Rossie Opposes Additional Prefects, Calls Hall Presidents' Council Meeting

Student Body President Richard Rossie last night blasted the addition of 63 new prefects to residence halls and announced he would call a special meeting of the Hall Presidents' Council Wednesday to consider the matter. Terming the new prefects "paid enforcers," Rossie contended "I'm opposed to the prefect system. The biggest reason is the imposition of prefects without consultation of students or hall councils. These people have no business being in the halls unless the hall councils approve."

Rossie made clear, he would act on approval of the Council. He maintained, "I want a Hall Presidents' Council meeting to see how these people feel. If all are against the imposition of prefects, I will take direct action."

Immediate reaction to Rossie's stand was favorable. Student Body Vice President Chuck Nau commented "I fully support Richard's position on this. As far as I'm concerned, the Administration is using these prefects as a way of getting around the hall councils and judicial boards. If I were a hall president and these people were doing this job which is to rat on people I would have them censured at once."

Student Government Executive Coordinator and Farley Hall President Mike McCauley was strongly critical of the prefect addition, speaking in a tone McCauley, "As a Notre Dame student I am deeply disturbed with this situation. It connotes a Dick Daley-type police state. As Farley President I'm happy that hall government and the administrative staff have enough confidence and trust in each other to work in the existing student judicial system and not resort to this Gestapo-type checking."

In an interview Friday, Dean of Students Rev. James L. Riehle, C.S.C., Dean of Students, defended the new prefect system, emphasizing a counseling as well as disciplinary function. Riehle admitted "I think there's going to be a problem because of student feeling that these guys are policemen. I, for one, don't intend that they be cops. They will be counselors, advisers, and disciplinarians. There are certainly some who will be overly zealous, but you must remember that there are 63 new ones."

Turning to the counseling role, Riehle outlined plans for a center under the direction of former Notre Dame Dean of Students Rev. Joseph Simons, C.S.C. He maintained "There will be meetings of the counselors, who by the way are primarily grad students, for mutual information and discussion. We have never done this before."

Nevertheless, Riehle made clear the disciplinary function of the prefects. He stated "It's in the manual that certain things are not to be done. These people are going to be there to see if rules are carried out. If they see violations it is their duty to do something about it. Discipline is largely being turned over to the prefects. Rectors should have time to be counselors. Night watchmen have been told to see prefects when they see violations."

Riehle remarked that the prefects will have discretion according to circumstances, and stated the prefects would not be told to "patrol the halls." Concerning violations, the Dean of Students maintained "These things will not be tolerated. If I hear stories the prefect will have to explain. If the prefect is unsatisfactory in his job he will be asked to leave." All new prefects have signed a contract and are responsible to Dean of Students whereas previously they were under the Office of Student Affairs.

Riehle also spoke of equitability in discipline, contending "Some halls around here have run loose and fancy free. This is unfair to everybody. It is especially unfair to the strict rector who tries to enforce the rules. Under this system there will always be the policy of one set of rules for the whole university."

Rector reaction to the new prefects was strongly positive and in stark contrast with the opinions of student government leaders. Farley rector Rev. James Shilts, C.S.C., defended the new prefect role, saying "I'm entirely in favor of the new system. If it works out right priests can be priests." While acknowledging the disciplinary role, Shilts also commented favorably on the counseling role of the prefects. The Farley Rector pointed out that most rectory are full time faculty members who lack adequate time to perform both disciplinary and counseling roles.

Dillon Rector Rev. James Flanigan, C.S.C., took the position that little open change will come as a result of the new prefects. Flanigan stated yesterday "On the surface it is going to add up to practically what it was before. Rectors will still have much the same say in matters affecting the hall . . . There is no change in rector authority as a result of the prefect situation." However, Flanigan commented favorably on the improved

Ten Nabbed In Raid

Ten Notre Dame students, between the ages of 18 and 20, were arrested in a surprise raid on Simeri's Tavern, 410 Hill St., early Saturday evening.

The raid, headed by detective sergeant Richard Chlebek of the South Bend Police Department Vice Squad, was not connected to the activities of the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission which has staged several raids on South Bend Taverns frequented by Notre Dame students in recent years.

Chlebek termed this raid a "routine check" of the local restaurant licensed to serve alcoholic beverages. He said these unannounced raids are scheduled to continue throughout the school year.

Chlebek refused to make any further comment.

Early in August a raid on the Corby Tavern netted a number of underage drinkers all from the South Bend area.

student-staff ratio and stressed that closer communication would be possible as a result of the new prefects.

One hall unusual in both the nature and number of its new prefects is Cavanaugh, in which Rev. Matthew Miceli has engaged four juniors to act as freshman counselors. Miceli stated yesterday "My idea is that they be primarily counselors and especially freshman counselors. Of course, discipline is part of it, too. There will be no patrol of the corridors, but the prefects will keep an eye on things. If something comes up they're responsible."

Fr. Miceli expressed satisfaction with the new system, saying "It spreads out the obligations and helps out the students who are prefects."

The same tavern was visited by the Vice Squad early last fall during a crackdown in which several ND students were apprehended.

Vincent J. Simeri, victim of Saturday night's raid, said he suspected that police had been brought to the cafe by a neighbor who complained of excessive noise in the parking lot behind the building.

Earlier Simeri was quoted as saying that he had been warned about this two months earlier by the police.

Simeri said that he expects to be fined by the ABC. "The tavern will remain open for business as usual," he said. "But all the boys should have a Notre Dame ID card saying they're 21 unless I already know the guy is old enough."

A 16-year-old juvenile was also arrested in Saturday night's raid.

Commie VP Zagarell Denounces Capitalism

"George Wallace is not an alternative. Wallace is the same as Humphrey and Nixon in double doses," claimed Michael Zagarell last night as he addressed a packed crowd in the Law Auditorium.

Zagarell is the Communist Party Candidate for Vice-President of the United States. He is running on a ticket with Mrs. Charlene Mitchell, a Negro from Watts. Zagarell's comments drew spontaneous laughter and applause from the audience, as he developed a theme of capitalistic exploitation.

