

Celebrate Independence with Riot

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — National Guard troops battled students protesting the military junta with tear gas, rifle butts and warning shots yesterday as Panama marked the 65th anniversary of its independence. Several youths were hurt and scores were arrested.

The demonstration was directed against the National Guard officers who deposed President Arnulfo Arias on Oct. 11 in a bloodless coup. Arias took refuge in the US administered Canal Zone and later flew to Washington.

The bloodshed started Sunday about 11 am when about 400 students and youths assembled at the National University and marched down the Trans-Isthmian Highway in front of the school.

They carried a large Panamanian flag with boots attached to the top, signifying their opposition to the junta which ousted Arias. The new regime banned all public demonstrations on the day Arias was overthrown.

National Guard forces, in full battle dress, met the students head on after the parade passed the Social Security Hospital.

Egyptian-Israeli Jets Battle in East

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Egyptian MIGs and Israeli jets battled in the skies over the Israeli occupied Sinai Peninsula yesterday, a communique from Jerusalem reported. It said Israeli planes forced two intruding MIGs to return to Egypt and that one was spouting smoke.

"All of our planes returned safely to their base," the Israeli report said. The communique said the dogfight started when the two Russian built MIGs tried to enter Sinai air space north of Nantara near the Suez Canal at 4 pm.

In another development, informed US Navy sources in Naples, Italy, said the Soviet Union has moved dredgers into Egyptian ports for possible use in forcing open the Suez Canal. The waterway has been closed since the June, 1967 war.

Meanwhile, an Israeli newspaper reported that President Johnson has urged Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol to cooperate with United Nations envoy Gunnar Jarring to keep his Mideast peace mission alive.

Ogilvie Charges Fraud in Illinois

CHICAGO (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard B. Ogilvie charged yesterday "there may be as many as 100,000 fraudulent votes" cast in Chicago Tuesday "and these could determine the election."

The Cook County Board president said "massive preparations for fraudulent voting have been made in an effort to save Democratic candidates."

Speaking to rallies at the Schorsch Village Community Hall and the Bernard Horwich Center on the Northwest side, Ogilvie said, "Don't ever forget how close was the margin of Dick Nixon's loss of Illinois in 1960."

"The margin — and more — was furnished by the flophouse residents and floaters and coerced voters of Chicago," he said.

In that year John F. Kennedy carried Illinois over Nixon by about 8,800 votes out of 4.76 million cast, primarily with the help of heavily Democratic Cook County, which claims about half the state's population. After the election Republicans charged that enough votes were stolen to win the state's then 27 electoral votes to Kennedy.

Floods Hit Italy Again

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — Flood waters pouring out of the mountains engulfed a cluster of hamlets in a valley in northern Italy yesterday. Heavy loss of life was reported there as rain, snow and an earthquake battered wide areas of Europe from Finland to the Italian boot.

Initial reports said at least 64 persons were killed in the Valle Mosso region about 36 miles northeast of Turin where a wall of water washed away scores of homes.

It was the worst flood disaster since the Po and Arno rivers killed more than 80 persons two years ago and destroyed many art treasures in Florence.

Rushing waters built up by 72 hours of driving rain over northern Italy Sunday crushed bridges, dams and houses and washed away miles of highways or railroad tracks.

Polls. "Too Close To Call"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the Democratic National Committee said Sunday Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey trailed Richard M. Nixon in the latest Harris and Gallup polls by two percentage points, "a margin the professional pollsters agree makes the election too close to call."

Lawrence F. O'Brien, who is also manager of the Democratic presidential campaign, said "the tide has been turning Hubert Humphrey's favor for more than a month and the pollsters have confirmed it tonight."

Neither Harris nor Gallup poll is scheduled for public release until Monday and O'Brien did not reveal how he obtained the information in advance. Representatives of either poll could not be reached Sunday night.

O'Brien said the Gallup poll, which "practically wrote Humphrey out of the race a few months ago," gave Nixon, the Republican nominee, a 42 to 40 percent lead over Humphrey. "The Harris poll also will have only a two point spread, a margin the professional pollster agree makes the election too close to call," he added.

The last Gallup poll showed 44 percent for Nixon and 36 percent for Humphrey. The Harris poll gave Nixon 40 percent and Humphrey 37 percent.

Third party candidate George C. Wallace reportedly continued to sink slowly in both polls, receiving 12 percent in the Harris survey and 14 percent from Gallup, according to a Democratic party spokesman.

Johnson Joins HHH Campaign

HOUSTON (UPI) — President Johnson flew to the side of Hubert H. Humphrey in the final hours of the presidential campaign Sunday and stood side by side with his Vice President before a roaring crowd in the Houston Astrodome.

It was the first joint campaign appearance of the President and Vice President, though the two last month shared a platform at a non-partisan dinner in New York.

Johnson warmly endorsed Humphrey as a "healer and a builder." Humphrey, in his last speech of the campaign, said he was Johnson's "faithful friend and during these months of his presidency, his loyal Vice President and proud of it."

The two men paraded triumphantly around the stadium, filled nearly to capacity, shaking hands and waving as the crowd came alive with a sea of fluttering US flags and Humphrey banners.

They then stood together with their wives on a platform and predicted a come from behind Democratic victory in Tuesday's election.

As Johnson and Humphrey spoke, Humphrey aides rejoiced at the latest Gallup poll due for release Monday morning. It is reported to show Humphrey only 2 percentage points behind Republican Richard M. Nixon.

Staff members said they understood the poll gave Nixon 42 percent Humphrey 40 percent, George C. Wallace 14 and 4 percent was undecided. The previous Gallup poll gave Nixon 39 percent, Humphrey 31, Wallace 15 and 15 percent undecided.

