

Wilkins Slams Black Study Programs

NEW YORK (UPI) Roy Wilkins, head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) said yesterday the NAACP would go to court to block the creation of "autonomous" black studies programs and black student dormitories on college campuses.

The statement put Wilkins, executive director of the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, in direct opposition to Negro students across the country now demanding black studies programs which they control and dormitories for black students only.

Wilkins said these demands represent, "in essence, the setting up of racially based Jim Crow schools," and he said the use of public tax monies to do this was believed by him and NAACP lawyers to be unconstitutional.

"... If some white Americans, torn and confused by today's clamor of some black students, should accede officially to the call for separate dormitories and autonomous racial schools within colleges and universities, there will be court action to determine anyone's right to use public tax funds to set up what are, patently, Jim Crow schools," he said.

Wilkins made the statement to about 200 NAACP representatives from throughout the United States at the 60th annual corporate meeting of the association at the Park Sheraton Hotel.

SAS Airliner Crashes In Pacific

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Scandinavian Airlines System DC8 jet with 45 persons aboard crashed into the Pacific Ocean during a rainstorm last night, killing at least four persons.

The Coast Guard reported that private small craft had picked up four bodies from the choppy sea and that 13 persons were missing. Earlier reports said all 36 passengers and nine crew members were safe.

Black Occupation Continues in East

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Protesting Negro students kept occupations of buildings going yesterday at Brandeis University and Swarthmore College in attempts to enforce their will on administration officials.

Officials at Brandeis sidestepped Negro control of the campus switchboard by installation of 16 new telephone lines to transact university business.

The sixty-five Negroes barricaded in Ford Hall on the Brandeis Campus at Waltham, Mass., passed up an offer to submit their written demands to the school president for discussion.

The president, Morris B. Abram, invited the demonstrators to write out their demands. He said if they did so he would be willing to meet with them and talk over their wants. The blacks failed to respond to the invitation.

Abram briefed the mayor of Waltham on the situation and continued to decry bringing in police. That, he said, would be "the last thing" he would want.

Some two dozen Negro students remained for a fifth day inside the admissions office at Swarthmore College near Philadelphia. Members of the Afro-American Swarthmore Student Association mulled over a number of concessions by administrators to their demands.

School officials agreed to demands for active recruitment of black students from community colleges, formation of a committee to review, and to propose admission policies for black students and appointment of a Negro as counselor. They said they would not use force to evict the demonstrators.

Shaw Trial To Be Held on Schedule

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Dist. Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr. today refused to delay or move the scheduled Jan. 21 trial of Clay Shaw on charges of conspiring to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

Haggerty denied defense motions to quash Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's charges against Shaw, and for a change of venue to move the trial outside New Orleans.

Haggerty said he would release ground rules for newsmen covering the trial today. Haggerty already had rejected the same defense motions once before. He turned them down summarily yesterday.

Garrison has accused Shaw of conspiring with Lee Harvey Oswald, Jack Ruby and David Ferrie in New Orleans in 1963 to murder Kennedy. Oswald, Ruby and Ferrie are dead.

Romance Rumors Run Through UCLA

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The UCLA Italian Department chairman said yesterday he still was in the dark as to whether three teaching assistants took the romance language too literally.

The campus newspaper, the Daily Bruin, reported Friday that the teaching assistants swopped A's for dates with pretty coeds.

"We haven't talked to any coeds yet who have any such charges," Franco Fido said. "We have talked to all the teaching assistants in the department but we haven't come up with anything yet."

Fido heads a three-member committee investigating the report. The student paper also reported that the three teaching assistants warned male students they would flunk unless they took high-priced tutoring from specific teaching assistants.

"I cannot help wondering why the students who made the charges in the Daily Bruin did not come up and speak to me first," Fido said.

Rembusch, Nau Swap Barbs On Fiscal Responsibility

Student Union President Rick Rembusch commented last night on the proposed constitutional amendments included in the Hunter-Davey Senate Bill, which would effect sweeping changes in the Student Union, saying, "It disturbs me that some senators feel that this vote for amendment is a vote to increase their own power. That's simply not true. The Student Union is subordinate to the Senate right now, and the Senate has final word on anything we do."

Rembusch said that this amendment would in no way increase the power of the Senate; instead it would simply increase the power of the Student Body President.

