COMMENT

One result of our excursions into the field of preparatory education and our investigations of comparative data from other colleges, is that alumni can rest assured that Notre Dame offers an A-1 education in all of its branches at a cost below average.

Recent figures released by the United States Office of Education reveal that the typical cost for the year, including all types of higher educational institutions, from a group of 359 such colleges, is $630 for the year. Costs at privately controlled institutions, the report adds, run higher, — "the typical economical freshman, however, spends from $1,000 up in the following institutions: Colgate, Dartmouth, Georgetown, Harvard, Lehigh, Princeton, Wesleyan, Williams, and Yale."

Even compared to costs at State schools, witness this excerpt: "... but in thirty-nine other State institutions a student must provide from $500 to $800, especially if he selects one in California, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, Alaska, or Hawaii."

Therefore Notre Dame's costs to the student — $686 for the year in Brownson and Carroll halls; $758 for the year in the double rooms in Freshman (nee Sophomore) Hall, and $803 for the year in the single (mostly) rooms in magnificent Dillon Hall — are low on any basis of comparison, including as they do: Tuition - Board - Room - Medical service - Libraries - Lectures and concerts (weekly movie) - Laundry - Admission to all home games - Use of Athletic Facilities (including 18-hole golf course) - The Scholastic and the Dome.

Where the Notre Dame student gains is the provision made for spare time on the Notre Dame campus, with a resulting reduction of incidental costs to a point hardly exceeding, in any necessary measure, the fixed fees.

The academic growth of Notre Dame has been interpreted in these pages too many times to require repetition. Notre Dame graduates are succeeding in every phase of life for which Notre Dame prepares men. Graduates of the University undergraduate schools have found it possible to transfer to all leading professional schools for graduate work, with very satisfactory results.

When you recommend Notre Dame to a boy, you are doing Notre Dame a favor. If he is a fine type of boy, you're doing yourself a favor. But most important of all, you can feel assured that you are doing the boy a favor.

PHILLIPS' LIBRARY

The ALUMNUS has just learned of the very generous gift to the University Library of the bulk of the private library of the late Prof. Charles Phillips. Mrs. Eva Phillips Donahue, a sister, and Frank Phillips, brother, are the donors.

To the hundreds of alumni who spent so many brilliant hours of reading and conversation in the famous tower room of Sorin, news of the permanent acquisition of these volumes by the University Library will be of particular interest.

From his wide contacts and his rare appreciation, Prof. Phillips had gleaned a library of unusual literary value. Years of selection had made his library at the time of his death a shrine for himself and one which was generously shared with all who chose to enter. It was, during his ten years at Notre Dame, the literary capital of an ever-widening circle of students and faculty.

No. 7

Monday, April 16 !

Our major objective is observance in some form by EVERY LOCAL CLUB!
Big or small, Notre Dame, in your community, is pretty much what YOU make it.
Schedule the kind of party that will include EVERYONE.
Elaborate entertainment is unnecessary; expense should be avoided.
Rather a hundred men and a keg of beer than ten with champagne.
Vital issues sometimes aren't attractive. Don't be afraid to RELAX.
Enlist the coöperation of as many members as possible in making arrangements.

Bulletin!

N. FATHER O'DONNELL WILL BE AT N. D. SEND HIM A WORD OF
D. GREETING AND CHEER!
It's the last U.N.D. Night of his Presidency. Make it memorable!

Name a publicity committee early. Identity is one of the major benefits.
I nvite as many boys from your community prep schools as you can.
Get as many pastors and schoolmen as your guests as circumstances permit.
Have a whole and wholesome picture of N.D. presented to both alumni and guests.
Take the Club's temperature this year. Let's eliminate both chills and fever.

Send word of the meeting to the ALUMNUS.
Our Lady is our guest of honor.
Many of our alumni are outstanding. See that this Night recognizes them.
Every thing that does credit to a Notre Dame man reflects honor to Notre Dame.
Hunt for the N.D. men who haven't been active and have them on hand.
On this One Night of the year, "Notre Dame for All, and All for Notre Dame."

Frank Walker, '09, Commencement Speaker

Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., and Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate, Are To Be At 90th Annual Exercises, According to Announcement.

His Excellency, the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D.D., Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will preside over the 90th annual commencement exercises of the University, it was announced recently by the Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., vice-president.

The exercises will be held Sunday, June 3.

The Hon. Frank C. Walker, a graduate of the class of 1909, and present executive secretary of President Roosevelt's National Emergency Council, will deliver the commencement oration.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D.D., auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, Md., will preach the baccalaureate sermon.

Archbishop Cicognani has long been interested in Notre Dame through his friendship with the Very Rev. George M. Sauvage, procurator general in Rome, of the Congregation of Holy Cross. This will be His Excellency's first visit to the campus.

Bishop McNamara has been closely associated with members of the Congregation of Holy Cross in Washington for 25 years. Many priests now at Notre Dame assisted in parish work under him when he was curate at St. Patrick's parish in Washington.

Mr. Walker received his LL.B.,

degree from Notre Dame in 1909. He returned to Butte, Montana, his home city, where he had a successful law career. Business interests brought him to New York City, his present home.

The Most Reverend John M. McNamara, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore.

He was one of the original sponsors of Roosevelt for president, and he became Treasurer of the Democratic National Committee in 1932. It is rumored that he has refused positions in the cabinet on more than one occasion. He has given unselfish service to the administration, however, in the execution of the relief measures passed by Congress to remedy the depression. He has also devoted his time and talents to University work as a member of the board of lay trustees.

FEENEY TO RECEIVE FLAG ASSOCIATION AWARD

An International News Service story from Indianapolis on March 1 had the following to say about Al Feeney, '13:

State Safety Director Al Feeney today was nominated by a committee of three prominent Hoosiers for the U. S. Flag association's Indiana award as the person who contributed most to law enforcement during 1933.

The committee was composed of Attorney General Philip Lutz, jr., a Democrat, Wilbur G. Nolan of Fowler, former Benton county prosecutor, and Felix McWhirter of Indianapolis, president of the Indiana Banders' association, both Republicans.

"Feeney is the individual who was most prominent in 1933 in contributing to that branch of law enforcement in Indiana having to do with the apprehension and investigation of criminals," the committee held.

A medal will be presented to Feeney with appropriate ceremonies at a date to be set later by the flag association.

The points on which Feeney won the award were:

His advocacy of the establishment of a statewide police radio system with funds derived from public subscriptions collected under the auspices of the Indiana Bankers' association.

His establishment of the famed road blockade system which frightened all active criminals out of the state.

His establishment of a state police

Layden Greeted at 'Home Town' Testimonial

Father O'Hara, Dean McCarthy, Paul Castner, Don Miller and Marchie Schwartz Are Among N. D. Speakers; Carnegie Report Draws Several Attacks.

BY ARTHUR L. HIMBERT, '32, Secretary, Notre Dame Club of the Tri-Cities

Greeted by a crowd of approximately 600 men and boys, including notables in the athletic and educational world and prominent personalities in business, professional, and religious circles, Elmer Layden, '25, returned home in the role of a conquering hero to receive the felicitations of his fellow townsmen at a testimonial dinner given by the citizens of Davenport and sponsored by the Notre Dame Club of the Tri-Cities, in the Gold Room of the Hotel Blackhawk, Davenport, Thursday evening, March 1. It was Elmer's first appearance in his home city since he was elevated to the position of athletic director and head football coach at Notre Dame, and the affair was the largest banquet gathering ever held in the Tri-Cities.

Former teammates of Elmer expressed themselves as confident of his ability in meeting the responsibility of his new position and called the appointment as athletic director and grid coach an ideal one. The selection was given such widespread approval that one of the speakers during the evening remarked: "Even our opponents are happy that Layden has been made football coach at Notre Dame. When our enemies rejoice I am forced to grow a little suspicious."

"I am taking the place of a great Notre Dame man in 'Hunk' Anderson," said Elmer, as he calmly arose after listening humbly to expressions of congratulations, praise, and best wishes from all sides. "I am following somebody, too, who can never be surpassed. I am not a Rockne. He taught me everything I know about football. He influenced my entire life. All I can do is my best, and you can rest assured that Notre Dame will get the best that I know how to give."

Elmer humorously remarked that he has a two-fold program for Notre Dame. His first move, he said, will be to "set up a defense for the downtown coaches," and the other will be to "get the Bendix Corporation to take the brakes off our backs."

The program was opened with the unveiling of two life-sized portraits of Knute Rockne and Elmer Layden, performed during the singing, in requiem and march tempo respectively, of the Notre Dame Victory March by John Gerwe, accompanied by Trave O'Hearn and his orchestra. Following the invocation by the Rt. Rev.

"Erudition"

"It did not require the logic of Father O'Hara to dispose of the charge that athletics have been over-emphasized in those schools which have enjoyed singular records of victory. The manner in which Layden's team mates and others who had gained fame on the gridiron responded to the call from the toastmaster made answer to that. Those who had electrified countless thousands in stadia from coast to coast, gave evidence of a facility of speech, of erudition and of other adornments of the mind which revealed them as much at home at the banquet table as on the football field.

"No occasion in years, through which Davenport sought to honor in a public manner one held in the high community regard, was so replete in gracious expression, so happily punctuated with humor and so vibrant with the spirit of which the immortal Rockne was the noblest exemplar."

From an editorial, "Davenport Honors a Native Son," in the Davenport Times of March 2, 1934

William P. Shanahan, vicar general of the diocese of Davenport, brief talks were made by Richard B. Swift, '20, president of the Notre Dame Club of the Tri-Cities, and Henry C. Wurzer, '25, chairman of the testimonial executive committee, who introduced the toastmaster, George J. McCabe, of Davenport. Mayor George C. Tank, of Davenport, in delivering the address of welcome, brought a roar from the crowd when he remarked that "the seven mules who were on the line for the 'Four Horsemen' must have been Democrats."

Don Miller, '25, of Cleveland, Ohio, the only other "Horseman" able to attend, corrected Mayor Tank later in the evening. "The seven mules were not Democrats," said Miller. "They must have been Republicans. They never got their names in the papers."

The recent Carnegie foundation report, in which the University of Notre Dame and Southern California were attacked for overemphasizing football, drew the criticism of several speakers, particularly the Reverend John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., '11, vice-president, and acting president of Notre Dame.

"I suppose the proper thing for us to do," declared Father O'Hara, "would be to deflate football because we lost a few games last year. We certainly are not going to deflate a thing that makes us take it on the chin standing up. If we can't take it, then we have lost the reason for our existence. We want the boys of Notre Dame to learn how to take it, and I am mighty sure they proved in 1933 that they can. Football players are not dumb. They couldn't play that kind of a game if they were. I am not worried about overemphasis when a school produces men like Elmer Layden."

Father O'Hara said that he did not select Elmer Layden as Notre Dame's football coach. "This was done by Father O'Donnell, the president of the University," he revealed. "I always believed Elmer's acid test would be met when it came time for his home town to express itself. He has passed the test tonight and that makes it unanimous."

Lieutenant Colonel Alexander S. Gillespie, acting commandant of the Rock Island Arsenal, and captain of the 1905 West Point football team, spoke in behalf of the Army, a traditional rival of the Irish. "Football never has been over-emphasized," he said. "It is impossible to overemphasize it. Coaches are paid more than professors because they are worth it. I might add that until recently I was a professor myself. On behalf of the Army, I welcome the appointment of Layden as Notre Dame's coach and hope his 1934 team wins all of its games except one."

Ossie Solem, football coach at the University of Iowa, who was introduced as the "miracle man of Iowa," walked up to the center of the speakers' table, and while glancing at Father O'Hara, said: "This is no place for an old Norwegian with all these 'monsignors' in the crowd." Ossie added that the Iowa-Notre Dame game of 1921 was the greatest in the history of middle-west football, and concluded with "I look forward to the resumption of athletic relations between Notre Dame and Iowa. I am anticipating the time when Layden leads his team into Iowa."