"For the sake of our American union," Johnson said, "this man, Hubert Humphrey, should become the 37th President of the United States. And I believe and pray he will."

He said Humphrey "represents the faith of one America — one progressive and compassionate American." Humphrey, he said, had been "my friend and co-worker for 20 years."

"He is a healer and builder. He has worked all his life, not to generate suspicion and fear among our people but to inspire them with confidence in their ability to live together. He will represent all of the people all of the time," Johnson said.

HPC Urges Parietals

Phil McKenna, chairman of the Hall Presidents Council (HPC), moved that the presidents circulate petitions regarding the individual right of a hall to determine its own parietal hours. The motion was unanimously accepted at a meeting held last night in the student center amphitheater. The petition, to be circulated this week, appears at right.

Earlier in the meeting the council defeated an amendment 9-6 that would have given the council power to "express an official opinion on any issues pertaining to the hall life of the students of this university." The HPC's constitution presently states: "The council shall not... have an official opinion on the politics or actions of the University Administration or on the politics of the other organs of student government."

In future meetings the council plans to discuss the problems of black students on campus, hall autonomy, and the manner in which the two new dorms will be filled.

The United States, Humphrey said, was caught by the "confluence of three revolutions" — the technological revolution, "the desperate, quite revolution of the individual against bigness" and the revolution of race.

He warned that the next four years, "will be years of trial for the American people," but said if the voters will trust him, "I tell you that I shall call forth from American that best that lies within it."

The success of a hall community depends on the right of its members to establish the laws that govern their lives in that community. As an aspect of community life, parietal hours are the legitimate concern of the hall community.

The obvious physical differences in each individual hall, and the possibility of differing student opinions as to practical women's visiting hours peculiar to particular hall, necessitate this issue being decided on an individual hall basis.

It is with this rationale in mind that we, as students of...

Hall, petition the Student Life Council of the University of Notre Dame du Lac, to respond to the legitimate concerns of the students of this University, and to recognize this right of each individual hall community to determine its own parietal hours.

Dunne Receives Harbison Teaching Award

Yesterday Rev. John S. Dunne, CSC, a popular Notre Dame theologian, was cited by the Danforth Foundation as one of the nation's outstanding teachers.

Fr. Dunne, a specialist in dogmatic theology who has taught 11 years at Notre Dame, was one of the 10 recipients of the Foundation's E. Harris Harbison Award for Distinguished Teaching, given annually since 1963 to "teacher-scholars who excel in the art of teaching, in the significance of their scholarly contribution, and in their concern for students as individuals."

The award provides each winner with a $10,000 cash grant for use in any study or academic diversion. Fr. Dunne intends to take a year's leave from Notre Dame next year, but his exact travel plans are not complete.

Dunne received his undergraduate degree from Notre Dame in 1951, then went to Rome for further theological studies at Gregorian University. He lived abroad for six years, and was finally ordained in Rome in 1954. He received his doctorate in Sacred Theology in 1958 from the Gregorian.

His courses at Notre Dame, "Philosophy of Religion," and Christian Existentialism have consistently drawn enthusiastic and large response. Likewise, he is also teaching a doctoral-level course "Faith and Doubt" every

Wed. at the University of Chicago School of Divinity.

"If one takes any of the great religions to be a doctrine," Dunne said, "I think one immediately falsifies it. If one takes religion to be the teaching of the prophet or of the savior rather than the experience of revelation or enlightenment which the teaching was meant to convey, then the religion comes to consist of conformity to that doctrine in thinking and living. Then instead of enriching him by restricting his thinking and living to certain prescribed patterns."

Dunne has written two books, The City of the Gods (1965) and A Search for God in Time and Memory, to be published this April.

The Harbison award is intended "to recognize teachers of any academic rank who combine remarkable accomplishment with great promise." The Danforth Foundation was established in 1927 with the purpose of strengthening education and developing equal opportunities for all citizens.

South Bend Survey Says HHH

A survey of South Bend voters conducted by the Social Science Training and Research Laboratory at the University revealed that Democratic nominee Humbert H. Humphrey leads the Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon by 41% to 36%.

Third party candidate George C. Wallace trailed badly with only 6 per cent of the interviewed voters favoring him. Seventeen percent were undecided. After apportioning the undecided category according to the candidates they are leaning to gives Humphrey 54 to 39 per cent lead with Wallace attracting seven percent. The Democratic nominees for state offices substantially outdrew Humphrey. Third district Congressman John Brademas leads Republican nominee Will Erwin 66 per cent to 20 percent with 14 percent of the interviewed undecided.

Incumbent Senator Birch Bayh leads Republican William Ruckelshaus 61 percent to 19 per cent with 20 percent undecided.

The gubernatorial race was much closer with a large percentage of the voters undecided. Democrat and lieutenant governor Rod Rock leads Republican Edgar Whitcomb 40 to 23 per cent with 37 per cent unable to make a choice.

Voters were not asked to indicate their leanings if they were undecided in the congressional or gubernatorial races.

Dr. Frank Fahey, an associate professor of sociology, directed the survey. He also reported that most voters interviewed believed Vietnam and law and order to be the most important issues of the election.

The survey involved some 267 South Bend residents with most of the interviewing done between October 11 and October 20. The door-to-door, 45-minute interviews were conducted primarily by Notre Dame sociology and political science students.

The surveyors attempted to interview people contacted during the 1964 presidential campaign, but were generally unsuccessful due to deaths and address changes.

