

AN TOSTAL carnival focus of hall presidents' meeting

by Mike Lewis
Senior Staff Reporter

The AN TOSTAL carnival proposal and debate concerning The Observer were the major issues covered at last night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting held in LaFortune Student Center.

Robert Driscoll of the McDermott Amusement Company, Inc. presented a film to familiarize the Council members with his carnival's operations and attractions. He said that he had "worked at several universities" in the Illinois-Indiana area, and most had been "very successful."

AN TOSTAL Chairman John Rooney said that the residence halls will operate "probably 15 carnival games, and the halls can double-up, pretty much like Mardi Gras."

Driscoll said, "The percentages of the games is designed to make the money and give the player a fair chance to win."

Rooney added, "The only way the halls won't make a profit, barring bad weather, is by mis-managing the booth."

The carnival is tentatively located in the Stepan Center parking lot. "Right now we plan to operate between eight to ten rides," Driscoll noted. He added that more specific measurements will be taken "after all this snow melts."

Grace President Jerry Castellini inquired about the safety of the rides, considering that some students may be under the influence of alcohol. Driscoll responded, "My ride operators will have strict orders not to allow someone that much under the influence on the ride. This is standard operating procedure with our company."

He added that his organization has compiled a "very good safety record" in 35 years of operations. He noted that the equipment is "fully safety tested" and that most accidents are caused by the customers, not the equipment.

The McDermott Company will not provide security for the student-operated booths, Driscoll said, adding, "I can't be responsible for merchandise after I turn it over to you."

Rooney stated, "We'll take care of security," noting that the merchandise will probably be stored in Stepan Center.

In other matters, Student Body President Dave Bender addressed the HPC with criticisms of The Observer and a proposal to establish a board to "evaluate" the paper.

"What is at issue here is that all of us pay a $6 fee and we should have some input into the quality of The Observer," Bender said.

The issue arose when a letter from Gryp to The Observer was not printed. Gryp called the letter "critical of The Observer." It charged that last Tuesday's article concerning SU films was inaccurate and exaggerated and Gryp asked the HPC members to reap copies of the letter to "see if it deserves censorship."

Bender stated that the newspaper should have "some kind of financial accountability." Noting that Student Government and Student Union were subject to evaluation, Bender proposed a commission to evaluate The Observer. He suggested that this commission could include the HPC Chairman, a Hall President, the Student Body President, a Campus Life Council member, an accounting student and a faculty member.

In addition, Bender questioned the effectiveness of The Observer in reporting some recent developments on campus.

He concluded that the student body "should have some input into the quality of the paper, and the right to have opinions presented as long as they follow the guidelines" of using no obscenity or scandalous material.

The meeting then progressed to Driscoll's film, but HPC Chairman J.P. Russell granted Observer Editor-in-Chief Marti Hogan a rebuttal following the movie.

Hogan said, "Our financial records are open, and anyone can come up and review them at any time." She also stated that the paper presently has an advisory board, consisting of two American Studies professors, an accounting professor, a member of the art department and a reporter from the South Bend Tribune.

The letter was not printed, she said, because "a consensus of the editorial board" determined that Gryp should be contacted first. Hogan added that a second story had been planned to clear up the movie controversy. Hogan said that she had tried to contact Gryp, but was

Safety hazards emphasized by Morrissey fire damage

by Patrick Cole
Special Projects Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third story in a series examining fire safety at the University. Today's story will look at the damage and effect of the Morrissey Hall fire that occurred last September.

About eight hours before the Notre Dame football team met the University of Pittsburgh squad for the opening game of the season last Sept. 10, Junior Bob Onda almost met his death in Morrissey Hall.

There is some good news and some bad news to this story. The bad news is that most of his personal belongings and those of his roommate, junior Jeff Thinnies, were destroyed in the blaze. And the good news, well, Onda can still recall what happened that Saturday morning:

"It was about three o'clock when I went to bed," he said. "And Jeff went down the hall. In our room, we had a partition that had wooden shelves on one side. Once I was in bed, I smelled smoke and then heard a cackling sound."

"So I quickly ran out of the room to get a fire extinguisher," Onda continued, "and I closed the door. Then Jeff Anderson (a Morrissey resident) pulled the fire alarm. By the time I ran to the end of the hall, the room was filled with smoke!"

Then Thinnies added, "I then started banging the doors to get people out."

In short, the good news: neither

Onda nor anyone on the third floor of Morrissey was killed. On of the keys to the lack of casualties was the response by third floor Morrissey residents to the fire. "Student response was excellent," said Notre Dame Fire Inspector Jack Bland. "And their cooperation was excellent, too."

Cause: electrical wiring

Onda said that the electrical wiring that ran under the partition in the double room located in the chapel wing of Morrissey caused the blaze. Thinnies suggested another possibility. "I remember a candle was burning. We had a cinderblock shelf with two by ten inch boards that could have ignited by the candle. But that's hard to do, because the wick of the candle was low."

Bland ruled out the candle, too. "I don't think the candle was the thing," he said. "It could have been the extension cord in the room."

Unfortunately, these observations were made after the blaze, for much was lost. "We salvaged a few pairs of shoes and socks and some shirts," Thinnies recalled. With little clothing, hardly any personal belongings, no books, just not much of anything, - Onda and Thinnies spent about five weeks in Moreau Seminary while their room was being restored.

Onda recalled some more details about the rear tragedy in Morrissey: "I didn't call my folks until 5 o'clock the next day. Then we started rummaging through the stuff. It was like a dream. I just couldn't believe it happened. Then the following Tuesday my mother brought me some clothes."