Other speakers were Marchmont Schwartz, '33, now backfield coach at the University of Chicago; Rev. D. B. Coyne, director of athletics at Columbia College, Dubuque, Iowa; J. E.

McCarthy, dean of the College of Commerce at Notre Dame; Paul Castner, '23, Cleveland, Ohio.

Before the presentation to Elmer of an electric clock, with the figure of a football player on top, by John C. Schenk, secretary of the Davenport Chamber of Commerce, Oscar F. Smith, '95, captain of the first Notre Dame baseball team; Judge Patrick Nelson, '88, captain of the first football team in 1887; "Five Yards" MacCarthy, former University of Chicago star; Harry O'Boyle, '27, a former Notre Dame football star;

George Bresnahan, track coach at the University of Iowa; Thomas F. Layden, father of Elmer; and A. I. Naumann, principal of Davenport High School, where Elmer began his football career, were introduced.

Telegrams expressing their regrets at not being able to attend the testimonial were received from Harry Stuhldreher, '25, head coach at Villanova College, and Jimmy Crowley, '25, football coach at Fordham University.

The addresses were broadcast by radio station WHBF, Rock Island, commencing at 8 o'clock. A delay occurred in getting the program under way when a number of youngsters forced their way to the speakers' tale to have Coach Layden autograph programs and memento books.

Members of the executive committee in charge of the testimonial were Henry C. Wurzer, chairman; V. O. Figge, J. Ralph Coryn, Elmer Besten, John O'Donnell, Leo Kuntz, Francis King, and Richard B. Swift. The honorary committee was composed of prominent business and professional men of the Tri-Cities.

This picture, according to Dick Swift, shows only about 400 of the 600 persons who attended the Layden banquet in Davenport. Father O'Hara, Elmer Layden and Dean McCarthy can be seen among those at the speakers' table along with Dick Swift, Paul Castner, Don Miller, and Hank Wurzer.

NOTRE DAME MAN DESIGNS "MICHIGAN'S FINEST"

Joseph C. Goddeyne, '11, Bay City, Michigan, is receiving wide praise and publicity as the architect of the new $500,000 county building in Bay City. Inspected by thousands in the last few weeks, the building is called the most modern of its kind in the state of Michigan. On the exterior it is illuminated by 98 floodlights which help to reveal the beauty and character which Mr. Goddeyne conceived for it.

A picture of the building and a picture of Mr. Goddeyne, both clipped from the Bay City Daily Times, were very kindly sent to the Alumni Office by William S. Wilkin, '95, of Bay City. Said Mr. Wilkin in part: "The architect and engineer, Mr. Jos. Goddeyne, an old N. D. man, has made a great name for himself since leaving college."

Mrs. Brady Receives Laetare Medal For 1934

Prominent New York Philanthropist Is Eleventh Woman to Receive Award; Is Chairman of Girl Scouts of America and Founder of Carroll Club.

Mrs. Genevieve Garvan Brady, New York philanthropist and present vice-chairman under Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt of the National Women's Committee on Welfare and Relief Mobilization, was on March 10 named recipient of the 1934 Laetare Medal, bestowed annually by the University of Notre Dame upon an outstanding member of the American Catholic laity. Mrs. Brady was chairman of the committee before Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Laetare Medal has been given annually for 51 years and has become recognized as the highest honor a Catholic lay person can receive in the United States. The name of the recipient is announced on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday of Lent each year, a day set aside for rejoicing in anticipation of the near approach of Easter. John McCormack, famous tenor, received the golden jubilee award last June at the Notre Dame commencement exercises.

Mrs. Brady is the 11th woman to receive the award. The latest was Margaret Anglin, famous New York actress. Others were Eliza Allen Starr, Anna Hanson Dorsey, Mrs. James Sadlier, Mary Gwendolin Caldwell, Katherine E. Conway, Mrs. Frances Tiernan (Christian Reid), Agnes Repplier, Mary V. Merrick, and Elizabeth Nourse. Miss Anglin received the medal in 1927.

During the World war, Mrs. Brady purchased the Old Colony club in New York City which was used by the United States government as a mobilization center for nurses embarking overseas. The building has been used since the war to house the Carroll club, founded by Mrs. Brady in honor of her mother, Mary Carroll Garvan, as a club for business girls and professional women. The club is a recognized center for Catholic women in the furtherance of Catholic Action.

Mrs. Brady is chairman of the board of the Girl Scouts of America, having succeeded Mrs. Herbert Hoover. She was a member of the national board for many years.

Upon the death of her husband in 1930 Mrs. Brady succeeded him as vice-president of the Welfare Council of New York City and a member of the finance committee of the council. She has been vice-chairman of the Social Service Board of New York City since 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady were honored in 1926 by Pope Pius XI with the titles of Duke and Duchess, the highest honor conferred by the Pontiff upon the laity in the United States. The French government decorated

Mrs. Genevieve Garvan Brady, Recipient of the Laetare Medal for 1934.

Mrs. Brady for her help to the French during the World war. The late King Albert of Belgium in 1928 bestowed the decoration of the Order of the Crown upon Mrs. Brady, and this was presented by the Prince de Ligne.

Mrs. Brady was born in Hartford, Conn. She attended the Sacred Heart convent at Manhattanville, N. Y., and the Sacred Heart convent at Providence, R. I. She studied for two years in Dresden and for one year in Paris.

No date has been set for the presentation of the medal.

The Laetare medal is given by Notre Dame as a recognition of merit and as an incentive to greater achievement. The custom of awarding it originated with the Papal practice of bestowing the Golden Rose upon a member of the Italian Catholic nobility on Laetare Sunday. The practice began at Notre Dame in 1883 with the Very Rev. Edward F. Sorin, C.S.C., founder and first president of the University.

Among the 50 names which appear on the roll of previous medalists are persons from every walk of life—statesmen, physicians, artists, writers, financiers, actors, soldiers, scientists, engineers, architects, philosophers, jurists, orators, musicians, and economists.

Among the more recent recipients of the medal are Dr. Stephen S. Maher, the Hon. Alfred E. Smith, the late Edward N. Hurley, Dr. Albert F. Zahm, Charles D. Maginnis, Dr. James J. Walsh, Joseph Scott, Charles P. Neill, Jack J. Spalding, Frederick P. Kenkel, James J. Phelan and John McCormack.

Mrs. Brady was selected by the medal committee which had been considering its standing list of prospective medalists during the past two months.

BOY LEADERSHIP COURSE

Many Notre Dame alumni, enlisted by their parish priests and civic organizations, will be interested in the announcement of the twelfth annual session in Boy Leadership which has just come from Professor R. A. Hoyer, '24, head of the boy guidance department, who will serve as director. The 1934 session will begin the morning of July fifth and continue through the afternoon of the fourteenth. As usual, the students will be housed in one of the residence halls and will eat in the University dining room. The Boy Life Bureau of the Knights of Columbus is cooperating with the University in the conduct of the course.

The general purpose of the session is to acquaint Catholic men, eighteen years of age and over, with the best methods and programs for the guidance of Catholic boys during their leisure hours. The need for the leisure-time guidance of youth has probably never been more pressing than it is today. The enforced idleness of so many of our boys has created a serious problem for boys and parents alike. It is well known that misuse of leisure leads to evil, inevitably to crime and vice. The session in Boy Guidance covers instruction in recreation programs and activities well adapted and interesting to boys of every age level.

The school is operated on a cost-to-student basis, with one fee of twenty dollars for meals, lodging, tuition, and literature. Applications should be made to Mr. Hoyer who will be glad to give additional information upon request. A descriptive folder will be available by the end of April.

"Go West Young Man"--Greeley And Armstrong

In Which Young Men of Manhattan and Other Points East Learn, Through School Assemblies, Interviews, Alumni Meetings, Radio, and the Printed Word, the Advantages of Notre Dame.

Buffalo! Rochester! Syracuse! Utica! Albany! Springfield! Boston! Providence! Waterbury! Bridgeport! New York City! Newark! Binghamton! Scranton! Allentown! Philadelphia! Baltimore! Washington!

Not a train-caller's nightmare — just that Itinerary, that occupied the better part of six weeks for the Alumni Secretary in a most pleasant, and I trust mutually profitable, manner.

The "mutual" ramifies to the extent of sixteen Local Alumni Clubs, numerous high and prep schools, more numerous personal interviews, several parish and Knights of Columbus gatherings, one Rotary Club and one radio station broadcast, together with the many alumni whose independent cooperation added materially to the success of the enterprise, both from the University and personal angles. Also, to the key cities mentioned can be added a number of associated communities to which, come sleet come storm, visits were made possible.

Space forbids justice to the men and the institutions whose helpfulness will undoubtedly be rewarded by the stimulation of that splendid phase of Catholic Action, the promotion of the interest of Catholic higher education.

I shall give only a short resume of the trip, in the hope that it will carry between the few actual lines those vast interlinear implications of effort, of sacrifice, of cooperation, of constructive contribution in every way, that marked this year the response of the Notre Dame Clubs, and the men who compose them, to this responsibility of the Association.

Starting February 15 in Buffalo, where winter records of years standing had already been shattered, an alumni meeting generally was not called because of weather, and because a fine turnout had been held the week previous. The Club is on the jump, enjoying a Recovery Act of its own and needed no encouragement. President Henry Burns, Paul Hoeffler, Jay L. Lee and Joe Shea, the latter a suave and genial part of the Statler set-up, had made the necessary arrangements. The always cordial St. Joseph's Collegiate Institute extended through Brother Cassian an opportunity to address the senior class there. Bennett, one of the fine Buffalo high schools, extended an opportunity to discuss Notre Dame there. Drove out with Paul Hoeffler to a new, up-and-coming high school just outside Buffalo in Amherst. Met the friendly and interesting librarian there, Miss Ray. Had a nice chat with Dr. Robert Burns, District Governor, the telephone overcoming the elements.

Arrived in Rochester February 18, with a Sunday night supper at Gerry Smith's waiting, followed by an informal meeting of the alumni at the Sagamore. Visited John Marshall, West and Madison high schools and found a fine interest in Notre Dame. Aquinas, whose friendship for Notre Dame has always been reflected in a large number of students on the University's roster, found it impossible to make arrangements within the limited time at my disposal. Father Grady was absent, but stopped to say hello to Father Wurzer, the assistant principal. Ward Schlotzer got up from an attack of pleurisy to perform his executive duties. Bill Jones was very kind and efficient as tour conductor. Jerry "Kid" Ashe was, as always, on the job. A regular meeting of the Club was held on Monday night at the Sagamore. With the "hotel interview" system supplementing the meetings and school activities, could not get out much to look up the fellows I missed, such as, in Rochester, "Stubby" Flynn and a few familiars.

In Syracuse February 20. Found Father Joe Toomey interpreting Catholic Charities to include freighting Alumni Secretaries about the school city. The success of his cooperation is indicated by the results. We visited, and spoke in each case to the entire senior class, five high schools — St. Mary's Cathedral High School and St. John the Evangelist High School in the morning, and Christian Brothers Academy, St. Lucy's High School and St. John the Baptist High School in the afternoon. George Kelley, unable to make the dinner planned, stopped in for a fine personal visit. The rest of the crowd, in encouraging numbers, were on hand for the dinner and meeting which President Vincent Brown and Leo Kelley had arranged in time for me to make the ever-present schedule that sped me through these otherwise alluring stops.