The allowance for sampling error was five percent. The survey was conducted to give students realistic experience in the sociology of politics.

100 Watch Court

The Law School sponsored Notre Dame Moot Court was held Saturday night in the library auditorium before a crowd of one hundred persons. Established in 1950, the court boasts the training of its participants "in the art of appellate advocacy through a series of competitive arguments." The meeting decided the two winners of four finalists competing on the basis of oral presentations and briefs for an appealed case.

The dispute, Shapiro vs. Thompson, is an actual case which has been appealed to the United States Supreme Court and is still pending decision. The fact that the case has not been officially resolved accounted for the absence of one of the judicial members of the court—Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Thurgood Marshall. In a written excuse, he explained he wanted to remain insulated from any possible influences on the unresolved argument.

After two intense hours of court questioning and case development, the three presiding justices announced Mr. James E. Rolls and Mr. David H. Prior as first and second award winners respectively. The officials then made a point of commenting on all the finalists' performances as superior to public appellate advocates and assured the four they could easily work on a professional level.

Marty Speaks in Second of Lecture Series

by John Haley

As the second in a series of lectures on world religions, Protestant theologian Martin Marty last night spoke on Protestantism and Lutheranism. He addressed an informal group of less than forty persons, most of them non-students.

Rather than discussing dogmatic differences between various Protestant religions or between Protestant and Catholic religions, Marty concentrated on the "life-style" of Protestantism. He acknowledged the large number of Protestant religions. But, he also said: "Protestantism has a kind of two-party system that cuts across denominational lines. The basic difference is between liberal and conservative, high church and low church, right wing and left wing." He pointed to Lutheranism as an example. He noted that some see Luther as the defiant liberal, standing against the Pope; others see him as the "law-and-order" crusader who tried to re-establish political stability. Marty pointed to the basic difference among Protestants over "sacramental symbolism." The early Protestants put heavy emphasis on the symbolic importance of such things as the Eucharist. The Protestant trend of the past few centuries has been to put less emphasis on symbols, calling the Eucharist, for example, a "mere symbol." The recent trend, however, has been to again put more importance on such symbols. He then stressed what he considered the difference between the main question of the Sixteenth and of the Twentieth Century Protestant. He said, "The Sixteenth Century question was, 'Is God gracious?' The Twentieth Century Protestant is concerned with the question, 'Is God?' He elaborated on these questions, stating that "God had been made too prevalent" in the Sixteenth Century, that persons had an everpresent fear of God and of the Church. But, the Twentieth Century difficulty is seeing God's presence at all.

Marty emphasized the importance of avoiding the idolizations of such things as structures, governments, churches, and ideas. He stated that fundamental to modern Protestantism, "God must be present in the world of upheaval and innovation." He said that "society should be kept off balance," and that "Protestantism cannot be conservative, or it will begin to idolize society."

Due to the fact that only a handful of students attended the lecture, the SUAC announced that unless more student interest is shown in the next lecture, the Religions of the World series would be dropped.

Saigon Headed for Paris?

PARIS (UPI) — The South Vietnamese government is expected to participate in the expanded four-way Paris talks despite President Nguyen Van Thieu's threat to boycott the negotiations.

That is the almost unanimous assessment given Sunday by US and North Vietnamese sources and Western and Communist diplomats close to the Vietnam negotiations.

Regardless of their political orientation, diplomatic sources said Saigon will simply have to go into the Vietnam negotiations no matter how much it goes against their previously announced policy of refusing to deal with the National Liberation Front as an independent body.

US sources said President Thieu had been advised beforehand of the Washington-Hanoi accord to expand the talks to include Saigon and its arch-antagonist, the NLF.

These sources said Thieu agreed to the accord before it was announced.

Thieu's subsequent rejection of the accord is interpreted as a reaction to South Vietnam's own internal political situation in which Thieu has suddenly found himself having to try to outmaneuver rivals each of whom is seeking to be more anti-Communist than his neighbor. The danger of Thieu's position is not discounted since there are fears here that hard liners in his administration, perhaps organized by Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, might try to stage a coup to reverse the process toward negotiations.

US delegation chief W. Averell Harriman, however, is reported to be confident that with a bit of patience and support Thieu will pull through and, once the surprise of negotiations has worn off, will bring South Vietnam into the talks.

Confederacy

A brilliant group of students, led by three Notre Dame juniors, Tom Ehrbar, Jim Brogan, and Dave Esmonds, have created a Student Union in exile and dubbed it — The "Student Confederacy." So far the group has ventured out on a Magical Mystery Tour of South Bend (which simulated an LSD trip without incurring the consequent dangers) and has made several successful raids on SMC (which is south of the Dixie Highway.)

The organization is a highly distinctive one since it involves no leadership, no format, no planning, no organization, and no confederacy. Basically, their aim is to bring a new dangerous thrill to ND students, and with great disdain they will avoid the contrived entertainment programs of the establishment on campus. Every activity is free (except for voluntary contributions.)

Political Restructuring

The 1968 Presidential campaign ends today. The year that seemed pregnant with hopeful possibilities in February and March has become meaningless to the majority of those who are traditionally apart from American politics—the Black people, the students, the intellectual, and the poor. Unlike the primary campaign last May or the 1960 Presidential race, there is neither frantic activity nor lively debate and very little visible concern.

The American student has not really been a part of this fall's campaign. Many would say that after this summer the campaign ended not in the mock celebration of a new President but in perversion. The shock of seeing Senator Robert F. Kennedy struck down lingers on. The revulsion with Chicago still remains.

