Alumni Association begins hall visitation

By CECILIA LUCERO
Staff Reporter

Fostering student awareness of scholarship aid and eliciting student response to the long-awaited PACE report comprise this year's focus of the Alumni Association's annual Hall Visitation Program, according to Tim Truesdell, assistant director of the Alumni Association.

Nineteen current members of the Alumni Association board, along with fifty former board members, will conduct presentations tonight in six of the residence halls to inform students of the Alumni Association's activities.

The Hall Visitation Program, created four years ago, provides an opportunity for students to realize exactly what the Alumni Association offers them. The Alumni Association "is not just people who have the tailgaters outside the stadium," comments Patty Dondanville, the Alumni Association board's director of student relations.

The visitation program makes students aware that in four years or less they themselves will become alumni. Dondanville noted that the Alumni Association serves as an outlet for maintaining a relationship with the University after graduation.

According to Dondanville, the Alumni Association undertakes a strategic planning process so that students "find out where we (the alumni) have been, where we are, and what we can do."

The Hall Visitation Program is one way to spur student input and explain what kind of interaction students want with the Alumni Association, she said. This will allow the association to develop more programs in local clubs to benefit students now and after graduation. The summer job placement program is one of these projects.

Truesdell describes this year's emphasis on scholarship aid opportunities as "an important goal... something very tangible."

The 167 local alumni clubs across the country and worldwide have stressed scholarship aid as one of their major projects. Each club makes concerted efforts to raise revenue for scholarship grants for students of their particular geographical area. The Pittsburgh Club, for example, annually sponsors a Cadillac raffle and funnels proceeds to scholarship aid.

The Hall Visitation Program this year also hopes to spur dialogue between students and the alumni board in response to the PACE Report. The PACE (Priorities and Commitments for Excellence) Report, released by Timothy O'Meara and his advisory committee in early December, evaluates the major problems which confront the University in the next ten years. In addressing these problems, a University policy for the upcoming decade may be formulated.

The Alumni Association board's presentations will take place in Flanner, Breen-Phillips, Walsh, Morrissey, Alumni, and Zahn Halls, tonight at 9. The Student-Alumni Relations Group, composed of twelve student hosts, along with the hall presidents, will introduce the Alumni Board

Risks nuclear escalation

Arms chief takes strategic stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new arms control chief has declared that American strategic policy must convince the Soviet Union that "the United States would indeed risk nuclear escalation" to counter aggression against European allies or Persian Gulf interests.

"In other words, U.S. strategic forces do not exist solely to deter a Soviet nuclear attack or an attack against the United States itself," Kenneth Adelman wrote in a 1981 article.

"Rather, they are intended to support a range of U.S. foreign policy goals, including the commitment to preserve western Europe and even parts of the Persian Gulf against overt aggression," he said.

Adelman, named to succeed the ousted Eugene V. Rostow as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, called for new and better offensive nuclear weapons and outlined a strategy that would target Soviet command centers and the bunkers where Moscow's leaders would take refuge.

He advocated improved U.S. spy satellites and other kinds of intelligence-gathering systems as well as a new ground-based American missile, such as the MX now under development, and new strategic bombers and nuclear submarines.

Adelman, who faces Senate confirmation hearings in about a week, is now Ambassador Jeane R. Kirkpatrick's deputy at the United Nations. Here to begin preparing for the hearings, Adelman did not return a reporter's telephone calls regarding the article. It appeared in the 1981 summer quarterly of Policy Review, which is published by the conservative Heritage Foundation, a private research organization.

"The redibility of extended U.S. deterrence depends on the Soviet belief that the U.S. would indeed risk nuclear escalation on behalf of foreign commitments," Adelman wrote.

Adelman registered his views while supporting a policy directive signed by President Carter shortly before he left office. Developed by Harold Brown, his secretary of defense, and known as PD59, it called for a shift in U.S. nuclear strategy. Instead of concentrating on massive retaliation, the United States would try to deter the Soviets by developing a more flexible nuclear

Fighting student apathy

Hunger coalition optimistic

By TIM BUCKLEY
News Staff

Despite a decrease in student participation last semester, members of the Notre Dame World Hunger Coalition expressed their optimism for the success of the program.

Since 1974, the World Hunger Coalition has provided funds for hunger relief programs in South Bend as well as overseas. Operated entirely by students, this group provides over $10,000 annually for people in Africa, South America, and Asia. Their main source of funds is the voluntary student fast program, according to Carol Fredrick, chairman of the fast program.

Registration will be held at lunch and dinner today and at lunch tomorrow in both dining halls. Students wishing to register but unable to at the prescribed times should contact Fredrick with their name and I.D. number at 283-7952.

"Under the program," according to Fredrick, "students sign up and voluntarily skip lunch on Wednesdays from February 2 through April 27." She added, "For every student in the program who skips lunch on Wednesday, the dining hall administration donates 75 cents per meal to the World Hunger Coalition." At the end of the semester the money is totaled and a decision is made as to which programs the WHC will fund.

Coalition chairman Brian Couch described its objectives. "We want to provide education at Notre Dame concerning the effects and widespread level of world hunger, and the students' role in alleviating this problem. We also wish to make an effort, in our own small way, at curing world hunger."

In choosing the program that they will fund, the WHC, says Couch, "has established three criteria. First, it must be a Christian organization. Second, this program must try to educate as well as feed these people on a local level. Finally, the organization should be small in scale."

In defense of this statement Couch said, "Groups such as CARE and UNICEF maintain a giant reserve of funds, while the smaller groups we support have shown direct results in the past from Notre Dame WHC funding."

Last semester the program recorded 959 pledges, with a dropout rate of 189 students, resulting in $6,930 in funds. This represents a drop compared to the $8,045 raised last spring.

Couch cited many reasons for the decline in student participation. "Many people sign up and then decide they don't want to participate. Others blame hard times here at home for their lack of interest. However, the worst of times here can't compare with even the best of times in Northern India or sub-Saharan Africa. Still others say that the amount of money donated by the dining hall administration is far less than the actual cost of student meals." Couch feels that a considerable number of students refuse to participate because of this situation.

Brother Kieran Ryan, assistant vice-president of University business affairs, conducts dining hall finances. In response to these objections Ryan noted, "They're getting a real good deal. Seventy-five cents is both generous and reasonable since this is based on marginal cost. Furthermore, when we're feeding 6,000 students, the cost of feeding an individual is negligible. We never know who will break their fast, and must assume that many will."

He pointed out to the WHC, "We

League of Women Voters endorses pro-choice stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national League of Women Voters, after years of avoiding a stance on the issue, announced yesterday it officially supports American women's right to have an abortion.

"The League of Women Voters believes that public policy in a pluralistic society must affirm the constitutional right of the individual to make reproductive choices," a league statement said.