Student Body Vice-President Chuck Nau, when questioned about the Student Union President's remarks, said, "Rembusch has, for the first time, acknowledged the total power of the Senate."

Nau continued, "It is hard for me to understand how the very few senators who support a completely autonomous Union, Mike Meade, in particular, can call for that kind of autonomy, and yet continually harp, as Meade has done, that first of all, the Student Government and Student Union spend too much money, secondly, the Senate has no control over such expenditures, thirdly, the students themselves have very little control over how their money is spent, and finally, there is very little opportunity for budget review."

Nau said that the constitution calls for the Student Union President to report at every Senate meeting, but Rembusch has only spoken at three meetings thus far. "The constitution also calls for a report from the Student Body Treasurer," said Nau, "and he has done so at almost every meeting."

Student Union President Rembusch replied, "The Secretary of the Senate has never informed me of when or where the Senate meetings are going to be. I realize it is in the Constitution for me to be present, but it is difficult for me to show up when I don't know about the meetings. There have been occasions when I have wandered in on some of these meetings and have been recognized by certain members, but I have never been asked to take the floor."

Vice-President Nau also said, "The primary provision of the bill is that the Student Union submit a bi-annual budget. Thus, if the Union Director, or President as he is now known, does not perform within the guidelines set by the Senate as they study his budget for the first half year, then the Senate can insure against such waste and inefficiency for the second half of the year."

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF BILL LUKING COMMENTS ON "THIS UNION THING." SEE PAGE 3.

Nau said, "In many ways the whole question resolves itself into an issue not of power but of performance, that is, the performance of the Union in light of the reactions and needs of the student body." He cited as an example the two football train trips. "Both were financial failures," said Nau. "This year's trip was such even in light of the benefit of knowledge of last year's problem. This is not to say that the trip was poorly conceived, poorly planned, or poorly executed. Kevin McCarthy, organizer for both trips, performed superbly. The question then is simply one of student response. This is not to argue against innovation. It is only to suggest that a responsibility be more fully emphasized by those who are interested both in creative activity and financial solvency. The Senate is then, obviously, that ideal sounding board that, in effect, the bill seeks to re-emphasize."

Rembusch said, "Any business has its ups and downs. We lost money on the football trip, but we made $4,000 on the Rascals' concert. It's a chance we are always taking."

Rembusch concluded, "The Senate is already the highest authority. We always have in the past and always will in the future accept the Senate in this position."

Tragedy In Biafra

Last night, two Biafran students, Okechukwu Emodi and Winston Ibi-Bel-Gam, spoke to students of the Notre Dame community about the situation in Biafra. Though they had to contend with the Notre Dame-Air Force game, the speakers were welcomed by a large group. They are part of a delegation which has lectured in many U.S. cities.

Emodi began by acquainting the audience with Biafra's desire to show the United States how serious the situation is in Biafra. He referred to the genocide committed in Biafra today as "human tragedy," and explained that the Biafran people have no other choice but to continue fighting to resist the Nigerians with a "strong will to survive."

Winston then took over, relating brief histories of Nigeria and Biafra. Winston stressed the fact that the Federation of Nigeria was established only in 1914 under a British-instituted rule system of government. Under this system, representatives of the British government collected taxes in Nigeria and returned them to Britain.

Winston then related how, in 1929, the massacres in Biafra began. The government simply termed the atrocities "Nomad resistances" and the Biafrans were forced to accept the government's stand. The raids occurred again in 1945 and again in 1953, for seemingly unexplainable reasons.

Concerning Biafra today,

Okechukwu

Winston said many countries are working to save Biafra. He acknowledged that, since Biafra is not a member of the United Nations, she is not able to receive aid which countries such as the United States have donated to the United Nations for this problem. Instead, Winston said, aid must come from the U.N. through the Nigerian government, which naturally, is a hopeless front.

Illegal Operation Foiled

LITTLE FERRY, N.J. (UPI)—Federal agents and state police confiscated a truckload of stolen military weapons yesterday night and arrested a National Guardsman and a civilian employe, accusing them of running one of the nation's largest black markets for guns.

An Internal Revenue Service agent said the weapons included machine guns, anti-aircraft guns, carbines and explosives. They were picked up during raids on houses in this New York City suburb and in nearby Garfield.

