Its Quality shines brightest after 10.000 miles

People who have examined the new Master De Luxe Chevrolet marvel at its quality. Very likely you will marvel, too ... because Chevrolet has made this car so big and sturdy—so fine in every part —that it no longer looks or acts like a low-priced car! The most pleasing result of this high quality manufacture is that the Master De Luxe will continue to give real satisfaction long after you are satisfied you have received full value for the money paid for it. This new Chevrolet has a habit of staying young. Its quality shines brightest after ten thousand miles. The most surprising thing of all is that its prices are among the lowest and that it gives the greatest operating economy in Chevrolet history. But, as we have said before, quality is remembered all the more pleasantly when price is so low.

91st COMMENCEMENT CARRIES ON NEW ORDER

Alumni Attendance Breaks All Previous Records; Class of '35 Contributes Fitting Close to Typical Year of the New Notre Dame; Week-End Kaleidoscopic

May 31, June 1 and June 2 of this year of Our Lord 1935 proved to the satisfaction of everyone at Notre Dame that the University's commencements have permanently outgrown the Church and Washington Hall.

Circumstances indicated in the Spring that the 1935 Commencement would resume the more cloistered aspects of earlier years. But, like the mountains to Mahomet, the limelight came to Notre Dame.

Friday, once a quasi-Retreat for a few fortunate visitors, this year echoed to the influx. By nightfall, Dillon Hall was filled with the returning alumni of 1920 and after. Morrissey and Lyons Halls reverberated to the tramp of the high school athletes in for John Nicholson's Second National Notre Dame Interscholastic Track and Field Meet, and the guests of the Indiana State Intercollegiate Golf Championship Meet.

The golf course hummed with tournaments, State and alumni.

The President of the University launched the Class of '35 on its weekend with a brief, pointed message in Washington Hall at 12:45.

Wisconsin made some of the oldtime baseball alumni feel relaxed by showing up the weaknesses of this year's N. D. nine, which showed its strength the next day in a more thrilling manner by defeating Michigan State (cf. Sports this issue).

The cinders on Cartier Field glowed with the trial heats of the preps.

At 6:00 various Reunion groups were besieging the Alumni Office asking about the dinners. Some day the point will be scored, that the Alumni Office can lead a Class to the campus water, but it will have to do its own drinking. In other words, we suggested, we urged, we hoped, we would have been glad to help plan, Reunion affairs. But in the absence of any concrete reaction, with one notable exception, we felt obliged to refrain from compulsory reunions. The exception was the 5-Year Class of 1930. At 8:00 P.M. Friday, that group to the remarkable number of some 125 members of the Class, assembled at the College Inn of the Hotel LaSalle for a private observance of the jubilee. Entertainment and a buffet supper, planned by Chairamn Gus Bondi, Prof. Louis Hasley, and a local committee of the '30 alumni ipso facto, provided a full evening.

For the crowded campus in the early evening hours, Prof. Joseph Casasanta, '23, had his famous University Band in a brilliant concert from the porch of the Main Building. Perfect weather and the splendid, varied repertoire of the Band kept the Quadrangle packed from start to finish.

For any lonely hearts, and there were few indeed, Rev. Eugene Burke, C.S.C., '06, polished off the night with a fine moving picture in Washington Hall.

All this on the Friday that once was so quiet.

Came Saturday, and with it one of those changes in time that are forever baffling us on the campus. Hence the Mass for Deceased Alumni was celebrated by Rev. Eugene Burke, being in the last stages when the intended celebrant, Rev. M. L. Moriarty, secretary and chaplain of the Class of '10, came in with his Classmates.

At 9:30, the Class of '35, paid its last visit as a Class to Sacred Heart Church. Since the transfer of the Baccalaureate Mass to the Gymnasium, this Last Visit has taken on a literal and moving significance for the boys in whose lives the Church has been so prominent.

Class Day, immediately following, saw the usual brilliant array of graduating talent. Tom Proctor, son of Bob Proctor, '04, gave the address of the President of the Class; Joseph Becek delivered the Class Oration; George Hager, C.S.C., read his beautiful Class Poem; honors for the year were awarded, and John Holahan gave the impressive Valedictory. The University Orchestra played for the event.

Local Club Council

In the court room of the Law Building, the Sixth Annual Council of Local Alumni Clubs met at 11 o'clock on Saturday. President Tim Galvin presided. Only 16 Clubs were represented, but in the open forum of Club affairs that followed, so much of help, so much of inspiration and practical value, was produced, that this feature of Commencement seems definitely established as an integral and increasingly vital part. Clubs will hear in more detail of the stimulation which this meeting brought to the Alumni Office particularly.

The Council discussed the achievements of the Clubs from Coast to Coast during the year. The Alumni Office lauded them generally for the work on prospective student contacts and on Universal Notre Dame Night. A few of the specific achievements discussed were: The St. Joe Valley's football banquet with Will Rogers; the N. Y. Club's honoring of Father Nieuwland, the Chicago Club's dinner with Shane Leslie as guest of honor; the Los Angeles Club's luncheon to Frank Spearman, the Laetare Medalist, and Fr. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., on the occasion of presentation; the Gogebic Range's dinner for Elmer Layden and Joe Boland last summer; and the Waterbury, Conn., Club's one hour broadcast on U.N.D. Night. These instances typified the scope and the increasing depth of Club programs. The whole tone of the Council was one of vigorous maturity.

The Afternoon

Under Sports, Joe Petritz probably tells you about the very successful repetition of the Notre Dame interscholastics in track and field. The value of having these boys from the Catholic high schools of the nation here for competition and the inevitable acquaintance with the plant and the personnel and some of the spirit of Notre Dame was evident to alumni who enjoyed the week-end with them.

The Alumni Banquet

East Hall of the University Dining Halls, beautifully decorated for the event, was filled to its four walls by alumni and members of the Class of '35. Of the dinner, nothing need be said except that it was typical of the traditions set for this event.

Father O'Hara's brilliant address is reprinted in this issue. So, too, Tim Galvin's talk is reprinted. So much happened during the Association year, that Tim was the most surprised man in the institution when he was told the length of his report.

Father Mike Moriarty's silver tongue was most fittingly invoked to express a few thoughts on behalf of the Class of '10, silver jubilarians.

Very Rev. James W. Donahue, C. S. C., '07, Superior General of the Congregation of Holy Cross, also addressed the banquet.

But it remained for Sam Dolan, '10, back for his first Commencement in 25 years, to give the "Gettysburg address" of the evening. No comment or attempt at summary could do justice to the beautiful sentiments expressed by this great character in Notre Dame's annals. It had, however, the virtue of saying the things everyone there wanted to say, in the way that the most enthusiastic could have hoped to say them.

Following the Banquet, the Class of '25 assembled in unexpected strength and numbers for the customary solution of local, national and world problems which are not already in the hands of members. Largest benefit emerging from this session was a decision to make the Class Secretaryship a more comprehensive job, Scallan being assisted, if he should become active, by a committee of the whole.

While these things occupied alumni, Prof. Joseph Casasanta, '23, with his now traditional versatility, was presenting another major and nationally famous University musical organization to the campus visitors, the University Glee Club. That group's magnificent and beautifully executed program completely packed Washington Hall.

Sunday, June 2

Baccalaureate Sermon and Commencement Address appear in complete text in this issue.

But something must be said of the beauty of the Gymnasium as it was decorated to effect a cathedral atmosphere for this ceremony.

No report could fail to record the beautiful singing of the Moreau Seminary Choir under the direction of Rev. James Connerton, C.S.C., '20. A Gregorian Mass considerably shortened the ceremonies, so that even with Witt's "Ecce Sacerdos," Vittoria's "Ave Maria," Palestrina's "Ascendo ad Patrem" and Lotti's "Regina Coeli," Most Rev. John F. Noll, LL.D., '15, celebrant, had completed the Mass and blessed the Senior Flag by 10:30, when the procession moved the flag-pole on the Quadrangle where the Flag, given on Washington's Birthday, was raised to float over the campus until June 7, 1936, when the Flag of '36 will replace it.

At 12:30 in the Dining Halls, the Monogram Club met and perfected an organization with Edward J. Meehan, '20, as first president, the story appearing in more detail in this issue.

The closing event of the Commencement, the awarding of degrees filled the Gymnasium at 4:00 P. M.

The text of Mr. Leslie's address does not begin to do justice to the vitality and the interest which his personal charm and brilliant delivery added. It was one of the most pleasant addresses to listen to that a Class could have enjoyed, and the Class of '35 did. At the same time, within it are the seeds of wisdom as great and counsel as sound as in more somber pronouncements. Those who heard him were impressed with the advantages that the boys had enjoyed in the semester's classes and lectures he had given here.

So died once more the anticipated and sought for tumult and the happy and most satisfying shouting of another Commencement. In keeping with all of the good traditions of Notre Dame, old and new, what other tribute need be paid.

Jerry Parker Busy

H. Jerome Parker, '31, of Sacramento, Calif., brother of Howard Parker, '17, has just been appointed to the important post of executive secretary of the Centre Club, an organization of more than 1,000 Catholic college graduates in New York City. The club occupies the old quarters of the Catholic Club of New York, at 120 Central Park South.

Jerry, as he is more familiarly known, assumed his new position on May 1. Besides his administrative duties, he also will be in direct charge of the broad program of Catholic Action sponsored by the club. His work will be on a full-time basis.

After graduating from Notre Dame, he joined the investment banking firm of Blyth & Co., serving at first in San Francisco and then in New York. Since 1932 he has been associated with the rail and air transportation industry. Last year he made an extended study of European transportation methods.

At Notre Dame, he was active in extracurricular activities, being varsity cheerleader, as well as business manager of the Glee Club for several years.

OFFICIAL HONORARY DOCTORATE CITATIONS

The University's official recognition of the three brilliant recipients of the honorary LL.D. is phrased in the following citations:

The University of Notre Dame at this ninety - first annual commencement announces the conferring of the following honorary degrees:

The degree of doctor of laws, honoris causa, on:

A member of the hierarchy, having distinction as the first American ever attached to the secretariat of state of the Holy See, who in the midst of onerous duties as churchman has done very influential work as author, editor, publisher, and director of Catholic literature in a great archdiocese— The Most Rev. Francis Joseph Spellman, Titular Bishop of Sila and Auxiliary Bishop of Boston.

On a Catholic man of letters, of international reputation, graduate of the famous English schools of Eton and Cambridge, who has enriched the literature of Ireland and England by more than a score of volumes notable for scholarship and literary style, and who as member of the faculty of the University in the latter half of this schoolyear has inspired members of the Class of 1935 to efforts at writing and to appreciation of the best in life and in literature— Shane Randolph Leslie, of Glaslough, the Irish Free State.

On a lawyer distinguished by characteristic modesty in public service of national and international importance, in the organization of the War Industries Board and in membership on the United States Shipping Board in the World War, in the organization of the Irish Relief in 1921 and 1922, in giving new direction to the study of economics by the preparation and publication of the first international balance sheet, in 1923, and in his generous assistance to Catholic education in the city of Racine—the Honorable Martin James Gillen, of Land o' Lakes, Wisconsin. c

Fr. O'Hara Speaks in N. Y.

An informal Notre Dame reunion of sorts was held at the annual dinner of the Steuben County Society of New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, on April 27 last. Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., president of the University, was guest speaker at the affair. He was introduced by the president of the Steuben County Society of New York, John Quincy Adams III, '27, of Montclair, N. J.

Two old Scholastic cronies also met at the dinner for the first time since they were graduated from Notre Dame in 1929. They were Harley McDevitt, of Passaic, N. J., a sales executive with the National Geographic Magazine, and John V. Hinkel, of Washington, D.C., now associated with the editorial staff of the New York Times. John was editor of the Notre Dame Scholastic in 1928-29 and Harley its business manager.

SHANE LESLIE DELIVERS COMMENCEMENT TALK

Irish Author and Lecturer Charms Audience with Culture and Wit as He Counsels Class of '35 and Praises Notre Dame for Its Academic Achievement

Graduates of 1935!! It was written by the Psalmist: "All things come to an end but I perceive that Thy Commandment is exceeding broad." All things come to an end: your days at Notre Dame and mine. There is an end to all things even unto bad weather in Indiana. You have survived storm and deluge, lectures and blizzards, examinations and discipline and now in the presence of your parents you are receiving the intellectual monogram of Our Lady under whose Golden Dome you have lived four years of a life which can be distinguished as Spartan, Sporting and Špiritual.

Your parents see this day the fruit of their years of sacrifice and ambition. It is parents' day which fathers share with mothers and they have magnificently deserved it. Like the Eucharistic Pelicans, many must have given their very blood to make this day a splendid possibility in your lives. To you I say: "Avete! Salvete! Valete!" It is a splendid sight to see 500 young men leave the campus for the camp of life's battle as finely equipped as you.

I believe that the trouble of every University today is the difficult mixing of discipline and democracy which can seldom be wisely fused except by an ideal. You have your ideal here and out of the quicksands of youth has been fashioned a quicksilver which can not only run stable but reflect the ideal under which you have been educated for four years. It is a splendid sight to see young men starting out to make the pride of evil in the world cringe and its folly bleed. Yours is a legion not of veterans but of youth. You carry your bonus with you-to give to your country.

When I first entered South Bend I believed I had reached Notre Dame when I stood outside the majestic Studebaker building on which flashed in colored light the magical words "Builders of Champions." It could certainly be transferred to the outside of this building.

