

Organizations seek bilateral freeze

By PAUL MCGINN
News Staff

Four campus organizations are sponsoring a referendum to freeze the deployment, testing, and production of nuclear weapons in the United States and the Soviet Union.

A petition to establish a Mar. 1 referendum was circulated by the Community for the International Lay Apostolate, Pax Christi, Circle-K (a volunteer group of college students affiliated with Kiwanis International), and Young Democrats yesterday in the North and South Dining Halls.

Nearly 1300 undergraduates signed the petition: "To improve national and international security, should the United States and the Soviet Union adopt an immediate, bilateral, mutually verifiable freeze on all further testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons, and of missiles and new aircraft designed primarily to deliver nuclear weapons?"

If passed, the referendum would become part of official University policy as have the Campbell's and Nestle's products boycotts.

Though petitioners received signatures from 15 percent of the student body — the amount needed to place such a referendum on a campus-wide ballot — Michael O'Brien, coordinator of the group, unofficially titled Coalition for a Bilateral Freeze, said that the gathering of signatures would continue in both dining halls today to increase student exposure to the freeze and to insure the 15 percent level.

When questioned about the specific referrals to the United States and the Soviet Union, O'Brien said, "We chose not to address the others (those nations now producing nuclear weapons, i.e. People's Republic of China, France, Great Britain, and India) because we wanted to begin with the superpowers first."

"Arms control must be as broad-based as possible; a unilateral freeze would have been a good step, but it was not broad-based enough."

Considering that Pax Christi and CILA had first supported the ill-fated unilateral freeze, O'Brien said that "the bilateral freeze does not reflect the failure of the unilateral freeze; it shows a willingness to work for arms

'Red gulf of blood'

Khadafy vows attack if U. S. enters gulf

(AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy vowed yesterday to turn the Gulf of Sidra into a "red gulf of blood" if the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz and its battle group dare to re-enter the disputed bay in the southern Mediterranean.

President Reagan has said there are no plans to involve U.S. forces in the region if Libya clashes with Sudan, its U.S.-backed neighbor, but that American troops have a right to defend themselves if fired upon.

Two U.S. jet fighters conducting war games from the Nimitz shot down a pair of Libyan planes after being fired on over the gulf in August 1981, and the Nimitz and its battle group just completed another set of maneuvers there.

"Entering Sidra means an invasion of Libya. The Libyan people want to live as free people and won't accept foreign occupation. The Gulf of Sidra will turn into a red gulf of blood if anyone tries to sail through it by force," Khadafy told his Parliament in the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

In an address carried by Libya's official JANA news agency, he warned that the U.S. Navy, operating north of the Gulf of Sidra, "forms a challenge to the Libyan nation. The Libyan people won't stand and watch idly if pushed too far."

"We will not permit America or any foreign state to enter the Gulf of Sidra or any other part of Libyan waters, and this includes the Soviet Union, to which we are linked by a relationship of friendship," Khadafy said.

"The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their land, their water and skies," he said. Some of the waters claimed by Libya are 100 miles from shore. The United States recognizes a three-mile limit.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the United States has sent AWACS planes to Egypt and moved the Nimitz and its battle group 100 miles off Egypt's northwest coast to counter a Libyan aircraft buildup apparently aimed at Sudan.

Reagan said the radar surveillance planes were in the area on a training exercise. The Egyptian Foreign Ministry said current military activities in Egypt were "normal."

Sale of the Airborne Warning and Control System planes to Saudi Arabia several years ago caused a storm of protest in Israel, but Israeli officials had no immediate comment on the latest deployment.

The Pentagon sources, who declined to be identified, said Khadafy had moved air units to bases in Chad, the adjacent country to the south where Libya has been supporting one faction in a civil war.

Those units appear to threaten Sudan, Chad's eastern neighbor, the Pentagon sources said, and Egypt deployed air force units to bases in southern Egypt to be ready to counter any Libyan move against Sudan.

Gary Hart announces 1984 presidential bid

DENVER (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart announced his longshot campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination yesterday, declaring that while the country faces tough economic choices, "we can be tender-hearted if we are also tough-minded."

Hart, who engineered George McGovern's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, is at age 45 the youngest of the likely 1984 contenders.

In a speech from the steps of the Colorado state house, Hart said, "We now face a stark choice between national renewal or national decline."

"The next president must shape domestic policies that actually achieve progress instead of perpetuating programs merely because there is a pressure group for them," he said.

With his wife, Lee, at his side, Hart spoke to about 500 cheering supporters. Facing the Rocky Mountains visible in the distance, the senator said he believes it is time for a Western candidate to have a serious shot at the White House.

Hart is the second Democrat after Sen. Alan Cranston of California to formally announce his presidential campaign.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale is to announce his candidacy Monday, and other undeclared contenders include Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

First elected to the Senate in 1974, the tall, craggy-faced Hart has been building a political organization and raising money since last summer, imitating the campaign styles of both McGovern and former President Carter.

Aides to Hart say he has raised over $225,000, including $5,000 in each of 20 states, making him eligible for matching federal funds.

Both Mondale and Hart have said they will accept no political contributions from special interest groups like labor unions or corporations, in the past a major source of campaign funding.

In the speech formally announcing his run for the White House, Hart made no proposals for quick solutions to the nation's 10.2 percent unemployment or high interest rates.

Instead, he called for long-term economic solutions, including retraining of the jobless, retooling factories and negotiating wide-open trade policies with U.S. allies.

President Reagan, Hart said, "offers a recovery which will enrich the wealthy, make a portion of us a little better off, and do nothing at all for the tens of millions of our people who are the worst off."

In the Senate, Hart has steered a centrist course. Aides say he has sought to model himself after the pragmatism of John F. Kennedy, in whose presidential campaign Hart worked as a volunteer in 1960.

He supports the nuclear freeze movement.

Boss talks, FBI hears

Cleveland mob family in ruins

CLEVELAND (AP) — It was Dec. 16, 1980, and Joey Gallo, who had ambitions to lead Cleveland's La Cosa Nostra "family," was breaking one of organization's most important rules.

He was talking to someone outside of the family about his plans to revitalize the mob.

And the FBI was listening.

Sitting in his office, 45-year old Joseph "Joey" Gallo described in detail the problems plaguing the family, one of the country's oldest bastions of organized crime.

The organization is now in ruins, crushed by a six-year joint investigation by federal and local law enforcement agencies.

The Cleveland family's boss, two reputed captains and three other close associates were convicted last summer on racketeering charges stemming from the bombing death of a rival mobster.

Last month, the family's underboss and two more captains were convicted on federal charges of running a drug ring.

Gallo, always careful to use coded references in his telephone conversations in case of a wiretap, apparently never thought the FBI might bug his office.

As he explained the family's problems to a relative of a former labor leader, Gallo mentioned reputed underboss Angelo "Big Ange" Lonardo by name. FBI agents at a nearby surveillance site were getting it all on tape.

Joe Triscaro, identified by the FBI as the owner of a trucking company, was complaining to Gallo that Lonardo had rejected his choice for president of a Teamsters local.

According to the tapes, which were played in federal court, Gallo told Triscaro, "Angelo's a beautiful guy ... really the kind of guy we needed in this town a long time ago."

"He's probably one of the most respected guys in the whole United States," Gallo said of the 72-year-old Lonardo, an old-time Mafia hand who began his criminal career during Prohibition while trying to elude Eliot Ness, then safety director in Cleveland.

Last month's convictions, the second phase of what the FBI called its most sweeping victory against a Mafia

A change machine was reportedly stolen from Stanford Hall's gameroom early Monday morning. According to hall president John Greer, the machine was somehow removed from the dorm between 3:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. The machine had been anchored to the wall by a number of large bolts. Because the machine is often down for repairs, the theft was not immediately noticed. The thieves made off with $200. "The way the machine is set up," said Greer, "there's always $200 in it, either all bills or all coins, or both." The machine was rented from Connady Amusement Company of Niles. The Hunger Project is sponsoring an Ending Hunger Briefing tomorrow from 1 to 5:30 p.m. at the Center for Continuing Education. The briefing will attempt to give interested students accurate information about hunger so they then can take effective action to end the problem. Topics to be discussed include how hunger is measured, countries that have ended hunger as a basic issue, what it will cost to end hunger worldwide, and what the student can do to help. Frank Yurasek, a Notre Dame alumnus, will lead the briefing. There is no charge, but donations will be accepted. — The Observer

A sock hop is being sponsored by the McCandless RA's tonight in Angela Athletic Facility from 8:30 to 1:30. The RA's are promoting social activities on the Saint Mary's campus. Soviet scientists have developed a drug that helps alcoholics conquer their thirst, the trade union newspaper Trud reported yesterday. The drug, called Imekarb by scientists at the pharmacology institute of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, has been clinically tested with good results and could be ready for general use by next year, the report said. It is "neither sweet nor bitter," is taken five times a day for up to 30 days, takes away the alcoholic's craving, and has no negative side effects, Yuri V. Burovoy of the pharmacology institute said. Alcoholism is an acute social problem in the Soviet Union. — AP

Now that Deirdre Barlow and lover Mike Baldwin are going off for a tryst, 17 million fans of Britain's longest-running soap opera, "Coronation Street," can breathe easy. The television serial has been running for two years, but viewers were especially on tenterhooks for Monday's episode. Deirdre and Mike, her factory boss, had reached a crucial point in their romance. But the episode was blacked out by several hundred electricians who called a union meeting just as the show was about to be broadcast. Viewers were nervously waiting to find out if once-divorced Deirdre would walk out on her stick-in-the-mud second husband and go live with Mike, as he had been pleading. But Wednesday night all was revealed: Deirdre agreed to Mike's proposal to go away with him while she makes up her mind whether to stick with him or go back to her husband. — AP

Fighting the lottery scare

February — the month of academic restlessness, anticipation of spring vacations to Florida, and, of course, "the old housing lottery scare."

But, this time the threat of a lottery seems destined to materialize. According to Father Michael Heppen, director of student residences, unless 200 men and 75 women decide to move off campus next year, the University will undoubtedly resort to a lottery.

Contrast the situation now with that of a year ago when 200 less students had turned in room contracts to Student Residences, and the administration still came very close to holding a lottery. Considering that students have been forced to move off campus before, with the last lottery held in 1972, maybe it is time to sit up and take notice.

