Police arrest four students in bar raids

by Tom Jackman
Senior Staff Reporter

Four Notre Dame students have been arrested in the last week by the Special Operations Division of the South Bend Police Department on charges of possession of alcohol by a minor. Employees of "The Goose's Nest" and "Corby's" were also arrested and charged with selling alcohol to a minor.

Although there have been many rumors to the contrary, only one "raid" of a local bar has taken place this year, at Corby's last Friday night. The three 20-year-old seniors arrested were found with false identification, and a Corby's bartender was also charged.

A doorman for Corby's commented that it was the first time in several years that arrests had taken place there. "Sometimes I see 75 to 100 fake IDs per night, and most of them are pretty sloppy. It's a big problem."

"The vice squad's probably just trying to set the tone for the semester," he added. "It might affect business because people over 21 may not like the hassle, but it should keep out underage drinkers."

Earlier last week, another senior was arrested in the carry-out section, not the bar portion of Goose's. A Goose's employee was also arrested in the incident, although a spokesman for Goose's said that the student was "just two months away from his 21st birthday."

the spokesman noted that the arrests were probably the result of "pressure from the Northeast Neighborhood Council. They don't like all the noise and litter, so they call in the police."

In response to a popular campus rumor that Goose's will soon close, the spokesman said,

Roemer charges students with I.D. falsification

by Mary Fran Callahan

A student who wished to remain anonymous told The Observer yesterday that 35 Notre Dame students were summoned yesterday afternoon to Dean of Students James Roemer's office for falsifying data on their ID cards. The students allegedly altered the birthdates on their advance reistration computer cards distributed at the end of last semester.

In order to have their ages read 21, students used two methods. Some altered the original cards by key-punching the desired birthdates, then plugging the holes of the actual dates. The second method involved obtaining new cards at the Engineering Building and re-punching all the information.

However, when all the new information was printed, the students' names appeared on top of the column heads. Over the summer months, the Registrar's office noted the difference and proceeded to verify every student's birth date by hand.

Richard Sullivan, the University Registrar, declined to comment on whether or not the verification of computer cards is a routine procedure.

The 35 students' cards that were found to be altered were pulled and brought to the attention of Dean Roemer.

At the meeting yesterday, Roemer presented the students with two options. Each student could pay a $50 fine by January 15 partially intended to cover the expense incurred by the Registrar's office. No record of the incident would appear on the student's transcript nor would the student's parents be contacted.

However, if the student chose to contest the fine, he would have to plead his case at a University hearing composed of faculty and administration members. Confidentiality would no longer be assured. Roemer varified that unnamed student's report, and said that the students have one week to make their decisions.

One of the students involved who wished to remain anonymous commented, "I admit that what I did was not legitimate, but I feel the penalty is severe. This is the first time the University has fined students for this offense. They are setting a precedent. In light of not knowing what the penalty would be, I think the punishment is too stiff."

No guidelines presently appear in Du Lac for ID falsification. However, Roemer commented, "There is a University rule in Du

David churns through New England

(AP) - Tropical storm David churned through the urban northeast and into the New England area yesterday with high winds and torrential rains, knocking out electrical power for two million persons, sending hundreds fleeing and forcing many schools to close.

At least six deaths have been attributed to the one-time hurricane that killed more than 1,100 people in the Caribbean and left at least 16 dead along the Atlantic coast of the United States.

David was centered last night near Burlington, VT, and moving northeast at about 35 mph with sustained winds of 45 mph along the coast.

Gale warnings were up for north of the Merrimack River in Massachusetts to Eastport, Me.

And hurricane watchers had their eye on two other storms brewing in the Atlantic, including the newly christened tropical storm Gloria.

Tropical storm Frederic dumped more torrential rains on the already saturated Dominican Republic, while Gloria whipped into a full-fledged storm off the western coast of Africa.

David's tree-felling winds, flood-building rains and spinoff tornados forced the evacuation of about 1,000 residents of Maryland and Delaware.

More than 300,000 homes and offices in New Jersey lost power. A spokesman for Baltimore Gas & Electric Co. said about 140,000 Maryland customers were without power at least temporarily, and hundreds of thousands of others were cut off in southeastern New York and southwestern Connecticut.

Winds up to 53 mph socked New York City, uprooting trees, ripping down power lines and snarling transportation.

A worker in a Brooklyn plastics factory, Gregory Candela, 48, bled to death when a gust of wind smashed a window and falling glass severed arteries in his leg.

The body of a girl who appeared to be 11 or 12 years old was pulled from waters of the Rahway River near Woodbridge, NJ. Still missing in the flood-swollen stream were a boy about the same age and a policeman who had tried to save them.

No plans to appeal

Danehy loses Indiana court ruling

by Marty Mosby

Fifty years ago this week, James Danehy arrived on the Notre Dame campus as a member of the freshman class. Last April, as professor emeritus of chemistry, he lost in an Indiana court ruling on James P. Danehy vs. University of Notre Dame du Lac.

Danehy filed the suit after the University forced him to retire from teaching when he turned 65 in 1977. He charged that the University administration's retirement policy is "arbitrary" because several members of the faculty continue in full-time employment of the University after reaching the age of 65.

Danehy does not plan to appeal the verdict.