Thinnies added some details, "My parents didn't come up to see the damage, but they did send me some clothes."

But what their parents could not bring or replace were some of the valuable possessions destroyed in the fire. Thinnies lost a Lloyd's stereo, souvenirs that he had obtained in Europe while studying abroad, slides, a Greek flag and some wall hangings. Onda had lost a paperback collection of about 40 books, some binoculars, high school yearbooks and a 1934 Notre Dame varsity monogram sweater. "It was amazing," Onda said, "You can still smell the smoke in some of our clothes."

Most of Onda and Thinnies' personal belongings were insured by their parents' home owners policy. According to Onda, the policy covers 10 percent of the value for which the belongings in the home are insured. Onda said that he was covered for $2,400 and Thinnies' insurance covered him up to $1,950. Both Onda and Thinnies, however, told that the insurance reimbursement did not cover all the damaged items lost in the fire.

What the insurance companies did not cover, friends of Onda and Thinnies - and even strangers - donated food, clothing and money to help them get back on their feet. "That was the most amazing

Due to vandalism, the wooden gate on the SMC-ND road will be replaced

by Kathleen Connelly
Staff Reporter

As a result of vandalism, the wooden gate on the road between Saint Mary's and Notre Dame will be replaced by the full-time use of an iron gate and padlock.

The change has been made as the result of eleven separate acts of vandalism in the past two weeks, security director Arthur Pears stated.

He added that the wooden gate was made of a material that breaks easily so that if the automatic mechanism malfunctions and the arm comes down on a car, it will cause minimal damage.

"We are looking for someone who manufactures a rubber gate that will be more resistant to vandals," Pears said.

"We apprehended the offenders involved in three of the incidents. They were all Notre Dame students, so they were reported to the Dean of Students and ticketed for coming onto campus illegally," he explained.

Pears said that owing to the fragile nature of the old gate, it would break off if someone just pulled it back far enough.

Before the vandalism, the iron gate was used only after 12:30 p.m. when the buses stopped running. Now the iron gate will be locked 24 hours a day. The bus company has been issued a key for the lock and its drivers will be responsible for maintaining security precautions.

Pears estimated that the time necessary for the driver to unlock the gate and lock it again after passing through would be about two or three minutes. He acknowledged that this could make some students late for class. "The time element could cause some hardships, but our first concern is security," Pears commented.

"The use of the gate and lock will definitely be an inconvenience to the bus drivers," Pears stated, "but I had the bus company out here last Friday and, after seeing the situation, they agreed that this is the only way to deal with the problem."

Campus energy cutbacks apparent

by Loretta Hoch

Reduced energy consumption is apparent across the Notre Dame campus, as dorms, offices, and classrooms have been darkened to comply with the 15 percent energy cutback requested by the Notre Dame energy conservation committee.

The elimination of unnecessary lighting and use of electrical appliances is the energy-saving strategy being employed by most building supervisors.

All conservation measures are being instituted strictly on a voluntary basis, but cutback efforts by the building supervisors have apparently been very successful. Fr. James Riehle, director of energy conservation stated.

Many dorm rectors are observing the guidelines suggested at an emergency rector's meeting, held last Thursday evening by Fr. Riehle.

Reduction of hall lighting, other than exit signs, has been practiced in most dorms. Outside lighting has also been decreased. While many halls are dimming the intensity of the lights, dorms such as Flanner and Grace are removing bulbs altogether resulting in up to a 70 percent reduction of lighting.

Notices discouraging all unnecessary uses of electrical appliances are scattered across the walls of most dorms in an effort to eliminate the excessive use of stereos, hair dryers, televisions, and other electrical "luxuries."

In an attempt to get students involved, Peter Broccoletti, assistant rector of Fisher Hall explained, "We're requesting that students turn off their stereos or lights when they leave their rooms and that they cut down whenever possible."

Students are also being urged to watch television in groups, and to use fewer lights in their rooms.

Dillon Hall has gone one step further, having adopted Riehle's idea of appointing "watt watchers" to every floor. Various Dillon residents have been selected to patrol the halls during the evening and turn off all unnecessary lights.

In other areas of the campus, fewer and dimmer light are also prevailing. In the ACC, Assistant Director Joseph Sassano reported that lighting has been reduced by 50 percent in most parts, and up to 75 percent in seldom used areas. In addition, he stated that all office personnel have been notified to shut off electrical appliances when not in use. The use of television lights during basketball practice has also been discontinued. "In general, an all around tightening of the belt is being implemented to conserve energy," observed Sassano, who stated that energy consumption has been reduced by 25 percent.

At the Rockne Memorial, similar conservation measures have been organized, according to building supervisor Edward Kazmierzak. In response to the University's request that buildings cut down their energy use by 15 percent, Kazmierzak points out that 50 percent of the lighting has been eliminated in the hall's gyms, and swimming pool.

A crusade to curtail the use of electricity in classrooms has been organized by the Dean of Arts and Letters, Isabel Charles. Charles has issued a letter requesting that all professors refrain from using the lights whenever possible. Alternatives, such as raising the shades, or only using one row of lights, were also suggested in the letter.

Lighting in halls and restrooms of classroom buildings has been cut down by 50 percent and many classrooms are now being used at night, eliminating their use for night-time studying. Fr. James Flanagan, building supervisor of O'Shaughnessy, reported that classrooms there are being locked at 9 p.m. However, he complained that students have been climbing into the windows by means of snow banks, and using the rooms to study in. "I guess that the locking of windows will now become an important step in conserving energy," he concluded.