I am thinking of the phrase which the Greeks gave to their ideal of manhood: Kalos Kagathos: the good and the beautiful: a reference to character as well as to athletic training. The phrase has often been translated "English gentleman" but I venture to give it another version that of "Fighting Irish": good in his religion and beautiful in his athletic development.

Whatever your name or your race there are certain traits which count today as Irish — a Frenchman once summed up different nations by imagining the effect of their arrival by ones twos and threes on a desert island. He said "one Englishman would make a club. Two Englishmen a golf match. Three Englishmen a colony." Of the Irish he said: "One Irishman means a political party; two Irishmen, a prize fight; three Irishmen, High Mass."

This is a beginning and a commencement for you. The late Monsignor Benson used to describe the story of a young man commencing life. When he was confirmed, his mother took him aside and said: Life is now beginning. When he left college, he was told so again in a commencement address. On his death bed, the priest told him once more that life was just beginning. "Hasn't it begun yet?" he asked and died. What advice am I to give you save that you will lose illusions but keep ideals. Do not hope for too much but do not fear at all.

This may be a time of transition and difficulty but I think I may say that you are beginning life in a land where standards are still immeasurably higher than in Europe. In 20 years only could we in Europe hope to measure where you now are.

One in ten Europeans has a car compared to America. You do not realize the perfection of American telephones till you have tried to call across the street in Europe, Your trains are more comfortable and the distribution of the best and simplest food is amazing. The standards of living for the great Middle Class in the United States are as high as can be attained by the affluent in Europe. Your material civilization seems complete but not your universities. It is difficult to compare universities. Their tasks and traditions are different. In England men go to the university to learn tradition. In America you are still building tradition. Our universities are largely in the past and yours are in the future. Your student body is more efficient all round.

I believe the English universities lay a greater accent on sheer athletics than you do. Your athletes stick better to class. Many attended mine 30 times without a break. I think your track team here could on its record have beaten Oxford and Cambridge this year. I look forward to the day when the Notre Dame colors are unfurled on the tracks of the other side and with the development of faster and safer air travel this day may not be far distant.

Of my students I carry away many delightful visions and I have put aside in a sealed envelope the names of six whom I prophesy will be amongst the foremost American writers in ten years. Most vividly I recall you men praying in the snow for your dying captain of football only two months ago.

I have learnt a great deal at Notre Dame in four months and I shall add to my loyalties to Eton and Cambridge the echo of your Victory Song. I might say that of all colleges I have known I found Notre Dame easiest to climb into after hours but that argues a finer sense of honor between the authorities and the men.

I recall the Greek epigram full of pathos and conveying as much of the Christian charity as a pagan poet could. "I am the tomb of a shipwrecked sailor. But do others sail on with better luck and happier winds."

A Greeting from President Bernard J. Voll, '17

To the Alumni of Notre Dame:

You have honored me with the Presidency of the Association and in this first greeting I want you to know that I am justly proud of the position and deeply and sincerely appreciative.

With the honor, of course, goes responsibilities which were forcibly impressed upon me by the very comprehensive and enlightening report presented to the Association at the Alumni Banquet by President Tim Galvin.

In that report Mr. Galvin demonstrated very clearly that he has been a worthy successor to the many able Presidents which our Association has had and that under his leadership we have reached a position of prominence never attained before. Our Association has become a national factor in the Notre Dame picture that we are no longer at liberty to nourish and neglect at will.

I believe I can say without reservation that everywhere our alumni have worked unselfishly in the cause of the greater Notre Dame. We have made and I am certain will continue to make a distinct contribution to the University of which Notre Dame is conscious and appreciative.

Let us not forget, however, that we as alumni are basking in the reflected glory of a University whose achievements in the field of higher Catholic education during almost a century of existence have merited the admiration and profound respect of all peoples. It must, therefore, be obvious that any service rendered in behalf of the University is returned to us in a multitude of ways, and that no solid building for either is done without mutual rewards.

The excellent work which the Association accomplished last year sets a precedent which may seem difficult to maintain. However, the way is open for further development of the opportunity that lies before Notre Dame and Notre Dame men and with your continued co-operation we shall attempt to exploit those opportunities.

Unpleasant as the task may be, it seems impossible to conclude this message without a reference to our financial position. We have an accumulated deficit which was perhaps inevitable in the face of our activities and the economic crisis through which we are passing, but surely it is reasonable to suppose that with improved business conditions and the addition of thousands of new members, the Association will again assume it's own financial obligations. From the splendid spirit manifest during the Commencement, this should be possible without the sacrifice of a single activity in which we are now engaged.

The President of the Association is merely the symbol of it's membership. I am your elected spokesman, but the measure of our ability to serve the University and ourselves rests finally with the individual member. Our progress is based upon the support you are willing to accord me. In the past the work of the Local Clubs, the response of individual alumni of all the classes and particularly the co-operation of the University have meant everything in the advances made toward the ultimate goal. I am confidently counting upon that continued co-operation for the advancement of the interests of Notre Dame and ourselves.

With these factors, may next year's account of stewardship be as filled with progress as was that of the year just ended.

> BERNARD J. VOLL, PH.B. '17, President of the Association, South Bend, Indiana

BACCALAUREATE BRINGS SPIRITUAL COUNSEL

"This Do, And Thou Shalt Live."-Luke X, 28.

In the center of the great sweep of stone steps leading up to the library building of Columbia University in New York City, there is an imposing bronze statue. Seated in a chair of classical design is the majestic figure of a woman. Both hands are raised; the right hand holds and is supported by a sceptre, and with the left hand she is beckoning. A wreath adorns her head, draperies fall in peaceful folds to her sandalled feet, and on her lap is an open book from which her eves are raised in meditation.

It is an inspiring figure, one of the masterful works of the American sculptor, Daniel French, and we really need no guide to tell us that this beautiful woman with nobility stamped on her every feature is Alma Mater.

As we gaze upon this striking image of the cherishing mother, we feel ourselves stirred to the very depths of our emotions. Instinctively as we contemplate and meditate, we think not of that particularly University but rather do we envision and nurture affectionate thoughts of our own dear Alma Mater.

For "Alma Mater" is not a scientific expression which means the same thing whenever and whereever it is uttered. Rather does it convey different messages to different persons and to different groups of persons.

And in expressing my gratitude to the authorities of this great University for the honor that is to be conferred on me today in making me a son of Notre Dame, I wish to say with joy and with pride that "Alma Mater" will always mean the same to me as it will mean to you. I shall strive always to be a loyal devoted son of Notre Dame. I shall endeavor to be true to her ideals and to be cooperative and helpful in all that concerns her welfare. And all the more am I grateful because Notre Dame is the first University ever to confer on me an honorary degree.

Besides the honor of becoming a son of Notre Dame, I have the additional honor today of being privileged to present to you, my brothers, some thoughts for your consideration on this important occasion.

My first word to you is one of congratulations, congratulations because you have that great, that natural, and that irreplaceable gift of youth, the importance of which is stressed so emphatically and so awfully in Gound's Opera "Faust." The learned philosopher, weary of life and the pursuit of knowledge, spurns the tempter's proffered gifts of wealth and of power, and craves instead the gift of youth. This gift for which the aged philosopher yearned so bitterly is now in your full possession, and I beg you to use it well and to begin to use it at once.

Unfortunately I am unable to tell you that youth is the only thing that is essential to success. Nor can I tell you that it is as easy to succeed today as it was in times that are past. I am unable to tell you this because I do not believe it. The combination of youth, ability, industiousness, and integrity, was an absolute guarantee to success in years gone by. But this recipe is not sufficient today. These four qualities are as important factors to success as they always were, but in addition to these endowments, which I believe you all to possess, there are required also now more than ever before the supplementary qualities of courage and perseverance, which qualities I also confidently believe that you possess.

You are young and you are educated. The knowledge that you have acquired is organized knowledge, coordinated common sense if you will, which in a broad interpretation is a good definition of education.

You have learned principles and facts, which are important, and you have learned to put them into practice, which is more important, thus fortifying yourselves with the arms and the armor with which you are to face and to solve the complex problems of life here and of life beyond here.

And in order that this sermon may be something more than a theoretical exhortation, in order that you may at least have the opportunity of remembering something precise, I have formulated three very simple and very easy to remember recommendations for your practical life, and three equally simple and equally easy to remember suggestions for your religious life.

As a plan for your life as men living and working in the world, that is for your business or your cultural or your professional life, I would recommend:

First: That you remember what you have learned. "Without memory there is no knowledge," as Dante tells us.

Second: That you continue to read and to study and to learn, especially about your particular subject. In other words—"Always more and always better."

Third: That you live and profit by what you have learned.

And now for the three recommendations in regard to your practical Catholic life.

The first recommendation is prayer. Without prayer it is impossible to be saved. Saint Alphonsus tells us that those who pray are saved, and those who do not pray are lost.

It is not necessary to say long prayers but it is necessary to say some prayers. Never close your eyes in slumber at night without saying at least the Act of Contrition to ask God's pardon for any sins you may have committed during that day or during your lives.

And this is the second recommendation:

Make up your minds this morning that never through your own fault will you miss Mass on a Sunday or a Holyday of Obligation. There is little danger of your committing such a fault in the immediate future, but I am not speaking for the present or the proximate future, I am speaking for your lives.

"Life on Earth is a Warfare," as we read in the Book of Job.

You must be ever on your guard. In the matter of missing Mass, for example, you may be tempted when you are alone, away from home. You may not be feeling quite as well as usual, the weather may be a bit stormy, you may not know exactly where the Church is, nor the precise time of the Masses, and the thought suggests itself that perhaps you are not obliged to go to Mass that day.

In situations like this, my dear friends, I beg you to be humble and to be prayerful, and to resolve now and frequently to renew the resolution never to take the first wrong step in any direction, because if you do, it is extremely difficult to get back to where you were when you started.

These are, therefore, the first two suggestions, prayer, and Mass on Sundays and Holydays; and the last one is this:

That you receive our Divine Lord in Holy Communion at least once each month, because our Blessed Saviour must be merciful to a soul that has been faithful and devoted to Him. I am sure that during the last hours of such a soul's earthly life, as the veil between this world and eternity grows more thin, I am sure that Our Divine Lord will come to such a soul to comfort it, to encourage it, and to accompany it on its journey to heaven and to Himself.

Recapitulating, therefore, three things for your practical life are:

Remember what you have learned; never stop learning, profit from what you have learned.

The three things for your spiritual life are:

Prayer, Mass every Sunday and every Holyday, and Holy Communion once a month.

"These Do, and Thou Shalt Live." And for a closing thought of gratitude and of hope, I would adapt an expression of Abraham Lincoln in referring to the great and good mother whose knotted and toil-worn hands pointed out to him the way to goodness and to greatness, and from and in and through whose eyes he saw the light of mother-love, the light that we, my friends and brothers, have seen shine in mothers' eyes, a light that to us beams forth a threefold radiance, and bears a three-fold significance, our mother's love, the love of Notre Dame, and the love of our Blessed Mother.

And so paraphrasing the words of Lincoln we may say—All that we are and all that we hope to be, we owe not alone to our mother—but to our mothers.

God grant that we may be worthy sons of all three mothers.

"This Do And We Shall Live!"

Notre Dame Golf Course Donor's Widow Presents Plaque to School as Prize

One of the most novel and distinctive golf trophies ever seen here has been placed on display at the library of the University of Notre Dame. —

The gift of Mrs. Mary G. Burke of Portsmouth, O., the trophy will record from year to year the winners of the University of Notre Dame championship, and it will remain at the University.

The trophy replaces the cup which Winfield Day, a junior this year, won permanently by taking the school title three years running. It was donated by Mrs. Burke to honor the memory of her late husband, William P. Burke, who bore the cost of construction of the William J. Burke-University golf course.

The trophy is in the form of a metal plaque, mounted on a wooden shield, on which is engraved a topographical map of the golf course. Names of the first 18 champions, starting with Larry Moller in 1930, will be engraved on the greens of the first 18 holes, along with the year and score of the winner.

The next 18 winners will have their names engraved on the 18 tees, the next 18 on the fairways, under a novel arrangement. The process will be repeated so that the trophy may still be in use in 108 years.

The map of the course was made by a group of six engineering students, headed by Jerome Cushing.

The map is surmounted by a top plate of silver, a reproduction of a view from the golf course which took more than six weeks to complete. In the foreground is the figure of Bill Burke, son of the donor of the trophy in the act of hitting a ball. In the background the spire of Sacred Heart church, the dome of the Administration building, and several of the residence halls may be seen.

The name plate, on which are engraved the words "William J. Burke Memorial Trophy" and the Notre Dame seal, backed by two crossed golf clubs, took R. Gayde, the sculptor, more than 140 hours to finish. Ten men worked on the reproduction of the golf course outlay.

The shield, on which the metal work is mounted, is made of 20 separate pieces of American black walnut, which are laminated, as in the case of airplane propellers, and so constructed that the panel will not warp, and that the joints are not visible to the eye.

N. D. PROGRESS SUMMARIZED BY FR. O'HARA

President's Annual Address at the Alumni Banquet Pays Tribute to Many Factors That Have Resulted in Successful Year; Outline of New Projects Arouses Enthusiasm

It should be an easy task for an old student and teacher to extend a welcome to his classmates and former pupils, and for a chaplain to greet the spiritual charges who have grown up under his care. I always welcome the chance to say hello to the old boys, and to hear about their jobs and their sweethearts or their wives and their first babies. Somehow or other, they don't tell you so much about the second and third, and by the time the list grows to eight or nine, they are looking for advice, rather than giving it, on how to raise a family.