Richard Nixon appeals not to the alienated Americans, the Blacks, the poor, and the young, but rather to the "forgotten people" of the upper middle-class suburbs. He takes no viable stands, or even voices an opinion on the senseless war in Vietnam. He puts forth no concrete programs for our troubled cities. He promises nothing to bring government closer to the people, to humanize what is at present an instrument which collects taxes and reaches out to the slums only to draft young men to fight a war 8,000 miles away. He cares about what is and cannot imagine what could be. Finally, Nixon has chosen a profoundly stupid man to sit one heartbeat from the Presidency.

Even as we see Nixon stretching forth his hands to the backslathers we cannot be enthused with Hubert Humphrey either. He makes gestures towards us and says "I am one with you," but what were the circumstances of his nomination in Chicago and whom has he served unquestioningly for four long and disheartening years? With the Vice President's statements, too, we see great irrelevancy. He promises welfare programs and handouts to the ghettos in an era of emerging Black pride. He extolls Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman as the anachronistic Democratic coalition crumbles about him. He boasts of "Democratic prosperity" as children starve in city slums and on Mississippi plantations. In an age of new problems and solutions, Humphrey is still a New Deal liberal reaching back to the Thirties for the bases of his answers.

There is no point to further discussion of the two candidates. The choice we face tomorrow was illegitimately conceived; it does not provide an adequate choice. The Republican Convention which chose Richard Nixon had one student and less than 20 Black delegates out of more than 1300. Fewer than one quarter of those picking the nominee were chosen in primaries, more than half by state organizations. The Democratic Convention ignored every primary and opinion poll in its choice. States where Kennedy and McCarthy were victorious in spring primaries, and here we think of Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut in particular, were represented mainly by human instruments of old-line political machines. Clearly the people, who made their opinions heard long and loud over the spring, were shut out of Miami and Chicago.

Political parties as we know them are exclusive private clubs demanding narrowness and rigidity as their dues. We are told that "Democrats Care," and Republican propaganda exhorts us to "Vote this time as if the whole world depended on it." Democrats don't really care and the Republicans have a truly narrow definition of this "world" upon which your vote depends.

Both parties are independent unresponsive political institutions. Electoral support and the advancement of certain interest groups seem to be the only ends of the proposals and policies of either party. Programs that in many ways are dated and irrelevant now structure the parties.

Changes in American parties must come from the local level. The Fourth Party movement as it exists now may be an impractical solution to change. It does, however, represent the type of thinking that must be utilized to change the two major parties. National parties are going to have to be concerned with local problems and local solutions. Structures are going to have to arise in response to new positive programs and the needs of the people.

In the future it must be the aims and hopes of the people that shape the politics and not the other way around.

Don Hynes

Anarchists

Vietnam wasn't a household word then, just a little skirmish in Southeast Asia with only a few thousand American soldiers. Young people in Berkely thought the war was wrong. They demonstrated at the railroad stations where soldiers were embarking for action. Paint was thrown in their faces. They were beaten with fists and clubs.

Johnson, the liberal candidate, was elected president of this country. He promised peace in Vietnam. Less than a year later there were one hundred thousand American soldiers in Vietnam. Life magazine carried a spread and Americans found out where Vietnam was. Johnson asked the Congress for more troops, and only two dissenting votes were cast. The number grew five fold.

More students joined their brothers at Berkely. Young people, along with men like Dr. Spock, and Dave Dellinger, people who had decided that their country's action was wrong. They were called traitors by their enemies. They were called fools by their friends. They demonstrated on the Boston docks where supplies were being sent to Asia, and longshoremen beat them with two-by-fours. Newspapers, like the New York Daily News, called them anarchists, despicable characters who had no place in America. The young people believed though, and they stayed in the streets. They kept saying no.

Demonstrations took place in New York, Washington and San Francisco, with hundreds of thousands participating. Some had traveled over three thousand miles to say no with their brothers. Their heads were split open with billy clubs, their eyes were burned with tear gas. America still didn't want to listen, but they didn't give up.

Enough of a dissenting or at least doubting base had been built up for Gene McCarthy to come along. More and more people were saying no. The Chicago Convention came and went, and more of their blood was left in the streets. Thousands were in jail or in Canada rather than serve in Vietnam. Years of struggle, countless bludgeonings, countless hours spent preaching, soliciting, protesting, all to end this country's insanity.

On Oct. 31, 1968, President Johnson announced a complete halt to the bombing of North Vietnam, America's first serious move towards peace. This column is a tribute to all my brothers in this country who have given their time, their blood, their lives to make this possible. You are beautiful people. You endured.

Election 68: Hubert Humphrey vs. Richard Nixon. Liberal vs. Reactionary. Twenty six cents vs. twenty five cents. You're a fool if you don't take the twenty six cents, or so the establishment would have you believe. They've called people fools before. Vote New Politics in '68. Write in Dick Gregory for President.

Nixon in Indiana: Close Congressional Races

by Joel Connelly

While the state of Indiana is expected to go to Richard Nixon by a considerable margin in tomorrow's voting, close races for the Senate, Governorship, and House of Representatives have made the state a subject of national attention. One of America's key House races is in South Bend where incumbent Congressman John Brademas, a liberal Democrat and McCarthy supporter in Chicago, faces conservative state senator Will Erwin.

