully prepared treasurer's report, embodying all the receipts and expenditures of the Association during the year. Following his report, Mr. Cartier extended his resignation to the Association as follows:

"Very reluctantly, I hereby tender my resignation as Treasurer of the Alumni Association, to take immediate effect.

My relations with all officers and members, without exception have been extremely pleasant, and I regret very much this action, but there are conditions that I am obliged and compelled to take this action.

Yours very truly,

(sig.) Warren A. Cartier."

Mr. Cartier gave a review of the history of the Association and outlined its needs. He stated that the number of life memberships at $150 each was much smaller than he had hoped. He expressed regret that the conduct of the Association in its earlier days had been of a rather helter-skelter nature, but stated that the need for a new and business-like plan of running affairs was evident. He advised a budget and left the details to be explained by the Alumni Board, which had met and discussed a similar plan before the general meeting. All of the report, with the receipted bills, was given to the secretary.

The motion that the report be accepted as read was seconded and unanimously passed. Frank O'Shaughnessy, '00, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cartier for the efficient way in which his report was read and in the general efficiency of his long administration as treasurer. The motion was seconded and unanimously passed. In it Mr. O'Shaughnessy characterized Mr. Cartier as the "most capable treasurer any organization ever had".

President McPhee paid added tribute to Mr. Cartier before launching into his own "Swan Song". After praising the ability of Mr. Cartier, Mr. McPhee endorsed the appeal of the treasurer for a new financial regime and a wiping out of the financial weakness that has been keeping the Association from expanding. He praised the progress that the Association has made in spite of loose financial organization but urged a speedy remedy for the monetary ills, particularly the deficit that the Association incurred at the expense of the University. The Association, declared Mr. McPhee, must take on larger responsibilities. The first thing that the alumni should do in aiding the expansion of Notre Dame is to become an asset and not a liability to the University. Mr. McPhee expressed the hope and the confidence that the new administration would put into effect the means to realize these ends.

Because of the unusually large number of ballots—about 800—a recess was declared for the tellers to complete their work. During the recess, Mr. Byron Kanaley, '04, moved that the members present settle some of the financial problems of the organization by paying the dues for the coming year, and headed a line of members past the Secretary's and Treasurer's posts for that purpose. When the parade was over it was found that $295 had been realized from the move.

Before the meeting listened to the teller's report following the recess, Mr. Joseph M. Haley, '99, Fort Wayne, read a list of members proposed for election into the Association under the new constitutional provision which says that the list shall first be approved by the Board of Directors. A long list of men who have exhibited active interest in Notre Dame's affairs was read to the meeting. Mr. Haley moved that the list be accepted in its entirety. The motion was seconded by Mr. Kanaley and the following new members were admitted to the Association.

Timothy P. Galvin, '16, delivered the report of the tellers on the balloting for officers of the Association. The race between Dan O'Connor, '05 of Chicago and John Murphy, '12, of Cleveland, was unusually close and the first report of the tellers indicated a tie vote, 382 ballots for each candidate. A careful re-check and re-count brought the final results to 384 for Daniel J. O'Connor, and 382 for John P. Murphy. The other results were:

Vice-president—J. E. Sanford, '15, Chicago, 479; J. G. Mott, Los Angeles, 283.

Treasurer—Unanimous for Warren A. Cartier, '87.

Director—A. C. Ryan, '20, 525; J. F. Cushing, '06, 239.

Mr. O'Connor was declared duly elected President of the Association and a committee consisting of B. V. Kanaley, '04; Francis O'Shaughnessy, '00, and T. P. Galvin, '16, was named to escort him to the chair.

Mr. Murphy took the occasion to congratulate the Association upon the election of Mr. O'Connor and promised hearty support to the new administration. It was moved by Mr. Kanaley that the entire report of the election committee be accepted as read, and also that the resignation of Mr. Cartier be considered next year. Mr. Cartier, however, repeated his determination to give up the office, but again thanked the Association for its hearty support. It was then moved by Mr. Kanaley that Walter Duncan, '12, LaSalle, Ill., be considered as a successor to Mr. Cartier. The motion was seconded and passed and the problem of securing a new treasurer was left to the Board of Directors.

Responses by all of the newly-elected officers were given. President O'Connor thanked the Association for the honor bestowed upon him by his election. James E. Sanford and Alfred C. Ryan also thanked the Association for the confidence displayed in putting them in office for the Association. Each of the new officers promised to do all in their power to fulfill the duties of office and to carry out the extensive program planned.

On motion of Mr. O'Shaughnessy a rising vote of thanks was given to the retiring president and treasurer of the Association. Both Mr. McPhee and Mr. Cartier gave beautiful responses to this expression of gratitude to them for their services.

President O'Connor then gave a brief sketch of the plans of the Board of Directors. He stated that the feeling existed un-animously that extraordinary means would have to be taken to meet the financial obligations of the Alumni Association. Last year, according to the report of the Treasurer, finances were better than they have ever been in the history of the Association. But at the same time the activities of the Association expanded in even greater proportion. The result is that the finances of the Association have become even more involved.

To solve the problem the Board of Directors suggested a Budget for the activities of the Association. This Budget includes all of the activities that the Board feels the Alumni Association should carry on, and marks the very definite departure from the category of a haphazard group of graduates, assembling once a year for a purpose predominantly social, to that of an Association, functioning the year round for the individual and collective benefit of its members and the advancement of the University of Notre Dame.

The tentative budget,—which includes the cost of printing the Alumnus ten months a year, the salary of a full-time Secretary, postage and stationery for class letters, circular letters, etc., traveling expenses of the Secretary to represent the Association in the many strong Alumni movements that are forming now, and to cement the local Alumni Clubs into a great group of unified and powerful parts of one great Association,—was set by the Board at $12,000 a year. Even with the growth of the Association and the increase of the payment of dues, the probabilities are strong that from this source the Association will realize only about $4000. This leaves a deficit of $8000 under the new budget.