That task would be relatively easy. We would all feel better about it, I am sure, if the old relationship remained undisturbed. It is a more difficult task for me to appear before you with the responsibilities of the University upon my shoulders, and the sense of responsibility has been increased immeasurably by two sad affairs that have occurred during the past year.

Father O'Donnell, by sheer force of will, kept himself alive last year until the Commencement festivities were over. His contribution to Notre Dame is hard for us to measure. He brought to the presidency a fine culture and a rare distinction. A great poet-one of the greatest of his generation-and with the sensitive soul of a poet, he accepted without question the mandates of his superiors, and turned his keen mind to problems of administration. He was quick to learn, and this poet amazed business men by his quick and accurate grasp of business problems. He remained ever the poet, however, and in his death those nearest to him saw much of the fulfillment of his prophecy of death which he uttered nearly thirty years ago in a poem entitled "Prevision."

Prevision

BY CHARLES L. O'DONNELL, C.S.C. I can not tell what way the years will lead, How hands may falter and how feet may bleed, What deep content I shall have or need, I can not tell.

I do not know why the fleet early years Should shake me with surmise of future fears; Why golden suns set in a gloom of tears I do not know.

I must not ask of winter winds that come Across the ground where men sleep cold and dumb,

If I shall rest there well,--of my last home I must not ask. I shall not shrink, maybe I shall not dread, When time has slowed my step and bowed my head,

To go away, to join the cloistered dead I shall not shrink.

I shall have hope in spite of heavy shame, Among God's pensioners to find my name,-In Him who for the strayed and lost ones came

I shall have hope.

REV. JOHN F. O'HARA, C.S.C., '11 Facts are his fancy.

The death of Father Cavanaugh makes it even harder. Father Cavanaugh was the living embodiment of the spirit of Notre Dame. He was president of Notre Dame for a longer period than any other man with the exception of Father Sorin. When he took charge, Notre Dame was a rela-tively small Catholic college, and when illness forced him to lav down the burdens of office, it was already the Greater Notre Dame. His great heart, his divine gift of eloquence, his ready humor, and his sympathetic understanding of human nature made friends for Notre Dame everywhere. All of us here tonight are his debtors. Many of us he raised. He placed our feet in the paths of righteousness, and if we did not follow in his footsteps, it was not his fault. By his unbounded confidence in us, he gave us confidence in ourselves. He loved Notre Dame and all Notre Dame men; he loved especially the Alumni gatherings. It was his way to give his whole strength to any cause that won his heart, and he spent his strength early in life for the good of Notre Dame.

When the Book of Life is closed, we can get our most accurate estimate of the worth of a man. When we look back now at the spirit and accomplishments of Father O'Donnell and Father Cavanaugh, we feel, as Bishop Kelley once said, that Notre Dame has had more than its share of great men. We dare not think too long of the responsibilities their lives have placed upon us: Such contemplation makes us fear and falter. All we can do is ask that when you say a prayer for the repose of their great souls, you add a word of supplication that Notre Dame may carry on. I can satisfy myself only by considering this administration as an interregnum.

In spite of the heavy crosses we have had to bear this year, God's blessings on Notre Dame have been abundant. Public recognition of academic achievements has been generous this year. Father Nieuwland has twice been honored with medals recognizing his contributions to the science of Chemistry; the gold medal of the American Institute on February 7th, and the Nichols Medal, awarded by the New York Chapter of the American Chemical Society was presented to him on April 23rd. The work of the Department of Chemistry continues to receive recognition, and graduate students in the Department have published over 25 papers in various scientific journals since my report at the last Commencement. Several papers have also been published by the Biology Department, and quite recently it has been announced by Father Wenninger, Dean of the College of Science, that Professor J. A. Reyniers has succeeded, after six years of patient experimentation, in producing germfree guinea pigs. This particular achievement has been the goal of scientists ever since the experiments of Pasteur were announced fifty years ago.

Other departments of the Colleges of Science and Engineering have done important research this year, and by joint action of the Departments of Physics and Electrical Engineering, the high-tension laboratory in the Cushing Hall of Engineering will be equipped this summer with a 12-foot copper globe for experiments with three million volts of electricity. Operation in this laboratory will begin with the fall term of school. The Department of Botany has added several thousand plants to its herbarium. The increased facilities in this Department were made possibly largely through a federal grant by which the Federal Emergency Relief Administration helped students work their way through school.

Registration this year totalled 2709, an increase of 92 over the registration of last year. The number of graduate students was 64 as compared with 62 of last year. Certain benefactions received during the year will enable us to establish new parttime scholarships for graduate study, and probably ten additional graduate students will be aided in this way next year. Graduate study for the Doctor of Philosophy degree is given at present only in the departments of organic chemistry, physical chemistry, botany, and metallurgy, but through various benefactions we have been able to build up a library in Medieval Philosophy that will justify us in offering work for the doctorate in Medieval Philosophy soon, probably next year. The permanent fund for the Library of Medieval Studies has been increased this year by additional gifts of $3,309, and now stands at $14,300.

Cash benefactions received during the year totalled more than 70,000, and gifts of materials, principally for the Art Gallery, amounted to some 50,000 more. Most of these gifts have been anonymous. While we admire the becoming modesty which animates these hidden benefactors, we wish that they might permit us to make them known for the inspiration that their lives might give to others.

The steam shovel is again busy on the campus, this time preparing for the construction of a new students' infirmary. And it is our firm hope to begin construction on the Rockne Memorial before the students return in September. A suggestion to solicit this summer further contributions for this project will be passed on to the Alumni Board at tomorrow's meeting.

The University has announced for next year a new course in aeronuatical engineering, a new major sequence of studies in politics, and the extension of the architectural course from four years to five. A word should be said about the the new department of politics. Like all instruction at Notre Dame, it proceeds from principles rather than from cases. It is not intended as a laboratory course in the actual processes of goverment. Its purpose is rather to train the student in the fundamental principles of all government, and so to broaden his view that he can handle particular cases as they arise. At the beginning of their course in the fall, the students will have the benefit of a six weeks' intensive course in the principles of government to be given by the Hon. Desmond Fitzgerald, of the Irish Dail. Mr. Fitzgerald, it should be understood, will not teach Irish politics. His actual position of opposition to President deValera does not enter into the picture. Mr. Fitzgerald is chosen because he is exceedingly well versed in scholastic philosophy, and because during the ten years he spent as minister of defense in Ireland, he applied the principles of St. Thomas to every government question that presented itself, and made a practice of having his findings checked by such men as Jacques Maritain and the Abbe Lallemant.

Coincidentally, a theorist of another school, a man who has recently presented a splendid historical picture of the development of money and credit, will be added to the departments of history and economics. He is Christopher Hollis, an Oxford graduate who has been given a leave of absence from Stonyhurst to teach at Notre Dame next year. The fact that his own economic theories are more in line with deValera's than with Fitzgerald's is beside the point. Like Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Hollis will teach from principles rather than You understand what from cases. this means. Eternal principles do not change. Our minor premise may be wrong, and we may derive a false conclusion from two correct premises. But we have not to go back so far to correct a mistake if the major premise itself is sound. In matters that are under dispute among the pundits, I do not consider that it is the function of a university to dogmatize regarding conclusions. If the university becomes a brain trust, it loses much of its effectiveness. If in its instruction in Engineering, for instance, it concerns itself largely with shop work, to the neglect of fundamentals, it turns out machinists instead of engineers. If on the other hand, it stresses fundamentals and uses shop work incidentally to illustrate principles, its graduates are not tied down to the mechanical processes of the moment, but can accommodate themselves to new conditions as these arise. Technical experts are often a drug on the market, but men with broad vision and the courage to back up their convictions are rare enough to be always in great demand.

Notre Dame has always stood for education in fundamentals, and we find as the days go on that we are less alone in the fight. More and more, people are coming to discover that specialization has been overdone in the universities, and there is an increasing demand for a return to fundamentals.

And speaking of fundamentals, it might be well at this time to remind the old-timers gathered here tonight that Notre Dame is still the same old school. Religion is still the heart of all its activities; character building still comes first. It is still true that the school prefers a thousand poor but respectable and respected alumni to one worldly success whose goal is hell. Make no mistake about it. If the name of Notre Dame is cherished by hundreds of thousands of people who have never seen this campus, if nuns and old ladies think it no sacrilege to pray for a touchdown, it is because the clean lives of Notre Dame men who have crossed their path have led them to believe that the men of Notre Dame are in the best sense of the word "Our Lady's Boys." Father Cavanaugh tells me that the number of Holy Čommunions this year was 317,222, a daily average of 1373, which representes an increase over last year of 59 a day, as compared with an increase of 92 in the student body. Daily Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament was extended this year to include the month of October. The other religious activities have gone on as usual, and I have every reason to believe that in time the present generation of students will lend luster to the name of Notre Dame as have their older brothers in the past. Yesterday morning, I received a beautiful note from a woman, an official of a national Catholic organization. She has made two fleeting visits to the campus, and what she saw caused her to pen these lines:

"The enclosed stipend is for a Mass to be said at your convenience for the following intention: That the efforts of the 1935 Class in promoting the cause of Catholicity in their respective spheres in life may meet with success to a remarkable degree for the honor and glory of God. May they be true exponents of their University, its steady progress to advance and its teachings and traditions to uphold."

This lady has phrased thus beautifully the blessing which Notre Dame wishes to bestow on the Class of 1935, and when I said Mass this morning, it was my intention to extend that blessing to all the alumni of Notre Dame.

Catholic Poetry Society

At the first meeting of the newly established Notre Dame branch of the Catholic Poetry Society of America, Sister M. Madeleva, C.S.C., president of St. Mary's College was elected president. The organization, which held its initial meeting in the lay faculty lounge on Wednesday evening, May 15, also elected Professor Norbert Engels of the English department as secretary.

Nineteen members attended the first meeting. Brief talks were given by the Rev. Patrick J. Carroll, C.S.C., the Rev. Leo Ward, C.S.C., the Rev. Eugene Burke, C.S.C., James Armstrong, Louis Hasley and Rufus Rauch. Sister Madeleva reviewed briefly the history of the Catholic Poetry Society of America. The organization will remain inactive during the summer months, but will resume its program in October.

ASSOCIATION BRINGS GREATEST YEAR TO CLOSE

Commencement and Reunions Mark Ending of Record-Breaking Year For the Alumni Association; President Galvin's Report Summarizes Major Activities of 1934-35

Membership: The Association now numbers 7,350 on its mailing list. The present class and the Summer School will make the list for the coming year approximately 8,000.

The ALUMNUS: The alumni magazine has enjoyed one of its best years.

With the assistance of the managing editor, William R. Dooley, more time has been allotted to its editing, and the cooperation of classes and clubs has been better than any previous year by a wide margin.

Three special editions have marked the year. Two of them were memorial editions for great Notre Dame alumni-last June for Father O'Donnell, this May for Father Cavanaugh. The third special edition was issued as an illustrated cross-section of Notre Dame life of today, to aid the alumni in their program of prospective student contacts. Prepared and produced at a cost approximately one-fourth that of similar prospectuses of other colleges, the Notre Dame ALUMNUS for February was awarded a special blue ribbon at the April convention of the American Alumni Council for its distinctive and effective presentation of Notre Dame to Notre Dame men.

The Directory: After much consideration and with much modification, the Alumni Directory was issued this year. It has definitely and materially aided the Club organizations, the student contact program, and alumni exchange of contacts generally. The cost demanded that only one classification be published this year. Therefore the geographical list, corresponding to the present mailing list of the alumni magazine, was determined to be the most practical.

Universal Notre Dame Night: Alumni must generally agree that the Twelfth Annual Universal Notre Dame Night exceeded any similar occasion. It is difficult to express the margin of difference as returns continue to come into the Alumni Office.

The national broadcast, made possible by the Studebaker Corporation, keyed the Night for alumni everywhere. The cooperation of the University and the several alumni who contributed to the hook-up, Father O'Hara, Frank Walker, Eddie Dowling, Elmer Layden, and Joseph Casasanta and his Glee Club, resulted in the first coast-to-coast program for alumni listeners.

Supplementing this was the remarkable series of programs on local stations, made possible by the voluntary cooperation of 132 of these units, ranging from powerful and farreaching stations to more modest and isolated agents. Rome, Mexico and Havana stations made this cooperation definitely a universal feature. It was in these programs, largely supplied by alumni in the several communities and by special literature and music sent out from the Alumni Office, that the greatest concentration of Notre Dame information for public consumption ever attempted was achieved. As nearly as returns can be estimated, 25 hours or more of time was contributed by these stations to the Notre Dame observance. Returns of a most enthusiastic type came from such scattered spots as Connecticut, Oregon, Arizona and Florida.

Through the activities of an alumnus, William Castellini, the Philco radio corporation offered the services of radios for the occasion to all Notre Dame groups desiring their use.

Local Alumni Clubs: The Notre Dame club has definitely arrived as an institution and is not stopping on its arrival. Two new clubs were organized in 1933-34. This year, 1934-35, six new organizations have been launched with an atmosphere of permanence in each. This makes a total of 79 clubs. Two neighboring areas-Berrien County, Michigan, and Eastern Indiana-are now units. Jackson, Michigan, and the Saginaw Valley, another Michigan area, were organized. And the Gogebic Range in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, together with the far distant Phoenix, Arizona, alumni, make up the new members of the Local Club Council. All of these organizations made their work felt in their first year of existence. At least two more groups are ready to organize in the Fall.