National Guard Sgt. William Walko, a fulltime guardsman employed as an arsenal custodian at the National Guard armory in Teanect, and Kenneth J. Herbeck, 26, a civilian gun repairman for the National Guard, were arrested.

The IRS said Herbeck worked out of the West Orange, N.J. armory and traveled all over the state making gun repairs.

The two houses raided served as warehouses for the stolen guns.

Paul Hankins, chief of the IRS for New Jersey, said the raids produced "a truckload of weapons" and the cache was the biggest he had seen in 20 years with the IRS.

Hankins said the weapons apparently were stolen from military arsenals at bases throughout the country. They were resold on the black market when it became known "by work of mouth" that they were available.

Hankins declined to estimate the profits of the operation, but said the weapons "turn up in the hands of snipers and in riot areas."

The guns seized in the raids included Thompson submachine guns, Russian-made automatic weapons, and a .50 caliber anti-aircraft machine gun. Boxes of grenades also were seized.

Hankins said a third suspect was being sought. He said that the ring appeared to be operated by only a "few individuals" and that organized crime apparently had no part in the operation.

SMC Drops Charge

The Saint Mary's Campus Judicial Board decided at a 6:30 p.m. meeting last night that it could not take action against Kathy Cecil, a junior at Saint Mary's. Robert Narucki, a Notre Dame Senior, pressed charges against Miss Cecil for her part in the CIA demonstration.

The Saint Mary's Judicial Board was presented with a copy of Narucki's charges, but thus far the Notre Dame Judicial Board has failed to supply Saint Mary's with any evidence against Miss Cecil. Susan Turnbull, a member of the Saint Mary's Judicial Board stated that "as far as we're concerned there is no official evidence, so there is no case". The board did not decide jurisdiction on the case because they not feel that there is a case.

Narucki filed suit with the Notre Dame Judicial Board against Miss Cecil, Don Hynes, a senior, Brian McTigue, a '68 Notre Dame graduate, Peter Michelson, a member of the English faculty, and Marty McNamara, a senior. McNamara's trial has been postponed until Feb. 9. The others have not yet been brought to trial.

This Union Thing

The Student Senate will meet tonight and muddle in the morass of "constitutional reform." The Senate, impotent, rhetorical, and unable to effect any change in the governing of this University in several years, will finally have the chance of making itself felt. The change that it can effect tonight, that of making the Union President a direct appointment of the Student Body President, will be, however, destructive, revengeful, and reactionary.

Richard Rossie has spoken quite a bit about student power in the past two years. He scared a lot of people last spring, and his loose tongue got him into a jam in September. Rossie, however, is really a pretty tame animal and a most constructive radical. He's been an excellent Student Body President and the most conscientious elected officer imaginable.

Student power, however, means more than seating students on boards, talking about curriculum reform, and supporting the right of demonstration. The Student Union is in many ways the most realized form of student power on campus. The Union's power is real; it's backed up by the dollar; and it's controlled by students. But Rossie doesn't exert direct control over the Union, and that's why the Hunter-Davey bill is being brought before the Senate.

The Union was a brainchild of 1966-67 SBP Jim Fish. It was set up to divorce the administration of the "bread and circuses" of the Union from the realm of immediate concern of the Student Body President. It was a damn good move. Rossie's accomplishments: setting up the SLC, the judicial system, the inclusion of student rights in the Student Manual, support of the Free University, curriculum reform, and furthering ND's contacts with NSA were possible because he was free from the jobs once performed by the SBP that the Union President now handles. Rossie has been free to meet with Hesburgh, Riehle, McCarragher, Joyce, and Wilson, to go see Ed Stephan, to listen to complaints, and to represent the student body. He hasn't had to worry about concerts, lectures, shuttle busses, campus press, the student directory, Mardi Gras, Homecoming, Grand Prix, scheduling class functions, and whatever else the Union does.

This is hardly meant as a paean on the Student Union. The Union has its faults (The Academic Commission demonstrates a pathetic lack of taste and the Social Commission has more than its share of problems.), but it also does its thing and seems to do it pretty well.