Paying my first call on the infant Club in Utica, Feb. 21, I found it enjoying much of the wisdom and dignity of its elders. Spoke to all the boys in St. Francis de Sales High School and the Utica Catholic Academy. Doctor John Kelly had made numerous fine arrangements. That I fulfilled them was ably seen to by Doc, Frank Donalty and Joe Fullem, who spent the day at it. In the evening a fine turnout of the Club joined in a Notre Dame dinner at the hotel, from which pleasant exchange of enlightenment we rushed to the auditorium of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, where I was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Men's Club. Enjoyed a number of pleasant contacts through my "bodyguard." The whole city, thanks to the efforts of Doc Kelly and the Club, was looking forward to the visit of the University Glee Club on April 4.

To the Capitol District, headquarters in Albany. John Meehan came through great snowdrifts on Washington's Birthday to take me over to Schenectady. St. Columba's High School there was in session and Father Thompson and the Sisters very kindly invited me to speak to the assembly. Visited the famous G-E plant where several of our alumni, John Huether, Frank Duquette and Owen D. Young are doing very nicely. Even as a journalist, I enjoyed the House of Magic. Due to weather conditions, we held a sub-Club meeting that night at Meehan's with the host, Jack Huether, Frank Duquette and Dave and Jim O'Brien. Next day between President Tom Dollard and Frank Disney, I visited the always cordial Vincentian Institute and Christian Brothers Academy in Albany, and the Catholic Central High School in Troy. A fine turnout of alumni assembled at Keeler's Restaurant for the alumni meeting Friday night.

Springfield was the one big air pocket of the trip. My correspondence to Pat Granfield was evidently sidetracked, and the result was that Pat was away on a West Indies cruise or some such tropical venture, with no word left behind. Couldn't locate Mickey Kane, and meanwhile the most able and efficient of the several blizzards en route seemed about to locate me in the Connecticut Valley. Having paid my respects to Cathedral High School by phone, I then seized time by the forelock and headed for Boston.

In Boston, the blizzard accompanying me was being met at the depot by a very outstanding blizzard which had arrived a week earlier. Nevertheless, Joe Gartland, District Governor, braved it to take me to dinner, and the following day Charley "Red" Crowley and I enjoyed an almost snowbound New England for a 20-mile trek to Danvers, where I interviewed a number of boys at St. John's. Contacted Boston English High School the following day and spoke to fine group. The blizzard made a meeting impossible. But in addition to Joe and Charley, I enjoyed dinner with President Joe Sullivan and Secretary Bob Hearn. Eddie Anderson is going to school day and night and Sunday, making a hit in every direction. John McManmon is prominent in the racing circles, having launched the McManmon stable. Father O'Hara's visit had recently brought out the Club's fine strength.

Rhode Island, with Providence headquarters, was, as usual, waiting for me with a full program. Talked to the students of the Christian Brothers at St. Raphael's. Filled in with a talk to the girls at St. Xavier's, and visited the Holy Cross Brothers and their students at the Monsignor Coyle High School in Taunton. Enjoyed a splendid alumni meeting. Visited Brown U. and Providence College. Had a fine visit with Dr. Ellen Ryan Jolly. Visited the Trappist Monastery at Central Falls. Enjoyed the hospitality of President Charley Grimes throughout the entire stay. The Providence Club, and several of the other smaller Clubs along the route, were encouraging and convincing exhibits of what a small but active group of Notre Dame alumni can accomplish for Notre Dame interests through the various Club activities. Rhode Island's achievements are constant news.

Waterbury was still teeming with Notre Dame enthusiasm after the visit of Father John O'Hara. President John Robinson was on hand, fortunately in the last stages of convalescence from a back injury. Suppered at the Robinson home, with its N. D. - St. Mary's atmosphere, John, Joe and Mary. Met Jim Monaghan, who is internal revenueing, and Walter Buckley. Interviewed boys both at Crosby and Wilby High Schools. Most interesting was a visit to Roxbury School where John teaches. (Waterbury Studebaker dealer loaned President for trip, the courtesy being much appreciated.) Addressed the very fine Rotary Club at its luncheon. Enjoyed an alumni meeting, which was augmented by a very fine address by Bill Farrington, city editor of the Democrat and president of the Conn. alumni of Catholic U. Also enjoyed seeing Roger Beirne, '33, playing stock in Waterbury.

Walter "Bud" Stapleton, now a big broker in Waterbury, drove me down, with a friend of his, from Waterbury to Bridgeport, for a very enjoyable break in "training." Met the Fairfield County alumni group in Bridgeport, shy the guiding genius of Jim Murphy, who couldn't resist a tropical trip (as who could in such weather?). Elmer Harkabus, '33, and Frank Hurley, '33, proved to be seasoned alumni in getting me around. Visited Warren Harding High, where Oscar Lavery, '25, made such a brilliant record as a teacher before his death. Enjoyed also visits to Bridgeport High School and the Junior College of Conn. Bridgeport has a fine group of fellows in a territory where Notre Dame popularity has been as long standing as the history of the famous Murphy family, at least. With due respect for the large Clubs, it was the cooperation and activity of the small ones that were most heartening.

Doc Gelson met me at the train to launch an intensive New York campaign. The McAlpin Hotel extended the courtesy of headquarters to me. The next morning Henry Frey, not knowing my jinx, drove me out to Hempstead where Eddie Fallon and his uncle met us and I talked at Hempstead High. A blizzard began, which made us a half hour late at the magnificent plant of LaSalle Military Academy, at Oakdale. The Christian Brothers, through Brother Joseph, were very kind, and I enjoyed a period with the senior class despite the delay. Back through the storm to a contrastingly fine evening at the Catholic Centre with the Board of Governors at dinner and a general Club meeting later. The next afternoon Jack Lavelle drove me out to All Hallows H. S., where he coaches football, and there I addressed the boys. We drove on out to Manhattan and Fordham, seeing the four horsemen of Fordham going through their paces — Crowley, Earl Walsh, Carberry and Leahy. Saturday afternoon met prospective students at the Catholic Centre, through invitations extended by the Club. This brief account omits numerous pleasant and hospitable contacts of a more personal sort that none the less added greatly to the stop.

So it was in New Jersey. "I would that my tongue could utter" . . . President Bob Phelan and the king's henchman, Tom Farrell, had me lined up for three days of activity. Sunday morning, enjoyed talking at a communion breakfast of St. Benedict's Prep School alumni . . . in the afternoon visited the Mercier Club, headed by Jack Adams and including several N. D. alumni on its directorate . . . Monday talked at St. Aloysius High, Jersey City, St. Mary's High in Ruthersford, and St. Benedict's in Newark. A fine alumni meeting at the Newark A. C. filled the evening. Tuesday talked at St. Michael's High School, Union City, St. Cecilia's High School in Englewood, St. Joseph's High School in Paterson, and Immaculate Conception High School in Montclair. It was hard to leave so pleasant a spot (yes, even in spite of the whip-cracking Farrell).

But in Binghamton, the Triple Cities headquarters, I soon forgot New Jersey in the set-up President Joe Carey had for me. Visited the public high schools of Binghamton, Johnson City and Endicott in the morning. Talked for 15 minutes in my radio debut from Station WNBK. Addressed the assembly at St. Paul's High in Binghamton. Returned to WNBK for a 15-minute question box with announcer Tom McMahon. Had a dinner with the alumni at the hotel, and talked to the men of St. Paul's parish at 9 p. m., after their Lenten services. Visited St. Patrick's High School, but arrived too late to meet with the students. Wound up the day until train time with Regis McNamara, my guide and counselor of the day, playing bridge with the Joe Hennessys, the Bob Rices and Joe Carey and his companion.

Found Scranton, without a Club as yet, active nevertheless. James D. Jordan, '07, had made arrangements with Rev. Stephen O'Boyle, Holy Rosary High School, for me to speak to the students. Discovered Sr. Cormack, a loyal alumna of Notre Dame, teaching there. Ed Shean served as my guide for the day, joined by Bill Burns. Bob Golden and Joe O'Hara joined the party later on. Spoke in the evening to a fine group at St. Paul's auditorium, following Lenten services. Very gracious introduction by Msgr. Hussie. After the address, time remaining before entraining, we stopped at the Drake, a dine-and-dance establishment just opened in Scranton by Vincent Brennan, '98. Took a sleeper for the short haul to Allentown, to get in early enough to satisfy the demands of the program there.

President Leo McIntyre, from his heights on the Bethlehem board of education, had surveyed the scene and acted in his usual whirlwind fashion. Opened with a talk to the students of Central Catholic High in Allentown, followed by a talk to the students of Allentown Catholic High. A luncheon brought me into contact with a group of leading men of Allentown and Bethlehem. We missed an invitation to talk to the students of Bethlehem Catholic High, through a misunderstanding of their Friday dismissal hour. Spoke to the seniors of Bethlehem High later in the afternoon. Met with a few of the alumni Friday night at a very pleasant dinner. Saturday interviewed students, visited Lehigh U., and drove into the Poconos Mts. to dine at Skytop Club,

"O'er Thy Prairies Verdant Growing, Illinois, Illinois!"

Or, if you prefer, an account of the Illinois tour of the Dooley section of the Armstrong-Dooley travel bureau, Alumni office, Notre Dame, Indiana

The time had come to leave home, family, and University and go out into the wide state of Illinois to visit high schools and alumni according to a general plan made known in previous issues of the ALUMNUS. The "campaign" ahead was based upon alumni cooperation in nearly every city I was to visit.

AURORA

Spending the week-end in La Salle, Illinois, in the home of my parents, I left early Monday morning, February 19, for Aurora, about 70 miles distant. The thermometer registered well below zero, the winds howled beautifully through my 1930 Ford and in places a heavy snowstorm of the previous day had left the highway all but impassable. Certainly, an impressive beginning for the first day of my first trip! No verdant prairies anywhere!

Hotel Aurora, operated by the Gosselin boys of Notre Dame, was a welcome sight. Soon after my arrival Clarence Ruddy, '27, who was making arrangements for me, came in to warm up my chilled spirits; and from that time on I didn't have time to get cold in Aurora. Clarence had enlisted the aid of Bill Chawgo, '31, and the two of them had prepared a day that didn't have a let-down in it. They devoted their entire day to me.

First, out to East High for a brief chat with the very kind principal. Then to West High to interview 15 or 20 boys who were interested in Notre Dame. Lunch with Clarence and Bill at the Union League Club. Back to East High for an introduction by Clarence, an alumnus of the high school, at the general assembly followed by a conference with a dozen or so East High boys.

From East High we hurried out to Marmion Academy, conducted by the Benedictine Fathers formerly of Jasepr, Indiana. Hospitality reigns supreme at Marmion. Not even the remembrance of that sudden sinking spell I experienced when I found out that I was supposed to deliver a "lecture" to the assembled student body can quite efface the recollection of the hospitality of Marmion and particularly of Father Norbert, the headmaster. I'm quite positive that on this occasion, my first talk on my first trip, I didn't deliver anything faintly resembling a lecture, but, even so, a large number of the boys turned up to talk with me afterwards.

Following the Marmion episode, Bill and I dashed around to call on the local priests, including Rev. James F. Mulcaire, '29, recently ordained, who is assistant at the Church of Our Lady of the Angels in Aurora. Later, dinner with Clarence Ruddy, who, incidentally, was engaged in a hot campaign for the Democrat nomination for state representative. After dinner some of the other local alumni dropped in, despite the severe cold and icy streets. Among these were Father Mulcaire, Carl Schickler, '27, Herb Braun, '27, and Bill Amell, '06. I was glad to get between the feathers that night.

ELGIN

Lawrence McNerney, '06, of Elgin, had been out of town until the day before my arrival and so wasn't able to arrange any high school conferences. With the information which he gave me at lunch in the Elks' Club, however, and with the aid of announcements which had been made in the Catholic churches I was able to make known the Notre Dame story in several different ways. Some of the prospective students came to see me in my headquarters in the Fox Hotel. Altogether, it was a very enjoyable day and with the generous and very kind assistance of Mr. McNerney (whose son, John, is to be graduated from the University this June) a profitable one.