The Board believes that in a short time a plan can be worked out by which the full membership can be educated to the needs of paying dues, and that by judiciously fixing these dues, an annual income sufficient to carry on the work of the organization can be realized. But to do this, it will be necessary first to carry on a campaign among the members entailing the use of the full office potentialities as planned. This means that the deficit will have to be met by other means.

These means the Association believes will have to be the system of voluntary subscription over and above the dues. Under this system, which is being adopted by many Alumni Associations, the members are urged to pay as much toward the upkeep of the Association as their varied incomes will permit. It is a platitude to say that $100 means to one member of the Association what $10 means to another. Under the proposed plan, each will pay the regular dues of $5 for the coming year, and IN ADDITION will be asked to give whatever he can afford to cover the deficit for the coming year. At the end of this year, the Alumni Board was instructed to appear with a plan for permanent financing of the Association that will, if possible, do away with the need for such additional individual solicitation.

Many fine suggestions were offered by members of the Association during the discussion. Mr. Kanaley suggested the raising of the dues, citing the disregard of $5 among the younger men in forms of pleasure. Mr. O'Shaughnessy suggested the graduated system of dues, mounting as the alumnus is longer out of school. Mr. Huguenard suggested the voluntary subscription plan as a permanent feature, eliminating entirely the established dues. Rev. W. C. O'Brien, Cambridge, O., stated that from his seminary days he had always considered the payment of his alumni dues, entailing considerable sacrifice to him, as much worth while. John Murphy interpreted the plan of the Board as the continuation of minimum dues charge and the solicitation of pledges over and above this minimum. Mr. Murphy promised to pay $50 extra during the coming year to defray the deficit in part. Mr. Cartier suggested a system of $5 for the first five years a graduate is out of school and $10 for the years following. He suggested the solution of the deficit this year by securing 50 members to pledge $100 each.

Upon motion of William P. O'Neill, '06, the matter was referred to the Board with the request that the Board instruct the Secretary to issue circular letters to the members of the Association, calling attention to the deficit and explaining the necessity of voluntary subscriptions until a permanent plan is formulated and operating. The Board was requested to present such a plan at the next annual meeting. The motion was passed.

As a last matter of business Byron Kanaley moved that pledges be secured from the members present to help make up $1000 deficit existing for the past year. The pledges secured totalled $930.

On motion of Joseph M. Haley, '99, seconded by Francis O'Shaughnessy, the meeting adjourned at 4:45 p. m.

James E. Armstrong,
Alumni Secretary.

President Daniel J. O'Connor, '05

ANOTHER Alumni year has started and I want to extend a greeting to each of you and to express my deep appreciation for the great and singular honor which you have conferred upon me by electing me to office. Although fully aware of my lack of qualifications for this important office of leadership, I am confident that, with your active support and cooperation, this year will be a constructive one and that it will advance still further the accomplishments of previous administrations and keep our association foremost among all organizations of its kind.

The Notre Dame Alumni Association enjoys today an enviable reputation and with continued and increased activity on the part of all of us we can make it a still greater force for good and for service to its members.

The aims of your Alumni Board for the coming year are:

1. Promotion of increased good fellowship within the local Alumni groups throughout the country.
2. A larger service to deserving young men through the help of scholarships to be established by local club groups.
3. Increased vocational aid to members by helping them to find positions in the professional and commercial fields through the medium of a central placement bureau operating out of the Alumni Secretary's Office at the University.
4. Promotion of increased interest in the general Alumni reunions in June, particularly the encouragement of greater attendance of the five and ten year classes at these reunions.

This program will call for much effort, especially upon the part of the Alumni Secretary. Your Alumni Board is extremely anxious to have this year a Secretary who will devote his time exclusively to Alumni affairs. This can be done only through the financial support given by the Alumni members. Heretofore the University has carried the major share of the expense burden in the operation of the Alumni Office and in the publication of the Alumnus magazine. Here after we should make the utmost endeavor to relieve the University of this extra burden.

This year's gathering of Alumni members was encouraging. Each year brings a larger number of the old boys back to the campus and those of us who are able to break away from our social and business cares for a few days felt richly rewarded for the coming. To preserve the contact with the old school and with the familiar faces of our friends of other years is a treasure. Only those who come back year after year can fully realize the joy, the benefits and the inspiration that await their return. May this coming year progress in a special way so that our next reunion will bring together the largest number of loyal and earnest Notre Dame men.

"ENCOUNTER"

(Class Poem, 1926.)

By DENNIS J. O'NEILL

(The following is printed not to establish a precedent or to distinguish it in any particular way from the poems of other years, but merely because it typifies the high idealism that Notre Dame men attain at Notre Dame and is a good thing to be read by graduates of other years that forgotten or slipping ideals may be renewed and cherished ideals be strengthened. The author of "Encounter" is the son of William P. O'Neill, '06, Mishawaka, Ind.)

Now comes the morning in an azure gown,
Like Her who came long years ago
To Juda town,—

Searing the silver blossoms of the night,
Melting the golden votive moon with light,
Striking to flame the living hour,
Crushing the past, a fadeless flower.

Dimmed now the stars we followed,
But their memory sweet,
After this golden morning,
Shall guide our feet.

—o—

So welcome, golden morning,
May our day be long and bright,
That we who thrust our lances up
May watch them gleam at night.

For the stars that men have followed
Are silver lances cast
By strong young warriors standing
In the mornings of the past.

There are no stars to follow
For those who wield no spears,
Until the evening comes in grey
And after many years.

But who would go a-wandering
After alien stars,
When all the days are quiet
And after all the wars?

Who would don the grey mail
When silver is so bright,
Or who would trade his lonely lance
For the breastplate of the night?