"It cost me a bundle to bring it this far," he said. He added that if he could have received financial support from an organization such as the American Civil Liberties Union of the American Association of Retired Persons, he would have been willing to appeal.

He seems satisfied, however, to have accomplished one major thing he set out to do.

"I wanted to challenge the system," Danehy said.

But Danehy still feels close to the University and its students.

"I don't want to get mawkish," he said, "but I do feel very much attached to Notre Dame. I appreciate the kind of job which allows me to spend so much time on the campus."

"I used to enjoy very much visiting with the students," he continued, "but the last students whom I taught at all and got a chance to meet left last year. I don't really have any contact with the students anymore and that's unfortunate."

"I don't want to fight the battle over again, but Notre Dame does not have a mandatory retirement policy, it has a mandatory loss of tenure policy," concluded Danehy.

An energetic Danehy declared, "No one can retire a man--it's not that kind of verb. They can only terminate his employment. One must retire oneself."

He said that he would not give up on this conviction. "I am not retired and I have not been retired."

Danehy is still very active. He is employed full-time with a consulting firm out of Chicago. As an emeritus member of the faculty he has the traditional privilege of office facilities on campus.

Though he also has an office in Chicago, Danehy uses his campus office the majority of the time primarily due to the convenience of library sources which facilitate his research work as consultant.

He no longer has any official connection with the University; however, he is still contributing to the Notre Dame community in a very real sense. "I still have my hand in on campus via WSND," he said.

Last year Danehy got his license to be a radio announcer. He volunteers eight hours per week programming classical music, and conducts a three-hour show every Sunday morning. "Music is the first love of my life," he said.

Chrysler sees largest loss in U.S. corporate history

DETROIT (AP) - Chrysler Corp. said yesterday it expects to lose more than $700 million this year - more than any other U. S. company has ever lost in one year. "Recent press stories have speculated that Chrysler's 1979 loss could reach $600 million to $700 million," Chrysler said in a statement. The worst loss ever posted by an American company came in 1975, when Singer lost $451.9 million. Bethlehem Steel lost $448.2 million in 1977. The pre-tax loss normally could be reduced by tax credits, but Chrysler has exhausted its tax credits with previous losses, including the $204.6 million it lost in 1978.

Concerning alcohol

SMC reports no policy change

by Maribeth Moran
Staff Reporter

No policy change is reported in the consumption of alcohol by minors on the grounds of Saint Mary's College, according to Sister Karol Jackowski, director of Residence Life and Housing. The SMC 1979-1980 Student Handbook states that: "Indiana State Law prohibits those who are under 21 years of age from buying or consuming alcoholic beverages. Therefore only those students who are over 21 years may use alcohol on the campus of Saint Mary's."

Even with this permit senior students at SMC are not permitted to have either room or section parties. There are designated areas within each hall where residents of the college and their guests may consume alcohol at social events.

The areas set aside for this purpose include: the Saint Mary's clubhouse located by Holy Cross Hall, the Le Mans Tower party room, the student lounges in Regina, and the McCandless piano room. When holding parties in these rooms the host students must secure permission from the Director of Student Activities and insure that all guests are 21 or over. Jackowski stated that, while she believes over-consumption of alcohol to be a problem among students, there is rarely a flagrant violation of the rule by minors on Saint Mary's campus. When questioned as to whether the rules of the college are adequately policed, Jackowski said there is no continuous effort to search for and punish offenders.

Saint Mary's has both an alcohol education council and a program dealing with alcohol abuse. The alcohol education council's purpose is to set up alcohol education programs and bring in speakers to deal with the problems of both addiction and abuse. The council is made up of hall presidents, resident assistants and representatives from the faculty, the administration, and campus ministry.

Last year Saint Mary's Student Government stated a social club known as the 21 Club in the basement of the SMC dining hall. Reportedly, the club was extremely popular and doing a very good business as it not only served liquor, but had food and entertainment as well.

Katz lectures on holocaust

by Kathryn Casey

Professor Steven T. Katz, chairman of the Department of Religious Studies at Dartmouth University, told a crowd of about 225 in the Memorial Library last night that he has "become an expert on killings" as a result of his studies concerning the holocaust which destroyed six million Jews in Europe between 1941 and 1945.

Katz observed that Jews have suffered many tragedies over the last 2,000 years. He said that while Jewish tradition itself has not been successfully challenged, there were nevertheless unique elements involved in Hitler's anti-Semitic crusade.

Katz explained that the primary oddity in the slaughter of the Jews rests on the fact that Hitler intended genocide, which Katz defined as the "intent to destroy an entire people or an entire nation." He cited such massive killings as those of the Armenians in World War I and of the native American Indians as instances in which the intent was not genocide, but a desire to make space for those in power.

"Hitler viewed the world as basically a spiritual struggle," Katz said. "He saw himself as doing God's work by destroying the forces of darkness."

According to Katz, while Nazi anti-Semitism has its basis in Christian attitudes and the "mythic image of the Jew as devil," it is unique in that it is founded in racial rather than religious discrimination.

"Christian anti-Semitism always allowed for conversion... Like and M&M, Christian on the outside, Jewish on the inside," Katz observed. "Race made the Jewish people permanently inferior and sub-human in the eyes of the Nazis," he said. "And what do you do if you have lice? You call the exterminator."