The Alumni Office, by soliciting the aid of the University and Athletic Association personnel, was able to have visits from the campus direct to 30 Local Clubs.

Achievements of the Clubs once more defy adequate summary. But the New York Club's dinner to Father Nieuwland, the Gogebic Range dinner for Elmer Layden and Joe Boland last summer, the St. Joe Valley Club's annual football banquet featuring Will Rogers, the Waterbury, Connecticut, broadcast of one hour on U.N.D. Night, the Chicago Club's dinner for Shane Leslie, and the Los Angeles Club's luncheon for Father O'Donnell and Frank Spearman, following the Laetare Medal Presentation in May, typify the high caliber and the nation-wide character of alumni activity.

The printed prospectus for the year issued by the Notre Dame Club of Chicago, amplifying the same idea inaugurated by the Notre Dame Club of Cleveland in recent years, sets a new stamp of comprehensiveness and achievement on the Clubs.

The Notre Dame speakers committee in the Connecticut Valley scores a new point that is most hopeful. The Lay Retreat at Notre Dame has already aroused specific action for cooperation in three neighboring clubs with the prospect of many more in the Middle West joining this great annual Notre Dame pilgrimage, as Club units.

Districts: The Districts were organized to stimulate the clubs within them, for one thing, but strangely the sudden club activity has not eliminated the District set-up, but instead has resulted in a growing activity and assistance from the District Governor both for club and association ends. In the program of student contacts the Districts are, and will continue, to be of very definite aid supplementing whatever club activity in this field the District may enjoy.

Prospective Student Program: The work of the Association, through the Alumni Office and the alumni in contacting prospective students is difficult to evaluate. But the present school-year saw an increase in enrollment, most noticeable in the 20% jump in freshmen. At the present time, freshmen registration for next year is 10% ahead of last year at this date.

The Alumni Office staff and members of the University and the Athletic Association were enlisted in school visits and personal interviews during the year.

One of the outstanding benefits, from the Association's angle, is the current interest of alumni in the progress and present academic advantages at Notre Dame.

The Alumni Office has edited special literature for prospective students during the year, including the illustrated prospectus, occasional news bulletins, and several departmental booklets.

The Office is supervising a continuation in modified form of the guide service that acquainted so many persons with the campus during the last two summers. Affiliations: The Alumni Secretary attended the national conventions of both the American Alumni Council, in Washington, and the National Catholic Alumni Federation, in Chicago, participating in the Washington program and planning the program in Chicago.

Both the Notre Dame Club of the District of Columbia and the Notre Dame Club of Chicago were most efficient and cooperative in identifying the Notre Dame interest in these conventions.

Finances: The red blood of our program seems to have gotten into our inkwells.

The Association is the possessor of a deficit of some $15,000, which rests on the books of the University. This has accumulated through the years of the depression, particularly the last two, and represents almost exclusively the printing and distribution of the Notre Dame ALUMNUS.

This year has shown, in spite of the deficit, a trend toward recovery.

There has been a 20% increase in the payment of dues. The total number paying is still hopelessly small to achieve independence, but the increase is promising.

Living Endowment, which has been more or less in the Association's incubator since its birth, shows signs of health. Here again the amounts are negligible, but there was almost a 70% increase in the number of givers this year over last, and the amount given was more than doubled.

Conclusion: In every direction that an annual report of the president should look, alumni achievement looms in new and larger measure.

As always, it is no one man's work. But with this personal service here, that personal honor there, this club activity the other place, and the University constantly serving as a brilliant example and stimulus, the accumulated effect of the Association is making an impression nationally that our numbers scarcely explain. As a great alumnus said, "When the going gets tough, that's when we fight."

Thompsoniana at N. D.

Seymour Adelman, noted collector, brought his Francis Thompson collection to Notre Dame for a week beginning May 6. This collection is rated second only to the famous Meynell collection of the works of Thompson. The exhibit here was visited by hundreds of persons, including the Notre Dame and St. Mary's students and students from Chicago. It was the first exhibit of the collection in the Middle West. Shane Leslie delivered a lecture on the work of Thompson during the week of the exhibit.

The collection numbers 25 single manuscripts and 20 letters. It is valued, as nearly as any standard permits, at $100,000.

SECOND AERONAUTICAL CONFERENCE HELD

Colonel Eddie Rickenbacker and Major Alford "Al" Williams were the principal speakers at the University's second aeronautics conference held in Washington Hall, Wednesday afternoon, May 15, before more than 600 students and a score of leaders in the American aviation industry.

The Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., president of the University, opened the conference by outlining the aims of the course in aeronautics in the College of Engineering and the course in airport management in the College of Commerce. Father O'Hara warned the nation to keep ahead of the rest of the world in aviation for commercial and defensive purposes.

Col. Rickenbacker, America's greatest war-time flier and vice- president and general manager of Eastern Air Lines, told of the immense strides made by the fledgling industry and prophesied greater achievements to come. In referring to airmail contract cancellations, he told of the obstacle that politicians have placed in the way of the industry.

In speaking of the need of young men, he said: "There has never been a time in history when opportunities for young men were so great as they are today."

Campus Editors

Editors for 1936 of the Scholastic and Dome, Notre Dame publications, were announced at a dinner of staff members of all Notre Dame magazines held Monday night May 13 in the lay faculty dining room.

Ninety guests attended the annual dinner at which Shane Leslie gave the principal address. The Rev. Lawrence Broughal, C.S.C., chairman of the board of publications announced John J. Moran, of New York City, as editor of Scholastic and Delancey J. Davis, of Schenectady, N.Y., as editor of Dome, the year book.

The two $25 prizes for excellence in writing offered by Scrip, the literary magazine, went to Henry J. Cozad for his poem, "Johnson's Hill," and in prose the award was split between William A. Kennedy, for his "Late Bus" and Maurice F. Tombragel for "Gallery Afternoon." The editor of Scrip will be announced at a later date.

Speakers at the banquet were the Rev. Patrick J. Carroll, C.S.C., editor of The Ave Maria, the Rev. Eugene Burke, C.S.C., director of radio at Notre Dame, the Rev. James McDonald, C.S.C., and the Rev. Leo Ward, C.S.C., members of the board of publications. Colonel Rickenbacker predicted that adequate aeronautic development will prevent future wars, that in three years the Atlantic will be spanned by regular air service, and that scheduled air transports will fly the Pacific within a year.

Major Al Williams, one-time star pitcher for the New York Giants, crack pilot in both the United States navy and Marine corps, one-time world airplane speed record holder, and now head of the aviation division of the Gulf Refining company, praised the University's planned aeronautics course. He said the industry was crying for trained men.

Inclement weather in the East, making it impossible for him to fly his Curtiss Hawk biplane here, caused the postponement of his originally scheduled aerobatic exhibition over the campus. He then showed several reels of motion pictures illustrating some of his famous aerial tricks.

An informal conference at luncheon in the faculty dining hall preceded the formal meeting in Washington Hall. Nothing developed which would materially change the air course that will be added to the curriculum next fall.

John D. Carbine, retiring editor of Scholastic, acted as toastmaster.

Short talks were given by John W. Walker, retiring editor of Dome and James Byrne, retiring editor of Scrip.

Dr. Maher Scores

Dr. Stephen Maher, brilliant Connecticut scientist, who was awarded the Laetare Medal in 1932, startled the scientific world and raised the hopes of millions recently with the announcement that he had discovered a cure for asthma, 90 per cent effective. Despite his 75 years, Dr. Maher continues to be one of the greatest of the physicians and scientists of the day, being outstanding for his work in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

N. D. in Jersey City

A note from the Jersey City Junior C. of C., reveals the impressive fact that the president, both vice-presidents, and the treasurer are N. D. men-John Driscoll, '32, Jim Clark, '33, Bill Sheridan, '34, George Wenz, '34. Jim Meehan, '32, Bill Hawks, '33, and Murry Booth, '33, complete the roster of N. # SUGGESTIONS FOR GOOD FAMILY READING

THE FORTY DAYS OF MUSA DAGH. By Franz Werfel. Translated by Geoffrey Dunlap. The Viking Press. $3.00.

This gripping novel, based on an historical episode, is an epic of racial persecution. Visiting his birthplace in Syria, Gabriel Bagradian, a wealthy Armenian with his French wife, Juliette, and Stephen, their fourteen-year old son, is deprived of his passport back to France and settles down with his family in the ancestral villa below Musa Dagh, the mountain of Moses. Here they are trapped. The World War comes on, and the Turkish government determines upon the annihilation of its Armenian subjects, superior to the Turk, their master, in culture and commercial genius.

Without warning, some five thousand Armenian inhabitants of seven peaceful villages in Northern Syria receive orders to leave their homes taking with them only what can be carried on their backs. Before them lies a death-dealing trek of a thousand miles eastward through the desert to Derez-zor.

The scholarly idealistic Gabriel Bagradian, educated at the Sorbonne, finds himself turning completely Armenian, as he witnesses the oppression of his countrymen. He binds himself to accept his people's fate. Now an officer in a reserve regiment and possessor of twenty-three years of European experience, he accepts the leadership of his persecuted brethren. He urges them not to submit to Turkish cruelty. They vote to defend even to death, their Christian faith (Orthodox), as well as their lives and property.

Musa Dagh nearby is a natural fortress. Gabriel Bagradian maps it out and mobilizes the villagers. Turkish officers arrive to enforce a decree only to find the villages empty and Musa Dagh, a fortified refuge. Huts have been built, a military government organized, men and older boys armed and entrenched on the summit of Musa Dagh. Here with supreme effort amid unspeakable sufferings, the courageous, poorly-equipped Armenians defy and humiliate their Turkish oppressors. After forty days of desperate fighting the Armenians are rescued by a French battleship.

Several underplots add to the interest: the moral weaknesses of Gabriel and Juliette; the heroism of the son, Stephen; the intercession of the German missionary, Dr. Lepsius; the insurrection just as the French ship arrives.

Franz Werfel, the author is a Jew, recently converted to the Roman Catholic Faith. His work, so just in its interpretation, is barely tolerated by the German government.

SAGA OF THE SAINTS — Sigrid Undset. New York. Longman's, Green and Company, 1934. $2.50.

The modern hagiographer has succeeded in arousing in his readers an intense interest in the human side of the many lovable men and women who have been canonized as a result of their holiness. In her Saga of the Saints, Sigrid Undset, the Norwegian writer whose conversion to the Catholic faith is still fresh in our memory, tells us with beauty and power of the way in which Norway was Christianized. We read eagerly of the great King Olav Haraldsson who "by his life, his kingship, and his death gave the Faith to Norway"; of St. Sunniva, the beautiful Irish queen at whose shrine in Nidaros today miracles are still being performed; of St. Magnus to whom Aberdeen does honor.

And in bringing her Saga up to a later date, the autor recounts the deeds of the holy Barnabite priest, Father Karl Schilling, whose death occurred in 1907. It is in him that the Catholics of Norway are placing their hope.

For those who love courage in holiness and true courtesy, this volume of Sigrid Undset's will bring much delight.

THOMAS MORE—Christopher Hollis. Bruce Publishing Company, Milwaukee, 1934. $2.25.

The fact that the whole Catholic world is looking forward this year to the canonization of this "merry man and saint" ought to interest all of us in Christopher Hollis' New Life of Thomas More. Mr. Hollis lets us see Blessed More as 'a wise and kindly father, a saintly, but never solemn, Christian, a trustworthy statesman, a loyal friend, and, above all, a man of courage whose high sense of right and justice eventually led him to die a martyr's death on the executioner's block."

Mr. Hollis will teach at Notre Dame during the coming year.

THE LAYMAN'S NEW TESTA-MENT — Edited with notes by Fr. Hugh Pope, O.P. Sheed and Ward. N. Y. 1934. $1.50.

This work comes as an answer to the ever growing demand for an explanatory edition of the New Testament. With the student and with the ordinary reader, it proffers to be an established favorite because of its completeness and compactness.

The notes, the all important feature of the book and constituting fully half the volume are allotted the right-hand pages throughout. They are numbered, paragraphed and so arranged as to help interested layfolk to read the New Testament intelligently; as well as to enlighten and guide those who are better equipped. Enough theological teaching is brought to point that the average reader may find the notes sufficient.

The text of the New Testament given on the left-hand pages, and opposite the notes, is presented in an unusual form and a convenient one, as regards paragraphs, while the numbering of the verses is retained. These paragraphs represent sections, as in the case of the gospel narratives, or steps in argument, as in the instance of the epistles. Briefly annotated in the outside margin of the page are the contents of these sections, together with some cross references.

A key to the storehouse of notes is supplied in nearly fifty pages of index, somewhat akin to a miniature concordance. There is offered a comparative outline scheme indicating what matter is treated by each evangelist, their agreement in the main, and their marked peculiarities. Prefacing the several books are short introductions, giving an account of the author, the historical setting and the scope of the writing. Two simple outline maps are provided, one of Palestine supplementing the Gospels; and another of Asia as an auxiliary to the Acts.

(Ed. Note: Alumni who do not have the catalog of the publications of the Ave Maria Press are missing some splendid things for themselves, their friends, and their families. Particularly good are the books and pamphlets for children. Through it all runs the strong, rich Notre Dame spirit of its origin.)