If polls are to be believed, the Presidential contest is all over in Indiana. An Indianapolis News poll of early October showed Nixon with 44% of the vote, while Vice President Humphrey received only 20% and George Wallace 18%. Things have undoubtedly narrowed somewhat since then, but the Hoosier state gave Nixon a 222,000-vote victory in 1960 over John F. Kennedy. Then, too, Democratic labor strongholds in Gary are expected to return a heavy Wallace vote. The former Alabama Governor carried Lake County (Gary) in the 1964 Indiana Presidential Primary. A sizeable Wallace vote is expected in South Bend, too, with the third party candidate's strength centering on the Bendix Plant on the West Side. Wallace strength has, according to at least two local political observers, solidified as a result of recent events in South Bend including incidents at restaurants south of the Notre Dame campus.

The race for United States Senator features a 40-year old incumbent and an even younger challenger. U.S. Senator Birch Bayh, first elected in 1962, has lately taken a dovish position on the Vietnam War. A prominent newcomer to the Senate, he would be considered a shoo-in according to many publications except for the expected Nixon sweep as well as the stature of GOP nominee William Ruckelshaus. Ruckelshaus, 35, is majority leader in the state house of representatives. A graduate of Harvard Law School, Ruckelshaus has been running a professional campaign hitting hard at Bayh on the Senator's shift of position from Johnson supporter to dove on the War. Ruckelshaus has had considerable trouble making his name known, and trailed in the early polls. He has narrowed the gap recently, though. An interesting note on the Senate campaign is that Ruckelshaus sponsored a billboard in Indianapolis saying "Great men have long names" and listing men including Michaelangelo, Washington, Mollenkoff, Parsegian, and his own. Notre Dame football coach Ara

Parsegian asked that his name be taken off the billboard because it implied endorsement of

Ruckelshaus.

The race for Governor pits Democratic Lieutenant Governor Robert Rock against Republican Secretary of State Edgar Whitcomb. On a basis of his hopping the entrenched Democratic machine of Governor Roger Branigan and State Chairman Gordon St. Angelo Rock held an early lead in polls. However, Whitcomb has advertised heavily and identified himself effectively with Nixon. It remains close, but in private Democratic surveys Rock is trailing. Notre Dame's Dr. James Bogle, on leave of absence from the Government Department, is chairman of Indiana Citizens for Rock and helped the anti-organization Lt. Governor get the nomination by the narrow vote of 953 to 951 at the Democratic State Convention in June.

In this district, Brademas is viewed by Congressional Quarterly magazine as leading

Erwin due to the latter's lack of familiarity with the District's two largest cities, South Bend and Elkhart. Brademas, hurt even more than Jacobs by redistricting, has advertised heavily since mid-September. He has also made extensive use of student volunteers. Erwin's major effort began about two weeks ago, and also has concentrated on television. Brademas has been singled out for praise and endorsed by the New York Times and Look. The South Bend Tribune, however, has said that Brademas and Erwin are equal in their attributes and declined to back either man. In an editorial Friday, the Tribune supported the contentions of both candidates, saying that those agreeing that an effective Congressman with seniority should be kept in office should vote for Brademas and those wanting to give Nixon a Republican Congress should support Erwin.

In the end, most of the races mentioned may be decided by two factors, the strength of Nixon's coattails and the attitudes of Wallace supporters. If Nixon's sweep is greater than 1960, Whitcomb will win with Bayh and Brademas in severe danger. If Nixon wins by less than 200,000 votes Rock may well upset Whitcomb. As to the Wallace voters, most are normally Democratic. If they vote for Wallace and nobody else, all Democrats may be defeated. If supporters of the former Alabama Governor go Democratic after voting on the Presidency, Brademas and Bayh will likely be in less trouble.

The Cox Commission: Liberalism vs. Criticism

by Dennis During

Crisis at Columbia. Report of the Fact-Finding Commission Appointed to Investigate the Disturbance at Columbia in April and May, 1968.

The Cox Commission was the blue-ribbon panel appointed by the Executive Committee of the Faculties of Columbia University in early May about a week after the dramatic escalation of protest which culminated with the seizure of buildings, 'kidnapping,' student strike, (police?) riot, and general public vehemence. The Report of the Commission represents the detached viewpoint of the senior faculty - the administrative and tenured of the University. As the only constituent of the University community that did not participate, the senior faculty were regarded as uniquely suited to provide an objective account of these "disturbances." It is easy to see that the Report directly reflects their private investment in the University.

What could be more self-centered than a conclusive "plague on all your houses" intended for the administration, police, students and junior faculty. The senior faculty views the protests as "disturbances" which violate the good order of the University, (from which they derive their reputations, not to mention their paychecks). Their apparent best interests are served by a placid status quo; a status quo without that brand of violence which would threaten the ever-increasing flow of stipulated, government, foundation and corporation research grants. The University is a place where students learn, and teachers teach, and these extra-curricular indulgences by no means coincide with the needs of the University.

As long as the University remains subservient to society, the rhetorical powers of the University become worthless as tools of criticism. The report is not quite as unbiased as it believes itself to be. It tacitly supports the ugly complex of American Higher Learning with all of its destructive external allegiances—industrial, military, agricultural, and governmental. It cannot ladle out blame impartially to all the parties active in the struggle, while the passive resignation of the faculty to the prostitution of the University goes uncensored.

disturbances, and the last includes a set of documentary appendices. The analysis of the "causes" is encyclopedic and uncritical. Virtually every possible contributing influence is considered, from nationwide issues (war and race relations), to predominant social attitudes toward disruptive demonstrations. This assemblage of issues is a typical liberal device. It is an examination of issues with minimum acknowledgement of the essential causes. The historical section, for instance reveals the sequence of misunderstandings and errors which accompany a major conflict. But the report neglects the underlying causes.

A university revolution desires to expose the contradictions and follies of administrative procedure, and bring them to the attention of the public eye. Because Cox Report evades such critical exposition, does not mean that evils have disappeared either at Columbia or Notre Dame.