According to the 23-year old candidate, "We are living in a time of fundamental crisis; in the cities, in the financial realm, in our foreign policy and in our race relations." Zagarell asserted that neither Humphrey nor Nixon are directly approaching the issues

Zagarell then addressed himself to the war in Viet Nam. "We're not there to defend national security. We're there to defend private interest and private property." Such companies as DuPont, B.F. Goodrich, and Firestone are supposedly, through war contracts and tax benefits, purposely extending the war for their own advantage.

Zagarell's solution to the war was threefold: "end the bombing immediately, negotiate with the National Liberation Front, and bring the boys home."

Racism also is tinted with the stain of American dollars, according to the speaker. "Black suppression is a profitable business," Zagarell said. He mentioned continued cases of school segregations and discriminatory hiring practices. On the issues of poverty and welfare, Zagarell again stressed the inherently dishonest motivations of American business. He mentioned that the oil industry was receiving over two billion dollars annually to prepare for an eventual oil depletion, and that the farmers were given 33 million each year not to grow crops. "Meanwhile," Zagarell said, "those under the poverty level pay for all the welfare programs of the entire country; a total of 10 billion dollars."

As to the issue of crime Zagarell denounced "the 1% of the population that controls 70% of the wealth. 'This is the real crime,' he said. 'How can you call this a democracy?'"

In concluding, Zagarell spoke of a dream, not of the presidency, but of what his campaign in fact represents: "A change to a new society, a change to socialism."

Library 7th Floor Theology Collection Moved; Only 5th, 11th, 14th Floors Now Closed

Rev. James W. Simonson, CSC, Director of the Libraries, announced Friday that the theology collection of the Notre Dame Memorial Library has been moved from the seventh to the eighth floors of the library. The floor has previously been empty; it will now serve the same capacity in the stacks as the other floors do, although the study carrels have not yet been completed.

Now only the fifth and eleventh floors (and, of course, the proverbial presidential fourteenth) are not part of the library proper; the fifth floor houses the offices of the University of Notre Dame Press and some of the research workers in the behavioral sciences, while the eleventh is an office complex including the Institute for the Study of Man in Contemporary Society and related work, the Philosophic Institute for the Study of Artificial Intelligence, and the Institute for Advanced Religious Studies.

Father Simonson stated, however, that the University Press and other facilities are strictly "tenants" and eventually will evacuate as other space becomes available and the library collection grows.

Simonson also said that a large space immediately adjacent to the Audio Center on the second floor has been partitioned off to serve as a Microfilm Reading Room. It will be used to consolidate all the library's equipment for reading microfilms and reproducing enlargements of individual microfilm pages, as well as the College Library Microfilm Collection. The latter includes a complete run of the New York Times and government documents deposited at Notre Dame.

Victor Schaefer, former

Director of the Libraries, is returning this month to serve as Curator of Special Collections. In recent years, Dr. Francis Lazenby has served as Curator in addition to his other responsibilities as one of the library's assistant directors. Mr. Schaefer has been, for the past two years, Director of the Library of Congress office in Wiesbaden, Germany.

The Mediaeval Institute, located on the seventh floor of the library, recently finished an addition to its facilities. The Institute's library, in addition to a good general collections of materials relating to the study of the mediaeval period, also has extensive microfilm copies of the holdings of two major European libraries. For several years, the Institute has been engaged in a program of microfilming all of the holdings of the Ambrosiana Library in Milan. All the manuscripts there have been photographed; the art reproductions in the library are still being processed, although the Mediaeval Institute now has over 10,000 of them.

In addition, the Mediaeval Institute recently acquired a microfilm copy of the holdings of the previously inaccessible Capitular Library of Monza. The Capitular Library is the Library of the Chapter of the Canons of the Cathedral of Milan and contains several hundred cartularies (collections of legal documents) and works on liturgy.

This summer, the Director of the Institute, Canon Astrik L.

Gabriel, published a Catalogue of Microfilms of 1000 Microfilms in the Ambrosiana. The catalogue deals primarily with scientific works.

Father Simonson also said that the library of Holy Cross College in Washington, the house for theology study for the Congregation of the Holy Cross, has been moved to Moreau Hall. It consists of some 20,000 volumes; portions of it will eventually be transferred to the Memorial Library.

Joyce Orients Frosh Religiously Services Announces Program

Sunday evening in Sacred Heart Church, it was time for the religious phase of the grueling freshman orientation. Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, Executive Vice President, who gave the address, began with a charming reminiscence of a similar evening "35 years ago, when I sat on the other side of the pew for the Freshmen Mission." He then warmly welcomed the newcomers into the "devoted and tightly knit spiritual family," the members of which have "one thing in common, the treasure beyond price, the Catholic faith."

But the more precise purpose of the meeting, Joyce continued, was "to help you get started here on the right foot, to make sure you start off your college career in the state of sanctifying grace?" Joyce urged the students to take a few moments "to concentrate on some of the truly basic questions about human existence. e.g. 'who am I? ... where shall I be 100 years from now?' He emphasized the inevitability of death. "What if the angel of death came tonight?" Riches and political power are ashes at the moment of death. He then recounted the old tale of Francis Borgia, a Spanish courtier in the days of Charles V and Isabella. One day he saw the week-old corpse of a beautiful princess. The vanity of the flesh shook him profoundly. "Never again will I serve a master who can die," said he. And he didn't.

"Nothing is so precious as life... and we tend to put aside the somber thoughts that it must come to an end." But to avoid the thought of death "is to be an ostrich". Indeed, "what we are at the moment of our death, we will be for all eternity". Yes, death "can come sooner than you think, maybe tonight". Joyce urged all the freshmen to "live like the saints", with a "constant awareness of our eternity".

"The thought of dying outside the state of sanctifying grace", he noted, "is not a pleasant one for it confronts us with hell." Father assured his audience that hell was "not a mythical place the Church has conjured up to frighten people."

He eschewed a comment on the torments, but pointed out that one thing was for sure: "it is easier to sit here and talk about hell than it is to sit in hell and talk about Notre Dame."

Then came the classical freshman orientation chestnut about three boys in the car accident. Two were killed and the third, seriously injured, was trapped in the mangled wreckage screaming for a priest. "Tonight is bargain night," said Father Joyce, "it is your chance to get some help if you are upside down morally. Our Lord knew that man could be drawn into sin". The story of the prodigal son shows his sentiments. "God's mercy is infinite". No doubt about it. "These boxes in this church are the signs of mercy... ten priests will be here tonight in these boxes... Here is the challenge we are setting before you this evening. If you don't walk out of here in the state of sanctifying grace, you are missing a great opportunity."