Compared with the housing situations of most universities, Notre Dame stands alone. The trend and accepted practice at the many large colleges and universities is to move off campus by one's junior or senior year.

But Notre Dame is different. Quite a few students genuinely desire to stay on campus. Unlike other schools, Notre Dame is situated outside of the center of town; the University was designed to be isolated. So any attraction to the excitement of city life is virtually nil here.

Despite HPC President Mike McAuliffe's observation that "it's the best time to get choice apartments," the situation is not so rosy. The only apartment options — Notre Dame Apartments, Campus View, and Turtle Creek — are either filled to capacity or located in crime-ridden neighborhoods.

In general, off-campus living poses numerous innate problems for the student, not the least of which is the highly publicized crime situation. Student Body President Lloyd Burke has said that recent reports show O-C crime to be decreasing — information which he plans to present at Thursday's open house on off-campus opportunities. Nevertheless, O-C conditions can never hope to compete with the safety of on-campus housing.

The alternatives to a lottery must be explored logically and openly. One of Burke's counterproposals is to build two new male dorms next year. He also suggested the possibility of using social space areas in the dorms, such as the study lounges in Grace and Flanner. Heppen, however, downplayed the likelihood of the latter, noting that it would be "unfair to people in the towers."

Yet, despite the alternatives suggested, both Heppen and Burke appear to be overlooking the root of the problem. The housing problem basically boils down to a problem of overcrowding — an issue which plagues our daily existence on campus. The increasingly longer lines at the dining halls attest to the fact that the overpopulation problem is serious. Not even the library is immune to the curse of crowding — searching for a table becomes a greater chore than studying.

Neither the proposal of additional dorms nor the reuse of study lounges for housing purposes would confront the essence of overpopulation. They act as temporary solutions by delaying the lottery issue, while failing to even partially alleviate the dining hall problem.

The obvious solution would be to accept less incoming freshmen. Despite the initial transitional problems of a stricter limit on enrollment, the rewards would be immense. Bigger is not always better, especially when the quality of student living is at stake. Decreased enrollment would be universally beneficial — from the dining halls to the dorms.

As for now, Student Government has promised to "flood the campus with as much information as possible" concerning off-campus opportunities, according to Burke.

We are told to wait, watch for developments and, most importantly, consider retracting our room contracts by March 30.

So we wait... as the threat continues to loom over us. Perhaps the situation has deteriorated beyond hope for this year and the lottery is inevitable. Or maybe the housing lottery problem can be shoved off for another year — just one more year. But, the next time the threat will surface with greater force.

For until the administration devises a long-term solution to overpopulation on campus, it looks like the old housing lottery scare is here to stay.

Reagan's policies

Official describes human rights

By TIM VERCELLOTTI
News Editor

The promotion of democracy worldwide is an important element of the Reagan Administration's human rights policy, a State Department official said here last night.

"If you look around the world, democracies in general have the best human rights records. Communist countries do not," Theresa Tull said.

Tull, director of the Bureau of Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs, addressed a small crowd at Carroll Hall at Saint Mary's.

She noted that in the overall picture, human rights concerns are "inextricably bound to our foreign policy."

She stressed that there is "a fundamental agreement among the American people and their representatives on the aims of human rights policies. Disagreements, when they exist, are over the means of following such a policy."

The Reagan Administration prefers "private diplomatic dialogue," she said. "We believe that the results of this application will become evident over time."

The dialogue is aimed not only at the alleviation of immediate rights violations, but also at the promotion of democracy in the long run, Tull explained.

"When we react to specific abuses, we provide protection for a day. When we help to establish a system of free elections, we guarantee protection for life," she said.

Tull echoed an administration stance first unveiled in a Reagan speech to the British House of Commons last June. She explained that the Reagan Administration proposes to assist in the "gradual emergence of democratic systems," such as labor unions, a free Church, and an open judicial system, ultimately resulting in free elections.

Such elections "shift power from the ruler to the people," she said, adding that "we must forcefully deny anyone to speak in the name of the people unless they've been chosen by the people."

Tull noted that the American government will support opponents of totalitarian regimes only when there is evidence that the human rights situation will improve as a result. She singled out El Salvador, where the Reagan administration prefers the regime in power to the allegedly Soviet-backed leftist rebels.

The United States will continue to support the present Salvadoran government, which is making progress in the area of human rights, she said.

Responding to questions from the audience, Tull denied the charge that the annual worldwide human rights report recently released by the State Department was politically biased. "Absolutely not," she said.

Tull called the protection of human rights "an ongoing political struggle," but noted that substantial progress has been made in nations such as Brazil and Pakistan.

The lecture was sponsored by the Saint Mary's History Department.

Blood transfusions may prevent diabetes

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers have discovered that ordinary blood transfusions will prevent juvenile diabetes in laboratory animals, and say it may someday provide a way of eliminating the disease in humans.

The doctors found that a few transfusions early in life from a type of rat that never get juvenile diabetes will completely stop development of the disease in rats that have a genetic weakness for it.

The researchers cautioned, however, that more research is necessary before doctors try this simple therapy to prevent diabetes in humans susceptible to juvenile diabetes.

"We feel at the present time that we should not make the quantum leap from rat work to human work," said Dr. Aldo A. Rossini. "But this could be a plausible approach in the future."

The researchers are not sure why the blood transfusions worked.

The study was directed by Rossini at the University of Massachusetts Medical School. It was published in Friday's issue of Science.

Unlike the more common adult form of the disease, juvenile diabetes often strikes its victims in early adolescence. It destroys the ability to make insulin, a hormone necessary for the body to use and store sugar.

By age 18, about one in every 300 or 400 children in the United States has the disease. It accounts for about 15 percent of all diabetes and often runs in families.

Life expectancy after diagnosis is about 40 years, and victims of juvenile diabetes often suffer heart attacks, kidney failure and eye damage despite daily insulin shots.

Last week, Dr. George S. Eisenbarth and colleagues at the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston reported work with a blood test that will reveal early signs of the disease several years before irreparable damage occurs.

Senate tables cablevision proposal

By SCOTT HARDEK
Staff Reporter

A proposal by Lloyd Burke to bring cable television to the dorms was tabled last night at the monthly meeting of the Faculty Senate. The Senate did not take a stand for or against the proposal because of its vague and ambiguous nature.

In the words of Professor Vaughn McKim, chairman of the Senate, "(The Senate) ought not to take a stand until we know exactly what the students have in mind." McKim said he would welcome a more exact proposal.

The major thrust of the meeting concerned the Early Childhood Development Center, Inc., which asked the Senate to help with its financial problems. The facility, which is a school on the Saint Mary's campus for three- to six-year-old children of Notre Dame-Saint Mary's faculty, staff, administration, students, or alumni, faces a $4,700 deficit this year, and will not be able to meet its May payroll.

The major reason for the facility's deficits is the reduction of Notre Dame's contribution to its operation by $4,000. The decision to decrease the contribution was made this past summer by Provost Timothy O'Meara because he felt that the amount of the subsidy was excessive in light of faculty use.

Originally, the facility was subsidized through a fund of which Father Theodore Hesburgh was a trustee. Since the elimination of the fund, part of which was used to help finance the new Saint Mary's library, Notre Dame has had to make the contribution from University funds.

Saint Mary's grants the school $13,000 annually in the form of in-kind services (the building, heating, maintenance, etc.). It offers credit programs to Saint Mary's students who work there.

The Senate passed the proposal to recommend that the administration take steps to help the center meet its short-term deficits and that both parties meet to discuss long-range solutions to the school's financial difficulties.

The Senate recognizes the center as a fringe benefit of Notre Dame and feels that the service which the center provides the families outweighs the monetary value of the contribution. A handout distributed at the meeting cited the 400 families that the center has helped as one of its further merits.

Other topics discussed included Faculty Forums, the PACE report's recommendations on faculty compensation, and the first draft of a report on undergraduate admissions and financial aid.

The Senate unanimously voted the draft of an appreciative letter to James Frick, vice president of public relations, alumni affairs, and development, who recently announced his retirement at the end of the year.

Former EPA official faces contempt charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita M. Lavelle, former head of the Environmental Protection Agency's much-investigated hazardous waste program, defied a House subpoena yesterday and was warned she may be held in contempt if she continues to defy "the will of the Congress."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, said Ms. Lavelle — who was fired by President Reagan last week — will be given one more chance to cooperate with his panel's investigation into the $1.6 billion "superfund" program.

If she still refuses to appear, he said, she likely will be voted in contempt.

"The patience of the committee is wearing somewhat thin," said Dingell. "We will not tolerate acts which frustrate the will of the Congress."

Meanwhile, the White House issued a qualifier to Reagan's statement Wednesday that he would not assert executive privilege over documents sought in the growing number of congressional investigations of EPA.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan envisioned turning documents over to the Justice Department for review of possible wrongdoing, not to Congress.

"If there is any evidence of wrongdoing, the body to go to is not the Congress, but the Department of Justice, which enforces the law," Speakes said. "If the Department of Justice chooses to go to the Congress, that is their choice."

He added, however, that the administration was serious about pursuing the investigation.

"I can assure you from the top of this administration that the idea is, we will not shield documents that may contain allegations of wrongdoing or improper conduct, and the president has ordered from top to bottom that there be no cover-up."

Brubaker subject describes reform

By CECILIA LUCERO
Staff Reporter

"You can compromise on strategy, but never on principle," says Tom Murton, the prison reformer whose controversial approach to clean up the Arkansas penal system in the late 1960s became the subject of the movie Brubaker.

Murton says this philosophy, which was the central theme of Brubaker, should apply beyond prison reform.

Speaking to a capacity crowd last night at the Center for Social Concerns, Murton, 52, discussed his personal convictions towards prison reform and the sociological implications expressed in Brubaker.

Although portions of the movie were fiction, including Brubaker's clandestine investigation of Wakefield State Prison, these did not deviate from the social issues, according to Murton.

"Basically, the film deals with something unique in prison films. The contribution of Brubaker is that it is the first one that deals with some of these (prison reform) issues from a warden's point of view."

Murton, who served as technical director of the movie, criticized the opening scenes of Brubaker in which the warden investigates the prison undercover. In addition to unrealistically placing the character in a dangerous position, Murton says the warden deceives the people he has to reform.

"Positive relationships are built on some kind of respect or trust," he said.

"My notion of running a prison is diametrically opposed to the way prisons are run elsewhere. That is, all prisons are autocratic, dictatorial, quasi-fascist regimes. Not that the people running them are evil, but that's the way it's always been.