Who would take the hand of age
To creep dim paths along,
When the morning comes with a rushing sound
And the lance arm's strong?

Praise to those crusaders
Who cleared this jousting field,
Our Lady's knights who found the strength
Of Her protecting shield.

Who knew no armour but Her grace,
No weapon but a prayer,
They hurled lance-like to Heaven
And lodged it shining there.

Praise to those who followed,
Guided by the light
Of earlier starry lances
Shining through the night.

For the stars that men have followed
Are silver lances cast
By strong young warriors standing
In the mornings of the past.

Far in some distant morning past
Whose was the hand that hurled
The lance Columbus followed
To find another world?

For if that hand had wavered
In its God-like zest
Then a star in heaven would
Have led a fruitless quest.

What brave warrior standing
On what Himalayan field
Tried his primal morning lance
Against the sun's bright shield,

And left an eastern star to lead
Marco Polo on Across enchanted gardens to
The feet of Kublai Khan?

What archangel seared the night
With his triumphant sword,
That led the wise men of the East,
And what was his reward?

To see his weapon shining
In the Moorish breast of night,
For none but the kings best lancers
Have this kingly right.

So when the evening comes at last
In cold and ghostly grey,
May one bright star in heaven shine,
A token of our day,

For this is immortality,
This is life in death,
That I have left a star behind
Frosted with my breath.

So guide us, Lady of the joust,
 May the day be long and bright,
 That we who thrust our lances up
 May watch them gleam at night.

—o—

And now comes the morning in an azure gown,

Like Her who came long years ago
 To Juda town,—

Searing the silver blossoms of the night,
 Melting the golden votive moon with light,
 Striking to flame the living hour,
 Crushing the past, a fadeless flower.

Dimmed now the stars we followed
 But their memory long
 After this golden morning
 Shall guide our lance arm strong.

Rev. Dr. P. J. Carroll
 C. S. C., Litt. B., Litt. D.

The Alumnus takes pleasure in announcing the conferring of the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters upon Rev. P. J. Carroll, C.S.C., Litt. B. '11, by Duquesne University, Pittsburgh. Father Carroll preached the Baccalaureate to 250 Duquesne graduates on Sunday, June 13, but the Retreat at Notre Dame prevented him from remaining in Pittsburgh for the conferring of the degree on Thursday, June 17.

Recognition of Father Carroll's work in letters comes as a rather natural step in his literary career. He has published two books of short stories, "Round About Home" and "Memory Sketches", and one book of poems, "Songs of Creelabeg". Father Carroll is also the author of several plays for boys, which have been produced a number of times by the Minims at Notre Dame, and is a frequent contributor to the Catholic World, the Ecclesiastical Review, and secular magazines.

According to friends of Father Carroll, he is preparing a new book, of a religious nature, which is to be used for text purposes, and the advance opinions are that the book is one of the finest of its kind that has been written and one which will bring the author a great deal of attention.

Father Carroll was pastor of St. Joseph's Church in South Bend for a number of years; served as president of Watertown College, Wis., one year; was in New Orleans a year, and for the past three years has been a member of the faculty of the College of Arts and Letters at Notre Dame. He has been faculty advisor for The Scholastic and conducted the famous "Safety Valve" during the past year.

Hon. Edward N. Hurley, '18, Receives Laetare Medal.

As a special feature of Commencement week, the Laetare Medal, awarded to Hon. Edward N. Hurley, LL. D. '18 was conferred upon him in person in the University parlors at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, June 13, before an audience of alumni and friends. The University orchestra opened the program. Rev. Matthew J. Walsh, C. S. C., delivered the following presentation address:

The University of Notre Dame
 to
 EDWARD NASH HURLEY
 Greetings

Sir,

In the year 1883, Very Reverend Edward Sorin, Founder of the University of Notre Dame instituted the Laetare Medal. It is an annual award, bestowed on some member of the American Catholic laity who has won notable distinction in religion, art, literature, science, philanthropy, public service or any other field of lofty achievement. The list of men and women on whom this highest honor within the power of the University to bestow is as follows: John Gilmary Shea, Patrick J. Keeley, Elizabeth Allen Starr, General John Newton, Edward Prouss, Patrick V. Hickey, Anna Hanson Dorsey, William J. Onahan, Daniel Dougherty, Henry F. Brownson, Patrick Donahue, Augustine Daley, Mrs. James Sadlier, General William S. Rosecrans, Doctor Thomas Addis Emmet, Timothy E. Howard, Mary Gwendolin Caldwell, John A. Creighton, William Bourke Cockran, Doctor John B. Murphy, Charles J. Bonaparte, Richard Kearns, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, Doctor Francis Quinlan, Katherine E. Conway, James C. Monaghan, Francis Tiernan, Maurice Francis Egan, Agnes Repplier, Thomas B. Mulry, Charles B. Herbermann, Edward Douglas White, Mary Merrick, Doctor James J. Walsh, Admiral William Shepherd Benson, Joseph Scott, George Duval, Doctor Lawrence F. Flick, Elizabeth Nourse, Charles Patrick Neill, Walter George Smith, Charles D. Maginnis, Albert Francis Zahm.

Sir, this year Notre Dame is happy to add your name to the great honor roll and feels a sense of just pride that you so unmistakably deserve the distinction. In a world of complex business interests you have emphasized the lesson of unfailing integrity, of faith between man and man, of sterling honesty which makes no compacts not established on justice. A patriot in the harsh time of war, your services were rendered in deeds more than in words. As Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, in those days when the transport of men and supplies was a pressing problem, you showed a capacity of constructive service which won for you international recognition. To you, on more than one occasion, have been confided important trusts by the Chief Executives of the nation, and always you executed these trusts with such foresight, and dispatch as to receive nationwide approval. As a philanthropist you have preserved a modesty which went out in service, seeking no glory for the services rendered.