Energy conservation in the library consists of a "two pronged attack," according to Business Manager Wilmer Berndt. Cutbacks are now occurring not only in the lighting, but are also being considered in the regulation of the heating system. Working closely with Building Engineer Charles Ayers and Assistant Director of Maintenance, Walter Jaworski, library officials have organized a system of recirculating much of the air, rather than pumping in fresh air, which must be heated.

In the Huddle, an elimination of all heating appliances as well as a 50 percent reduction in lighting is being observed. Although this means that there is no longer any toast, hot fudge, or popcorn, employees at the Huddle have found that "people can put up with chocolate instead of hot fudge, and survive without BLT's."

In reviewing the steps being taken throughout the campus thus far, Riehle reported that voluntary conservation measures have been "very satisfactory," and he did not foresee the need for mandatory cutbacks.

Weight training equipment stolen

by Jerry Perez
Staff Reporter

Approximately $400 of weight training equipment was stolen from the ACC weight room between 9 p.m. Monday night and 2 p.m. yesterday afternoon, according to Peter Broccoletti, weight training coach.

Pieces reported missing included a seven-foot Olympic bar, two Olympic collars and 20 York plates ranging in size from two-and-a-half to 45 pounds. "They stole a whole Olympic set," Broccoletti commented.

Upon opening the weight room at around 1:55 yesterday, Broccoletti said that he noticed one of the bars was missing. He immediately took a count of plates and found several gone.

Broccoletti also noted that the weight room key was discovered missing from its place in the issue room at around 1 p.m. yesterday, an hour before he opened up the weight room with his personal set of keys.

According to Broccoletti, the key then "suddenly appeared" at 3 p.m. the same afternoon. He reported that the attendant in the issue room was unable to account for the reappearance.

"It must have been an inside job," Broccoletti said. "It had to be executed by someone who knew the workings of the weight room and the issue room." He also cited the possibility that the thieves made a copy of the key.

John J. Stephens, associate director of athletics, commented, "I don't know how they got that stuff out of there." Broccoletti, however, suggested that the equipment was removed from the ACC by way of an exit door close to the weight room.

Broccoletti conjectured that the individuals responsible for the robbery are storing the goods off-campus. "It's pretty difficult to hide a seven foot Olympic bar in a dormitory," he said.

The Notre Dame Weight Club is presently offering a reward to anyone offering information pertaining to the stolen equipment.

Election Guidelines

As the student body election campaigns get underway, The Observer would like to state publicly its policy on election coverage. This policy will be followed in covering both the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's elections.

1. All coverage of the campaigns will be handled through the news department, except as noted below.

a. Only experienced reporters will cover election stories.

b. None of these writers nor any Observer editor is connected with any candidate's campaign.

c. Every effort will be made to insure fair and equal coverage of each candidate, and equal placement in the newspaper. If this is not possible, placement will be determined by draw.

2. The Observer will accept paid advertising for any candidate.

3. The Observer will not publish letters or columns concerning candidates or their platforms.

Individuals or representatives of organizations who wish to challenge any part of a candidate's platform are advised to attend the public forums, which will be covered by The Observer.

Legitimate organizations which meet the criteria of the official election guidelines may endorse Notre Dame candidates by contacting The Observer in writing before 10 p.m. Sun., March 5. (Dates will be announced for Saint Mary's.) A list of organizations endorsing each candidate will appear in Monday's Observer under the candidate's name. No statements of endorsement from these groups will be published.

Endorsements should accurately reflect the opinion of a majority of the organization's membership. Consequently, endorsements will be accepted from the Sophomore Class Officers, for example, but not from the sophomore class (except in the unlikely case that such an endorsement can be verified before publication).

4. The Observer editorial board will endorse a candidate and/or analyze the comparative merits of the candidates. The endorsement will be run as an editorial in Friday's Observer. The Observer editorial board will interview the candidates tonight. Each ticket will be given equal time for presentation and questions.

5. Each candidate will be allowed an equal amount of column space for a final statement. These columns will appear in Monday's Observer on the editorial page.

The Observer has established these guidelines to insure complete and unbiased coverage of the student body elections. Any complaints concerning these guidelines or our campaign coverage should be communicated to the editor-in-chief.

How Sad It Is

art buchwald

Washington-- I think for me the saddest thing about Watergate is that members of the old Nixon gang have turned against each other. Who would ever have dreamed that on the David Frost show former President Nixon would have implicated John Erlichman and Bob Haldeman, whom he considered his "sons," in the coverup of a third-rate burglary?

Who would have thought that John Erlichman would write a fiction novel based on President Nixon showing him in such an unfavorable light? How could anyone have predicted that Bob Haldeman, one of the great White House stonewallers, would let down his hair and blow the whistle on Nixon, Charles Colson and Henry Kissinger?

Whatever they did in the past I always said to my wife, "At least you have to admire them for their loyalty to each other."

I always dreamed that Nixon crowd would meet together on the Tenth Anniversary of Watergate and have a nostalgic reunion, reliving those wonderful days when they were all fighting in the White House bunker. They would kid each other about putting on weight and tell outrageous lies about their Watergate War experiences. It would be a scene out of "White Christmas," with John Dean calling up everybody and saying, "Let's go out to San Clemente and show the old man that, while the rest of the country may have forgotten him, those of us who fought with him still really care."

I could see them gathering on the lawn overlooking the blue Pacific and everyone would break into "Hail to the Chief" as Nixon came out in the suit he wore when he was President. There would be tears in his eyes as he looked at those familiar faces, and then he'd say, "I want you all to shape up. I've never seen such a sloppy bunch of White House aides in my life."