ANNOUNCE LAYMEN'S RETREAT, AUGUST 1-4

Clubs and Individual Notre Dame Men Responding to Seventeeth Annual Campus Retreat; Chicago Club Has Special Committee, As Have Several Neighboring Clubs

Early returns from the announcement of the 17th Annual Laymen's Retreat at Notre Dame, beginning Thursday evening, August 1, and ending with the famous Retreat Breakparticipation has been outrunning alumni.

The suggestion that the problem be approached on a specific alumni basis met with the immediate response above. sees in attendance an ever increasing number of serious, sincere men who are as busy as you are and who perhaps, have just as many responsibilities and temptations. From every walk of life, they come and from fast on Sunday morning, August 4, point to an important new element participation by Notre Dame alumni.

The action of the Notre Dame Club of Chicago in appointing a Lay Retreat Committee to cooperate with the campus institution met enthusiastic reception, within the club and from outside.

The Notre Dame Club of the St. Joseph Valley is appointing a committee and the Notre Dame Club of Berrien County has decided to take similar action. Undoubtedly, the other nearby clubs will follow suit.

This alumni activity is supplementary to the great work that has been accomplished in the Middle West during the 16 years that the Retreat has existed. Veterans of the annual visit to the campus include both alumni and non-alumni. This past year or so, the Holy Cross Mission fathers, whose home is the cradle of the University, and who conduct the Retreat, have felt that non-alumni enthusiasm and The literature of the Retreat contains several very interesting paragraphs:

"For the past 17 years we have been conducting retreats at the University of Notre Dame for the benefit of Catholic Laymen. Each year many distant cities — physicians, judges, lawyers, heads of important industries, workers from every craft.

"Many of these men have not missed a single retreat in all this time. Yet with each succeeding year they find new strength and greater spiritual happiness from the prayerful, restful quiet of these week-ends spent for God."

In addition to the spiritual benefits and the physical relaxation that come to the non-alumni, alumni have all the added incentive of a return to the familiar campus, and the renewal of the spiritual life that they enjoyed as students. They see again many of the spiritual councillors whose early guidance probably formed a lasting influence, and who have much more than the usual missioner's power in renewing these counsels of faith.

Small wonder that the 17th Annual Retreat is anticipating a large alumni attendance.

For the three days room and meals, a collection is taken up Sunday at which the retreatant is asked, if he can afford it, to contribute the cost minimum of ten dollars.

CEREMONIES MARK PRESENTATION OF 1935 LAETARE MEDAL

Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., '16, Awards Medal to Frank H. Spearman in Blessed Sacrament Auditorium, Hollywood; Bishop Cantwell, Joseph Scott Participate

In the brief but beautiful ceremonies of presentation, Frank Hamilton Spearman, Laetare Medalist for 1935, received the coveted award of the University from the hands of Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, D. D., with the vice-president of the University, Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., and an audience of 900 friends of Mr: Spearman and the University looking on.

The ceremonies took. place in the auditorium of the school of the Blessed Sacrament parish in Hollywood, where Dr. Spearman (LL.D.'17) is a parishioner, on May 26.

Among the guests were Very Rev. Zacheus Maher, S.J., provincial of the Society of Jesus; Rev. Hugh Duce, S.J., president of Loyola of Los Angeles; Rev. Cornelius McCoy, rector of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, and Rev. Edward J. Whelan, S.J., president of Loyola High School.

Joseph Scott, LL.D.'15, delivered the principal address, characterizing the Laetare Medal as a wise anticipation of the present Catholic Action.

The University's citation, addressed to Dr. Spearman by Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, follows:

In the year of Our Lord eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the Very Reverend Edward Sorin, priest of the Congregation of Holy Cross, founder and first president of the University of Notre Dame, established the Laetare Medal as an award made annually to some American lay Catholic who in his particular field of endeavor had achieved such distinction as reflects glory upon the Catholic Faith. The list of men and women so honored in these past fifty years amply illustrates the inspiration which that Faith has brought into all departments of thought and of human life, - into philosophy and literature, the arts and the sciences, into the learned professions and into public service, whether in time of peace or in time of war.

Sir, in this year of Our Lord 1935 the University of Notre Dame bestows the Laetare Medal upon you. The Medal is an award and a trust: an award for devotion to Faith, to Truth, to Service, to Beauty; a trust, confident and abiding, that you, who for so long have put your hands to the plow, will not turn back until you have finished the furrow.

It puts no tax upon imagination to picture you, Frank H. Spearman, as one of the many in the field of fiction whose chief distinction would be mass sales and popular acclaim. To achieve these things was easily within your competence. Others less gifted have achieved them. But being the essence that you are, you would not be an essence less noble. You set yourself to express art within the covers of books; to delight and to enlarge people spiritually; and no temptation to mere worldly success has turned you from that pursuit. You have sent to us from your commerce in ideals brave men and beautiful women, fashioned out of the substance of your thoughts. You could have traded otherwise, dealing in less worthy values with an eye to the fictional market. You did not do so, because you could not. You would not have more, if you yourself could not be more. You lost the life to save it. What doth it profit a man to gain the world and lose his soul?

You seem to us a man who sought to influence the masses wholesomely rather than to capture mass acclaim; to resist the shapeless, hopeless, ungoverned fictional writing of our period rather than be swept out on its turgid stream. You have traded only in the truth that makes free, the love that makes holy. We see you, then, one of a select company, calm and apart in the undisturbed possession of the dreams of your own mind. The people of your books are the children of your thinking. And it must be a comforting memory for you, as it is an inspiring reflection for us, that you need never be ashamed of your spiritual offspring.

The University of Notre Dame has penetrated your solitude to recognize your service. The wholesome men and women whom you have created pleaded your worthiness with even more eloquence than your thousands of friends, clerical and lay. Whispering Smith, Don Juan of Austria—so far apart in time, place, race, and circumstance of life—pleaded for you. They are here now. And all your mind's children are here, as we are, —to honor you.

Sir, in a simple ritual which reaches into a far tradition. you are to be admitted into the Honor Roll of Laetare Medalists. There are high, shining names of great men, great women in this litany of renown: John Gilmary Shea, pioneering Catholic historian; Daniel Dougherty and William Bourke Cochran and Joseph Scott, resounding orators; John B. Murphy, world famous surgeon; Mary V. Herrick, to whom the plaint of a child was the cry of the Christ Child;Alfred Emmanuel Smith, valiant Happy Warrior whose mounting courage makes us joyous and proud forever; John McCormack whose golden voice has touched the hearts of the American people; and many, many more.

Into this company the University of Notre Dame now invites you, Frank H. Spearman. She is proud and glad to invite you. Proud because she knows, as you know, that merit alone has determined her choice; glad because with her steady vision she has seen you in your solitude, not as one clothed in soft garments, but as an announcer of the ancient realities of faith, love, home and family life.

And so, Frank H. Spearman, the University of Notre Dame bestows her Laetare Medal upon you. She knows that in you she has again found one who expresses the reality of what the Laetare Medal is, a recognition and a symbol. And she prays you, Sir, to keep it always among your best loved treasures in a shrine apart.

Dr. Spearman gave a short, brilliant address of acceptance.

Acceptance of the Laetare Medal

I am called to receive at the hands of a great cultural institution a symbol which necessarily imposes on its recipient a sense of the honor and the dignity for which the University of Notre Dame has so long been revered.

I count it as one of the rare privileges of my life to have made, many years ago, the acquaintance of Notre Dame. Far from being strangers to each other, we have cherished a friendship long mellowed by the tender hand of time, and never at any moment strained.

My first contribution to a Catholic periodical was sent to Father Daniel Hudson who for fifty years guided the destinies of the Ave Maria magazine and who used his great power to encourage and develop the struggling Catholic writer of his day. It was through him that a second precious friendship was formed by me with a young president of Notre Dame—Father John Cavanaugh, who, building on the sure foundations of his saintly predecessors, gave us, more than any other one man, our far-famed Notre Dame of today.

This is not the moment to dwell at length on the signal success wonamid so many difficulties—by the devoted faculties and teachers who have made the Notre Dame that we know. But the fondest boast of its alumni may well be that this outstanding position in American education has been achieved without surrendering one jot or tittle to the false educational creeds that threaten, now so menacingly, the reputation of too many of our more pretentious institutions of learning.

Sturdy as an oak, while American education through the years has been tempest-tossed, Notre Dame has turned out and continues to turn out sterling young American citizens, untainted by false moral standards and untouched by the destructive theories of Marx and Engel.

I accept, therefore, this dear and high honor with mingled feelings; first, one of gratitude to this great school which, overlooking my own deficiencies, has so generously summoned me to be numbered among its distinguished medalists; and next, with a feeling of the responsibility which its acceptance must entail on a recipient. For fifty years Laetare medalists have borne high the spirit and the honor of their Alma Mater, the University of Notre Dame. This medal of Laetare Sunday is

This medal of Laetare Sunday is the symbol of an honor roll which up to this hour stands without a single defection from the highest and best. To this the records of Notre Dame will attest. And it is conferred, I am reminded, not alone as a mark of reward for what has been accomplished in life: but also as an incentive to higher achievement. Thus in awarding it, this great institution inevitably makes itself sponsor for the future recipient and this in turn calls for the highest effort on my part to carry without blemish the symbol of my Alma Mater.

To this purpose I therefore pledge myself tonight: That I may do nothing by spoken or written word to dim the lustre of this prized token.

And may I not beg from your Excellency; from you, dear Father O'Donnell, and from my benefactors of Notre Dame, a prayer, that in so high and serious an endeavor I may not fail.

Frank H. Spearman.

The following day, May 27, the Notre Dame Club of Los Angeles tendered a luncheon to the Medalist and to Father O'Donnell in the University Club. Dr. Spearman, Father O'Donnell and Joseph Scott were again the speakers, with President Thomas Hearn presiding.

Dooley Ill

Not the least of Commencement's complications was an attack of the mumps suffered by William R. Dooley, '26, managing editor of the ALUMNUS, on Sunday, June 2, which still has him confined but convalescent.

SUMMER SCHOOL OPENING, TUESDAY, JUNE 18

The 17th summer session of the University will open on Tuesday, June 18. Graduate and undergraduate work is offered by all the departments in the College of Arts and Letters and by all departments in the College of Science. A few courses will be offered by the Colleges of Law, Engineering and Commerce, of interest to students in Arts and Letters and Science, who may take any of these courses as elective for credit toward the Arts or Science degrees.

The summer session is designed to interest, primarily, teachers in private or public schools, persons holding the bachelor's degree who wish to secure

'31 Ordinations June 24

The Notre Dame campus on June 24 will be the site of the annual ordination of the new priests of the Congregation of Holy Cross.

All of the men this year are of the A.B.s. of '31: Richard Patrick, Charles Carey, Thomas Jones, John Dupuis, Joseph Houser, Edward Shea, Philip Schaerf, George Szymanowski, John O'Neil, Aloysius Dayberry, Lawrence Bauer, Claude Boehm, Alfred Mendez, Patrick Duffy, Francis Sullivan, Thomas Culhane, Clement Kane, Thomas Fitzpatrick and Francis Weber.

Breen Medal Awarded

The famous Breen Medal in oratory was awarded this year to Robert J. Schmelzle, Freeport, Ill., for his oration, "My Brother's Keeper." Seven contestants entered the finals in Washington Hall on the night of May 20. Tied for second were John Logan of Fort Wayne, and William Fiewager of Menasha, Wis. Other contestants were Richard White of South Bend, Thomas J. Schiefer of Fort Wayne, Emil J. Peter of Louisville, and Edward L. Boyle of Duluth.

The medal, presented by the late William P. Breen, '77, of Ft. Wayne, has served for years as the key to the stimulation of student oratory, a field in which Mr. Breen himself excelled.

Bishop Noll Honored

Most Rev. John F. Noll, D.D., LL.D., '15, Bishop of Fort Wayne, was honored on the tenth anniversary of his elevation to the episcopacy by the first deanery Eucharistic celebration in the Notre Dame Stadium on Sunday, May 26.

All of the parishes, the University Band, the St. Mary's student body, and the C. Y. O., were among the participants. Bishop Noll officiated at Benediction and afterward gave a sermon. an advanced degree, and undergraduates with academic deficiencies.

Tuition for the summer session is thirty dollars. Board and room are twelve dollars a week.

The ALUMNUS can not refrain from the suggestion that this six weeks, for the cost of it, offers an alumnus who has the time and $100, the finest moral, mental and physical vacation, within anything like the price range, in the United States. Lake for swimming, tennis courts, golf course, comfortable rooms, good meals... even if you didn't pass the course . . . the spiritual and intellectual stimulus of it!

Bidwill in Controversy

Arthur J. Bidwill, '26, elected last November to the Illinois senate, was ousted recently by a vote of that body which has stirred the voters of Illinois, particularly in Bidwill's district. Bidwill, a Republican, was seated after a contest which resulted in a recount, and the unseating came as a surprise. The controversy is still raging, as this note is written.

BRILLIANT SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY IN NOTRE DAME LABORATORY

Lay Faculty Award Climaxes Recent Announcements of Discoveries Which May Hasten Cure of Infantile Paralysis, Colds and Influenza

Prof. James Arthur Reyniers, B.S., '30, M.S., '31, assistant professor of biology in the College of Science of the University, winner of the Alumni Association's annual $500 lay faculty award at the recent commencement, has won nation-wide attention.

An important biological experiment, which has puzzled scientists for more than 50 years and may lead eventually to the isolation of the germs which cause colds, influenza and infantile paralysis, has been successfully completed at Notre Dame.