I stopped to see Paul Funk, '24, in his law office and we had a long chat about Paul's days as editor of that good old organ, the Notre Dame Daily, of beloved memory. Paul Tobin, '28, was working in an office just across the hall from Paul Funk's, but he was out when I called. Likewise, Elmer Tobin, '17, whose office was in a building next to my hotel, was in Chicago when I called. Frank A. McCarthy, '06, state representative from that district, was in Springfield, the legislature being in session.

Between times in Elgin I got around to see the priests and found them very cordial and helpful.

ROCKFORD

Early in the morning of Wednesday, February 21, I started on a skiddy 40 miles between Elgin and Rockford. (Yea, Petritz!) At the impressive Faust Hotel in Rockford I soon got in touch with Bob Doran, '26, who was making local arrangements and we had lunch together.

Right after lunch we hurried out to St. Thomas High School where we met Frank Howland, '25, and Ray Marelli, '27, and where with the kind permission of very generous priests I was able to address the entire student body. Afterwards a large number of the boys remained to ask questions. Notre Dame interest reached a new high there.

Rockford High School doesn't permit visits such as I had in mind, so the remainder of my time in Rockford—I stayed there over Washington's Birthday—was spent largely in individual conferences with boys and parents, many of which had been arranged by the active and interested local alumni. With Bob Doran, my constant and self-sacrificing companion in Rockford, I also called on the Rockford priests.

Thursday evening, February 22, the boys arranged an informal but very happy get-together. Among those present were Mike Lorden, '24, Al Monti, '30, Henry Fanning, '24, Bob Doran, '26, and Ray Marelli, '27. Frank Howland, '25, had expected to be present but at the last moment was taken ill. Frank Petritz, '03, father of Joe, '32, publicity director of the University, was also to be among those present, but unfortunately sleep overcame him too early in the evening. I saw him for a few minutes the next morning.

DIXON

Drifting down along the Rock River, I stopped at the Dixon High School at its annual "College Day" program and talked with several boys interested in Notre Dame. In between times I had lunch with Willard Jones, '25, Bob Dixon, '25, and Paul Fry, '27. They had news of Harry McGuire, '25, who lives in nearby Mt. Morris where his magazine Outdoor Life is published as well as of Red Lahey, '28, and Sherwood Dixon, '20. Jerry Jones, '22, was at home sick that day but I saw him later at the Layden banquet in Davenport. Dr. Dave Murphy, '25, has in a short time attained a remarkable reputation and is everywhere spoken of as one of northern Illinois' finest young doctors. I had a delightful dinner that evening in the beautiful new home of Dave and his charming wife.

Despite the Cahill-Cass influence I was able to leave the town unmolested and got back to La Salle to spend the week-end and check up.

SPRINGFIELD

The state capitol, on Monday, February 26, was the biggest surprise of all. Hearing nothing in advance as to arrangements for my visit, imagine my pleasure, following a freezing ride from La Salle, when I found that Bob Graham, '26, and Bud Zimmerman, '26, had not only made complete plans for the day, but had also got together about 30 alumni for a dinner at which a new Notre Dame club was formed. I stayed at the Abraham Lincoln Hotel, but my headquarters were at the splendid large K. of C. Club and Community Center. A separate story will appear in this issue as to the formation of the new club. Amidst snow a foot deep my school visits in Springfield began at Springfield Junior College, where I found Dean Augustine Confrey, formerly of the Notre Dame faculty, a very kind and hospitable host and Clare Hafel, '25, a member of the faculty. I later found out that Dave Neal, '33, is a member of the same faculty, but unfortunately I didn't meet him.

Following lunch at the K. of C. Grill with Bud and Bob (who were my constant and valued companions through most of the day and all of the evening) we paid a visit to the huge Springfield High School and talked with about 20 of the boys who are interested in Notre Dame. Later we stopped at Cathedral High School for boys, but found out from a very cordial principal that we were just too late to talk that day with his boys. Despite the fact that the school is run by the Viatorian priests from St. Viator's College we had a whole-hearted invitation to return at a later date. Such courtesy was deeply appreciated. The Cathedral boys deeply interested in going to Notre Dame, had been invited to the alumni dinner that evening.

PEORIA

Advance notices from Al Gury, '28, president of the Notre Dame Club of Peoria, had indicated that he was building me up in a big way through the newspapers and other channels. So I was prepared for a big day—and I found one. Al had taken the day off from his duties as manager of the first floor in Peoria's largest department store to steer me around. At noon I spoke for 15 or 20 minutes to one of the city's leading clubs, the Optimists, where Charles Motsett, father of Bourke, '31, and Bill, '34, introduced me. Following my talk the members asked me questions about Notre Dame for 10 or 15 minutes. Al Gury wanted me to spend two days in Peoria in order to talk to another luncheon club, but I couldn't arrange my schedule accordingly.

Since I had only a day to spend in Peoria I devoted my entire school-visiting time to Spalding Institute, one of the most fervently Notre Dame spots in these United States. As if it were not enough to have a dozen or so Spalding boys now students at Notre Dame—two of these, Voegele and Peters, basketball stars—and John Noppenberger, '25, the Spalding athletic director and coach, I found among them the Benedictine priests now conducting Spalding many of my old friends from St. Bede Academy, Peru, Illinois, my alma mater. The result: when I got up to talk to the entire student body, they cheered. After the assembly, I talked with a large number of boys who are intensely interested in coming to Notre Dame and spent the rest of the afternoon with the priests and with Noppie.

Followed a visit to my old stamping grounds, the office of the Peoria Journal-Transcript where they gave their former co-worker a long, loud razz for turning from newspaper work to oratory—thanks to Gury, who had billed me as a famous orator. For the evening, Al had arranged an informal dinner of the Peoria club at the Jefferson Hotel where I was stopping. Those present included Spalding Steven, '02, Bernie Leahy, '32, Al Gury, '28, Ernie Hechinger, '32, Ed Carey, '32, Vince Rickey, '34, Jack Greisser, '34, Fred Myer, '33, Al Welzenbach, '30, Floyd Genin, '29, Francis Fuld, '31, Art Fulton, '29, and Joe Langton, '28. John Noppenberger's basketball team was playing a game that night and Al Culver, '32, who is working with Bernie Leahy in Peoria, wasn't able to get around. The boys were laying their plans for the regular meeting to be held in Bloomington the next week. The Bloomington boys meet with the Peoria club.

After the dinner Al, my wife (who had driven down from Kewanee for the evening) and I stopped in to a delightful party which John Noppenberger and his wife were having in their home. After that we delivered the invaluable Gury to his home for some well earned rest.

BLOOMINGTON

The hospitality of Frank Oberkoetter, '32, and his delightful mother and aunt are among my happy memories of Bloomington. I stayed with them in their home at Frank's insistence. Frank and I called in the morning at Trinity High School and I talked to all of the boys of the school. Afterwards I had a special, and very interesting, session with the Seniors. All of them seemed much interested in Notre Dame. My thanks here to the very cordial Sisters who made possible this excellent contact.

With Frank, I stopped at Bloomington High School in the afternoon, but the hour assigned by the school—after the last class—wasn't so good and none of the boys showed up for the supposed conferences. Calls on the local clergy took up the rest of the day. In the evening the local boys got together for a dinner and subsequent "session" that lasted rather well into the night. Those who "signed in" were: March Wells, '16, Ralph Dalton, '31, Frank Oberkoetter, '32, Don Waterson, '33, Wilbur Waterson, '32, Francis Wochner, '33, Frank Dewenter, '31, and Joe Conley, '31.

KEWANEE

Thursday morning, March 1, I drove a hundred miles to my wife's home port, Kewanee, and hurriedly got re-established with the Dooley offspring before dashing into Kewanee High School for a fine talk to, and conference with, 25 or so boys who were interested in Notre Dame. Later in the afternoon I went out to Wethersfield High School in Kewanee for a similar session. And still later with my brother-in-law, Chuck Terry, who will be a Freshman at Notre Dame next Fall, I scurried away for the Layden Banquet in Davenport, 50 miles away. As to said banquet, see the story in this issue. After the eating and speaking, President Dick Swift, of the Tri-Cities Club, sponsored a special session upstairs at which I talked with a great many of the alumni from far and near.

In Kewanee, Rev. William P. Burke, a former Notre Dame student (el. '28) who is pastor of Visitation Church, was very kind to me, even offering to let me talk in church after each of the Sunday Masses. I talked with Tom Welch, '05, and Paul Zang, '29, and Henry Zang, '29. Ralph Sjoborg, '21, former baseball star, and Sam Rinella, '32, are also in Kewanee and I'll be seeing them on some later trip to that metropolis.

I made my headquarters in Kewanee for the next several days and conducted one-day jaunts to nearby points. The first of these on Friday, March 2, was

GALESBURG

As the result of information supplied by Prince Slaven, '27, I went directly to Corpus Christi High School (which though comparatively small as to students has about a dozen boys at Notre Dame this year) but found that class had been dismissed for the day because of the downstate Catholic basketball tournament in Jacksonville. I made arrangements to return the following Tuesday and did so. The Corpus Christi basketball team had just won

Father Hudson, The Pioneering Editor

REV. PATRICK J. CARROLL, C. S. C.

(Reprinted from America for March 3, 1934).

I do not pretend to have known Father Hudson intimately; not in the sense of entering into his councils, going away from a chat in his room with all his mind. He rarely gave all his full mind to anybody. I remember him acting out his quiet life in a fourfold drama. And his character presentation seems different in each, yet with the same detached, shrinking essence permeating them all. He was an ascetic without harshness or hardness; a hermit who knew the movements of the world through the looking glass of newspaper and magazine; an editor whose blue-covered magazine held the culture, tone, sweetness of his mind; a spare, white-headed, scantily bearded man of reticent approach, with a sense of humor that rippled and was never loud.

When it is said that Father Hudson was an ascetic, it is not meant he was a man who gave long periods to prayer and retired into his cell to apply to himself traditional physical penances. He may have done so, but he would look pained if you hinted any such suspicion. He stole into the chapel to pray quietly, and went about in the dusk talking to the Blessed Virgin through his beads. They served somewhat the purpose of a telephone to his Queen. He rarely talked what we call "pious" talk, keeping his piety within the seclusion of his thoughts. Consider him a religious man, but do not stress external evidences of piety.

He had the hermit soul. He loved his cell, or its modern substitute—his room. He had three rooms. One he worked in, reading Catholic papers, writing his "Notes and Remarks," appraising manuscripts. He had another room in which he slept; yet another where books were kept and where he worked sometimes, perhaps for a change. He liked company, if it were not numerous and talked of the things he liked. And he kept to himself for long periods, always with a pencil and pad.

He was exclusively editor of the Ave Maria. He was never in the administrative councils of Notre Dame by appointment, yet was frequently called into conference. He was considered wise, cautious, but not retreating; and often his advice, given not too insistently, was followed. When distinguished people came to the University, within which Father Hudson lived but never was a part of, it was the invariable custom to take them to see the editor of the Ave Maria. And without exception, the most permanent memory they took away was of a diminutive priest whose speech was low and penetrating. He preached on occasions in the college church. His preaching voice was high, persuasive, and suggestive of prophets, or announcers of crusades. He was a model for all church orators in this—he was never too long. Fifteen minutes served him fully for what he had to say. Frequently his theme was the Blessed Virgin; always the Blessed Virgin when he spoke on the closing night of May devotions.

As editor, he received letters from everybody. And he answered these letters in his own hand, never permitting himself to be swept out from his moorings on the efficiency wave of typewriter and secretary. His letters were often written on a card in a small, regular script; and his achievements in refusing manuscripts might well be inserted in manuals of diplomacy schools. Once he sent back some verses to this writer with this consoling bit, "You have done so much better, I know you will not want this to appear."