Then they would all sit around the pool drinking California wine and listening to the tapes, once again thinking back on those wonderful days when it was "us" against "them."

But apparently the reunion will never come off. And once again the Nixon Administration people have the media to blame.

If the newspapers, magazines, TV and book publishers hadn't dumped all that money on them, this great group of honorable men might never have ratted on each other.

The tragedy of post-Watergate is that in order to pay their lawyers, all those involved in the break-in and the coverup had to go their own way to make their stories worth the megabucks their agents had gotten for them.

It is sad for all of us who sat on the sidelines to see these men who went through so much together now at each other's throats.

Those of us who thought that Watergate was behind us now realize that the wounds are too deep and the book advances too high for any of the people involved to stick together.

My wife has taken in harder than I have. When the Haldeman excerpts from his book were printed, she said tearfully, "How could he have done it to Nixon?"

I said, "How could Nixon have done it to him?"

Then she said, "How could Colson have done it to Haldeman?"

And I said, "How could Dean have done it to all of them?"

Perhaps it's futile for people who weren't there to speculate why these fine, outstanding men would turn against each other at this stage of the game. My own theory is that it never would have happened if Checkers had been alive.

P.O. BOX Q

Dangerous paranoia

Dear Editor:

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ford's letter opposing United States policy towards Israel requires nothing less than an outrageous reply. Anyone has the right, and perhaps the duty, to question publicly a set of political decisions with which he disagrees. No one has the moral right publicly to impugn individuals because of their race, tribe, culture, language, sex, religion or other class characteristic having no direct connection with a political action. Such commentary as we read in Mr. and Mrs. Ford's letter is racism, more specifically, here, anti-Semitism. World War II taught us that it is never too soon to react to an insidious paranoia that leads to fear, hatred, and finally violence.

To some the letter may sound innocuous. Consider, however, what it might mean to "curb Jewish influence here at home because it would be just and right." More specifically, what does it practically mean that "We should work to limit Jewish representation in universities, government and the professions to 3 percent (their share in the population)." As a first step, consider how we are to identify the 3 percent. Yellow stars of David? How many years was it, last time, from the star to the oven? Those of us who are of Irish descent might remember our own great grandfathers' stories of hunger as a consequence of their names. In my own generation, though the discrimination had thankfully become trivial, there are haunting memories of humiliation that turn to nightmares in the flickering light of old newsreels from Auschwitz, Buchenwald and so many other monuments to the worst in mankind.

It has always been easy and dangerous to ascribe complex problems to simple causes, but such reductiveness is most disturbing when the causes are not individual people or individual actions but holistic conspiracies. Whether the conspiracy is thought to be Jews, or the Knights of Columbus, or Sicilians, matters less than the dangers involved in that sort of paranoia.

Foghat and Starz: Exciting but Unfulfilling

by dom salemi

Foghat and Starz played a short but intense set the other night at the ACC in front of a friendly, vociferous crowd predominated by young teens and pre-pubescent. It was an entertaining if somewhat staid presentation: Foghat choosing to perform a note by note recreation of their best-selling live lp; Starz showcasing much of their new material from their recent Attention Shoppers and exhorting the crowd to run down to River City Records and "pick up on it." In other words, a competent, exciting show, somewhat lacking in spontaneity. The kind of performance where they turn the house lights on after the first encore and no one boos.

Starz played a surprisingly strong set disproving that they were "just another bunch of heavy metal morons," as lead singer Mike Smith somewhat wryly observed. I, for one held a somewhat similar opinion, often wondering aloud to myself while chancing upon copies of their records in the stores, just what they did for a living. It was with some shock that I discovered them to be a strong, hard rocking band blessed with a capable vocalist, a driving rhythm section and a flair for writing infectious, unpretentious tunes. They showed the ability to perform softer, more melodic numbers as well with their interpretations of "Johnny All Alone" from their new lp, and "Anyway You Want It."

The softer stuff was not particularly well received however, so the band kept pretty much to the uptempo numbers closing with rousing versions of "I'm Waitin'" and "I'll Be There" off of Attention while Smith threw cans of beer to the crowd and temptingly offered his leather posterior to the eager groupies at ringside. Ah, to be young, beautiful and in a rock and roll band. They should have come back for an encore.

After a short intermission Foghat took the stage amidst a barrage of smoke, flickering strobe lights, and the strains of Stravinsky, keeping the crowd on their feet by quickly kicking into "Fool For The City." Rod Price got off a stinging solo early in the song and then let lead singer Dave Preverett and the forceful rhythm section of Roger Earl (drums), and Craig MacGregor (bass) take over. "I'm tired of laying back" sang Dave and indeed he was not alone in expressing these sentiments, the band was really rocking out.

Wasting little time Foghat kept things moving with "My Baby" a driving blues tune. Price's tasteful slide work was nicely punctuated by the theatrical, driving thrusts of Earl and Preverett (on rhythm guitar) who took center stage whenever Price came to the end of a riff.

In "Stone Blues" Price really shined. Over the primitive, repititious patterns set down by Earl, Price allowed no one to take the spotlight from him. Running up and down the guitar like a madman, never pausing to stop, Price started to hit notes that weren't even on the guitar. It was only when he finally ran out of room that the other members of the band were permitted to return to the spotlight.

"It Hurts Me Too," slowed things down a bit. An engaging piece, it featured a fine vocal performance by Preverett who showed he can be a sensitive and expressive singer when he isn't shouting out erotic exhortations celebrating sensual physical

ND Film Series

The ND Film Society continues its free film series tonight at 8 p.m. in room 232 of Saint Mary's Moreau Hall. Tonight's selection of short films are Chris Marker's La Jette, Bertolt Brecht's The Jewish Wife, Richard Lester's Running Jumping, Standing Still Film, Sake's Open Windo, and three animated films: Up is Down, Omega, and Permutations.