League president Dorothy S. Ridings said the league is not endorsing abortion itself. "This is not a statement that implies moral approval or disapproval of the procedure of abortion," she said in an interview.

Instead, she said, the league believes that the government should leave the question of abortion and other matters dealing with reproduction to the conscience of each person.

League officials said the organization's board adopted the position at its meeting Tuesday, almost 10 years after the U.S. Supreme Court handed down its decision legalizing abortion in most situations.

Meanwhile, the leader of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops said yesterday in a statement marking the anniversary of the court action that the ruling on Jan. 22, 1973, has poisoned the national conscience, "eroding respect for life and hardening hearts

Mayor Wilce Cooke of Benton Harbor, Michigan, started 1983 with a unique New Year's message for his constituents, residents of the state's poorest community. He issued a call to arms, urging citizens to buy guns. "If you are a homeowner, arm yourself against intruders," the 43-year-old mayor said at a city commission meeting earlier this month. "That is your constitutional right." The commissioners then declared a "war on crime," pledging support for the local police department. "It's a great city ... we have great people," Cooke said recently as he drove along avenues lined with abandoned homes and boarded-up businesses. "We have a ready work force, we have vacant buildings, we have land and we offer tax abatements," he said. Benton Harbor is a prime spot for new business to locate and the publicity about the city's gun controversy lets investors know what is available, Cooke believes — AP

The Mardi Gras Dance-A-Thon is resuming its signup sessions beginning tonight at both dining halls, according to sophomore Karen Klocke, Mardi Gras chairman. Signups were originally discontinued because of a problem in printing up the tickets, said Klocke. She noted, "Tickets were delayed for four days after we had already begun signups" three days earlier. Signups will continue until the marathon. — The Observer

The deadline for housing contracts has been set at February 2, according to junior George Valencia, housing commissioner of student government. All students planning to reside on campus next year should expect to receive contracts in the mail either today or tomorrow. Valencia urged students seeking more information on living options — apartments and homes in the area that are available — to contact the Off-Campus Housing Office on the third floor of the Administration Building. — The Observer

States already wracked by joblessness cannot continue to meet the "crushing burden" of soaring unemployment insurance debts without both immediate and long-term assistance from Congress, a group of governors told Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., in Chicago yesterday. "The federal policies were fine at the time they were adopted," said Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania. "But they now impose a heavy burden on states with high unemployment." Because states that have exhausted their own jobless benefits are forced to continue borrowing federal dollars at high interest rates to keep benefit checks flowing, "what we have now amounts to a tax on states with high unemployment," said Michigan Gov. James Blanchard. "That reverses a time-honored approach of helping" states which, like Michigan, are suffering disproportionately from unemployment, he added. — AP

Britain's Princess Margaret and a dancer with the Royal Ballet have developed a close "friendship," the Daily Express reported yesterday. The newspaper's William Hickey gossip column said Margaret, 52, met dancer Derek Deane, 29, "in the romantic surroundings of Venice last year" during a week of Royal Ballet performances and were seen together this week at a London theater. Under the headline "A pas de deux for Margaret," the column quoted Deane as saying, "I just can't talk about the relationship. I really don't have any comment to make." The column described Deane as looking remarkably like group Capt. Peter Townsend, a divorced man whose liaison with Princess Margaret stirred controversy 30 years ago. In 1960 Margaret married society photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones, who was given the title Lord Snowdon. They were divorced in 1978. After her divorce, the princess maintained a close relationship with another socialite, Roddy Llewellyn, who is 17 years her junior, before he married another woman last summer — AP

A virus has blurred the vision of Tom Abernethy, but the former South Bend St. Joseph's High School and Indiana University star is not unhappy. Abernethy, who lives in central Indiana says the seven years of pro basketball he played were "more than I ever expected. If I never play again, I still have a lot to be thankful for," Abernethy told Bill Moor, South Bend Tribune sports editor, this week. Abernethy spent five years in the National Basketball Association, playing for the Los Angeles Lakers and Indiana Pacers. He then played two years in Italy where his eyesight was blurred by a virus. Abernethy is optimistic the virus that caused him to miss the last part of this season will be completely gone after two or three months of rest, Moor reported. "This kind of virus is almost an epidemic in Italy," Abernethy said. "Things wouldn't be crystal clear when I would look at them — and still aren't. Even now, I still have markings on my cornea. I played about eight or nine games that way, but I was playing more on experience and memory than on my sense of sight." — AP

The Great N.D. Student

The great Notre Dame student. Cream of the crop. Tops in his or her class. We love to read about how great we are in magazines like Sports Illustrated. We thrive on the admiration and envy of friends and acquaintances who wished they could go to Notre Dame too. When speaking of this revered institution, we often use words like "community," "Christian environment," "caring," and "tradition."

But it is becoming increasingly apparent that these words are just that: words. Their meanings have somehow been lost underneath the pile of overpriced textbooks now littering our desks. It seems that the creeping disease of selfishness and complacency has infected a large part of the student body. We don't have to look very hard to find its negative effects.

The fast sponsored last semester by the World Hunger Coalition is a prime example of the widespread egotism that has afflicted many Notre Dame students. Last semester only 770 students participated in the fast, down a couple of hundred from the previous semester — 770 out of approximately 8,000 well-fed students that use the dining halls every day. Nine percent of the student body cared enough to give up one meal a week. Of all the great Notre Dame students, the chosen ones, the top students and athletes in the country, only nine percent felt they could give up one meal a week to help those who are lucky if they have one meal every few days.

Complacency is also evident in the way in which the campus has ignored the news of the hockey team's potential demise. The same situation existed three years ago when the future of hockey and other so-called "minor" sports was threatened by lack of funds. But then the student body rallied to the cause. They gathered a 3,500 signature petition in 20 hours and then demonstrated their support vocally and by waving placards reading "Save hockey" before the start of the nationally televised Marquette basketball game.

Where is that spirit now? Sure, the Student Senate and the Hall Presidents Council proposed petitions at their respective meetings this week, but so far it appears to be nothing more than lip service. Where is the outcry that resounded through ND's hallowed halls three years ago? Where are the supportive banners that hung from dorm windows all over campus?

There are plenty of other sordid instances of student complacency and carelessness. The disappointing results of last semester's United Way drive immediately come to mind. Of course, there are many people on campus that do care, but their numbers appear to be dwindling.

Michael Monk

As the leaders of tomorrow, are these the kind of people we are to become? Is this the kind of mercenary society we want to create for ourselves and our children? Sadly, it appears that the "Me Decade" did not end with the close of the '70's. Egocentricity and selfishness seem to be the style these days.

Anxiety about the future and the drive to succeed in an extremely competitive world are a couple of the probable causes of this disturbing phenomenon, but it is making us into something less than human beings. If we can't make the minor sacrifices of today, then how are we going to deal with the tremendous problems facing us when we leave this domed Shangri-La: growing unemployment, the influx of economic and political refugees, frightening poverty, illiteracy? The only way these problems can be alleviated is through hard work and sacrifice.