Forcing convicts to make their own decisions, through an inmate council, is "the only way to learn to make good decisions," according to Murton. The inmate council took charge of food production management and job assignments, among its other responsibilities.

Murton also discussed his short-lived career as the warden of a corrupt Arkansas penal system. Hired in 1967 by the late governor Winthrop Rockefeller to clean up the abuses of the Tucker Prison Farm, Murton produced considerable improvements after about ten months.

In January, 1968, he transferred to Cummins State Prison, Tucker's parent institution. Three weeks later, against Rockefeller's orders, Murton uncovered three skeletons buried in unmarked graves, in the presence of the media.

The warden alleged that the remains belonged to murdered prisoners and over two hundred more were buried.

Murton also claims that the governor had given his approval for the gravedigging episode, but requested that Murton wait to expose the corruption. Coincidentally, that year marked an election year in Arkansas.

"Justice delayed is justice denied," Murton said. According to Murton, the governor made an error in assuming prison reform as "a function of law."

Murton also criticized candidates who use prison reform in their campaign platforms. "Reformers of that nature are indistinguishable from that corrupt system that they try to reform," according to Murton. He believes that convictions for reform need a "strong religious or ethical base."

State officials threatened to indict Murton for graverobbing after the incident that exposed the scandal in Arkansas' penal system. Rockefeller instead fired Murton and asked him to leave the state. Since then, the penologist who holds a doctorate in criminology, has been denied positions in any prison system.

Murton does not regret his actions, however. "If I knew I was going to be fired, I'd have dug up all 200 graves."

The problem with the Arkansas system, Murton says, was that they asked him to compromise his principles, a direct contradiction to his philosophy. "In order to bring about social change, or any kind of change, you have to have two things. You have to have power and you have to have commitment."

Authorities fail again to capture tax militant

ASHLEY, N.D. (AP) — A convoy of police officers swooped into this prairie town of 1,200 people yesterday, sealed off the highways and searched several houses in another futile attempt to capture an anti-tax militant accused of killing two U.S. marshals.

An FBI agent accused "irresponsible" news reports of tipping the fugitive, Gordon Kahl, 63, that the police were heading for the town about 10 miles from the South Dakota border.

The convoy of 50 to 60 officers left an FBI command center in Jamestown just after dawn, warning reporters not to follow or risk being stopped by state police.

The police rolled into Ashley before 9 a.m. and set up a command post behind the McIntosh County Courthouse. They searched the homes of Mike Phillips, Len Martin and Dr. James Coleman, a veterinarian. Coleman's clinic and a small religious academy located in the same building also were searched.

All three men have been involved in a local anti-tax movement and are acquaintances of Kahl, authorities said.

Authorities say Kahl was active in Posse Comitatus, a right-wing paramilitary organization that opposes federal taxation.

Reporters who tried to follow the convoy were stopped at North Dakota Highway Patrol roadblocks on the four main highways leading into Ashley. But several reporters managed to get into town via back roads.

The FBI agent in charge of the operation, Richard H. Blay, said afterwards he believed Kahl was there but fled when reports were aired that the police convoy had left Jamestown.

It was the second major police action since the shootings of the two marshals Sunday. On Tuesday, up to 100 officers backed by an armored personnel carrier surrounded Kahl's former home near Heaton. They found a large arms cache, but no Kahl.

A collision between a tractor-trailer and a passenger car halted traffic on Philadelphia's Schuylkill Expressway Wednesday. Four people were injured in the accident which left the car crumpled under the trailer, and the tractor hanging about 30 feet over another traffic lane. (AP)

Academy announces nominees

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gandhi, the movie that no Hollywood studio wanted to make, captured top honors in the 55th Academy Award nominations yesterday, scoring in 11 categories, while Tootsie, and box-office champion E.T. were close behind.

Jessica Lange scored a rare double nomination: for best actress in Frances and best supporting actress in Tootsie. No actress had done that since Teresa Wright in 1942.

The biography of India's Mahatma Gandhi was nominated for best picture, for Ben Kingsley's starring performance and for the direction of Richard Attenborough, who tried unsuccessfully to sell the project to American film companies. After he made the film with English and Indian financing, Columbia Pictures agreed to release it.

Tootsie, another Columbia release, finished second-highest in nominations with 10, followed by E.T. — the Extra-Terrestrial, with nine. Both were selected for best picture, along with Missing, and The Verdict.

Dustin Hoffman was nominated as best actor for his performance in Tootsie as an out-of-work actor who becomes a star when he dresses as a woman and appears in a soap opera. Also nominated were Kingsley, Jack Lemmon of Missing, Paul Newman of The Verdict, and O'Toole of My Favorite Year.

Julie Andrews also won a nomination for switching sexes. She is a best actress contender for her masquerade as a male cabaret singer in Victor/Victoria. Other nominations include Jessica Lange, Frances; Sissy Spacek, Missing; Meryl Streep, Sophie's Choice, and Debra Winger, An Officer and a Gentleman.

Still another sex change provided a nomination as supporting actor for John Lithgow, the footballer turned female in The World According to Garp. Others include Charles Durning, The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas; Louis Gossett, Jr., An Officer and a Gentleman; James Mason, The Verdict, and Robert Preston, Victor, Victoria.

Four of the candidates for supporting actress were first-time nominees: Glenn Close, The World According to Garp; Teri Garr, Tootsie; Miss Lange, Tootsie, and Lesley Ann Warren, Victor, Victoria. Also named was Kim Stanley for Frances; she was nominated in 1964 as best actress in Seance on a Wet Afternoon.

Wolfgang Petersen was something of a surprise as nominee for his direction of the German-made submarine movie, Das Boot. Other directors nominated are Attenborough for Gandhi; Steven Spielberg, E.T.; Sydney Pollack, Tootsie; and Sidney Lumet, The Verdict.

The nominations were made by members of the individual craft branches of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences: writers voted for writing awards, actors for acting, etc. All members voted for best picture in the nominations, and all will vote in all categories for the final awards, to be presented April 11 at the Los Angeles Music Center.

Lyricists Alan and Marilyn Bergman scored three nominations for best song: "How Do We Keep the Music Playing?" from Best Friends; "If We Were in Love" from Yes, Giorgio, and "It Might Be You" from Tootsie. Also named: "Eye of the Tiger," from Rocky III, and "Up Where We Belong," from An Officer and a Gentleman.

Nicaragua's Alsino and the Condor was among the nominees for foreign language film, along with Coup de Torchon (Clean Slate) (France); The Flight of the Eagle (Sweden); Private Life, and Volver a Empezar (To Begin Again) (Spain).

Figures may signal recession's end

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory use is up for the first time in nearly a year, and fewer Americans are filing initial jobless claims, the government said yesterday. The reports spurred wider agreement that the recession has ended.

The new indicators followed President Reagan's claim Wednesday night that "as a result of the economic program we already have in place, the recovery is beginning to flex its muscle."

There is far from universal agreement about who should get credit for recovery, or blame for the long recession, but there no longer seems any doubt the rebound is under way.

Commenting after yesterday's reports were released, private analyst Allen Gutheim said, "Everybody's very upbeat all of a sudden."

Other officials and analysts had similarly encouraging comments after Wednesday reports that showed industrial production rising a strong 0.9 percent in January while new housing construction was leaping a record 36 percent.

Yesterday's Federal Reserve Board report said manufacturers operated at 67.8 percent of capacity in January, up one-half percentage point from December's 67.3 percent, which had been the lowest rate ever recorded.

Though the January operating rate still left factories running at little more than two-thirds of capacity, it marked the first monthly increase since last February and only the third in 18 months since the recession began.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said initial jobless benefit claims fell 7,000 to a total of 510,000 Americans in the first week of February. Claims had risen the previous two weeks but had fallen sharply just before that.

Gutheim, a senior economist with Wharton Econometrics, said recovery should mean increases in employment before long. But he also said the national unemployment rate could still rise slightly from January's 10.4 percent of the civilian work force before starting back down.

The factory-use report said two long-hurting parts of U.S. heavy industry, motor vehicles and iron and steel, increased their capacity utilization substantially in January's 3.5 percentage points for iron and steel and 1.5 points for automakers.

However, they were still operating at low levels: the auto industry at under 54 percent of capacity and iron and steel at less than 40 percent, the report indicated.

Reflecting the continuing worldwide "oil glut," producers of refined petroleum products cut their use of capacity one point further in January, reaching a record low of 66.1 percent.

Government figures for total capacity utilization as well as for individual categories go back to 1948.

A separate index in the new report indicated that total U.S. manufacturing capacity rose modestly in the fourth quarter of 1982 as it has risen throughout the recession. However, Gutheim said such figures, relying on reports from the manufacturers themselves, can sometimes be misleading.

He said that as a practical matter, some basic industries, certainly including iron and steel, probably are actually operating at greater-than-shown percentages of capacity. But that is only because they have not yet formally admitted some mills or factories can never reopen and are still listing them as usable capacity.

Still, Gutheim said, growing car sales, coupled with an expected surge in production of the appliances that will go in all those new houses being started, "can bring steel along very nicely (toward) some modest recovery this year."

The Federal Reserve report noted that although current operating rates are very low, even strong recoveries do not send rates near 100 percent. In fact, rates for manufacturing as a whole have exceeded 90 percent only in wartime, it said. The rate was 79.8 percent in July 1981 before beginning to decline.

Fires sweep S. East Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Fire brigades fought bush fires around Melbourne yesterday but controlled most of the conflagration that has swept across Australia's southeast coast like "a panzer division." Police said at least 69 people were killed.

"It was like a giant flame thrower," said one weary firefighter.

"The wind was like it came from a huge hair dryer," said a man who lost his house, one of 3,000 homes destroyed in seven towns that were consumed by wind-driven flames Wednesday and yesterday.

"A panzer division going through could not have caused so much damage," said Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser after an inspection tour.

More than 4,000 firefighters had most of the fires under control yesterday. Flames, fanned by gale-force winds, devastated 2,600 square miles of drought-stricken farmland, forest, and scrub along a 500-mile stretch of Australia's southeast coast in the states of South Australia and Victoria.

Exhausted firefighters were still battling outbreaks late yesterday in the hills around Melbourne, Australia's second largest city. Elsewhere, they remained on guard.