La Jette is a tale of time travelling in the bleak years after World War III. The film's unusual plot and style bring home the overwhelming point of the simple awesome difference between being alive and being dead. The Jewish Wife tells of a woman's flight to safety from Hitler's Germany in a time, described by Brecht, "when the arbitrary has the force of law, when humanity dehumanizes itself." This film received awards from the New York American Film Festival and the San Francisco and Philadelphia International Film Festivals. Running...Film shows the zany antics of a wild bunch of loonies led by Peter Sellers in the style of an old silent comedy. Omega is a masterpiece of colorful special effects.

But sensitivity isn't really where Foghat is at. They thrive on beating their audience over the head with loud mannered, amalgamations of rock, rhythm and blues, and boogie. Sometimes it works (especially when they are singing about sex, since their brutal, physical assault on the audience parallels its conception of it as a bestial, powerful, primitive urge that must be satisfied as quickly and painlessly as possible), and sometimes it doesn't, like in "Honey Hush," a boring, interminable piece of sludge that goes nowhere. Full of jerky riffs and clinking rhythms the song was given the extended "in concert" treatment: lots of boring solos and dramatic breaks. It is the only bad cut on their otherwise fine live lp and was the only really dull moment in the evening. Why does the band like this song?

Foghat can, however, turn it on with the best of them especially when they get down to the basics. "I Just Want To Make Love To You" which followed the dreadful "Honey Hush" is built around a simple blues riff and features an even simpler vocal chorus. MacGregor and Price teased the audience with a little instrumental foreplay, one playing the instantly recognizable riff the other slowly responding, until finally deciding to satiate the audience's passion by pushing into the song. Preverett's throbbing, frenzied rhythm playing and MacGregor's pulsating bass never skipped a beat even when they went down and allowed Price to take a funky break in the middle.

Pulling out of this tantalizing piece, the band slid into "Slow Ride." Starting slowly amid some slippery lead from Price the band built to a furious pace, getting louder and faster until Preverett, underneath on rhythm, began to gradually slow down to allow Price to hit some furious, driving licks. Catching his breath Preverett came back on top and he and Price began a scintillating exchange while lights flashed and smoke burst. It was nothing short of incredible, a wonderful climax to the show.

But wonderful as this performance was the show ultimately left one feeling unfulfilled. For there was nothing really innovative or spontaneous in Foghat's performance. They played the numbers the crowd wanted to hear, kept things moving at a fast pace so no one would get bored, and then after an hour, split, making the encore a predictable rather than appreciative gesture. I mean Foghat "had to come back." No one wanted to be caught paying seven bucks for a show that only lasted an hour. Even the final number, which was obviously intended to be a musical simulation of the sexual act (hope you figured that out by now) was so effortlessly done that it seemed as if the band was just going through the motions.

Still it was an enjoyable evening. Not everyone knows how to go through the motions as Foghat does and they do it well.

Alcohol Awareness Week promotes responsibility

by Jim Neary

Several Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, with the aid of Bro. Charles Burke, Mary Ann Daly and Notre Dame's Alcohol and Drug Counselor Peggy Cronin are organizing an Alcohol Awareness Week to run from April 10 through April 14. Several activities are being planned which will demonstrate that an abuse and overuse of alcohol exists in the ND-SMC community. The program will then go on to provide alternatives for alcohol-related activities on campus.

Ted Howard, one of the student organizers of the event, stated, "We do not wish to alienate people by pointing fingers. Instead, we want to raise awareness of the abuse and overuse of alcohol." Howard acknowledged that alcohol has its place in a social environment. "The purpose of the Awareness Week is not to prohibit alcohol," he said, "But simply to encourage more responsible use of it."

Cronin noted that many students who drink do so unwillingly. She felt the social environment on campus, in many cases pressures students into drinking. "One student," she related, "told me that she once emptied six cans of beer and filled them with water just to make it look as though she was drinking at a party."

Cronin has found that students give little thought to their drinking habits. She hoped that the Awareness Week will give students an opportunity to examine these habits and to realize that there are alternatives to drinking here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

"A lot of activities that don't involve drinking don't go over well," Mrs. Cronin stated. "This is not because the students feel that no one else will want to participate if alcohol is not included, so they don't bother either."

Similar Alcohol Awareness Weeks have taken place each of the past two years. "These have been positive in impact, but there has been no follow-up of these activities. Plans for the week includes a series of lectures to be given in the residence halls by Mr. Hickey of Hickey Construction. He will speak about his own experiences with alcohol.

In addition, programs are being planned, one at the Senior Bar and one at SMC's 21 Club, which will feature Dr. Mark Bambenek of the SMC Chemistry Department. He will discuss the effects of alcohol and the causes of hangovers. Breathalizers will be on hand for those who wish to test their level of alcohol intake.

During one night during the Week, the Nazis will feature entertainment interspersed by demonstrations of the problems of alcohol, along with encouragements and suggestions for alternate forms of social activities.

On Thursday of the Week, there will be a slide show demonstration given by Fr. Joe Egan. He artistically filmed nature as seen both under the effects of alcohol and through sober eyes. That same day, Fr. Griffin's noon Mass at LaFortune will feature a sermon dealing with alcoholism.