Nazi racist policy was an unusual blend of technology, bureaucracy and totalitarian principles, Katz noted. It was an anonymous system in which everyone did his job as best he could without worry of personal responsibility. Professional pride required a given worker to be the "best damned Jew-catcher in the business."

Katz remarked that the broadcast of "Holocaust" had more impact on the public than all prior books and reports on the slaughter of the Jews.

the lecture was the first in a series of lectures on Judaica sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Burt Liss.

Katz holds degrees from the Universities of Rutgers, Cambridge and New York. He is the author of The Nature of Religious Mysticism.

Begin flies home happy with evergrowing friendship

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Egyptian President Anwar Sadat flew home Thursday after a summit with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, happy with "the ever-growing friendship" between the Egyptians and Israelis but urging quick progress on the Palestinian issue.

Shortly after Sadat's plane left Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport, the Israeli military command announced that an army patrol had intercepted a band of Arab terrorists slipping across the Jordanian border 14 hours earlier. A communique said the band was driven off after an exchange of fire, dropping grenades and ammunition belts as it fled, in action 35 miles east of Haifa where Sadat stayed during his three-day visit. There was no report of casualties.

The Palestinian Liberation Organization had vowed to swamp the Egyptian-Israeli peace as well as efforts to negotiate an autonomous Palestinian region in Israeli-occupied territory.

Sadat, apparently unaware of the border action during the last night of his stay, stressed in a departure ceremony "the vital necessity to make progress on the Palestinian question soon."

The "true nature of peace... is a comprehensive peace that encompasses every aspect of the dispute," said Sadat, repeating a favorite theme.

But at a conference in Haifa on Wednesday, Begin and Sadat openly disagreed over the future political status of Jerusalem's Arab population, an emotional issue that Sadat said needed more time and careful study.

Architects present library model

by Charlotte Bradley

Models of the new Saint Mary's library were presented by architects Evans Woolen and Erik Sueberkrop at a forum last night.

The site for the new library is the southeast portion of the dining green. The architects said the design for the building is "sympathetic" to the other buildings on campus.

The two-story brick building will have gables and dormer windows sloping up to a flat roof. Inside, mezzanines will overlook each floor. The interior design includes plans for an elevator, smoking room, lounge area with vending machines, and group study rooms.

The main entrance will be on the south side of the building. The structure will be accessible from the underground-tunnel system.

One of the architects said he had hopes the new library would bring back to the Saint Mary's campus "the people who ought to be here in their own library."

Sr. Bernice Hollenhorst, head librarian at Saint Mary's, said she is "very excited" about the designs. She added that Saint Mary's has needed a new library for a long time because the old one is overcrowded.

After the architects' presentation, students asked questions concerning the design, accessibility of the library to the handicapped, and security matters.

The architects said there were tentative plans to begin construction of the new library next spring, depending on monetary factors. According to Woolen, the structure will take approximately a year and a half to build.

A special Board of Regents meeting will take place tonight to approve the schematic drawings so that further plans for construction can be made.

Bookstore fills orders 'no worse than past years'

by Stephen Sharp

The availability of textbooks this fall is "no worse than past years," according to Pat Vanek, manager of the Hammes textbook department. "All of our big orders, that is orders of three or four hundred texts, are all in," she said.

Vanek noted, however, that the bookstore is short on general biology books because the biology department recently admitted 30 more students to the class. She explained that the textbook companies need three weeks to fill an order, consequently, students are in for an uncomfortable wait if books for a certain course run out.

The primary reason for a textbook shortage is "shifting class enrollments at the semester's start," Vanek said.

If even a few students add a certain class, the books could run out simply because the bookstore orders only as many texts as the professor requests on his order form which is submitted to Vanek at the previous semester's close.

"It's very expensive for us to return textbooks with the high shipping costs, and some companies will only take back a percentage of our overstock. The ones we can't return go in the sale bins," she said.

According to Vanek, another problem arises when certain textbooks go out of print. If the current Books in Print lists the text, she has to assume the company still stocks it. Only when the order arrives and some books are missing can Vanek be sure a book is out of print.

'Dreaded alumni' steal away Michigan tix

Dear Editor:

The Notre Dame student of today has a grim future awaiting him. For his destiny defines that he become the "dreaded alumnus" within the matter of but a few years. The "dreaded alumnus," that ghastly beast who by contributing a few dollars per year receives the monster status which enables him to perch his repulsive body on the fifty yard line at home games and thoughtlessly steal away all of the student tickets to any away football game.

I personally can't picture myself returning to a game in three years with the threat that eight thousand students, if given a dark alley, knife, and alibi, would with no hesitation slit my throat.

The fact of the matter is that as the Michigan game draws closer, there are no student tickets available. Maybe I should correct myself. Sixty tickets will be available to students next week, as a result of alumni cancellations. This amount is outrageous compared to the six thousand tickets that Michigan gave Notre Dame.

Ah yes, but I am merely a foolish ND student who refuses to accept the decrees of that almighty Notre Dame sovereign himself. May his grace forgive my selfishness and accept my pledge of loyalty.

C. Kehoe

You'd think that after six semesters of buying books I'd get used to the ordeal. But I still hold my breath everytime I lift the cover to check the price of a book. And I still shudder as I count the digits....

