Record Alumni Crowd at '37 Commencement

Varied Events Provide Record Crowd With Association's Most Successful Weekend; Various Meetings and Reunions Forecast a New and Happier Era.

More than 800 alumni returned to set a new attendance record for the 93rd Annual Commencement of the University. Half of this number arrived on Friday, June 4, to set a new record for the opening day of the exercises and mark a new trend in Association activities.

The Alumni Banquet, with 1,006 in attendance in the East Hall and a full table of disappointed late-comers in the cafeteria, followed the week-end custom of cracking old records. The brevity of the banquet program and the staying qualities of the alumni were additional new highs in banquet history.

Reunion parties, in number and enthusiasm, were not behind the parade. Never has such a varied program been so successfully carried out.

Friday night, the Class of 1912, which had been organized throughout the year by the efficient Class Secretary B. J. Kaiser, held its Silver Jubilee Dinner in the University Dining Halls. The local committee, headed by F. L. Mendez and J. Elmer Peak, had paved the way for a heart-warming hospitality for the large delegation who arrived Friday.

Coast to Coast

The Class of 1917 back from coast to coast through Ed McOsker's exhortations, enjoyed the hospitality of the beautiful country home of Bernard J. Voll. And while many in attendance were removed from '17 in years of graduation, the program put on by Harry Scott, John Urban Riley, Paul Fogarty and Mike Duffey, held a universal appeal that kept the crowd present until breakfast.

The Class of 1932 held its 5-year in the Columbia Athletic Club, South Bend. Headed by the active secretary, Herb Giorgio, a record crowd was back, as the roster under Class news shows. The local committee again functioned ably, under the chairmanship of Ed O'Malley and the management of Jack McGrath, Bernie Roethle and George Hennion, with Joe Petritz and the rest of the '32 locals as advisory members.

While we are on the Reunion theme, 1927, with Herb Jones and Joe Boland handling the local arrangements, met at the Columbia Club on Saturday night after the Alumni Banquet, with some 60 members gathering for the 10th anniversary.

St. Joe Hallers Back

And one of the most enthusiastic reunions of the entire week-end was that of the alumni of St. Joe Hall. Fathers Ray Murray and Hugh O'Donnell had left nothing to chance. Quartered in Badin, formerly old St. Joe Hall, more than 50 of this famous cross-section of Notre Dame student life, re-lived their student days, even to the donning of waiters coats on Sunday for the luncheon. Previously, the men had met at the old kitchen "turn" and from there visited the Community cemetery where Brother Florian and many of the other figures familiar during the life of St. Joe Hall now rest.

Dillon Hall bulged with the Classes after 1926. Alumni Hall, which this year became a residence hall for Seniors, was not available for alumni use, and so the Classes of 1926 and before were quartered in Howard (originally Old Students) Hall, and in Lyons, with the St. Joe Hallers going to Badin.

The Dining Halls and the Golf Course once more proved to be the highlights of Commencement from the first arrival to the last departure, providing facilities of the finest kind for the returning alumni.

Friday night at 7:00 o'clock the University Band under the direction of Joseph J. Casasanta, '23, gave a concert on the front porch of the Main Building for a large crowd assembled in the Quadrangle and on the steps of the residence halls. The Band had an active year in football, basketball and concert seasons, and provided a real musical treat for the Commencement visitors.

At 8 o'clock Friday night, in Washington Hall, the seasoned boards of the University Theatre echoed a fine performance of "Born Lucky," under the direction of Albert F. Doyle, '27. The interest of the play and the quality of the performances of the cast were contributions to the success of the week-end.

Alumni of all years enjoyed the baseball games with Iowa on Friday and Saturday afternoons, Notre Dame dropping the first and taking the second in a thrilling 9th inning rally. Many also enjoyed the high school track meet, held under the auspices of the Athletic association, and including representatives from the outstanding Catholic high schools of the country. More than 300 boys were entered in the meet, which was won by West Catholic of Philadelphia.

Every Hour Crowded

Saturday morning was devoted to the traditional exercises, Mass for deceased alumni in Sacred Heart Church at 8:30, followed by the Last Visit of the Class of 1937. Class Day exercises in Washington Hall and the award of honors were held immediately after the Last Visit.

At 11 o'clock, in the courtroom of the Law Building, the Eighth Annual Council of Local Alumni Clubs was held. The results of the Club year were discussed by delegates from the Clubs, and many suggestions made which will be incorporated in a special bulletin to Club officers.

Six o'clock Saturday night found the East Hall of the University Dining Halls crowded to capacity with the greatest banquet attendance in the history of the association. Arthur J. Hughes, presided. Addresses by Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., president of the University, Elmer F. Layden, director of athletics, John P. Murphy, past president and a member of the Class of 1912, and by President Hughes, featured the program. A short welcome was also given by the Very Rev. James W.

Donahue, C.S.C., superior general of the Congregation of Holy Cross. The invocation was given by Very Rev. James A. Burns, C.S.C., provincial of the Congregation in the United States, and honorary president of the association. A section of the band furnished music during the meal, which was of the customary excellence to which the patrons of Mr. E. F. Connolly's banquets have become accustomed.

The ALUMNUS reprints in this issue the magnificent baccalaureate sermon delivered Sunday morning, June 6, by Bishop Alter, and the Commencement Address, delivered by Dennis F. Kelly, Chicago merchant.

For the rest, only attendance can catch the color of the scenes that marked the Pontifical Mass which Bishop Noll celebrated in the beautifully decorated Gym, the raising of the '37 flag which followed on the Quadrangle, and the Commencement exercises proper in the afternoon in the Gym.

The Moreau Choir, the Band, the faculty and Seniors in cap and gown, the clergy in procession, all these things created a scene with which alumni are familiar but which is impossible to describe adequately in type.

Added feature of this year's week-end was the impressive presentation of the Laetare Medal to Dr. Jeremiah D. M. Ford, Harvard classicist. The presentation was made before a private audience of friends, faculty members and clergy in the parlor of the Administration Building at 3:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Dr. Ford was a welcome figure at the Alumni Banquet and the other Commencement events of the week-end.

Many of the events of the week-end have been touched upon only lightly. Happily, many of the addresses are reprinted in this issue to reach the many alumni who could not return. But in the last analysis, only those who were here can grasp the many happy features of the 93rd Annual Commencement exercises, the greatest, from an alumni standpoint, in the history of Notre Dame.

dent employment available was waiting on table.

What has been accomplished since graduation by many of the men was revealed by the letter-heads that filled Father O'Donnell's reunion correspondence file. Among them were the presidents of large manufacturing and other important business concerns; eminent physicians, lawyers and judges; engineers who have left their mark on gigantic undertakings; men high in politics and government service; teachers whose names adorn the title pages of authoritative text books; newspaper men who have reported world affairs in many countries; priests who shepherd flocks in some of the largest parishes or who have dedicated their lives to the instruction of youth or the missions; orators who at will hold large audiences in the palm of their hand; lecturers who entertain and instruct from the public platform. These and many more are among the alumni of old St. Joe Hall and it is gratifying to the University authorities that a large number of them were back for the reunion of the erstwhile "white jackets."

Those returning for the reunion included:

Norman Bartholomew, '15, Iron Mountain, Michigan; James Boland, '17, South Bend; Richard Braun, '14, Port Arthur, Texas; Harold P. St. Joe Hallers Gather

Reunion Recalls History of Famous Old Hall.

By Paul R. Martin, '09

Some 60 alumni, specifically known as "the St. Joe Hallers," returned for the Commencement exercises, the general alumni reunion and, likewise, to hold a reunion of their own—a gathering of St. Joe Boys, by St. Joe Boys and for St. Joe Boys. It was the first time in Notre Dame history that such a reunion had been held and that it met with the hearty approval of the many men who lived in old St. Joe Hall during their student days was attested by the letters that literally poured into the office of the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, C.S.C., vice-president of the University and moving spirit of the reunion.

"Where," someone whose knowledge of Notre Dame extends back over a period of not more than 20 years is bound to ask, "is St. Joe Hall?"

That question is easily answered. Twenty years ago it was glorified by the addition of a pair of wings, and wonder of wonders—at least for those who had known the old Notre Dame—a cafeteria was installed on the ground floor. That was in 1917 when a goodly portion of the graduating class, resplendent in new uniforms, came back to the Commencement from various army training camps, while others, located too far away to make the return trip, had to be content with receiving their diplomas by parcel post. The name of St. Joe Hall was then changed to Badin and Badin it remains to the present.

St. Joe Hall—it was called St. Joseph's Hall in formal conversation—was not a large building. It contained no private rooms and its "lounge" was a "rec" room of the old fashioned type where the furniture was intended to be utilitarian rather than ornamental. But it was a place of happiness and of industry. If one should dig back into the archives of the director of studies office he would likely find that some of the highest marks of scholarship were won by the lads who lived in old St. Joe—lads who arose earlier in the morning than did the students of other halls, made their way across campus to the old kitchen behind the Administration building and carried the food from the kitchen to the two Main Building refectories and there served the tables more or less (usually less) according to the dictates of Miss Emily Post.

In the days of the older Notre Dame, St. Joe Hall was the home of the student waiters, and, with the exception of a handful of boys who could be used in the library, the general office or as secretaries to the one or two administrative officers who rated secretaries, about the only stu-

The Commencement Address

Distinguished Catholic Layman, Head of the Fair Store in Chicago, Warns Graduates Against Hopes of Rapid Rise in Business.

The distinguished honor of addressing the men of Notre Dame is mine—today—but the memory will always live in my heart. Upon the occasion of Commencement, when thoughtful young men finally close that chapter of their lives which embraces the comparatively carefree days of boyhood and of school—when they look ahead to a new, more rigorous and perhaps more problematical future, these questions loom up in their minds. "This is Commencement Day—what does it signify? Of what is it the beginning? To what may we justifiably look forward?" In facing, with you, this Commencement, in looking ahead with you to a life of worth while endeavor, I wish, if I may, to be of service.

In the antediluvian days—I refer to that period prior to 1930—many college graduates were accused of facing the world with a superiority complex. However, if Notre Dame men have had such a complex, it is probably due to the great pride that Notre Dame graduates have in their school.

Notre Dame Leading

And this is indeed justifiable, for three important members of the faculty of one of the largest universities in Chicago have mentioned to me on several occasions that in their opinion Notre Dame is leading all other colleges in educating our young men. It is a widely conceded fact that Notre Dame men are easily recognized through the inimitable character training that has been theirs during the years they spend at this school under its scholarly teaching staff.

You will carry with you, not only the evidence of the years of effort you made here, but something of the spirit as well, something that will assure you a cordial reception wherever you may go. And so, when you leave Notre Dame, you will have not only your diploma, but the best of all the signature of Notre Dame's president implies—the distinction that identifies graduates of Notre Dame as a class apart.

You gentlemen undoubtedly have in mind the question, "What are my opportunities in the business world?" Business men to whom you will look for employment expect you to possess the necessary attributes that fit you for business. I use the term business in its all inclusive sense, for the simple reason that every form of occupation, whether it be professional, manufacturing, retailing or statesmanship, is a business, and business is a profession. And, speaking of qualifications, if you have the will to succeed in your life's work it is taken for granted that integrity and truthfulness will ever be your watchwords—and that you will always seek responsibility rather than attempt to evade it.

Decide—Then Go Ahead

I hope none of you will make the mistake of vacillating in the choice of your life's work. Decide upon your career—definitely—then go ahead, for this is the age of specialization. Like Mr. Forbes, I believe that "Diamonds are merely little chunks of coal that stayed on the job" and I entirely agree with the sentiment of the song, "You Can't Play Every Instrument in the Band." Pick out the one you like and stick to it, if you want to become a star.

When accepting a connection with an organization, especially if it happens to be one of the larger type, you will find that the majority of men whom you meet are not college-trained. They have, however, something you do not possess, as yet—the training secured through the experience of years. With the ground work that you have acquired at Notre Dame, you should be able, in a comparatively short time, to master the details of any position to which you may be assigned, so that under ordinary circumstances your advancement would be much more rapid than you could possibly hope for without the benefits of a college education.

The one great truth that I would like to leave with you today is—forget about rising rapidly—forget about becoming a star within a year or two. Oh, it is going to take much longer than that: You have to look far ahead—if at the end of the first ten-year cycle, you find yourself successful, you have builded well, and you may well be proud of your achievement: Geniuses that startle the world with their youthful triumphs are but the exceptions that prove the rule. Mistakes, when recognized and analyzed, are the richest pay dirt a man can pan. They are to the ambitious man what the placer sands are to the miner—treasure houses of gold. Those of you who will profit by your mistakes will wind up your careers with an invaluable asset—knowledge based on experience.

Recognize Importance of Truth

This is why looking backward is the first step toward looking forward. I would like every young man here to grasp the importance of truth. I would like to have you form the habit of reviewing yourselves and your work weekly, not treating lightly mistakes, rebukes and errors, but rather turning them over and examining them. Be searching and ruthless, if you will, in your honest self-analysis. Study what prompted your mistakes. And, last but not least, make plans to see that they will not happen again, thereby putting something valuable in your storehouse of experience and knowledge. All of us make mistakes but it is the wise and successful man who turns them into profit.

In this connection I might point out that your associates in business can be of tremendous help in your advancement, and if you are wise you will show appreciation for all the assistance and advice they are in a position to offer because of their superior knowledge of business.

In our business of retailing, we are constantly training a number of young college men. Those who are still in our organization have demonstrated by the hardest sort of work that they have the will to succeed. We have men from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Notre Dame and other universities. One of the most successful of these men is a graduate of Notre Dame, Class of 1932, who now occupies a prominent position in our organization. When he entered our store we advised him to cultivate the good will and support of those around him. This he has done admirably and it has been a determining factor in his advancement.

Cultivate Cheerful Disposition

There is no more important characteristic that you could acquire than a pleasant, cheerful disposition. A smile will carry you further than a frown. The world has no place for a man with a grievance, but it loves a man with a smile.

It is not necessary for me to dwell upon the very high esteem in which Notre Dame is held and of the disappointment that come to hundreds of thousands when, on a very few occasions, your famous football team fails to win. I recall an incident which occurred last Fall when I was on a train bound for Milwaukee. I entered the Club Car and found a number of men gathered about a radio listening intently to a broadcast of one of your football games. I cannot recall ever having seen men so thoroughly disappointed as those I saw that day when the game's final gun banished all hope of victory. Though nothing was said by anyone, every man indicated by his facial expression that he would have been very happy if the score had been reversed. So you see, practically everyone expects Notre Dame to be on top—always.

I hope that you will believe that business is something quite different from the ruthless enterprise some people would have it appear. In more than 40 years as an executive, I have yet to encounter anyone among those with whom I have been closely associated who attempted to do what I would consider a dishonest act.

Business in general is straightforward and honest, and you can be helpful to the country as a whole and business in particular if you will remember that corporations are not all heartless Frankensteins. Executives, both great and small, are just as much interested in making an honorable success of their work and the work of those connected with their organizations as they are of the business itself. The reason for this is simple. Business cannot be a success unless those connected with it are happy and contented and wholehearted in their interest.

Low Starting Salary

Insofar as compensation is concerned, your question is probably, "What may I reasonably expect to earn as a starting salary?" My advice is that you should, if necessary, be content with a small salary that will, perhaps, enable you just "to get by," for about a year. In other words, keep your first demands low enough so that you will be able to make yourself wanted in the organization. Starting salaries should always be secondary considerations.

After you accept a modest wage, budget your expenses accordingly and live within its limits. Do not get into the habit of borrowing money from anyone for it is generally recognized that if a man cannot manage his own financial affairs successfully, he cannot manage the affairs of others.

Now, of course, I am not insensible, nor is any executive worthy of his office, ever unmindful of the necessity of earning an adequate salary. But the measure of an employee's worth is based primarily upon his spirit of willingness, his honest desire to further the best interests of his organization, his consciousness and acceptance of responsibility. Make your attitude—"What can I do?" rather than "How much can I make?" and you will find that by the efficient and intelligent fulfillment of your duties you are proving your worth to your organization—a worth that will ultimately be recognized in financial returns. It is the man who is dissatisfied to do only what he is paid to do, who insists always in doing just a little bit more, who makes himself truly invaluable to his employer. Walt Whitman said, "The gift is to the giver, and comes back most to him." There can be no question about, "Show me the man who progresses furthest and it is that man who puts most into his work."

Tells of Own Experience

I am going to venture to tell you of my own experience. One of my brothers was a cashier for a large store in Chicago. Because of this I persuaded my parents to permit him to find me a position as errand boy in that organization so that I could work during a summer vacation. That was my first job and it paid $2.00 a week. In the Fall I returned to school, neglecting to notify the head of the company, whose office boy I had been. When he discovered my absence he spoke to my brother and insisted upon my returning. I persuaded my parents to allow me to do so, with the understanding that I would study at night. This I did for more than ten years, but I have always regretted that I did not take the advice of my parents and acquire a college education.

Another phase of my experience may be of some interest to you. Thirty-five years ago there were very few of our young men who took part in civic affairs. The late Bishop Muldoon of Chicago told me that Catholic young men were making a mistake in not taking a more active interest in the clubs and social organizations with which they were connected. He urged me to do so and cautioned me, above all, to avoid politics. Since then I have accepted many opportunities to serve as director or officer of the clubs with which I have been connected. These activities provided much valuable experience and infinite stimulating contacts.

Optimism Is Valuable

During the past several years I have been rereading the biographies of a number of our Presidents—Wilson, Cleveland, Grant, Lincoln and others, together with the life stories of some of their cabinet members. History indicates that all of these men were faced with perplexing problems, quite as serious at the time as are those of today. In such situations you will always find Woodrow Wilson's definition of an optimist a big help. He said, "An optimist is a man who makes lemonade out of the lemons handed to him." While many lemons, in the form of difficult problems are being handed out today, just as they always have been, college men are becoming adept in the making of palatable lemonade.

God, in His wisdom, has made it possible for many men of your generation and of mine, to revive some of the accomplishments of our forefathers. The majority of these men, who are among the country's greatest leaders, are not college trained and many of them, like myself and many of you, came from poor families, but they found this no handicap.

We should all be proud of the accomplishments of such men as Thomas E. Wilson, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Wilson and Company, who started his business life in a minor position in the stockyards and is now generally recognized as the most able executive in the packing industry; Mr. James Simpson, Chair-

The Baccalaureate Sermon

Speaker Charges the 1937 Graduates
With the Responsibility of Being Intellectual, Articulate and on the Offensive.

Beware lest any man cheat you by philosophy or vain deceit; according to the elements of the world, and not according to Christ.—Coloss. 2-8.

Every period of history has its own peculiar characteristics. The dominant note of our times is uncertainty, confusion and instability. There are scholars of great authority who express the conviction that we are approaching a crisis in our civilization, if in fact it is not already here. Superficially the crisis appears to be political, social and economic. Actually these are only symptoms of a much more profound distemper. The world is sick in its soul. It is out of joint spiritually and religiously.

That this judgment is not merely an individual one but represents rather a consensus of world opinion is abundantly clear from the pronouncements of contemporary criticism. Christopher Dawson in England, the most respected of our Christian sociologists, makes this statement: "Today the world is on the move again, and no one can tell where it is going or what will happen next; whether our civilization is going to recover its stability or whether it will collapse in ruins."

Problem Is Religious

In another place he states the cause and also cites the remedy. "The central conviction which has dominated my mind ever since I began to write, and which has increased in intensity during the last 20 years, is the conviction that the society or culture which has lost its spiritual roots is a dying culture, however prosperous it may appear externally. Consequently the problem of social survival is not only a political or economic one; it is above all things religious, since it is in religion that the ultimate spiritual roots both of society and of the individual are to be found."