In recognition of signal devotion to Church and to country, in consideration of personal worth as a Catholic and as an American, the University of Notre Dame, a seat of learning devoted to religion, science and to whatever makes for the uplift of American youth, asks you, Edward Nash Hurley, to accept the Laetare Medal for this year of Our Lord, nineteen hundred and twenty-six. May you have length of days and strength, and great blessings to carry on the work which God has given you to do.

Following the address, the Medal was given to Rt. Rev. John F. Noll, D. D., Bishop of Fort Wayne, who presented it to Mr. Hurley. In a short speech, Mr. Hurley acknowledged the great honor conferred upon him by Notre Dame and expressed his appreciation for this recognition and his admiration for the ideals of the institution which had conferred the Medal upon him. The exercises were brief and semi-private in deference to Mr. Hurley's health.

Rt. Rev. John F. Noll, D. D., Bishop of Fort Wayne, bestowing the Laetare Medal upon Hon. E. N. Hurley

The Pioneers of the Boy Guidance Movement

By RAYMOND HOYER, M. A. '24.

Director of the Department of Boy Guidance

FOR many June 13th, 1926 will stand out as a red letter day in the history of Boy Guidance, for on that day an event occurred which marks an epoch in the history of boys' work. It was the graduation of the first class in Boy Guidance, the members of which have the distinction of being the first graduates of the first course of this character to be given in any college or university. It was moreover an event that brought to fruition the long cherished dream of Brother Barnabas, F. S. C., that enthusiastic pioneer for boys' rights.

For many years Brother Barnabas urged the establishment of a course to train men who were to devote their lives to the free time guidance of boys. He was long convinced of the imperative need of well qualified and thoroughly trained men to supplement the work of Church, home and school and to guide youth during its free time so that this danger period might not offset but rather strengthen the splendid work of the other groups were striving to accomplish.

Until very recently the only qualification required of a man entering the field of Boy Guidance was the desire to serve, with the result that many good men stumbled into this delicate work and learned largely through experimenting upon the boys with whom they worked. That either these men or the boys survived this ordeal is none the more remarkable than the fact that people generally failed to demand that a man be properly prepared to perform this task before he be permitted to work with boys at all. Teachers, physicians, lawyers and even training and certification before being allowed to operate in their respective fields, but for some reason the men who were to help mold character were allowed to carry on so long as they were men of good repute.

It was the dream of Brother Barabas to place this profession upon a truly professional basis. This meant standards in training and education as well as a real love for and confidence in boys. For a number of years, in season and out, this good brother preached boys' rights and placed competent leadership as the inalienable right that every boy had the right to expect. He felt moreover that college trained men were best qualified to give such cultured and intelligent guidance.

Fortunately, when the Knights of Columbus, assembled in Supreme Convention in Atlantic City in 1922, decided to sponsor a boy work program, Brother Barnabas was called into consultation and invited to act as advisor. His suggestions naturally included the establishment of a training course at some representative Catholic university, graduation from which would give the desired professional status. In order to make such a course a reality a number of scholarships were provided by the supreme council of the Knights of Columbus and a chair in Boy Guidance financed. Notre Dame was then selected as the university best suited for the course and the first class of twenty-five students was enrolled in September 1924. A second class, fourteen in number matriculated the following September and scholarships are now being awarded for September 1926.

Many have been asking: "But what is this Boy Guidance"? Briefly it is the science which deals with the boy during his leisure, free, or as it is often called, his play time; with that time when the boy puts into practice or fails to do so, as the case may be, the precepts of right living taught him by Church, home and school. When one considers that this is practically the only time that the average boy is really afforded any wide latitude in making decisions, in deciding between right and wrong and acting thereon, and in doing what he ought rather than what he himself or the gang wants him to do, then the importance of this part of the boy's life becomes more apparent, while its close connection with the development of the lad's will and character likewise becomes more evident. The problem of Boy Guidance therefore is not present only for the poor boy or the underprivileged lad or the son of immigrant parentage, all of whom may need guidance the more to be sure, but for almost every boy be he rich or poor, country boy or city boy, white or black.

Formerly the father had a much greater share in this part of his boy's life than modern urban conditions permit today. Then there was but little problem because Jimmy met dad at three meals every day. Cities were smaller then and the father worked frequently in the home or nearby. He did not have a different luncheon and evening appointment four or five days a week either. After school Jim helped dad in his work and he had chores and home duties to perform.

How different it all is today with our labor saving devices, our apartment houses, our large cities! With the automobile and the moving picture show to take parents away from the home, leaving countless thousands of Jimmies to go it "on their own", hunting their amusement in the street, alley, corner, or in some "hang-out" known as a pool room, candy store, soft drink parlor or an athletic club. Today dad seldom sees, much less knows, Jim's companions. And Jim not only craves boy companionship but adult as well. Almost every boy especially after he reaches the age of eleven or twelve normally seeks the freindship of some man whom he may imitate and who will guide him in his struggle for manliness.

Of course dad should give Jimmie that companionship. In the days when he did or today when dad is able and willing to give his boy this companionship, Jimmie has had as his model the man whom wise Providence ordained to perform this very function. And today, when the father functions properly there is little need for Boy Guidance other than the guidance to be found in the normal home. But the fact remains that the complex civilization of today with its many diversions has taken the father more and more out of the life of the boy.

Where then shall Jimmie secure this guidance? The chances are that he will probably get it either on the corner where like as not he meets the loafer, the "rough-neck", and the degenerate, or in one of the numerous boy work organizations such as the playground, the scout troop, the boys' club, or the summer camp where men who understand and like boys guide them through the stormy years of adolescence.