I can't decide which is worse: the science course with a $25.00 hardcover text and $6.00 accompanying workbook, or the government course with seven $6.50 paperbacks. I guess it's a toss-up; they're both pretty hard on the pocketbook.

Perhaps book-buying would be painful if there were more opportunities at Notre Dame for buying and selling books second-hand. Unfortunately, I have had very little luck selling used books, and even less luck buying them.

As near as I can calculate it, the average life span of a hardcover text on this campus is two or three semesters; for paperbacks it's three or four at most. (This accounts for the heavy box of Intro. texts and obscure paperbacks sitting on the floor of every domer's closet.)

Of eleven books I bought this week, four were 1979 editions, and most of the rest were 1978 editions. Many of these were updated editions of texts used last semester for the same class.

Presumably, these updated versions ensure that the quality of our education remains top-notch. However, I have trouble believing that our education would suffer terribly if certain books were kept on the reading list for two or three years instead of two or three semesters.

I realize that rapid advances are being made in some fields of study, and texts for courses in these fields should be updated as often as necessary. But I don't believe a yearly text change is necessary or justifiable for a majority of the courses offered on this campus.

In my opinion, professors should carefully select good texts and stick by them for a few years--until a change is truly necessary. A good professor should be able to incorporate a moderate amount of new material into his class lectures, rather than requiring students to purchase brand new texts every year.

Apartment Wanted

art buchwald

WASHINGTON--I don't know how other people have been reacting, but I've been very disturbed all summer that former President Richard Nixon couldn't find an apartment in New York City.

It's not as if he didn't have the money to buy one, or the wherewithal to keep up the monthly payments. But there seemed to be a conspiracy amongst the Manhattan apartment owners to keep him out of the neighborhood.

If anyone had a case of being discriminated against it was Mr. Nixon and if it had been me I would have gone to my nearest Fair Housing Commission office and made a complaint.

"Hello, my name is Richard Nixon and I wish to lodge a complaint because no one in Manhattan will sell me a place to live."

"Please sit down. I'd like to get some information. What is your occupation?"

"I'm retired. I used to be President of the United States!"

"Any criminal record?"

"No. Here's my pardon. It was signed by President Ford. I have never been convicted of any crimes, nor can I be in the future."

"Do you know anyone who has been convicted of any crimes?"

A number of my staff were, but they're all out now.

"Do you consort with any of them?"

"Very few. Most of them don't talk to me any more."

"Could you give me the name of three references who will attest to your good character?"

"My wife Pat and my daughters Julie and Tricia."

"We would prefer people who aren't related."

"Let's see. Mao Tse-tung always spoke highly of me."

"Could you give me the name of someone who is still alive?"

"Uh, let me think. John Dean? No, you better not call him. John Ehrlichman? I don't think so. Haldeman. No. Do I have to give you the three references now?"

"No, you can go home and think about it. Now according to your complaint you say no one will sell or rent you an apartment in Manhattan. Do you have any reason to suspect why they won't?"

"I know what they think of me and they have a right to think that way if they want to. But let me say just this. I made mistakes, but they were of the heart. I should have been tougher. I just trusted too many people and they gave me the sword."

"I'm sorry, but I don't seem to be following you. Who is 'they'?"

"It's all in my book. I'll send you an autographed copy."

"That would help."

"After you read it will you find me an apartment?"

"There seems to be a problem here. You apparently have not been discriminated against because of your race."

"I am from California."

"Or your religion?"

"A lot of people in New York don't like Quakers."

"Or your sex. It seems the only reason they won't rent to you is because you are a former President of the United States. We've never had this type of case before. I think the best thing for you to do is take it to court and see what the judge says."

"Does that mean I'd have to testify under oath?"

"I'm afraid so."

"Let's forget the whole thing. I'd rather live in Brooklyn."

What IS the Spiritual Commission?

Editor's Note: Due to a production error, the following was omitted from Mary Ryan's column which appeared in yesterday's Observer.

"The liberal arts are most liberal, most liberating when they rest on complete rather than on partial truth."

Sr. M. Madeleva, C.S.C.

"Saint Mary's recognizes the need to redefine the structure of the Catholic college in these times of great cultural change... Thus Saint Mary's seeks to provide a living environment where religious values are taken seriously, where rich and diversified liturgical expressions of religious faith joins with critical probing of contemporary life from a Christian vantage point."

Bulletin of St. Mary's College

I'm the Spiritual Commissioner and I don't as yet know the full purpose of the Spiritual Commission. As a Catholic woman at Saint Mary's, I do know my talents are to be directed towards defining this purpose. I feel a great responsibility to learn about the Church and to begin to unscramble the endless frustrating misconceptions. We are a community here at Saint Mary's and I want us to pray as one in our liturgies and in our rooms. I believe what Sr. Madeleva wrote and I want the Spiritual Commission to help.

Letters to a Lonely God

The Third Death

Fr. Robert Griffin

Sometimes I wish that God would try a little harder. Sometimes, when people are grieving or in trouble, I wish I could scream: "God, get off your everlasting duff and HELP THEM!" I know he's busy. I know He needed a rest on the seventh day. But it's already half-time to eternity of the week following creation, and He still hasn't tempered the north wind to shorn the lamb's nakedness.