Let me repeat that this is not an isolated verdict. Dawson has many companions who share his views not only in England but on the Continent of Europe and here in America. In France we can mention such celebrated scholars as Jacques Maritain, Paul Claudel, Gilson and Mauriac. In Germany there are Peter Wust and Karl Adam.

In America there is an entire host of writers who echo the same sentiments. Among the non-Catholic critics similar views are expressed. Oswald Spengler, the German sociologist, writes a book on the Decline of the West; Nicholas Berdyaev, the Russian author, on the End of Our Times; Irving Babbitt, late of Harvard, Paul Elmer Moore of Princeton, and Walter Lippman, of literary fame, all concur in the same analysis of our modern unrest and instability. The latter offers the following trenchant criticism of present day American attitudes: "There is nothing for which there is, I think, no counterpart."

Ever since the days of the Renaissance we have been moving towards a complete secularization of society. It was the great misfortune of our world that the leaders of that movement, otherwise so beneficial, erred egregiously in their appraisal of human values and fumbled the relation and distinction between nature and grace. They grossly exaggerated man's perfectibility by merely human means. They placed a false estimate on the ability of man to achieve unrestricted progress by dominating merely his physical environment and external nature rather than by mastering his own inner self, thereby establishing a divine synthesis between nature and grace. The train of events set in motion by the Renaissance is only now reaching its ultimate conclusions. Such is always the course of false philosophy.

Life Has Lost Meaning

Karl Adam states: "The sixteenth century revolt from the Church," he tells us "led inevitably to the revolt from Christ of the eighteenth century, and thence to the revolt from God of the nineteenth. . . And thus life has lost its great meaning, its vital strength and high purpose, its strong pervading love, that can be kindled only by the divine."

Christopher Dawson says practically the same thing: "Protestantism, Liberalism and Communism are the three successive stages by which our civilization has passed from Catholicism to complete secularism. The first eliminated the Church, the second eliminated Christianity, and the third eliminates the human soul. We cannot have a Christian society, or a Christian economic life until our civilization has recovered its moral conscience, its faith in God and its membership of the Church."

During the past 400 years the Church has not been able to lead a normal life. She has been forced to stand upon the defensive. She has been like a country that is invaded, like a city that is besieged. Her energies have been absorbed in fighting new in the fact that men have ceased to believe in the religion of their fathers, but this is the first age in the history of mankind when the circumstances of life have conspired with the intellectual habits of the time to render any fixed and authoritative belief incredible to large masses of men.—The irreligion of the modern world is radical to a degree for her very life and hence whole provinces of human life and cultural activity have been lost to her beneficent influence. Philosophy, literature, art, politics, economics—all these have repudiated their alma mater and have become prodigal sons wandering in a wilderness of doubt, confusion and despair.

For a long time the battle was fought in the field of dogma. The Church had to vindicate the fundamental truths concerning her own divine establishment, the divinity of Christ, the authenticity of the Sacred Scriptures and the very fact of revelation. But the old battle line is changing. We are no longer defending the ancient doctrines of Christian Revelation. Now we are face to face with a general attack upon the entire code of Christian conduct. The very commandments of God are under fire. The traditional standards of Christian ethics, on the basis of which our civilization was built, are being subjected to a heavy barrage of higher criticism.

Our Civilization Pre-eminent

Everywhere in the western world we have prided ourselves on our progress in the way of culture and civilization. We look down with a sense of superiority on the culture of China and Japan, of India and of the far flung territory of Islam. We of America and Europe consider, and rightly so, that our civilization is something pre-eminent and unique in the history of the human race. What most people do not realize is the source and origin of our peculiar privilege.

Our civilization is not something which just happened. It is not a thing of spontaneous generation. It is not a mere accident or an effect without a cause. Even if we were not possessed of an inquiring turn of mind, our attention should at least be arrested by the fact that this culture of ours is historically associated with Christianity and that it is everywhere co-terminous with its boundaries. Wherever the Christian gospel has been preached and its principles accepted into the lives of the people great social improvements have taken place. This was true in the ancient world and it is true today. As Christian truth advances, society improves. As Christian truth retreats, society falls first into confusion and then into decay. The inner spirit and the driving force of our culture are the product of a specific body of truth and practice which in its last analysis has no other foundation than the Christian gospel. Tell me what are the ideas and the attitudes of a people, towards human life, towards property, towards labor, towards marriage, the family, and towards government, and I will name for you the distinguishing characteristics of its civilization.

Is human life the property of God or is it the property of man? Upon the answer which we give to that question depends the value, the dignity and the safety of human life. If it is from God then it cannot be declared forfeited or abridged in any way by the authority of man. If it is from God and He alone has dominion over it, then suicide and homicide in any form are an attack upon the rights of God and they will be reprobated and rejected completely in a society or civilization which acknowledges such rights and believes in such Christian truths.

If on the other hand we reject the Christian viewpoint and assume that the life of man is subject to human authority, vested in the state or in government, then immediately its dignity, its sanctity and its security will be placed in jeopardy. If you think this is merely academic or without practical results, let me direct your attention to the customs which prevailed in pagan societies before the advent of Christian truth. In the Roman state the husband had complete control over the life of his wife, the children, and the slaves of the household. Under the laws of Lycurgus defective children were exposed to death immediately after birth. There was nothing reprehensible, moreover, in the mind of a Roman populace to seek entertainment at the arena in the death combats of professional gladiators. Life was cheaply held.

Abortion, Sterilization, Euthanasia

You may say that this is a thing of the past and could not possibly recur today. But what about the surgical death of thousands of unborn children by the way of abortion? What about the laws of sterilization which have been passed in recent years by quite a large number of our states? There are some who think that this is merely a eugenic measure for the improvement of the race. Do not forget however that even a partial attack upon our right to life and the integrity of the human person is an admission of the State's authority over life itself. The State will not stop at the comma but will ultimately go through to the period as it has done in Russia. What about euthanasia or mercy killing of which we read in our newspapers today? Though at present these mercy killings are advocated for the hopelessly insane, the hopelessly crippled, the hopelessly defective, what reason have we to think that they will stop there?

As Christians we deny such rights and we hold strictly to the principle that life belongs to God alone. We refuse to let anyone open up this Pandora box and let loose once more the genii of violence and ruthless slaughter. Can anyone seriously believe that if the Russian Communists maintained a belief in God and in his supreme dominion over life, that their leaders could speak so glibly of liquidating huge masses of the population by wholesale death? Several millions of the land-owning peasant class and the bourgeoisie were either stood up against the wall before the firing squad or else cruelly condemned to famine. Let no thoughtful person say that principles do not count or that it make no difference what one thinks of the sanctity of life and who has authority over it.

Regarding Private Property

Turn your attention for a few moments to the question of PRIVATE PROPERTY. Christianity teaches that ownership of property is a God-given right necessary for man's well being in this world. It teaches, however, that there is a twofold purpose of property. It is both individual and social. In other words its function is to serve the good or well being of persons and families and also the common good of the whole community. Christianity teaches that "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." Man, therefore, has no absolute right to do with his property as he pleases. Rather he is a steward of his possessions and must administer them under God's law according to the purpose for which the Creator gives them. He cannot follow merely his own sweet will.

Now what happens in the practiced order from a consideration of this truth? Does it not follow immediately that both the system of finance-capitalism and the system of communistic bolshevism stand equally condemned? Because of this fundamental truth our Holy Father Pius XI has been forced to speak out in solemn warning, demanding a reconstruction of the social order on the basis of a right and Christian understanding of property and private ownership.

When we speak of finance—capitalism we do not mean to imply that the use of private wealth for the purpose of economic production, whether by the individual or by groups joined together in corporations, is contrary to Christian teaching. The phrase, however, stands for much more than that. Broadly speaking, finance-capitalism implies irresponsibility which breaks up the moral organism of society into a chaos of competitive individualism. In the economic world it denies the sovereignty of the moral law and substitutes for it pure self interest. In the political order it denies the principle of authority and substitutes for it the arbitrary will of the majority. In religious matters it denies the existence of objective divine truth and substitutes for it

President of University Reports on 1936-37

Summarizes Progress of Year in Annual Message to Alumni; Emphasizes Unprecedented Record in Student Religious Life.

By Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., '11

(An Address at the Alumni Banquet)

At the Commencement exercises three years ago, our hearts were saddened by the fatal illness of our President, Father O'Donnell. At the close of the exercises, just three years ago today, this beloved priest passed to his great reward.

This year, by a singular coincidence, another great figure in the literary tradition of Notre Dame has cast a shadow on our joy by his passing. The association of Professor Fred Myers with our University was relatively brief, if compared with the 55 years of Father Hudson, but the impression made this modest man on the students who came under his influence during that time was of the everlasting kind. Let my first word tonight be a pledge of prayers for the repose of his beautiful and courageous soul. And let me be your spokesman in a similar pledge for two other noble souls who were with us a year ago but have since been called to God—the great Father Nieuwland and the lovable Johnnie O'Brien. May their souls, and the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace.

Cites Father Sorin's Example

These crosses come, and we accept them with resignation to the Divine Will. Again we commend ourselves to Divine Providence, which has guided Notre Dame through seemingly insurmountable trials; again we thank God for a good year. Looking over some old letters of Father Sorin recently, I was struck by the frequency with which he put off his creditors admitting honestly that the treasury was empty, but that his faith in God had not abated. In one letter, written in 1859, he wrote that he expected Notre Dame to be sold that day for debt. In another letter, dated in that same year, he reported that the religious had gathered about his bed in tears that morning, lamenting the end of Notre Dame, and that he upbraided them for their lack of confidence in the Divine Providence which had protected them in seemingly impossible situations. Often he stated that though the till was empty, the flour bin was not, and that God had blessed them with good crops; that neither students nor community was in danger of starvation.

It is on prayer that Notre Dame was built, and on prayer it must continue if it is to do the work for which it was founded. I am pleased to report that the spirit of prayer has not departed. Father Cavanaugh tells me that the number of Holy Communions received by the students this year was 361,215, a daily average of 1,570, or 40 a day more than was ever recorded before. The best previous average was 1,530, which was registered in the scholastic year, 1931-32, when the student registration was 200 higher than it is now. In addition to daily Communion, there were evidences of new peaks in devotion to the Blessed Sacrament, to daily adoration of the Blessed Sacrament, and to Our Lady at the Grotto. Notre Dame is following in the way of her founders when these things are true, and I know that you want to hear that the truly important things have not been forgotten.

It has been, I say, a good year. For the first time since the depression affected student attendance on the campus, we found it necessary to close registration of students a month in advance of the opening of classes. Attendance was limited this year, practically, to those who could be accommodated on the campus, 2,937. Present reports from the registrar indicate that probably before the end of this month, the books for next year will be closed. I should say in this connection that it is not our intention to provide new housing facilities for undergraduates, except in the way of replacements of halls that are not fireproof. Increase in graduate enrollment indicates the need of a graduate hall, and there will be no limitation placed for the present on students in the graduate division; but the council has decided against allowing any further growth in the undergraduate department.

Progress in Science

Last year you heard at length of studies and research in science. It will not be amiss to report briefly at this time on the development of projects then outlined. Two important symposia were held during the year. In January, a memorial service for Father Nieuwland brought together some 300 scientists from all parts of the country; the papers read on scientific subjects at this meeting have received world-wide attention. In April, a symposium on the Calculus of Variations was attended by some 70 mathematicians of first rank in the United States. The two days' sessions were addressed by the 12 men in this country who are held to be most proficient in this particular branch of mathematics. Professor Menger, who came to us this year from the faculty of the University of Vienna, was the moving spirit of the Symposium. Another Notre Dame speaker was professor Arthur Haas, who is also a former member of the Vienna faculty.

A year ago, the cornerstone of the Biology building was blessed during Commencement exercises. This new building is now completed, and will be in use during the coming summer session. It has been praised as a model for work in the field of Biology.

The new Cavanaugh Hall, a Freshman dormitory, was opened in September. Zahn Hall, another Freshman dormitory, is promised for the opening of school this fall. The renovation of Corby Hall was completed in December, and this traditional student dormitory is now a beautiful faculty house.

FATHER O'HARA

Many questions are asked about the proposed Rockne Memorial. Unfortunately, I cannot make any definite promises on the beginning of work, but I can tell you that the architects have modified plans in such fashion that the cost of the building is now much less than originally announced. Present plans call for a structure that will cost $550,000. It seems not to be generally known that the amount collected on the original drive was only $125,000. Interest on invested principal has now increased this amount to $150,000. There is still a gap of $400,000 to be bridged. It is hoped that the restoration of business confidence will incline many of our friends to make donations to this worthy cause.

Visit of Cardinal Pacelli

The most notable event of the year was the visit of the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Pacelli. His Eminence accepted from the University the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters, the first degree of this kind that has been awarded here. Since this memorable visit, His Eminence has given many evidences of warm affection for Notre Dame.

The alumni of the University, under the active leadership of their tireless president, Arthur Hughes, has this year given our country striking evidence of the importance of the sound education in fundamental truths that must be followed if Democracy is to continue as a safe and sound form of government. Armed with the personal blessing of the Holy Father, President Hughes visited alumni clubs from coast to coast this year at great personal sacrifice. Everywhere he addressed public gatherings, and encouraged Notre Dame men to initiate activities against Communism, and to cooperate with sound movements in this direction wherever they were already in progress. Everywhere he met with the cooperation of the hierarchy and the warm assistance of Notre Dame men. Correspondence received from all parts of the country indicates that great good has been done by this sacrificing work of President Hughes, and I want to thank him personally and the alumni association for this fine testimony to the work of Notre Dame training.

The University was represented at the Eucharistic Congree in Manila by Father George Marr, and Father Thomas Lahey. Father Marr continued the journey around the world, and is expected home shortly. An unfortunate illness interfered with Father Lahey's plan to continue beyond the Philippine Islands. After several weeks in a Manila hospital, Father Lahey returned to this country, and is now resting at the University of Portland, to gain strength for his return journey to Notre Dame. You may have heard Lowell Thomas broadcast from the Queen Mary his impression of Father Marr. He had met the genial rector of Walsh Hall in St. Peter's a few days earlier, and he described him as the loneliest man he had ever seen in all his travels. Father Marr recalled the story of the prophet, Habacuc, whom an angel carried by the hair of his head from Palestine to Babylon, where he was deposited in the den of lions with Daniel with a basket of lunch for the great prophet who had rebuked Nebuchadnezzar. Father Marr, at the tomb of the Apostles was saying a prayer that this angel would visit him and set him down in the heart of Notre Dame, where he could enjoy final examinations and spring practice. However, I am not sure that Father Marr's prayer was entirely sincere. He had in his pocket a ticket to Stuttgart, and he planned to visit Lourdes, England and Ireland before sailing for New York.

Our heart goes again tonight to the far west, where a member of the class of 1932, now holding its five-year reunion here, is beginning a brave journey home. Fred Snite was stricken with infantile paralysis some 15 months ago in Peiping, China. Those 15 months he has spent in an "iron lung," always brave, always cheerful, in spite of the prospect that death might strike at any moment. Ingenious devices of modern science have made it possible for him to attempt the homeward journey. Every stage of this trip will be fraught with peril, but he and his family, are courageous enough to make the trip. The Class of 1932 sent him a reassuring cablegram from its reunion last night, and promised to continue its prayers for his safety and his ultimate recovery. I am sure all of you will unite with his classmates in an earnest plea for this same intention.

The University acknowledges with deep gratitude the series of important gifts that have come during the past year. With the closing of the estate of the late Frank Phillips, the portfolio of the Board of Lay Trustees was increased by some $300,000. The final accounting of the estate of Mr. Phillips' brother-in-law, the late William P. Breen, will further increase the portfolio by something more than $100,000.

Some notable additions to the collections of rare and precious books in the Library have been made by William Daunt, Class of 1908, and Shane Leslie, LL.D., 1935.

Other benefactions received during the year totaling several thousand dollars have been contributed:

1. From Gerald Ryan, Joseph Ryan, Mary T. Ryan, Bernice Ryan, Florence Morgan, and Genevieve Lan-

gan, to establish the Roger Ryan Memorial Scholarship for the benefit of students who suffer physical handicaps$1,000

23. From Mr. A. Lee Read, '26, for continuance of the Mechan Medal..... 155

In welcoming to the ranks of the alumni the Class of 1937, special salutation is due the graduates in Aeronautical Engineering. This new course, which was opened two years ago with an enrollment of seven juniors, has had during the present year the largest freshman enrollment of any branch of Engineering.

All in all, it has been a grand year at the University, and since we seem to have the largest alumni reunion that has ever been held at the University, I take it that the blessing of God has been with you all. May it so continue forever.

Hughes Reports on Anti-Communism Trips

Alumni Association President Tells of Numerous Public Meetings Arranged by Notre Dame Clubs and of the Excellent Results Achieved.

By Arthur J. Hughes, '11

(An Address at the Alumni Banquet)

And now I have come to the end of my year. I am told that custom dictates that at this time I should render an account of my stewardship. I should tell you what I have done during my year as President of our National Alumni Association.

In that connection, however, my administration has been somewhat of a peculiar one, because I alone have not carried the major part of the burden of the Association's activities during the past year. That burden has been carried in large measure by Notre Dame men throughout the length and the breadth of this country, and instead, therefore, of reporting to you what I have done, I am going to report to you on what they have done, within the narrow limitations of the time allotted to me.

Thanks Pope for Assistance

Before passing to that, however, I want to make of this a solemn moment during which I desire most sincerely to extend to His Holiness, Pope Pius the Eleventh, our deepest appreciation and our most sincere thanks for the saintly blessing which he conferred upon the work of our Association last September. Without having the full, unqualified approval which He gave unstintingly to the plans that we hoped to achieve, the accomplishment of those plans would have dwarfed into insignificance.

I next want to offer, also, to His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein of the Archdiocese of Chicago, the sincere thanks of our Association for the endeavors which he put forth in making possible my private audience with the Holy Father. Cardinal Mundelein's cooperation was graciously extended to Father O'Hara and myself at an audience which was afforded to us in Chicago last August.

I desire at this time, also, to sincerely thank Father O'Hara for the fine inspiration and support and leadership which he has constantly given us in our campaign against Communism throughout the year. There wasn't a time that I wanted to see him that he didn't make it possible for me to see him, and there wasn't a time that I wrote to him that I didn't get an immediate reply. He has been shoulder to shoulder with us in all of our endeavors, and he leads us now triumphantly in whatever accomplishments we may have attained.

I have said to you that there were able and aggressive and loyal Notre Dame men throughout this whole land of ours who also cooperated with me most nobly in our joint endeavors to carry the colors of Notre Dame to the very heights of patriotism and honor and good citizenship, and that Notre Dame man who was most outstanding in the results that he was able to achieve in behalf of Notre Dame and our Alumni Association.

ARTHUR J. HUGHES

tion is our good friend, Jimmy Phelan, football coach at Washington University.

Jimmy was ably assisted in those endeavors which he put forth daily over a period of some three months by Emmet G. Lenihan, another outstanding Notre Dame man, whose record also as a student, as well as a graduate, has been preeminent in the annals of our school. Those of us who are gathered here at this Commencement time to participate in the twentieth anniversary reunion of the class of 1917 can well be proud of these two fine representatives of our class for the marvelous work that they did in our behalf.

Four thousand people crossed the threshold of one of the largest auditoriums in Seattle, Washington, to attend out meeting and some 30-odd of the city's most prominent leaders were on the platform. Bishop Shaughnessy of the diocese of Seattle sponsored the meeting on behalf of the Seattle Truth Society, of which George Flood is the president. Throughout those long preparations Father Gallagher, chancellor of the Seattle diocese, worked constantly with Jim to put over, not only the biggest meeting of this year, but the biggest civic meeting ever held, I am told, under Notre Dame auspices outside the confines of the campus.