Agnew Does It Again in Ohio

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UPI) — Republican Vice Presidential candidate Spiro T. Agnew Sunday told a young, sign carrying supporter of his Democratic rival, Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, to "go and show that sign to Ho Chi Minh."

The remark immediately became the center of a heated dispute between the youth, James McDiarmid, 16, of Muskegon, and reporters who heard it on one side, and Agnew and his staff on the other.

Staff aides denied that Agnew made any reference to any sign but also said the Maryland governor did not realize that the sign in question was in support of Muskie.

The incident took place at Muskegon airport as Agnew arrived from Canton, Ohio, for a Republican rally. About 50 or 60 persons had gathered at the airport, some of them Agnew supporters and other either supporting Muskie or George C. Wallace, the third party candidate.

McDiarmid and half a dozen other young people were standing behind a fence as the candidate greeted supporters and shook hands. He and his friends had been shouting, "Agnew go home."

McDiarmid who was carrying a sign saying, "Muskie 4 Vice President," said that when Agnew reached the point where he was standing the candidate said: "Why don't you go and show that sign to Ho Chi Minh."

The youth said he did not recall whether anyone in his group or near him was saying anything at the time, but before and after, they had been shouting, "stop the bomb."

He said the phrase was meant to be a demand that Agnew support the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, not to stop the bombing in North Vietnam, which President Johnson ordered stopped last week. Reporters who were walking with the candidate said the shout to "Stop the bomb" came as Agnew passed the group and that he turned, pointed his finger at McDiarmid, and said: "Why don't you show that sign to Ho Chi Minh."

It was not certain that Agnew had read the sign before he made the remark. He may have interpreted the phrase, "Stop the bomb," to mean stop the bombing in North Vietnam, a frequent call of opponents of the Vietnam War. But the clarification the reporters demanded of his top aides was not forthcoming.

George W. White Jr., Agnew's campaign manager, denied that Agnew said what the youth and reporters heard. White said Agnew made the remark in response to a call for a bombing halt and that what he really said was: "Go tell that to Ho Chi Minh," with "out" referring to the sign.

Reporters who disputed White were asked by White, "Why don't you go find out who paid the kid to go there to the airport."

"You guys can make up anything you want," White said, "but that's not what he said. You guys have been all through this campaign and you haven't heard him say a bad word about Ed Muskie."

Fitzgerald Elected

Dr. John J. Fitzgerald, acting chairman of the philosophy dept., has been elected chairman of a newly formed Association of Chairmen of Doctoral Programs in Philosophy in American Catholic Universities at the meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa.

The association was initiated to coordinate and assess the information and practices affecting programs in graduate

The Danger of Dickie

Last spring, the Kerner Commission on Civil Disorders reported that the United States is moving towards two separate and unequal societies, on black and one white. The Commission report contended not only that this nation is split, but that racial division is simply in the process of tearing America apart.

This August in Chicago we had another demonstration of a split in our society. This time it was not along color lines, although I have no doubt some of Mayor Daley's "police" had a fun time dragging Dick Gregory off to jail. Instead, the central division of Chicago was between America's youth and its political establishment. As a result of this confrontation many of the most brilliant and dedicated students in this nation came away disillusioned with our governmental processes as well as our whole system of rule.

The central problem of this nation in the year 1968 is division. The actions of an unresponsive government and repressive authorities have left our minorities and our young alienated and filled with resentment.

The Presidential campaign has done little to unite us or uplift the human spirit. Its greatest phenomenon has been the rise of a man playing on the divisiveness and the fears and prejudices of the lower middle class much as Adolf Hitler did in Germany thirty-five years ago. The campaign's central issue has in fact been law and order or, simply translated, who will keep the black man down, the suburbs white, and the store windows intact. Partisan rhetoric has been heard continually, in its substance totally irrelevant to the problems facing us.

Turned off as I am by this, I see a grave danger growing out of the results of tomorrow's choice. I think of Lyndon Johnson, the man we chose four years ago, and compare his with Kennedy. The very fact of Johnson has contributed to division. Four long years have seen us endure a man we cannot trust, a man preoccupied with the waging of an unjust, unwise, highly personal war. We have drifted for lack of leadership and direction and despaired at a lack of hope.

After pondering Johnson, I turn to the man likely to win tomorrow. The man we may elevate to the Presidency, Richard Nixon, has refused to take a stand on the War, proposed little that would relieve urban tensions, and above all put forth no ideas or direction on how America can be brought together from its present fragmentation. He has dodged issues with generalities and compromised in cases where he could have demonstrated leadership. His running mate is a narrow, stupid, mindless man totally incapable of filling the office of President of the United State. His appeal is not to the alienated, but to those who are essentially contented.

As I look at this man and listen to his carefully tailored platitudes I cannot help but think of the last four years and Johnson. I cannot but be cognizant of polls showing that even now, before the election, public trust of Nixon is low and dropping constantly. A recent Harris survey shows 46% of the American people believing that Nixon would make a "fair" or "poor" President. This, mind you, comes before he is even chosen. I content most strongly that such a man cannot unite us.

I have made clear that I hold no deep admiration for Humphrey and am still appalled by what happened in Chicago. Still, what is the alternative? If Nixon is the one, a divided America will be faced with four more years of having a clever man in the White House whom the people simply do not trust. I question whether this demoralized nation can safely endure it.

Are you looking past tomorrow?