We should all realize that the University certainly isn't going to contribute to the WHC or save hockey on its own. They're too concerned with seeing black ink on the bottom of their income statements. But we don't have to follow the dubious example offered by our "Christian" university. We have a commitment to others, a commitment we are obligated to fulfill.

There's more to life than an impressive GPA and money. And it's about time the great Notre Dame student realized that.

The views expressed in the Inside column are the views of their author and do not necessarily represent the views of The Observer or its editorial board.

Today Father Hesburgh is: in Rome, Italy, attending a meeting of the Pontifical Council for Culture.

Saint Mary's lecture Fashion/job connection stressed

By KATHY WEISENBERGER
News Staff

"A mini-skirt and clogs probably won't get you that new job."

That was the advice of a Notre Dame graduate who currently manages a clothing store in an Elkhart mall.

In her lecture "Dressed for Success," held last night in LeMans Hall of Saint Mary's College, Diane Killoren, manager of the Gantos clothing store in the Concord Mall, provided advice on suitable apparel for women entering the business world.

Whereas men look for function in clothing, women have "been so interested in style that we haven't looked for quality," according to Killoren. She said that fads quickly prove to be disastrous when attempting to build a suitable wardrobe.

In recalling her manner of dress for her own interviews two and a half years ago, Killoren gasped at her combination of an expensive gray Liz Claiborne suit with an inexpensive maroon frilly blouse. Noting that interviewers become bored by the same look, she stressed the necessity of appearing neither too feminine nor too masculine. "You want to look like a professional woman."

Several suggestions for women preparing for an interview, according to Killoren, are as follows:

- A dark suit with a touch of style, but without trendy features such as a scalloped collar.

- A conservative blouse, preferably not the standard type with the big bow. Examples of appropriate colors are cream and other neutral tones, but definitely not white which presents too stark a contrast.

- "The best shoe to have on your foot is a pump." Strappy sandals are a "no-go."

- No briefcases, clutches, or large handbags; simple purses with a shoulder strap are the most suitable for the image one is trying to present.

Killoren also gave advice on how a woman may accumulate a working wardrobe upon entrance into the business world. Buying basic pieces of good quality that may be interchanged with one another proves invaluable. "Put a lot of your money into the accessories," rather than the number of clothes themselves, Killoren advised. In doing this, a woman may improve and thus gain versatility. She said it is then easy to acquire certain "looks", such as the currently popular "tuxedo look" without wasting money on specific garments that will soon be outdated.

Additional helpful hints include planning purchases rather than acting on impulse, buying appropriate shoes which accompany outfits, and acquiring durable fabrics such as wool flannels, while avoiding pure wools and tweeds.

Utilization of such guidelines, Killoren feels, will enhance the image a woman presents in interviews and in the business world itself.

Parents' weekends draw student support

By THERESA HARDY
News Staff

Student interest for two upcoming parents' weekends at Saint Mary's is up, according to the organizers of both events.

The Junior/Mothers' Weekend is Jan. 28-30 and the Sophomore/Parents' Weekend is slated for Feb. 25-27.

Diane Turley, chairman of the Junior/Mother's weekend said, "Everything is going well. Right now we have sold about 250 tickets at $18.50 per person to mothers and daughters for the weekend."

Both weekends are in the final stages of preparation.

Turley and ten other committee members have organized a variety of events.

The activities begin Friday evening with a reception and singing entertainment in Stapleton Lounge. A brunch and fashion show sponsored by Hudson's department store takes place at the Marriott on Saturday. Later that day a tea and recipe exchange between mothers and daughters is planned in Holy Cross parlor. The movie "Where Angels Go Trouble Follows" will be shown that evening. The weekend concludes with a Mass and reception on Sunday.

Turley noted that "The activities are basically the same as in past years. There is also a definite increase in interest; possibly because of the great success of last year's Sophomore/Parents' weekend."

Lee Ann Franks, chairman of the Sophomore/Parents' weekend said, "Things are going great. There is more response this year for helping on committees and the talent show than in the past."

Invitations for the weekend were sent to sophomores and their parents over the Christmas break, according to Franks. The cost for parents and their daughters is $65.

The festivities include a talent show and reception on Friday night. On Saturday the College will sponsor an open house, Mass, and dinner/dance. A brunch catered by Saga brings the weekend to a close.

Franks said she is looking forward to the weekend and is happy with the response, adding that "We already have between 800 and 1,000 people planning to attend."

EXPONENTIAL, MY DEAR WATSON

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution.

Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected technical/non-technical scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, lab fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out. It might even make your education finances seem elementary.

Black-lung issue

Reagan may delay UMW benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the United Mine Workers union will be paying close attention to President Reagan's State of the Union speech next week to hear what he has to say about black lung benefits.

Government officials have indicated there could be a delay or freeze on cost of living benefits for an estimated 450,000 recipients of black lung assistance.

John Jarvis, a UMW lobbyist, said the union is looking into the proposed freeze. "We're concerned, and we'll have to see what they come out with."

Jarvis said it would be easier for the UMW to fight a proposal to freeze black lung benefits than one that would delay the adjustment as part of a package plan.

The freeze in benefits could stem from a Reagan administration plan to seek a six-month delay in this year's Social Security cost of living adjustment. Government officials indicated Monday that the delay may be extended to other programs, including civil service and military pensions, railroad retirement plans, veterans' benefits and the black lung program.

By law, payments to people who receive black lung benefits are directly tied to federal salary scales. But the administration hinted last week that it will ask Congress not to give federal workers pay raises this year.

While benefits vary according to the number of dependents, the basic rate for a single miner is $304.90 a month. Currently, federal law sets the black lung benefit at 37.5 percent of what is made by a government worker in the GS-2 grade.

Arthritis treatment

Patients may obtain banned drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of the arthritis drug Oraflex, whose worldwide sales were suspended last August, said yesterday the drug will be made available to a few patients who have not responded to other treatments.

Ron Culp, spokesman for the Indianapolis-based Eli Lilly and Co., which produces the drug, said about 100 physicians involved in the clinical trials of Oraflex before it was approved will be able to order new supplies of it.

They will be restricted to prescribing the drug for patients who participated in those clinical trials and who since have not responded to other treatments.

The company withdrew Oraflex from worldwide sale on Aug. 4, 1982, after reports in Great Britain and the United States linked it with at least 72 deaths. The Food and Drug Administration did not ban the drug and the company is within its legal rights in offering Oraflex on a limited basis.

FDA approved the company's action.

Patients receiving Oraflex will have to undergo frequent laboratory tests and medical examinations at their own expense to determine whether they suffer any of the liver and kidney problems which led to Oraflex's withdrawal, Culp said.