This is not a Catholic problem; neither is it a Protestant or Jewish problem. It is not charity because the rich man's son may need guidance even more than the son of the laborer. It is a civic problem, nay a national one, and to cope with it as such, the Boy Guidance course was established at Notre Dame by the Knights of Columbus. It was their contribution to the age regardless of the creed, color or condition of the boy.

So it was that a number of outstanding leaders of the Knights of Columbus assembled at Notre Dame for the 82nd Commencement. They came to witness the diplomas conferred upon the eighteen young men comprising the first graduating class in Boy Guidance. So it is that leaders in boy work everywhere are looking to Notre Dame.

Someone has aptly said, "The vagabondage of the world begins in the neglect of boyhood". How fitting it is that a great Catholic university and a great Catholic fraternal body of men should have cooperated to attack this great and pressing problem by establishing a course which fits men to give sympathetic, intelligent and Christian guidance to the greatest asset of the nation, its boys.

George Keogan's baseball squad continued a half-and-half season, winding up with an even .500,—including the training trip however, which was started from this end in sleighs. Discarding the Southern exposure, the record of the squad approached the .600 mark at the end of the season, which wasn't at all discouraging. Coach Keogan started the season with a number of bad gaps to plug and was late in finding the men to fill these places.

The credit for the fine record of the team goes largely to the pitching staff, Elmer Besten, a junior in the College of Law; Steve Ronay, a junior in the Arts and Letters College, and Young Ed Walsh, son of the famous White Sox star, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Letters. Behind the plate Captain Jim Silver held sway early in the season but generously withdrew from many games to train Dick "Red" Smith, captain-elect of the team.

Smith's hitting during the last few games featured Notre Dame's play and the 1927 captain pounded pitcher after pitcher for long hard hits that kept Notre Dame well up in every game played. A habit of splitting a series seemed to pursue Notre Dame this year. Notre Dame defeated Iowa in the first game on June 15 at Notre Dame 5-1, and lost a game to the Hawkeyes 3-2 there the following week. In this game Besten allowed only one hit during the entire game. A similar condition arose when the U. of Georgia came north. Notre Dame won the first game 4-2, and the Southerners were pressed 10 innings to take the second 3-2. Michigan State defeated Notre Dame 5-2 at Lansing, but the Keoganites came back in the final game of the season on Cartier Field, June 12, before a Commencement crowd and batted the Michigan nine for a 6-0 win. The old rival St. Viators was crushed 12-3 in a drawn-out battle, postponed from April 24, to June 2.

Prospects for next year are unusually good. All three pitchers will be eligible and captain-elect Smith and his Big Stick will set a powerful example in the slugging line to the squad. The infield ought to be stronger than this year, profiting from experience. The outfield will be guarded by several returned veterans, handy with both bat and feet. Coach Keogan has had his eye on some new material during the year to fill in any emergency vacancies, and promises to put Notre Dame well on the way to another Western title.

Notre Dame's track season this year developed a well-balanced group of track and field men from a large group considerably lacking in experience when the season opened. Joe Della Maria, captain-elect of who developed most sensationally during the team for next year, was one of the men the year. Della Maria is a 100 and 220 dash man and pressed the world's champion, Roland Locke, in these events at the Drake Relays. Next year's captain, considering the phenomenal development he displayed this year is expected to lead his squad as fast a pace as did Captain Harrington of the 1926 team.

Harrington was the most brilliant figure of the 1926 season, and closed his career by winning the national intercollegiate meet pole vault event in Chicago on June 12 with a vault of 13 feet 3 inches, a new meet record, after an airplane dash from Notre Dame following his delivery of the valedictory of the Class of 1926 in Washington Hall at 10 o'clock in the morning. The Grand Rapids Press pays tribute to Harrington's character and achievements in the following editorial:

SCHOLAR AND ATHLETE

At a late hour Saturday morning young Mr. Harrington, valedictorian and honor student of the senior class at Notre Dame university, delivered his address at the university commencement, stressing eloquently the value of the spiritual in man's struggle for achievement. While the applause of his audience was still echoing, this same Mr. Harrington was hustling out of cap and gown and across the campus to a field at its edge, where he boarded an airplane to Soldiers field, Chicago.

At Soldiers field the best athletes of sixty-five colleges and universities were competing in the annual national intercollegiate track meet. The valedictorian, now Captain Harrington of the Notre Dame track team, pole-vaulted thirteen feet three inches to victory and a new meet record.

That is a very fair combination to hold up for student ambition these days—a great athlete, subject as all athletes are to the constant admiration of the crowd, but bearing the proof in his college record that he had constantly placed scholarship first, where it belongs; and carrying the further proof in his eloquent valedictory that he laid a proper estimate upon the uses of religion in a young man's journey to success.

Football

The football schedule for next fall is being printed here for the benefit of those who have a sudden desire during the warm days of July and August to know how hot the Notre Dame fall is going to be. The schedule seems to indicate clearly enough that Rock and his squad aren't going to have much time to get stiff. Alumni are urged to watch the interesting proofs that will probably be advanced, experience teaches us, to prove that Notre Dame's 1926 schedule is not so tough.

THE ALUMNI CLUBS

LOUISVILLE

J. R. Brown, secretary of the Notre Dame Club of Louisville, announces that that active organization has permanently established "The Notre Dame Cup", a large loving cup awarded annually to the student graduating from St. Xavier's high school, Louisville, with the highest scholastic and athletic standing. Mr. Brown states that the Club finds interest in Notre Dame high as a result of the announcement of the award of the cup, and that the members are enthusiastic about the plan.

SEATTLE

The following letter and clipping from E. L. Cochrane, secretary of the Notre Dame Club of Western Washington, are self-explanatory.

Editor N. D. Alumnus,
Notre Dame, Ind.

Dear Sir:

Just a few words to let you know that we of the North-West have not been so captivated by the wonderful spring we are enjoying as to forget N. D.