Since cave drawings of the Ice Age man, people have struggled to communicate. With stories, maps, legends, paper, spoken words of love and fear. This business of communications... meaningful dialogue... is still chief among today's preoccupations. And it's one we at Western Electric, indeed the entire Bell System have worked at since 1882.

Cable, microwaves and satellites have brought nations face-to-face across continents and oceans. Closed-circuit TV helps educators penetrate barriers of slum and tarpaper shacks. In fact, our whole way of life in America is being enriched simply by advances in phoning.

Whether basic or brilliant, each advance must arrive when it's needed. And each must be economically producible whenever it's needed. At Western Electric we specialize in production and logistics. It's our job in the Bell System... to help men overcome communication barriers with dependable service at low cost. To this end we need an ever increasing number of new fresh ideas. Your ideas. Ideas that look past tomorrow.

ND Freshmen Win Land Battle

By Mike Pavlin

Sports Illustrated came out this week with an article describing the offensive revolution in college football, which seems to be turning games into track meets. Friday afternoon, however, Notre Dame Stadium witnessed a struggle which, if it wasn't exactly "three yards and a cloud of dust", was more like the Shot Put than the 100-yard dash.

The Irish frosh drubbed their Michigan State counterparts 33-14 in a contest which saw: Spartan signal-caller Dan Werner run quarterback sneaks on the opening two plays, and most of the time afterward; the game's passers connecting on a mere 11-31 attempts for 137 of the 532 total offense yards; and a first half in which rushers ground out better than 80% of the offensive yardage.

Notre Dame dominated the clash with a ferocious defense (10 lbs. per man lighter on the defensive line than State) led by linebackers Tim Zuber, six tackles and seven assists, and Eric Patton, six tackles and six assists. The Spartans managed only 2.9 yards per carry on the ground. When State took to the air in the second half, the Irish secondary permitted only four completions, two of them coming on halfback passes. Ralph Stepaniak climaxed a day of passing frustration by stealing a 4th-quarter Werner pass and speeding 41 yards for a touchdown.

Playing without star halfback Tom Gatewood, the Notre Dame backfield rolled up 251 yards on the ground, all by the quartet of Jim Yoder, Andy Huff, John Cieszkowski, and Bob Minnix. Quarterback Yoder, who replaced starter Bill Etter in the first quarter, had great success with a Hanratty-type rollout and scored from the three and seven yard lines. Huff and Cieszkowski are strong, solid runners, while the exciting Minnix combines a stuttering style with break-away speed.

The Michigan State offense, which is to say Eric Allen, was at its best in the first half. Allen is a 5'11", 170 lb. halfback from Georgetown, South Carolina. He bursts out of the backfield, then turns the neat trick of slashing sideways through the line like a commuter squeezing into a subway car. He rolled up 88 yards in 24 carries and added a touchdown in the first two quarters. That's not much of an average unless you consider that he was the only Spartan back to carry the ball, outside of Werner, the Irish defense to key on him. Allen finished the day with 149 rushing and receiving yards, 70% of the Spartan total offense.

Notre Dame took a 13-7 halftime lead on a 27-yard touchdown pass from Yoder to Mark Brandt. The 6'3", 200 lb. end went way up to grab the ball, then eluded two defenders to score. The initial Irish markers came on a 15-yard scamper by Minnix. Yoder's two runs and Stepaniak's interception put the game away in the second half.

State employed a little "razzle" to score in the third quarter. Reserve quarterback Steve Piro, as a halfback, took a handoff from Werner, swept right end, then flipped a 18-yard aerial to his quarterback-wide open over the middle. perhaps MSU would have been better off with Piro, who entered the game twice, threw two halfback passes, and completed them both for a grand total of 49 yards.

The Spartans get another shot at Notre Dame on Nov. 15 at East Lansing.

Spartan halfback Eric Allen was the game's leading ballcarrier. He gets only short yardage here when faced with the tough Notre Dame secondary in the ND-MSU freshman game Friday afternoon in Notre Dame Stadium.

Sports Round-up

Basketball

Act No. 2 of the Johnny Dee Basketball Spectacular took place at Chicago's Marist High School last Thursday night. Before 1,400 fans, the "Whites" defeated the "Blues" 106-94.

The Dee-coached "Whites" used what could be this year's starting five: Bob Arnzen, Bob Whitmore, Sid Catlett, Austin Carr, and Jack Meehan. Dwight Murphy and John Gallagher filled out the squad.

Frosh coach "Buzzy" O'Connor's out-gunned "Blues" owned the contest's outstanding individual performance, Collis Jones' 36 points and 17 rebounds. The 6'7" sophomore received scoring support from Mike O'Connell and John Pleick with 18 and 14 points respectively.

Super soph Carr paced the victors with 33 counters, followed by Whitmore with 27. Dee plans to reshuffle his squad for games in Michigan City (Wed.) and Niles (Thurs.).

Cross Country

The Irish harriers journeyed to Indianapolis on Friday for the Indiana Cross Country Meet. In the "Big" Division, Notre Dame finished third with 158 points, behind first place Indiana and Purdue (65). Taylor College romped in the "Little" Division, winning with 24 points to Valparaiso's 115.

Hoosier Mark Gibbons took the individual title with a four-mile time of 18:07. Irish captain Kevin O'Brien placed 6th, while Bob Watson, bothered by an injury, could manage only 32nd. Rounding out the top five Irish finishers were Rick Wohlhuter (34th), Jim Rycyna (41st), and Mike Donnelly (45th).

Soccer

The Notre Dame Soccer Club concluded its season this past weekend on a winning note, defeating three opponents over a four day span. Last Thursday the booters knocked off Northern Illinois 3-1. This contest was a defensive battle with the Irish finishing strong to stow away the victory.