If this limited test is successful, the company is willing to make the drug available to a larger group of patients who have not responded to other types of treatment, he added.

Culp said the company had received numerous requests for supplies of Oraflex from doctors and patients since it was withdrawn. But he said he had no estimate of the number of arthritis patients who might want to use it because other treatments were not working.

Economic Update

The recession's severity was brought out in Wednesday's statement by the government that the economy sank further in 1982 than in any year since the aftermath of World War II. But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the steepest drop, at year's end, was the last gasp of the long downturn. "We're in a recession, there's no question about that," said Baldrige. "But the recovery is beginning this quarter." Administration officials also had predicted recovery a full year ago, but their hopes were dashed when interest rates remained high through early summer, slowing sales and stifling business investment. "There's a big, big difference now because interest rates are down," Baldrige said. He spoke with reporters after his department released figures showing the U.S. economy — measured by real, or inflation-adjusted, gross national product — fell 1.8 percent last year. That small-sounding number represented the biggest one-year decline since the 14.7 percent of 1946 when U.S. industry was gearing down from its huge war effort.

Wall Street Update

Stock prices tumbled yesterday, extending the decline that set in Tuesday. Analysts said a rise in open-market interest rates helped touch off the selling. Some of the markets' recent strength has been attributed to speculation that the Federal Reserve would soon cut the discount rate, but no reduction has been made to date. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 11.59 to 1,068.06. Declines outpaced advances by almost 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 80.90 million shares, against 78.38 million in the previous session. — (AP)

Three-dimensional art

Holography exhibition begins

By ED KONRADY
Associate B&T Editor

The International Exhibition of Creative Holography starts tomorrow in the Moreau Gallery at Saint Mary's College. "Light Vistas, Light Visions" is the theme of the show which ends February 18.

Holography creates images in three dimensions as opposed to conventional artistic devices such as paintings which are only two dimensional.

This exhibition will present holography as a fine arts form rather than as a technological, scientific advancement. The works of 13 holographic artists from six countries are featured in the show.

Holography is a three-dimensional art form that uses laser light to record the patterns of light waves reflected from an object onto the emulsion of light-sensitive film. Laser light or white-light is then re-exposed on the film and the resulting image becomes three-dimensional.

There are three basic form of holograms. Transmission holograms are the oldest, with the original process discovered by Dr. Dennis Gabor in 1947. The holograms get their name from the positioning of the light source during viewing. A laser transmission hologram is made and viewed with laser light which comes through the film from behind. Because the most popular laser for holography is a helium-neon type, most transmission imagery is red. White light transmission holograms were invented by Dr. Stephen Benton in 1968. These holograms are made by laser light but viewed with light from an ordinary bulb. White light holograms act like a prism, passing through the film and breaking up into an image that can contain every color of the rainbow.

Reflection holograms were invented by the Russian scientist Y.N. Denisyuk in 1961. It gets its name from the positioning of the light source during the exposure and viewing of the hologram. A laser is used to expose the film and a white bulb is used to view the image. Light passes through the front of the film, hits the object behind it, and is reflected directly back through the film towards the viewer. There are movie frame side by side on a piece of holographic film. The film is then wrapped around the inside of a clear plexiglass cylinder. When illuminated by an incandescent light bulb below the cylinder, the original image appears in space in the middle of the cylinder.

Artists have been increasing their use of holography as a means of expression since the late 1960's, and two different kinds of reflection holograms, with the reflection hologram recording the image on an emulsion-backed film strip or glass plate. Dichromate reflection holograms were developed in 1967 with the emulsion hand-coated onto any shaped glass surface and exposed by an argon laser. The developed emulsion has to be kept in a vacuum because no fixative for the image has been found yet.

Holography is a three-dimensional imaging technique using laser light to record patterns of light waves reflected from an object onto light sensitive film. After developing the film, exposure to light reproduces the images with all the dimensions of the original object.

The third type of holography is the holographic movie. This technique, invented by Lloyd Cross in 1972, combines holography and cinematography. The movie is made by filming the subject as it rotates 360 degrees or 120 degrees and stacking the slit holograms of each their experiments with three-dimensional imagery promise to expand our concept of visual art.

The thirteen artists use the medium of holography for their own special purposes. Their work ranges from the reflections on Eastern philosophy and mysticism of Rudie Berkhout (Netherlands) to the satirical social commentaries of Susan Gamble (England).

The holography exhibit begins with a public reception from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. tomorrow. Gallery hours are 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The gallery is closed on Saturday but is open Sunday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. There is no admission charge.

against the most elementary claims of compassion."

"Can we expect genuine and lasting progress in improving the quality of life for all Americans when the most fundamental law of our land rejects the inviolability of life itself?" said Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul and Minneapolis, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Ridings said the decision by the league's board came after the "reproductive rights" position gained one of the highest levels of support from league chapters of any issue in the last eight years. She said 92 percent of the chapters polled supported the position.

An announcement of the league decision was scheduled for today, but the chapter response was "so overwhelmingly positive that we saw no reason to wait," league spokeswoman Vicki Harian said.

The league decision was not totally unexpected, but it clearly will generate some controversy within the national group.

In the mid-1970s the league board endorsed the right of poor women to have access to abortion on the same basis as more wealthy women. That stance, which carefully avoided endorsing abortion directly, was taken during the initial debates over Medicaid funding of abortion.

At the national league convention last year, several state chapters successfully pushed a resolution directing the board to adopt a position on abortion.

Since the convention, the league has surveyed its membership on the issue. One source said that the strong results in favor of giving women a choice surprised even board members advocating that position, prompting the quick board action.

After the board's decision, several league members in California said they would resign in protest.

Explaining the Carter administration's shift, Adelman said it was made "in recognition of the fact that Soviet leaders cherish most dearly not the cities, or the economic base, but the levers of control — keeping the political system, the military forces and the military-related economy intact and functioning at their command."

He added, "A successful strike against military and political control targets would reduce the Soviets' ability to protect military power abroad and to sustain political authority at home."

In addition, he emphasized that the amount was recently raised from 50 to 75 cents through consideration of "an inflation factor determined by analysis." Brother Ryan sees no reason for an increase and therefore does not expect one.

Couch responds to student objections, "Regardless of the amount of money obtained from the dining hall administration, that money still goes to good use."

He encouraged Notre Dame students to sign up for the program and stay with it. "On Wednesday afternoons your hunger will remind you of your sacrifice of giving up a meal on behalf of the hungry."

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000—more than most companies would pay you right out of college. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $31,000.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.

Loaning thoughts[©] costs even less

This is the last in a series on the implications of the Copyright Act of 1976 and of economically viable alternatives to the open infringement of that law. The question of illegal photocopying came to the academic forefront last December when nine publishers filed a copyright infringement suit against New York University for violating the "fair use" clause of Title 17 of the United States Code.