The week will culminate with a Happy Hour at the Library where all alcohol drinks will be sold at regular prices, while soft drinks and food will be sold at nominal prices. In fact, food and soft drinks will be available at all of the scheduled functions for little or no charge.

Throughout the week, a number of films will be shown dealing with the subject of alcohol. These will be followed by Values Clarification Seminars at which all present are encouraged to discuss the film. Dr. Kathleen Rice of St. Mary's and Mary McCabe of Notre Dame will moderate these discussions.

Saint Mary's will give special attention to the problem of alcoholism among women. Molly Sullivan, who is responsible for the opening of a Half-way House in South Bend, is scheduled to speak.

Alcohol Awareness Week wishes to reach as many people as possible by providing a variety of social and educational activities. A spokeswoman stated, "We are open to any suggestions and willing to accept any help which anyone in the ND-SMC community wishes to give. I'm looking forward to it. I think it will be a lot of fun."

Yesterday the Placement Bureau sponsored a Government Career Day in the second floor LaFortune Ballroom. Among the departments represented were Agriculture, Army, Commerce, Civil Service, Defense, Health Education and Welfare, Transportation, Treasury, and Justice. The event was organized by Mr. Richard Willemin, director of the Placement Bureau, and Sr. Kathleen Rossman, Career Counselor and rector of Walsh Hall, with assistance from Jean Schell and Sherie McDaniels.

thing," Thinnies commented. "We got about $100 from one hall and $70 dollars came from Lyons. Some people gave us books and notes since our books were destroyed. And a lot of people were kind enough to let us come over and share some time with them."

Onda complimented the rector of Morrissey, Fr. Raymond Holtz. "Fr. Ray was in touch with us a lot," Onda said. "And he was pushing the construction people to get the room back in shape. And Fr. Jim Schwartz was the person who arranged our temporary stay at the Moreau Seminary."

Safety precautions

Today in Onda and Thinnies' freshly-painted room, there are no overloaded outlets. And, said Onda, "We don't have any partitions or any burlap in the room." Thinnies added, "That night we were told not to get cheap extension cords."

Certainly the experience last September have made Onda and Thinnies more fire safety conscious.

And Thinnies recommended another fire safety provision. "I think we could use fire escapes for our floor, because if the fire spread across the hall (creating a barrier), the people down the hall would have no access to an exit and no place to go - they would have to jump off the building."

Overall, Thinnies believed that the alertness of the Morrissey residents prevented other lives from being threatened. "When everyone heard the alarm, they moved out," he said. "You could tell that the people weren't messing around."

Carter proposes record budget for education, reviving 3 R's

WASHINGTON [AP] - President Jimmy Carter asked Congress yesterday for a record $12.9 billion federal budget for education and promised that some of the aid will go toward reviving the three R's - reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic.

If adopted by Congress, the hike would be the biggest increase in federal aid to education since Lyndon Johnson's administration.

Carter's message to Congress restated his fiscal 1979 budget request for a 24 percent increase in spending on education. It also revealed his proposals for reshaping the Elementary and Secondary Education Act in order to channel federal money more directly to "those so often shortchanged in our educational system because of social problems or poverty."

The president, whose first public office was as a school board member in Sumter County, Ga., said his proposals "will focus our nation's resources on helping our children master the basic skills - reading, writing, and arithmetic - which remain critical to their ability to function in a complex society."

He also reaffirmed his intention to ask Congress to set up a separate Department of Education.

Carter asked for $6 billion this year. This includes nearly $3.4 billion in aid for compensatory education for poor children, which funnels money to 14,000 of the nation's 16,000 school districts.

He proposed targeting $400 million in extra aid to 3,500 districts with large concentrations of poor students. Two-thirds of this money will go to hard-pressed center-city schools, while one-third "will flow to rural and suburban school systems which have similar needs," he said.

The extra money will increase from 5.6 million to 6.5 million the number of poor students who get remedial education.

In his effort to improve steadily declining basic educational skills such as reading and writing, Carter said the government will fund more research and demonstration programs in these areas.

Congress, which has provided more for education than Republican presidents wanted from 1969 through 1977, is expected to be receptive to Carter's request, although a split is developing on aid to college students.

Carter wants to increase aid to college students by $1.46 billion, with much of the new money going for $250 grants to students from middle income families.

However, there is strong support in Congress for giving tax credits to families of college students to help them pay college tuition. Carter strongly opposes the tax credits.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano, once a Johnson aide, said at a news briefing in the White House:

"This is an extraordinary education budget, unprecedented since 1965...It's one of those moments in which I wish Lyndon Johnson were alive to see what President Carter has done for the federal commitment that began 12 years ago."

unable to reach him until he contacted her yesterday afternoon to inform her that he would address the HPC last night.

Stating that the proposed advisory board was a "good idea," Hogan said, "We've always been open to student input. We need all the cooperation we can get to put things in the newspaper, and we haven't had that cooperation this year from Dave Bender or Tom Gryp."

Gryp."

Russell stated, "I see two different issues working here." He first noted the efforts of both sides "to set the record straight" concerning Gryp's letter, and secondly, the proposed commission "to provide some input." "I still think the (proposed) commission is a good idea," he said adding that "I'm going to get everyone together and settle this misunderstanding outside of an HPC meeting."

Fencers' streak reaches 81 matches

by Paul Mullaney
Sports Writer

Sports enthusiasts can quickly tell you all about the amazing 88 game basketball winning streak of UCLA, the recent 28 game rampage of the Montreal Canadiens, and possibly even the string of 201 dual swim meets set by Yale a few decades back.