Sometimes, for me as a priest, God's inefficiency is embarrassing. There are ghettos in the country where the rats are eating the children. Dachau could happen again; and if racism triumphs, Martin Luther King could have died in vain. The Pope musn't visit the North of Ireland, and there are families in India too hungry to cry themselves to sleep.

This summer, I dined with a couple whose son had been killed last year in a senseless act of violence. Six months later, their only child was hospitalized from a psychotic reaction to mescaline. During the dinner, a friend of the grieved mother kept whispering to me: "She has never forgiven God for what has happened." I thought: "Imagine God needing an absolution." That's what it's like being a priest: You are forced to become an apologist for an unabsolved Father. You think: the Father would have more friends if He made His own apologies.

Last week, there was a death of a young man from Brooklyn. Superstitious people have a belief that deaths, when they occur, come upon us in sets of three. I am not superstitious, merely Irish; heaven seems more faithful in confirming our fears than sustaining our hopes. Last week, having heard of the deaths of Professor Evans and of Cathy Guthery, I found myself waiting to hear the news of a third death. I did not have to wait long. The day after Joe Evan's funeral, the phone rang just before dinner. A voice unfamiliar to me said: "I'm sorry to be calling with bad news, but Steve Sanfilippo, a friend of yours, died this morning." "But he can't have died," I said. "He was never even sick." Only later did I remember: it was the third death. The third death always happens to someone you consider most immune.

On Monday, last week, I was one of the concelebrants at Joe Evan's requiem mass. On Saturday, I officiated at Steve's funeral in Brooklyn. Death is thoughtless in scheduling us for grief. You sometimes wonder if God pays attention to what death is doing.

Every death, in its particular circumstances, brings us sadness; yet at the edge of sorrow, a hope of resurrection is celebrated. In Brooklyn, among Italians, Lazarus appears to be a man of no reputation; the grief at Steven's death seemed to be without hope. The consolation of the liturgy had the appearance of bouncing off the dark sorrow of the mourners as though they were shielded behind bullet-proof glass.

Steve's grandmother kept lamenting in a loud voice: "This is not fair. They have taken my baby, and it's not fair; it's not fair."

Steve's father said: "He was only twenty-three, and he never had a chance. When he graduated from Notre Dame two years ago, I wanted him to be a doctor, and he never had a chance."

"It was the sickness that got him," Steve's uncle said. "He didn't have the strength to study."

"Last March, he blacked out for a couple of days," Steve's father said. "They told me it was a nervous breakdown. The doctor put him on tranquilizers. Last week, when he got sick away from home, he went to the psychiatric ward of the hospital because they had told him in March he was schizophrenic."

"The doctors don't know from nothing," the uncle said.

"At the psych ward, they thought he might be on drugs," the father continued. "They checked him for drugs, and he was clean as a whistle. He never took drugs, and his body was clean, without a mark or a scar on it. So they did an autopsy, to find out what he died of. I didn't want them carving up the body without a mark on it and clean as a whistle, but it would have killed me not knowing what my boy died of."

"The poor kid never had a chance," said the uncle.

"He had a cancer on the brain," his father said. "For a long time, he had a cancer on the brain, and they said it was very massive. Last March, they told me he had a nervous breakdown; they told me he was a schizophrenic, and all the time he had a cancer on the brain."

So, on Saturday, I went to Brooklyn to help an Italian family that couldn't be conked with the pieties of faith. A year ago, Steven had taken me to see "Saturday Night Fever." "That's it," he said. "That's my world, that's my Brooklyn. The 2001 disco where the kids danced is just three blocks from my house."

After the movie, we travelled over to the Verazanno bridge, from which a kid in the movie had fallen as he tried to prove he had a man's courage.

"In Brooklyn," Steve said, "it's not enough to be merely macho, because Brooklyn is a super-macho world. At the discos, all the guys wear their tank top suits and flex their muscles as though they could bust out of chains. All the chicks love it, and put out their sexiest vibes."

Imagine trying to explain the gentleness of God at a funeral in the super-macho world of Brooklyn. If I could have danced like Travolta, I might have convinced them. If I could have flexed my muscles in a tank top vestment, they might have listened. I had only the vulgarities of an undertaking parlor to assist me, and the promises of a liturgy that Italians have resisted being hooked on for over a thousand years.

On Saturday, in Brooklyn, God wasn't conspicuous for His presence at Stephen's funeral. I invoked His name, praised His wisdom, and declared Him to be lovable. I couldn't do more for Him, unless He helped Himself. Maybe He was there, helping Himself; not meaning to be disrespectful, I got the feeling He was leaving all the work for me.

I told them in the homily: "Steve came from Brooklyn to the green acres of Notre Dame because he had questions to ask. Sometimes at the grotto of Our Lady near the lake, he would ask questions of God. Sometimes in my room, he would ask questions of me. Steve was always more curious about matters of faith than most people. I would quickly run out of answers to the things he wanted to know. Now he has theologians to answer him, and the experience of the saints. Now he has the living God as his teacher, and God's holy light as his wisdom."

I don't think the rapture found in the living God was a truth they felt close to. They would rather think of Steven with them, at home in Brooklyn, competing in the discos for the sexiest chick.

