Grady Called Home by Mothers Death

Lester C. Grady, a freshman in the department of journalism, left for his home in Brooklyn Sunday to attend the funeral services of his mother. Mrs. Grady was injured in an automobile accident in the streets of that city several weeks ago, but as her injuries appeared to be of a trival nature, she was not suposed to be in a serious condition. However during the past week she grew rapidly worse, and word was sent Saturday for Grady to come home. It is thought that Mrs. Grady died while her son was enroute to New York. No word has been received as yet, and it is not known whether or not Grady will return to the University to finish the work of the fourth quarter.

Set Date for Catholic Education Week

The department of education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference has designated May 11 to May 17 as Catholic Education week. More that 6,500 parochial schools and 2,000 academies, comply with the department in the observances of this week.

That such a week set aside for observance as Catholic Education week is important is evident. The demand for educated men in all ranks at the present time is great. The demand must be fulfilled from the graduating classes of our present-day colleges and universities. Leaders in all classes of life will be recruited from this yearly army of graduated students and woman going to be leaders? Catholics should be leaders as well as anybody else.

That Catholic education is necessary can be gleaned from the following figures. Approximately 2,500,000 students are in all the high schools of the United States and in 1922 there were only 152,-000 Catholic students enrolled in Catholic secondary schools, less than 6.5 per cent of the whole. A union building to be built as soon as possible. A well-organized student body, residing on the campus. True recognition of good scholarship and a better appreciation # for the efforts of men in campus activities.

They've taken Celia Cooney to Auburn prison. 'Celia, the bobbedhaired little girl who terrorized New York with her pistol a few months ago, will have to do a "stretch" of from six to twenty years.

THE BOBBED-HAIRED BANDIT.

New Yorkers who shouted for her capture a short time ago had to hold back the tears as she was led into the jailer's room to say goodbye to Eddie, her husband, and the mother who hadn't paid any attention to her for four years. The story, told in its completeness from the witness chair, was a bit different than was expected.

Celia was just a kid whose mother didn't care. Almost from the day she was born, the probation officer reported, she ignored her. She grew up_without a mother's ideals, and finally she went too far and was caught. And then Celia's mother came to her. The mother had made a mistake, but in that little cell in the Raymond street jail Celia laid her bobbed-head in her mother's arms, and the mother's wrinkled hands stroked her child's hair again. What brought Celia and her mother together? The opening gates of Auburn prison? Perhaps, but more probably the God-made tie between mother and child.

Tomorrow is mothers' day. Celia is in Auburn prison. Her mother is in the little one-room hovel in an east side basement. And yet, who will say that they are not nearer to each other than they have ever been before?

THE KLAN SWEEPS INDIANA.

Candidates bearing the endorsement of the Ku Klux Klan have just won a victory in the Indiana primaries. The republican nominee for governor is approved by the hooded band, and even one of Notre Dame's sons has been beaten by the K. K. in a race for prosecuting attorney of St. Joseph county.

From the tabulation of returns it appears that the Klan members deserted all party lines to put their candidates across. They organized for a single purpose. But, successful as they have been in the primaries, they cannot hope to win the election. The fair-minded citizen of the state will now have to do a little deserting of party lines himself, scratch his ticket from here to there, and keep the Klansmen out.

. Though the Klan is strong in the Hoosier state, it is unlikely that it will ever be strong enough to force all anti-klan forces into one political party in order to defeat it. Evidently that is what the kleagles are attempting to do. The way to prevent it is an active resistance now, and that can be effected only by unity.

KNOCKING KNOCKERS

All one has to do to tell what a hammer is used for is to look at one. But hammers like a lot of other things suffer misuse.

Knocking is one of those things in life that may be called a line of easiest resistance. Rebellion and revolution always come easy. It takes brains, use of brains, courage, and decision to construct a remedy; destruction is invariably easier than construction.

Knocking is a kind of criticism; it is an ignorant kind of criticism. There are, in fact, only two kinds of criticism: the kind that builds up and the kind that tears down and leaves nothing in place of the thing it has destroyed—that is knocking.