When you called, you often found him correcting proofs; perhaps he picked up the proofs when he heard you coming to indicate to you he was busy. Then if you succeeded in switching him into a siding which pleased him—Maurice Francis Egan's type of humor, Charles Warren Stoddard's spelling, Archbishop John Lancaster Spalding's resounding preachments on higher education—he would forget the main line.

Perhaps the most interesting side of Father Hudson was his humanness. To Col. William Hoynes of the Law School he went for recreational stimulus. The Colonel was of Johnsonian speech, Father Hudson rather leaned to Anglo-Saxon. The editor might assert adverse opinion of some political figure not in favor with the Colonel. "Eminently correct, Dr. Hudson!" Of evenings, too, Father Hudson would read clippings from authors, emphasizing telling points with voice and head motion. The man of law served somewhat the purpose of a Greek chorus. "A comprehensive, altogether telling indictment!" "Incomparable!" In Lent Father Hudson and the Colonel abstained from their simple, recreational exchanges in the Colonel's room out of consideration for the season.

Sometimes Father Hudson would enact the Colonel's particular role in the very presence of the Colonel himself. Thus one day, walking by, the Colonel carried a large, heavy stick.

"Colonel, are you afflicted with the pedal infirmities of declining years?"

"No, no, Dr. Hudson. It is merely a provisional weapon to ward off possible incursions of ill-natured canines."

Father Hudson took no interest in college sports, though he simulated interest. Likely he did so not to seem unusual. He expressed his awareness of what was going on in the playing field by asking some priest returning from a game of football, "Who won?"

"We won."

"Good!"

When the radio came to stay he seemed perplexed. He conversed freely in company with one or two, but did not seem to take to group conversation. When the radio entertained, everybody listened. He listened and wondered. And when it expressed itself as a gush of sound, as it did—and does—he looked at the instrument in a frightened way, as if it were a horror.

Of the secular papers he liked the New York Sun and frequently quoted it. Later, when the morning Sun was discontinued, he favored the Herald Tribune. The Month and the London Tablet, both published in England, were his favorite Catholic publications. Archbishop Spalding, Archbishop Ireland, Archbishop Keane, Archbishop Glennon, Bishop McQuade, Bishop McDevitt were among his friends in the American hierarchy, with all of whom he kept up correspondence. Of priests he frequently spoke of the Irish Jesuit, Father Matthew Russell, Father Walter Eliot, the Paulist; and many, many more. All his contributors were, so to speak, members of his literary family whom he held high by virtue of personal loyalty. Young writers he encouraged, without unduly flattering them.

He is known to have left his work and his rooms for an overnight sojourn only twice. The first occasion was to attend the funeral of Bishop McQuade; the second to visit the stricken Archbishop Spalding of Peoria. There is an oral tradition to the effect that he had to borrow a hat and coat at each departure. Of evenings, very rarely, he went to the city with his friend, Colonel Hoynes. On one of these unusual town visits, I remember seeing himself and his friend—the Colonel rather larger than the average man, the editor rather smaller—sitting on two stools in an East Side drug store enjoying an ice-cream soda. A priest who was a helping editor for several years told me Father Hudson had a fondness for those high stools before lunch counters. He occupied one on a certain afternoon and ordered a lunch. It must have been a light lunch, for the editor priest was an extremely light eater.

In the presbytery where he lived eggs in the shell were sometimes served for breakfast; a great many eggs in a deep dish. "Take one," someone said to Father Hudson. "Oh, no, no! They cannot be good—there are too many of them!" Perhaps he feared they were all laid by the same hen.

When someone suggested to Father Hudson that he write signed articles he made a very characteristic, deprecatory gesture with partly extended hands, palms out, "No, no! I'm not a writer. I'm just an editor." The reason for the just before editor is not so apparent. And yet he wrote with such accuracy and fluency in his own right; and his modifications and suppressions in manuscripts made what others wrote more accurate and fluent. One woman testifies that when she noted certain changes in her stories printed in the Ave Maria every change made was a change for the better.

That part of Father Hudson which was Irish must have given him his liking for ghostly visitations. He reveled in ghost lore. One summer night I remember sitting with him on the steps of Science Hall. He drifted into ghost recitals. I, who was born where ghosts move and have their being, felt this snowy-haired American priest, his biretta at the little characteristic angle, could not stir any night frights in me. He went on and on in a quavering musical voice in a quaint, detached seriousness, as if the incidents narrated were out of death into life. It was 11:30 when I suggested we go to our rooms. He seemed loath to go. I almost felt he was seeing spirits. And he looked not unlike a spirit himself. I was quite happy when I got back to my room that there was an electric switch just inside the door.

Father Hudson illustrates living in life, and yet not of life. He might have been a Trappist, yet even then he would want to see the world passing by. Not all the world, but that part of it he liked. And that part was the best part. He lived serenely, yet eagerly within his chosen aloofness. He had all the sweeter things of sanctity with very few of those uglier foreign substances that adhere to sanctity sometimes. Those who are external will say he did not live. He did live within a small physical world of his own making; but in a large world of ideas and ideals where his mind ranged within a wide compass.

at N. D., coming here at the turn of the century. He is now chairman of the board of the Maryland Commercial Bankers, Inc. Stopped at Calvert Hall College, and was invited back by the Christian Brothers, through Brother Vincent, to address the boys on my next trip, school not then being in session. Visited Tom's business, the Clement and Ball women's shoe factory. (Glad I was traveling stag.) The Baltimore contingent of alumni, being so few, is planning on joining the now numerous and active Washington Club.

In the shadow of such excellent Catholic institutions on all sides, the preparatory schools in Washington were naturally not contacted except for the splendid St. John's High, Christian Brothers military school, which sent us the only students from the D. of C. this year. Charley Manix was my confidential guide to Washington, aided and abetted by Henry Watts Eicher and the active President Jim Hayes. Other arrangements were typical of similar cooperation by the large number of N. D. men now occupying the national spotlight. The Washington stay was very much a matter of personalities. Talked with the busy Frank Walker by phone. Was in the sanctum of the equally busy Ambrose O'Connell. Visited the Senate through the courtesy of Frank Bon, secretary to Sen. Carey (Wyo.). As nearly as I could figure out, N. D. is about as much Notre Dame as New Deal. The alumni meeting as a fine one. A large number of familiar faces, gathered though they were from the four corners of the U. S., were on hand. New life has come with new blood, and the splendid nucleus which has been held together in the District for a number of years by Dr. Flynn and his contemporaries is blossoming into a Club of significant proportions. Needless to say, I visited Holy Cross, and, more than that, spent a very pleasant hour with the efficient Dr. Maurice Sheehy at Catholic U., discussing alumni affairs.

It was a most happy and rallying ending to a trip which, with all its pleasures and palaces, was bringing the home-sweet-home concept nearer and dearer. To the hundreds of alumni who cooperated to make this trip a success, apologies for the exigencies of memory and space which have omitted specific mention. In no case, let me repeat, do the few lines begin to express the Notre Dame loyalty and spirit and activity which were present. It augurs well for the future of both Notre Dame and the Alumni Association.

We have more Clubs and more places to cover yet this year. Until then . . .

where the American Alumni Council Convention is to be held April 25-28. Sunday afternoon, addressed a specially called parish and K. of C. meeting at Bethlehem Catholic High School. Was scheduled for Monday morning at the Allentown High, but had previously booked Philadelphia.

Philadelphia offered the stimulating example of a Club in the midst of a wholesome Renaissance. Tom Magee went over to Camden with me for my first talk, at Camden Catholic High, joining their spelling championship celebration. Also enjoyed a talk before the boys of West Philadelphia Catholic High. Learned that a misunderstanding had the boys of Roman Catholic waiting for me at the same hour. Talked to Dr. Burns there later, expressing my regret and meeting the always cordial cooperation.

The alumni meeting at the Penn A. C. showed Pres. Harry Francis and his able following to be determined to establish a Club that will press the larger Clubs in pace and scope. John Neeson was his consistent helpful self. Ed Bailey starred in meeting as the devil's advocate. The Degen brothers have the treasury and the prospective-student activities in safe and willing hands. The Club is contacting parents of present students to advantage in its program.

Baltimore, without a Club, was more of a scouting expedition, but turned out most interestingly. Tom Carfagno, '23-'24, was officiating a hockey game, at which I joined him, the game not the officiating. Had a pleasant evening. The next morning Joe Holbach called and took me up to meet E. L. Holland, a law student

ATHLETICS

By JOSEPH PETRITZ

N. D. To Have National Catholic Track Meet On June 1

Catholic high school track athletes from coast to coast are expected to be the guests of the University at the first of a proposed series of annual Notre Dame Catholic interscholastic track and field meets to be held at Notre Dame Friday, June 1.

Preliminary plans for the meet were announced recently by Athletic Director Elmer F. Layden and Track Coach John Nicholson.

This is a significant move in track and Catholic educational circles in that the annual championship meet, and particularly the trip to the campus, will be an inducement to Catholic boys who are also good track athletes to enter Catholic high schools rather than non-Catholic schools where track interest may be higher. It will indirectly influence these same boys to go on to Catholic institutions of higher learning.

It is the duty of every Notre Dame alumnus, and particularly those who are returning for commencement June 2 and 3, to talk this meet up among the pastors and principals in his vicinity, and, we feel sure that many of you will return for commencement with one or more track teams in tow.

Since the history-making 1934 meet comes the day before commencement exercises begin, the prep athletes will have an opportunity to get a real taste of Notre Dame life and to rub elbows with many of the famous Notre Dame football, basketball, track, and baseball stars of the past who will be returning for class reunions.

The residence halls not occupied by graduating seniors or returning alumni will be thrown open to the visiting high school athletes. Meals will be served to them in the spacious Notre Dame dining halls.

There will be a baseball game between Notre Dame and the University of Wisconsin on Friday, and the annual Notre Dame commencement game with Michigan State will be played Saturday afternoon. Some of the teams may remain over to see Saturday's colorful ceremonies. The baccalaureate services and awarding of degrees will take place on Sunday, June 3.

The meet is still in the formative stages, and it remains yet for Nicholson to announce the program and to work out the many details in connection with such a contest.

The affair will probably be modeled somewhat after the Stagg interscholastic meet at Chicago which was discontinued recently.

Among those expected to return early for commencement are such stars as Layden, himself, fullback with the Four Horsemen and now athletic director and head football coach; the other members of the Four Horsemen team—Harry Stuhldreher, Don Miller, Jimmy Crowley, Capt. Adam Walsh, Ed Hunsinger, Noble Kizer, Joe Bach, Eddie Collins, and Rip Miller; Slip Madigan of St. Mary's, Tom Lieb of Loyola, Al G. Feeney, state director of public safety; John W. Eggeman of Fort Wayne; Lou (Red) Salmon, mighty fullback of the early part of the century who is now in charge of construction of a Mississippi dam project.

It is tentatively planned to run the following events: the 100 and 220-yard dashes, 440, 880, and mile runs, high and low hurdles, broad jump, high jump, pole vault, shot put, discus, javelin, and 880-yard relay:

Catching Up

While anxiously awaiting the opening of one of the most ambitious spring sports cards ever lined up for the Notre Dame baseball, track, golf, and tennis teams, we take this opportunity of catching up with the winter sports season, the activities of Director of Athletics Elmer Layden, and the changes made in the coaching ranks which concern Notre Dame men who were not included in our latest report.

"The Zipper," as Layden is known in his Pittsburgh haunts, has zipped through a mass of work since reporting here February 1.