Paul McGinn

Roper Review

Probably the most overlooked textbook resource on campus is the Memorial Library - and with good reason. Rarely do two copies of a class text sit among the thousands of abstracts and journals which helped rank the University 73rd among fellow graduate libraries.

Those few textbooks which the library does keep are either placed on reserve or quickly checked out by students who hear rumors about what books may be used in their courses. The rest of the class is simply left to purchase the texts, and usually, very few of the books are used.

Yet how many of America's high schools supply state-supported textbooks for their students? Why could not Notre Dame organize its own textbook-lending system fashioned on the same principles as so many of our nation's public schools?

The University need first establish a book-buying fund for the purchase of classics, anthologies, and texts. A committee of professors would select one edition of a standard text after reviewing a number of editions of the work.

Some may argue that such a procedure would inevitably cause discord among faculty members who disagree on texts and who would require their favorite edition anyway. Yet one need only examine the Arts and Letters Core Course faculty to see how committee selection proceeds. A total of over 400 Arts and Letters sophomore students take the required Core Course yearly. Few other courses require such a number of texts.

Funding such a program is a possible question. The Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore, which grosses over $1 million annually from book sales, provides a framework in which to establish such a book-buying fund.

Book-purchasing money, which now goes to the publishers each year, would be spent about once every five years. Students, many of whom spend well over $150 per semester now would pay about $30 for the use of such a book-lending program.

After five years, the faculty committee could select updated or improved editions to replace its previous choices. After five years of use, such books would need to be replaced.

The bureaucracy involved in such a system would be no more of a problem than long bookstore lines. And the purchase and sale of books, a service on which the bookstore loses money, would decrease.

The new computerized checkout system would eliminate any problems the program would cause if it were installed using the present antiquated card system. Undergraduates would check out books for a semester at a time, as graduate students currently do.

Such a system would also encourage more students to use the library's facilities as many would be compelled to use the library for more than only studying.

The program itself would be voted upon in the upcoming student body elections and discussed among the faculty and library administrators. Participation would be based on a faculty member's agreement to order only a minimum number of new books to supplement the library-owned copies.

Another question concerning the purchase of books, is that many students will want to buy a book to keep for future reference.

The library's initial purchase of any edition might only include 50 percent of the total number of books needed. In such a way, the library would not waste its time processing unnecessary books. The program need only start slowly and gradually develop acceptance.

With the ever-increasing cost of books, the University must enact measures similar to the philosophy of the financial aid office. Books are no longer incidental expenses, but great economic and educational investments.

For too long, Notre Dame has held the "American" belief that new means better; but few can afford warm ink on virgin pulp, and none can legally avoid the implications of the Copyright Act of 1976. The time has come for Notre Dame to accustom itself to dog-eared pages and due date stamps.

This series could not have been completed without the gracious assistance of Joe Musumeci and Carol Camp.

'Communist America'

Mexicans fear their own country's move toward socialism since the nationalization of the Mexican banking system recently. Consequently, they are concerned about what they describe as "Communist America," their neighbor to the north.

John Regalbuto

Would-be Sermons

Mexicans perceive a mass conformity stemming from an intrinsic weakness in the modern American character; a lack of strength, a lack of individuality.

A friend in Monterrey, also an engineer with an interest in philosophy, explained why Mexicans are able to discern this. Their history and environment have molded a strong Mexican character. Descended from both the highly civilized Spanish and the primitive native Indians, Mexicans feel lost in some ways, compelled question who they are. They find it natural to think for themselves.

Mexico suffers from the poor administration of a government riddled with corruption. A standing joke is: "If Mexican administrators were given authority over the Sahara desert, within months they would be importing sand!" Though the land is rich with natural resources, oil and silver for example, the country remains poor and the economy sick. The corrupt elite receive little respect, and the people isolate themselves from the government and hope for better times.

The religious conviction the first Spanish settlers brought to this continent is by necessity much called upon today. Living in a materially frustrated country, these fiercely independent people look to the Church for answers. This ninety-five percent Catholic society lives by the Church.

Faith is so deeply integrated into the Mexican way of life that the Church and state must be kept separate. It is a statement of the Church's power that it is illegal for a priest to wear his collar in public! The foundation of faith is too deep for this separation to be much more than a formal one. It was the government-sponsored television commercials during Christmas which had beautiful, simple themes such as, "No matter what your position is, work with love," and "In these times of economic hardship, the best gift is the free gift of love!"

Young adults possess an almost naive sincerity — they know of no other way to act. A typical college scene is this: while waiting for the professor to arrive, classmates line the corridor. Another student approaches, and it's as if a basketball star were running through the tunnel of his teammates during the pregame introduction — he's shouting and shaking hands the whole way! An American might think they hadn't seen each other in months. One does not encounter Jose Cool or Chic Woman, masters of the false front and the ulterior motive.

I've asked more than a few of these men and women for their impressions of the American individual. My engineer-philosopher friend gave an answer which speaks for many. "The American is basically a very good person, but I feel he has been manipulated by his society." An educated Mexican will be the first to admit his dependence on and appreciation for imported American technology. But among these people there is a perception of insincerity and insecurity about the American character.

How do the communist jokes originate? College students make reference to their American counterparts in fraternities and sororities: "How can so many people wear the same clothes and the same hair and act in the same way? How can so many people let a group do their thinking for them? In America, everyone has the opportunity to be the same. They can go to work, buy their two cars, and live side by side in look-a-like houses."

America, perhaps the freest country in the world, is certainly not communist. But the potent freedom that makes America so great can also be her demise. In this country, a mind has freedom to seek guidance from many more sources than religion. The weakest aspects of the American character which the Mexican character perceives, insincerity and conformity, are signs of insecurity catered to more by materialism than by true guidance.

And what is true guidance? We Americans can learn it from the people of the country to the south. Faith. Faith. Faith.

P.O. Box Q

Abortion anniversary

Dear Editor:

January 22, 1983 marks the ten-year anniversary of the legalizing of abortion in this country by the Supreme Court. Ten years and ten million dead unborn children later the abortion issue remains unchanged. Amidst all the alibis, the smoke screens, the political patronizing, the issue comes down to one question: Is an unborn child a human life? If he is, abortion is the killing of an innocent human being, and that is wrong. If not, no human life is taken, and abortion is permissible.

The answer seems clear. An unborn child is a human life. We were all one at one time. Just as each one of us is now in a stage of human development, we were then. All that was needed was time to develop. Science has known this for years. As its capabilities advanced, science could see the sophistication of even the beginnings of life. In 1965, Life magazine, in its revealing "Life Before Birth" issue, said, "The birth of a human life really occurs at the moment the mother's egg cell is fertilized by one of the father's sperm cells." Not long ago, Newsweek magazine acknowledged the same thing. Newsweek went a step further and said that what the abortion issue comes down to is when society wishes to value a human life, and protect it. When is that life a "person"?