They thanked me for coming from Notre Dame, and being there. They were pleased I had come. God, from his long experience, must know that it's not what you say or do; it's simply being there that counts. I wish God could be more communicative on the occasions when He's being there.

CINEMA--ON CAMPUS

Funny Lady on September 7 and 8 at 7 and 9:30. Engineering Auditorium.

Barbara Streisand plays Fanny Brice, a big Broadway star of the 1930's whose private life is a mess. She marries Billy Rose (James Caan), a song writer-producer. The film is a 1975 sequel to the 1968 Funny Girl. Although Mr. Rose's songs are superb ("Me and My Shadow" and "Paper Moon"), the plot is heavy. October on September 10 at 7:30 pm. Washington Hall. A ND/SMC film series showing.

Dog Day Afternoon on September 11 and 12 at 7, 9:15 and 11:30. Engineering Auditorium. Fascinat-

Theatre IUSB

Theatre IUSB and the IUSB Player's Guild will offer a "get acquainted" production of Neil Simon's hit comedy "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" on Friday, Sept. 7, in the Northside Little Theatre. Curtain time is 7:30 p.m.

The play, a holdover from the Player's Guild summer season, is being presented free of charge to kick off the 1979-80 theatre season at IUSB, according to Jeffrey Koep, assistant professor speech and theatre. The performance also will acquaint the public with the IUSB theatre productions.

Dale Balsbaugh, an IUSB graduate, directs the production.

The theatre will open at 7 p.m. the night of the show.

The film, despite its serious subject matter, inevitably invites a few crude laughs. Also stars John Cazale as Pacino's sidekick, Sal. 1975

The Lady Killer on September 13 at 7:30. Washington Hall. Another in the ND/SMC film series.

Harold and Maude on September 13 at 7, 9, and 11. Engineering Auditorium. A young man, fixed on death and funerals, has an affair with an 80-year-old woman. Black comedy for those that can stand it. Stars Bud Curt and Ruth Gordon. 1971.

PERFORMANCES--ON CAMPUS

Second City Players on Saturday, September 8 at 8pm. O'Laughlin Auditorium, SMC. Admission is $2 for ND/SMC students and faculty. These Chicagoans provide some excellent topical humor. Well worth the reasonable admission price for a lot of laughs.

CINEMA--OFF CAMPUS

Just You and Me, Kid at 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 pm. University Park II. Brooke Shield and George Burns team up in this comedy. Too bad Ms. Shield is a part of that team. The Amityville Horror at 2:15, 4:50, 7:40, NS & 50. University Park II. Margot Kidder and others get messed up in a haunted house.

North Dallas Forty at 7:15 and 9:30. River Park. Nick Nolte and Mac Davis star in this biting commentary on today's professional football.

The Concord Airport '79 at 1, 3, 5, 7:15 and 9:30. Scottsdale Theatre. George Kennedy heads a new cast through the same old air tragedy. At least it allows those who have never flown on the Concord a chance to see its interior.

Muppet Movie at 1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30. Town and Country I. Kermit, Fozzie Bear, Miss Piggy, Gonzo and all the others travel across country to Hollywood to become big stars. Along the way, they are pursued by a fried frog-leg entrepreneur who wants Kermit to do his commercials.

Sunburn at 1:45, 3:45, 5:45, 7:45, and 9:45. Town and Country II. Stars Farrah Fawcett, Charles Grodin and Art Carney.

Black Class

Music by black composers will be featured during a piano recital by Celia Weiss Saturday, Sept. 8, at Indiana University at South Bend. The 8:15 p.m. performance will be in the Northside Recital Hall.

Weiss is an adjunct faculty member at IUSB. Her recital will include music by black composers, William Grant Still and John W. Work, as well as pieces by Maurice Ravel and Sergei Prokofiev.

She will perform 'At a Certain Church,' 'Ting Game' and 'Visitor from Town' from "Scuppernon" by Work. Music by Still, who is often called the 'Dean of Afro-American Composers,' will be 'Dark Horsemen,' 'Summerland' and 'Radiant Pinnacle.'

OCC meets, discusses neighborhood group

by Lynne A. Daley

Off-campus students were encouraged to place more emphasis on better neighborhood relations at a meeting last night of the Off-Campus Council (OCC) in the Off-Campus Room of the La Fortune Student Center.

While the OCC discussed several topics, the group did not vote on any of the issues.

Shannon Neville, Off-Campus Commissioner, announced a meeting of the Northeast Neighborhood Association Monday night at 7:30. Interested students should phone Neville for more information.

The Northeast Neighborhood Association encompasses students living south of campus, on or near Notre Dame Ave.

"It's an area with a large student concentration," said Neville. "There's a lot of stress, but we can work it out," adding that, in the past, there have been conflicts between students and full-time residents of the area.

One method of reducing stress, she suggested, would be to establish a volunteer services board at the neighborhood firehouse. Here, students could post a list of tasks they would be willing to do for residents of the neighborhood.

"I think it's very important that we be vital members of the neighborhood," Neville said.

Brother Edward Luther, newly appointed assistant housing director at Notre Dame, explained the new system of housing government. In his new position, his duties are fundamentally the same as last year, when he served as Off-Campus Housing Director. The change of title unites all student housing and is designed to diminish the idea of "poor-relation" status that is sometime felt by the off-campus resident.