First, we shall consider changes in the coaching staffs: Clarence (Jake) Kline, freshman football and baseball coach the past two years, has been retained as head frosh football mentor, and he will handle the destinies of the varsity baseball team. He is faced with an 18-game schedule, including 14 games with seven Big Ten teams.

Kline was a star third baseman in 1915, 1916, and 1917, captaining the team his senior year. He hit over .300 each year, and climaxed his college career in 1917 by swooping three home runs against Michigan to lead his mates in an impressive victory. He passed up major league offers to serve overseas during the World war and he returned to play and manage several small professional and semi-professional teams.

Although this material is far below par this year, his knowledge of the game, his ability to get the best out of his men, and the great liking the players have for him will all help in what we hope will be a movement back to the old Notre Dame baseball winning traditions. The teams of the past two years, hounded by ineligibility, poor weather, injuries and countless other woes, each lost one more game than they won, to give the Irish their first two losing seasons in a quarter of a century.

Kline, as you all know, succeeds George Keogan, basketball coach, who will continue in that capacity as only Keogan can.

Tom (Kitty) Gorman, co-captain and center on the 1933 football team, and his teammate, Steve Banas, fullback, will be two of Kline's assistants with the freshman gridders next fall. Both are pursuing their studies in the college of law.

Tom Conley, all-around assistant to Layden, has been named freshman basketball coach to succeed Clay Johnson. The latter will enter the legal profession after receiving his degree in June. He led all monogram men in the class of 1932 with an average of well over 90. He is among the leaders in the law class. Conley, it may be mentioned, is not only in charge of the Notre Dame ends in football, but he has handled all the detail of drawing up the golf and tennis schedules which appear in this issue. He is also working out an after-Commencement trip for the golfers.

Succeeding Kline as freshman baseball coach is Prof. Stephen (better known as Steve) Ronay of the department of English, a monogram winner in 1925, 1926, and 1927.

E. R. Handy, instructor in the department of physical education, will serve as freshman track coach, assisting Varsity Coach John P. Nicholson.

Adding to our ever-growing list of Notre Dame men who are joining the football coaching ranks or advancing themselves in said ranks, we wish to list the following announcements:

Capt. Tom Yarr of the 1931 football team, all-American center; and Mike Koken, star halfback of 1930, 1931, and 1932, have deserted the Chicago Cardinals professional team to take over the head and assistant coaching duties at John Carroll University, Cleveland. Adam Walsh has signed as assistant coach at Harvard after being let out when Yale decided to go alumni with its staff. Charley Riley has joined Tom Lieb at Loyola of Los Angeles, having left New Mexico State.

Ted Twomey has lined up his forces as assistant to Chet Wynne at the University of Kentucky. Wynne, since our last issue, has been named athletic director of the Blue Grass school. Ray Brancheau, voted the most valuable member of the 1933 Notre Dame team, has not only decided to go the hard way—up the middle aisle—but he has signed as director of athletics and physical education and head coach of football at New Mexico State. Ed (Moose) Krause, all-American basketball center, 1933-34 captain of basketball, and popular mythical choice at tackle in football, as well as a track star, has been named head football coach at St. Mary's college at Winona, Minn. The appointment of Laurie Vejar, diminutive 1932 quarterback, as assistant to Johnny O'Brien at St. Edward's University in Texas is momentarily expected from the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., president. Rumor also has it that Columbia college, Dubuque, Ia., will sign a Notre Dame man shortly.

Now, then, before going into the prospects for the coming spring athletic season, we shall take a moment to review the events of the indoor track and basketball teams.

TRACK

The indoor season opened auspiciously with a 57 to 38 victory over Marquette during which Don Elser, sophomore all-around star, set a Notre Dame shot put record of 46 feet, 2 inches.

Notre Dame lost to Illinois, 55 1/3 to 48 2/3 in the next meet, but George Meagher, another sophomore, set a Notre Dame and gymnasium record of 23 feet, 3 1/2 inches in the broad jump.

Ohio State fell before the Irish by a score of 71 to 33, and Meagher added two inches to his gym and Notre Dame record with a leap of 23 feet, 5 1/2 inches.

The absence of Francis (Mike) Layden, sophomore brother of Elmer, who won both hurdle races in fast time against Marquette, was felt in the Illinois meet, but even more so in the Central Intercollegiate conference meet. Michigan State won its first indoor championship with 32 1/2 points, while Notre Dame rose from fifth in 1933 to second in 1934 with 21 1/2 points. Vincent Murphy, holder of the Notre Dame high jump record, took Notre Dame's only first place in the C. I. C., but the other Irish were pecking away for seconds, thirds, and fourths throughout the affair.

Murphy, incidentally, is using an entirely new style of jumping in order to favor a sore tendon. The week after the C. I. C. meet he jumped 6 feet, 5 inches at Madison Square Garden to tie for first place in the K. of C. games, much to the relief of Coach John Nicholson, who had his doubts about the experiment.

The mile relay team took second in the K. of C. games, with Bowdren, McGrath, Rubly, and Bernard running. The two-mile team also finished second with Young, Ducasa, Sheils, and Roberts carrying the baton. Boston won the former and Manhattan the latter race.

The same night, the rest of the team competed successfully in the Armour relays in Chicago. The shock troop two-mile team took fourth, Meagher won the broad jump with a performance of 23 feet, 3 1/2 inches; Gilfoil was fifth in the 440-yard dash, Farrell was fifth in the 880-yard run, and Edwards and Howard tied for fourth in the pole vault at 12 feet, 10 inches.

The Butler relays at Indianapolis resulted in two outstanding Notre Dame performances. The four-mile relay team composed of King, McFarlane, Roberts, and Young won in 18 minutes, 30.2 seconds. Murphy took second to Willis Ward of Michigan in the high jump, Ward winning at 6 feet, 5 7/8 inches.

Prospects for outdoors, although none too rosy, should stack up well with the fine indoor showing made by Nicholson's men. The return of Mike Layden will help. Nicholson has 12 men who can run the 880 in 2 minutes flat or better outdoors, and nine who can run the quarter in 51 flat or better. Most of them are tall, and they had trouble with the sharp turns indoors. They will be heard from in the relay meets as well as the dual meets this spring. The Irish will also gain by the ability of Meagher and Art Conley in the broad jump, an event which is not run in many meets, and notably in the C. I. C. meet indoors because many of the schools do not have indoor jumping pits. The Irish should score from five to eight points in the outdoor C. I. C. meet in this event. Notre Dame does not gain a great deal in the javelin and discus throws, but will get points in these strictly outdoor events in almost any meet.

BASKETBALL

The latest ALUMNUS carried an account of the last games of the season and pretty well wound up the season's statistics. We should like to mention here, however, that Capt. Ed (Moose) Krause, according to our advance information, will again place on the major, if not all, the all-American teams at center. He also led the state in scoring with 197 points, having led last year with 214. His average per game was approximately the same as that established by Norm Cottom of Purdue, who led the Big Ten scorers.

For purposes of record we should like to report here Coach George Keogan's all-time record at Notre Dame which foots up as follows:

1923-24—Won	15, Lost	8
1924-25—Won	11, Lost	10
1925-26—Won	19, Lost	1
1926-27—Won	19, Lost	1
1927-28—Won	18, Lost	3
1928-29—Won	14, Lost	6
1929-30—Won	15, Lost	5
1930-31—Won	12, Lost	8
1931-32—Won	18, Lost	2
1932-33—Won	16, Lost	6
1933-34—Won	20, Lost	4

Totals— Won 176, Lost 54

His all-time percentage of .765 represents a gain of eight percentage points over the total at the end of the 1932-33 season. He opened the past season with a record of 157 victories and 50 defeats and a percentage of .757. His present mark, we repeat, is well above that established by any major coach of a major team whose teams met major competition over the same period of years.

Coming, finally, to spring sports, we call to the attention of those who have read this far that we have already covered roughly the prospects for baseball and track.

The golf team promises to stack up well with those of the past four years who won all but two dual meets and were undefeated each year except 1932. Capt. Vince Fehlig, ex-Capt. Johnny Montedonico, Johnny Banks, and Bill Veeneman of last year's team are all back, plus Herman Green, sophomore who won the Western Pennsylvania junior title last summer, and Winfield Day, holder of several Chicago district titles.

Fehlig was quarter-finalist in the National Collegiate meet. Banks tied for the medal in that meet. Day has won various University meets from his varsity mates, so all in all it looks like the Irish are set for another great season.

The tennis team will be built largely around Capt. John O'Hanlon, the only returning veteran, but several dark horse sophomores are reputed to be ready to take the field in an effort to raise the prestige of the Irish court teams.

Following are the complete spring sports schedules:

the downstate tournament and all the Senior boys were in a receptive mood for a talk about Notre Dame. I had a long and interesting session with them and a very pleasant conference with Father Cummins, principal of the school, a real Notre Dame booster.

On the day of my first visit to Galesburg, I talked with a number of boys in Galesburg High School who are interested in Notre Dame, and had lunch with Prince Slaven who is a teacher in Galesburg High.

DAVENPORT, ROCK ISLAND, MOLINE

Realizing that the Tri-Cities had been too busy with the Layden banquet to think a great deal of making contacts with high schools, I didn't expect a great deal when I returned to this territory on Monday, March 5. I did, however, have a long talk with Dick Swift, '20, president of the Tri-Cities club and governor of District XVI of the Alumni Association in which we discussed many things. I also saw George Vander Vennet, '32, who is in Dick's law office and Ralph Coryn, '22.

PERU AND LA SALLE (twin cities, in case you don't know)

My first stop in this territory was at St. Bede Academy, my old high school stamping grounds, where I found one of my classmates, Father Mark Rogan, O.S.B., as rector. He, with Father Herbert Schisler, O.S.B., director of studies, and the rest of the priests received me with the very finest of hospitality. I had lunch with the boys and immediately afterwards talked with the Seniors in a special session. All of them were much interested in Notre Dame and several of them will be at Notre Dame next year, including probably Walter Duncan, Jr., the son of Walter Duncan, '12, of La Salle.

In La Salle arrangements had very kindly been made for me at the La Salle-Peru Township High School and Junior College by T. C. Kohin, assistant principal, the father of Ray, '24, and the father-in-law of Raymond A. Hoyer, head of the Boy Guidance Department at the University. Mr. Kohin introduced me and I talked with a group of boys interested in Notre Dame. Mr. Kohin was more than generous in taking care of me.

On this visit to La Salle I had a chance to talk, among the alumni, only with Walter Duncan. Also in the same city are Ed Clancy, '20, Jim Cahill, '14, Bill Clancy, '24, Jim Hurley, '24, and Paul Duncan, '31.

JOLIET

My last stop—and what a stop, if any!—was this thriving prison center. With the club officers, Joe Silk, '20, heavyweight president, and Tom Feeley, '32, secretary, to steer me around under the magic influence of Ed King, '99, prominent drug store operator, the day was filled to overflowing. There was just one school to visit, according to the local plans, and that was the Joliet Catholic High school, but individual calls on prospects, together with a flying trip to Wilmington, Illinois, 20 miles away, to talk with a couple of boys, kept the hours humming around.

"Professor Dooley," as the local radio station had billed me for three days in advance, spent a very enjoyable hour at the Joliet Catholic High School (later to win the National Catholic Basketball championship) with Father Matthew O'Neill, the very cordial principal, formerly of Mt. Carmel in Chicago, and a large group of fine boys. After our lunch together, Joe Silk, Tom Feeley, Ed King, and Doc Mayer accompanied me to the school and helped materially with the interviews.

That evening there was a very enjoyable dinner of the Joliet club in the Woodward Hotel. Present were Leo Heringer, '24, Chuck Lennon, '30, Ed King, '99, Jim Martin, '23, Joe Adler, '24, Bob Baskerville, '31, Clarence Wilhelm, '22, Bill Bossingham, '25, Tom Feeley, '32, Joe Silk, '20, Art Cline, '32, Francis J. Dunn, Notre Dame booster extraordinary and an honorary member of the club (father of Francis A. Dunn, '35) and James Scagnelli, a prospective student. It was a fine gathering of a fine club.