Success in Springfield

I should mention next perhaps the meeting of the Notre Dame Club of Springfield, Illinois, so ably handled by Charles G. Corcoran, president of the club, and another member of our class of 1917, in association with George Maypole, president pro tem of the Illinois Senate. As a part of the gathering a dinner was tendered by Bishop Griffin of the Springfield diocese in honor of Father O'Hara, and about the banquet table there were gathered not only Father O'Hara, as honored guest, but Bishop Griffin and Bishop Schlarman of the diocese of Peoria, Honorable Henry Horner, Governor of the State of Illinois, and all of the state officials and prominent citizens of the city.

Our meeting in Minneapolis, under the auspices of the Notre Dame Club of that city, and under the direction of John D. Yelland and Jerry Conway, was a most memorable one with around 600 people in the audience.

In St. Louis the St. Louis Club, under the direction of Dr. Weis, as its president, with the able cooperation of John L. Corley of the class of 1902, secured the sponsorship of the Jesuit Fathers of St. Louis University and our meeting was held in the University auditorium with a great crowd in attendance.

In Portland, Oregon, Charles G. Hirschbuhl of the class of 1922, ably assisted by Frank J. Lonergan, of the class of 1904, my old friend Bill Schmitt of the class of 1910, and Father Michael Early, president of the University of Portland and a member of the Holy Cross Order, achieved great distinction by not only having a large crowd in attendance, but also having Archbishop Howard of the diocese of Portland preside at the meeting. Sam Dolan, whom you all know well as one of our greatest football players and a member of the class of 1910, drove a distance of 80 miles to attend this meeting, being outdone in this respect only by Father John Regan of the class of 1920 and chancellor of the diocese of Great Falls, Montana, who drove a distance of 100 miles to attend our meeting in Helena. The Helena meeting was ably arranged and conducted by William B. Jones of the class of 1928, president of the Montana Club.

Des Moines Meeting

At the Des Moines, Iowa, meeting, held under the direction of Harold P. Klein of the class of 1926, we were honored by the presence of Bishop Gerald Bergan, of the diocese of Des Moines, who presided at our meeting.

And I now want to tell you of the wonderful endeavors put forth by Robert A. Dick, president of the Denver Notre Dame Club, and Edward Mansfield. These men had worked steadily for weeks in their preparations, as a result of which we were invited to make addresses to some 700 or 800 students at Regis College, as the guests of the Jesuit Fathers, and again before some 500 or 600 students of Cathedral high school, in addition to which there was the main meeting of the evening, as well as a dinner of the Denver Club and two radio broadcasts.

In addition to these meetings which I have mentioned, and since the last ALUMNUS, we visited the following cities:

In Kansas City on April 27, a meeting was held under club auspices in one of the attractive auditoriums of the Municipal Building. John M. "Rome" Dugan, chairman of the committee in charge, was out of the city, but President Robert M. Tyler and the committee, — Dan Foley, Henry Burdick, Dr. Kevin Curran, Fred Mancuso, Henry Massman, E. McGrath, Frank Tyler, Dr. D. M. Nigro, John O'Connor, Maurice Carroll, Joe Stewart, and the officers of the club — promoted a very representative and attentive audience.

In Phoenix Arizona, on April 30, we found a club of small membership but large abilities and loyalty. Jack Hilkert had been ill and arrangements were delayed. But through the cooperation of the Phoenix Council, K. of C., under Grand Knight

Roy Heyne, a fine meeting was held in St. Mary's auditorium. Jack Hilkert and Steve Bielli were the guardian angels of this stop. The following day, Saturday, a luncheon was enjoyed with a group of the alumni and friends of Notre Dame, including Ed Mehren, who had just returned from a trip East, and Miss Madelyn Carmody, sister of Steve Carmody, '22, who acted as hostess on a visit to the Government Indian school where she is a nurse.

California Clubs

Los Angeles, where a splendid series of 13 radio talks occupied the winter weeks through the leadership of Henry Dockweiler, vice-president of the Association, on May 3 arranged a joint meeting of the alumni and one of the outlying councils of the Knights of Columbus. Alumni representation included some of the most familiar names in the L. A. roster — Joseph Scott, Al Scott, Henry Dockweiler, Terence Cosgrove, Frank Barry, Tom Lieb, Gene Kennedy, Judge Thomas McKeon, Leo Ward, et al. Doug Daley, president of the club, presided at the Notre Dame part of the occasion. Gene Kennedy and Jim McCabe, a recent addition to the club as L. A. representative for the Illinois Central Railroad, provided many sightseeing thrills.

San Francisco hit a hurdle in the illness and resulting absence of Mark Kreutzer. But Bernie Abrott took hold and, with the aid of such stalwarts as Royal Bosshard, Keene Fitzpatrick and Elmer Wynne, assembled a good meeting at the Union League Club on the night of May 5. With the hotel strike in full blast, the Union League Club also offered living quarters which were greatly appreciated.

Salt Lake City was stymied for an open meeting, but we were guests at a special luncheon on May 12 which was graced by His Excellency Governor Blood, Judge Roger McDonough, President Ray Brady, Cy Harbeck, and several other prominent civic and state leaders.

The final trip of the year was made Eastward and was shortened (with little real opposition on our part) by the difficulties that the late dates and the Memorial Day week-end presented to the clubs in Albany and New Jersey.

Circumstances prevented the planned meeting in Buffalo on the night of May 24, but such staunch leaders there as Jay Lee, John Byrne, and the younger alumni under the leadership of President George Doyle and Frank Cass, have promised to follow up the program there as it develops. The K. of C. had kindly contributed the use of their lovely auditorium for the meeting.

In Rochester on May 25, President Frank Norton and his aides had a splendid meeting. It was held in the Columbus Civic Center at 8:15. Co-operation had been secured previously from the Knights of Columbus, from Nazareth College and from Niagara University. Mr. Eugene Dwyer, outstanding attorney and Catholic layman, presided. The meeting was preceded by a dinner of the club in our honor.

Traveling Ends in Utica

May 26, in Syracuse, the Notre Dame Club, cooperating with the Syracuse Post No. 41 of the American Legion, and Syracuse Council 191, K. of C., held a meeting in the Legion Club House. Presiding was Frank C. Love, a vice-commander of the Legion in New York State. Fine organization work was done by Leo Kelley, acting as the N. D. chairman, Irving Belth, commander of the American Legion, and Herman Engelhart, grand knight of the K. of C. Printed invitations were sent out by the group to all of the religious, civic, fraternal, and labor groups of the city. In the afternoon, we presented our talk in brief form to the senior class of Christian Brothers Academy, through the courtesy of the Brothers there.

And the active program of visits closed most happily in Utica on the night of May 27, where, again, the Notre Dame Club and the Knights of Columbus joined forces in sponsoring the meeting. Dr. John Kelley was the Notre Dame man in charge of arrangements, while Grand Knight Rus-

Report of the Executive Secretary

From June 1, 1936 to June 1, 1937

MEMBERSHIP:

Improved economic conditions, and increased activity in the Association program, brought about a very promising increase in active membership, as reflected in payment of dues.

1,829 members paid dues in 1936-1937, as against 1,349 the preceding year, an increase of more than 35%. Continuing financial strain was indicated by the fact that of this number more than 12% took advantage of the offer to accept less than the five dollars.

Encouragement of the figures is obvious. On the same rate of increase, next year, the current fiscal year, should see us again financially independent.

Encouragement also, from a membership standpoint, was readily found by the officers in contacts with the Local Clubs, and with the Classes, particularly the Reunion Classes.

Individual member activity and interest also found outlet in retreats, football games, visits to the campus on personal trips, correspondence with the Office, and the increasing scope of member interests generally.

THE ALUMNUS:

The Editor of the ALUMNUS was necessarily away a great deal this year. The burden of the magazine fell largely on William R. Dooley, '26, graduate manager of publications and managing editor of the ALUMNUS. His excellent work was reflected in large numbers of enthusiastic comments for the magazine as it appeared nine times during the year.

Departments were strengthened by the veteran authorship of Joseph Petritz, '32, sports editor, and John Lechner, '37, campus editor, together with a most edifying efficiency on the part of most of the Club and Class Secretaries.

Additional advertising, particularly national, was run this year, largely in a spirit of faith and hope, not without some of the element of charity. However, the movement is the most promising to date in making the national advertiser conscious of the select group feature of the alumni magazine, and increased revenue has been predicted to offset the less attractive features.

THE LOCAL ALUMNI CLUBS:

Too many good things cannot be said for the Notre Dame Clubs. This year they were tried in earnest. The anti-Communism campaign, with its collective start and its individual follow-ups, found a most satisfactory strength and spirit in the Clubs. The Pontiac hour, broadcast from the campus, received a most commendable support from the Clubs. And on Universal Notre Dame Night, the Clubs reached that new peak that has become an annual feature of the Night.

The tone of Club activities grew richer, not in the monetary sense perhaps, but in a better sense. Spiritually, intellectually, as civic units, the Clubs emerged.

Retreats occupied many of the Club calendars, most successfully. The football smokers of the St. Joe Valley Club again stood out. Chicago and Detroit conducted a series of lectures by campus faculty members which were most effective. New York and Los Angeles secured sponsorship for series of thirteen lectures on Catholic subjects opposed to Communism. In New York these were given by Manila identified itself beautifully with its reception of Fathers Marr and Lahey at the Eucharistic Congress and the attention given Father Lahey in his illness. Manila also scooped the Club world with the organization of a polo team representing Notre Dame in the Islands. Denver ran a record special on the new Zephyr to the N.D.-Northwestern game. New Jersey published a Club paper, periodically, greatly strengthening its always active program. Springfield, Ill. again held its Mothers' Day communion breakfast. Peoria, Ill. held a Novena to the Blessed Virgin in May, for the intention of establishing Catholic principles of peace and justice in a world of unrest. Undergraduate contacts have been more harmonious throughout the year. And the Clubs have continued to participate actively in the work of securing a selected, nationally distributed, student prospect list.

In addition to the above activities of existing Clubs, the following six new Clubs were formed: Central New Jersey; Flint, Mich; Northern Louisiana; Sandusky, Ohio; Tri-State (Ind. Ill. Ky.); West Virginia.

These are inadequate recognitions of the several events, but emphasize the variety of activity and the improving stature.

UNIVERSAL NOTRE DAME NIGHT:

Always suggested by the Club picture, Universal Notre Dame Night broke all records on April 19. The 14th annual observance was keyed by a program featuring Father O'Hara, Elmer Layden, and the Glee Club on the Studebaker NBC hour. And again, the local radio stations in the various parts of the country contributed immeasurably to the success of the Night in the several localities, especially those of the Clubs.

Campus speakers again were in demand. The football movies were taken months ahead. Publicity was plentiful and good. Friends of Notre Dame were introduced to the fellowship of the Notre Dame man. Altogether, the Night expressed in stronger terms than ever its possibilities and the wisdom of its founders.

LIVING ENDOWMENT:

The Association has again included Living Endowment as an active feature of the current year. We have kept it lightly in the picture so that its value and its continuity would not be completely obscured. But at present, it offers a tremendous aid to Notre Dame, in logical return for aid we have enjoyed in recent years. That it would seem practical is indicated by the alumni gifts listed during the year just passed on Father O'Hara's page in the ALUMNUS

Bernard J. Voll	$190
Alumnus	100
Grattan Stanford	100
Harry Cullen	25
Byron Kanaley	20
James Oliver, II.	25
Daniel Verilli	15
Harley McDevitt	5
Louis Thornton	10
John C. Tully	500
C. C. Mitchell	1000
G. A. Farabaugh	100
Alumnus	5

Many of the above gifts were for current needs listed in the ALUMNUS. But the point is that the above gifts, few as they are, represent the purchasing power of an endowment of $41,900 invested at 5%. In addition to the above gifts, the Ryan family also started a Roger Ryan scholarship with a gift of $1,000, and the University received $320,000 from the estate of Frank B. Phillips, and $122,000 from the estate of William P. Breen, both former students of the University.

PROSPECTIVE

STUDENT CONTACTS:

Many alumni, knowing that enrolment in the freshman class in 1937 was capacity, and that figures indicate that enrolment for 1938 will have to be stopped before school opens, have asked about the Association's program for continuing contacts with preparatory schools and prospective students.

Policy, if we are to meet competition, dictates a continuation of the key point in our program from the beginning, namely the effort on the part of the alumni to interest the best boys from the community, who seem likely candidates for Notre Dame. Then we will continue to have on the campus not only representative boys, but boys representative of the 48 States and the countries abroad, from which universal background has sprung much that is traditional and much that is valuable and distinctive in the Notre Dame training and spirit.

PUBLICATIONS:

The Alumni Association has pretty much edited and will publish early this summer for the University two new publications. One is a new and augmented directory of Notre Dame men practicing law. This book contains the names and address of almost 900 lawyers. And in the front will be a number of practical suggestions by which Notre Dame lawyers can render signal service to Notre Dame and to their clients in the disposition of bequests.

The second publication is an illustrated book, Notre Dame Men, similar to the one used so extensively in student contact work during the last three years.

AFFILIATIONS:

William R. Dooley represented the Alumni Association at the annual convention of the American Alumni Council, held at West Point this Spring. The convention of the National Catholic Alumni Federation will be held this coming Fall. Notre Dame has been particularly active in the Chicago chapter of the latter organization.

SPECIAL

FEATURES OF THE YEAR:

A few of the outstanding features of the year have been suggested previously. But there are some which are unique in the year and deserve special mention.

Alumni bookplates were designed for the Association through a contest sponsored by the students of the department of art. Three fine designs are available to alumni for a distinctive bookplate.

The Lay Retreat held on the campus last summer drew heavily from the neighboring Clubs, and set a new record with the attendance of alumni from such distant points as Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Bethlehem, Pa. Continued, growing support of this movement is urged on all alumni.

The second annual Old-Timers reunion, for monogram men from 1900 to 1905 was held on the campus the week-end of the Notre Dame-Northwestern game. It was well attended and established the practice as a fine annual gesture of recognition for the athletes of other years. The Monogram Club, which sponsors the reunion, is planning next Fall's reunion for the men from 1905 to 1910, a brilliant group in the annals of Notre Dame athletic history.

Science alumni enjoyed invitations which many accepted to attend the memorial exercises and the science symposium in honor of Father Julius Nieuwland, held on the campus January 10.

The St. Joseph Valley Club again demonstrated outstanding ability as hosts at the pre-game smokers preceding the home football games. These smokers have become the "homecomings" for out-of-town alumni.

Chicago and Detroit Clubs deserve special mention for the lecture series by Notre Dame faculty members which they sponsored during the winter months.

Similarly New York and Los Angeles are to be commended for their splendid use of the radio in 13-week lecture series in the campaign against Communism.

The "Highlights of 1936" football films sent out by the Association, proved to be more interesting than profitable. The films have been booked as solidly as the express can handle them, but the small fee for their rental has been less diligently handled. Continuation of the pleasant practice is therefore unlikely.

Many alumni aided in the splendid work done by Profs. John M. Cooney and Francis W. Kervick which culminated in the erection of a memorial to the Rev. John Bannister Tabb, priest-poet, at the site of his home in Virginia.

The President and Secretary of the Association of course set a new high in travel, visiting the Alumni Clubs from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It was the strongest step taken in organization work since the Association launched the Alumni Office, and should be productive of great good and much closer relationships. More than 40 of the Clubs were visited by President Hughes, in addition to many non-Club meetings in conjunction with our campaign against Communism.

The Pontiac-sponsored radio program from the campus on March 5, enlisted the co-operation of the Alumni Office and the Clubs, and in turn gave alumni throughout the country an opportunity to hear a half-hour program of entertainment direct from the campus.

The scope and at the same time the intensity of the activities of the Association continues to increase, at a pace which has the personnel jumping through the hoops and which is enlisting more and more the active participation of Club and District as well as national officers.

There were many things during the year. The above are the quickly remembered highlights.

1937 "DOMES"

The Publications Office has available for alumni a limited supply of 1937 Domes. Books will be mailed promptly, as long as the supply lasts, upon receipt of orders with remittances ($5.00 as usual). Requests should be directed to the Board of Publications, Notre Dame, Indiana.

Eighth Annual Club Council Successful

Suggestions After Clubs' Greatest Year Reflect Experience & Progress.

Visits to more than 40 Clubs by the President and Secretary of the Association, and unprecedented activity by all the Clubs, provided the basis for a most interesting discussion at the Eighth Annual Council of Local Alumni Clubs, held in the court room of the Law building on the campus at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, June 5.

A recommendation of President Hughes strongly urged the Clubs to preserve in some form the valuable asset of the influence and contacts of older alumni. The bulk of Club membership is young. Duties of officers, particularly president and secretary, rest more lightly upon the younger members. And it has been, in many instances, at the request of the older members that the offices were filled with young men. But in a serious project, such as the arrangement of meetings which were held in conjunction with the Communism program of the Association, President Hughes found that the contacts and the influence of the older men in securing the cooperation of other community organizations and leaders were essential, in most cases, and saved hours and days of effort for the less established, younger officer, in others. Therefore, President Hughes and the Secretary recommend that, through the honorary presidency, through vice-presidencies, through boards of governors, or through active advisory arrangements of any other sort, the retaining in active participation in Club affairs of some of the older alumni.

A follow-up program of literature from the University to be used by the Clubs and by individual members and alumni generally in capitalizing the progress of the campaign against Communism was reported as planned for the present year. The material will be suitable for dissemination among affiliated organizations in the same interests.

A continued program of student contacts with preparatory schools was suggested by the Alumni Office to be based on the objective of retaining at Notre Dame that geographical distribution of students which has become a distinctive tradition of the University, and preserving in this enrolment the qualities of representative scholarship and leadership which will bring to Notre Dame the best boys from each community.

Better financial outlook for the Clubs was the consensus of opinion, with the continuing of the attention to budget and the more modest scale of operation which are marks of the depression.

Many ideas for Club activities were presented, which will be incorporated in a special bulletin to the Club officers. The Clubs undoubtedly had their most active, and most successful, year. It is now possible to present a balanced program to the membership of even the smaller units, and to advance the interests of the Club and the University in every Club community.

SO LONG, MARY

Alumni who have had occasion to visit the Alumni Office in recent years learned to appreciate the pleasant efficiency of Mary Cass, who last year deviated from her career to become Mrs. Robert Cahill ('34). Now, after a year of grace in her former role, the young lady is severing what has been, from the Alumni Office standpoint, a most happy relationship, to devote her full time to her home. Ability, attractiveness and a uniformly fine disposition are separately at a premium. Collectively, they represent a picture which will make even the alumnus who is a total stranger to the Office, join the rest of the Office force in a sincerely regretful So Long, Mary. And with it all, the best wishes for continued happiness.

STAMP COLLECTION DISPLAYED

"A parade of stamps from 1835 to 1937" has been assembled at Notre Dame, a collection of stamps with an estimated value of $15,000. Assembled by Rev. Aloysius Dayberry, C.S.C., it was on public display in the University art galleries from May 15 to June 7, and will be on display again from July 1 to August 5. Father Dayberry began his collection as a boy and has turned over his stamps, covers and rare envelopes to the University.

In addition to the major American exhibit, there is a display of Vatican City stamps, including all issues from the founding of the Vatican City postoffice in 1928.