Police said 69 bodies had been found. With 46 bodies already found in Victoria and 23 in South Australia, police expected the total to exceed the 71 killed in Victoria in 1931 in the worst brushfire in Australian history.

Some people died in their automobiles, trapped as they tried to flee the flames.

Miami officer indicted for manslaughter

MIAMI (AP) — A Miami police officer surrendered yesterday after a grand jury indicted him for manslaughter in the shooting of a black man which ignited two days of racial violence in the Overtown slum.

Officer Luis Alvarez, named in the sealed indictment returned Wednesday night, was to be released on his own recognizance after processing, said Chief Dade Circuit Judge Gerald Wetherington.

Manslaughter is a second-degree felony punishable by up to 15 years in prison upon conviction.

An 18-member Dade County grand jury issued the indictment after a two-day investigation into the Dec. 28 shooting of Nevell Johnson Jr. at a video arcade. State prosecutors spent six weeks on the case before handing it to the panel Tuesday.

Wetherington noted that it was not unusual for manslaughter defendants to be freed before trial.

"In this kind of case, as a general rule, if a person doesn't have a criminal record, and he's a long-time resident of the community, release on recognizance is not unusual at all," he said.

Alvarez's attorney, Roy Black, said he will consider an attempt to move the trial outside of Miami.

Garth Reeves, editor of the black-oriented Miami Times newspaper, said the indictment would probably satisfy Miami's black community, although he had expected a harsher charge.

"For so long, police killings have gone unindicted, so this is a small victory of sorts for the black community," he said.

State Attorney Janet Reno, who announced last Friday that she would turn the matter over to the grand jury, said "I think our investigation was as thorough as possible and the grand jury was as thorough as possible. We will now proceed to prosecute."

Police said Alvarez and his partner, Louis Cruz, entered the video games room and noticed a bulge in Johnson's pocket that looked like a gun. Officials said the 21-year-old black man was shot in the head when he made a sudden movement after being ordered to freeze.

Alvarez and Cruz were relieved from duty with pay after the shooting, said police spokesman Mike Stewart.

Witnesses' statements to police and reporters differed over whether Johnson was armed.

Police initially called the shooting accidental. Black leaders considered it an unprovoked attack and demanded that Alvarez stand trial.

The shooting touched off looting, torching of cars and attacks on white motorists in the predominantly black Overtown neighborhood, located in the shadow of downtown Miami.

During the violence, a suspected looter was shot and killed by police and nearly 30 people were injured. Police made 37 arrests.

11-year-old girl

Indiana governor pleads for donor

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Robert D. Orr made an appeal yesterday for a heart donor for an 11-year-old Anderson girl accepted for transplant surgery at Stanford University Medical Center.

"This is a situation where we need to have some help," the Republican governor told reporters.

Orr held a news conference in his office with the young patient, Sharon Stohler, and her family in an effort to boost the search for a heart donor. If a donor is found, Sharon will be the youngest person in the country to undergo a heart transplant.

Sharon, a sixth grader at Anderson's Robinson Elementary School, suffers from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative disease of the major heart muscles. As a result of the disease, her heart is about the size of two grapefruits on top of each other.

The girl is confined to a wheelchair to conserve her strength. Her heart, which operates at only a fraction of the capacity of a normal heart, has left her physically weakened.

When she was wheeled into Orr's office, she greeted him with a cheerful "Hi, governor." Orr responded, "Hi, Sharon. Nice to see you."

The governor introduced himself to Sharon's parents, David and Barbara Stohler, and her two brothers, Christopher, 8, and Joseph, 4.

"I'm hopeful that we might be able to help Sharon in her quest for a new heart," he said. "We're hoping that this is something that can be found expeditiously so she can get well again."

Orr commiserated with the parents, saying, "it must be a very frustrating experience to sit and wait and not know whether there's going to be anybody who may be a potential donor."

Kevin Walsh, president of CILA, maintained that there were three reasons why CILA chose to support the bilateral freeze referendum: "The unilateral freeze didn't pass; right now, Notre Dame is not supporting any freeze, and this is a crucial issue. We would rather be on record as supporting a bilateral freeze than only turning down a unilateral freeze."

One of the focal points of the upcoming Justice in a Nuclear Future? convention (headed by O'Brien) will center around the purpose of weapons freezes and CILA wants Notre Dame to enter the conference "on a positive note."

"Some of us felt that the College Republicans used the bilateral freeze against the unilateral freeze, and we question their sincerity. We would like them to help sponsor this (bilateral freeze)."

When asked about possible campaign tactics for a bilateral freeze, Walsh replied, "We've planned very little. There's built-in information from films like Atomic Cafe and from articles in the Observer. We believe that the majority of students would support a bilateral freeze."

Young Democrat President Jim Malackowski announced early yesterday evening that his group had chosen to support the bilateral freeze.

In an open letter to the student body, Malackowski states, "Our organization believes that we must undertake serious, sustained efforts to produce substantial, equitable, and verifiable reductions of nuclear weapons to lower levels to lessen the possibility of nuclear war. A bilateral freeze with the Soviet Union would be a positive initial step toward this goal."

According to Malackowski, "no one was against the bilateral freeze," though the members were split over the unilateral freeze referendum which was defeated Feb. 8 by a 2853 to 1645 margin.

When asked about why the Notre Dame College Republicans were not a part of the bilateral freeze, College Republican President Mark Lynch stressed a unity with Republican Party politics.

"We have chosen not to take an official position. We'd never take a stand based on a show of hands," Lynch said.

Jim Malackowski explained that he was "surprised" when he discovered that the College Republicans would not support the bilateral freeze considering the emphasis which they placed on the dangers of a specifically unilateral freeze: "If they (College Republicans) don't come out in favor of the bilateral freeze, considering their statements during the unilateral freeze referendum, we (Young Democrats) see a huge inconsistency."

Melachowski cited an article in the Feb. 9 Observer in which the College Republican president said that many members of his group would support a bilateral freeze.

Joby O'Brien, president of Circle-K, said, "We just came up with the idea of the bilateral freeze after last week. We're just a service organization to benefit the community, and we feel this is an important thing to the social community at large."

family, Lonardo, Gallo and two others were convicted of running a multimillion-dollar drug ring.

FBI agents said Lonardo ran the family after its boss, James "Jack White" Licavoli, 78, was imprisoned last summer.

Joseph Griffin, FBI agent in charge for northern Ohio and a veteran Mafia investigator, said the Cleveland family began dying when it stopped recruiting young members.

According to Griffin, few new family members were "made" — formally inducted — during the reign of John Scalish, who was boss for 30 years until his death during heart surgery in 1975.

Licavoli succeeded Scalish, but also showed little interest in finding new members. An old man who began with Detroit's Purple Gang, Licavoli just wanted to play golf, says an FBI agent who requested anonymity because he works in undercover investigations of the Cleveland family.

"We ain't gonna have the power in the country that they have"

"They (Scalish and Licavoli) were old men who had made their money," the agent said. "They had no interest in the future."

It's a problem organized crime faces all over the country.

In testimony Wednesday before the Senate Judiciary Committee in Washington, a veteran police official said the major organized crime families face an uncertain future now that their founding godfathers are dead or retired.

Lt. Col. Justin J. Dintino, executive officer of the New Jersey State Police, said, "They're starting to hurt. They've got the second or third teams in there, and they're not doing a good job."

In addition to convictions in state and federal trials, members and allies in Cleveland were being lost to gang wars on two fronts — locally against rival mobster Danny Greene and in Youngstown against allies of Pittsburgh's Mafia family.

Gallo saw that the loss of members and the failure of Scalish and Licavoli to recruit meant key leadership roles would be vacant.

The family also was losing money. Griffin said, since each member was expected to pay regular tribute from his illegal activities.

Gallo and another captain, Thomas "The Chinaman" Sinito, 44, intended to rebuild the family's hierarchy.

"So now we got to fill that big void," Gallo told Triscaro on the tape.

At his trial, Gallo claimed he was talking about problems in the union, not in any crime family. But federal investigators said Gallo's comments showed he knew that without an orderly passing of power, the family would lose influence among national Mafia leaders.

"We ain't gonna have the power in the country that they have . . .," Gallo said in the taped conversation.

Sinito and Gallo decided on the most profitable of all illegal activities rug deals — to rebuild the family. It grew into a $15 million a year business with the help of Carmen Zagaria. He turned state's evidence. Zagaria described himself as a small-time dealer before he met Sinito and, through him, Gallo.

As part of his plea bargain, Zagaria will serve a minimum of about 14 years and as much as 30 years while continuing as a government witness, authorities said.

Gallo is not known to be related to Joseph "Crazy Joey" Gallo, the New York mobster who was mowed down by machine-gun fire at a restaurant in Little Italy in 1972.

Better late than never

Normally my columns are filled with strong opinions and sharp criticisms about situations that I would rectify or change in some way. I don't know if it is because of some strange atmospheric condition or the recent passage of Valentine's Day, but I seem to have been bitten by a bug of sentimentality. The main focus of my change in attitude is Junior Parents' Weekend. Like many members of the Class of 1984, my parents will be making the journey to Notre Dame this weekend.

Randy Fahs

JPW may seem like a strange thing to get sentimental about. We all get to put on jackets and ties or dresses so that we can go to a formal dinner at the ACC where we will be treated to reverberations from the REO Speedwagon concert in the adjacent dome. All this plus a speech from Father Hesburgh (I can hardly believe he'll be there — I guess the world will have to do without him for the weekend). It sounds like anything but an event to make someone feel sentimental.

The reasons for my feelings don't stem from what I'll be doing this weekend with my parents as the University tries to make this place seem like a cross between Fantasy Island and Catholic Disneyland. Rather, I tend to feel sentimental because of what my parents have been doing for me over the last 20 years.

Our daily lives find us far from home and terribly busy with classes, assignments, and friends. There are so many things going on that we often forget everything beyond our immediate sphere of contacts. We tend to act as though we live in a vacuum where we are the masters of our destiny and where outside occurrences are of little consequence to us.

Our youth, freedom, and presence at a place like Notre Dame is, in part, a result of our own efforts. But, let us not forget the all-important part played by our parents. We're all well aware that we have to thank them for our very lives (although I would imagine that some people are damning my parents for my existence). We should also remember the support and encouragement they also give, as well as the prices they've had to pay (tuition money doesn't grow on trees).

I, for one, would like to credit my parents for helping me to strive to be a wiser and more complete person. They encouraged me to try new things and they have helped me to realize heights which I felt were beyond my reach. I am especially thankful to them because they never used the word "impossible."