After six years of constant laboratory work, Prof. Reyniers has succeeded in obtaining absolutely germ free guinea pigs and in raising them without contamination by germ-life of any kind.

The importance of this work lies in the fact that it permits a study of any single germ on a living organism, until now considered impossible. Most scientists hitherto have contended that life in an animal body was impossible without bacteria.

Moreover, it was this presence of many forms of germ life which has interfered seriously with the isolation in the past of the germs which cause many of the most current human ailments and, consequently, no serums or other effective preventives have yet been developed.

Prof. Reynier's "living test tubes," as he refers to the animals, are born and raised under the most ideal conditions which science can devise. The guinea pigs are delivered in a germ free operating chamber, by caesarian operation, to a void contamination from the mother, and raised in a completely air-conditioned chamber without ever coming in contact with the outside world.

They feed themselves from a "glass mother," imbibing a synthetic guinea pig milk prepared by Prof. Reyniers. The solid food they are permitted after the first few days is sterilized in an antechamber of their utopian home before it is placed in the pens.

The compartment in which the pigs live, and all the attendant apparatus, including the air-conditioning equipment, have been made in the University laboratories under Prof. Reyniers' supervision.

The guinea pig estate occupies an area of 64 square feet and contains model living quarters for eight of the rodents. The compartment in which they live resembles a square diving bell, four feet high, with portholes in each side to permit inspection of the germ free inhabitants.

In addition, there are two ports, containing sterilized rubber gloves, through which Prof. Reyniers can insert his hands to care for his charges clean the cages, fill the milk and water bottles, and examine the pigs periodically for any sign of contamination.

From each litter raised in this manner, he has saved one or two offspring to develop as normal controls. Constant comparisons show that the germ free animals are more active and develop much heartier appetites than their contaminated brothers and sisters.

Attempts to develop a "living germ free test tube" have been made since Pasteur first suggested the experiment in 1880. Since then reports on the subject have been submitted by Kuster, Cohendy, Thierfelder, Glimstedt, and Prof. Reyniers in 1931.

With the development of this new technique, it is felt that it becomes possible for scientists to begin work in research fields which were once considered impossible of access.

Twenty-six years old, Prof. Reyniers was born in Mishawaka, Indiana. He is a rather high-strung type, completely immersed in his scientific work. When an important experiment is in progress, he will frequently spend almost the entire night in the laboratory, watching developments and fearful lest something go wrong if he should leave.

This habit caused a mild scare and a subsequent laugh on the campus several years ago. A new watchman saw the shadow of a man moving about in the laboratory, called local police and raided the science building. Dr. Francis J. Wenninger, C.S.C., dean of the College of Science, was roused at 2 a.m. to identify his assistant.

His hobby is the drawing and making of archery tackle. He was an excellent marksman during his undergraduate days but is now mainly interested in technical angles of the sport.

NEW STUDENT'S INFIRMARY BUILDING CONSTRUCTION STARTED

Building Marks Inauguration of Development of Campus North of Main Building; Thomas Hickey, N. D. Contractor, Has Job; Building Harmonizes With New Architecture.

Continuing its program for construction of new buildings to stimulate a return to normal business conditions, the University of Notre Dame will erect a new Students' Infirmary this summer at a cost of $250,000.

Work on the new building, which will be situated between the Administration Building and the shores of St. Joseph Lake, was started May 27. It is also hoped that construction of the Rockne Memorial Fieldhouse can begin before the opening of classes next September.

The Infirmary will be of Collegiate Gothic design to harmonize with the residence halls and class buildings which have been erected during the past decade. There will be living accommodations for 125 persons with guest rooms for parents and other visitors to the campus. Location of the Infirmary marks another step in the expansion of Notre Dame. It will be the first building on the site of a new quadrangle facing St. Joseph Lake, and takes advantage of one of the most beautiful scenic attractions of the university.

Plans were drawn by Maginnis and Walsh, architects of Boston, Mass., and the Thomas L. Hickey Co., of South Bend, Ind., are the general contractors.

ROCKNE PAINTING AT NOTRE DAME

After traveling from New York City to Princeton University, and back to New York City again, the original painting of a cover used on Street and Smith Publications Sport Story Magazine memorial edition to Knute Rockne has come into the possession of the University of Notre Dame through the efforts of John L. Nanovic, '30, and Maurice T. Andrews, '17, whose N.D. novel it illustrated.

The painting will be temporarily on display in the Alumni Office until a permanent place is found for it.

In the painting the artist, Joseph Farrelly, uses a ring of deep blue to frame the characteristic Rockne quizzical squint as the "Old Master" peers down from a sky blue background upon a fine bit of football action showing two blue-jerseyed players bringing down a green-shirted ball carrier whose three man interference has been spilled on the turf by a third "blue" player. The realistic action of the football group and the fine detail of the Rockne head are the outstanding features of the painting. A copper plate on the brown frame bears the following inscription: "In Memory of Knute Rockne. Street & Smith Publications, Inc."

This same Rockne memorial edition of the Sport Story Magazine featured "The Juggler of Notre Dame," a story centering about Rockne, written by Maurice T. Andrews, a Notre Dame man.

John L. Nanovic, editor of the Juggler in 1930, and now on the editorial staff of the Street & Smith Publications, was formerly editor of the Sports Story Magazine but now has charge of The Shadow Magazine, Doc Savage Magazine, Nick Carter Magazine, and Pete Rice Magazine. Along with his brother Albert, '27, John was present at the commencement exercises this year to see his "kid" brother, Joseph graduated and to attend the dix reunion of the Class of 1930. # ATHLETIC TEAMS HAVE .667 AVERAGE '34-'35

Coming down the commencement week stretch in a blaze of glory, Notre Dame's athletic teams finished the scholastic year with a .667 percentage, having won exactly two-thirds of their dual contests in 1934-35.

The track team added another state championship, its first since 1931, to its long list. The golf team won its fifth Indiana team championship in six years, while Winfield Day, Jr., was giving Notre Dame it's sixth individual title in as many seasons. The tennis team had won the state doubles championship the week before, with Joe Prendergast entering the semifinals in the singles. These accomplishments, of course, do not count in the dual-match percentages.

The baseball team concluded its season in true commencement game style, with Andy Pilney playing the Frank Merriwell role. Pilney scored the first run for Notre Dame to tie the score against Michigan State. Then, in the 10th inning, he broke the deadlock when he slammed out a hit with three mates aboard to give the Irish a 2 to 1 victory. He also enabled Joe Beach, New Orleans southpaw, to finish his season undefeated, with four victories beside his name in the record book.

Since this is a summary, we offer herewith the standings of the various teams for the past year:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Fencing	. 7	0	1.000
Golf	. 9	1	.900
Track	. 8	1	.889
Football	. 6	3	.667
Baseball	.11	7	.611
Basketball	.13	9	.591

National Catholic Track Meet

With the entry list increased by two teams to 26 and by 53 individuals to 258, the second annual Notre Dame National Interscholastic track and field championships, held Commencement week-end, were an even greater success than the inaugural meet last year.

West Catholic, Philadelphia, scored in every event but one to retain its team championship with a new record total of 54 5/6 points. The standings of the 20 teach which scored were: West Catholic, Philadelphia 54 5/6 St. Ignatius, Chicago 25Northeast, Philadelphia 17 1/12

Aquinas, Lacrosse, Wis.	11
De LaSalle, Chicago	11
DePaul, Chicago	9
St. Ambrose, Davenport, Ia.	8 1/3
Cathedral Latin, Cleveland	8
Roger Bacon, Cincinnati	7
Good Counsel, Newark, N. J.	7
Marmion, Aurora, Ill.	5 1/3
St. George, Evanston, Ill.	5 1/3
Leo, Chicago	4 3/4
LaSalle, Cumberland, Md.	3
Quincy, Ill., College Academy	3
Pio Nono, Milwaukee	2
St. Mary's Columbus, Ohio	2
Mount Carmel, Chicago	11/3
St. Patrick's, Iowa City, Ia.	1
St. Rita, Chicago, Chicago	1

Eight new records were established, two of them automatically, and one was tied in the 1935 meet. The 200yard low hurdles replaced the 220yard lows, and the 120-yard intermediate hurdles replaced the 120yard highs, so the winners in these events were automatically credited with new records. Following are the marks established:

- 100-yard dash-10.1 seconds, Maher, West Catholic
- 120-yard intermediate hurdles-15.3 seconds, Van de Motter, Cathedral Latin
- 220-yard dash—22.2 seconds, Kahsar, Roger Bacon
- 200-yard low hurdles-23.2 seconds, Dunne, St. George

440-yard dash-50.3 seconds, Doorey, West Catholic

880-yard run-2 minutes .6 seconds, Reeves, West Catholic

880-yard relay-1 minute 32.7 seconds, Good Counsel (Ellmer, Flynn, Hughes, Thornton)

Shot Put-49 feet 81/2 inches, Palmer, Northeast Catholic

Four contestants tied the old record of 11 feet in the pole vault.

Form Monogram Association

At a meeting of more than 200 former Notre Dame athletes in the west dining hall of the college refectory Sunday afternoon, June 2, a permanent organization known as the National Association of Notre Dame Men was formed.

Edward J. Meehan, '20, former miler, was elected president. Mr. Meehan is national advertising manager of The Tribune. Howard (Cap) Edwards, football 1909, was elected vice president, and John Montague, Chicago, track 1923, was named secretary treasurer.

A board of directors also was chosen by the ex-Irish athletes. Those elected to places on the board are: Charles Collins, Oak Park, Ill., '25 football; Rev. M. L. Moriarty, Cleveland, Ohio, track '10; Al. G. Feeney, Indianapolis, football '14; L. M. Mc-Nerney, Elgin, Ill., baseball '06; Sam (Rosy) Dolan, North Bend, Ore., baseball '10; Forrest Fletcher, Lexington, Va., track '12. Two members of the undergraduate monogram club, Mike Layden and Wally Fromhart, also were elected on the board of directors.

During the session talks were made by Elmer Layden, George Keogan, John Nicholson, Jake Kline, Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., Rev. M. L. Moriarty, Harry Miller, Sam Dolan and Leo Holland. The latter was a pitcher on the Notre Dame team of 1899 and was the oldest letterman present.

Football Ticket Information

Prices for Notre Dame home football games and for season tickets have been set and are herewith announced.

Alumni application blanks will be mailed the latter part of July, the sale will open August 1, and the alumni preference will end September 15. If for any reason you have not received alumni application blanks by July 25, please write to J. Arthur Haley, business manager of athletics, Notre Dame, Ind., and an additional set will be mailed to you. Alumni dues must be paid if you are to receive this preference.

Season ticket and general public application blanks will be sent on reauest.

Following are individual home game prices:

Sept. 28-Kansas. Reserved, $2.20 general admission $1.10.

Oct. 19-Pittsburgh, reserved $3.30, general admission, $1.65.

Nov. 9-Northwestern, reserved $3.30, general admission, $1.65.

Nov. 23-Southern California, reserved $3.30, general admission, $1.65.

(All prices include tax)

The total for home games is thus $12.10. Season tickets, however, will cost only $9.90, including tax. This is equivalent of seeing the Kansas game without charge.

Following are the games to be played away from home, for which ticket prices have not yet been announced:

-Carnegie Tech at Pitts- · Oct. 5burgh.

Oct. 12—Wisconsin at Madison. Oct. 26—Navy at Baltimore.

Nov. 2-Ohio State at Columbus. Nov. 16-Army at New York.

Plans are under way for an "Old Timers' Game" next fall to honor the members of Notre Dame's first football team, the team of 1887. Probably either the Northwestern or Southern California game will be set aside for this celebration. Alumni and former students of this period will be asked to cooperate and participate in the observance dedicated to these players. Future issues of the ALUMNUS will carry more definite details on the affair.

June, 1935

The Clubs came in for the lions share of praise during the Commencement week-end for their magnificent showing in the activity of the Association during the year just passed. And all who have followed this section of the ALUMNUS know how deserved and how inadequate that praise was in proportion to the new standards that Club achievements of 1934-35 set.

Recommendations of the Local Alumni Club Council, which will be sent in bulletin form later, almost guarantee a continuation of this success with probable expansion of its merits to Clubs not yet so prominently in the picture.

The prospectus for the year published by the Notre Dame Club of Chicago and typical of Club activities of the finest and most varied type, is being sent to all Club presidents for a stimulus immediately.

Clubs desiring lists of members are urged to write the Alumni Office immediately so that this work can be done during the summer. Clubs having new lists of members are urged to sent them to the Office so that it can correct its files during the same period.

BERRIEN COUNTY

The Notre Dame Club of Berrien County met Tuesday evening, May 28, at the Hotel Dwan in Benton Harbor, Michigan and enjoyed a sumptuous duck supper. It was rumored that Thomas Grimes, Clarence Hess and John Medo raided Maurice Krinowitz's duck coop the evening before.

Among those who enjoyed the feed and secretly laid plans for future expeditions to the Kriniwitz poultry yard were Jim Armstrong, Bill Dooley, Frank and Don Lopker, Allen Johnston, Prof. Norbert Engels, Joe Poffenberger, Louis Patton, Frank Deitle, Maurice Krinowitz who asked for a second helping, the three villains Grimes, Hess and Medo, Bill Desenberg, Alfred White, Bob Franklin, Irving Hallett, Professor Wm. Downey, John Jauch, David Gibson, Henry Horka, Tom Farrell, Eugene O'Toole, Arthur Holton and your humble scribe. Treasurer Allen Johnson was pleased to note that Professor Engels limited himself to a dozen bottles of Coca Cola.