Brother Alexander and the Brothers

Tribute Is Given to Devotion and Zeal of Holy Cross Brothers

By Byron V. Kanaley, '04

*"To your name, if I wrote on brass,
I could add nothing; it has been already written higher than I could dream to reach. * * * it is not as the writer who brings you his work, but as the friend who would remind you of his affection."*

—ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

My knowledge of Notre Dame goes back now nearly 40 years and naturally my affection the same space of time. As I am writing this brief tribute to one of the great figures in the history of Notre Dame my mind naturally wanders here and there in the scenes of those years ago and I muse reminiscently and with devotion on names and faces and personalities long absent, but long remembered. And none arise before me in the doing of this pleasant duty with more clearness than the humble, self-effacing, stalwart leader of men and boys, who for over 50 years was part of the life and development of our great University — who was born Charles Smith and who lived to us Brother Alexander.

How well I remember as a boy of 18 in my first year the tall, slightly bent, strong figure with the kindly understanding face, the characteristic aquiline nose, piercing eyes and vigorous gray hair—striding with purposeful step across St. Edward's campus — the respected, venerated and beloved Brother Alexander.

Have you ever stopped to consider how many lives a life such as his has influenced? For over 40 years the man of whom I write taught, inspired, disciplined, and led in ever upward paths hundreds of boys who I daresay many, many times in the doubtful moments of life were helped over many a rocky place, even if subconsciously, by what Brother Alexander gave to them in old St. Edward's.

In a broader sense, Brother Alexander represents one of the finest facts of the University's history—namely, the contribution of the Brothers of Holy Cross to the foundation and the upbuilding of Notre Dame.

Remember, that on that cold, bleak, wintry day of Nov. 26, 1842, after a journey of 11 days through snow and ice and virgin forest, on foot, from near Vincennes, Ind., there stood where "Old College" now stands, six men who founded on that spot this University—five Brothers of Holy Cross and Father Sorin. What a day that is to remember!

As the Brothers of Holy Cross were present at the birth of this University, so they have been in unflagging zeal and devotion with her in her struggles and growth and accomplishment through the high 100 years since. As the years pass, I am impressed more and more with the ever new story of the piety of these men, the purposeful intelligence, the steady endeavour, the deep affection of the Brothers of Holy Cross for Notre Dame.

I have heard what I consider the finest tributes to anyone connected with the life of our University paid by every president of my time from Father Morrissey to Father O'Hara, paid to the Brothers of Holy Cross.

And I am content if these few words of mine reach the men of my time and serve to awaken and kindle again in the minds and hearts of those of my generation the ever wonderfully inspiring and mellow memories of the good Brothers, who with their predecessors and successors, have done so much to make possible what those before us, and since, have enjoyed as a bounteous heritage. I shall mention only a few that come to me as I write, Bruno who showed us "how fields are won," gentle Brother Cyprian, saintly Brother Leander, charming Brother Urban, Brother Basil, the musical genius, immortalized by the late Father Charles O'Donnell in "A Dead Musician," friendly Brother Florian, and who of us will ever forget trying to wheedle a dollar from Brother Paul, the University treasurer, or the kindly and wise advice of Brother Alphonsus who knew the gentle voice of birds as well as he knew the hearts of boys?

Brother Leo and his farm, Brother Leopold and his "lemonade and fours," Brother Hugh and his discipline, stern but just, Brother Lawrence and his bicycle, Brother "Hi," Brother Dominic of the Community House—well, I must stop now, but I should dearly like to name them all—for each and every Brother of Holy Cross, living and dead, richly deserves the naming in the reading of any scroll that perpetuates and immortalizes the toilsome building of our beloved University.

Maurice Francis Egan phrased it well when he said—they (the Brothers) "Contributed that spirit of cheerfulness, of obedience, of energy, of unostentatious spirituality, of peace and of devotion to the cause of Christian education" and "the Brother at Notre Dame, to my mind, solved the great problem which the Emersons, the Hawthornes and the Danas have tried in vain to solve; he has found how to lose himself in work for God, and to bear the lily of purity that he may gain the palm of triumph in the end."

I started to write of Brother Alexander—I find I have written of the Brotherhood—It is high impossible to write of a sun without writing of the firmament. And indeed they, and he, are in wondrous company.

MONOGRAM CLUB ELECTS

Don Hamilton, '12, Columbus, Ohio, was elected president of the Monogram Club at the annual meeting on Sunday, June 6. Don succeeded Fred Steers, '11, of Chicago.

Bill Sheehan, '25, South Bend, was named vice-president, and Clarence (Chick to you) Bader, '19, Gary, Indiana, secretary-treasurer. Chosen as directors for one year were Tom Quigley, '12, of Chicago, and Stanley Cofall, '17, Cleveland.

Professor Myers Dies

The brilliant and heroic Fred Myers, 45 years old, professor of English, died in St. Joseph's Hospital, South Bend, on June 3 after a long illness.

Funeral services were in Holy Cross church, South Bend, with Rev. Philip Beaghan, C.S.C., the pastor, as celebrant of the Mass, assisted by Rev. J. Leonard Carrico, C.S.C., director of studies, and Rev. Leo L. Ward, C.S.C., head of the English Department. Rev. Francis J. Weninger, C.S.C., was master of ceremonies, and Rev. Eugene P. Burke, C.S.C. preached the funeral sermon. The University Choir of Moreau Seminary provided the music.

Pallbearers were Dean Thomas F. Konop, of the Law School, and Professors Pedro deLandero, Andrew Smithberger, David Campbell, Raymond V. Pence and Thomas J. Barry. Burial was in Highland Cemetery, South Bend.

Professor Myers had been a member of the regular Notre Dame faculty since 1932 and a member of the Summer School faculty since 1926. A graduate of the University of Indiana, Professor Myers had taken graduate work at Indiana, Harvard, and Illinois. He came to Notre Dame from a teaching post in the United States Naval Academy. He served in the World War and participated in many of the most important battles.

Surviving Professor Myers are Mrs. Myers, six children, his mother, five brothers and five sisters.

LAYMEN'S RETREAT

The nineteenth annual Laymen's Retreat will be held at Notre Dame from Thursday evening, August 5, to Sunday morning, August 8, according to the announcements of Rev. Patrick Dolan, C.S.C., '15, the director. Alumni are invited and urged, as always, to participate.

To cover the expense of eight meals in the Dining Hall, room, service and other features of the Retreat, the modest stipend of only ten dollars is asked. Transportation costs can, and generally are, much reduced by the organization of auto parties from the same communities.

Those who look forward to the combining of three peaceful days in the old campus surroundings with a glorious religious experience are requested to write at once to Father Dolan, Notre Dame, Indiana, for room reservations. Increasingly popular, the Retreat promises to keep its place as the leader of men's retreats in the country.

Catholic Lawyers' Guild Progresses

Leo J. Hassenauer, '20, Chicago, One of the Founders

The Catholic Lawyers' Guild, founded a year ago under the direction of Very Rev. Msgr. Joseph A. Morrison, Rev. Joseph V. Dailey and Leo J. Hassenauer, '20, former first assistant United State district attorney, has received numerous congratulatory messages from members of the Kings Bench, in London, as well as from judges of our Federal and State courts encouraging the movement and urging a more active part in the spiritual, fraternal and national life of Catholic members of the bench and bar.

The purpose of the Guild, as stated by Mr. Hassenauer, is to provide a closer spiritual and fraternal relationship among the Catholic members of the bench and bar and that with the enunciation of the principles for which the Guild stands such members will become better lawyers by becoming better Catholics.

Requests have been received by Mr. Hassenauer, the founder of the Guild in Chicago, from numerous members of the bar in other cities inquiring about the formation of similar Guilds. "The only way to satisfy these requests" said Mr. Hassenauer, "is to make this a national movement." Numerous requests to that extent have been received, he stated.

The Guild recognizes that the law is indeed in a great measure a Catholic heritage. The fundamental principles are the eternal principles of Catholic morality as taught by Saint Thomas Aquinas. Its traditions are the concepts of Justice and Charity that to each man shall be rendered justice according to his due and the protection of every individual in his natural rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; the protection of one's property rights as announced in the Encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII and Pope Pius XI and to guard these sacred rights against unjust aggression. The Guild is a definite step ahead in preserving and administering justice in providing each member with that true knowledge which he should bring to bear upon all the problems in his professional life.

FRED SNITE RETURNS

Notre Dame men joined in a particular way in rejoicing over the safe return to Chicago of Fred Snite, '33, after his perilous journey from China in an "iron lung." The class of '32, of which Fred was really a member, sent him to China from its five-year reunion a special message of prayers and cheer.

The details of Fred's daring trip have been too well made known by newspapers and other journals to need repeating here. The lesson of inspired courage can always bear repetition, however, and Notre Dame men can get that lesson from Fred.

HONORARY DEGREES—1937

Honorary degrees of doctor of law were awarded at the 1937 Commencement to Most Rev. Karl J. Alter, D.D., bishop of Toledo, who delivered the Baccalaureate Sermon; to William S. Calcott, Wilmington, Delaware, director of the Jackson Research Laboratories of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co.; to Joseph P. Grace, chairman of the board of the W. R. Grace Steamship Company. Mr. Grace was absent from the Commencement because of the serious illness of his wife.

The citations for the honorary degrees were as follows:

On a gifted prelate, educator, and Christian sociologist, whose years have been devoted very effectively to the welfare of his native diocese, a churchman known not only for his zealous ministry but also for his achievement as first director of Catholic Charities in the Diocese of Toledo, organizer of the Toledo Catholic Charities Corporation, director of the National School of Social Service at the Catholic University, and chairman of the Speakers' Commission for the Catholic Hour—the Most Reverend Karl J. Alter, Bishop of Toledo.

On a modest man of science, who has been for years the successful director of one of the most important laboratories of scientific research in the chemical industries of the United States, permanently endeared to Notre Dame as friend and associate of our lamented Father Nieuwland in the researches of which the invention of synthetic rubber was one of the most important results—William Stansfield Calcott, of Wilmington, Delaware.

IN ABSENTIA, on a gentleman in international commerce, who has been a patriotic pioneer in the establishment and development of the present communications and trade relations between the United States and the countries of South America, and who by valuable counsel has been for years a gracious benefactor of the Department of Foreign Commerce here—Joseph Peter Grace, of New York City.

Football Ticket Facts for 1937

Alumni Again Urged to Place Orders Early

It is very important for alumni to know these facts which the ALUMNUS has secured from the Athletic Association:

1. Ticket applications for the 1937 football games will be mailed July 20. SALE OF TICKETS OPENS AUGUST 1.

2. They will be mailed to all alumni on the ALUMNUS mailing list, at the address being used on that list. If you do not receive your blanks by August 1, advise the Alumni Office promptly.

3. They are printed, ALUMNI across one end, expressly for alumni, and are the only blanks received which get alumni preference. Use them for your application.

4. Alumni whose dues for 1937-38 (payable as of June 1, 1937) are paid, will receive preference in the allotment of tickets until September 1, OR UNTIL ALL TICKETS HAVE BEEN SOLD FOR A GIVEN GAME. (It is impossible to hold an indefinite section for alumni and at the same time reject applications from other interested patrons. But alumni preference will be extended to dues-paid alumni until September 1 or while the sale is open.)

5. With at least two games promising a sell-out before the season opens, alumni desiring preference are urged to apply for their alumni allotment as soon as the blanks are received.

6. Alumni may have general public application blanks upon request, or may send in the names of others desiring tickets, and blanks will be mailed to them for one or more games from the Athletic Office. (The practice has saved many alumni time, money and general grief.)

7. Season ticket blanks for the home games have been mailed to alumni in the immediate area. Any others interested may secure the information by writing at once to the Athletic Association.

PRESIDENT HUGHES' ADDRESS

sell and Faithful Navigator Metzger, together with Rev. Matthew J. Lawlor, chaplain of the Knights and himself a popular and militant crusader in Catholic principles, comprised a most able group. Many of the alumni of Utica gathered after the meeting for a short session before our train time, led by the Hitzelbergers, father and son, Doc Kelley, Frank Donalty, Vin Fletcher, et al.

Tribute to Club Officers

When it is realized that during the year we held some forty meetings in the principal cities of the United States, practically all under the auspices of the various Notre Dame clubs of those cities, it must be appreciated that I have not the opportunity here to pay to the fine, able, aggressive officers of all those clubs the real tribute and praise which they so richly deserve. I wish to say to them, however, we have not overlooked our duties in reporting regularly their loyalty and their achievements on behalf of Notre Dame to Father O'Hara and I propose to leave as a part of the official records of the Alumni Association a full, detailed account of the accomplishments of all these clubs and of the men who so ably directed their activities.

The Notre Dame Spirit

And now I shall pay final tribute, and I assure you it is from my heart, to one who has been my constant guide and counselor and associate in every activity of which I was a part during this past year—I express my great personal obligation to James E. Armstrong, executive secretary of the National Alumni Association. Father O'Hara in his utmost desire to cooperate with me to the fullest extent permitted me to have Jim with me at every meeting that we held this year, and we traveled together from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and I want to say to Father O'Hara and I want to say to the Alumni Association of Notre Dame that there is no Notre Dame man more true, loyal or more solicitous for the welfare and future of Notre Dame than is my good friend and your good friend, Jim Armstrong.

I now bid you all, Adieu. I go back into the ranks cheerfully, for I want to tell you truthfully that I am most happy when I am there. Due to the great energy and the marvelous loyalty of hundreds and hundreds of Notre Dame men whom I have met this year I have learned anew the true definition of unselfish service. I now know and appreciate and shall always treasure the real meaning of the Notre Dame Spirit.

ATHLETICS » » »

BY JOSEPH S. PETRITZ, '32
Director of Athletic Publicity

Last year at this time we told you about how Notre Dame athletes had compiled the most successful winning percentage in dual competition in Notre Dame history. No one expected the boys of 1936-37 to repeat what with graduation losses practically wiping out most of the teams. They didn't repeat, but the year was one of which alumni, students, coaches, or players need not be ashamed.

The basketball team held its own, winning 20 out of 23, to become the unofficial national champion and to set itself up as perhaps the greatest quintet in Notre Dame history. The football team slipped only slightly, losing one more game than it did in 1935, when a senior team won 7, lost 1, and tied 1.

The track team, undefeated in 1936 had a losing season, but it might have been a winning one except for the fact that at no time did Coach John Nicholson have full strength available. At that, Notre Dame won the indoor Central Intercollegiate conference title, and took third in the outdoor meet. The Irish were fourth outdoors last year.

Coach Jake Kline placed a brand new team on the field in baseball, having lost seven of his eight 1936 regulars, excluding pitchers, and he came through with a .647 season.

The golfers produced a .778 season, which is good enough considering everything, but it is still the worst season in percentages in Notre Dame golf history. This year's team couldn't help it, of course, that previous teams had been better, or that Purdue and Wisconsin both had their hottest rounds of the year to win.

The tennis team improved to the extent of one added victory over last year. But more than that, the Irish looked much better in defeat with a sophomore-junior team than they have for several years. When Michigan State won an 8 to 1 decision, for example, the Irish forced them to three sets in seven matches, taking the first set in five matches.

The fencing team, after two undefeated years, won five, lost 3, and experienced its only tie in the brief history of the sport on the campus.

The percentages of the teams follow:

	W	L	T	Pct.
Basketball	20	3	0	.870
Golf	7	2	2	.778
Football	6	2	1	.750
Baseball	11	6	0	.647

1937 SCHEDULE

Since football, basketball, and fencing have been covered in previous issues, we shall refer to them only briefly before getting down to a clean-up review of the other sports.

FOOTBALL

The footballers elected Joe Zwiers, right end from Grand Rapids, Mich., captain for 1937. Prospects, despite the loss of eight regulars by graduation, are slightly better than they were last year at this time. This slight ray of hope is largely offset by the increased stiffness of the schedule. The 1936 record follows: (Elsewhere you will find an important note about tickets.)

Ray Meyer was re-elected, and he will lead, from his forward position, a group containing such stars as Paul Nowak and Johnny Moir, all-American center and forward, respectively; Tommy Wukovits, Earl Brown, Ed Sadowski, and Mike Crowe.

FENCING

The fencers lost Capt. Telmo de Landero and John McAuliffe by graduation. Captain-Elect Jack Zerbst, Bob Seco, and Salvatore Scarlatta form the nucleus of the 1938 team. In addition to the record, which follows, the Irish took second in the middle-western foils championship of the Amateur Fencers League of America. Hermanson's Fencing club of Chicago took first honors. The Irish beat out Chicago, Northwestern, the Lake Shore A.C., and the Edgewater A.C.

TRACK

A look at the track record shows that the only meet in which Notre Dame was really outclassed was the first of the indoor season with Indiana. Drake won by four points while Dan Gibbs, star Irish pole vaulter, was nursing a pulled muscle. Harold Langton, another vaulter, who did 13 ft. 3 inches the next week, was unable to better 12 feet against the Bulldogs.

The Irish completed their meet with Pittsburgh in a 63-all tie, when Coach Nicholson asked for a mile relay to settle the issue one way or the other. He did this knowing Pitt, with Art Thomas and Johnny Woodruff available, would probably win. And Pitt did win, thanks to Nick's sportsmanship and his dissatisfaction with ties in general. Had Greg Rice, sophomore mile sensation, not been laid up with a throat infection, had Eddie Boyle not fouled by half an inch in what would have been the winning broad jump, and had Adam Wolf, sophomore sprinter, come into the shape he showed later, the Irish would have won comfortably without the necessity of a relay being run.

With Bill Mahoney out of the picture for the entire outdoor season, Notre Dame was seriously handicapped against Pitt, Ohio State, and Michigan State. Ohio State slammed both hurdle races and the quarter mile, Rice showed he was still not ready by taking second in the mile. And that was the meet.

The Michigan State dual was the hardest to lose, however, for the margin was only two points. Gibbs, who had been scoring 10 and 11 points a meet, suffered a sprained ankle when he slid into the muddy broad jump take-off, and that put him out of this event and out of the javelin throw, although he had already won the pole vault. There were plenty of other places Notre Dame could have won, but it was one of those days and one of those seasons.

The Irish might conceivably have won the state meet a week later with everyone in shape, and everyone coming through with his best performance. Bill Clifford pulled a muscle to take second in the 100 behind Bob Collier of Indiana who won in 9.6 seconds, a meet record, and Clifford was unable to come up for the 220.

Mahoney was unable to do anything with his bad leg in the hurdles, Rice ran 4:13 in the mile, which was good enough only for third, although it tied the previous meet record. Steve Szumachowski, holder of the Notre Dame outdoor two-mile mark, was unable to place in his event. Indiana's one-two in the pole vault, when Gibbs wasn't able to get off the ground with his bad ankle, marked the biggest swing in points from the dopesters' pre-meet figures. The presence of schools other than Indiana and Notre Dame, the summary shows hurt Notre Dame in the field events, but did not affect Indiana in the running events.

So far this has been pretty much of a negative story, telling of the factors which entered into Notre Dame's defeats. The scores and list of records made during the season tell the other side of the story. Capt. Charles (Bucky) Jordan, John Cavanagh, Jim Parsons, Eddie Boyle, Arch Gott, and John Levicki—all valuable men but not irreplaceable—have been graduate. The rest are back, plus promising freshman prospects in the hurdles and high jump, two blanks during most of the past season. Bill Mahoney, hurdler from Phoenix, Arizona, has been named captain.

The record:

TRACK MEET RECORDS ESTABLISHED

Marquette indoor—Levicki 46:3¼ in shot put; Mahoney—6.2 in 45-yard highs (first time run); Mahoney—5.9 in 45-yard lows (first time run); 12-lap relay—2:58.3 (first time run).

Indiana indoor—Langton 12:6 (tied meet record).

C.I.C. indoor—Rice 4:16.2 in mile run (also gymnasium and C. I. C. indoor record).

Pittsburgh outdoor—Faymonville 146:7 in discus; Clifford 9:7 in 100-yard dash; Szumachowski 9:43 in 2-mile; Gibbs 12:6 (ties pole vault record).