In other business, Mark Murphy was appointed to represent the OCC at the next meeting of the Campus Life Council. Also, additional services for off-campus residents such as a test file, a list of available babysitters and other general information, was proposed.

Mary Gatt, a council member, announced that the marketing department plans to survey students living in South Bend to accumulate data on possible shuttle bus schedule changes and a more feasible meal plan.

Kathy McCann, director of off-campus sports, confirmed the formation of a mens' and a womens' football team. Dave Murphy spoke of an effort by one of the dorms at the last Hall Presidents Council meeting to receive permission for students moving off-campus to remain on their hall teams. Citing the difficulty of amassing enough players to make up an off-campus team, Murphy termed this plan a "disaster."

Two deadlines were announced by Neville. All budget items must be submitted by September 14th, she said, and their OCC by-laws must be completed by October 1st.

Help was also sought to decorate the Off-Campus Room, the only method of communication in many cases between the O.C. students. Meetings of the OCC will be held in this room every Wednesday night at 6:30.

Lac against cheating, forgery, or dishonesty for personal gain. When altering a University document is akin to cheating. That rule was the basis for the fine. But what's involved here is a matter of integrity." One of the students involved suggested that a rule should be specifically spelled out in Du Lac. Dean Roemer felt this was a good suggestion. [continued from page 1]

"Oh no, we're still alive and kicking. We're not in any trouble." He would not comment on whether the incidents would affect the admission policy of Goose's.

The students in question will next go to court, where they may receive a small fine and a maximum of 60 days in jail. However, Captain Vince Smith, head of the Police Department's Special Operations Division, pointed out that he has never heard of violators receiving such a stiff sentence, or anything more than probation.

Smith also noted that although falsifying identification is a felony, it is normally treated as a misdemeanor, and offenders are charged only with possession, unless a bar chooses to press charges, which is extremely rare.

"For every ten arrests, we let another 20 go," Smith added. "We're not trying to cause any big problems, but four or five years ago, it was common to see 16- or 17-year-olds in these establishments. So our object then was to really crack down and maintain a tighter standard."

Smith also refuted Corby's claim that this was their first incident in several years.

"We went in there three or four times last year, and several times the year before that. We monitor these establishments day in and day out, but we let more go than we keep."

He also discounted the term "raid" for the actions his department has taken, because they only go into uncrowded establishments with just two to four officers. "We would rather not arrest a large number of people. We get the same benefit by arresting two or three as by arresting 40 or 50." However, Smith added that when his officers do enter an establishment, there is no "selective enforcement," and all violators are taken out.

The captain also noted that the Indiana Excise Police do conduct what may be more accurately termed a raid. The Excise Police are special enforcers of the Alcoholic Beverage Control regulations, and along with State Police may enter crowded bars with 20 or more officers to make mass arrests.

Volcano erupts killing three

TOKYO (AP) - Mount Aso, the world's largest volcano and a spectacular draw for thousands of tourists, suddenly turned killer Thursday, erupting in a shower of rock that rained down on dozens of helpless sightseers.

Three were killed and 16 others injured, two seriously, police in southern Japan reported.

The dead were a middle-aged Tokyo couple and a honeymooning high school teacher, whose bride was badly hurt but survived.

The tourists, most of whom rode up by cable car to view one of the crater's volcanic cones, had nowhere to run from the deadly rocks. Some who fled back into the cable car shed were injured when rocks came crashing through the roof.

The crater of the 5,223-foot-high Mount Aso, is the world's biggest, measuring 17 miles north-to-south and 10 miles east-west. Five cones dot the massive crater, but only one, Nakadake Peak, remains active. The tourists had ridden up to Aso's Narrodake Peak for a look at Nakadake, about 800 yards away.

A local police spokesman said 55 persons were within the 1,100-yard danger zone ringing Nakadake when the cone suddenly erupted, sending black smoke shooting more than a mile into the air and spurting rocks more than 1,000 yards.

Nasaharu Yoshikawa, 50, of Tokyo, leading a group of nine persons climbing Narrodake, was struck in the head and killed instantly by a rock of perhaps 30 pounds, police said. His wife, Ineko, 49, died of injuries after undergoing a four-hour operation at Aso Central Hospital.

Also killed was Yutaka Tsurumaki, 27, a high school teacher from northern Japan who had been married just four days earlier. His bride, Michiko, 26, was seriously injured.

Authorities said the four children were sluicing down a culvert in a plastic boat but two jumped to safety before the stream ran through a large sewer pipe. Patrolman Alvin Williams, 22, jumped into the water to try to save the other children but did not surface, witnesses said.

One man was killed when a tornado hit his trailer in suburban Philadelphia and the body of an unidentified young woman about 25 years old washed up in a flooded section of Baltimore.

Irish face toughest test

According to Tuesday's National Collegiate Athletic Association bulletin, Notre Dame has the honor of playing the nation's toughest major-college football schedule in 1979. The distinction is based on the combined opponents' record from a year ago—not counting games played against Notre Dame.

Notre Dame's 11 opponents won 82, lost 33 and tied 3 last season when not playing the Irish.