Tomorrow morning, Joyce continued, "we would like all of you to come to this altar like we were handing out $1000 bills—but actually we are giving something far more valuable, the body and blood of Christ."

He ended his address with some encouragement for the pusillanimous. We realize many of the men have problems, some large, some small, and some "having to do with sex". In the boxes tonight, said he, are "experienced confessors", who will "help solve your problems in just a few minutes". They will stay in the confessionals as long as men keep coming. Thus, Christ offers the opportunity for all freshmen to start off their "university career as true and loyal sons of his mother Notre Dame."

New Vote

Roland D. Grimm, President of Endowment Management and Research Corporation, Boston, Massachusetts, has been elected to membership on the University Board of Trustees.

The announcement was made by the Board of Trustees.

The announcement was made by University President, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh and Board Chairman Edmund A. Stephan, a Chicago attorney.

Grimm's election raises the number of trustees to 37 including 30 lay men and 7 priests.

Student Services Commissioner Al Knappenberger revealed today the Commission's present activities and some plans for the year.

Currently, the Commission is holding a discount furniture sale in the Rathskellar of La Fortune Student Center from 1 to 4 pm on weekdays. Glidden's Furniture Store of South Bend sells the furniture to the Commission at cost, as they did last year. The Commission adds 6% to cost and the savings total 8% to 10% for the students.

Knappenberger explained that the savings made available last year were not well advertised and he expects a substantial increase over last year's sales of $1600.

Another service available from the Commission is the Freshman Photo Directory, which was expanded this year to include most of the freshmen at Notre Dame and St. Mary's.

The new student directory for Notre Dame and St. Mary's will include all students, faculty, and administration from both colleges. It will be available by November 1, a month earlier than last year. Knappenberger attributed the earlier date of issuance to the efficiency of Dave Breen, who heads the directory committee.

A major contribution to The Observer was made by the Commission in the form of an IBM Composer System. The System justifies copy into the exquisitely formed and proportioned lines you are now reading.

The Commission pays $625 per month to rent the machine but Knappenberger expects that it will be self-financing because of the revenue it can potentially accrue from outside jobs.

Campus Press has a new darkroom complex this year and will be reorganized. It will also rent better Mimeo and Xerox machines. Plans for an expensive letter press are still tentative. Right now, according to Knappenberger, it is a question of "how we can hack it financially."

New Politics Party Nominates Gregory, Lane; Demands Withdrawal, Reparations To Vietnamese

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 15—The New Politics Party of Indiana nominated comedian Dick Gregory and New York attorney Mark Lane as write-in candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency at its convention here Saturday. The convention, attended by many active in the state's McCarthy organization, also denounced the war in Vietnam, calling for an immediate U. S. withdrawal and "massive reparation payments to the Vietnamese people."

Dr. James A Bogle of Notre Dame, chairman of Indiana Citizens for McCarthy, disclaimed connection with the New Politics effort but appeared briefly at the convention. Bogle announced Friday his intention to work within the Democratic Party and endorsed Lt. Governor Robert Rock in the gubernatorial race. The Notre Dame professor said at the new party convention Saturday night "I am working within the Democratic Party and will be deeply involved in the Rock campaign. I hope all McCarthy youth in the state will support Bob Rock. I also support the reelection of John Brademas to Congress."

Bogle's statement contrasted with those of Dr. Harvey Lord, Dean of Students at the Christian Theological Seminary of Indianapolis and a Bogle aide during the Indiana primary. Lord, who will serve as the New Politics candidate for Senate if a lawsuit succeeds in placing the party on the ballot, told the convention "I hope we can make a go of it. Indiana desperately needs the New Politics Party."

The Democratic Party has shown itself unreceptive to the wishes of the voters of the state."

The New Politics convention was chaotic in all three of its Saturday sessions. A small radical element continually disrupted the convention with proposals such as a call for lowering the voting age to sixteen. At one point a large number of former McCarthy supporters threatened a walkout over one speaker's reference to President Johnson as a "fascist pig." It took the party five ballots to settle on Gregory as a Presidential candidate. The comedian edged out Massachusetts Institute of Technology urban expert Daniel P. Monyihan for the nomination by a 27 to 26 vote on a final plurality ballot. A third candidate, Black Panther Information Minister Eldridge Cleaver, trailed in the balloting.

The future of the New Politics Party is in grave doubt. Indiana Governor Roger Branigan refused to certify the Party's original candidate, Senator McCarthy, because McCarthy informed the Governor he was not a candidate. New York City's Mayor John V. Lindsay, who was slated to run for Vice President, similarly demurred. Branigan then rejected all petitions to put the Party on the Indiana ballot. A court suit has been filed, but even if it succeeds by time of the election only the name of Dr. Lord will be on the ballot.

With the party's status unclear, it was decided to enter Gregory and Lane as write-in candidates. Rev. William Dennis, an Indianapolis minister and official of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, will serve as write-in Senate nominee if Lord is denied a place on the ballot. Lord, while he would allow his name to remain on the ballot, declined to run as a write-in Senate candidate, saying "If I am on the ballot I must run. However, I like to teach and feel that Rev. Dennis should be the first officeholder of our party."

Even as the party convened there remained even within its ranks doubts as to means of action. While the third party idea was strongly favored by some such as Notre Dame English Professor Peter Michelson, others still expressed support for working within the Democratic Party. . . . Bogle hinted that Rock will work independently of the party and turn management of his campaign over to a citizens group. He suggested that such independent Democratic campaigns would end up being the refuge of Indiana's McCarthy workers.

McGrath Inauguration

Over the summer a number of major appointments and administrative changes were announced by both Notre Dame and St. Mary's. On Sunday, Sept. 29, Msgr. John J. McGrath, acting President of SMC, will be formally inaugurated.

In another switch at SMC, Sister M. Basil Anthony, C. S. C., was appointed Vice President for Fiscal Affairs, replacing Dr. Jack Detzler, who became Executive Vice President of the College. Sister Basil Anthony was Dean of Students for seven years. Moving to Sister Basil Anthony's old position is Sister Immaculata, former Dean of Freshmen. There will be no new Dean of Freshmen this year.