Twelve of us met at a luncheon at the College Club on Friday, May 21st, as per schedule in last months Alumnus, and made a few plans for the annual (we hope) Notre Dame picnic. The exact date has not as yet been decided, but will be shortly—just as soon as the committee decides on which is the choicest spot of our choicest country.

Enclosed, you will find a clipping from the Seattle Post Intelligencer concerning George Britten, O.S. '12, '13, and '14. George modestly disclaims any peculiar skill save that of diplomacy, which, he avers, he learned from Bro. Cyprian. He is now preparing a book upon the "Art and Science of selling Studebakers" at the request of his fellow salesmen.

Will have some real news for you when you when next I write,

Sincerely,

E. L. Cochrane.

THE CLIPPING

How did he do it? That's what George Britten's friends are asking on Auto Row. George, six years a salesman with Sands Motors Company, sold and delivered thirty-two automobiles in the month of April—fourteen new Studebakers and eighteen Sands plan used cars, the total amount exceeding $31,000. George says he does not feel as if he had done anything unusual, and he doesn't say just how he did it. According to P. E. Sands, president of the organization, Britten can sell an automobile in less than half the time it takes to tell some one how to do it.

George Britten made the highest individual monthly sales record last month ever made by any salesman in the Sands Motor Company, according to P. E. Sands. As far as we have been able to find out, this record has been exceeded only once by any Studebaker salesman in the country, a Studebaker salesman in New York City having made a bigger record last July.

CHICAGO

Those who were at the Commencement exercises will stand witness to the activities of the Chicago Club. Special badges were supplied to the members who were at Notre Dame for the event. Special efforts were made to secure a crowd and the results must have pleased the officers of the Club. An idea of the manner in which the Chicago Club officers are going after the members of the organization and the non-members of the organization can be gathered from the following letter:

Dear Fellow Member:

Are you willing to support the Notre Dame Club of Chicago and participate in its benefits? Activities for the balance of the year depend upon your support.

The Club has successfully conducted the social affairs of Universal Night and the May Dance.

On the more serious side it has been of service to Notre Dame men new in the city; has served to promote the companionship of its members; has advanced the interests of the University; and has created a scholarship fund for needy students.

As you know, one-half of each member's dues goes into the scholarship fund. The fund is now at work.

Every Cook County resident who has attended Notre Dame at any time is eligible to membership.

We want your active support. In any way the Club can extend favors it will do so. As with all organizations, there must be money with which to function. There is a mighty interesting program of activities ahead this year. If you expect to participate, it will be necessary to become actively identified with the Club.

Our plan is simple: Enclosed you will find three cards. Fill out one for yourself, and return it as directed, accompanied by your check. Then pledge yourself to see two other Notre Dame men. Fill out, or have them fill out, their cards, and return them at once as directed. With just this much cooperation from you, there will be a Notre Dame Club of Chicago that has never been equalled in strength.

Please perform NOW this most important duty.

Yours very truly,

Mark L. Duncan,

Chairman Membership Committee

Geo. M. Maypole,....

President

OKLAHOMA

Proof that the old oil is still flowing in Oklahoma is contained in the following message from Thomas Shea. Indications are that the Notre Dame boys have struck a gusher and are in for a busy time.

The Oklahoma Alumni met at the University Club at Tulsa for a dinner on May 14th., but there were only eight or nine present. It was decided that in order to procure a better attendance a dinner should be held every six months, the next to be at the University Club at Tulsa upon the occasion of some Notre Dame football game next fall. We will get the results of this game play by play, and at that time will select the place for the dinner at the next Notre Dame night. In the selection of officers, Leo Schumacher, '13, of Akmulgu, was selected as President, and John Moran, '25, Tulsa was selected as Secretary and Treasurer.

DETROIT

Charley Verbiest is making so much Notre Dame Noise in Detroit that he is out-fording Ford. Hear this:

Coming Events Cast Their Shadows
This time it's the Annual Intercollegiate Frolic, at the Book Cadillac, Saturday May 15.

Nothing more could be said concerning the Frolic than is stated in the enclosed circular—it is the One, Grand, All-University, Blow-out! But—

Notre Dame should have a representative attendance, and YOU are urged to put aside various and sundry cares, worries, and golf bags, so nothing can prevent YOU from being present.

Make up your mind, TODAY, that you WILL come. Then, while you are thinking about it, send in your reservation card; and please do not neglect returning the card, since only a limited number can be accommodated and it is absolutely necessary that reservation be made in advance.

You will readily understand that unless we receive these return cards, we have no way of telling how many to provide for. So, again, please return the card if you do not want to be disappointed.

Notre Dame's honor depends upon the number of men we can muster to represent her at this Frolic—so let's have at least a gallant one hundred N. D. men present.

C. M. Verbiest, Secretary.

N. B.—And in the offing—date to be announced later—a Notre Dame Dance with Harry Denny's Orchestra. That IS something to look forward to.

And Charley says on the back of the misile:

" . . . . And the Intercollegiate Frolic was a huge success. Notre Dame's group, while outnumbered, was not out-yelled and you can just bet your last dollar that everybody knew N. D. was represented. You simply can't beat the N. D. spirit in Detroit."

Catholic Education

I have in mind biology, misapplied to birth-control and psychology misapplied to psycho-analysis?

Just a moment ago I said that we are accused of a certain disdain towards scientific thinking. I tried to answer by saying that our disdain towards science, as it is applied, may be justified. I return to the charge, and I say now that if we are lacking in concern about science, we may counter by replying that we are very much concerned about the needs of life, and this is vastly more important than science. And so I take, before concluding, a line of thought that is preeminently practical and, I believe, characteristically American. Our system of "Religion in Education" works. We believe that every tenet of our Faith is justifiable by reason, so far as reason can reach. We believe that our institutions and practices are traceable to primitive Christian ordinance and custom, to the mandate of Christ delivered to the Apostles and by their successors developed and adopted under the infallible Guidance of a Supreme Pontiff who is divinely guaranteed against error in Faith and Morals. But even if we were wrong in our Theology, even if we were proved false to historical tradition, even if logic and psychology and physics and biology and all the other sciences could show our position to be wrong are we not right in practice? Are we not right in the beneficial influence we exert on the young and growing mind? Are we not right, from the American point of view, in our influence on the group, in our training for citizenship and parenthood, in our restraint of those influences that threaten the nation and the family?