Historically, it has always been society's decision to value human life, or not. Historically, the morally right decision has always been in favor of life. Slavery devalued human life, and it is universally condemned. Hitler wished to rid the world of unwanted life, and is seen as evil. It is time man realized that abortion is a product of a similar disregard for the value and sanctity of human life. Principles that man cherishes, such as justice, equality, and love, should lead man to condemn abortion as he does slavery. It is time man remembered these principles and showed the sanctity he affords all human life to one of life's necessary stages — its beginnings. From its beginning to its end, life is valuable, sacred, and worthy of protection. Only when man cares for life's beginnings as he should will he ever really value all life as he should, as his principles demand. For, as Albert Schweitzer said, "If a man loses reverence for any part of life, he will lose reverence for all life."

The Red Smith Writing Scholarship at Notre Dame was benefitted by the auction of a stud fee to harness racing champion Green Speed last weekend in East Rutherford, N.J. Bob and Jackie Greenberg of Paramus, N.J., owners of the Bunny Stable, were the high bidders. The auction was held at the Garden State horse sales at the Meadowlands. The Greenbergs won it for $4,200. Green Speed, the 1977 Hambletonian winner and harness horse of the year, stands at stud at Pine Hollow Stud Farm in Pine Bush, N.Y. Morton Funder, president of Pine Hollow, had announced that the auction's proceeds would be donated to the scholarship fund honoring Mr. Smith. — The New York Times

Finally, aerobic exercises are being held on Mondays and Wednesdays at 4:10 in the ACC. — The Observer

Yannick Noah of France used his booming serve to eliminate Vitas Gerulaitis and Johan Kriek continued his domination over Steve Denton last night to complete the opening round of the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis tournament at Madison Square Garden. Noah ousted Gerulaitis 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, while Kriek stopped the hard-serving Denton 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. The victories advanced Noah into the quarterfinals, where he will face third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia tomorrow afternoon, while Kriek will meet top-seeded Jimmy Connors tomorrow night. In today's quarterfinals, second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina will play Andres Gomez of Ecuador in the afternoon and fourth-seeded John McEnroe will take on Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina at night. — AP

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes will hold a meeting tonight in Holy Cross Hall at Saint Mary's at 8. Notre Dame students can meet at the shuttle stop at the Grotto by 7:35 for transportation. All are invited. — The Observer

Hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah was given permission yesterday to compete as an amateur in track and field events in the United States despite being a professional football player with the San Francisco 49ers. The precedent-setting decision by the U.S. Olympic Committee was announced by its president, William Simon, in Los Angeles. It marks the first time a professional in another sport — other than a college athlete — has been allowed to compete as an amateur in track and field. Nehemiah, 23, is still barred from all international competition because the International Amateur Athletic Federation does not permit participation by any athlete who is a professional in another sport. — AP

College roundup

UNC, UVa. win state showdowns

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Matt Doherty scored 21 points and joined Warren Martin in closing the door on North Carolina State as No. 3 North Carolina claimed a 99-81 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory last night.

N.C. State cut a 14-point Tar Heel lead to 55-46 before Martin and Doherty went to work to seal North Carolina's 10th straight victory.

Martin started it with a hook shot, Doherty got a tip-in and then hit a 15-footer to make it 61-46 at the 15:39 mark. After Thurl Bailey scored for the Wolfpack, Martin grabbed a missed shot and slammed in a dunk for a 63-48 score.

Another Martin dunk lifted the score to 66-50 at 13:42 and after the Wolfpack cut the deficit to 13, Doherty blocked a shot on one end and hit a three-point basket at the other to make it 69-53.

North Carolina held the Wolfpack to one field goal in six minutes while rolling to a 19-6 lead before Terry Gannon began hitting from the perimeter to help pull N.C. State to within 28-24.

But Sam Perkins hit a pair of 3-point baskets and Doherty added another as the Tar Heels turned back the rally en route to a 52-42 halftime lead.

Jim Braddock added 18 points for North Carolina, 13-3 and 3-0 in the ACC, while Michael Jordan had 15, Perkins 13 and Brad Daugherty, playing with a stress fracture in his left foot, added 10.

N.C. State, 8-4 and 2-2 in league play, was led by Gannon's 18 points. Sidney Lowe added 12 while Cozell McQueen and George McClain scored 11 each.

Virginia 74, Va. Tech 64

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Reserve forward Jim Miller scored 18 points as Virginia's seventh-ranked Cavaliers opened a 10-point lead midway through the first half and coasted to a 74-64 basketball victory over 17th-ranked Virginia Tech last night. Beating Tech for the eighth straight time the Cavaliers improved their record to 14-2. The Hokies, who brought a seven-game win streak into the contest, suffered only their second loss in 16 starts.

Miller, who scored 15 of his points in the second half, was backed by Ralph Sampson with 12 points, Rick Carlisle with 11 and Ricky Stokes with 10.

Freshman Del Curry paced Tech with 17 points, while Perry Young added 15 and Bobby Beecher 14.

After a seesaw opening 10 minutes of play that featured seven lead changes and four ties, Virginia ran off 12 straight points to take control of the game.

A steal and layup by Al Young gave Tech a 20-18 lead with 9:52 remaining in the opening half, but the Hokies did not score again until Curry popped in a 16-footer at the 4:16 mark.

Purdue 63, Illinois 62

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Gene Keady says pressure doesn't seem to bother his Purdue Boiler-makers, and Danny Palombizio is proof of that.

Palombizio canned a foul-line jump shot with four seconds remaining last night as Purdue edged Illinois 63-62 in a Big Ten Conference basketball game.

Palombizio's basket came just 16 seconds after Bruce Douglas hit two foul shots to put Illinois ahead 62-61.

"Our strategy on the last shot was to go to (Russell) Cross low or Palombizio high," said Keady. "And if they were covered try to hit Steve (Reid) or (Kurt) Clawson on the wings and let them shoot it in."

"It worked out where Reid hit Danny high and he hit the basket."

January 21
My Dinner with André (1981)
Louis Malle USA color 110 min
An evening at a restaurant becomes a vivid, funny, moving account of an astonishing spiritual journey. Much of the film's humor and dynamism derives from its serendipitous interplay between the two central characters—the elegant, quixotic, spellbinding visionary André and the quizzical, lumpy, obtuse rationalist Wally, playing a stubbornly prosaic Watson to André's soaring Holmes.

January 28
Kaspar Hauser (Every Man for Himself and God Against All) (1975)
Werner Herzog Germany color 110 min German with English subtitles
Bruno S. who has appeared in many of Herzog's films, portrays Kaspar Hauser, the young man who mysteriously appears one day in a small German town, in magically compelling terms. Based on a historical event, the film traces this adult, wild child's acquisition of culture and language, and the threat his naive poses for established society.