Sister Mary Jean Finske was appointed to a newly created post, that of Associate Academic Dean. She will work under Sister Alma. Sister Mary Jean was formerly a member of the Elementary Education Department of the college.

At Notre Dame, University President Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh announced the initiation of a new Office for Planning and Analysis which will relate to all facets of the University. Dr. Thomas E. Stewart, former Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs, was appointed Assistant to the President for Planning and Analysis.

Stewart will work with a steering committee headed by Executive Vice President Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C.S.C. The managing consulting firm of Cresay, McCormick and Paget will act in an advisory capacity.

NOTRE DAME, INDIANA

The Prefect Dilemma

We support the action of Student Body President Richard Rossie in calling a meeting of the Hall President's Council to consider the prefect situation. The action of the Administration in appointing 63 new student prefects is open to question and, quite possibly, deserves condemnation.

Notre Dame is moving slowly but surely toward student self-government with special progress having been made in the area of a student judiciary. To supercede that judiciary just as it is getting off the ground is entirely wrong. The placing of additional prefects in halls without consultation of either student leaders or the hall government is an absurd act bound to arouse much justified student indignation.

The Observer's objections, however, go beyond the act of imposition to the more significant question of the value of the new prefects. It would seem to us that the objectives of counselling and disciplining are entirely incompatible. Much has been said over the past two years of the so-called pastoral gap, caused partially by priests in the halls being forced to both advise and punish. Rectors have been unable to function effectively as counselors because of disciplinary responsibility.

We maintain that for this reason the prefect experiment is doomed from the very start. The discipline angle has received special emphasis even as groups are being set up with Father Simons to discuss counselling. Prefects have signed contracts and been placed under the office of the Dean of Students. Thus the enforcer role is embedded in the mind of the prefect and apparent to the student. Would a student seek counselling from one who enforces such inane rules as those on parietal hours and liquor. We think not. The whole training in counselling will be negated by the very dual role given the prefects.

Having seen the inconsistencies in the roles of the prefects, let us turn to the discrepancy of "discretion of circumstances." The prefects are being given leeway in enforcement, but unspecified leeway. This, in our opinion, will lead to the prefect having to make a most agonizing choice. Unable to be both counselor and disciplinarian, the prefect will be forced to choose between the roles. If he does not enforce university rules and emphasizes his counselling he is liable to dismissal. Can such a dismissal be justified? Is this right? The other choice is for the prefect to serve as disciplinarian and ignore his role as advisor. Thus he protects his job but negates the human effectiveness, which should be the heart and soul of his job. Either way, his choice is a monstrous one.

Thus we oppose the callous means used in the prefect implementations but also condemn the incompatible dual emphasis of the prefect as both enforcer and symbol of enlightenment. The new system is not well thought out and in its present form is doomed to failure. We hope Wednesday's meeting will be a springboard for constructive action, action which will be concerned with not only the means but also the ends as well.

Tim O'Meilia

With the Oklahoma game less than a week away, it is altogether fitting and proper that we publish a small but valuable dictionary of football slang and phrases to familiarize the unfamiliar.

Paydirt — 1) the opponent's end zone; advancing into which in possession of the ball is worth six points. 2) also referred to in connection with the Student Union, especially the Social Commission. For example, freshmen can often be heard saying, "I want to join the Social Commission and get in on some of that paydirt."

Audible – 1) play called at the line of scrimmage by the quarterback after the team is in formation. 2) also frequently called by Student Body President Richard Rossie after a defensive move by the Administration, such as the 63 new prefects; usually a low moan, whine or piercing scream.

Defense — 1) eleven men on one team assigned to the task of preventing the opposition from moving to paydirt. 2) in the case of the Notre Dame Administration, they have added 63 new prefects in an attempt, probably unsuccessful, to shore up a leaky defense which allowed an uncountable number of scores, both in bed and bottle.

Linebacker — 1) Defensive member responsible for backing the line on running plays and for assisting the secondary on pass plays. 2) known as vice president for student affairs Rev. Charles I. McCarragher, CSC, who is as fine a linebacker as there is in any college administration; has phenomenal lateral movement and always seems to be where the next play planned to be; superb at evading blockers.

Fumble – 1) occurs when as offensive ball carrier drops the ball in the course of attempting to gain yardage. 2) also known as the Student Senate.

Guard – 1) one of two offensive linemen who play on either side of the center and whose job it is to block. 2) something the Student Union is sorely in need of, particularly on occasions of Henry Mancini concerts.

Penalty – 1) loss of yardage from five to 15 yards, usually, because of a rules infraction by one team. 2) also known as Chuck Naps Incomplete Pass — 1) failure of a receiver to catch a football hruled, usually by the quarterback, to him as he runs toward the opponent's goal. 2) performed many times during the course of four years by Notre Dame students on St. Mary's and other girls. 3) also Fr. Hesburgh's attempt to establish some kind, any kind, of rapport with the student body.

First and ten - 1) occurs when the offensive team is given four downs to gain ten yards, whereupon they are awarded another first and ten. 2) also Saturday's incident at Simeri's.

Head Linesman – 1) one of the referees. who watches especially for offside and holding violations. 2) also Father Riehle.

Reunion – 1) occurs when old graduates get together after a game for drinking and joviality. 2) also an NSA convention.

The Year of the Heroic Guerrilla

BY DAVID KAHN

"The guerrilla," explains Huey Newton, Black Panther Defense "is a military commander and political theoretician all in one." The Cuban calendar has declared 1968, the Year of the Heroic Guerrilla. In the Year of the Heroic Guerrilla, the white liberal and his peace bird fly no more, America the beautiful becomes America the intolerable, and revolutionary force is recognized as the only alternative to legality. The Year of the Heroic Guerrilla marks the union of the black militant and the white radical; the Peace and Freedom Party locks arms with the Black Panthers. It is in the Year of the Heroic Guerrilla that the University Student strikes with the black worker; the Chicago bus drivers invited students last summer into their picket lines. In the Year of the Heroic Guerrilla, broad shouldered Chicago quivers and bends before a march of placid demonstrators, and braces its spine with 7500 National Guards and a fully activated 12,000 man police force.

We are coming to Chicago to vomit on the 'politics of joy,' to expose the secret decisions, upset the night club orgies and face the Democratic Party with all its illegitimacy and criminality.