The Club voted to hold a stag party at the old boat house on the campus at two o'clock Sunday, June 16. Bill Dooley, Bob Franklin,, Casper Grathwohl, Frank Deitle and Maurice Krinowitz were named as a committee to make all arrangements. A letter was read from Father Dolan urging the Club to participate in the annual Layman's Retreat on August 1-4. Jim Armstrong spoke so eloquently on the subject that a Holy Roller and houting Dervish member of the club, namely Dave Gibson and myself, decided to attend. Like the average alumnus we are never adverse to a free feed and are counting on Philip Landsman and Maurice Krinowitz to accompany us.

Professor Downey appointed Henry Horka, Bob Franklin and Thomas Grimes to lay plans for the Layman's Retreat. It is trusted that all former Notre Dame men in Southwestern Michigan will be in a position to accept the invitation of the University to be its guests on that occasion.

Malcolm Hatfield.

CHICAGO

In addition to its program which, if never carried out, is still a swell program, the Notre Dame Club of Chicago has been hitting on all six.

One of the fine things of the year was the dinner tendered Shane Leslie at the Union League Club in May. Dr. Leslie, one of the most colorful of the visiting lecturers at Notre Dame was a highlight in the annual program of the Club.

The Club also had a Mass said at 11 o'clock on Commencement Sunday in the chapel of Alumni Hall for the repose of the soul of Father John Caavnaugh. Father Tom Burke said the Mass, which was attended by the members of the Club here for Commencement. Max St. George served the Mass.

CINCINNATI

It's about time to tell you all about our big Universal Notre Dame Night. To say that it was short of a huge success would not be doing justice to it.

After much preparation, the radio program went off fine. Al Castellini, Hogan Morrissey, Joe Morrissey, Bob Chenal, Larry Zepf, and your correspondent arranged the continuity, and enacted it for the public. Our listeners say the skit and query were very good, but they contend that the singing could have been improved. Hogan Morrissey's solo was the exception. We believe that everything was fair considering it as our debuts.

When we trouped to the Kemper Lane Hotel, after the program, we found our brother members in a gay mood, due to the excellent program arranged by Chairman Joe Kinneary. The "Schnapps Band" was going strong, and the Hudepohl's even stronger. No one will ever forget the former's theme song. The impromptu floor show brought out much latent talent which we will keep in mind for future radio programs. Harry Crumley recited a beautiful poem, which was the high light of the evening. We had an interesting talk from Duke Riley concerning his period at Notre Dame. He let us in on a lot of things about Walter O'-Keefe, Charles Butterworth, and the "Sisters of the Skillet." Larry Zepf contributed a few taps and songs. Lee Dubois sang a few of his own compositions. We extend the glad hand to Seton Staley and Ed Mc-Hugh for the arrangement of the floor show.

The fact that we had a crowd of over forty at the affair, leads us to believe that the club is marching forward. All the members are working hard to bring every Notre Dame man in the vicinity to the meetings. As a result, Tom McMahon, Ted Marburg, Bob Kuerze, Ray Pellman, and Norb Guetle, among many others put in their first appearances.

Heard the national program before ours went on, and it surely sounded great. The glee club was the best ever. It seems that Universal Notre Dame Night is growing bigger every vear.

Dear Father O'Hara:

At the regular monthly meeting of the Notre Dame Club of Greater Cincinnati held last evening, I was directed to suggest that it was the feeling of those present that a chair in English be founded in memory of our beloved Father Cavanaugh. Undoubtedly the University has already thought of something along these lines or it has been previously suggested. However, the boys felt that because of Father Cavanaugh's wide acquaintance and friendship with so many of the nation's outstanding laymen it would be a comparatively easy task to obtain adequate funds for such an endowment.

Albert D. Castellini, President.

CLEVELAND

The annual business meeting and election of officers took place at Chuck Rohr's, Monday evening, May 13. There were about 65 members present at this meeting. The officers for the past year reviewed the various activities touching on the high spots of these events. The officers were given a rising vote of thanks from the club members for the most successful year in the club's history.

And strange as it may seem Jim, Jerry Reidy reported a substantial sum in our treasury. So just a toast Jim to our ex-officers, Billy Ryan, Gay Haas, Pierce O'Connor and Jerry Reidy.

The new officers elected were Clayt Leroux president, Chet Brumleve vice-president, Bill Van Rooy treasurer, and myself as secretary. And here's hoping that we may be as successful as last year's group.

Dan Duffy has just been appointed municipal judge of this city. He has been in Columbus since January acting as secretary to Governor Davey.

Nick Ruffing wants to state that he is not on government pension any longer but is associated now with Keenan and Butler here in Cleveland.

Pat Canny is around and about again after his recent operation for appendicitis, but Rev. John Moran says he is no longer able to take it.

Art Becvar is becoming the well dressed man about town what with modeling this suit and that in the daily papers.

Larry Kral and Bib Morrissey are back in their golfing stride and we all expect them to win a few cups this year.

Gene Milliff's dad is recovering very successfully from a serious accident.

Clete Schneider is newest member of the Father's Club, a girl born April 20.

Tom Byrne was married Saturday, May 18, to Catherine McGivern, a former St. Mary's girl. Quite a few of the Notre Dame and St. Mary's group were present at the ceremonies and at the reception in the afternoon at Fred Joyce's Lake Shore Hotel.

Quite a few of the fellows intend to be up at school for the graduation exercises so we will see you then, Jim.

Otis Winchester.

CONNECTICUT VALLEY

Sorry I did not furnish you a report of the Club's Universal Night diviner and activities prior to this date, but I hope it will arrive in time for the Commencement number.

As you were previously informed, William A. Hurley arranged the party held in the Hotel Bridgeway, Springfield, and to his credit, did a very fine job. It was pleasing, to find among the attendants many of the "old timers," but new at our meetings.

The radio broadcasts were pleasantly enjoyed, including the Studebaker time and our two programs from WDRC-Fr. Patrick T. Quinlan, and WTIC-The Travelers' Hour; both from Hartford.

One distinction which belongs to the Club was the honor and pleasure of having at our affair, one of the authors of the "Victory March"— John F. Shea. After a splendid dinner, Tom Ferguson called on Rev. Patrick T. Quinlan, John F. Shea, Ulric (Foot) Ruell, Joe (Jake) Joachim and George (Dinny Shay for a few remarks. It was of especial interest to hear John Shea and "Foot" Ruell reminisce of school in their time. Many of the traditions, it seems, started during their time.

A nominating committee brought in the following slate, which was approved, and will be effective for the ensuing year:

Thomas B. Curry, Honorary President; Rev. Patrick T. Quinlan, Chaplain.

Officers: Thomas E. Ferguson, President; Harry E. Deegan, Vice President; Francis B. Laraia, Treasurer; Francis D. Ahern, Secretary.

Board of Governors: John M. Cianci, George D. Shay, Raymond P. Snyder.

So you see, Jim, you will have to bear with me for awhile longer.

A recent meeting of the group shown above resulted in preparations for a semi-formal dance to be held in Hartford, Hotel Bond Roof Garden, June 15, 1935. Francis B. Laraia, General Chairman, has appointed the following committees:

General Committee: Andrew Kata, New Britain, Cinn.; John F. Sullivan, Holyoke, Mass.; Raymond A. Snyder, Chicopee, Mass.; Timothy Hinchey, Westfield, Mass.; George E. Erwin, New Britain, Conn.; Raymond Mc-Keon, Kensington, Conn.

Publicity: George D. Shay, Chairman; Matthew Meskill, New Britain, Conn.; John F. Shea, Holyoke, Mass.; James Murphy, Middletown, Conn. Tickets: Harry J. Deegan, Chairman; John D. Carney, Hartford, Conn.; John M. Cianci, New Britain, Conn.; William A. Hurley, Springfield, Mass.

Music: Charles B. McDonough, Hartford, Conn.; James E. Hayes, New Britain, Conn. Invitations: Thomas B. Curry, Chairman; Timothy Murphy, Hartford, Conn.; Raymond W. Griffin, Hartford, Conn. Arrangements: Francis D. Ahern, Chairman; James A. Curry, Hartford, Conn.; Francis T. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

In a previous letter, I referred to the speech Fr. Patrick T. Quinlan delivered at the Elmer Layden Dinner. A copy of the speech is enclosed and I believe you will find it of interest. Practically the same speech was used for his broadcast.

The above, I believe, covers the Club activities to date.

Francis D. Ahern.

DENVER

I was sorry to see, however, that the notice of our Rocky Mountain Club's Universial Notre Dame Night banquet didn't get into print. There were about twenty of us met for supper at the Argonaut Hotel, ate, planned a more active unit of the Association, and listened to two radio programs in honor of N. D. One, the Studebaker Hour; and the other on the Columbia network, prepared and announced by our own Matt Mc-Eniry. He did a fine job of it. So, Denver's Notre Dame was with you.

Ray Smith is back in Denver again, and going places with the Kansas City Life. Had a round of golf with him last Saturday, and I think he plans to be back on the campus for summer school. John Humphreys is in the insurance line too; he sold me a policy some months ago—it must have been a good one for I haven't been in an accident yet.

John Clauder stole away from the blustery March weather of Milwaukee and found time down in Florida to drop me a postal. Way back in February I had a letter from Chuck Litty; he has been busy as a newspaper reporter in his home town, then in the publicity department of a broadcasting company, and by this time I hope he has been placed with the steamship company he had his eyes on. He passed on the word that Vince Fehlig paid him a visit at Christmas time -ancient history! About that same time of year, I had a long letter from Jim Griffin. He is working hard in the law classes of Albany Law School. As for myself, I'm working in the Accounting end of the Hungarian Flour Mills --- it's interesting work with a fine company.

I know these are busy days for you. Just a year ago I was hurrying in and out of Sorin during those hours before Commencement. Seems a long time ago. I hope it won't be too many years before I can attend another one—but it is a long way from the foot of the Rockies to the Golden Dome.

Eugene S. Blish, '34.

· DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

I am not certain if the Secretary has written you of our dinner on the 29th of April but in any event I will make a brief report.

We were fortunate in having as our guest speaker the inimitable Pat Manion who kept every one entertained for more than an hour. Dutch Bergman also arose to the heights with an after dinner talk very reminiscent of Rockne at his best. We also had a sound film of "One Minute to Go" and you can be sure the crowd enjoyed it.

The dinner was held at the Racquet Club and our attendance numbered more than eighty, most of whom were members but with a good sprinkling of other distinguished guests, including no other than the Mayor of Evansville and his City Attorney.

We are planning a little stag party next week to be followed by a dance # in June at the Congressional Country Club and then we will fold up for the summer season. Every one agrees, however, that we have had a very successful year and we still take pride in being dubbed the only club that has no dues.

At the regular meeting, May 21, election of officers was held and the following were elected for the ensuing year:

J. D. Hayes, Chevy Chase, Md., President; Thomas J. Markey, Jr., Washington, D. C., Vice-President; J. Thomas Garver, Washington, D. C., Secretary; Charles Mannix, Washington, D. C., Treasurer.

The membership discussed the advisability of holding a dance at a country club prior to July 1, 1935 and it was agreed that such a dance should be held and that the president should appoint a committee immediately to arrange for same and report progress at the earliest possible date.

Following the meeting a buffet supper was served.

J. D. Hayes, '17.

HIAWATHALAND

The Hiawathaland Club met on Universal Night at the Milliman Hotel at Iron Mountain.

The following were present: E. J. Dundon, '22, John Lemmer, '18, Bill Clancy, '24, Henry Lauerman, '22, Jacob Leisen, '33, Joseph Lauerman, '31, Ed Ryan, os, Roger Dillon, os, George Belhumeur, '37, Norman C. Bartholomew, '15.

The Philco agency furnished a radio and the reception came in fine. The service was appreciated.

John Lemmer furnished a reel of pictures "In Memoriam," illustrating incidents in the life of "Rock." Joe Lauerman showed pictures of the famous trip to California.

The Club voted to have an annual memorial Mass to be said at Notre Dame.

N. C. Bartholomew, '15.

EASTERN INDIANA

We are holding our regular monthly meeting of the Eastern Indiana Notre Dame Club next Monday evening, June 3. I have promised the fellows that we would have some football movies to show them on that night, and this is to forewarn you that I am counting on you to line up something for me.

I will be up for the commencement activities Saturday and Sunday, and I shall be in to see you as soon as I arrive. The future of our club depends on our having a good program for our next meeting.

Tom Cannon.

KENTUCKY

The Derby's preceding week of jubilee evidently overshadowed Universal Notre Dame Night in Louisville. But the boys there individually are on their toes.

Bill Reisert, Jr., was on the campus for Commencement, and incidentally let fall the fact that he is president of the strong St. Xavier alumni association of the famous Louisvlile prep school.

A note from Frank Bloemer says that even the chili industry is recovering.

So more from that important center from now on.

LOUISIANA-MISSISSIPPI

The Notre Dame Alumni Club of La. and Miss. had their annual reunion gathering at the home of the president, Patrick E. Burke, 2006 Canal street. Some 30 members of the Alumni gathered at 6:30 at his home for dinner and at 8 o'clock the dinner was concluded and a varied program was enjoyed by some 100 guests who were interested in Notre Dame.

A radio broadcasting program was marked by talks from the president, Cyprian Sporl, Jr. and Bolan Burke.