Navy outdoor—Gott 4:24 in mile; Clifford 9.6 in 100-yard dash (tied meet and all-time Notre Dame record); Szumachowski—9:36.2 in two-mile (also Notre Dame outdoor record); Parsons—50 seconds in 440 (tied meet record); Gibbs—13 feet in pole vault (tied meet and Cartier field record); Faymonville—149:4½ in discus (also Notre Dame outdoor and field record).

Ohio State outdoor—Faymonville 155:4½ in discus (also Notre Dame all-time record); Szumachowski—9:33.3 in two-mile (also Notre Dame outdoor record); Gibbs 13:6 (tied meet record in pole vault).

Michigan State outdoor—Gibbs 13 feet in pole vault (tied meet record); Faymonville—140:7 in discus.

Indiana State meet—Faymonville 150:3 in discus (also Cartier field record).

Although the Notre Dame outdoor mile mark is 4:21.4, set by Judge in 1926, Rice ran 4:13 for third in the state meet and 4:15 for third in the C.I.C. outdoor meet, unofficially. Szumachowski holds the all-time Notre Dame outdoor 2-mile mark of 9:33.3 in the C.I.C. meet, Rice ran 9:24.3 for sixth, and Szumachowski ran 9:25.5 for eighth, both marks being unofficial and thus not records.

Only three Cartier field records, as they now stand, were set before 1936, and one of these has been tied. The oldest is Gene Oberst's 202:7 in the javelin throw (1924). Ralph Johnston's pole vault mark of 13 feet (1931) was tied this year by Gibbs. Don Elser set the shot put record of 51 feet ½ inch in 1935.

Jesse Owens of Ohio State set field records of 9.5 in the century, 20.5 in the furlong, and 24:10½ in the broad jump in 1936. His teammate, Walker, set a high jump mark of 6:7½ the same day. Indiana took care of every field record from 440 yards to two miles in the State meet of this year: Mal Hicks, 48.7 in the quarter; Mel Trutt, 1:54 in the half; Jimmy Smith 4:11 in the mile; Don Lash, 9:17.5 in the two-mile; and the Hoosier relay team clipped one-tenth second from the mile relay mark in 3:18.7.

Faymonville of Notre Dame set his discus mark of 150:3 the same day, while Lawrence Holmes of Butler was setting a field record of 14.7 in the high hurdles. Ken Ryden of Pitt set a field mark of 23.9 seconds in the 220-yard lows in the 1937 dual meet.

And for that matter, 10 of the 15 state meet records were set in the past three years. The oldest mark is Bryce Beecher's pole vault mark of 13:5½, set in 1931 for Indiana U.

BASEBALL

The student manager in charge of batting averages and such is still to be heard from, so we can't give you final figures on individuals in baseball. The record shows that the team slumped twice each time to the extent of three games, and all the rest (11) were victories. Joe O'Neill, third baseman, and Oscar Rydell, pitcher, are the only regulars lost by graduation.

Chuck (Browser) Borowski of South Bend, leading hitter, base-stealer, and star center fielder, has been elected to succeed Ennio Arboit, pitcher, who did yeoman's work with a sore arm this spring. Arboit will be back. Reinforcements from the freshman team for the 1938 season indicate that Coach Jake Kline will have one of the strongest teams in the Middle West.

At that the boys closed the season in a blaze of glory for the edification of the Commencement crowd. Borowski, after driving in the tying run against Iowa, stood on third base with two down in the last of the ninth. Having slipped up by running half way home on a fly ball before tagging third. He decided to make up for this mental lapse. So he stole home. He had it stolen when Joe O'Neill, seeing him coming, automatically bunted. The bunt was almost disastrous, being of the pop-up variety, but it dropped safely, and O'Neill made first, which was all that was necessary, for the 3 to 2 Commencement finish.

GOLF

The golfers, as related, ran into a lot of tough luck, but still came up with a .778 season. Washington U. of St. Louis supplied the tip-off by tying Notre Dame in its opening match, 9 to 9. Then Purdue had by far its hottest day of the year to win a 13 to 5 decision—this was the worst beating ever taken by Notre Dame in golf. Later Purdue lost a 10 to 8 match to Indiana, and Notre Dame ran away with the Hoosiers in the State tournament.

Wisconsin, already defeated 19½ to 7½, visited the William J. Burke course and proceeded to burn it up, winning 14 to 13. Bowden Davis of the Badgers set an amateur course record of 68, four under par, to win his match with Capt. Lou Fehlig, and he set the pace for the rest of the team. A well-balanced Illinois team gained a tie with the Irish in the final match of the season.

Tom Sheehan, Jr., of Notre Dame, who had not been named on the Irish foursome for the team reckonings, won the state individual title with 299 for 72 holes. The team scored 1218 to Indiana's 1272 for the team championship.

The Rev. George L. Holderith, C.S.C., coach of the golfers, has arranged for a dual match with Yale at Pittsburgh, June 26, two days before the National Intercollegiate opens. The Irish sextet for the nationals and the Yale match will include Capt. Lou Fehlig, Captain-Elect Gene Milbourn, Al Mailhes, Billy Castleman, Bud Donovan, and Tom Sheehan. Fehlig is the only senior in this group.

TENNIS

The tennis year, as reported, not only showed an improvement over last season, but it held out great hopes for next year. Ed Kilrain, hard fighting Junior, was named captain to succeed "Wild Bill" Fallon. The addition of a couple of very promising Sophomores to the fine returning nucleus gives Coach Pedro de Landero hope of the first better-than-500-season in several years.

Varsity Wins O'Brien Game

Old Timers Display Fine Defensive Skill.

Of more interest to alumni than the final result of the Johnny O'Brien Memorial football game at the stadium, May 2, are three other factors: size of the crowd, the appearance of both the old grads and the 1937 varsity.

The crowd came up to highest expectations, totaling some 10,000. It's hard to say whether the varsity was disappointing, or the Old Timers were above all pre-game estimates. At any rate, all the varsity could get in 60 minutes were seven points, and four first downs.

The touchdown came after Mario (Motts) Tonelli, "Pony Express" backfield fullback, had broken off his tackle and run about 10 yards. He tossed a lateral to Nevin (Bunny) McCormick, right halfback, who dodged and shifted his way to the goal line with the help of some fine downfield blocking. It was a total gain of 33 yards. Andy Puplis kicked the extra point from placement.

McCormick took Larry Danbom's ensuing kickoff on his five yard line and broke into the clear, running to the Old Timers' 46 before Wally Fromhart, 1935 all-Western quarterback, nailed him with a headon tackle down around the heels. The varsity at this point put on its only sustained drive of the afternoon to press to the five-yard line. Puplis scored, but the play was called back because of holding, and Bill Shakespeare, 1935 all-American, kicked the alumni out of danger.

Old Timers Didn't Threaten

The Old Timers couldn't do a great deal for themselves, never threatening seriously, but they played a defensive game which showed that they had forgotten none of the tricks that won them the all-Western and all-American mention as many as nine years ago. The great majority of those who were able to return for the game have not been in a football uniform since they hung up the mole-skin at the end of their collegiate careers.

But to see Bert Metzger, 154-pound watch-charm guard who sold some 3,000 tickets for the game himself, mow down a varsity back behind the line of scrimmage with a daring shoestring tackle; to see Ed Krause, 1933 all-Western tackle, Capt. Fred Miller, of the 1928 team, and Joe Kurth, 1931 and 1932 all-American, pile up one varsity play after another, made one wonder why the 1937 crop, consisting of lads around 19 and 20 years of age who have been playing football daily for a month, were unable to make a more impressive showing.

One explanation is, of course, that the Old Timers, in most cases the top men of their day at their positions, knew their defensive assignments and played somewhat mechanically in executing these assignments. And we do not mean by this that they played woodenly, for they were hitting in there with all the zeal and zest of old. In the second place, Coach Elmer Layden limited his varsity plays to about six or seven, most of them of a simple variety not intended to deceive the Old Timers. But each of these was a potential touchdown, if blocking assignments had been perfectly executed, and none of them went for touchdowns, McCormick making his on a lateral pass. And that didn't come until the fourth quarter, after the returning stars had played some 20 or 25 minutes.

Many Former Stars Play

graduating 1936 stars: Lou Hickey, left end; Bill Steinkemper, left tackle; Joe McMahon, left guard; Fred Mundee, center; Elmer Zenner, right guard; Frank Kopeczak and Art Cronin, right tackle; Harry Marr, right end; Bill Bruno and Bunny Megin, quarterbacks; Bob Wilke, Bill Shakespeare, and Vic Wojcihowski, half-backs; and Johnny Schulze, fullback.

In addition Regis McNamara, 1929 tackle; Tony Mazziotti, 1935 half-back; Frank Leahy, 1929 tackle; Paul Winsoeur, 1936 center; Chuck Hafron, 1933 end; Frank Kerjes, 1931 guard; Joe Schilling, 1936 tackle; Bill McCarthy, 1936 tackle; and Jim Hack, 1936 guard, got into the action.

Bill Blake, Jay Wyatt, John O'Donnell, and Frank Hogan contributed their services as officials.

Many of O'Brien's teammates who were unable to return for the game bought blocks of tickets.

'37 ALUMNI GOLF CHAMP

Harrison Joseph Pierce, '37, won the annual alumni golf championship on June 5, with a score of 79 over the William J. Burke-University 18-hole course. Twenty-eight alumni officially entered the tournament. The play on the course, Father George Holderith reports, the heaviest of any Commencement since the course was completed in September, 1929.

MOLLER WINS IN ILLINOIS

Larry Moller, '31, Quincy, Ill., who pioneered in Notre Dame's intercollegiate golf competition in 1930 as captain, has added his second Illinois State amateur title to his growing list of victories. A 9 to 8 victory over the favorite, Sid Richardson, Northwestern captain and Big 10 champion, turned the trick after Moller had eliminated Wilbur Kokes, the defending champion in the opening round, and Bill Kostecky of Northwestern in the semi-finals. Finishing the first nine all even with Richardson, Moller shot four consecutive threes, three of them birdies, to take a four-up lead. He finished the second nine in 35, the best round of the tournament, and ended it on the 10th hole of the afternoon round with a par four.

While in school, Moller was medalist in the 1930 national intercollegiate tournament, losing in the finals to George Dunlap of Princeton after being struck by lightning during the last 18 holes. He won the Illinois amateur title in 1934.

John Banks, 1935 captain, and Tom Sheehan, Jr., sophomore star of the present season, Indiana collegiate champion, qualified for the tournament, Banks surviving the first round before losing to Gus Moreland of Peoria, Walker Cup star.

West Catholic Wins

Takes Fourth Prep Track Meet at N.D.

A record-breaking entry list of more than 300 athletes from 21 schools tried without success to cut the string of victories West Catholic high of Philadelphia has woven in the National Catholic Interscholastic track and field meet, June 4 and 5.

Northeast Catholic of Philadelphia came closest, going into the relay in a tie with West high, at 31½ points. The latter, however, won the relay for its fourth straight team victory while Northeast failed to place. The huge entry list gave the field balance it has not had to as great an extent during the first three years. And this factor of balance cut down West Catholic's total from 56½ last year to 36½ this year.

Three meet records were set and another was tied, although it rained intermittently throughout the Saturday afternoon finals. Following are the final team standings:

West Catholic, Philadelphia	36½
Northeast Catholic, Philadelphia	31½

Rice Wins Collegiate Two-Mile Race

Greg Rice, the littlest man running distance races in these United States, brought Notre Dame a national championship and established a new National Collegiate A.A. record, June 19 at Berkeley, California, when he defeated a classy field in the two-mile in 9 minutes 14.2 seconds. This also stands as an all-time Notre Dame outdoor record, bettering the official mark of 9:33.3 made by Steve Szumachowski, Sophomore, this Spring, and the unofficial 9:24 Rice ran in the C.I.C. meet June 4 for sixth place.

It was the second time in his life Rice had run the two-mile in competition. Coach John Nicholson had spent most of the Spring trying to convince the spunky little Missoula, Montana, runner that he was a better two-miler than a miler, even though he had run a 4:16.2 mile indoor and a 4:15 outdoor. Rice performed his record-breaking feat after finishing a good fourth in the mile run, won by Charles Fenske of Wisconsin in 4:13.9, with Smith and Trutt of Indiana second and third.

Bud Faymonville, Irish Sophomore, took sixth in the discus throw at 148 feet 5 inches, an improvement of two feet over his qualifying mark. Rice's

GREG RICE
Big Little Man

14 points and Faymonville's one point gave the Irish a total of 15 for a two-man team, just one point behind Michigan's 15-man team which won the Big 10 title. The Irish were ninth in the team standings in a field of 40 teams.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

man of the Board of Directors of the Commonwealth Edison Company, the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and the People's Gas, Light and Coke company and former chairman of the board of Marshall Field and Company; Mr. W. B. Traynor, Treasurer of Swift and Company; Mr. James E. Gorman, former president and now one of the trustees of the Rock Island Lines; Mr. Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the board of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company; and many, many others, including Chicago's mayor, Edward J. Kelly.

Recently I was talking with George A. Martin, who like myself, is a director of one of the packing companies of Chicago, and President of the Sherwin-Williams company, one of America's largest manufacturing companies—a man recognized as one of America's greatest executives. We were reminiscing about Jim Gorman, who I have just mentioned, and who is, incidentally, probably the best loved individual in the transportation field. Mr. Martin told me that he and Mr. Gorman, and the late R. J. Collins, were born on O'Brien Street, on Chicago's West Side. His first job was opening the door of a refrigerator in one of the packing houses of Chicago's stockyards. Today he is the president of one of the greatest corporations in the world. He takes pleasure in telling one that if he, Jim Gorman and Dick Collins had taken the left road, instead of the right, they would have gone nowhere.

Door Is Wide Open

To the youth of today, the door is wide open into the foyer of the Golden Age of American Business—the next few years. None are excluded but only those who see with the Inner Eye of the Soul which men call Courageous Vision will win the greater rewards of this Decisive Decade.

There is no distinction in business as to race, or creed, or social position. A man may be a Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant—merit and the will to do are all that count. Nevertheless the very fact that you go into the world as graduates of a Catholic University gives you a distinct advantage coupled with a grave responsibility. All of your schooling, all of your training has been based upon the strict principles of honesty and integrity. And while, unfortunately, we cannot truthfully maintain that all Catholics are honest—nor would we wish to imply that non-Catholics are less honest—it does very definitely mean that the world expects Catholic men, educated in the Catholic tradition, to be absolutely honest in word, in deed, in thought. Have in mind your own desire to get ahead, but by all means to get ahead honorably. Never allow the spirit of Notre Dame to leave you—always remember that you carry the flag of your university into the world and that flag cannot and must not be lowered under any circumstances.

Anything I have said that refers particularly to Catholics must not be considered by those of you who are not of this faith as indicating a lack of sympathy on my part to other groups or creeds. I have never permitted the fact that I am a Catholic to color my reactions in forming my estimates of other people. In our organization, while we have a number of Catholics and Jews, the majority of our employees are Protestant and I firmly believe that they would all tell you that we assume that "A man's a man for a' that." It is the man, his principles and innate character which form the basis of judgment for us, and for any right thinking management.

Remember Sacrifices

If we hark back to my own youthful days and the early youth of you boys—especially those of you whose fathers and mothers may have been forced to strain their financial resources to give you an education—we can never lose sight of the sacrifices that parents have made for us. If ever you are tempted to depart from the straight and narrow path to gain a temporary advantage or social position, remember Notre Dame, and, above all, remember your father and your mother. Allow no one to beguile you into believing that social prestige—especially for those entering the professions—will carry you through. Your degree carries with it a hallmark of sterling quality but it can mean nothing if you fail to indicate by your work and your character that you are worthy of your degree and the acclaim of your parents.

Working conditions have improved to a vast extent since I was a boy. It was a common thing for me to work twelve to fourteen hours a day. I recently enjoyed reading a set of rules that were said to have been developed by the founders of one of the largest, most honorable and well managed department stores in Chicago when that store was established in a small town in Illinois more than 80 years ago. Just imagine anyone being asked today to observe the following rules.

"Store must be open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. the year round.

"Store must be swept; counters, base shelves and showcases dusted; lamps trimmed, filled and chimneys cleaned; pens made; doors and windows opened; a pail of water, also a bucket of coal brought in before breakfast (if there is time to do so) and attend to customers who call.

"Store must not be opened on the Sabbath unless necessary, and then only for a few minutes.

"The employee who is in the habit of smoking Spanish cigars, being shaved at the barber's, going to dances and other places of amusement, will surely give his employer reason to be suspicious of his integrity and honesty.

"Each employee must not pay less than $5.00 per year to the Church and must attend Sunday School regularly.

"Men employees are given one evening a week for courting and two if they go to prayer meeting.

"After 14 hours of work in the store, the leisure time should be spent most in reading."

Those of you who may be inclined to consider an eight hour day too long, may find food for thought in considering the hours your forebears casually accepted some 80 years ago. Those of us who might be inclined to look back upon these rules in a humorous light cannot fail to realize that business today offers a far more enticing opportunity to men of your generation—an opportunity of which young men of foresight and vision will be quick to take advantage.

Commencement Is a Beginning

And so I repeat—Commencement for the young man who typifies the spirit of Notre Dame is a thrilling and significant occasion. Today, with your diplomas, you receive the incentive to go out and build for yourselves the kind of life you, individually, most want. Commencement is exactly what the word implies—a beginning. Begin at once, then, to build a sturdy foundation so that the structure you erect upon it will stand firm and true and proud. Build for yourselves a future of integrity and honor. Tangible gains are splendid—material success is, indeed, much to be desired. But never lose sight of the importance of the intangibles—those things of the spirit for which your years at Notre Dame have provided so noble a beginning. Say, with Hugh Walpole, "It isn't life that counts, but the courage you bring into it"—the courage that and has always been synonymous with your Alma Mater. Carry that courage with you as you embark upon lives of richness and worth while endeavor. Notre Dame is proud of you today. See to it that throughout your lives she is able to retain that same justifiable pride in you.

NINETY-THREE

Characterized by that smoothness which marks all Notre Dame formal functions, the ninety-third Commencement exercises provided a fitting climax for 469 seniors. The record return of Notre Dame's alumni helped hearten these Seniors as no Commencement address could ever hope to do, with all deference to the address of the Commencement speaker, Mr. Dennis F. Kelly of Chicago.

With 1937 ended the last of Notre Dame's "depression classes," classes so-called since they entered the University in those particularly discouraging years when sending a son to college mean the entailment of more than usual sacrifices for many parents. So—congratulations to the class of 1937 and, more especially, congratulations to those mothers and fathers whose unselfishness and courage were repaid by their feelings of pride and happiness upon hearing their sons pronounced graduates of Notre Dame.

THREE WISE BOYS

It was Senior Week—the week previous to Commencement in which Seniors, released after the rigors of examinations, are privileged to disport themselves with undergraduate lack of dignity which would be considered unseemly after the reception of their degrees. Exhilarated by these considerations three Seniors, late one evening in Senior Week, decided that a graceful way in which to symbolize their feeling of good will towards the world would be to purchase gifts for "special" young ladies at St. Mary's. So, in a downtown drugstore, the Seniors each bought a life size replica of that popular screen star, Michael (Mickey) Mouse. And in a nearby Western Union office they arranged for delivery of their parcels.

Since it was then 11:30 p.m., the Seniors thought it superfluous to stipulate that delivery should not be made until the morrow. Unfortunately for their plans, the young messenger lad had just finished reading Hubbard's A Message to Garcia. Consequently, he mounted his sprocketed steed and pedaled to St. Mary's where he aroused all but the soundest sleepers among the students in his delivery duty.