Following the Irish on the schedule scale are Florida, UCLA, Penn State and Kansas.

repeating last year's performance and more. As a team we finished fourth in regionals, but I think we have the talent to make that first or second this year, and that way send the whole team to the Nationals."

When asked about her own goals, Stephan humbly stated, "My game needs a lot of work, especially my serve. But if I have the chance, I wouldn't mind returning to Nationals." Sounds like high hopes for a fill-in. They're not high hopes for Tina Stephan.

'Fill-in' Stephan looks toward second trip to tennis Nationals

by Mark Hannuksela
Sports Writer

"Game, set, and match to Miss Stephan. She wins 2-6, 6-4, 6-3." As the umpire declared her the Midwest Regional champion in the number six singles bracket, Tina Stephan expected to find herself waking up back home in Barrington, Illinois. But she wasn't dreaming. She had indeed won a storybook championship.

"I never expected anything like that to happen- it just took me completely by surprise," stated the sophomore business major recently. "I was quite nervous at the beginning of the match, but luckily I settled down as things got going."

Getting to the finals of the regional tournament was no easy task for Stephan, a girl who had played doubles all through high school and last year as a member of Sharon Petro's women's tennis team. To begin with, she only played the tournament as a last minute replacement for Stacey Obremskey, Petro's regular number six player. Obremskey, an Indiana native, was chosen last spring to be a member of the Queen's Court for the Indianapolis 500 auto race.

"When Stacey came up with her conflict, we decided to go ahead and use Tina, even though she had always been a doubles player," said Petro. "Then, when we saw the draw, we feared the worst."

That draw would see Stephan meet Angie Nyland of Augustana College, the top seeded player in the tournament, in the first round. Stephan managed a hard fought three set victory in a match marred by the appearance of linesmen (not a normal procedure unless there is an excess of questionable calls in the course of a match.)

Tina had little time to savor her victory, because "the luck of the draw" had pitted her against the number three seed, Esther Cleaves of Dennison, in round two. Stephan's straight set victory put her in the finals against unseeded Merrill Smith of Kalamazoo. After two tough opponents, this one should have been easy. It wasn't.

"In the first set, all I could think of was going to Nationals," said Stephan. "But when I lost the set, I told myself to forget about Nationals and to just concentrate on this match. Once I got that concentration back, I forgot all about being nervous."

That concentration earned Tina the right to travel to the University of Denver, the site of the National tournament. Unfortunately for Stephan, this was the beginning of the end of her Cinderella story.

"I was really in awe of the fact that I was actually playing in the tournament. I was somewhat nervous because I had another tough draw (Donna Morris of Cal State Bakersfield, the third seed, in the first round.) I really wanted to play as well as I had in Regionals, but unfortunately I didn't."

With the 6-3, 6-4 loss, Stephan was placed into the consolation bracket where she met Barbara Mangan of the tournament's host school, the University of Denver.

After the match, Coach Petro commented, "Tina didn't really play poorly (she lost 6-2, 6-4), but she didn't play her best tennis either. In spite of that, I'm not disappointed with her performance. She really exerted a tremendous amount of effort, and I think the experience will pay off for her next season. She is willing to work hard, and I think she actually will work to reach her potential. I have great hopes for her future."

Rather than assess her own future, Tina was more inclined to talk about the upcoming season of her Irish teammates.

"We are a much improved team over last year. I think that we are capable of

Pete Buchanan

Buchanan breaks ankle, out for entire year

by Paul Mullaney
Assistant Sports Editor

Irish coach Dan Devine announced that Buchanan was scheduled to undergo surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital this morning and will miss the entire 1979 season.

The injury occurred only four minutes into the first quarter of the team's scrimmage at Notre Dame Stadium. Buchanan was not carrying the ball on the play, but was blocking for tailback Vagas Ferguson.

Buchanan, a local product from Plymouth, Ind., had carried only once-for one yard-in the scrimmage before suffering the

In last spring's Blue-Gold game, fullback Dave Mitchell suffered a serious knee injury which sidelined him for the entire 1979 season.

Devine made no comment as to who would assume the number one fullback spot on the depth chart--the spot at which Buchanan was listed.

Possible replacements for Buchanan include sophomore Ty Barber, freshmen John Sweeney and Rodney Morris, and Second-year tailback Bernie Adell, once again the bright spot for the Irish yesterday.

Adell, who could conceivably move to the up-back in Notre Dame's I-formation, gained 128 yards in 11 carries yesterday as the white squad defeated the Blue squad.

Included in that total were touchdown runs of one and 25 yards.

Navratilova wins at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) - Second-seeded Martina Navratilova easily beat eighth-seeded Kerry Reid 6-4, 6-1, and fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis got by South African Johan Kriek 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 Thursday night in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Navratilova, the two-time Wimbledon champion who never has won the U.S. title, made short work of Reid, who had trouble at the net. They traded service breaks in the second set, but Reid could not hold her own thereafter.

In the final game, she had break point, but Navratilova drew even with a cross-court volley winner, and Reid overhit on the next two points to yield the match.

Navratilova will face third-seeded Tracy Austin in the semifinals.

A record U.S. Open crowd of 18,090 watched the Gerulaitis-Kriek match. That was 58 people more than the number who watched the final here last year.