Tom Hayden, The Rat

With Mayor Daley's much vaunted "an-ounce-of-prevention-is-worth-a-pound-of-cure" philosophy, the superabundance of blue bonnets was not a surprise. Stationed on every viaduct, street corner a park entrance way, the policemen stood inactive sometimes relieving boredom by directing traffic. The hardline ranks of Chicago police did nothing to discourage the demonstrators, but rather their toothless grimaces and billy club fidgeting became a source of righteousness. Dick Gregory commented, "you look around you and you see that from the amount of police and the amount of battle soldiers, you must be right." And the podium echoed over and over the same rhetorical questions: What kind of democracy is this which represses a cleavage of opinion? Of what value is a political system which must protect its structure from its own people?

Suppose we, the dissenters, are the future. And when the past looks at the future, the past sees everything wrong. Everything that is dying looks at everything that is young and new and says it shall not be. Carl Oglesby, speaking at Grant Park

Lincoln Park, traditionally a place to stroll for near north side stánographers and their dates on Sunday Morning, after a sleepless Saturday night, became a sanctuary for the gay, wild and free yippies during the Convention week. Bongos, flutes, boxed broken glass combining n Afro-Indian harmonies inspired pelvic happenings, black flag waving and general levity. Bodies bathed in the lagoon. Police encircled the park and at night in small clusters would make timid entrances with flashlights and swinging clubs. Curfew was to be enforced at eleven o'clock. Concerned yippy leaders suggested crash pads, and encouraged early departure to avoid a devastating confrontation. And when eleventh hour came, there were bleeding heads, broken backs, and an empty Lincoln Park.

Two, Four, Six, Eight, Organize to smash the state. Hate Pigs. Y.I.P. chants

A rally was scheduled for Grant Park, Wednesday. From there Alan Ginsberg, Jean Genet, Phil Ochs, and Carl Oglesby would lead a march to the amphitheatre. I was entering the park through the police lines which were located behind the band shell. One sweating cop squinted, tilted his head upwards, and shrieked, "Goddamn, they're taking down the flag." His whole body was shivering with hate. "Goddamn, they're taking down the flag. Gotta stop them." Another simultaneously radioed the event to headquarters. "Those damn yips are molesting the flag, and we're going in to stop them." Six police donned their helmets as they charged toward the flag pole. They dragged the daredevil student to the ground, and performed their billy club ritual. The whole rally advanced toward the interfering cops who became then more erratic with their blows in the face of an antagonized crowd. The podium shouts, "Remain seated. The pigs are attempting to disrupt our rally." Meanwhile, more heads bashed, and exchange of smoke bombs and finally the action subsides.

In making Chicago safe for their "democracy," they will show others that this "democracy," is unsafe for human beings.

The Rat

How to react to the hardwood slam and the smarting gases? Who to blame for the uniformed display of hatred and brutality? The isolated pig, most felt, was not to be damned. Demonstrators expressed open sympathy, exchanged peace signs with the cops, even clamored for a police-force raise-in-pay. The leaders defined the policeman as an appendage of the policy-maker, an agent of his white racist neighborhood, a paid protector of the status quo . . .

You kids are just a bunch of troublemakers. You've nothing to do but provoke policemen and cause disorder. An Innocent Bystander South Bend after the Chicago convention seemed somewhat inauspicious to its student population. Upon entering this South Shore station one evening, a black cabbie, eyes glazed, bellowed, "Are you a Yippie?"

"Well, not quite. I participated in last week's demonstration if that's what you mean."

"Well, I want to congratulate you. It was a horrible thing those cops had done. You know, I once organized labor for Studebaker. I know what it is to stand up for what you believe . . . You know, if you ever need a cabbie, call Mr. Peterson, cab number twenty-two." I shook his hand, discussed Mayor Daley, and departed.

Everybody has got to study this oncoming revolution in their own way and contribute to it in their own secret, subtle, creative fashion. Norman Mailer, speaking at Grant Park

No more Miss America! What is so ignored as last year's Miss America? This only reflects the gospel of our society, according to Saint Male: women must be young, juicy, malleable — hence age discrimination and the cult of youth. To win approval we must be both sexy and wholesome, delicate but able to cope, demure yet tintillatingly bitchy. Deviation of any sort brings, we are told, disaster: "You won't get a man."

The New York Women's Liberation League statement

Yes, the New York Women's Liberation League was mustering forces for the pageant protest (women only) in the fall. Peace and freedom Party circulated brochures and Free Huey placards. Chicago Film Co-op and Newsreel cameraman teams were shooting stock footage for free, national public screenings. Progressive Labor Party sold their periodicals on the streets. No bureaucratic compulsion, no commercial slickness — people came each with individual skills and dissents. And the consolidated protest of young and old, Puerto Rican, Black, white upper middle class seemed to underscore the universality of dissatisfaction. Jean Genet pledged international support. And the press coverage made the revolutionary vernacular household idiom Chicago mothers once controlled their children with goblins and roving fairies, resorted to a "You'll be the first to go when the revolution comes." And here at the house that Knute built, with its subterfuged prefects and inflated ROTC contingent, perhaps the dutiful "Up For the Kick-off" may be mingled this year with a vehement "Up with the Revolution."

REVOLUTION
ARE ALWAYS NEAR AT HAND.

Anti-ROTC Given Equal Time at Meeting

A surprisingly large turn-out of over two hundred freshman and parents attended an informal gathering Saturday afternoon to discuss the alternatives to joining the ROTC at Notre Dame. The meeting, held by permission of Rev. Charles McCarragher, University Vice-President for Student Affairs, was a first in school history. Student Body President Richard Rossie had apparently pushed for an "equal time" consideration, allowing those opposed to ROTC an opportunity to address the incoming freshmen.

A leaflet to publicize the meeting was circulated Saturday morning-- "Perhaps the most important decision you can make while you are here at Notre Dame is your decision about military service. It determines your style of life here at school and what kind of person you will be when you get out. Do a lot of talking about it. Discuss the alternatives to ROTC."

Senior Bill Rose opened the session by presenting his version of the rationale for ROTC here at Notre Dame. He enumerated three major points: an individual has an obligation to serve his country in the military, the best way to serve is as an officer, and ROTC is the easiest way to become an officer.