My dear young men. I cannot tell you how much attention you have paid or will pay to my words. You are, naturally looking forward rather than backward. Then let me, for a moment, look forward with you. The world will, inevitably, engulf you in its cares, its responsibilities, its loves and its hates. That cannot be avoided; indeed it is not desirable that it should be avoided. For you have been trained to take each your part in the drama of life and you are expected to take what part choice or fate may assign to you, to take it and to act it manfully, courageously, with the flag of noble purpose flying high, with generous resolves in your hearts inspiring your efforts, your hopes and your dreams of success. The world which will, as I said engulf you, need not, and must not, absorb you completely. High above the confusion of conflict, in the clash of competition and of fair and honest rivalry, there is one acquisition of yours that you must not throw into the arena, there is one acquired advantage that you must never sacrifice, one precious quality which the world must not take away from you; it is not to be an object of barter, it is not to be sold, to be bargained for, to be wasted, and that is your Education at this Catholic seat of learning, the ideals, the convictions, the habits of personal piety, the rule of public religious observance that you have acquired here. These you owe to Notre Dame; these are the core of your loyalty to your University, these will be your profession before the world of that loyalty; these, and the continued preservation of them will be the surest test of your gratitude to the teachers who have given you so much, the enduring pledge of your fealty to your fellow alumni, the surest sign of your lasting sentiment of reverence for this sacred place.

The time will inevitably come for each of you when many of life's illusions will have failed and the tides of life will seem to be falling. I change the medium of thought to one which is nearer to my own habits and pursuits, and say that, for your life is an open book on which you may write your own record. Some day it will appear to you as a book bound and clasped. Your achievements, your aspirations, realized or frustrated, will be written in that book of your retrospective memory beyond possibility of recall. Disappointment or satisfaction may be yours as you think of the record written therein, a record you can no longer amend or delete. My hope and my prayer is that, as you think, in the mellowing years of your career, you may take consolation in the thought that the record you have written and can no longer cancel or change will be worthy of your Alma Mater, of your Country, of your Church, and your idea of your duty to God.

THE ALUMNI

(Under the various classes the members will find the names of those who registered for the Eighty-second Annual Commencement. The editor has an idea that some Alumni returned who failed to inscribe in the good book, but the list will give the absent members of the classes a good idea of the fine group that was on hand for the Commencement, and the editor hopes that next year the list will be too long to print in The Alumnus.)

1865

Mark Foote, '73, was forced to relinquish his claims to antiquity and to stand on the side lines among the "younger alumni" when the register, early Friday morning, recorded JOHN C. DUNLAP, A.B. '65, Mr. Dunlap is the oldest living lay alumnus. Rev. J. R. DINNEN, '65. Honorary President of the Notre Dame Club of the Wabash Valley, is the only class-mate of Mr. Dunlap now living. Mr. Dunlap was the center of much interest and told many interesting stories of the Notre Dame of his day to the younger graduates. He exchanged many reminiscences with Rev. Thomas Vagnier, C.S.C., El '68, who was a teacher at Notre Dame when Mr. Dunlap was a student. Mr. Dunlap was engaged in railroad construction work in Chicago until a few years ago when he retired. He is very active and walked about the campus constantly. Mr. Dunlap lives at 5460 Woodlawn Ave., Chicago.

A. C. King, an old student of '71, visited the campus Monday, June 15, for the first time in the 55 years since his departure. And Mr. King lives at Ogden and Catalpa Sts., Benton Harbor, Michigan, 35 miles away. Mr. King was amazed at the changes that have taken place during the time he has been out of touch with Notre Dame and took delight in going over the old ground and seeing the many new buildings. He was disappointed at having missed the many old grads that were here for Commencement and promised to visit the campus frequently and to renew interest in the school.

ALLAN DWAN probably won't be troubled much with insubordination on the part of his actors from now on. Reason:

Ed Garvey, famous all American tackle at Notre Dame, later captain of Red Grange's professional pigskin chasers, and for a brief spell a heavyweight pugilistic aspirant, has deserted athletics for the movies, and is now third assistant director to Allan Dwan at the Paramount Long-Island studio. Garvey is now at work with Mr. Dwan on "Tin Gods," in which Thomas Meighan is starred and Renee Adoree and Aileen Pringle are featured.

VAUGHAN & VAUGHAN, Lafayette, Ind., are once more in the legal limelight as the sponsors for the legality of a $650,000 bond issue for St. Margaret's Hospital, an institution conducted by the Poor Sisters of St. Francis, Seraph, of the Perpetual Adoration. The Poor Sisters are centered in Lafayette, incorporated under Indiana law, and own twenty hospitals in this country.

that. The following announcement indi-

June. The South Bend Tribune completes the story's essentials as follows:

As a climax to the many prenuptial affairs during the last two weeks, a lovely June wedding was solemnized at 10 o'clock this morning with a solemn high mass in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, when Miss Julia M. Roy, daughter of Regis Roy, 949 Lincoln Way East, became the bride of William R. Maher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Maher, of Madison, Wis. The ceremony was performed by Very Rev. John R. Keller, Rev. William Carey, C.S.C., and Rev. John Bapst, before 450 guests, at an altar banked with pink peonies and palms.