FINIS

And so the tour endeth—to be followed soon by more, but none better. On any basis, the trip was a success. Considering my own inexperience on several scores, together with the inexperience in this work of most clubs and individual alumni where I visited, it was a really remarkable success.

May I extend here my hearty thanks to all those—and there were scores of them—who contributed in any way to my plans. Especially to the club officers and to those who gave up their time and work to help me am I grateful. If in this sketchy account I have omitted any one or anything I ask forgiveness. The days were overloaded and names and things do slip away from memory.

ALUMNI CLUBS

The Notre Dame alumni of Buffalo honored the members of this year's senior class at a cabaret dance on Easter Monday in the Markeen hotel. Committees in charge were as follows:

General chairman, Henry L. Burns, president of the Notre Dame club; tickets, Franklin J. O'Marah, chairman, Martin Ryan, Francis Hanssels; music, Robert Measer, chairman, Martin Travers, James Irwin, William Hall; door, Jay L. Lee, chairman, Dr. Robert J. Burns, Robert Moore; arrangements, George Doyle, chairman, Paul Hoeffler, E. J. Lutz, A. M. Boehm; publicity, Thomas Rogers, chairman, C. J. Irwin, John Burns, Joseph Shea, and John Byrne.

CINCINNATI

I believe that Bill Castellini has written you giving you the result of the recent election, so henceforth I shall probably be signing my letters to you as president of the Notre Dame Club. I sincerely trust that since the reins have been turned over to me, I shall be able to justify the boys' confidence in placing me in charge of the Club for the coming year.

I have news of some of the alumni that may interest some of the men of their classes who may be in different cities. I am very happy to announce that Frank Sweeney, Class of '18, is moving to Cincinnati with his wife and two children as the new manager of the Kemper Lane Hotel. We are very happy to welcome Frank to Cincinnati, and the boys of the alumni will be glad to call and make his acquaintance as soon as he arrives, which I understand will be on April 1.

Harry Crumley of the Crumley, Jones & Crumley Construction Company is handling quite a nice job for the city, laying sewers in Fernbank. He is also doing a nice project at Mt. Airy Forest.

We were very happy the other evening to have at our annual election dinner Brother Benjamin, who is canvassing Cincinnati for the Ave Maria magazine.

Bill Castellini is handling the publicity for the Community Chest drive which opens in Cincinnati on April 7.

Have a little information about George Aug, who is announcing his engagement to Miss Peggy Henry. Notre Dame men are falling fast in Cincinnati.

Leo Dubois, Joe Morrissey and myself attended the week-end Retreat which was held at Crusade Castle from Friday, March 23, to Sunday, March 25. We are very hopeful that next year we shall be able to make this a complete Notre Dame group.

Andy Barton is very busy these days selling Kellogg products. As you know, Andy has to make hay while the sun shines as he is expecting in the early summer to try the old plan of "two living cheaper than one."

Our good friend, Bob Kuerze, made good his promise to send a keg of his famous Hudepohl brand to the annual meeting, which topped off a very fine evening.

We are planning to have a very fine social meeting for Universal Notre Dame Night, Monday, April 16, the results of which I shall give you in my next letter.

Hogan Morrissey.

JOLIET

Fifteen members of the Notre Dame Club stormed the home of CLARENCE WILHELMI, '18, 909 Oneida street, March 16th, the occasion being his birthday. The host and his wife left nothing undone to make it a St. Patrick's party long to be remembered. Everything was done in green and shamrocks.

ED KING had to make several touches to finish the evening and at the end had no chips to turn for cash.

The only bank in town was visited early Saturday morning by CLARENCE WILHELMI, the host, and it looks like the depression is over for him. The party broke up early Saturday a. m. and most of the Club just grabbed their hats and hurried to make the six o'clock Mission Mass.

CHARLES LENNON, '30, and his two sisters, Rosemary and Agnes, drove over to Hammond to attend the wake of Dr. Chevigny, father of Jack, '31. The Notre Dame Club of Joliet wishes to express their deepest sympathy to Jack and his family.

Our club is planning one of our best Universal Notre Dame Night programs. In past years, no matter how inactive our club has been, we always have had a nice party. This year we are going to put out a program over the air—so comes the order from our genial president, JOE SILK, and we always respect Joe's wishes (his size commands it).

DR. EDWARD J. MAYER, '27, prominent young physician and surgeon of Joliet, has the club in a quandary. He has been very successful in surgical operations and we are at a loss to understand why he butchers so many poker hands.

WARD LOEFFLER of Joliet, Illinois, was unanimously elected an honorary member of the Notre Dame Club of Joliet.

Ward drives his own plane, is manager of one of the largest coal and lumber firms in this vicinity, is very active in civic, church and club affairs, and had a hand in making up the coal and lumber dealers' code.

We have seen him turn down coal men meetings to attend our club doings and since his election has batted one thousand for attendance. He has always been an ardent fan of Notre Dame.

While Ward has been successful in the things that he has undertaken so far, he has very often expressed one regret—he did not graduate from Notre Dame.

The Joliet Club is proud to call Ward Loeffler a member.

Joliet got two big breaks during forty-eight hours: first, Catholic High of Joliet won the National Catholic basketball title for the third time, which is also a record; second, Joliet natives heard as fine a talk on athletics as was ever uttered across a banquet table by none other than the great basketball coach, George Keogan of Notre Dame. The occasion was the father and son banquet of the Joliet Rotary Club at which the city's basketball teams and their coaches were the honored guests.

George has been voted a place with the many champions which Joliet now holds. We knew that he was a champion at turning out great basketball teams, but he also proved beyond doubt that he is just as much at home at a banquet table as he is on the basketball floor.

At the finish of his talk, it would have been the envy of Notre Dame's greatest football squads to have seen the way the men crashed tables, chairs, et cetera to grab George's hand in congratulations.

It was the writer's privilege to overhear our Superintendent of Joliet Township High School, Mr. Haggard, say to George—"Mr. Keogan, your talk was great and in all my career I have never heard a man who could come to the point so quickly."

In summing up Mr. Keogan's qualifications let it suffice to say that he is a champion and Joliet was more than pleased with his visit.

Before the basketball banquet, George Keogan, who was the main speaker of the evening, was approached by a boy of twelve who said:

"Mr. Keogan, can I ask you a question?"

And George in his pleasant way said—"Why sure, sonny, what is it?"

To which the young man said:

"Mr. Keogan, why can't you beat Pittsburgh?" The great mentor, who has no troubles in figuring out basketball plays, was out on a limb and his reply was:

"Sonny, if you can tell me I'll be your pal."

Francis J. Dunn.

WOMEN'S CLUB

At the annual meeting of the Women's Club of the Alumni Association in July, 1933, the resolution was accepted that a general Holy Communion be offered by all the members of the Club on the feast of the Finding of the Holy Cross, May 3, 1934, for the welfare of Notre Dame, her faculty, her students, her alumni. This resolution is called to the attention of the members of the Club through the pages of the ALUMNUS, since individual notices are not possible. Prayers for the complete recovery of Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell are earnestly petitioned from the Sisters and other alumnae of the University.

The annual business meeting will be held in early July this year; the social meeting, later in the summer. In accordance with action taken at the 1933 meeting, the nominating committee will present its slate at the meeting and the election will then take place. Thus the expense and labor of the printed ballot, which has fallen upon the secretary of the Alumni Association, will be eliminated.

The chairmen of the special committees called for at the 1933 meeting are: Sister M. Benedictus, C.S.C., Committee on Reception and Activity for the Summer School; Sister M. Eleanore, C.S.C., Notre Dame literature; Sister M. Eleanore, C.S.C., Committee on Resolutions.

The Nominating Committee consists of Sister Francis Paula, C.S.C., Sister Lucy Marie, O.P., and Sister Monica, O.P.

The members of the Social Committee are Sister M. Flavia, O.S.B., Sister M. Frances, S.S.J., and Sister M. Leonella, O.P.

CARNEY GIFT

An original document of St. Charles Borromeo, patron of the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, C.S.C., president of Notre Dame, has been given to the University by Matthew J. Carney of New York City, a member of the board of lay trustees of the University.

The translation of the manuscript, accomplished by members of the Department of Classics after some effort because of the quaint legal phraseology, the abbreviations, and the obscurity of certain parts of the document, has been completed.

SUMMER SCHOOL--FACTS AND SUGGESTIONS

"The sixteenth summer session of the University of Notre Dame will open on Tuesday, the 19th of June, 1934, and will continue for six weeks, to Wednesday, the 1st of August. Graduate and undergraduate courses are offered by all departments in Arts and Letters and by all departments in Science, except that of Pharmacy. A few courses will be offered by the College of Law, the College of Engineering, and the College of Commerce, of general interest to the students in Arts and Letters and in Science, who may take any of these courses as elective for credit toward the degree of bachelor of arts or bachelor of science." From the new Summer Session Bulletin.

Those are the facts.

Heaven forbid that I become identified with the theorists in adult education, etc. But—

For those alumni whose work, or lack of it, permits them a six weeks release in the summer, it seems to me Summer School at Notre Dame offers several major considerations.

1. If you are writing, if you are teaching, in fact generally, in this era, an advanced degree is very helpful if not necessary. Summer school offers you this opportunity.

2. Notre Dame men, above most others, know the broad field of education, the significance of a university in its real sense. When you were here you had to miss many courses from excellent and famous teachers that time did not permit you to take. Other courses, the perspective of years has shown, lost their cultural merits for you through the Damoclean sword of passing grades and credits. You'd like to take them over again free from this strain. Personalities whom you met and admired on the campus, but couldn't schedule in class, have intrigued you.

Summer School offers you an opportunity for this highest type of education and culture.

3. Six weeks on the campus should be a major attraction. Lake to swim in. Tennis courts, gym, the park-like campus. Excellent meals in the Dining Halls or the cafeteria. Companionship of the highest type of men, lay and religious, and the added presence of several hundred nuns—the whole atmosphere one of pleasant culture. No vacation could offer a more attractive picture.

4. The cost is low. Tuition is thirty dollars for the summer. Board and room are twelve dollars a week. A library fee of two dollars is the only general fee.

I'm not preaching education or morality to you, but if circumstances had taken me away from the campus, it seems to me I'd like to have an opportunity like this, and I've gone into these details with that thought.

A summer school bulletin, with a complete description of courses, may be had upon application to Robert B. Riordan, '24, Registrar of the University.

FORM N. D. CLUB IN SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS

The alumni dinner arranged in Springfield, Illinois on February 26, on the occasion of the Assistant Alumni Secretary's visit, provided the opportunity to begin the organization of the Notre Dame Club of Springfield. Frank "Bud" Zimmerman, '26, was chosen temporary chairman at that time and Bob Graham, '26, temporary secretary.

Another dinner-meeting was held in the K. of C. Club Grill on March 12 at which a constitution was adopted and permanent officers elected. William B. Irvine, a prep school graduate in 1902, was named honorary president; Bud Zimmerman, president; Eugene R. Schwartz, '27, vice-president; and Bob Graham, secretary-treasurer. A social committee composed of Paul Dixon, ex. '17, chairman; John Carroll, '28, Mike Kinney, '31, Roscoe Bonjean, ex. '29, and John Troy, ex. '29, was selected and is making plans for Universal Notre Dame Night on April 16.

The club eventually hopes to include Notre Dame men residing in the territory bounded by Decatur, Pana, Carlinville, Jacksonville, and Beardstown.