Fair, constructive, criticism can work wonders. Its possibilities are nearly limitless. There is never a time that it is not acceptable, providing, of course, its use is tactful.

Knocking, no matter what implement is used, is destructive. Don't destroy. The world has always needed builders and always will need builders. There is one thing you can knock and that is the knocker.

A movie star receives three salaries: what he says he gets, what he thinks he ought to get and what he really gets.

An optimist casts bread on the water and expects sandwiches in return.

No porter will make up your berth in the pullman of life.

Dreamy eyes may be all right, but they can't make biscuits.

"Bliss"

By Katherine Mansfield; Alfred, New York. $2.50.

When Katherine Mansfield died at Fontainebleau on January 9, 1923, England lost her foremost shortstory writer, a woman to whom as diverse a trio as Walter De la Mare, John Galsworthy, and H. G. Wells paid unstinted tribute. The opinion is held by many men of letters - conspicuous among them is her husband, J. Middleton Murry—that she was the most accomplished literary artist of this generation.

During her life time, Katherine Mansfield was accused of cruelty and of bitternes, and for this reason she was not overly anxious to place her work before the public. She was finally persuaded, however, to permit some of her stories

Although "Bliss" is not the most recent of her volumes to appear, it is the most valuable since it contains "Prelude," the most perfect of her stories, and, in point of time, the most important. With "Prelude" she proved herself to be original and revolutionary in technique and construction; the unity of impression gives a clarity which is unexcelled. It was after the appearance of "Bliss" that fame came to her, slowly, but from güarters where praise meant most, and when, a short time later, "The Garden Party" was published, the chorus of applause was undis-

In "Bliss" the individual stories maintain a high plane of artistic merit unusual in most collections. Next to "Prelude" and the story from which the volume takes its name, comes "The Man Without a Temperament," a picture of unselfish devotion of a man to his wife, drawn as only she could have drawn it.

In a time when short stories are for the most part written according to pattern, and to a poor pattern at that, the work of Katherine Mansfield, who felt that she had a truth to impart and whose one desire was to be true to her trust, stands out like the flower in the line from Shakespeare which she

Frosh Meet Varsity This Afternoon

The annual varity-freshmen outdoor track meet which will be staged on Cartier field this afternoon will precede by one week, the varsity's dual meet with the Michigan Aggies at Lansing and the yearling's track encounter with Western State Normal at Kalamazoo. The personnel of the freshmen squad will be determined according to the individual showing of the yearlings this afternoon.

Considering the performance of the first year men in the indoor season, the meet this afternon should be made very interesting in several events. The yearlings have a strong contender in the high jump in Freye. Charley Piley in the broad jump should make it close competition for the varsity jumpers, Livergood, Cunningham and Brady. Boland the weight star of the Frosh has been registering about 38 feet in the shot put.

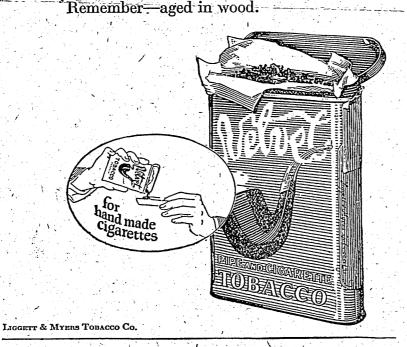

Judge in the mile and Hulty in the half mile will be given an invaluable opportunity to compete with the varsity runners in these events in perparation for the Normal meet next Saturday. Seniors who have invited South Bend girls to attend the Ball, and who desire to have the pictures of their girl friends printed in the Tribune, are requested to give these pictures to Paul Funk. The Tri-bune is planning to print the pictures of the local girls who will attend the Senior Ball and these pictures will have to be given to Paul Funk without delay.

It is imperative that those seniors who are contemplating taking girls from St. Mary to the Ball, turn in these girls names to Gallagher or Desmond. If the girls will have a relative to chaperone them during Ball week this will not be necessary.