In essence, I'm trying to say that we all have many things to be proud of and grateful for in our daily lives. Sometimes the hustle and bustle keeps us from remembering the people standing behind us who have made so much possible in our lives. For me, the two people who are most responsible for my good fortune are my parents. Junior Parents' Weekend will be an atypical event in my relationship with my folks, but it will be special because it will be another chance for them to experience those things that all three of us have worked so hard to reach.

One other thing about this weekend that I find strange is that everyone will be trying so hard to be on their best behavior. As my father has often told me, "I was no angel and I know you aren't one either, so don't try to kid me about it."

And lastly, for those times when I have forgotten to acknowledge all they have done for me and meant to me, I would like to say, "Mom and Dad, I love you very much. Thanks for everything."

The Atomic Cafe Democracy plays tonight not an illusion

Dear Editor:

As part of the Social Concerns Film Series, The Atomic Cafe will be shown tonight at 7:30 in the Engineering Auditorium. The movie, which portrays the evolution of nuclear war, was chosen for the film series to increase awareness on this most vital issue.

The Atomic Cafe is a feature-length film created entirely from American atomic propaganda of the 1940's and 1950's. With no narration, it tells its story by juxtaposing excerpts from newly-discovered and rarely-seen government and military propaganda, television and radio shows, cartoons, and now-forgotten "bomb songs" that saturated the airways. The film then uses this material to reveal 15 years of concerted efforts by the U.S. government and media to mislead the American public on the subject of nuclear warfare and atomic weapons testing.

By turns ridiculous and horrifying, The Atomic Cafe is a comic nightmare, a Dr. Strangelove, a nuclear Reefer Madness. It lays bare government efforts to promote the beauty, accuracy and strategic necessity of the Bomb, and the survivability of atomic war through the use of fallout shelters, while belittling the dangers of A-test fallout and the dead-end finality of nuclear war.

"Though these films are from the '40's and '50's, it can be argued that many of the very same myths are being advanced today," says Pierce Rafferty, one of the filmmakers.

Never-before-released footage in The Atomic Cafe includes an Air Force interview with Colonel Paul Tibbets, the pilot of the atomic bomber Enola Gay which annihilated Hiroshima. "I was accused of being insane, of being a drunkard, of being everything that you might imagine a derelict to be," says Tibbets. "as a result of guilty conscience for doing this." Tibbets suggests that while the U.S. government might feel guilty about the bombing, he does not.

The Atomic Cafe is filled with graphic images of the official lunacy of the post-World War II period. However, the filmmakers insist upon the contemporary relevance of the historical material they have used in the movie.

Filmmaker Jayne Loader says, "Let's face it, propaganda is as pervasive today as it was then, if not more so." The filmmakers agree that if a healthy skepticism about official voices of reassurance comes out of viewing The Atomic Cafe, then the movie would be a satisfying accomplishment.

Center for Social Concerns

Dear Editor,

Though accepting some of Thomas Melsheimer's criticisms of the Begin government in Tuesday's Observer, we believe that he seriously distorts several key issues. The first point concerns Begin's motives for establishing the commission investigating the Beirut massacres. The Prime Minister did not agree to this step, as Melsheimer claims, because he was forced to appease "intense world criticism." He yielded primarily because of the public outcry in Israel calling for an independent investigation. Melsheimer also asserts that it is an "illusion" to call Israel "a pillar of freedom and democracy" because of the Begin government's policy. Democracy in Israel is no illusion. It is a tribute to the strength of Israeli democracy that a judicial body, appointed by Parliament, vigorously sought out rather than attempted to suppress the truth. Israel remains, contrary to Melsheimer's position, an open society, an American ally, and the only democratic state in the Middle East.

Melsheimer's comparison between the Nuremberg trials and the Israeli investigation is inept and misleading. Nazi war criminals planned and executed the atrocities with which they were charged. The Israeli military did not, on the contrary, order or participate in the Beirut massacres. Defense Minister Sharon permitted the Phalangists to enter the refugee camps, purportedly to root out suspected terrorists. The investigating commission censured him for that decision, refused to accept his defense that he could not have foreseen what would happen, and declared him to be directly responsible for the murders that followed. But it also made clear that Israeli officials did not intend the slaughter of civilians which occurred. The killings were executed by Lebanese Christians intent on retaliating for the assassination of President-elect Pierre Gemayel and the massacre of Christians by PLO forces during the Lebanese civil war. Melsheimer's allusion to Nuremberg implies that the actions of the government of Israel are comparable to those of Nazi Germany. This argument is discredited by the findings of the commission and the fact that it was an Israeli tribunal that held Israeli officials responsible for their actions.

Melsheimer concludes by expressing his hope for a more "rational, moderate government" in Israel. This position is defensible. But to move from an argument about current Israeli policy to the claim that democracy in Israel is an illusion is not. Melsheimer should have chosen his words more carefully.

Sincerely,

No need for fair trial?

Dear Editor,

In a letter to The Observer published on Monday, Father Claude Pomerleau writes: "The four missionaries murdered in El Salvador... were assaulted in various ways and shot by five members of the Salvadoran security forces. According to reliable testimony, they acted on orders. No one seriously expects a fair trial for the murderers."

Indeed, nor does it appear that Father Pomerleau, in his omniscience, sees any need for one.

Sincerely,
James Rakowski

Inconsistency in keg policy

Dear Editor,

Recently, the Hall Presidents Council was asked to support an aluminum can drive for the Northern Indiana State Hospital. Each hall was asked to collect aluminum cans. The proceeds of this drive would go to the hospital for the purchase of a new van for the handicapped. The HPC was informed that a keg on Green Field would be provided for the dorm that collects the most cans. This offer was made in conjunction with Dean Roemer. We think this is a very worthy cause and we commend Dean Roemer for his support. Nevertheless, we have some problems with the keg offer.

First of all, we believe the students at Notre Dame are very responsible and caring. These students support many worthy causes. We feel they do not need an incentive for this drive. On the other hand, perhaps the keg was meant as an adult offer for an adult group of students. In this sense, we appreciate the offer and hope this dialogue can continue.

Regardless of the motives behind such an offer, we are still not sure of the consistency of the University's alcohol policy. The administration advocates "responsible drinking" as well as a ban on kegs on campus. Then this same administration supports this offer

We are not arguing one way or another on the keg issue; we are merely questioning the administration's true intentions behind its attitude on alcohol. If our hall wins this "contest," we will refuse the keg. We value the offer, but we would rather see the cost of a keg go to the Northern Indiana State Hospital.

Sincerely,
Stanford Hall Council

Hospice thanks

Dear Editor:

"No one has ever become poor by giving," observed Anne Frank in her diary. And the Notre Dame students have personified that once again.

Over the Christmas season several halls took up collections during Mass for Hospice of St. Joseph County.

The response from the students (of Carroll, Farley, Pasquerilla East and Lyons, in particular) has been most impressive.

Hospice, as you know, is the home health care program which provides support — medically, psychologically and spiritually — for terminally ill patients and their families.

Thank you for your generosity and for extending the Notre Dame spirit of caring to Hospice.

Hockey blame

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the article "Hockey: Who's to blame?" by Chris Needles (Feb. 3). Bravo! Being a hockey fan myself and having personal ties with those on the team, I feel a great loss now that the program has been killed. I keep asking myself, "where is the justice?" All hopes and expectations thrown away because of Fr. Joyce's decision seems to me unjust. I question why. Could it be because hockey loses too much money, or because of one man's ignorance? It seems that money never got raised because Father Joyce wanted it that way. It is too bad that many have to suffer because of Joyce's opinion of hockey. As for student support, where's the promotion for games, game times, and cost? Blaming students just won't stick.

The Observer is to be thanked for publishing an article a lot of people appreciated. It expressed the same feelings that I and many others have had for a long time.

A 'Dear Bruce' letter

Dear Bruce,

I read your column Time-worn Formulas with a feeling of regret. At the times we have talked, neither of us ever mentioned the Church, the Lord, or the Catholic faith. We were busy, becoming friends. I never thought to ask you how you felt about religion. Often, in conversations, I do ask people if God has a place in their lives, or if they are going to Mass. It seems like part of caring for me to be concerned about faith.

Were you a little near-sighted when you spoke of old people? Faith says there is a love supporting all other loves, which never tires and never leaves us. The question is, not whether you believe in such a love, but whether the infinitely patient husband accompanying the childlike wife has found such a love.

I can imagine how tiresome the old bishop must have sounded. I can remember thirty years ago, being a young man listening to old men preach. Nowadays, I am one of the old men doing the preaching. May I suggest, as one who's been there, that you not let the official rhetoric fool you? The Gospel, as a love story, is remarkably beautiful. St. John the Evangelist writes: "For God so loves the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." These are well-worn words. The Gideons, who give away Bibles, call this verse of John 3:16 the most loved text in Scripture. Christians repeat such words until they accompany the beat of the heart, because they represent an essential truth. What a loss if we were condemned to believe that God does not love us, and He has not sent His Son. What hope would there be for a world without God's love, or without His Son born at Christmas, risen from the dead at Easter?

You may imagine that only the old need God, and that the young, being passionate, can get along without the God-myth. Love is one activity that young people are not necessarily better at than old people. Only the old can prove that they've stayed the course for a lifetime, sticking with a partner, for better or worse, for sixty years, or more. When you match the record of how well your grandfather loved your grandmother, you'll be old yourself. You have to be a veteran lover, to be an authority on love.

Love, writes St. Paul, is more perfect than faith, but it takes faith to find love. Do you think your tottering old bishop has the faith that has found love, or is his a geriatric case with hardening of the arteries? If there is a love that moves the sun and stars, could an old man using dusty language be closer to the heart of God than a bored young man who plays eye games with a child at Mass?

I'm glad you love the children, Bruce. For twelve years, I worked with the children at the Urchins' Mass. I would have cheated them if they had been brought to chapel just so that I could love them. Loving them so much, I wanted them to know that there was a better love than mine; a love that would be there if I wasn't with them, or if their parents weren't with them; or if they were no longer children, or if they were so grown up and lacking attractiveness, no person on earth would make eyes at them; or if they were so displeased with themselves, they couldn't raise their own eyes off the ground to see who was watching.