So far Rossie's done his thing, and he's done it well. The problem seems to be that the Student Body President doesn't know when he's got it good. Right now he's on top of every thing--ND's number one poo-bah. The present constitution subordinates the Student Union President to a board; the SBP chairs the board. The board appoints and could remove the Student Union president. Meanwhile Rembusch, Wade, Lanwermeyer, Knappenberger, and Mroz have to contend with the details and try to please everybody with goodies and not just promises.

Changing the Student Union President's title and putting him under the direct appointment of and subject to direct removal by one arbitrary political figure ranks as the most foolish move witnessed on campus in the last year years. Senators favoring the bill have been basing their support on the contention that the bill's passage will enhance the power of the Senate. The Senate's present authority over the Student Union, its budget, its spending, and the appointment of its president, however, will not be enlarged or even affected by the legislation. Only the Student Body President's power will be enhanced.

Rossie contends that the Union is the service arm of Student Government. That's fine. The attempt to make the Union the service branch of the office of the Student Body Presidency, however, is an entirely different issue. The Union has to be a business organization serving the student body; it can't be a political football.

The move to change the Union President's title and manner of appointment and to abolish the Union's Board of Directors is disturbing in several aspects. The Union Director, as Hunter and Davey would call him, is quite likely to be a hack politician, appointed without regard to qualifications. Playing with the Constitution again reinforces a growing precedent for constantly amending and changing and reamending the document. The most important point ignored by those who wish to alter the present set up is that the Union is a business doing one quarter of a million dollars worth of business per year. It has contracts to provide services and to consume goods and services. It can not be directed or administered by political whim. Those wishing to change the present structure are ignorant of any principles of management. The Union must be allowed to develop without needless change and continuity must be established. The Union's direction is best determined by and its functioning best supervised by its board--a board which should be headed by the Student Body President, the highest elected representative of the student body. The day to day and yearly operation of the Union and its multiple facets, however, should be run by a Student Union President, appointed by and responsible to the board.

The title can be changed. That alteration is the only one which should even be considered.

Justice Brennan Coming

The Notre Dame Law School will celebrate its 100th anniversary with a two-day observance on Feb. 7. Associate Justice William J. Brennan of the U.S. Supreme Court will be the principal speaker.

"Human Rights and the Law" will be the theme of the centennial symposium, and sessions will deal with "The Moral Basis of Legal Education."

Dean William B. Lawless of the Law School said symposium participants, as well as persons to receive honorary degrees during the centennial, will be announced later.

Invited to the observance have been members of the Notre Dame Law Assn., the deans of some 130 American law schools, university trustees and law advisory council members, South Bend area attorneys and judges, and Notre Dame faculty members and law students.

Other speakers at centennial events will include Lt. Gov. Raymond Broderick of Pennsylvania, a Notre Dame law alumnus, who will speak at a reunion dinner, and Prof. George W. Keeton, who will discuss Notre Dame's junior year program of legal study at the University of London where he is dean of the law faculty.

Justice Brennan, who has been on the Supreme Court since 1956, will speak at an academic convocation Feb. 8. Other events will include the traditional Red Mass for lawyers and judges in Sacred Heart Church, a Law School open house, and a centennial banquet at which Dean Lawless and the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC, Notre Dame's president, will speak.

The Law School is also using its 100th anniversary as the occasion to offer alumni the opportunity to replace their LL.B. (bachelor laws) degree with the J.D. (doctor of laws) which is now replacing the LL.B. as the professional degree conferred upon law school graduates in the United States. It will not be necessary for alumni to return to campus to effect the change in degree, but many are expected for centennial events.

Irish Cagers Hijack Air Force, 88-53

By TERRY SHIELDS

It was like watching two different ball games with three different teams competing last night. In the first half Notre Dame's Fighting Irish confronted the Air Force Falcons and the result was such a messy contest that even junior high school teams could snicker. ND looked inept at handling the ball, and the Air Force Academy just looked inept.

However, in the second half, the Irish came out breathing fire and they looked every bit of the nationally ranked team that they are. Unfortunately for them, the visiting Falcons continued their same style of play and the end result was a convincing 88-53 rout by the home team.

Bob Arzen was the only bright spot in an otherwise dismal first half as he canned 15 points. Coach John Dee substituted freely during the initial stanza and there were murmurs of dissent (and at times these were a little louder than murmurs) among the student body. Nonetheless, ND still managed a 33-26 advantage.