The next morning the bewildered donees unwrapped their "gifts" in the presence of an investigating committee of Sisters. Mickey Mouse's infectious grin saved the day and all was well.

Moral: Never give a messenger boy a Mickey Mouse doll to deliver.

THE MONTH IN BRIEF

Editor Tom Radigan presented the smoothest Dome that we've seen in our five years at Notre Dame. . . . While general editorial make-up and context followed the Domes of other years, Radigan's handling of the snapshot section was a splendid job of editing. . . . An innovation was an accurate index, making it unnecessary to thumb through the entire book to find the various features. . . . Our story concerning Herb Jones last month was correct except that the incident occurred three years instead of two months ago as we reported. . . . For timely news read your daily newspaper—for history read Campus Notes. . . .

DILLON DOMINATES

Dillon hall won the annual inter-hall radio amateur contest. . . . The quality of the programs was so much higher this year that campus opinion agreed that any of the three finalists would have won last year's contest with ease. . . . James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight boxing champion (knock on wood), visited the campus as the guest of the Rev. Wendell P. Corcoran, C.S.C. . . . Jim was taken through the dining halls while the students were eating and later posed for pictures in the garb of a Notre Dame waiter. . . . Brother Angelus, C.S.C., guestmaster in the Main building for the past three years, celebrated his 55th anniversary as a member of the Holy Cross order. . . . Richard Reid, Georgia editor and recipient of the Laetare medal in 1936 delivered several lectures to the entire student body in Washington hall.

CLASSES ELECT

Complete results of class elections follow; Seniors—John C. O'Connor, Indianapolis, Ind., president; George Fitzpatrick, North Bellingham, Massachusetts, vice president; Harold A. Williams, Jr., Baltimore, Maryland, secretary; and John Deane, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, treasurer;. . . Juniors—Paul McArdle, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, president; Eugene White, Peoria, Illinois, vice president; Martin McGinnis, Memphis, Tennessee, secretary; and Joseph Nigro, Kansas City, Missouri, treasurer;. . . Sophomores—James H. Mulqueen, Council Bluffs, Iowa, president; Charles Kelly, Richmond, Virginia, vice president; Gerald Flynn, Rochester, New York, secretary; and John De Moss, Chicago, Illinois, treasurer. . . .

PHILOSOPHERS DISPUTE

The department of philosophy, under the direction of the Rev. Thomas Brennan, C.S.C., and the Rev. Arthur J. Hope, C.S.C., sponsored its second annual philosophical disputation. . . . Distinguished guests included Dr. Mortimer J. Adler and Dr. Scott Buchanan of the University of Chicago. . . . Professor Henry C. Staunton, of the English department, was elected vice president of the Indiana College English Association. . . . Gerald G. Hogan, Brooklyn, New York, a freshman, won the Breen medal. . . .

INDIANA BELL INSTALLS

The University has installed a new telephone exchange. It is the latest word in automatic features and technical advances. All the Scholastic columnists enjoyed a good cry in the last issue. . . . There haven't been so many tears shed on the campus since "Sonny Boy" was shown in Washington hall. . . . Paul Barker, Rochester, New York, James A. Waldron, Trenton, New Jersey, Richard H. Meier, Faulkton, South Dakota, and Paul E. Foley, Grosse Pointe, Mich., were awarded scroll awards by the Dome as the four seniors outstanding in extra curricular activities. . . . Publications editors for next year will be Eugene Vassetz, Brooklyn, New York, Scholastic; Charles Nelson, Decatur, Illinois, Scrip; and Frank Reppenhagen, Buffalo, New York, Dome.

KNIGHTS ELECT

The local Knights of Columbus council inducted 73 new members. . . . James L. Quinn, Elizabeth, New Jersey, succeeds F. Joseph Drolla, New Orleans, Louisiana, as Grand Knight. . . . Peter Nemeth, Jr., South Bend, Indiana, won a $500 bank night. . . . Pete also will be married in June. . . . Not cause and effect in this instance as the marriage was planned before the winning of the $500. . . . Father Michael Quinlan, C.S.C., defeated the Rev. George L. Holderith, C.S.C., for the faculty golf championship. . . . The new residence hall now being erected will bear the name of one of Notre Dame's earlier priest-scientists, the Rev. John Zahm, C.S.C.,. . . Memorial day was celebrated on the campus with appropriate ceremonies.

See you all next year.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

merely private opinion as a rule of faith.

Whilst finance-capitalism sins by excess in emphasizing the rights of individual property, Communism goes to the opposite extreme and repudiates the divine commandment "Thou shalt not steal." It has ruthlessly confiscated both productive and use property. It denies that the individual has any right in property antecedent to or superior to that of the State of the Community. In robbing men of property, it robs them of true liberty and subjects the citizens or the individual to the Community, making him a slave of the State just as certainly as any slave was ever bound to an individual master. We warn you, therefore, against the easy assumption that theories do not count or that principles and attitudes respecting property have no bearing upon practical life.

Labor Disputes and Strikes

Most of our social unrest at the present time in this country concerns itself with labor disputes and strikes. Now what light do Christian principles throw upon this dispute? At the outset we must remember three things: first, the dignity of man as a child of God. Second, the right of private property as the sole guarantee of man's ultimate liberty or freedom. Third, the correlative nature of rights and duties. We cannot have one without the other.

The Church, revealing to us the mind of Christ, teaches us that labor is honorable; it is divinely ordered; it is worthy of its hire. Most certainly it is not a commodity to be purchased in the open market. God has decreed that all men must work: "thou shalt eat thy bread in the sweat of thy brow." The Son of God coming into the world chose to be known as the son of Joseph the Carpenter. He took the status of a workman in order to teach us an abiding lesson viz. that the work of the laboring man is worthy of reverence and respect.

What are the consequences that flow from an understanding of these truths? If we look to ancient times, we find everywhere that the hard and disagreeable work of the world was done by means of the institution of slavery. Manual labor was treated with contempt in all the ancient civilizations. Wars were waged for the direct purpose of solving labor problems by means of captured slaves. With the advent of Christ's teaching slavery slowly disappeared from the face of Christian Europe. There was no forceful prohibition at first by law. The thing was simply incompatible with the acknowledged dignity of man. You could not treat a creature of God, redeemed by the precious blood, a member of the mystical body of Christ, a brother in grace—you could not treat him as a slave.

In our modern social organization under the influence of competitive individualism a new doctrine took the place of Christianity. Men were no longer regarded as brothers in Christ but merely as so many hands. Labor was a commodity to be purchased. Wages were not determined by the value of the product but by the old slave principle of minimum subsistence for the worker. The principal that regulated relations between employers and employees for all too long a time was "Might makes right"; "Fortune smiles upon the strong"; What was the result? Long hours for labor. Hard work. Minimum wages. No wonder Leo XIII as early as 1891 was forced to write his encyclical deploring the condition of the working classes. He called the attention of the Christian world to fundamental principles of Christ's Gospel. The rights of labor were once more vindicated; namely the right to a decent wage; the right to humane working conditions in keeping with the dignity of man; the right of collective bargaining; the right of workmen's associations and the right of freely choosing their own representatives.

Marriage and the Family

Let us turn now to the question of Marriage and the Family. From the time that Christianity first made itself felt in the ancient world, the sanctity of the family has been safeguarded by a definite code of domestic ethics. When Christ began His family life, He worked His first miracle at the marriage feast of Cana as if to show His deep concern with the family as the fundamental social unit. He reminded His disciples that marriage is one and indissoluble. He raised this most solemn contract amongst men to the dignity of a Sacrament. Now what happens when this teaching is disregarded? When marriage is completely secularized and amounts to nothing more than a civil contract or a companionate of temporary duration or convenience, then we deny the very essence of the Christian concept of the family. To break its unity, therefore, with wanton divorce is to let loose a host of evils upon the world. To frustrate its purpose by the suicidal practice of birth control is to deny its purpose and foster death, not life. The family is the social unit. Change it in essence or destroy its character, and civilization such as we have known it for more than a thousand years will be inevitably changed or destroyed.

In analyzing the origin of our social principles and our social attitudes let us turn our attention finally to GOVERNMENT itself. Today all thoughtful students of public affairs are watching with keen anxiety the steady drift towards state dictatorship. We have dictatorship of the right and of the left. There is the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia and there is the dictatorship of Nazi Germany. There are a half-dozen other dictatorships scattered throughout Europe. In these dictatorships we have a new concept of government. The citizen no longer has any inherent rights as a man, antecedent and prior to all government. Instead he is made the creature of the state.

In America we still point proudly to our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution in which is set forth the doctrine that there are certain inalienable rights given to man by the Creator, namely, the right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness. Since the emergence of the totalitarian state these rights no longer are recognized in a large part of Europe. The state encompasses within itself now the whole of man; it tells him not merely what he can do in public but tells him what he must think in private. In consequence there is no freedom of conscience; no freedom of worship; no freedom of assembly, nor freedom of the press.

If you seek the explanation of this new phenomenon you will find it in the progressive departure from Christian truth which has been taking place in the intellectual life of the world for the past several centuries. It is only now reaching its climax and final fruition. Christianity teaches that the citizen precedes the state. It teaches that man has a value and a dignity all his own; that he has rights that are inseparable from his existence as a man; rights given to him by His Creator which no state can steal away. The Church does not impose any particular form of government upon her members. They may choose a republic or a kingdom, a democracy or an empire, but the Church does teach that whatever be the form of government it is limited in its powers. Its authority is from God, but the rulers who exercise this authority are not divinely appointed. They are designated by the citizens themselves and restrained by his ordinances.

The state, therefore, must subordinate its plan of human welfare to the prior rights of the plan that God Himself made. The state in other words must carry out its work within the moral order that God Himself established. If you accept these principles no matter what you call your government it never becomes an absolute dictatorship or a comprehensive totalitarian state.

I have repeatedly called your attention to the fact that we must not look upon these principles as mere academic theories. What philosophers think in one generation is popularized in the second and then reduced to practice in the third. How different would have been the history of the past 200 years if the intellectual leadership of the world had remained in Christian hands. As a matter of fact, the intellectual leadership passed from our hands to those outside the Church. They had little sympathy with and less understanding of the Christian philosophy of life. In politics, in sociology, in science and in economics the secularist view-point and the ultra-liberal spirit has predominated. In order to illustrate this fact let us cite the names of four men who were in the forefront of these respective fields of thought and activity during the past century and a half.

Four Secular Evangelists

In political science Jean Jacques Rousseau exercised more influence than any other writer of the past 200 years. By reason of his "Social Contract" he gave direction and impetus to the liberal democratic movement but he did so by repudiating not merely the divine right of kings but also the divine right of the Lord God Himself. The principle of divine authority was shattered. The will of the majority was made the supreme law of society. Thus minorities were left defenseless in the face of attack on those inalienable rights with which they had been endowed by their Creator.

In social science Auguste Comte, who coined the word Sociology, easily assumed the leadership and gave his so-called science a definitely anti-Christian bias. He denied the validity of any objective standard of morality and substituted in its place the shifting norm of human tradition, custom and fashion. Morality became mere conventionality. As a result men felt free to tinker with the sacred institutions of society such as marriage and the family. Experiments in sterilization, birth control and euthanasia supplanted the right to life and personal integrity.

In the field of experimental science no name is more significant than that of Charles Darwin. Even though he did not originate the theory of evolution, yet by his book the "Origin of Species" he created an entirely new spiritual mood or temper of mind in which to pursue experimental knowledge. If the theory of evolution carried over disastrously from biology into metaphysics, psychology and religion, it was largely due to the momentum which he gave by his book "The Descent of Man." Science after Darwin became irreligious in tone and purpose.

In social economics Karl Marx became the new evangelist and his book "Das Kapital" became the new gospel from which millions of people were to seek in our generation the inspiration of their economic and political activity. If Red revolution flames fearfully in many countries of the world, let us not forget that he who set the torch to the combustible material was Marx, the author of the "Communist Manifesto."

Here you have the four great secular evangelists of the past century who gave a definitely anti-Christian bent to the trend of thought. Nothing can be more false than to assume that theories do not count. St. Paul understood well the mischief that can be done by intellectual error and it was no idle warning that he gave to his disciples at Colossae when he said: "Beware lest any man cheat you by philosophy or vain deceit; according to the traditions of men, according to elements of the world, and not according to Christ."

In view of these premises what is the duty of the Catholic college graduate today? Following the scriptural principle that shall be held accountable according to the talents which we have received, then I am justified in saying that the men of Notre Dame have a threefold responsibility to discharge.

Accept Intellectuality

In the first place you must accept the responsibility of being intellectual. You must live henceforth on a high intellectual plane. The men of Notre Dame should never be content with the humdrum life of mediocrity but should be eager to exercise vigorous and active mental life. It is not necessary for me to labor the point that your practical daily lives must be in harmony with the Christian principles which have been inculcated in your minds and hearts through every part of the college curriculum. To fall short in this respect is to repudiate your Alma Mater. But more than this is expected of you. You must cultivate the intellectual as well as the moral virtues. The remedy for most of the ills which afflict society today is to be found in the intellect; in straight thinking; in a profound grasp of truth in all its dimensions and in all its implications. The intimate relation between religion and culture; between sound Christian philosophy and our political social and economic well being must be rediscovered. We suffer more in this generation from bad thinking than from bad will.

The second responsibility which I recommend you to assume is that of being articulate. The Church suffers today not because we lack the truth but because the truth lacks adequate presentation. We lack creative artists, students and scholars in every field of intellectual endeavor. Until we regain our rightful prestige by reason of original and worthwhile production, we shall continue to witness a decline in our civilization. That might sound like smug self-complacency if we did not know that there is no other name under heaven given to man whereby he can be saved—except the name of Jesus.

Change to the Offensive

The third responsibility to which attention may properly be directed is the responsibility of changing our strategy in the intellectual combat in which we are engaged. We have stood entirely too long on the defensive. We have been fighting a rear guard action for several centuries and it is high time that we change our tactics and pass to the offensive. This purpose can be achieved, not by assuming a belligerent attitude, nor merely by substituting some new kind of political or economic program for the panaceas that are currently offered, but rather by changing the whole spiritual climate in which we live. We must have a different focus of thought. We must present in its full splendor and wide comprehension the glorious vision of the universal kingdom of God established by Christ in contrast to that limited, narrow, earthbound vision of a kingdom full merely of material plenty.

Theorists of every description are expending their ideas for the building of a better world and hurrying to set up the new Jerusalem at one according to their particular pattern. At the same time we who have the heritage of the faith—in whose veins flows the blood of martyrs—have lost somehow our enthusiasm for the building of the City of God. We must capture once more the vision which animated our forefathers and enter with new zest into the great adventure of reconstructing our Social Order by restoring all things in Christ. Each one has his own allotted task to perform according to the measure of his ability and training. But the whole enterprise in which we are enlisted has only one objective.

St. Paul clearly states that objective when he writes thus to his people at Ephesus: "And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and others some evangelists, and others some pastors and doctors, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: until we all meet into the unity of faith, and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, until the measure of the age of the fullness of Christ." (Ephes. iv-11-14.)

Association Officers Elected For 1937-38

William E. Cotter, '13, Chosen as President;
James E. Deery, '10, Remains as Director;
Harry F. Kelly, '17, is First Vice-President.

Arthur J. Hughes was the most effective president the Alumni Association has ever had. The illustrious men who preceded him in the office—many of whom graced the head table at the 1937 Alumni Banquet—would be the first to endorse this statement.

Picking his successor to follow the trail he blazed was one of the major problems that have confronted the nominating committees. Their choice of James E. Deery and William E. Cotter was probably the finest action the circumstances could have asked. And the result was also most auspicious. The vote was close enough to indicate that both men are popular, representative alumni. Happily, the election was a double victory for the Association, as Jim Deery has another year to serve on the Board of Directors and will be available to President Cotter with all the background of fraternal experience that has marked his career.

Bill Cotter is undoubtedly the most thoroughly 100 per cent Notre Dame man ever to hold the office of president. And that says a lot.

The assertion is based on the fact that Bill never went to any other school.

He entered the Minims at Notre Dame in 1899, and for 14 years was a Minim, Prep and College, graduated in 1913, after a brilliant student career, as valedictorian of his class.

Alumni who knew the Preps and the Minims realize that Bill's education was far more extensive than the classrooms of the famous teachers who influenced the curricula of those years.

As manager of athletics in 1912-13, Bill Cotter won a lasting place in the Notre Dame hall of fame by arranging the first Notre Dame-Army football game. But that was only the climax of a most able administration of that important office, which found Notre Dame emerging from Cartier Field, looking for the new worlds that an end on the teams of those years was to conquer.

Bill Cotter, together with half a dozen other veterans of the campus, lived in the Main Building, during his senior year, and the tales of political strategy which emanated from this small group bode well for our organization and the progress of the program Art Hughes launched.

As lecturer of the Knights of Columbus, Bill gained a valuable campus background in the first campus council of the Order, founded in his sophomore year at Notre Dame. It was while he held office, too, that the fund for the K. of C. Union Building was begun.

Bill was business manager of the Players Association, a lively group which included such stars of the Washington Hall stage as Harry Scott (who hasn't lost the art as the '17 Reunion found out this year), Knute Rockne, whose Indian Squaw and Negro Mammy still live in Notre Dame's theater traditions, and John F. O'Connell, Chicago's probate judge.

Bill's student days were spent with a Chicago residence background. Since then, he has lived in New York with frequent trips linking him to his old home and to many of the cities in between. Geographically, therefore, the new president is well grounded in the territory holding the bulk of his constituency.

His business connection, since his graduation, has been with the Union Carbide and Carbon Co., of which he is now the legal counsel.

He was married, in the best Notre Dame tradition, to Miss Evarista Brady, a graduate of St. Mary's. For the past 12 years, Mr. and Mrs. Cotter have lived in New Rochelle. They have a family of three children, Evarista, who attended Rosemont College, Pennsylvania, Mary, a student at the Ursuline Academy in New Rochelle, and Bill, Jr., who, after graduation this month from Iona School, will enter Notre Dame in the Fall as a Freshman.

The versatility of the new President's campus background has been reflected in his career as a Catholic citizen of New York.

Together with Father John Talbot Smith, he was a founder and later president of the Catholic Actors Guild, and is attorney for that group.

Philanthropically, he is president of the Broad St. Hospital in New York City, and treasurer of the American Memorial Association for Devastated France. He was a former treasurer of the professional International Acetylene Association. His clubs are the Westchester Country, the Union League and the University.

From all of which data, the ALUMNUS draws the happy conclusion that the affairs of the Association and the fine work of Art Hughes in 1936-37, are in the best possible guiding hands for 1937-38.

Law took the laurels in the 1937 election.

First Vice-President is Harry Kelly, '17. Harry won his spurs in Ottawa, Illinois, where he rose to the state's attorneyship of La Salle County. From there he moved to the district attorney's office in Detroit and immediately won a reputation in the Michigan metropolis which has entrenched him in the Detroit bar. With the double background of Notre Dame centers, La Salle County and the very active Detroit area, Harry can contribute greatly to the alumni program development.

Second Vice-President is Charles A. Mooney, '26. Chuck took law after leaving Notre Dame, but entered the insurance firm with his father, the late Congressman Charles A. Mooney. Chuck was a candidate for Congress himself, being defeated by a more experienced campaigner, but winning great commendation from the Cleveland press and citizenry. Chuck was also a student manager of athletics. That, together with his presidency of both the campus and alumni Cleveland Clubs, gives him a most valuable background for the new regime.