Prof. M. S. Kunkle played Mendelssohn's wedding march and during the ceremony Miss Marie O'Brien sang "Ave Maria" and "O Promise Me". The bridal procession was led by the ushers, including Augustus Stange, of Merrill, Wis., J. R. Bergman, of Chicago; Michael Duffecy, of Indianapolis, and James Crowley, of Green Bay, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Maher have left on a wedding trip and after Sept. 8. will be at home in the Gilcher Hotel, Danville, Ky., where Mr. Maher is athletic director at Center college.

The bride is a prominent member of the younger set of Mishawaka, having graduated from the local High school. She also attended St. Mary's college. Mr. Maher is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame in the class of 1924.

The following letter is going to be a big surprise to a lot of Alumni, if the reaction of the editor to it is a criterion. But Jim has already set the Twin City Club in rapid motion and it's a good thing to have his pep transferred to Arkansas.

It's a far far cry from Camden, Arkansas, to Minneapolis, Minnesota but the combined vocal effort of Twomey Clifford of the class of '14 and Matt Rothert of the gang of '24, reached me in the latter city and resulted in my joining the ranks of Camden citizens for the purpose of practicing law with Clifford. And the newly formed Camden Notre Dame club hereby extends its hearty welcome to any and all of the good brethern who may find themselves in southern Arkansas to dash in and pour themselves a flock of corn from the N. D. jug. Twomey is the city attorney in our city and we guarantee immunity from rough and discourteous treatment by the strong arm of the law.

Old Matt Rothert is at this very moment burning the insulation off our office phone convincing some local belle that his one desire in life is to fold up with her and spend the rest of his life whispering sweet nothings into her rosebud ear. The lad tells 'em all the same story however so there is no immediate danger of his capitulating into the sea of connubial blisters. I might also add for the edification of the '14 boys that Twomey Clifford is alleged to be engaged to one of the souths sweetest. Twomey refuses to submit to cross-examination but judging from appearances the allegations are absolutely correct.

In the event that the Twin City gang have not reported on the Universal Notre Dame Night festivities I'll hand you the following brief statement of facts. About fifty members attended the affair given at the St. Francis Hotel in St. Paul. The party was a dinner with plenty of good tepid entertainment. Committees were appointed to look into the matter of a scholarship and to produce publicity in the Minneapolis and St. Paul papers. The boys had the usual good time. The following week the club came through with a farewell dinner for me and also presented me with a beautiful gladstone bag which is now my pride and joy. Paul Skahen, Assistant County Attorney at Minneapolis, was elected to the presidency but I don't remember the other offices. It was not a night to tax one's memory.

Last week-end Art Carmody of the class of '15 dashed over from Shreveport, La. to enter into the spirit of a Notre Dame reunion as an incident to calling upon the girl of his dreams who is a Camden resident and one thousand percent. Paul Fogarty of the class of '17 was also here but was suffering from a temporary attack of poor health. As you well know, Notre Dame has a healthy representation in the south and perhaps we shall toss a real reunion next fall. Harvey Brown is at St. Louis University and promised to dash down and throw a party with us in August. Chet Grant is figuring on coming to Little Rock from St. Paul right after his school lets out and in the event that he gets that far we shall see that he is greeted and feted in Camden.

The New Camden Club, consisting of Twomey, Matt and myself are now making plans to attend Homecoming next fall and in the meantime we would be mighty glad to hear from or see any of the boys.

Yours very truly,
Jim Swift.

CLIFF NOONAN was lost for a while but turned up at "Fourteen Seventeen Railway Exchange, Chicago". Cliff was expected for Commencement but failed to materialize.

The Port Huron Times-Herald contains the following interesting note on the progress of one of the '24 lawyers. The article was accompanied by a photograph of the subject, which printer's technique prevents reproducing.

Newell DeGurse, Marine City, was today appointed second assistant prosecutor to succeed Jesse P. Wolcott, who resigned Saturday and announced that he would be a candidate for the nomination for prosecuting attorney at the primary election, Sept. 14.

Mr. Soutar also today announced that he would be a candidate for the nomination as prosecutor for a third term at the September primary. Mr. DeGurse is a son of Dr. and Mrs. T. E. DeGurse, Marine City, and is a graduate of the law department of the Notre Dame University in 1924. He has been practicing law in Marine City and Port Huron since leaving college, and is well known throughout the county.

Mr. DeGurse said today that he expected to resign his position as justice of the peace in Marine City.

June (again). This time an announcement tells the tale. "Mrs. William Jerome Stumpf announces the marriage of her friend Miss Pearl Theo (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theo Gim Tong) to Mr. SANTIAGO VELASCO on Sunday, the eleventh of April nineteen hundred and twenty-six at the Ateneo de Manila, Manila, Phillipine Island." A penned note adds that Miss Theo is an A.M. from the University of Michigan.

HAROLD C. WATSON is auditing with the Travelers Ins. Co., traveling out of Milwaukee. He says, "Occasionally I stumble onto and old grad and shoot away several hours. TOM BARRY of our class of 1925 is now located in this city and I see him once in a while." Watson's address is c/o the Travelers Ins. Co., First Wisconsin National Bank Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

I was recently transferred from Minnesota territory to this Wisconsin sand and clay. Give my regards to all the gang. My address is 3425 Pillsbury Ave., Minneapolis.

A Philosophic Profession

The Law? No; although like the law it requires a grasp of affairs, economics, and tendencies.

Medicine? No; although like medicine its practice requires insight into human character.

The Ministry? No; although there is in it much of that interest in the welfare of others which distinguishes the minister.

This profession is the underwriting of life insurance.

What we are saying, and have been saying in these pages, is that we, as a strong and established company, have to offer to an educated man not only adequate financial return for ability shown, not only freedom for and encouragement in the exercise of ingenuity and originality, but also a connection with a business which can and does feed, as few can or do, your immeasurably strong and important hunger for philosophic satisfaction in daily work.