Rose then presented his counter-arguments, working back through these assertions. "The four-year ROTC program is not the easiest; the two-year program is. There's also OCS for college grads." Rose, a General Program major from Frederick, Maryland, stressed the point that a student should adopt a "life style" at college before he makes a decision to enter the military service. He also disputed whether, in this day of guerrilla warfare, an officer is of greater military significance than an enlisted man.

The central issue, however, according to Rose, was the moral question involved. He mentioned such alternatives as teaching, heading for Canada, or going to jail. In a political aside, Rose doubted whether the new administration ("Nixon or someone like Nixon") would significantly change the military or international situation.

He concluded by footnoting some remarks on the 2-S deferment, suggesting that under certain circumstances, such as anticipated fatherhood or limited college education, would not be the ideal deferment for a college freshman.

Senior Steve Moriarty, who spent two years in Air Force ROTC only to withdraw and become a conscientious objector, provided the assembled group with a colorful narrative of his experiences in ROTC. He criticized the two years of drills and classes, suggesting that the classes were "little more than military busy work." "But," said Moriarty, "everyone has to make their own personal decision. I did and you must."

Dr. James Cushing, Assistant Professor of Physics, was the last speaker. He deplored the small number of active demonstrators at Notre Dame. He conceded that this element in the student body is growing, as evidence by the demonstration at last year's ROTC Review, but still called for more students to "get involved with the political and economic issues of pressing importance, maybe even spend some time in jail."

McGrath Promises No Merger During His Tenure As President

Unaccustomed to his full monsignor regalia, Msgr. John J. McGrath, President of Saint Mary's College, addressed the Saint Mary's freshmen and their parents yesterday. In his 1 pm speech in O'Laughlin Auditorium, McGrath assured the parents that there would be no merger of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's for the duration of his presidency.

McGrath described the relationship between the two schools as one of "cooperation," referring to Notre Dame as "a brother." He pointed out that about 250 Notre Dame and 400 Saint Mary's students are enrolled in the co-exchange program. The faculties of the two schools "enjoy a close and cordial relationship," McGrath said.

In what may be considered the theme of Saint Mary's College for the year, McGrath spoke of the college as a "community of scholars rather than an institution." He said that within this community the students as "maturing and mature women" have the right to govern their own lives. "We don't babysit with them around here," McGrath stated.

He stressed however that the students must be willing to assume the responsibility that self-government implies. "Only then will self-determination have the meaning that it is intended to have."

McGrath commented upon the changes at Saint Mary's and cited an example of an Eastern alumnus who was disturbed because "those girls don't know the difference between wedgewood and plastic." McGrath stated that he was pleased with the change from Saint Mary's as a finishing school. He assured the parents that their daughters would become "generalists and not specialists."

Saint Mary's gives its students a taste of every area of knowledge from art to mathematics and offers courses such as African History and religion courses taught by Protestant theologians from Harvard and Duke, he said.

McGrath's criterion for the college becoming a success was stated as "Saint Mary's students discovering some of the truth." He stressed that the truth as he saw it would be a combination of insight into one's own mind and Truth as God has revealed it.

Club 69 Now Open

The Senior Class Social Season commences today with the opening of Club 69. Senior Class President Dave Witt and Club 69 Director Gordon Beeler have set up shop in the lower level of the Flamingo. Club hours will be 4 pm to 2 am. Beeler promises that Club 69 will be something every senior and his favorite girl can both enjoy and be proud of. Featured at Club 69 will be a complete line of imported and domestic beverages and a full menu including dinners, hot and cold sandwiches and cold plates. Beeler and his staff have spent several days working in the club. The result is a completely rejuvenated room with an appealing collegiate atmosphere.

Thursday marks the grand opening of Club 69 with the specialty of the house being draft beer for only a nickel. This will be the first of many special nights this semester. In addition to nickel beer nights, there will be movie nights, music nights, and special entertainment nights. At some special nights a slight cover charge will be imposed.

However, seniors can save money by buying shares in "Class of 69, Inc." A share of stock will cost ten dollars and stock holders will be admitted free on special nights. In addition, stockholders will be the only ones admitted to Happy Hour every afternoon from four to five. Club 69 Happy Hour will feature two drinks for the price of one.

Army ROTC Second To Missouri In Camp

"We are all very proud of the job they did," said Major Larry MacIntosh, Notre Dame ROTC instructor, of the performance of Notre Dame's Army cadets at their summer encampment. Notre Dame placed second of 50 ROTC detachments in the Fifth Army area in overall performance and aptitude ratings. "Only the cadets from the University of Missouri at Columbia scored higher than we did," exulted the Major.

Notre Dame also did very well in the individual ratings. Cadet Dennis Rawlinson scored first in his company and second of the more than 3700 cadets who attended summer camp from this area. Other company firsts were marked by cadets Charles Connolly and Richard Conway. There were also two firsts-in-platoon by ND cadets. "The ratings were scored by both the cadet's peers and by the officers at the encampment," said MacIntosh, "and are evaluations of the subject's job performance and leadership (50 per cent) and his command of basic military skills such as marksmanship and map reading (also 50 per cent)."

"It is interesting to note that all of our five high scorers rank in the top ten per cent of their class here at ND," said the major, "so they have achieved academic as well as professional excellence."

When asked if he expected any significant change in enrollment, Major MacIntosh said that a substantial increase was already experienced due to the large number of graduate students who had applied for the two-year program. However, the Army is the only service that expects any change in this area, the other two services expecting to remain relatively stable.

AF Cadets Awarded

Colonel Victor Ferrari, Professor of Aerospace Science, announced that Cadets John Campbell and Damien Czarnecki received Vice Commandants Awards for their performance in camp. These awards are presented to the outstanding cadet of each encampment. The Air Force, unlike the Army, has several encampments throughout the country instead of only one for each region. The summer also saw ten Notre Dame cadets place first in their respective flights (approximately 25 men).

Col Ferrari also announced that 60 percent of the upperclass cadets will be on scholarship during the coming academic year. There will be, in addition, 21 scholarship holding sophomores, for a total 76 scholarships in the cadet wing.