Present at the first dinner on February 26 were:

Claire Hafel, '25, Bud Zimmerman, '26, Bob Graham, '26, Gene Schwartz, '27, Paul Dixon, ex. '17, Mike Kinney, '31, Paul McConnell, '32, Barney McGlone, '31, Joe Churchman, '33, Joe McCarthy, '26, Oliver Fuld, '31, Point Downing, '14, Chuck Corcoran, '17, Dutch Kelly, '17, Zeke Worthington, '27, Joe Galabowski, '31, Butch Whipple, '17, Roscoe Bonjean, ex. '29, John Carroll, '28, George Zimmerman, '32, Ralph Zimmerman, '29, Harry Argus, ex. '32, Bernard Walsh, '29, John Troy, ex. '29, Bill Irvine, '02, (prep); James B. Quinn, '97, and Joseph R. Fitzgerald, ex. '29.

Friends of the University present included:

THE ALUMNI

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. BART C. FAVERO, '27, announce the birth of a son, Thomas Edmon, on February 2nd.

Mr. and Mrs. ERNEST J. WILHELM, '27, are the parents of a daughter, Joanne Agatha, born February 26th.

A card from JOSEPH O'DONNELL, '27, gives us the belated announcement of the arrival of Joseph F. O'Donnell, Jr., on October 13th, 1933.

Joe also told us of the arrival of a son to Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM J. CORBETT, '27, on March 7th.

DEATHS

Mr. ADRIAN R. LYNCH, a student in 1915 and 1916, was killed in an automobile accident near Davenport, Iowa. Mr. Lynch, whose home was in Cedar Rapids, was employed by the Certain-Teed Products Corp., of Cedar Rapids, and was formerly a player in major league baseball.

The ALUMNUS extends sincere sympathy to: LEO SCHIAVONE, '32, upon the death of his uncle; to Judge KICKHAM SCANLON, '88, upon the death of his wife; to FRANK KELLEY, '28, upon the death of his mother; to FRANK NULTY, '32, upon the death of his father; to JOHN ROBERT LONG, ex. '18, upon the death of his father; to ROBERT DORAN, '26, upon the death of his uncle; to JAMES GEREND, '33, upon the death of his grandmother; to RAY FITZGERALD, ex. '25, upon the death of his father; to JACK CHEVIGNY, '31, upon the death of his father, and to TIMOTHY GALVIN, '16, upon the death of his father-in-law, Dr. Julius J. Chevigny.

Albert V. King, '14, assistant secretary of the Northern Trust Company in Chicago and football player at Notre Dame while Rockne was playing, died suddenly while eating in the lunchroom of the bank on March 29. His death is believed to have been caused by heart disease. Mrs. King and six children survive. The King home is at 641 South Lyman Avenue, Oak Park, a Chicago suburb.

Victor J. Dowling, LL.D. '17, of New York, eminent jurist and one of the outstanding Catholic laymen of the United States, died recently, after having been stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while working in the office of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, of which he was co-receiver.

Mr. Dowling, 67 years old and former presiding justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, was honored by two Popes. Pope Benedict XV created him a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great in 1916, and His Holiness Pope Pius XI made him a Papal Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword in 1927. He was made a Commander of the Order of the Holy Sepulchre by the Latin Patriarch of Jerusalem in 1908, and the government of a number of different countries bestowed high honors upon him.

MARRIAGES

Dr. and Mrs. Toros Sarkisian, Denver, Colorado, announce the marriage of their daughter, Justine, to Dr. RENE ALVEREZ RODRIGUEZ, '18, which will take place on April 14th at St. Martin's Chapel, St. John's Cathedral, Denver, Colorado.

Miss Hildagarde Olson, Battle Creek, Michigan, and RAY BRANCHEAU, '34, were married on April 2nd.

PERSONALS

Word comes that Defense Attorney Paul J. Ragan, Maumee, Ohio, was able in the recent widely-publicized Sailor Baldwin murder case to get for his client a life sentence and a recommendation for leniency. All of which means something when you consider that there were three eye witnesses to the crime and that the state was demanding the death penalty.

1911

Fred Steers of Chicago, checked in at the Alumni Office on March 10, just prior to the C.I.C. track meet which he had come down to attend.

1912

Paul A. Rothwell, Buffalo, Wyoming, was a welcome though very hasty visitor to the Alumni Office on Holy Thursday, March 29. Walking into the editorial quarters (also the business and factory quarters) with a cab driver in tow, he was looking for some one who would admit him to the stadium "just to look around." Paul had driven through—not in the cab—from Wyoming, he said, to pick up his daughter who is a student at St. Mary's. He was much interested in the recent additions and changes on the campus.

Francis J. Clohessy, Waverly, New York, has been named president of the Tioga County Bar Association, according to a recent newspaper announcement. He had just completed a year in the vice-presidency of the same group.

Frank has been practicing law in Waverly for the last 14 years, ever since he left Notre Dame. He has been village attorney for the last nine years.

Our old friend, Will Henry Haskins, is still amusing himself by throwing ticker tape at the honored guests of New York City as they pass on parade below his office window.

It is not too early to start the "ball rolling" for Commencement this June which calls for a reunion of '22 men, according to the workings of the Dix reunion plan. The last time we met was in 1928 and in the intervening period we have been beset by the depression which shattered whatever plans and intention that we may have had for visiting Notre Dame. Now the depression is over, let us have one grand conclave in June.

If you can make the grade, let us hear from you so we can have a list of names ready for the May ALUMNUS of those who will attend. Don't forget! The longer you postpone your visit, the harder it is to come back, and Notre Dame is too good a friend to lose. Then, too, it may be your last chance to see some of the old boys. Even Chuck Hirschbuhl and Chuck Foley in far off Oregon are getting the fever. We hope it's catching.

We are proud of the accomplishments of '22 medical men, Doctors Don Sexton of St. Louis, John Mohardt and Tom O'Keefe of Chicago.

Matt McEniry is a Denver radio broadcaster.

Kid Ashe.

1923

Dan Nolan has recently succeeded another Notre Dame man, Harold Bowlus, in a teaching position at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pennsylvania. Dan has had teaching experience at Mt. Angel College, at Creighton and at Notre Dame.

1924

A streamer headline, "Glascott Out For Mayor," in the Michigan City Dispatch of March 10 made known the fact that Bob, '24, now city judge, aspires to the chief executive's job in his home territory. He is a Republican candidate in the forthcoming primaries. Says the Dispatch about Bob: "Judge Glascott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Glascott and has practiced law in Michigan City since his graduation from the University of Notre Dame in 1924. He has lived here his entire life and first sought public office in 1929 when he was chosen city judge. He is a member of the Elks, Eagles and Rotary club and is married and has a family."

1926

According to Prince Slaven, '27, (see '27 notes) George Dolmage is studying medicine at the University of Iowa. George and Prince spend a good deal of time together in Iowa City.

Dick Halpin, as smiling and affable as ever, was a campus visitor on March 20. He had come down from Chicago for a day.

Prince Slaven, with whom the Assistant Secretary had lunch when he was in Galesburg, Illinois, on the recent Illinois tour, reported that he frequently sees Rev. Harry Ryan who is stationed as assistant pastor at St. Patrick's Church, Iowa City, Iowa. Prince himself, a teacher in the Galesburg High School, drives over to Iowa City every other weekend to take special courses in the University of Iowa in preparation for his master's degree.

1928

John Igoe comes to the fore as chairman of the employee representatives in the Employees Representative Council of the Lorain Works, National Tube Company, Lorain, Ohio. John organized and is the first editor of National News, an employee publication recently authorized by his plant. The old Igoe activity and ability are still operating judging from the frequency and merit of his suggestions for improving employee working conditions. Congratulations and best wishes to the fellow editor.

James F. Kenny, Waterbury,

Conn., one of the youngest postal inspectors in the United States service, has been assigned to headquarters at Reno, Nevada, where he will have charge of fifteen counties in Nevada and two in California. He went through a period of training in San Francisco before assuming his new duties.

Jim McShane, as scholastic at St. Louis University, is studying for the Jesuit priesthood, according to word given by his father Doctor McShane, of Springfield, Illinois, on the occasion of the Assistant Secretary's recent visit to the Illinois capitol.

1929

The Catalyzer, N. D. campus chemistry publication, reports that Harold Bowlus who has been teaching in St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pennsylvania, recently resigned to accept a position with the DuPont organization in its Jackson laboratories at Penn's Grove, N. J.

1932

Ray Geiger, '32, is all over Northern Jersey and New York City collecting accounts for his father. Sol Bontempo breaks into print occasionally as city inspector of stores in Newark. Walt Kielbasa, '32, writes that he is at De Paul and in a lawyer's office in his spare time. Pete Quinn, ex-'32, has taken over the embalming and insurance business of his father in Bloomfield. Pete and his brother Ned, still a student, recently lost their father.

I hear that Myles Mullen, '32, opened a beer tavern in Brooklyn, evidently forsaking the law at St. John's. I have not verified this. The last I heard of Tony Conti, '32, he was at Columbia last spring. I have heard that Charles Kroncke, '32, is teaching at or near his home in Bayonne. Yours truly is handling claims for the Fidelity & Casualty Co. in the Bronx and elsewhere.

The following alumni hold down seats in the Caldwell-Journal Square Bus daily: Dick Purcell, who is with an insurance agency in Jersey City, Jack O'Keefe who is with the Consolidated Gas and Ellis "Speedy" O'Keefe, '33, who is with Kopper's Coke out in the middle of the Newark Meadows, miles from civilization.

Down on John street you can regularly bump into Henry Frey, '30 who is in a law office, Bernie Conroy who is with the Home Insurance Co., and Jim Rizer, with an insurance agency. J. Don Sullivan.

1933

Ray Naber, who was with the Standard Oil Company in South Bend, has returned to the home diggings in Louisville and is working for the Kentucky Ice Cream Company.

A letter from Gerald Daily, '21, Muskogee, Oklahoma, to Norb Skelley, '25, Tulsa, recently found its way to the Alumni Office. It divulged the news that Gerald Fitzgerald, '33, is stationed in Okmulgee, Oklahoma, and that Ed Leroux, '33, has recently moved from Muskogee to Tulsa. Ed's father is president of the Oklahoma Pipe Line Company.

Theatre Revives Melodrama

The University Theatre, with Prof. Frank Kelly directing, is this month reviving one of its great hits of recent years, the melodrama, "Gold in the Hills."

On April 19, in the Palace Theatre, South Bend, the University Theatre will present the play under the auspices of the South Bend Junior Chamber of Commerce for the charitable enterprises of that civic organization, principal of which is the school milk fund for the South Bend school city.

Prices for the charity performances are seventy-five cents, fifty cents and thirty-five cents.

Norman Hartzer, '29, is president of the Junior Chamber. Charles Weiss, '32, and Edward Crockett, '32, are active in the promotion of the show.

Hoyer Speaks in Indianapolis

Ray Hoyer, A.M. '24, head of the Department of Boy Guidance at the University, spoke at a father and son banquet on last Washington's Birthday sponsored by the Mens' Club of the Little Flower parish, Indianapolis. More than 500 men and boys attended with such celebrities as Chuck Klein, Umpire Harry Geisel, Donnie Bush, Mike Kelly, Red Corriden, Stanley Fieze, Mayor Sullivan, to mention only a few, draped around for the edification of the boys. The toastmaster was Frank McCarthy, ex-'25, while Brother William, C.S.C., principal of the Cathedral High School, also said a few words.

Cummins Is Chosen

Somewhat belated apparently in reaching the Alumni Office but none the less pleasing on that account is the announcement that Robert B. Cummins, '27, of Mandan, North Dakota, has been appointed director of the National Emergency Council for the state of North Dakota. In this capacity, he works like John E. Cassidy, '17, who holds the same position in Illinois, under the direction of Frank E. Walker, '09, executive secretary of the National Emergency Council.