February 4
Autumn Sonata (1978)
Ingmar Bergman Sweden color 92 min Swedish with English subtitles
This exploration of longing and guilt illuminates the frail, yet indestructible bonds that exist between mother and daughter. Ingrid Bergman and Liv Ullmann give electric performances.

February 11
The Last Wave (1978)
Peter Weir Australia color 106 min
A spellbinding thriller about the supernatural in which an Australian lawyer defending five aborigines against a murder charge becomes involved in a series of increasingly inexplicable experiences, which seem to come not from modern man's linear time, but from the aborigine's primeval dream time.

February 18
Chan Is Missing (1982)
Wayne Wong USA color 89 min
The first Chinese-American film, this independently produced film has already achieved renown for its sensitive portrayal of a milieu never before seen authentically on the screen. Chan juggles a suspense plot with semidocumentary footage in much the same way as Neorealism.

February 25
Claire's Knee (1970)
Eric Rohmer France color 105 min French with English subtitles
Two plots intertwine in this very funny exploration of modern morality. A novelist meets an old friend by chance on holiday and decides to use him as material for her new book, but this plot stalls as the second gains momentum—the friend's growing obsession with Claire's knee.

March 4
Circle of Deceit (1982)
Volker Schlöndorff Germany 108 min German with English subtitles
Set in the rubble of civil war-torn Beirut, Deceit is a compelling and thoughtful vision of the tragedies of war. Bruno Ganz plays a journalist whose dazed eyes mirror the confusion of a war in which everyone is a victim.

March 25
Tragedy of a Ridiculous Man (1981)
Bernardo Bertolucci Italy color 118 min Italian with English subtitles
An heir is captured by a band of terrorists in Bertolucci's The Conformist. Last Tango in Paris latest commentary on the tragedies and absurdities of living in a late technological society.

April 8
Confidence (1979)
Istvan Szabo Hungary color 104 min Hungarian with English subtitles
Two fugitives given false identities as husband and wife by the resistance in order to evade the Nazis. Within this icy environment of total paranoia, the film is also intensely romantic, as the two fugitives (who never learn each other's real names) fall in love and experience a total, consuming, incandescent passion—romance without identities without future, in which every encounter could be the last.

April 15
Montenegro (1981)
Dusan Makavejev Yugoslavia color 97 min
Absolutely anything goes at the Zanzi bar, a gypsy hangout where bored housewife Susan Anspach finds a wild new lifestyle. A fantasy farce that blends black humor with social comment, while taking a surreal look at sex, love, and life.

April 22
Lucia (1972)
Humberto Solas Cuba B/W 160 min Spanish with English subtitles
A portrait of a woman in pre- and postrevolutionary Cuba, Lucia balances historical sweep and private drama in its depiction of social change. Moreover, Lucia meditates on the relation of social change to aesthetic forms, giving us each of the film's three parts in a different film style.

April 29
Diva (1982)
Jean-Jacques Bernier France color 123 min French with English subtitles
A remarkably fresh and original work at the forefront of a kind of French New Wave. At the heart of this romantic thriller—1980s style—is an opera-obsessed 18-year-old mail carrier who becomes unwittingly entangled in a web of murder, passion, and intrigue.

Keady added. "These kids are so courageous and work so hard, pressure doesn't seem to bother them."

Illinois Coach Lou Henson said his team defended the last shot well.

"On the last shot we were trying to keep the ball outside and when it looked like they were in trouble Palombizio slipped in there," he said. "This was one of our better games. If we can keep on playing this way, we're going to be all right."

Illinois had a chance to win the game, but Derek's Harper's 25-foot shot at the buzzer banged off the rim.

In the closing minutes there were five ties and four lead changes, the last coming on Palombizio's basket.

The victory raised Purdue's overall mark to 12-3 and 3-2 in the league. Illinois is now 12-6 for the season and 2-3 in the Big Ten.

Arkansas 69, TCU 55

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A sensational Arkansas defensive effort in the second half lifted the fourth-ranked Razorbacks roared to a 69-55 victory over Texas Christian last night.

TCU hit its first seven shots of the final period to close its deficit to 44-41. But Walker and Joe Kleine each hit a pair of shots around a TCU bucket to make it 52-43 with 8:15 remaining.

Robertson finished with 14 points as did John Snively. Darrell Browder led the Horned Frogs with 12 points and Doug Arnold added 11.

Arkansas is 14-0 for the season and 4-0 in the Southwest Conference. TCU fell to 12-4, including 3-2 in the league.

Memphis 100, Delta 62

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Sophomore forward Keith Lee scored 29 points to help sixth-ranked Memphis State breeze past Delta State 100-62 in a non-conference college basketball game last night.

The 6-10 Lee, three inches taller than anyone on the Delta State roster, also had a game-high 13 rebounds as the Tigers ran their record to 13-1.

Memphis State out-rebounded the cold-shooting Statesmen 48-26. Delta State managed only 26 of 71 shots for 38 percent from the field, while the Tigers hit 39 of 66 shots for 59.1 percent.

exploitation of athletes leaves these players out in the cold when their careers are over.

This danger will be one of the topics discussed in a CBS News documentary, "The Basketball Machine," which will be presented this evening at 10 p.m. on WSBT-TV.

For Phelps' sake as well as everyone's, all should watch. While these massive problems cannot be solved overnight, a little awareness could produce a lot of action.

Irish rip Bucknell as Dolan stars again

The Notre Dame basketball team came out victorious last night in their final tune-up for Saturday's game with the Maryland Terrapins, whipping the Bison of Bucknell 64-52. Bill Varner led the Irish with 17 points and Freshman Jim Dolan snared an amazing 13 rebounds to key the victory.

As on Monday against Lafayette, the Irish appeared to be looking ahead a little to Saturday's televised match-up at Cole Field House. Head Coach Digger Phelps even admitted that he had been preparing for the Terrapins since Sunday; the assistant coaches made up the game plans for the two games this week.

Early on, however, it looked as if it didn't matter who came up with the game plan; the Irish raced to an 8-1 lead as Bucknell failed to hit a field-goal attempt in the first 5:29 of the game. The Bison could get no closer than three points the rest of the first half.

Seniors John Paxson and Bill Varner led the way in the first twenty minutes, both collecting eight points on identical four-for-five shooting, while Dolan took advantage of Bison foul trouble to hit nine of 10 free throw attempts. Unfortunately, the Irish got into some foul trouble of their own, with freshman Ken Barlow collecting three personals before eight minutes had gone by.