Director for the 4-year term, succeeding the veteran and able Fred L. Steers, is another Chicago attorney, Francis H. McKeever, '03. Anyone who followed Frank McKeever's early career in the Notre Dame Club of Chicago, and who last year was aware of the leadership he exerted in putting across the Notre Dame faculty series in Chicago, can feel that the responsibilities of the directorate have been placed in both able and willing hands. Frank is familiar with Notre Dame over a long period of years, and aware of changes both in the University and in the Association during those years, which will be invaluable to the Board.

Add to these men the fact that Art Hughes remains on the Board in 1937-38 ex officio, and that the Class of 1937 will elect a Director for 1937-38 with the new viewpoint of the latest Class to be graduated, and it looks like another banner year for the Association.

BENGAL

Rt. Rev. Timothy Crowley, C.S.C., '02, Dacca, Bengal, India, President; Rev. J. J. Hennessey, C.S.C., '02, Dacca, Bengal, India, Secretary.

Bishop Crowley recently received some splendid publicity in Chicago, when the mission society organized there under his name for the aid of the Bengalese staged its annual benefit party. The Holy Cross missions in Bengal are one of the outstanding works of the Congregation, but distance frequently obscures their merits, and it was a pleasure to see Bishop Crowley and his work receive this deserved tribute and practical aid.

BOSTON

Fred C. Solari, '35, Center St., Pembroke, Mass., President; John J. Hanley, '34, 409 Salem St., Medford, Mass., Secretary; Paul McManus, '34, Fox & Hounds Club, Boston, Mass., Secretary.

On May 20 almost a hundred Notre Dammers, almost Notre Dammers, and would - like - to - have - been Notre Dammers, whooped and hollered and tore broiled chicken from limb to limb in the grandest Revival Meeting Boston has seen since Gypsy Smith packed the Garden. (And if I'm not mistaken, he had to give away a couple of refrigerators to bring them in.) If there had been any doubt before about the spirit of the Notre Dame men in the Codfish Commonwealth, there can certainly be none now. From all over the State within a radius of 150 miles, they came, and the spirit was nothing short of invigorating.

The dinner was presided over by Fred Solari who introduced the speakers, Bill Cunningham and Eddie Anderson, coach of Holy Cross. Grace was said by Father McGinn, C.S.C. Movies of the Pitt game of '35 and the renowned Ohio State game of '35 were shown, and a running comment was competently handled by Fred who had played in the games. After the dinner a collection was taken up for the fund for Johnny O'Brien's children and the check forwarded to Elmer Layden.

The meeting was officially a Boston Club get-together, but we were favored with the presence of Joe McKean, '32, and his brother, representing that tired section of the country, the South, and Tony Anzlovar, '34, from Cleveland. All three, I believe, are courting culture at Harvard. Paul Broderick, head of the Paramount Picture booking department in Boston, brought in a group from his office. He has generously offered to provide football movies for us any time we want them, which promises well for future meetings. Les Freres McManmon were there, with a combined displacement more awesome than ever. John is head of the Highway Beautification Department of the State of Massachusetts, and Art is, I believe, head of the Donnelly Advertising Company in Worcester.

Others were: Bill Ellis, '36, doing art work for an advertising company. Buck Hanley, '34, told me what he was doing, but memory fails. However, I remember noting at the time that it was a goodly, Christian work. Eddie Collins, '03, is clerk of the Supreme Court, and he and Joe Gargan, '17, who is one of Boston's foremost lawyers, constitute as enthusiastic a pair of Notre Dame men as I've ever met. Glynn Fraser, '34, left right after the banquet for Maine, where he is in charge of some Federal Youth project at Quoddy Village. Jack Saunders, '31, is operating one of those super-markets up in his home town of Lowell.

Joe Gartland, '27, is with the Hornblower & Weeks, stock brokers. Harold Noonan, '34, is in the insurance business—Lumberman's Mutual. I was talking with Al Phaneuf, '34, for a few minutes. It was the first time I'd seen him since a few days before Christmas, when he seemed to have the power of life and death over about 40 salesgirls in Jordan Marsh's department store. John Sullivan, '33, came down from Holyoke. He told me then of the illness of Gerry Teevens, and the other day the item appeared in the Boston Post. I didn't know Gerry awfully well, but in June of 1932 I was one of a group of three or four who drove home from school with him in his car. It was the most memorable trip of my life, and enough excitement took place during it to convince anyone that Gerry Teevens was a remarkably fine, clear thinking fellow, absolutely fearless of anybody or anything, and endowed with more courage than almost anybody I ever knew.

A few days after our banquet, John Shea, '08, co-composer of the "Victory March," dropped into the Fox and Hounds to express his regret at having missed the re-union. The spirit was willing, he told me, but the Nash was weak, and it succumbed en route. Father Donovan, at St. Philip's Church, also called me up to lament that he had been away that night.

The final event of the season will be a dance conducted by the campus Boston Club at the Fox and Hounds, on Saturday night, June 19. It will take place in the Blue Room. I have arranged things so that, aside from the club's minimum charge of $1.00 per person, the only fee will be a twenty-five cent tax which will go to the campus club's treasury.

Although this document has assumed an awkward length, it wouldn't be quite fair to close it without making some special acknowledgment of the efforts of the three men to whom credit for the success of our re-union must go: Fred Solari, Joe Gargan and Glynn Fraser.

We closed another successful Club-year, May 10, at the annual meeting in Fischer-Rohr restaurant. Because precedent dictates a change in the role of officers each year, we sent last year's group back to their more lucrative jobs with our congratulations and thanks. Said Erie RRY's lawyer, Pat Canny, who as president proved himself well worthy of his unanimous choice last year: "My Boss wants me to go to work for the Erie again." We can understand that, for Pat served unstintingly and with little buck passing to the vice-president, for Paul Castner fled Cleveland on a business pursuit last Autumn. Secretary Larry Kral's record of last year's events was a success story illustrated by Treasurer Al Grisanti's financial report.

Another staff was elected. George Kerver is now president; John J. Collins, vice-president; George P. O'Day, treasurer; and your present raconteur, Cornelius J. Ruffing, secretary. With precedent rich in accomplishment to rival, we'll await another year for comment on the choice.

Because now and then we meet someone who manifests the Notre Dame spirit in a manner to be envied by most of us, and because so often those loyal supporters of Notre Dame never walked the campus as students and consequently are not eligible for regular membership in the club, we here in Cleveland provided in our charter for the extension of honorary membership in the club. If George J. Leroux, Clay's Dad, is proud of his honorary membership in the Notre Dame Club of Cleveland, his pride falls short of ours in having him in our group. Long time friend of the club, always keenly interested in N.D. men and their affairs, Mr. Leroux is well deserving of this small gesture on our part. To Mr. Leroux we presented a formal certificate of membership.

As Kral wrote, Gene Milliff is married; to Miss Magadeline Raeder in April. Cy Matthews was best man. Incidentally Cy's editor of the plant paper at National Malleable, where he's also in charge of the dispensary. Clay Leroux, practising for his own marriage to Miss Margaret Powers on June 19, served the Milliff's as usher. Father Murphy of St. Mary's parish, Sandusky, who officiated, had married at least one other N.D. man; Father Murphy married the late beloved Knute and Mrs. Rockne back in Knute's Cedar Point days.

Don't be surprised if Jim Driscoll drops around some day with a convincing story about your need for more life insurance. You're safe on week-ends, however; Jim has another life problem in Delphos each Sunday. Central National Bank not only employs Ed Gough and Ralph Huller but there also are Phil Geoghegan, Cecil Hobert and Ed Hogan. Also in financial fields are security men Joe Butler, Phil Prendergast, Howy Richards, Ed Blatt and John Venables. While we're at this Classified Listing, there's dental surgeon Cy Caldwell, who, too, is marrying this month. And soon completing his internship at St. John's Hospital are Drs. Mike Crawford and Dolly Gannon. Down at the court house almost daily are lawyers Marty Rini, Don Miller, Pierce O'Connor, John Gleason, Joe Sweeney . . . and the many, many more.

If Judge Dan Duffy is the Autumn candidate for mayor, as rumor and the betting odds suggest, John Butler, active assistant county prosecutor, will likely raise his voice for Dan. And on the municipal judiciary slate will be Judge Frank Celebrezze. One wonders what prominent public men Jack Flynn and Ray Miller will have to say from their respective platforms.

Past and present for all appearances, master of the fist-cuff game, Jack McGrath has turned tailor. His new method FOTO FIT shop is on Vincent Street right across from Chuck Rohr's side entrance.

Just west of town, in Lorain, Al Thomas practises law; just east of town, in Willoughby, George Thomas serves the municipality.

George Sargus of Bellaire, on his last visit to the city, announced opening his third women's dress shop; this fast link of the Sargus Chain is at Martin's Ferry, Ohio.

Back and brown from a West Indies cruise Lou Stettler hurried right on through town to the Derby at Louisville.

Father Paul Hallinan, Scholastic, Dome, Santa Maria, Scrip and pink slips from New Yorker, is assistant at St. Aloysius parish here.

Bill Van Rooy's brother, John, met an untimely death. John was only 29.

An item of interest which I failed to include in the news for the May issue of the ALUMNUS was the presence of Francis Walsh, '20, and his brother, Clyde A. Walsh, '21, of Campus, Illinois, at our Universal Notre Dame Night celebration. Francis is a lawyer in Campus and Clyde, a banker. We were certainly pleased to have some out-of-town visitors, and hope that they will come again and that any other out-of-town members will pay us a call sometime.

Two of our members, Francis J. Murray, who attended Nore Dame in '27, '28 and '29, and Joseph E. Dwyer, LL.B., '34, report having taken trips during the past several months. Frank traveled through Baltimore and the East, and Joe vacationed at Miami Beach, Florida during the Winter.

We are planning a dance for the very near future and likewise other events during the Summer months.

Our clubrooms in the West Pines hotel will soon be redecorated.

Father Tom Lahey, with Father George Marr, represented Notre Dame and the Congregation at the recent Eucharistic Congress in Manila. Father Lahey was stricken with flu upon his arrival in the Philippines and was forced, when he had partially recovered, to return to the United States. Father Marr continued on a trip around the world.

The following letter, written by Father Lahey at the University of Portland, gives an inspiring account of the Notre Dame Spirit in action:

"I want to tell you about an illustration of Notre Dame spirit which should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. During my recent visit to Manila, most of my time as you know, was spent in recovering from the effects of the flu. During that period I was the constant recipient of innumerable kindnesses from various former students of mine, particularly Anthony Roxas, whose unfailing attention was the edification of every one in the hospital.

When time came for me to return to the United States, the Notre Dame Club of Manila climaxed the situation by paying the round-trip expense of a nurse all the way to Portland, Oregon—a substantial outlay as any one knows who has made the trip back and forth.

I wonder how many schools there are, the alumni of which would do for a member of their faculty what these young men did for me? That was not all, however. Throughout my entire stay in Manila, I was constantly hearing the highest praise concerning the type of young men representing Notre Dame in the Islands—the greatest compliment, after all, that can be paid to a University. I have already written a letter of appreciation, but I wish also to pay this public tribute lest the lesson of this fine illustration of Notre Dame spirit be lost through the modesty of the Notre Dame Club of Manila.

(Rev.) Thomas A. Lahey, C.S.C."

Frank Lloyd, University comptroller and business manager, who, with his daughter, visited the Islands last Summer, was especially enthusiastic as to the hospitality and kindness of the club and its individual members.

The club had an election at the dinner given in February in honor of Father Marr and Father Lahey. (Father Lahey was unable to attend because of his illness.)

Alfonso Ponce Emile, the oldest Notre Dame man in the Islands, was elected president; Tony Roxas, vice-president; Gonzalo Valdes, secretary; and Father Vincente Catapang, chaplain.

Father Marr gave a stirring after-dinner speech to the 25 members present, thanking them for the innumerable courtesies extended to Father Lahey and himself.

In early May, Father O'Hara received a cable from Tony Roxas asking on behalf of himself, Jake Zobel, Melian Brias and Eduardo Roxas, authority to form a polo team to represent Notre Dame in the Philippines. Father O'Hara promptly approved the proposal and sent congratulations and best wishes.

Notre Dame was well represented at the recent Catholic Action Conference held in Milwaukee. Father Devers and Haggerty were representatives from Watertown, Wisconsin, and Milwaukee's Harold Watson took a very prominent part in the proceedings. Practically every Notre Dame man in town attended. On this occasion the Milwaukee Auditorium exceeded its previous attendance record by many hundreds. This bears witness to the fact that Catholic Action plays an important part in the minds of Wisconsin Catholics.

Hal Watson's baby son is again in tip top shape after having suffered a leg fracture some few weeks ago. Bill Collins, Jerry "Reddy" Fox and your correspondent journeyed to Mayslake Retreat House (Hinsdale, Illinois) for the purpose of participating in the Sixty Golden Hours held there every week-end. We were pleasantly surprised to see Bernie Leahy and several of his business associates in the same group.

The Corrigan brothers are en route to Mexico, where Jim expects to get some valuable information on "How to be a Good Notre Dame Club Secretary." Bill Brown got around to the luncheon last Thursday. We're wondering if Doctor Dundan has strained his eating arm while rowing—haven't seen Doc in a few weeks.

Plans are formulated for Tom Kelly's picnic. It's the 19th of June at "The Barn" on Teutonia, just north of Milwaukee's city limit.

It is rumored that Vice President Maloney's absence from our weekly luncheons may be attributed to his growing desire to decrease his waistline.

Ed Graham and the writer would like to know how Jim Armstrong managed to handle the swell crowd that turned out for the reunion. Nice going, Jim, and we had a grand week-end. It's being bruited about, too, that Joe McCabe, Paul O'Toole and Tighe Woods enjoyed themselves.

Everyone who is an admirer of the Arts and Letters cannot but have a wholesome respect for a raconteur who has the faculty of putting meat on a seemingly flimsy topic of conversation. Hats off to Larry Enright whose detailed account of "The Rejuvenated Tooth Brush" covered the better part of an hour with short times out for the sale of Enright's beer at eight cents a bottle—two for fifteen.

John Brust refuses to part with the shoulder pads which he claims to have bought from Albert, erstwhile N.D. paper picker. Freeman Fitzgerald, who hasn't been around since Universal Notre Dame Night, turned up at the Maryland last Thursday.

Bill Collins has been singing the praises of Soldiers Grove, Wisconsin, and spending a lot of time at St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was great seeing my old playmate, Cleve Carey, last week-end. Too bad the other 3.2 boys, Monahan and Uprichard, weren't on hand. Glad to see Ed Carey, too, and learn that his family is enjoying good health.

Retiring officers were commended for their efforts and activities in behalf of the club.

Plans were discussed for a summer dance and outing, also for the club to sponsor a special train to the Army game.

Some time during June, students and prospective students of Notre Dame will be entertained at a dinner.

Charles C. Kolars, B.S. '85, C.E. '86, Le Center, Minnesota, father of Frank Kolars, '24, and the late John Kolars, ex. '23, died suddenly in his home on March 25 after a heart attack. Mr. Kolars had practiced law in Le Center since 1888 and was one of the community's outstanding citizens. His wife and three children survive him.

Frank X. Hanley, '99, of South Bend, a football star of 1896 and 1899, died on June 10, four hours after being stricken with a heart attack. Prominent in the Old Timers' reunions of the past two years and a leading figure, too, in the recent Commencement reunion, Frank was a familiar personage on the campus. He was buried from the home of his niece, Mrs. Bernard J. Voll.

Arthur Hayes, of the class of 1901, Cincinnati, Ohio, a monogram man in football, basketball and track, died on May 5. He was 56 years old. Mr. Hayes played his final year of Notre Dame football under the coaching of the famous Pat O'Dea; his first two under Frank E. Hering, of South Bend.

John M. Bosse, Lima, Ohio, who was a student on the campus from 1877 to 1882, died on April 29, according to an Associated Press dispatch. Mr. Bosse, aged 71, was a pioneer insurance agent and a widely known marksman. He was the last surviving charter member of the Lima Elks.

Attorney Earl W. Jackson, South Bend, who attended Notre Dame in 1923-24, died in his home on May 2 after a year's illness. Mr. Jackson, a veteran of the World War, was secretary of the Abstract & Title Corporation.

Herman B. O'Hara, Ch.E. '14, Irvington, New Jersey, a first cousin of Rev. John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., president of the University, died on May 15. He was buried in Tipton, Indiana, where Father O'Hara celebrated the funeral Mass. He is survived by his parents, one brother and four sisters, one of whom is Sister Angelista, C.S.C.

John V. Diener, '09, former mayor of Green Bay, Wisconsin, and one of the most prominent men in the state, died in Green Bay on May 28 following an operation. Mr. Diener had been in ill health as the result of a stomach ailment.

Always an ardent Notre Dame supporter and one of the most active members of the Notre Dame club of Green Bay, Mr. Diener often returned to the campus. As a former St. Joe Haller he had planned to attend the St. Joe Hall reunion at Commencement time.

Peter J. Bosert, '32, Minot, North Dakota, died about a year ago, according to information just received by the ALUMNUS from Jerry Greer, '33, also of Minot. Details are lacking.

John Gerard Teevens, '32, died on June 7 in his home in Newton Highlands, Massachusetts. Gerry attended Boston University Law School after finishing at Notre Dame and was graduated there in 1935. A prep school athlete of note, he had won the two-mile championship at the Penn Relays in 1926. He was buried in Rosindale, Massachusetts after the funeral Mass in Newton Centre.

Charles Fahy, Washington, D. C., is a leading possibility for appointment to the United States Supreme Court bench, according to a recent article in Collier's. The article, entitled "Judge - Hunting," said this about Mr. Fahy:

"Charles Fahy is a product of Notre Dame and Georgetown, and is the only man on the list with a highly distinguished war record. A naval aviator, and a winner of the Navy cross, after the Armistice he transferred his wounds and his law books to Santa Fe, New Mexico. 'Discovered' by Secretary Ickes, he was brought to Washington as First Assistant Solicitor of the Department of the Interior, served later as a member of the Petroleum Administration Board, and in 1935 became chief counsel for the National Labor Relations Board. A quiet, unassuming man who makes no bid for newspaper notice, nevertheless the Administration gives him credit for the board's legal victories. It was Fahy who fought the eighty-three injunctions against operation of the Wagner Act, and it was Fahy who picked the five cases that went to the Supreme Court where his brief and oral arguments were followed closely by Chief Justice Hughes in the majority opinion."

Ben Kaiser (to whom, with Fred Mendez, all credit for the success of the 1912 reunion) writes as follows:

Twenty-seven of the 54 living active members of the class of 1912 were present on the campus of the University to participate in the 93rd Commencement and, particularly, to celebrate their own silver anniversary reunion. And CELEBRATE they did.

The festivities started with a dinner in the Faculty Dining Hall, Friday evening. In addition to the 23 members of the class of 1912 were the following guests: J. L. Heineman, of the class of 1888; Rev. Charles C. Miltner, C.S.C., Edward L. Figel, Joseph B. Murphy, Fred L. Steers, William R. Ryan, and John Tully of the class of 1911; William E. Cotter and Joseph W. O'Hara of the class of 1913, and Dan Shouplin of the class of 1914.

John P. Murphy acted as toastmaster. Strange as it may sound no speeches were made by the members of the 1912 class. John just would not permit it—he knew there were eight lawyers present. He did it all himself by reading each member's "Prophetic Biography" as recorded in the Dome of 1912. This proved to be a very amusing diversion and also a happy solution of the speech-making problem. Short talks were made by Father Miltner and Mr. Heineman.

A motion was made by Stony McGlynn, seconded by William J. Parish and unanimously accepted by all, as follows: "that the Class of 1912 adopt the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh as the patron of the Class."