I told them of God's love in all the ways I could. After all the stories of Pooh-bear and the Velveteen Rabbit, and after all the celebrations like St. Valentine's and their birthdays, the best words I could think of were that God so loved the world, He sent His Son. . . . They were old words, like a formula, but for me, and I hoped for them, the words, that were also familiar to urchins in Xanadu, were the words of a love story with which they felt at home.

You mentioned the bishop's threats of fire and brimstone. He was really pulling out all the stops for New Year's. Fire and brimstone represent not so much God's mood, but some possible mood we could have toward ourselves. "At Communion," you write, "the young people took their evidence of God's grace out of the church, leaving me to search for faith." What if the little boy had stayed, and you kept ignoring his small beauty? What if, for a thousand times that morning, you deliberately looked away from that small child, and every other small child wanting to be noticed, and concentrated instead on the dark spots on the ceiling? What if every Sunday, for five thousand Sundays in your life and all the weekdays as well, you kept your eyes distracted from the children, until one morning, you woke up to find that all the earth's children — grieved and disappointed that your eyes never had time for them — had gone away and left you? At the same time, you felt a realization crashing down that a childless world was not a world worth having.

You might find regret like a firestorm beating down on your mind, and taste bitterness as acrid as the stench from a pit. That's the kind of warning preachers are offering, if they use the metaphors of fire and brimstone.

Bruce, I don't have the slightest fear that you are in danger of fire and brimstone. Knowing your kindness, I don't think you are far away from feeling God's essential love. I love you too dearly to feel the need to convert you. But I think you should consider that the liturgy is one of the thousand ways God has of touching so that we can understand how we are loved. Children touch us. Flowers touch us. The weather in its variable mood touches us. God's unambiguous word touches us like the promises of the marriage vows. The Mass reminds us that even God's Son doesn't win all the battles, but that He was never defeated; and because of His coming, He makes it clear that we are the children who have caught His Father's eye.

Peek-a-boo is a game the Lord plays. Peek-a-boo, if you think of it, is one of the rituals of the game of faith.

Sontag is an essayist, playwright and novelist from New York. Previously she has lived in Arizona and California, where she attended the University of California at Berkeley. She received her undergraduate degree from the University of Chicago and her Master of Arts and Ph.D. in Philosophy from Harvard. Sontag's style combines modernism with themes that are an expression of her own taste. Her writing always contains an element of the unexpected, moving in seemingly devious directions, yet remaining perfectly rational. Her novels include The Benefactor and I, etcetera. Sontag also wrote On Photography, and Under the Sign of Saturn along with the film script, Duet for Cannibals.

Carroll is from Manhattan's Lower East Side and has been exposed to the drugs and petty crime that runs rampant in that area. He attended Wagner College and Colorado University, yet his writing reflects his New York background.

Probably best known as a poet and lyricist, Carroll is associated with the Jim Carroll Band, and wrote the songs "People who Died" and "Dry Dreams." His best known novel is Basketball Diaries, which he started at the age of 13. The novel addresses New York street life.

Richard Brautigan

An author who avoids publicity, Brautigan lives in a Montana Aranchhouse and writes stories of failed American dreams. His writing was strongest in the 1960's as his works reflected the feelings of the time's dissatisfaction with life. Brautigan never attended college, yet his writing is felt to be a combination of genius, humor and compassion.

His works include, Trout Fishing in America, which is required reading in many high schools. Other books known to most people are Watermelon Sugar and Hawkline Monster.

What February activity includes seven guest speakers, a committee of six sophomores, and lots of fun for the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community? The Sophomore Literary Festival, of course!

Preparations for this year's festival trace back to last summer when invitations were sent to different authors. As replies began to trickle in, the committee collected thoughts on a unifying structure, or theme. Speakers were selected. Contracts were distributed. These few sentences summarize approximately seven months of hard work on the committee's part.

Anna Kim, in charge of publicity and advertising explained one aspect that makes these months of work especially difficult. Big name authors usually retire from speaking after they become well known. This means that the committee has to think of authors that are well known, but not so popular that they won't speak. Not an enviable task. This year's committee did invite John Updike and James Michener, but were refused.

Sometimes, there are personal rewards for work on the committee. One author, Joel Oppenheimer, who shares his hometown with one of the committee members, was unable to attend the festival due to sickness. Instead, he invited the committee member to visit for drink the next time he was home. Instances like this make all of the work even more worthwhile.

This year's festival committee is chaired by Brian Ulicny and includes Anna Kim, publicity and advertising; Rich Lewis, finances; Ray Davis, programs; Jim Greene, travel arrangements; and Susie St. Ville, hospitality. Professor John Matthias advises the group and helped make contacts with some of the authors.

Each author who does speak is provided with transportation and lodging. He or she also receives a standard lecture fee that was agreed upon earlier. The festival has no "real" budget according to Kim. Individual donations fund the festival. Any person who donates a dollar or more has his name placed in the program as a sponsor. The authors' publishers also contributed. Assistant Provost Sr. John Miriam Jones helped in finding additional needed funds.

The authors attending the literary festival will lecture in the library auditorium, and will follow it up with a workshop the ensuing afternoon. The workshops are to be held in the library lounge, a much more intimate atmosphere conducive to question asking. This is one part of the festival no one should miss.

This year's authors are a well rounded group. The selection includes poets, playwrights, critics, and even a song writer. Showcase highlights each of the speakers on its pages, today. For more information on any of the writers, refer to the reserved book section of the library. They have a selection of most of the books written by the authors on reserve.

MOVIES

It's movie time again at the Engineering and Annenberg Auditoriums. For those freshmen, sophomores, and seniors who are watching their fellow junior domers treating their parents to a weekend of fun and festivities under the protection of Mary's beaming smile, there are a few bits of cinematic fare from which an enjoyable evening may be obtained. In the Engineering Auditorium tonight at 7 and 9:30 p.m., Atomic Cafe will be shown. This is a one night showing so don't put it off. Tomorrow night at 7, 9 and 11 p.m. George Burns and John Denver star in Oh God, Book 1. The octegenarian Burns seemingly will never give up the limelight. The role of God puts him right in the center of life and activity. This is a good, fun flick, an up-beat way of starting the backside of a weekend.

The Friday Night Film Series brings to the screen the first Chinese-American film, Chan is Missing. Director Wayne Wong portrays a milieu never before seen authentically on the screen. The suspense plot uses semidocumentary footage in much the same way as neorealism. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. and admission is $2.

CHAUTAUQUA

What do you do on Junior Parents Weekend if you are a freshman or a sophomore? While all the juniors are being treated to lavish dinners at downtown eating establishments, we are stuck with the typical dining hall fare. While we waste away our weekend hours looking at the homework that still needs to be done, the juniors are partying with their parents. Well, who says that we can't too? We can, and the place to do it is Chautauqua. Another Chance to Dance will be presented in the Ballroom, sponsored this week by Howard and McCandless halls. There will be door prizes (albums) and free Coke, Tab and Sprite to drink. The time to be there is 9:30 p.m. and the cost is a measly $1. Say hi to the DJ when you get there.

NAZZ

Not all the juniors will be relaxing with their parents tonight. Some of them will be working tonight, in particular, Tim Keyes of the band Par 3 which will be performing in the Nazz from 9 until they can't play no more. Tim will be joined by his brother Jim "amateur angler" Keyes and Scott O'Grady. This dynamite trio was recently featured in The Keenan Revue and has performed in various homes and at Senior Bar. Join Tim's parents in the Nazz tonight to listen to the sounds of Par 3. Then, tomorrow night, a rhythm and blues band will fill the underground of the Nazz. Pat Andrews, Al Dube, Bob Maravich, Linda Potts, and Doug Regan will play from 9 until? (John Warnock's favorite way of saying "whenever").

Adrenalin pumping

Adrenalin is pumping, or at least it will be tonight when the Detroit band, Adrenalin performs at Senior Bar taking the stage at 9:30 p.m. The sweet juices of success are flowing for Adrenalin now since the band has picked up a new lead vocalist, Marc Gilbert, after the suicidal death of David Larson and are bouncing back with full force. Within the past few months Adrenalin signed a contract with Polygram Records to release an album of original material.

One of the most popular club bands in Detroit, Adrenalin is bringing its electricity to Notre Dame tonight to rouse students with their original material. Be there for some heart pounding entertainment.

Journeyman driver hurt at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Journeyman driver Bruce Jacobi was critically injured yesterday in one of two spectacular cartwheeling crashes that marred the Uno Twin 125-mile qualifying races for the Daytona 500.

Neil Bonnett and Dale Earnhardt maneuvered through the accident-filled sprints and overtook two of racing's biggest names, Richard Petty and A.J. Foyt, on the last laps to win the qualifiers and earn second-row starts in Sunday's $1 million Grand National stock car race.

Pole-winner Ricky Rudd and Geoff Bodine clinched the front-row positions by posting the fastest qualifying speeds Monday.

The 47-year-old Jacobi, from Speedway, Ind., suffered what a Speedway spokesman described as a brain injury. He was taken to Halifax Hospital, where he underwent a CAT scan and was listed in critical but stable condition in the intensive surgical care unit. His mishap was in the first 125-mile race.

Rusty Wallace, from Valley Park, Mo., in the second race, was involved in a crash that was virtually a carbon copy of Jacobi's, and he also was taken to the hospital. The track spokesman said the 26-year-old Wallace was being held overnight for observation after suffering a strained neck and a mild concussion.

Jacobi, married and the father of three, is a veteran of numerous U.S. Auto Club racing events, including Indy cars, championship dirt cars, stocks and sprint cars, but had not run in a NASCAR grand National stock car race since 1976.

Jacobi ran 15 Grand National events in 1975 and three more in 1976. His best finish was an eighth-place in the Talladega 500 in August of 1975.

He made it into his qualifying race this week by posting a fast lap of 184.268 mph during time trials.

He was running alone when his Grand Prix ran off the inside of the track coming off the second turn. As it flipped through the infield grass, the top was torn off the car — leaving only the steel roll-cage — and both ends were badly mangled.

Wallace's Buick Regal wound up in similar shape.

A second crash in the opening race and several other tangles in the second qualifier were less serious. No injuries were reported.

The qualifying victories were worth $18,000 each to Bonnett and Earnhardt, and 14 of the top 15 finishers in each race on Daytona's 2.5-mile, high-banked trioval earned starting places in Sunday's 500.

Earnhardt averaged 154.746 mph in the first race, while Bonnett finished the 50 laps with an average of 122.183.