But it's taken a little extra shouting by the Notre Dame fencing team for people to note an accomplishment that's been in the making for quite some time now. The Irish swordsmen haven't been on the losing side of the coin since January 22, 1975, when they fell to New York University, 16-11. Since then coach Mike DeCicco's juggernaut has won 81 consecutive meets, including a sweep of three teams this past Saturday at Champaign, Ill.

The defending national champions pummelled Washington University of St. Louis, 24-3, before whipping Illinois and Wisconsin by respective marks of 20-7 and 19-9. The victories make the Irish undefeated in 14 starts this year.

Junior sabreman Mike Sullivan, who was to receive a severe test from Illinois sophomore Kevin Cawley, wasted little time in showing who was superior. The Peabody, Mass., native disposed of Cawley 2-5 and set the pace for the Gold and Blue, winning all of the bouts. Cawley had beaten Sullivan in last year's NCAA tournament.

With his impressive performance Saturday, Sullivan lifted his season mark to 32-0. The "best sabre man in the country," according to DeCicco, now owns a 132-2 career slate, the best in Irish fencing history.

Sullivan, last year's NCAA gold medalist in sabre, was not the only Notre Dame fencer with his act together Saturday. Foil captain and defending gold medalist Pat Gerard won all of seven decisions, including a 1-5 win over his brother Greg, a sophomore from Illinois.

The Irish epeeists, who went 23-4 on the day, received several key performances. Senior captain Bill Kica and classmate John Strass each went without defeat in six bouts, while sophomore Bjorne Vaggo won five out of six.

Regardless of Saturday's results, the opponent that the Irish have been waiting for all year is waiting in the wings. DeCicco's troops travel to Detroit on Friday to meet Wayne State, the only other fencing unbeaten in the country.

Three exceptional freshman fencers have led Wayne to win all of ten meets this year. Leading the way is first-year foilsman Ernie Simon, who has gone undefeated in 30 bouts. Simon, Australia's national foil champion, has received excellent support from junior Carl Klutke, who has suffered only one setback in 30 bouts. The two have combined to lead Wayne's foil squad to a 78-12 mark, compared to a Notre Dame foil record of 95-22.

The Notre Dame fencing team performed superbly last weekend, extending their winning streak to 81 matches. However, the Irish will have another tough test this weekend against Wayne State.

Freshman Gil Pezza, an international epeeist from Italy, boasts a 27-3 mark for Wayne State, while classmate Tom Kleckner has won 24 of 30 bouts for sabre.

Yuri Rabinovich, senior Wayne State sabreman who has won an NCAA title and been runnerup twice, is academically ineligible. His showdown with Sullivan had been greatly anticipated.

Nevertheless, DeCicco expects the toughest of competition this Friday. "They're two strong in each of their three weapons," he anticipated. "The third man is their weakness. If we can win six of the nine bouts against their number three men, we'll be in good shape."

DeCicco, former Irish fencing great himself, admits that Wayne State has as good of a chance as anyone to knock off the Irish.

He said yesterday, "If they're better than us they'll win. That's it. We'll find out Friday. I would like to go into the nationals undefeated, though!"

Friday's trip to Detroit precedes a Saturday confrontation in Cleveland with Case-Western Reserve and Oberlin college.

Notre Dame's women fencers were dealt a 6-3 setback Saturday by Wisconsin. The loss puts the Irish swordswomen at 6-2 on the 1978 campaign.

Wayne State's female fencers will pose a stern challenge for Tom Coye's Notre Dame women. Led by Noreen Hydel's 22-4 fencing, Wayne is 8-1 on the year.

Probing the NCAA

Towle's Rags

Last semester this column touched briefly on the NCAA investigation of Nevada Las Vegas and its basketball coach, Jerry Tarkanian. At that time, it was apparent that the NCAA enforcement department was out to 'get' Tarkanian in what resembled a personal vendetta going back to his coaching days at probation-bound Long Beach State. In going after and then penalizing Tarkanian and Nevada-Las Vegas, the NCAA touched off the furor of one too many Nevada-Las Vegas rooters. Representative James Santini (D., Nev.) retaliated by instigating congressional hearings into the NCAA. And now, it's the NCAA that is being investigated.

A House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations initiated hearings on Monday, not concerning the Tarkanian case by itself, but the whole spectrum of enforcement tactics used by the NCAA over all of its member schools. In the last several years, questions surrounding NCAA investigative and enforcement methods have been raised because of what I like to term 'inconsistent investigative and punishment guidelines', i.e. the Nevada-Las Vegas case as compared to the North Carolina State basketball case five years ago. Was the NCAA trying to say that Jerry Tarkanian 'cheats' that much more than did Norm Sloan with David Thompson and Tom Burleson? After all, the NCAA never really tried to force N.C. State to fire Sloan as they did with Nevada-Las Vegas.

According to Brent Clark, star witness at the Congressional hearings and a former member of the NCAA's investigating staff, there have been numerous cases brought before the NCAA Committee on Infractions that have either been mistreated through flimsy evidence or completely dismissed in past years. A recent Sports Illustrated article by John Underwood quoted Clark as such and added that Clark has accused the NCAA of determining which schools get penalized and the severity of the punishments purely on whim and other unsubstantiated evidence. If what Clark says is true, then the NCAA faces serious legal problems and a whole backlog of mistreated cases will become publicized.

Clark's main beef is that there have been 'sacred cows' (referring to national powerhouses in collegiate sports) which have committed wrongdoings only to remain unpenalized because the NCAA does not want to hurt the images of prestigious schools. In other words, Clark says that the NCAA Infractions Committee used a double standard punishment system that protects the big schools while 'preying on the weak and the vulnerable'.