On Saturday both the offense and defense played well in a 5-0 whitewash of the University of Chicago. Irish scoring featured Tim Patton and Dan Adams each registering two goals and Tom Morrell tallying once.

In the season finale played Sunday it was more of the same as ND blanked Western Illinois 4-0. Four individual men scored in this encounter. They were Fred Rohal, Dan Adams, Vic DeCoster, and Jack Goldcamp. Thus the Irish finished strong in posting a final season mark of 5 wins 3 losses and 1 tie.

Irish Hit Average: 520 Yards

You gotta say one thing for the government. They may not know how to win a war, but they sure aren't too tough on the gridiron, either.

You take that holocaust in Philadelphia last weekend, for example. I mean, 45-14 sounds like the weekend box score out of Saigon.

These guys in JFK Stadium were supposed to be trying to achieve a "total military victory," though. No messin' around. This wasn't McHale's Navy: It was McNallen's Navy — Mike McNallen, that is.

He comes from a little town in the other side of Gov. Shafer's State called Chocora. This place is so small, that main drag is made of bricks and the sides streets just were never made.

Mike prepped at Karns High, and in his senior year, whipped archrival Mars High. (Would you scream "credibility gap" if I told you Mars' nickname is "The Planets?") Karns — Mars is a psuedo-Army-Navy battle.

Terry Hanratty was playing 10 miles away at Butler High about that same time. He claims to be friend of McNallen. But Mike, fearing any identification with the enemy and not wanting to go the Benedict Arnold route, said before the game, "Hanratty and I did go to the same football camp together in high school, but I don't think we ever really met."

Hanratty, although not quite a George Kunz, in the manners department, nevertheless was cordial in presenting himself to McNallen and mates. In fact, the introduction was a little more than the Middies could handle.

Terry completed 14 of 21 passes for 149 yards and one touchdown, besides running nine times for 54 yards and another TD. Not bad for a guy who nearly spent the afternoon in sickbay.

An old injury to the right side of Hanratty's lower back has been recurring lately. Friday, in the hotel, he took a pill to relieve the muscle spasms.

Rubdowns Friday night and Saturday before the game put him in top shape but in the second quarter, Terry felt the pill's full effect and spent a few minutes on the sideline, reacting like a seasick sailor.

"I really didn't know if he could go the second half," said Ara after the game. "But they rubbed him down again at halftime and he said he could."

With about seven minutes to play in the third period, Navy's Mike Littieri knocked Hanratty cold with a blind side smash.

Terry missed only two offensive plays, however, and he returned for the next series of downs. But near the end of the period, Littieri came at him again, this time with a clothes-line tackle in mind. Hanratty ducked it miraculously and flipped a 17-yard pass to Ron Dushney, causing one press box wag to remark, "They ought to call the busted plays more often."

It wasn't much later that the author of that crack and a gang of other writers filled out their ballots for the outstanding player of the game award. Hanratty got every vote, except one.

ballots for the outstanding player of the game award. Hanratty got every vote except one.

A congressional investigation is underway to determine whether Mike McNallen's mother cracked security and sneaked into the press box.

Halls Begin Playoffs

by Mike Pavlin

Two league championships were decided and a third thrown into a tie as Interhall football ended its regular season on Sunday.

Keenan won by default over Breen-Phillips, taking League III; Farley dumped Alumni 13-0 to tie St. Ed's, a 26-0 winner over Dillon, for the League I title; and the heralded Off Campus-Pangborn match ended in a scoreless tie, giving OC the championship in League II. The other games were forfeits: Stanford to Zahm, Holy Cross to Cavanaugh, and Sorin to Morrissey.

Farley scored at the beginning and the end against Alumni, in a contest marred by five-fumbles. Taking the opening kickoff, the Collegians drove 76 yards for a touchdown, capped by a 35-yard scoring pass. Quarterback Mike Murphy tossed to John Micha, who made a great, juggling catch for the score. As time ran out, Bob Hurt dove 5 yards for the second TD and John Redding added the extra point from placement.

Dillon was simply no match for sky-high St. Ed's. Jack Watson and quarterback Corky Castagnaro accounted for first half points on runs, while Gino Agnon scored on an 11-yard sweep and a 17-yard flat pass from Castagnaro in the second half. A ferocious Ed's defense prevented Dillon from generating any sort of offense whatever.

Pangborn dominated its showdown with Off Campus in every department except scoring. In the first quarter, Pangborn drove to the OC 10, but lost the ball on an interception. Later in the quarter, OC thwarted another drive by recovering a fumble on the 29 yard line. As the half closed, Pangborn blocked a punt and recovered on the OC 16, but was stopped on the eight.

The final threat came in the fourth quarter, with Pangborn running down to the OC eight. An "off-side" penalty put the ball on the four. But after a 6-yard loss back to the 10, OC's Pete Ebiunas picked off a pass to seal the verdict.

The final standings: League I: 1.) St. Ed's 2-0-2; 1.) Farley 2-0-2; 3.) Dillon 1-1-2; 4.) Alumni 1-2-1; 5.) Lyons 0-3-1.

League II: 1.) Off Campus 3-0-1; 2.) Pangborn 1-0-3; 3.) Morrissey 1-1-2; 4.) Sorin 1-3-0; 5.) Walsh 0-2-2.

League III: 1.) Keenan 4-0-1; 2.) Zahm 3-1-1; 2.) Cavanaugh 3-1-1; 4.) B-P 1-2-2; 5.) Holy Cross 1-3-1; 6.) Stanford 0-5-0.