A very interesting letter from Russell G. Finn was read by John Murphy. Russell unfortunately could not be present. However, his letter gave us several splendid ideas for consideration. The one that, I feel, should be mentioned here relates to the departed members of our class. Russell suggests that we take official cognizance of their deaths and send to their families resolutions of the condolences of the class. This shall be done.

After this magnificent dinner (thanks to Mr. Connolly, manager of the Dining Hall) the group retired to Room 141 in Howard Hall, the official headquarters of the class, where an informal gathering continued until the early hours. Much activity was in evidence in this room during the entire period of the Commencement.

The class of 1912 wishes to express its sincere gratitude and thanks to all of the members of the class of 1887, 1911 and 1913, and to Elmer Layden for their participation in our festivities, and to the University for the generous accommodations provided for our comfort and enjoyment.

Vint Vaughan, Lafayette, is a new member of the board of the Indiana state department of financial institutions. He was appointed recently by Governor Townsend.

Bernie Voll, South Bend, is the compiler of a digest explaining the provisions of the new Indiana occupational disease act, which is being distributed by the Indiana Chamber of Commerce. The digest was prepared by Bernie in his capacity as vice-president of the South Bend Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its manufacturers' division.

All of which gets us down to the fact that, under Bernie's expert guidance as local chairman, and Ed McOsker's as class secretary, the special 20-year reunion was a sensational success. The large and super enthusiastic gang teed off at Bernie's summer home near the campus with a celebration on Friday night that will go down in Notre Dame history as several thousand per cent perfect. Keyed by the piano playing and the singing of Father Gene Burke, the songs and stories (many from the old Glee Club days) of Harry Scott, John Urban Riley and Paul Fogarty and the expert and generous piano playing of Mike Duffey, '27, the party was unbeatable. Bernie's unexcelled hospitality added to it from every angle.

The '17 gang gathered informally all through Saturday and, 'tis said, through Saturday night, too. Cheer Leader Scott was signed up for a return engagement at the 25-year reunion, which, incidentally, will be in the University's centennial year.

the first Americans. The expedition is under the direction of the American Museum of Natural History and the University of Alaska. The group will excavate in the Mastodon Creek district, near Fairbanks, and will return to the United States next Fall. It is attempting to verify the theory of many anthropologists that man first came to the American continents from Asia by way of Alaska.

Father Murray has conducted similar research in the southwestern part of the United States in search for information on the earliest American Indian tribes.

Not content with that fame, the prof. was also one of the leading contributors at the meetings of the local unit of the Catholic Poetry Society. With his wife and his daughter, Jill, Dick is spending the Summer in Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Lambert Reinhart is the new credit manager for Robert Porter and Sons, Inc., Las Cruces, New Mexico, according to a clipping from the Las Cruces Citizen. Previously with the United States Treasury Department as an auditor, Lambert is married and the father of two children.

John Bergan continues his splendid job with these final notes for the year:

Members of the class living in Chicago held a very successful dinner last month at Eitel's restaurant. Jimmy Doyle, the Chicago banker, handled arrangements very capably, and among those present were: Ed-die Ryan, vice-president of the International Rail Weld Co., who just returned from a business trip through the Southwest; Walt Cahill, of the Board of Trade; Red O'Connell, of Sears Roebuck; Dick Breen, who is in the claims department of the Lumbermans Mutual Insurance company, and holds the unusual distinction of having an active attorney for a wife; Jack Lynch, South side politician and employe of the County Treasurer; Gil Seaman, still going strong in the general insurance business; Barristers Vince Ponik, Nick Bohling and Bob Prendergast; Ed Griffin, who is with the Board of Education of Cook County; Don McPartland, who is completing his law course at Kent this month; Frank Holland, dynamic salesman; Jim Kearney, law brief writer; Chemist Al Stepan; Roofers Ben Oakes; Jack Geddes and Don O'Toole were also present.

Wedding bells are sounding out this month for the old combination of Cannon and Monahan. Tom Cannon will be married to Miss Margaret Alward, of South Bend, on June 26 in South Bend, and Tom Monahan will be married three days later to Miss Mary Cunningham, at Arcola. A large number of friends from the class will attend these nuptials to wish the former Corby Hall duo good luck.

Bert Maloney was passing out cigars on the birth of his second daughter to his many Milwaukee friends last month. Word has leaked of Bloomington, Illinois of the marriage of Ralph Dalton last winter. Father Bourke Motsett performed the ceremony, and Frank Dewinter was best man. Ralph is with the Corn Exchange Bank of Bloomington. It is a girl at the Joe Lauerman's, making a family of three children. Joe disclosed in his letter that Emil Telfer has again signed a contract to teach at Jordan College next year, and that Norb Christman is legal adviser to a large Green Bay trucking concern.

Maurice Luther was married in Detroit on Memorial Day. He is with the Norge Refrigerator Company in that city. Dick O'Donnell, on the campus for Commencement, reports that he is with the Pennsylvania Democrat in Harrisburg, and is still a confirmed bachelor. Dan Halpin, with his wife, flew in from Burbank, California, for Commencement. Among those present at the informal reunion of Friday were: Gordie Salmon, hardware man from New York; Bob Neydon, Chrysler exporter; Tim Benitz, New York mortgager; Ed Hosinski, South Bend tireman; Jerry Crowley, paint promoter; Ed Sheran, Los Angeles loan man, and probably the one traveling the longest distance for Commencement; Clarence Futter, Mishawaka shoe merchant; Jim Kearney, of the Chicago Kearneys, and Bill Desenberg, Buchanan barrister.

Oklahoma City note: the Askews have the local insurance situation well in hand, with Jim having a large agency, and Haskell adjusting claims for the central part of the state. Haskell has been married for the past year, and wishes to be remembered to all of the old gang.

Although the members of the class at Commencement this year was not so large, there was a great deal of enthusiasm shown toward an effort to contact some of the members of the class not heard from in the past six years. So with Summer coming on, more information about class members is requested for Jim Armstrong's banner September ALUMNUS. A postal card will be sufficient, as we do want to know where you are and what you are doing.

Following a trip East, Ben Oakes wrote from Chicago as follows:

I called Bob Neydon, '31, going through Detroit, but did not catch him in. I had only about five minutes while the train stopped there.

I saw the following at Harvard Business College: Bill Leahy, '31, is in the "short" session there starting, February 1, 1937 and ending in August. He is getting along fine. Saw Jack Gleason, '36, who is a first year man there. Also Joe and John McKean from Alexandria, Louisiana, who are both in their first year, as well as Tony Anzlov from Cleveland. Also saw George Cannon, '36, who rooms with Jack Gleason. I spent two days in New York. Saw Bud Touhy, '31, who expects to visit the campus for the first game next Fall, as does Joe Lenihan, '29, whom I saw at his Belle Harbor, Long Island home. Also saw George Rohrs, '32, at his office with Hornblower & Weeks, 40 Wall Street. Ran into Jack Finneran, '33, at the Biltmore just before catching the train for Chicago.

A personal letter from the reunion chairman to the members of the class of 1932:

To each and every one of the 170 alumni of 1932 who returned for this, our five-year Reunion, I want to extend my heartfelt thanks. Your splendid co-operation, and the personal sacrifice you made to come back to the campus for this Commencement week-end, truly merited the enjoyable time we had together. I am sure that not a single one of you regrets the trip.

Especially are thanks in order to the committee of local alumni who made our Reunion party of Friday evening the grand success it unquestionably was—Jack McGrath, George Hennion, Bernie Roethelie, and Joe Petrutz.

To the fellows who could not come back, I want to summarize briefly what happened:

Friday evening at the Columbia Athletic Club in South Bend, (the Knights of Columbus building in our days) we had our Reunion Party. Nearly 150 of the boys were there. Father Frank Cavanaugh, rector of Corby Hall in 1931-1932, spoke to the boys. Neil Hurley, editor of the Scholastic; Gene Connelly, president of the 1932 Senior Class; Herb Giorgio, Chairman of the S.A.C., and class secretary; Flo McCarthy, and Jim Armstrong, secretary of the Alumni Association, also briefly addressed the gang. A bit of entertainment, buffet supper and refreshments topped off the evening.

The Mass Saturday morning for all the deceased alumni included in its remembrance the souls of Rollie "Lucky" Baldwin, Ted Scholzen and Johnny Higgins.

Saturday evening, the regular Alumni Banquet was held, at which the Class of 1932 occupied a special section. The headquarters on the campus for the class were two floors of Dillon Hall.

Sunday morning, at a special Mass for the 1932 Class, Father Paul Hallinan, '32, editor of the Dome, offered the Mass for Fred Snite, who sailed Sunday from Shanghai, still in the "iron lung." Father Hallinan also remembered another 1932 Class member—Jerry Teevens, who died that same Sunday evening from an incurable illness. Harry Stegman and Hack Wilson, both '32ers, and now studying for Holy Orders in Moreau Seminary, served Father Hallinan's Mass.

All in all, fellows, it was a grand week-end, and let's remember the good times we had together when, in 1942, we are deciding to return again for the ten-year reunion, which also happens to be the Centennial Year.

Ed O'Malley.

George Cullinan, of the Union Carbide and Carbon Company, sailed from San Francisco for Shanghai in February. He expects to remain in China for three years, according to information from Father Doremus.

Benedict Harrington has announced the opening of law offices in the Ritz Theatre Building, 46 Washington Avenue, Carteret, New Jersey.

Ed Mehren's new address, as vice-president of the Citrus Club Products, Inc., is the Security Building, Phoenix, Arizona.

The latest success of Joe Lopker is evidenced by his full page drawing on the front page of the magazine section of the El Paso (Texas) Times (and probably on other front pages, since it was a King Features job). The page was forwarded to Father O'Hara by Fran Oelerich, Chicago, who was visiting in El Paso parts.

With his dues, George Bolger,

Sault Ste Marie, Michigan, recently sent a lot of news. He said:

"Since I last wrote several things have happened. My mother died in April, 1935, and I was married to Elizabeth Koppi, a graduate of St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minnesota, that following Fall.

"Peter Cameron, '30, was married in July of 1935 and is the proud father of a baby son now. Robert Powell, '33, of Detroit, is a summer visitor here, being a hay feverite (the Sault is great for those with hay fever) and is associated with his father in the real estate business in Detroit.

Hoch closes his second year of super service with the unbeatable record of having "made" every issue of the ALUMNUS since he took over in November, 1935. The editors thank him heartily. He says:

Another Commencement and another year since the '35ers took their sheepskins home to stow away in the bottom of the trunk. For two months we appealed for notification of your return over the week-end, but none was forthcoming. On Friday night only seven had shown up, but by Saturday evening over 30 had crossed the threshold to register. Of course, nothing had been planned, so small groups were seen to gather in various spots to add their hilarity to the week-end.

We have been asked to "boil down" everything in this report. We'll try!

Fran Dunn became the father of a baby girl on May 24. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Dunn much happiness.

Three Morrisons have taken degrees at Notre Dame; the last was Reginald this year. To see their brother take his scroll came Frank and Arnold. The latter is one of us.

Since our boys returned to the fold unannounced many had to stay in the far away sanctums of Lyons instead of in Dillon. Among them were Jim Howard and Bob Byrnes, who took a room together. We spent a pleasant hour in the midst of their conviviality Sunday morning. Jim has been working for A. C. Allan Investment Company in Chicago.

We understand, from sources that should be accurate, that Phil Jacobs is employed in a bank in native Alexandria.

Frank McGuire returned to spend the three days with us, and said that he is going abroad this Summer. At the moment he is not working, but he has expectations for September.

Frank informed us that he had met Jerry Cushing at a Bull Fight in Mexico City. Jerry is reputed to have spent a well earned vacation in San Antonio, Texas, but is now back on the job with the Great Lakes Dock and Dredge Company getting the dope from the "bottom."

Joe Flynn and Claude Tourek rested their bodies in Dillon Hall, having been among those who arrived Friday. Joe started Monday, June 7, on a six week's training course with the Thomas people (the hair growers). After that he anticipates being sent East with a sales manager's diploma.

Joe told us that Frank Leonard has been with the Thomas organization for some time, and is located in Rochester, New York.

On Saturday night we made up a party consisting of Bill Lord, Bill Burkhardt, Louis Hruby, Ray Oakes, Tom Proctor and Bob Proctor, '33. During the course of the night we learned from the Lord boy that Norge and Company is prospering through his efforts.

Jim Cronin blew in for a while. He is peddling radiators (American) through the north-east counties of Iowa.

Several weeks ago we learned from Gene Witchger's brother (Freshman this year) that friend Gene had invented something. Not being an engineer we cannot pass on the dope to you—but it is an accomplished fact. Gene is now located in Detroit. We endeavored to get more evidence from Gene, but all he would admit was the intention and nothing further.

A short while back we received a wedding invitation from Tom Standish way down in Texas. The wedding is June 16. We appreciate the bid, Tom, and wish you and Mrs. Standish, the former Miss Elizabeth Rhein, much happiness. Vic Arcadi stopped on the campus just after Commencement on his way back to California. Vic, with Roy Scholz, had just finished his second year at Johns Hopkins Med School, Baltimore.

Tom Proctor has gone East for the Summer, and is working as a tour conductor for Tauck Tours of New York City. Tom obtained the position through an old Chicago World's Fair friend. He will have the Gaspé route, which will take him to French Canada.

For the summer your scribe anticipates attending the University of Chicago, taking further courses in Social Work. During the period we shall be living in the heart of the Italian quarter at 1300 South Newberry Avenue (off Roosevelt Road) in the Old Town Boys' Club. Drop down and see us any week-end, as that will be the time we will most likely be there.

This brings us to the end of another year of writing your chatter. We sincerely hope that you have found it interesting and worthwhile. Your letters have indicated that you found it so. We would like to hear from those of you who have been silent these past two years. How about a postcard or a letter? We promise to answer all the correspondence received during the summer months, and any of the outstanding missives of the past winter.

What the column has been during the past months has been due entirely to your co-operation, for without it, we would have had nothing to write about. For your fine spirit and wholehearted support we extend our sincere appreciation. Let us keep the '35ers alive and interested through a bigger and better column as the years go by. It is up to you. We think it can be done.

Baseball news says that Vic Mettler is a reserve outfielder with the Indianapolis team. Frankie Gaul, '36, is with the Moline, Illinois, club, in the Three-I league as the property of the Chicago Cubs, and Andy Pilney, the property of the Boston Bees, is with Columbia of the Sally League, by way of Albany of the International League and Scranton of the New York Pennsylvania league.

Misinformation caused the report to be published in the Religious Bulletin and, in consequence, in the May ALUMNUS, that Luke Kelly's mother had died. The Editors are glad to say that this news was unfounded.

Irving Garnitz, state representative from South Bend, sponsored a bill in the House of the latest Indiana legislature which repealed an act relating to damages and amended an act relating to procedure. Professor Rollison of the Law School, brought this information to the attention of the ALUMNUS.

Pepped up by a visit to the Publications Office, Uncle Sam Moran does the following beautiful job for you:

Inasmuch as the events of Universal Notre Dame Night came too late to be included in the May column, I have carried them over to this issue.

About 400 were present for the celebration at the Hotel McAlpin here in New York. From '36 were Walt Matusevich, Joe Waldron, Jim Sherry, Bill Walsh, Jim Kirby, Bill Gillespie, and Joe Schmidt. From the neighboring class of '35 were Jim McDevitt, Al Lawton, Jerry Doyle, Bill Schmidt and others. Also present was Ralph Christensen, ex. '35, who told me he had gone to M.I.T. to continue his architectural studies and had recently returned from a stay in South America.

Had a card from Bill Macdonald some time back. Bill writes that he is studying, with Lindell Kinman, at Washington University (St. Louis) Medical School. Bill didn't send any address, so that's the best I can do. Let's hear from you again, Bill, with more information on the boys in your section.

Via Frank Murray, still studying hard at Cornell Med School here in New York, comes the following information gleaned from various correspondents. We trust it as accurate, for Frank telephoned it in one evening and the connection was very bad.

Justin O'Toole is now in the real estate business in Chicago's South Side. Al Rohol is reported selling insurance, but his whereabouts is unknown. Jack Bray, from down Kentucky way, after surviving the recent floods, is also selling insurance, probably back in Paducah.

Reno Zarantonello is in line for congratulations, as he is reported to be happily married, and living in Gary, Indiana.

Bill Baer is located with an oil company somewhere in West Virginia but his exact whereabouts are also unknown.

Don MacKay and Fred Cox are roommates at Northwestern Med School.

Lou Hansman, the pride of Walsh's fourth floor, is reported here, there and everywhere. The latest rumor has him located in the wholesale merchandise department of Carson, Pirie and Scott, Chicago. How about a letter, Lou, since you didn't answer my card of some months ago? Also, let's hear from that other accounting demon, Tommy Vicars.

Gene Tobin is distributing a fast selling insulating material back in the home town. According to reports, Gene is plugging up every rat hole in the vicinity of Galesburg, Illinois. And that about concludes the flow of information from the Murray source. Thanks, Frank, and thanks, too, to Paul Doyle, who supplied much of it.

Having the good fortune to merit a vacation from the government service, I took ten days for a trip which included a five-day stop over at Notre Dame for Commencement. Those from '36 who returned to the campus for the week-end included Tommy Campbell, who although graduating a half year before most of us, states that he has adopted the class of '36: Al Donahue; Van Baur; Bud Veravet; Art Huber, who is an accountant, with the South Bend Lumber Co, I believe; Ray Deely, who came back to be best man at his brother's wedding in the Log Chapel; and Paul Doyle, who is with the Cities Construction Co. in Hammond, Indiana.

A large number of lawyers, formerly of '36, received their A.B. degrees at the exercises. Among the many seen over the week-end were ex-roommate Cliff Brown, Hank Pojman, Bill Bowes (who trimmed me very badly at golf), Prial Curran, John Lechner, Bus Meyer, Joe McMahon, Sam Minella, Steve Miller, Frank Smith, Bob Schmelzle (who also doubled as class orator), Maury Quinn, and others.

A fair number of '36½'s returned. Those I bumped into included Marty Bayer, Art Cronin, Joe Dreuker, and Miller Mallet, who is now writing dramatic scripts for radio stations in Cincinnati.

Wally Fromhart has taken unto himself a better half. Congratulations, Wally. I might suggest that the members of the class, who have the time, drop me a line when they announce an engagement, get married, or become "proud pappas." The ALUMNUS is always glad to print such notices.

A letter from Tommy Campbell, whom I also saw at Commencement, informed me that Tom is now an accountant with the firm of Seidman & Seidman, in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Tommy also writes that Tom Bott has announced his engagement to a Grand Rapids girl. Congratulations also, Tom.

Further congratulations go to Art Varneau, also of Grand Rapids, who is married and already has an offspring. Art is working with the Haskell Mfg. Co. in Grand Rapids. Tom Campbell can be reached at 1458 Wilcox Parke Drive, S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Also had a card from Jerry Vogel who states that he is doing graduate work in sociology at Notre Dame. I didn't see Jerry while on the campus as he had to leave for camp in advance.

An item in the paper stated that Bill Shakespeare underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis on May 28.

From the New York Times of recent date: Art Neuman, ex. '36, won second prize in a drama contest at Cornell University, where he is now a student.

And that concludes the work of your class secretary until the next issue of the ALUMNUS in the Fall. In the meantime, let me hear from some of you '36ers in the West—Curly Reagan, and others. And how about a little information on the New Englanders from Joe Mansfield, Doc Murphy, or Joe Prendergast? And what about a few letters from the South and Mid West—or from any other section for that matter. I promise to answer all communications as promptly as possible, so keep the wires hot.

And so until next Fall, a happy Summer to youse and youse.

Morris Hertel is now designing Catholic churches in the offices of McCarthy, Smith and Eppig (George Eppig, '33) architects of Chicago. He had been with General Houses, Inc.