The Holy Cross College Band numbering about 40 played throughout the evening when Notre Dame songs were often repeated and the hundreds who had gathered in the vicinity of the president's home derived pleasure therefrom.

Varied talks and musical numbers kept the Notre Dame spirit alive until midnight when there was regret that there could not be many more of such gatherings.

Notre Dame colors in blankets, pillows, pennant, banners and monogrammed sweaters with plenty of old gold and blue predominated about the home. It was certainly pleasing to have with us younger men such older men as Joe Dolan, Fabian Johnston, Rev. Louis Kelley, pastor of Sacred Heart Church. The younger generation of alumni did not allow the grass to grow under their feet. Among the youngsters was James Favret who changed from bachelorhood to a benedict on June 15 the day that the new Archbishop of New Orleans (Joseph F. Rummel, D.D.) was installed which prevented the president from being present. Charles de la Vergne, Frank Chalona, Austin Boyle now connected with the Time-Picayune, Jules de la Vergne, and many others added to the evening's entertainment.

P. E. Burke.

CENTRAL MICHIGAN

After being inactive several months the Notre Dame Club of Central Michigan met at the Roosevelt Hotel, Lansing, Michigan on April 29 to commemorate Universal Notre Dame Night.

Plans were made to hold regular monthly meetings on the first Monday of each month starting June 3. The meetings are to be held at the Roosevent Hotel in Lansing at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

In addition to conducting the regular business the annual election of officers was hel da ndthe following officers elected: President, Dr. E. J. Hermes; Vice - President, John J. Scales; secretary and treasurer, Harvey Gauthier.

Former Notre Dame students residing in towns in the vicinity of Lansing are urged to attend the meetings and should any information be desired regarding the club it will be gladly furnished by the undersigned or by any other member of the club.

Harvey Gauthier.

MILWAUKEE

Universal Notre Dame Night was celebrated by the Milwaukee Club in grand style. Most of the boys showed up and we really got a lot of business finished. New officers for the coming year were elected with the result that a very good man got in as president. The new officers are as follows:

H a r o l d Watson, '25, president; Charles O'Neill, '26, vice - president; William Brown, '29, vice - president; John Clauder, '34, secretary, and Joseph Griffin, '28, treasurer.

The officers had a meeting last week and many plans were laid for the coming year. Our hardest job now is going to be to collect dues. They never had any up here so it is going to be hard convincing the fellows we are not trying to fill our own pockets. We have also planned a golf tournament as well as our usual pienic for this summer. Will send the dates later in case anybody you know is going to be up this way and would like to join us.

John E. Clauder.

NEW YORK CITY

Club scholarship, Thursday Night club as an offshoot of activities, the luncheons, frequent visits from N.D. celebs—small wonder Doc Gelson is hard pressed.

The Club entertained the key men in the national hook-up on Universal Notre Dame Night, Fr. O'Hara and Frank Walker also addressing the Club group at the McAlpin. Other guests amon gthe 300 present were John P. Murphy, '12, Cleveland, Lay Trustee; U. S. Attorney Leo Hickey, Charles Gorman, and that personality that Notre Dame has to share with the public, Jimmy Crowley. Ed Tighe, president of the club, presided at the meeting.

NEW JERSEY

This is to notify you that election of the New Jersey Club was held on Monday, June 3, and the following officers were elected for the year 1935-36:

President, Thomas Purcell, East Orange, N. J.; vice-president, Dr. George Hewson, Newark, New Jersey; secretary, Ray Geiger, Irvington, New Jersey; treasurer, Robert Huetz, East Orange, New Jersey.

I know that all of these boys will give you every bit of cooperation and I can assure you that the benefits of their administration should be great for the Alumni organization as a whole.

B. K. Wingerter.

PEORIA

Some 58 members of the Notre Dame club of Peoria, but drawn from many cities throughout Central Illinois, gathered at the University club for the local observance of Universal Notre Dame night, an annual alumni fete celebrated throughout the world.

Robert E. Kavanaugh, the principal speaker, spoke eloquently of the contribution of Notre Dame patriotism to this country and of the fight of the American Legion in Peoria county against communistic tendencies.

cies. "The Notre Dame Man" was the topic of the Rev. Keithen L. Roche of Canton, who spoke of what the world expected of the graduate or former student due to the training he had received at the University.

George Sprenger presided at the meeting. Plans were announced for a dinner and reception of the Peoria club in honor of its member, the Rev. Bourke Motsett, a Peorian recently ordained in Rome, Italy. The dinner and reception will be held some time late in May, with Al Gury, Jr., in charge. Plans were also announced for the annual picnic of the club to be held June 22 on the farm of Dr. C. V. Ward. Lawrence Prescott heads the committee in charge.

A feature of the meeting was the tuning in of a special radio broadcast over the coast-to-coast facilities of the National Broadcasting company, through the courtesy of the Studebaker corporation. Talks were made by Elmer Layden, famous football coach; Frank Walker, government work relief official; Eddie Dowling, stage comedian, and the Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of the University.

John E. Cassidy gave a radio talk as a part of the Peoria observance, telling of his impressions of the University and its campus life.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

Joining with Notre Dame clubs throughout the world in the Universal Notre Dame night observance, the East Penn Alumni club met at the Hotel Allen and during the evening elected officers.

Leo R. McIntyre, of Bethlehem was again named president of the club. Other officers elected are Thomas Quigley, Shenandoah, vice president; Cyril Jones, Reading, second vice president; Hugh Campbell, Hazleton, treasurer; Ernest L. Wilhelm, Palmerton, secretary. Directors named a r e Joseph Quigley, Shenandoah; William Gorman, Bethlehem; Joseph Manana, Easton; Ben Bourne, Phillipsburg, N. J., and William Loughran, Freeland.

Guests of the club were Leo F. Prendergast, coach at Bethlehem High school and Joseph Ricapito, director of instrumental music in the Bethlehem public schools, each of whom made short talks. Mr. McIntyre acted as toastmaster at the dinner meeting and called upon each of the 20 alumni of Notre Dame present for remarks.

Notre Dame songs were sung by the alumni, with Joseph Mannana as the leader. During the program, the Notre Dame broadcast was heard through the courtesy of F. Bowman and Son, a radio being installed to receive this program.

ST. JOSEPH VALLEY

You might call attention to the fact that the club had its first annual spring golf day at the Coquillard Country Club on Thursday, May 16, 1935; that Elmer Layden was chairman and that Bill Sheehan won the gripers' tournament; that Herb Jones, Art Haley and John McNamara were tied for the honors in the handicap tournament and that it was won by McNamara and he received a pair of shoes donated by Spauldings. Forty members of the club took part.

You might, also, call attention to last night's dance, which was entitled "Spring Dance," which featured Lop Jarmon and his orchestra and was held at Melody Gardens. Credit for the great success of this dance should go to Art Diedrich, chairman, Frank Donovan, Louis Bruggner, John Gibbons, Dillon Patterson and Louis Buckley and to the wives of the members of the club who cooperated so nicely. One hundred and fifty couples attended.

You might, also, make a note that A. Harold Weber is chairman for the arrangements for commencement as far as the local club is concerned.

TRIPLE CITIES

Local alumni did their part in the celebration of Universal Notre Dame Night. Approximately 25 members attended a dinner held in Donnelly's Restaurant. Officers for the coming year were elected. They are: President, Bill Hogan; vice-president, Edward O'Brien; treasurer, Joseph Kennedy; secretary, Bill Yeager. Social activities, including a dance and a clambake, were planned for the coming months. The new Alumni members will be received at a dinner early in June. They are: Joe Conlon, Jack Wacks, John Murphy and Joe Knapp. Retiring President Joe Carey, now a government investigator in Detroit, sent his regards by telegram. The University broadcast came in fine and was thoroughly enjoyed. Late in the evening some fine singing talent was brought to the fore-off or on key everybody had plenty of volume.

Francis Toomey, '34, is staging a fine comeback after having suffered a severe attack of pleurisy and pneumonia. He was stricken while engaged in social work and furthering his studies in that field in New York City.

"Stew" Osborne, '34, is an accountant in the office of the Binghamton Gas Company.

John Donnelly, '34, suffered the loss of his father, prominent hotel man, who died Monday, May 20. The Alumni are having a High Mass said at St. Mary's church for the repose of his soul. May he rest in peace.

Bill Ayres,'34, who has been writing for the Binghamton Sun during the past year, has recentl ytaken over new duties as the sports editor. I see where Notre Dame athletes get some local publicity.

Jim Hogan, '34, and his brother, Bill, '32, will soon complete another term of teaching. Bill is teaching at the Central High and Jim at East Junior.

Pete Wacks, '30, is busily engaged in law practice with Chernin and Gold.

Dr. Frank Conole, ex-'31, and Dr. John O'Brien, ex-'31, are completing a year of interneship. Frank is at Bethlehem Hospital and John at the Binghamton City.

Ted Griffin was recently appointed secretary of the City Plumbing Examining Board.

William Miner is now attorney for the village of Endicott.

We are all wondering about Al McCormick, '33, who is visiting a friend in deah ole South Bend. — Well—it's spring and—.

I have been appointed a playground director for the summer months. Hope to have a line on some of the other fellows next time.

William Yeager, '34.

DEATHS

The following resolution was passed by the Association at its Annual Meeting, the Alumni Banquet, on June 1, 1935.

"Whereas God, in His wisdom, has during this past year taken from this life the alumni hereinafter listed, and

"Whereas these members have served their Alma Mater with glory in their respective avocations,

"Be it resolved that this Association extend its heartfelt sympathy to the relatives with promise of prayers that the same God in His mercy will be generous to their souls and grant them that eternal rest which we all so earnestly seek.

"Be it further resolved that an expression of the above be written into the official records of the Alumni Association and a copy sent to the bereaved relatives."

Fr. Motsett Returns

Looking the picture of health, the Rev. Bourke Motsett, class of 1931, returned to the United States on May 7 after four years spent at the American College in Rome, where he was ordained in April. He was met at the New York pier of the Cunard-White Star Line when his ship, the S. S. Berengaria, docked on that date by his brother, William Motsett, '33, and several friends.

The famous Thursday Night Club of the Notre Dame Club of New York tendered him an informal dinner at its headquarters at the Centre Club, 120 Central Park South, on Thursday, May 9. Among those present were Gordon Salmon, John E. Foley and Dan D. Halpin, all of the class of 1931, Tom Lantry and John V. Hinkel, of the class of 1929, and H. Jerome Parker, '31, new executive secretary of the Centre Club.

Father Motsett said his first solemn High Mass at St. Mary's Cathedral in his home town of Peoria, Ill., on Sunday, May 19. He will be assigned to a parish in the Diocese of Peoria.

Three other Notre Dame men are still at the American College in Rome, according to Father Motsett. They are the Rev. Joseph Ryan, Boston, Mass., Boy Guidance, '28, Loras Lane, of Dubuque, Iowa, class of 1932, and Edward O'Malley, of Albany, N. Y., ex-1933.

Hully and Mike

One of the highlights of the civic testimonial banquet given for the 1934 Notre Dame football squad and coaches on Jan. 15 was a tribute to "Hully and Mike"—George F. Hull and Michael F. Calnon, of South For years, through good times and bad for Notre Dame's football fortunes, the two one-time cigar store partners have been loval supporters of the team, and this devotion was recognized in a poem written by Rev. Thomas Burke, C.S.C., and read at the banquet by the toastmaster, John T. McGovern.

Mr. Calnon still operates the cigar store and Mr. Hull is president of the city council.

Following is Father Burke's poem, tittled "Mike and Hully."

Somewhere in the early glory

Of N. D. there is a story

Of two heroes whose achivements have too long been left unsung;

Men of brawn and bone and muscle

Who were not afraid to hustle,

And who held fame's ladder steady while our teams climbed rung by rung.

All the boys knew Mike and Hully,

- Names that did not dim nor sully
- During those long trying hours when so many men went down;

True as gold and single-minded,

Their clear eyes were never blinded

By ambition or self-seking that might gain for them renown.

Every team that left the station

For whatever destination

- Had these two old faithful rooters to escort them on their way:
- Texas knew their smiling faces,

And at West Point there are traces

Of the fine support they gave the team when it went on there to play.

Other men have let the limelight

- Of a winning season shine bright
- On their figures as they traveled through the country with the squad;
- But you'd never find them choosing
- These trips when the team was losing,
- For it meant humiliation and they cringed beneath the rod.
- Not so these two! In dark hours

- When the dreary gloom of showers Dampened other dispositions they were ready
- with their smile; And they cheered the boys who faltered

'Till defeat was sometimes altered-

them mile by mile.

In their little old cigar store

with them still;

its topmost hill.

Now another generation

And you'll find those fellows loyal

With a friendship that is royal

Of our boys have taken station

stony road to fame:

up with Notre Dame.

But the old boy as he muses

In the twilight never loses

But defeated or triumphant they went with

Boys were schooled in Notre Dame lore, Learned the story of traditions that they carry

Though you meet them in life's valley or upon

On the campus, who know nothing of our

Sight of dear old Mike and Hully who grew

struck a Match in the Rain_

I struck a match amid the rain drops While there we waited you and I. A little flame revealed we both liked Chesterfield. You know—I know—They Satisfy.

> You smiled and said, "They do taste better" And I replied, "They're milder, too." Those words just fit them to the letter. You know—I know—They're true.

And now we're furnishing a cottage Where we'll be happy by and by. Because the night we met, you held that cigarette. You know—I know—THEY SATISFY.