News In Brief:Frosh Friendly

The Notre Dame Social season will be kicked off tonight by a "Freshmen Friendly" mixer at the Stepan Center for the benefit of the newly-arrived Notre Dame freshmen. The mixer will begin at 8:00 p.m. and entertainment will be provided by the Cambridge Five. Further entertainment will be provided by numerous freshmen girls from SMC, as well as the Memorial and Holy Cross nursing schools, who have also been invited to meet the Notre Dame freshmen at the Stepan Center tonight.

More Coffee

Hopefully with an improved brand of coffee, the St. Mary's Coffee House is back for another year. Tentatively named "The Sorrowful Mystery," this gathering spot for local talent will open tonight and tomorrow night in the St. Mary's Social Center.

Entertainment will be provided through football season on Sunday nights only, with an admission charge of fifty cents. St. Mary's senior Diane Smith will hold auditions, hopefully attracting groups from both campuses and the local area. Those interested in auditioning should contact her.

The Coffee House will remain open daily; and the coffee will be free. Entertainment tonight and tomorrow will feature folk music along with some comedy groups.

Circle Tutors

The Blue Circle is initiating a Freshman Tutoring Program this semester headed by junior Tim Sweeney, an Economics major from Madison, Wisconsin. Free tutoring by Notre Dame upperclassmen will be available to any freshman in the following courses: Math II and IS, Biology, Chemistry, the Combined Sciences Program and the new Engineering Principles Program.

A board of tutors is currently being selected, with a representative from each hall to contact any freshmen requiring assistance. Tutors are urgently needed to insure the success of the program. Those willing to donate two hours a week should contact either Scott Krall (8448) in 21 Sorin or Sweeney (8440) in 31 Sorin.

Future Plans

The University will develop 5,500 acres of primitive woodland it owns along the Michigan-Wisconsin border as both a conference and recreation site and as a research area.

The property was bequeathed in 1943 to Notre Dame by Martin Gillen, a native of Wisconsin. A complex of buildings built by Gillen on Tenderfoot Lake's Killarney Point has been used in recent years by the University as a remote conference site.

GP Chairman Crosson New AL Dean Speaks Of Need For Personal Encounter

Dr. Frederick J. Crosson, former Chairman of the General Program of Liberal Studies here, has been appointed Dean of the College of Arts and Letters. The appointment was made June 17 and took effect last week. The final selection of Dr. Crosson as Dean was made by Father Hesburgh and was based on the recommendations of the faculty of the College; it was announced by Rev. John Walsh, C.S.C., Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Crosson succeeds Rev. Charles E. Sheedy, C. S. C., who was appointed last April 21 to the newly-created post of Dean of Theological Studies and Institutes. Father Sheedy had been Dean of Arts and Letters for sixteen years, previous to which he was a member of the Theology faculty here.

Dean Crosson commented yesterday on his appointment: "Having myself enjoyed teaching in the college for 15 years, I hope I will be able to bring some sense of the role of the teacher and of the necessity for personal encounter with the student to the deanship." Dean Crosson has been a member of the faculty of the General Program since 1953 and served as its chairman from 1964 until last year, when he took a sabbatical leave. He devoted the year to lecturing at the University of Chicago and continuing his researches in phenomenology.

In addition to teaching at Notre Dame, Crosson was a French Government Fellow at the University of Paris during 1951-52 and held a Belgian-American Foundation Fellowship at Louvain 1957-58.

Dr. Crosson is one of the most ardent and articulate defenders of the seminar method as it is used in the General Program; he once suggested that "the student learns best by developing his own view and being forced to defend it. He must master the steps to a conclusion," rather than mouth glib generalities. The seminar, he contends, makes education "a highly personal affair, an intersubjective process."

Crosson received his training in philosophy at the Catholic University of America and at Notre Dame. He wrote his doctoral dissertation here under Dr. A. Robert Caponigri of the Philosophy Department.

Dr. Crosson also said yesterday that he was "delighted" that he was "the first dean of the College chosen by the faculty of the College."

The procedure used to choose the new dean was prescribed in the new Faculty Manual. The College Council first appointed a five man board to review recommendations from individual faculty members and to then submit its joint recommendation to the Vice President for Academic Affairs. Rev. Walsh submitted his own recommendations along with the committee's to the President. The President made the final selection. The members of the College's committee were Matthew A. Fitzsimons and Bernard Norling, members of the History Department, Robert

Dean Frederick J. Crosson

Nuner, Chairman of the Department of Classical and Modern Languages, and Rev. Ernan McMullin and John J. Fitzgerald, Chairman and Professor, respectively, in the Philosophy Department.

In addition to his work in the GP, Crosson heads up, with Prof. Kenneth Sayre, the Philosophical Institute for Artificial Intelligence. His work at the Institute has been largely directed toward phenomenology. The purpose of the Institute, as Sayre and Crosson define it, is "to study, constructively and without polemic, the interaction between computer technology and various philosophic conceptions of the nature of man." It is finally an attempt to sort out the uniquely human characteristics of man's behaviour. Crosson, along with Professor Sayre, edited The Modeling of Mind which serves as a first reader toward defining the Institute's work. The Institute's second publication, which was also edited by Sayre and Crosson, was Philosophy and Cybernetics and consists of essays delivered by members of the Institute. In one of his essays in that volume, Crosson describes his major assertion about cybernetics:

"the categories and concepts of the mathematical theory of information can be of great help in clarifying philosophical analyses."

Crosson also edited the symposium Science and Society, a collection of papers presented at a symposium marking the centennial of the awarding of Notre Dame's first science degree. He also translated Henri Carrafel's book on conjugal love, Love and Grace in Marriage.

Smith Diving Officer On Navy Cruise

Major Terry Turner of the Marine Corps, Assistant Professor of Naval Science announced that Midshipman First Class Allen C. Smith qualified as a diving officer for submarines on his cruise this summer aboard the USS Tecumseh, a Polaris sub.

"This becomes very exciting when you consider that it usually takes trainees six months to a year to accomplish what Midn. Smith did in six weeks," said Major Turner. "Smith is one of a very few midshipmen to qualify while still in college," continued Turner, "and he has been certified to wear the distinctive dolphin insignia of submarine crew members."

On other cruises, the Naval Amphibious Training Commands for both the Atlantic and the Pacific have awarded Notre Dame trophies signifying the high performance of the two companies of ND midshipmen on their cruises under these commands.