As the teams went to the locker rooms at halftime, the Irish had an imposing 33-22 lead. But as play began in the second half, the Irish looked as tentative and unprepared as the Bison had at the game's start. They missed shots, turned the ball over, and collected more fouls as Bucknell ran off seven straight points to cut the lead to four. It took them four minutes, but the Irish finally got some points on a Varner 15-footer. Bucknell continued to hang tough, but a Tom Sluby slam dunk seemed to ignite the team, and when Dolan scored five straight points later on, the Irish were safely home with a 48-37 lead.

The turning point of the game, in fact, came with 8:47 to play. Up to that point, the Irish had collected eight fouls, the Bison none. Over the next 4:10, however, the officials called the Bison for seven personals. During that same period, Notre Dame ran off an 11-4 streak to salt this one away and send the team to its tenth victory, to equal last season's total.

Phelps wasn't ready to talk win totals or NCAA berths just yet.

"Right now, Maryland is our main priority. We have a lot of respect for what Lefty (Maryland coach Driesell) is doing," said Phelps. "Hey, they beat UCLA (80-79 in double overtime), and UCLA is No. 1 in the country. We should have Kempton back for that game. I could have put him in there tonight, but I didn't think it was necessary."

"I thought John Paxson (12 points, 3 assists) was very unselfish tonight. He could have taken a lot more shots, but he looked for the open man. Varner (8 for 12, four assists) played well, and Sluby played a lot better (5 for 7)."

Bucknell fell to 6-7. Losing coach Charlie Woollum seemed as satisfied as he could be with a loss.

"I think the difference was that we weren't prepared for their match-up zone at first," said the Bucknell coach. "That really caught us off-guard. But I don't think we were intimidated. But they sure do call the walk a lot more out here."

A bigger factor was Irish defense on the Bison starting guards, holding them to combined 4-for-18 shooting.

The appetizers are out of the way, and the main course awaits a hungry Notre Dame five on Saturday. They'll take a 10-5 record into that contest, with the prize being increased national respect.

"I'd have been surprised if we didn't win ten games this year," Phelps commented. "Let's see what we can do from here."

Academic integrity

Phelps addresses S. D. reforms

While followers of college athletics stare in disbelief at the numbers of schools on probation (currently, 14 Division I schools are penalized) last week's much publicized NCAA convention in San Diego attacked a more pressing issue: academic integrity.

An article in The Sporting News published Oct. 25, 1982, revealed some shocking facts regarding an issue that had been swept under the rug by many coaches and athletic directors.

According to the story, of the top 19 college basketball conferences in the country, a paltry 43.4 per cent of last year's seniors received their diplomas. Of those ranked, the Southwest Conference finished last with only 4 of 24 seniors (16.7 per cent) graduating. And Rice University supplied three of those players!

Among other powerhouse conferences listed, the Atlantic Coast Conference graduated 7 of 19 (36.8 per cent), the Pac Ten had 11 of 27 (40.7 per cent) graduate, and the Big Ten had only 7 of 23 (30.4 per cent) of its players graduate. These embarrassing statistics would make even the biggest ESPN basketball junkie blush.

Despite implications of racism involved with smaller schools from the South, firm action was taken.

Athletic directors from around the nation approved new regulations requiring all students entering college to have a combined score of 700 on verbal and math Scholastic Aptitude Tests or 15 on the American College Testing Examinations.

One of the primary advocates of this type of change in the system of college athletics is Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps. Throughout his tenure as coach of the Irish, he has addressed the crucial problems of the inherent inconsistencies between intercollegiate athletics and education.

Phelps was somewhat pleased by last week's activities.

"First of all, over 100 college presidents showed up to emphasize the need for academic credibility for the student athlete," said the outspoken Phelps. "Further, the new regulations have new passing requirements (a 2.0 average and 11 college prep units) for the incoming freshmen."

While rival coaches may disagree, Phelps' concern in these issues is genuine.

For one, Phelps has recruited in the south as well as urban areas and feels a shift in the attitude of many parents in the area of academic responsibility.

"I feel strongly that in some poor neighborhoods, parents are saying to their young sons and daughters that you will have a college prep background," added Phelps. "They've seen the exploitation (of athletes) that goes on in their own communities."

Further, the new rules affect all high school athletes right now, including Phelps' son, Rick, a freshman in high school with aspirations of playing college football.

"When I heard of the new regulations, I told my son, 'Rick, it (the legislation) went through so you have to take the college prep courses,'" stated Phelps.

Yet there is always more to be done.

While Notre Dame has tried to set an example for most Division I schools and has received national recognition for this fact, uncontrolled circumstances at some major universities often lead to a disruption of academic integrity.

"The next phase is for college presidents to set up progressive degree requirements," says Phelps. "There is not enough emphasis in progress to a degree."

The racial implications of the NCAA action are also far-reaching. The use of ACTs and SATs as a legitimate way to judge a minority student's ability to do well in college is speculative.

The tests have long been criticized as invalid for only applying to white middle-class America. President Joseph Johnson of Grambling echoed the sentiments of several presidents of black colleges by calling the convention's action "blatant racism."

While Phelps agrees that some modifications for SAT and ACT standards can be modified for minorities, the essential issue is education in America.

"As a parent, I'm concerned with what is going on in education," adds Phelps. "Once a good environment is provided, then comes a good school system. Then it is up to the kid himself."

"In Detroit, out of 12,000 eighth graders, 8,000 become dropouts. The NCAA ruling puts it (the commitment to education) back in the high schools. Until we bring discipline and curriculum back to the grade schools, then we won't be able to change this thing."

"Once there is an awareness, then the next thing that comes is action."

With less than 2 percent of all college basketball players eventually reaching the professional level, this

Colleges following a poor model court. Or in any NBA arena.

The idea of the NCAA following the NBA's lead is almost too ignorant for words. All around the NBA, teams are losing money and fans are losing interest. While the NBA begs for a watered-down television contract, two of the three major networks bump heads for the best college games. And there are more than enough to go around. The only thing bigger or better in the NBA is the players' contracts, albeit not by much.

Using the NBA as a role model to improve the game of basketball makes about as much sense as taking driving lessons from Leon Spinks.

Once in a while, granted, the slowdown game is a little boring. But two years ago, when Notre Dame last defeated Kentucky, Digger Phelps effectively used a modified delay. And I find it difficult to believe that any of the people who packed Freedom Hall that night — whether they were Irish or Wildcat fans — were the least bit bored.

Certainly, there are other times when stalls are not so breathtaking. But rather than dramatically changing the very fabric of the game, the NCAA should leave basketball to its evolutionary process.

In all sports, progressive coaches invent new strategies and wait for the rest of the world to copy them and catch up. Sooner or later, somebody will devise an effective way to combat the four corners of fence and similar delays. That kind of intellectual challenge, above and beyond the raw physical talents and grace, is one of the real beauties of sport.

Unless the NCAA finds something oddly attractive about empty seats and red ink, it had better rethink its NBA copy-cat mentality.