Bonnett, who won $50,000 Monday in capturing the Busch Clash, slipped his new Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS past Petty, a seven-time Daytona 500 winner, two turns from the end and held off a strong move by Petty's Pontiac Grand Prix to take the second race by three-quarters of a car length.

"When I was leading the race, I knew I couldn't lead and win it. So I thought I'd follow Richard and try to get around him (at the end)," Bonnett said.

"I'm going into the race with the intention of finishing. I hope to be there on the last lap and do it one more time."

In the first race, Earnhardt, with drafting help from Buddy Baker, whipped his 1983 Ford Thunderbird around Foyt on the backstretch of the last lap.

Foyt's Monte Carlo SS took over the top spot on the 28th lap of the first race and stayed there until the lead pack came down he backstretch on the 50th lap. At that point, the second-place Earnhardt and third-place Baker pulled low on the track and, using their own draft, shot past Foyt.

"I sat there until it was time," said Earnhardt, the 1980 Winston Cup champion. "I didn't know if I could draft by him (Foyt). I didn't try it down the backstretch.

"Then, I had to worry about Buddy, but he ran out of racetrack."

Kyle Petty, Richard's son, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix, also got past the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner and finished third as Foyt was unable to try a slingshot move because of slower traffic on the inside lane.

Foyt finished fourth, followed by Joe Ruttman, Harry Gant, Rudd, David Pearson and Bill Elliott.

Commish moves to avert strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association, threatened with a possible walkout by its players on April 1, said Thursday it was hopeful the union will agree to a revenue-sharing plan among teams "to help ensure the stability of the league."

"We think a strike would do great harm to the sport," said a spokesman for Commissioner Larry O'Brien after Larry Fleisher, the union's general counsel, set the deadline.

"If we don't have an agreement by then," Fleisher said, "the players will take all the necessary action, including a strike, to protect the best interests of all the players."

The NBA spokesman, who declined to be identified, noted that NBA players average $246,000 a year, while the 23 teams have lost more than $700,000 a year.

"We could have had a basic agreement with a cost-of-living clause included," the spokesman said, "but the decision was made early on to tie salaries to team revenues to help ensure the stability of the league."

O'Brien admitted for the first time Wednesday that the severity of the league's financial difficulties might cause some franchises to fold, be sold or be merged.

He did not identify the teams, but Cleveland, Indiana, Utah and San Diego are believed to be in the most jeopardy.

In an effort to reduce player costs, the NBA proposes to limit each team's player payroll to approximately $4 million a season. The league then would create a fund, in addition to individual salaries that would be financed by a fixed percentage of NBA revenues, and would be disbursed to the players in accordance to a formula established by the union.

"The owners are talking about how they're going out of business and that we are going to give back a lot to save the league," Fleisher said. "We are not going to do that. They are still demanding to take away virtually all of the benefits won by the players over 15 years of collective bargaining."

The NBA spokesman said Fleisher had seemed receptive toward the revenue-sharing plan after being provided with the league's financial data, "but now it seems he has a credibility problem."

Fleisher said the league was "demanding that the system of free agency agreed upon in the 1976 Oscar Robertson antitrust suit be modified."

The Robertson settlement established the right of first refusal, in which a free agent can negotiate with every team in the league and then present the best offer to his former club.

The old club has 15 days to match the offer or allow the player to leave. But under the owners' plan, any club that had a payroll above the limit would be prohibited from signing a free agent, thus restricting the mobility and bargaining power of a player not under contract.

Among the union's demands are first-class air travel, the elimination of funding for pension plans, severance-pay programs, life, medical and health insurance.

Seeds advance in Memphis tennis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Third-seeded Gene Mayer dropped the first set before steamrolling his way over Henri LeConte of France yesterday in the third round of the $315,000 U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Also advancing was the No. 4 seed, France's Yannick Noah, who recovered from a leg injury to defeat Buster Mottram of England.

Mayer eliminated LeConte 1-6, 6-0, 6-0, while Noah stopped Mottram 7-5, 6-2.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors met No. 15 Raul Ramirez of Mexico in a night match.

In other early matches, No. 8 Eliot Teltscher ousted Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-0; No. 10 Brian Gottfried toppled Fritz Buehning 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, and No. 11 Brian Teacher advanced when Chip Hooper was forced to retire with tendinitis of the left knee.

Teacher was leading 7-6, 4-3 when Hooper, who had his knee bandaged earlier in the second set, had to quit.

The hard-hitting LeConte, a member of the French Davis Cup team, completely dominated Mayer in the opening set, with Mayer only able to hold serve in the second game.

Mayer, however, made adjustments, and LeConte's game fell apart. Where he couldn't miss in the first set, the 19-year-old Frenchman couldn't find the court in the next two sets.

"I was playing him just standard on his serve in the first set, and he was passing me on the forehand side and passing me on the backhand side," said Mayer, who also defeated LeConte in the Davis Cup finals in November in Grenoble, France, as the United States retained its title. "After a while, I started gambling on his serve, guessing which side he was going to serve to."

Noah, the star of the French Davis Cup squad, suffered tendinitis in his left leg just above the knee on Wednesday, necessitating a cortisone injection. But the injury caused him no problems yesterday as he advanced to the quarterfinals.

Mottram, who upset Noah in the second round last year, took a 5-4 lead in the first set before Noah ripped off the next three games to take the lead. Noah then broke his opponent in the first and fifth games en route to his victory.

The Irish runners will take a giant step toward the IC4A's and nationals later this season when they take part in the Central Collegiate Conference meet in Kalamazoo beginning today. Dean Sullivan assesses Irish chances on the back page. (Photo by Scott Bower)

King slates boxing title doubleheader

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes and Michael Dokes will defend their shares of boxing's biggest title May 20 in a unique doubleheader, the first time both halves of the heavyweight crown go up for grabs on the same card.

Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion, will fight Tim Witherspoon in a 12-round bout, the new length mandated by the WBC.

And in a different city, Dokes, who won the World Boxing Association title in a controversial one-round bout Dec. 10, is giving former champ Mike Weaver a rematch. That fight is scheduled for 15 rounds. Holmes said he would demand a 15-rounder, too.

Among the sites under consideration for the fights and companion bouts are Reno and Las Vegas, Nev., Miami, Seattle, Anchorage, Alaska, and East Rutherford, N.J. Promoter Don King, announcing the fights at a boisterous brunch and news conference Thursday, would not reveal the amount of the purses.

Preceding Holmes-Witherspoon will be Greg Page vs. Renaldo Snipes in what King called an "elimination bout" for the U.S. Boxing Association heavyweight title and a shot at the WBC crown. Dokes-Weaver will be preceded by Ossie Ocasio defending his WBA cruiserweight title against Randy Stephens.

The fights will be shown on closed-circuit television in theaters and on home TVs equipped with special boxes to unscramble the satellite transmission. They are the first offering of Reserved Seat Video Productions, a joint venture of ABC video Enterprises and ESPN, the all-sports network. The fights may also be shown on home TV on a tape-delayed basis.

"Two at the scene and one on the screen," is how King described the two-city set-up, each receiving the other's heavyweight title bout.

Holmes, unbeaten in 41 pro bouts with 31 knockouts, was unquestionably the co-star of the brunch, along with the typically flamboyant King.

Non-winner grabs early lead in golf

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Jon Chaffee, a non-winner on the tour, fired a 7-under-par 65 for the early lead in the first round of the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open yesterday.

Chaffee, playing on Torrey Pines' less demanding North Course, sank a 15-foot putt on his last hole for his second eagle of the day.

Scott Simpson finished six under, and Bob Gilder was five under at 67.

Bruce Fleisher and Tom Jenkins were six under and still on the course.

Lon Hinkle, one of the early finishers on the South Course, had a 4-under 68.

Chaffee, a third-year pro who currently ranks 150th on the money list with $827, played the back nine first, finishing with an eagle after putting a 1-iron shot within three feet.

Chaffee, 27 and playing in San Diego for the first time, completed the three par-5s in 6-under-par.

Ben Crenshaw, playing on the more demanding South Course, made the turn in 32. Crenshaw, who was third in the Hawaiian Open last week, was helped by four birdies.

Tom Watson, who is bidding to become the first three-time winner at San Diego, had an even-par 72 on the tougher South Course.

Watson, saying his touch was missing, said slow greens and occasional crosswinds kept him from getting started.

Loss to Sabres

Streak breaker no big deal: Peeters

BOSTON (AP) — Pete Peeters didn't make a big deal about his unbeaten streak while it was alive, and he didn't make a big deal about it after it died. For Boston's brilliant goalie, life goes on with few changes.

'It's not a great disappointment. It's not something that's going to set me on a downfall... I'm happy with my teammates.'

The Sabres beat the Bruins in Buffalo Wednesday night, 3-1, ending Peeters' streak at 31 games. That's one less than the National Hockey League record held by Gerry Cheevers, now Boston's coach.

But Peeters still likes his teammates, will stick to his roving style of goaltending, doesn't plan to let the loss get him down and remains the NHL's most successful goalie.

"It's not a great disappointment," he said. "It's not something that's going to set me on a downfall... I'm happy with my teammates because I really believe they gave it all they had."

It was Nov. 11 when Peeters previously tasted defeat, losing 3-2 to Quebec. He was 26-0-5 during the streak, when his goals-against average was 1.94. For the season, he leads the league with a 2.15 goals-against mark and seven shutouts.

"Tonight's game doesn't make him a bad goalie. He's still the premier goalie in the game of hockey," Cheevers, who was eager to lose his own record, said Wednesday night.

Peeters reached that status by resuming his wanderings from the cage after three years in Philadelphia, where coaches restricted him from leaving the net to chase pucks.

Against Buffalo, one such journey helped snap Boston's unbeaten streak at 15-0-2.

Peeters skated to the face-off circle to his right for a puck bouncing off the boards. It eluded him, and Phil Housley scored before Peeters could return to his cage. It made the score 2-0 with 43 seconds gone in the final period.

"I thought it was going to bounce toward me and it bounced away from me, so I had to really scramble to get to it," Peeters said. "I did get to it and chopped it away to the wing and we lost possession there, and by then I was so far out of the net that I could only keep on playing and hope he misses."

But Peeters isn't about to chain himself to the net posts.

"Earlier, in the first period, I was roaming the net and taking complete control of the game behind the net, getting us out of situations where we were in trouble. So, there's pluses to it and minuses to it, but I think the pluses outweigh the minuses," he said.