King Scholars

Four incoming freshman were awarded newly established Martin Luther King scholarships this summer. They are Harold S. Rush of Chicago, Christopher Wycliffe of Washington, John W. Banks-Brooks of Hastings, Nevada, and Hubbard Worthy of Freeport, New York. The scholarship in memory of the slain civil rights leader was given to Notre Dame by Bernard Levine, president of Vernitron Corp., New York.

Great Expectations for Irish Offense

BY JOHN HEINRICH

One of the traditional games coaches play about this time of year is bemoaning the loss of veteran players and complaining of their squads' lack of talent and/or experience. Notre Dame Head Coach Ara Parseghian has been forced to search for other pessimistic platitudes in describing this year's Irish offense. With seven starters and numerous top reserves returning, the offensive unit will be strong and deep at virtually every position. The principal question will be whether or not the Irish veterans, in particular those in the backfield, can repeat their strong performances of last season. Whatever the outcome of those battles, however, the line will be long on experience. Last Saturday's scrimmage revealed some interesting struggles for the seven starting positions on the offensive line.

Injuries to Irish linebacker Bob Olson (center) and defensive back Ernie Jackson (right) will drastically impair ND efforts to stop the like of Oklahoma's Eddie Hinton (left) Saturday. Olson, with a severely sprained ankle, is a doubtful starter. Jackson should be over his sore shoulder by gametime.

Two year letterman Tim Monty takes over at center. He is quick and should be stronger this year playing at 225 pounds. Mike Holtzapfel and converted defensive end Mike Oriard provide reserve strength.

Soph Larry DiNardo appears to have won one starting guard spot. He was an outstanding performer last spring and has continued to play well. Letterman Tom McKinley, after spending most of the fall on the second unit, has moved back into a starting job as the other guard. Ed Tuck, Tom Nash, and soph Tony Capers are the Back-up men.

Junior veteran Jim Reilly, after spending some time at guard during the early fall, is back at offensive tackle replacing soph Chuck Kennedy, who drops down to the second team. George Kunz will earn his

All-America rating at the other tackle spot. Kunz is big, fast, and violent when he wants to be and should make a lasting impression on opposing defensive ends. Soph Mike Martin is his replacement.

Senior Jim Winegardner is set at tight end. He is a good receiver and a powerful blocker. Dewey Poskon will back him up.

Superb split end Jim Seymour returns to pursue those receiver records he does not hold already. He should have better luck getting open this year with a solid complement of running backs to balance the offense. He need only worry about keeping his fingers from being shattered by one of Hanratty's bullets. Tom Eaton may get to play if Seymour tires of scoring touchdowns.

The Irish Eye

By Terry O'Neil, sports editor

Score Observer, Score

"Sports reporting lacked completeness, especially in football. Sometimes only a few plays were in the Irish Eye column. Statistics were usually missing in reports of both football and basketball games. And in the midst of the best basketball season in a decade, an away game against Air Force and the next home game against Detroit, both victories, were mentioned only in the News in Brief. No report whatsoever appeared on the away Craighton game. Though both picture and copy coverage of basketball increased later in the year, this almost total lapse in sports reporting was inexcusable for the greatest part of the student body which usually considered sports more important than the latest student senate report."—1968 Dome.

That evaluation of our 1967 performance is false. In fact, this department is considering a libel suit against the yearbook. We weren't that bad last year and our readers know it.

We were worse.

Yes, we were 0-10. The Scholastic scored on us, Joe Doyle and his South Bend Tribune scored on us, the Juggler scored on us. High point of the year was beating the River City Review on an inside look at the athletic prowess of Lenny Joyce.

Now, Joyce is gone and, consequently, we must go straight. We will... and with quality, no less.

This fall, United Press International brings a national angle to these pages and that fact alone will improve them 500 per cent.

UPI columnist Milt Richman, a former minor league baseball player with 30 years of writing experience, will appear occasionally.

Irish quarterback Terry Hanratty returns with his weekly column. His first effort is scheduled in Saturday's ND-Oklahoma football special, the first of six such issues.

Innovation time from editor Bill Luking: This year's football specials will be distributed free of charge to students and other fans. They will include complete lineups, statistics and features on the day's game.

Add to that, a daily page which combines national and ND news. We can't be any worse than 8-2 this year and that might be good enough to win the South Bend area sports journalism championship.

Last year the Irish waited until midseason to develop a credible running attack. Most of the principals return this year and, hopefully, will obviate the need for last year's aerial circus. Fullback Jeff Zimmerman is a consistent powerful runner and a sound blocker. He gained 591 yards last year while starting only seven games and, barring injury, could turn into one of the country's top fullbacks this year if the Irish choose to use him enough. Senior Ron Dushney will push Zimmerman for the starting spot.

Olson Doubtful Starter

Crucial injuries have hit two Irish defensive starters and made them question marks for Saturday's game with Oklahoma.

Co-captain Bob Olson, left inside linebacker, suffered a severely sprained ankle September 6 in a non-contact drill. "Bobo" was on crutches much of last week and may miss as many as the first two games.

Defensive tackle Bob Jockish, a probable starter, was hit with a shoulder separation the same day. His status is as doubtful as Olson's.

In last Saturday's scrimmage, Joe Freeberry and Mike Kondrla filled in for Olson while Tony Capers and Eric Norri replaced Jockish. The Irish hospital list also includes sophomore defensive lineman Pat Madron and starting defensive halfback Ernie Jackson. Both are shoulder casualties. Jackson should be ready to answer the opening Saturday.

Two-year letterman Bob Gladieux will be the other halfback. He is a smooth runner and an exceptional pass receiver, ranking second on the team last year. He will play flanker when Parseghian chooses to go with two wide receivers and his presence there should help take some of the pressure off Seymour. Junior Ed Ziegler will back him up.

Of course, Terry Hanratty is back, presumably still having a bazooka concealed in his right sleeve. The difficulties he had early last year are history now. He has matured well, learning to spot second and third receivers and even eating the ball occasionally. He should be the premier quarterback in college football this year and a prime candidate for the Heisman Trophy.

The Irish should be both more exciting and more consistent than they were last year. With a good offensive line and competent running backs to relieve the pressure on them, Hanratty and Seymour should rediscover the effectiveness that made them cover stories in 1966. The Irish will score often—as often as the defense can get them the ball.