Clark has personally investigated many of the NCAA cases regarding member schools and he claims that given six weeks, he can put any school in the country on probation (Sports Illustrated, Feb. 27, 1978). But one has to question the validity of Clark's sacred cow theory. First of all, it does little to explain the punishments meted out in past years to Oklahoma, Michigan State and Kentucky, all for football. At least I would rate those schools as sacred cows in keeping with the definition.

Secondly, three members of the NCAA Infractions Committee are employed by well-known schools that have themselves been put on probation or punished in other ways in recent years. One has to wonder if Clark is being so critical of his former employers because he was turned down in trying to land the head position of the NCAA's enforcement department last year. Could he be so bitter so as to make outlandish accusations or will the facts bear him out? Why didn't Clark make the facts public sooner concerning the NCAA? Could it be he wanted to hold off with some of the evidence he had gathered against schools so he could use it against the NCAA if his ambitions within the organization were not met?

These and other questions are now being answered by the Congressional probe. During the hearings on Monday, another former field investigator for the NCAA, Douglas Dunlop, denied a charge made by Clark that he offered to aid Clemson's "Tree" Rollins in contract talks with pro teams in exchange for incriminating evidence against Clemson.

Clark also said that one investigator withheld information concerning a Mississippi football player from the NCAA after being provided with the services of a young lady (AP wire story, Feb. 27, 1978). This being the case, Clark, himself a former field investigator, should also be questioned for withholding evidence. Even then, that doesn't make the NCAA's position any more secure as a fair, law-abiding body. The Congressional hearing could provide the answers.

Fighting Sioux ambush Irish, 4-2

The Notre Dame hockey team dropped a hard-fought 4-2 decision to the North Dakota Fighting Sioux in Grand Forks last night. The loss was the third consecutive setback for the Irish as they failed to wrap up a WCHA playoff berth.

As a result, the second division of the WCHA is in a frantic state. Only four points separate fifth-place Colorado College and ninth-place Michigan with the Irish in sixth place, one point behind Colorado.

It was an outstanding night for Irish goalie John Peterson who made 41 saves while surrendering three goals. His counterpart in the Dakota nets, Bill Stankoven, made 29 saves in the last two periods to shut off the Irish scoring threats.

Bob Baumgartner got Notre Dame on the board only 46 seconds into the game as he deflected a Greg Meredith pass past Stankoven for a 1-0 Irish lead.

North Dakota defenseman Brad Cox evened the score at 12:34 before Meredith bounced a right-wing pass off Stankoven's skate for a 2-1 Notre Dame lead at the 17:46 mark of the opening period.

The lead lasted less than one minute as Irish defenseman Scott Cameron was sent to the penalty box for hooking. At 18:40, Dakota's Mike Stone beat Peterson on the power play to knot the score at 2-2.

After a scoreless middle period, North Dakota's Mark Taylor originated a play that resulted in the winning goal of the game. Taylor made a beautiful stick-handling move around Irish defenseman Dick Howe and fired a shot on net. Peterson made the initial save but Rick Zaparniuk converted on the rebound for a 3-2 Dakota lead.

Notre Dame had various scoring opportunities in the third period with the best opportunity coming in the final two minutes. Dakota's Paul Kryworouchka went to the penalty box for hooking at 17:55 and Irish Coach Lefty Smith pulled Peterson for a two-man advantage with 39 seconds left.

But Dakota's Paul Chadwick had other ideas. He intercepted a Jeff Brownschilde pass and scored on the vacant Irish cage with 22 seconds remaining to seal the verdict.

The game's outcome seriously hampers Notre Dame's hopes of capturing fifth place in the WCHA. The Irish must close out the season in Madison against the Wisconsin

Badgers, who are in a fight with Michigan Tech for second place. Meanwhile, Colorado College will play a home-and-home series with league-leading Denver, North Dakota will host Wisconsin, Duluth will host Tech and Michigan and Michigan State will play a home-and-home series.

One Irish win in Madison would assure the Irish of a playoff berth. But the final league standings probably won't be known until the Sunday afternoon Notre Dame-Wisconsin clash concludes.

Irish women take districts

by Suzanna Behnke

The women's basketball team breezed through the district play-offs Friday, beating Huntington College 62-41, and St. Francis College 65-52. There was no need for a play-off game in the pool because Goshen College lost by one point to St. Francis earlier in the day.

Molly Cashmen and Jayne Politiski both played two fine games, scoring 15 points apiece against Huntington and 12 points each against St. Francis. The other double-figure scorer of the day was Carol Lally, who registered 16 points against Huntington. Chris Mannes of St. Francis was high scorer of the tournament with 36 points, 17 against Notre Dame. The Irish had some difficulty with St. Francis and led by only two points at halftime. Politiski sprained her ankle early in the second half and at this point the Irish started to rally which insured the Notre Dame victory.

The Small College Women's State Basketball Championships will be held this weekend at St. Joseph's College. Notre Dame plays Friday at noon against Vincennes University. St. Joseph's College will meet Franklin College, the defending State Champs, at 8 a.m. Saturday. The winners will advance to the state finals at 1:30 p.m. The winner of state goes on to the regionals next weekend in West Virginia.

Coach Sharon Petro looks at the district competition as good psychological preparation for this weekend's tournament. "The girls were a little sluggish last weekend, but now they know what to expect and we're going to go out and play the type of basketball that has brought us victories all season." When asked about the strength of the defending champions, Franklin College, Petro replied, "With Jayne Politiski recovered from her sprain, we'll be at full strength and ready to win state."