The beginning of the second half saw this lead dwindle to 3 points on two quick buckets by the Falcons. Then Dwight Murphy hit a jump shot from 15 feet, Arzen tapped home a rebound, Sidney Catlett layed one in, "Murph" stole the ball and fed O'Connell and the rout was on. The Irish shot a scorching 62% in the second half and a very respectable 54% for the entire game.

Arzen led all scorers with 32 points, Bob Whitmore added 15 for second best, and Murphy netted 10. Bert Spear, son of Falcon coach Bob Spear, was the only Cadet to hit double figures. He had 14 markers.

Once again Notre Dame utilized its bench as every man saw some game action and almost the same number found the scoring column. Even some "big kid," who looked as though he should be playing defensive tackle for somebody, threw in a hook shot to the delight of the entire student body.

The deciding factor had to be ND's superior height advantage. This was especially true at the guard positions where Murphy and O'Connell could shoot or feed almost at will during the Irish rally. Aside from 6-10 Cliff Parsons, the Air Force just didn't have the horses. Noting the way that the Irish rebounded (54-38 edge), it may be a better comparison to say that they didn't have the kangaroos!

One final note shows that the Irish had their fewest number of turnovers in quite a while. They gave up the ball 14 times and at least 10 of these mishaps occurred in the first half.

'Joe Is A Good Boy'

MIAMI (UPI) — The most worried person in the ballpark was a gentleman named Namath.

John Namath, not Joe.

John Namath, 61-years-old, has a perpetual glint in his eye like his son and is like any other father. He doesn't want to see his boy get hurt.

"That's the only thing that worried me," confessed the elder Namath after watching his son lead the underdog New York Jets to their first professional football world championship ever Sunday with an almost unbelievable 16-7 Super Bowl victory over the Baltimore Colts.

"I didn't want to see him get hurt," said John Namath about his celebrated 25-year-old son, Joe. "I didn't want to see any of them get hurt."

The colorful, controversial Jet quarterback did aggravate an old injury late in the third quarter Sunday when he was spilled uncommonly hard to the turf by Baltimore tackle Fred Miller, but that didn't keep him out of action long. He was back directing traffic the next time the Jet took possession, completely ignoring his throbbing right thumb which he originally injured in the second game of the season against Boston and dislocated again against Oakland in the AFL title game two weeks ago.

John Namath was among the happy, excited celebrants in the Jet's dressing room and whenever anybody asked him how he felt about his son, Joe, he told them straight out.

"They said he could never do it. They all said the same thing. He couldn't do it. They said he was boasting but I knew he wasn't I said they'd win by 10 points. He made a liar outta me. They only won by nine."

Joe Namath, surrounded, besieged and pounded on the back at every turn, happened to be coming by as his father was speaking about him and when they saw each other they embraced warmly.

"I told 'em you'd do it. . . I told 'em," John Namath said joyfully, hugging his son.

"You can talk," Joe Namath told his father, laughingly. "You didn't have to play."

There was such a milling, surging crowd around the Jet quarterback, who still had shoe black under his eyes from the ballgame, that he kept walking from one corner of the dressing room to another and finally out the door trying to escape the mob.

"What are you gonna do, Joe, go out there and play the game all over," one of his teammates called after him, laughing all the time.

Now somebody was asking John Namath how proud he was of his boy.

"I'm the proudest father in the world," he said. "Not only of Joe but of all five of my children, John, Bob, Frank and Rita, too."

"Best game you ever saw Joe play?" John Namath had a question put to him.

"Nah," he said. "I've seen him play a lotta good games like this. Two weeks before the Oakland game I was a nervous wreck but after they (the Jets) beat them, I said I didn't care who they play — Baltimore or Cleveland — they'd lick 'em. That's what I said."

Right about that time, John Namath's son came by again on another one of his trips around the room and noticing the straw hat his father was wearing for the first time, said:

"Where did you ever get that hat?"

Joe's father tried to answer but Jet coach Weeb Ewbank came over to shake his hand and then one of the Jet's assistant also wanted to have a word with him.

"Mr Namath, you've got a remarkable son," he said. "You've got a son who makes some big statements and then goes out there and makes every one of 'em com true. I take my hat off to a man like that and to a man like you, sir."

John Namath beamed.

"Thank you, he said, touching his own hat. "Joe is a good boy."