After the game, Peeters smiled and chatted more than his downcast teammates.

The streak "meant more to them than it did to me," he said after being surrounded by congratulatory Bruins after Buffalo scored with 11 seconds to play.

Duke: no comment on Knight's beef

CHICAGO (AP) — Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke, said yesterday he had no comments on any incidents involving Indiana Coach Bobby Knight following the Hoosiers' 58-57 loss to Iowa Wednesday night.

Knight supposedly made some remarks to Duke, who was attending the game, about the officiating during the final minute of the game.

"I talked to Coach Knight at some length after the game and I also talked to Coach (Lute) Olson (Iowa) after the game. I always talk to the coaches about the aspect of the game and the aspect of the officiating. But I have no additional comments to make," said Duke who was reached by phone in Indianapolis where he was attending a meeting.

Harper led the charge, gathering 16 second half points, including a string of eight consecutive points midway through the period.

Illinois' point total was its highest of the Big Ten season, besting the 87 points collected against the Wolverines at Ann Arbor January 29.

Other Illinois scorers in double figures were Efreim Winters with 19 points, Doug Altenberger with 15 and Anthony Welch with 12. Michigan's leading scorer was sophomore guard Eric Turner with 23 points. Richard Rellford added 11 for the Wolverines.

Marquette 68, Wis. 62

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Glenn Rivers scored 11 of his 19 points in the second half yesterday as Marquette University squeaked to a 68-62 nonconference basketball victory over underdog Wisconsin.

Rivers hit two free throws to give Marquette (17-6) a 54-47 with 5:05 to play. But Brad Sellers, scoring 21 points, hit three free throws to boost the Badgers (7-14) to within four points.

Terry Trotter hit two free throws for a 56-50 Marquette lead. Wisconsin freshman guard Rick Olson scored two baskets to close the margin to 56-54 with 3:03 remaining.

Rivers and Olson traded baskets, and Terry Reason scored his first field goal of the game for the Warriors as Marquette took a 60-56 lead.

Sellers hit his two free throws, but Trotter and Reason scored two layups to give the Warriors some breathing room.

Terrell Schlundt scored 16 of his 19 points in the first half to lead Marquette to a 32-26 halftime advantage.

Cory Blackwell had 21 points for the Badgers before fouling out with 3:42 left in the contest.

Wisconsin led 8-6 as Blackwell scored six points. Schlundt fired Marquette to an 8-2 spurt for a 14-10 lead.

Daye's 18 leads UCLA to victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darren Daye scored 18 points and Brad Wright added 15 to lead No. 10 UCLA to a 99-86 Pacific 10 Conference victory over Stanford last night at Pauley Pavillion.

The Bruins, who improved their record to 18-3 on the season and 10-1 in the Pac-10, displayed a balanced attack with seven players scoring in double figures. Kenny Fields and Rod Foster had 14 apiece, and Ralph Jackson, Michael Holton and Gary Maloncon scored 10 each.

Keith Jones and Hans Wichary scored 22 and 20 points respectively for the Cardinal, which dropped to 4-7 in Pac-10 play and 12-9 on the season.

UCLA led 21-18 after 13 minutes of play and then outscored Stanford 14-6 in the next four minutes to take a 35-24 lead.

UCLA led 43-34 at the half but Stanford crept to within five at 47-42 with 17 minutes remaining. UCLA then went on a 17-4 scoring spurt to take a 64-46 lead. Stanford rallied again and got to within six points at 85-79 with two minutes to go, but UCLA pulled away for good.

Stanford continued its record of having never defeated UCLA in Pauley Pavilion and has not beaten the Bruins in Los Angeles since 1952.

UCLA leads the overall series with Stanford 101-65.

After a free throw by Michigan State's Derek Perry made it 55-52 with 1:08 left, Cross converted on slam dunks at the 46-second mark and again 20 seconds later to give Purdue a 59-52 edge.

Michigan State closed to within 59-55 on a free throw by Scott Skiles and a rebound basket by Ralph Walker at the 22-second mark. But Steve Reid canned two more free throws in the closing seconds to ice the win for Purdue.

The Boilermakers are now 16-6 overall and 7-5 in the conference, two games behind front-running Indiana. State slipped to 11-10 and 4-7 in the league.

Cross, who hit 11 of 12 from the field and 9 of 13 from the foul line, was the only Purdue player to finish in double figures. Reid added eight.

Skiles, who led Plymouth High School to the Indiana boys high school basketball title last year, topped Michigan State with 14 points. He connected on three three-point field goals.

Kevin Willis added 12 for the Spartans and Sam Vincent, who was averaging 16.8 points per game, was limited to 10.

Michigan State led 32-31 at halftime. There were five lead changes in first four minutes of second half.

Purdue took the lead for good at 45-43 with 13 minutes left when Cross scored off a rebound.

The Boilermakers enjoyed a 15-7 advantage after five minutes of play, but Michigan State ran off a 10-2 burst to tie the score at 17. The remainder of the half saw the Spartans fight their way back.

They went to the lockerroom ahead after Patrick Ford canned two free throws with 23 seconds left in the opening half.

Ohio St. 71, N. U. 55

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Twentieth-ranked Ohio State, led by Tony Campbell's 21 points, pulled away late in the second half last night to beat Northwestern 71-55 and move within one game of Indiana, the Big Ten Conference basketball leader.

The Buckeyes improved their league record to 8-4 and their overall mark to 16-6, avenging an earlier 66-64 defeat at Northwestern.

Campbell, a 6-7 junior forward, hit seven of 15 field goal attempts, seven straight free throws and collected eight rebounds before leaving the game with more than five minutes to play and the Buckeyes owning a 62-42 cushion.

Jim Stack, whose three-point play at the buzzer beat Ohio State in their first game this season, led the Wildcats with 21 points. Northwestern fell to 5-7 in the league and 14-8 overall.

Northwestern gave Ohio State a struggle early in the first half until Joe Concheck's three-point goal gave the Buckeyes a 9-8 lead. Ohio State built that into a 30-24 halftime lead.

Illinois 91, Michigan 71

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Derek Harper scored 25 points to lead Illinois to a 91-71 Big Ten Conference victory over Michigan last night.

The Illini won broke a two-game losing streak and boosted their record to 7-5 in the conference and 17-8 overall. Illinois now is tied for third place in the Big Ten.

The Wolverine loss was their sixth in the last seven games and dropped their record to 3-8 in the Big Ten and 12-9 for the season.

Illinois scorched the nets for the first 10 minutes of the game, jumping off to a 16-4 lead with 13:29 to go and later, a 26-10 advantage halfway through the first period. But Michigan whittled away at the lead and reduced it to 36-31 at halftime.

The Illini resumed their hot shooting in the second half, pushing their lead to 77-51 with 3:18 to go.

Women aim for 'best in Midwest'

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Best in the Midwest.

That is the title the Notre Dame women's basketball team is shooting for as it heads toward the end of its third season. Gaining that title may be necessary if the Irish hope to gain a bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Notre Dame's chances to be best in the Midwest are mostly in its own hands. The teams that stand in the way to the bid are on the Irish schedule in the next few weeks. Illinois State and Indiana are the two major obstacles, but teams like Bradley and DePaul also have the ability to kill the Notre Dame hopes.

Once again, the Irish are going to have to show that they can bounce back from a loss, as they play for the first time since the thrashing at the hands of No. 1 Louisiana Tech. To this point in the season, they have reacted well to losses, but they cannot afford to put themselves in that situation anymore.

This weekend will give a good indication of whether Notre Dame is up to the challenge as it travels to central Illinois to take on Bradley University and Illinois State.

The Braves from Bradley will be tonight's test. Currently 13-11 in the Gateway Athletic Conference, the Braves feature a high-scoring offense. Their average of 85 points per game has been ranked in the Top 20 for most of the year.

"Bradley has a high-powered offensive attack," says Irish coach Mary DiStanislao. "In fact, it has as explosive an offense as we'll face all year."

The offense is built around one person — 5-6 sophomore guard Judy Burns, a teammate of Notre Dame forward Trena Keys at Marion High School. Burns has been scoring 23 points a game this season and has been among the leading scorers in the country all year.

"All their offense is designed for Burns to score," says DiStanislao. "They like to run clearouts and isolate her one-on-one with the defense. She likes to spin and does most of her scoring with the ball (dribbles herself into position for a shot)."

Still, Burns does get a lot of offensive help from her teammates. Her partner in the backcourt, 5-8 senior Karen Anderson, averages more than 15 points every game after compiling a 21-point average last year. She is also a rebounding threat, pulling down 6.4 rebounds a game.

Roxanne Grabow, a 5-11 senior center, leads the Bradley front line. Scoring more than 13 points a game, Grabow has also averaged almost 10 rebounds an outing.

Junior Mandy Neal gives Grabow some support from the forward position. Despite playing at a height disadvantage (she's only 5-9), she has contributed more than 10 points and six rebounds a game.

Patty Bontz rounds out the Bradley starting five. The 5-8 senior forward has chipped in 6.4 points and four rebounds per game.

Bradley coach Joe Stowell is trying to do the same thing as DiStanislao — build a good program. After posting an impressive 19-8 record last year, the Braves have joined a conference with some very good teams like Illinois State and Drake. The upgrading of the schedule is evident in the unimpressive 13-11 record.

Normal, Ill. will be the site of the Illinois State matchup. This game may turn out to be one of the more important games this year as the Redbirds bring a good record (15-7 before Wednesday night's game against Wisconsin) and impressive performances against some of the best teams in the country.

Illinois State, like Bradley, is a member of the Gateway Conference. It is the conference leader and is coming off a 15-point loss to Louisiana Tech. Earlier this season, it dropped a six-point decision to No. 6 Old Dominion at Norfolk, Va.

"Illinois State has a lot of weapons," says DiStanislao. "Height-wise we match up pretty well, but they play a tough, physical inside game and have some good outside shooters."

The Redbirds depend on the scoring of their front-line players, especially Cathy Boswell, an All-American last year. The 5-11 senior is currently leading the team with a 15-point scoring average. She also has been pulling down a team-high eight rebounds every game.

"Boswell pretty much has her run of the offense," says DiStanislao. "She posts up, she'll drive, and she'll shoot from the perimeter. She's definitely the focal point of their offense, but it's not like Bradley where you'll stop one player and stop the team."

Debbie Benak and Dawn Hallett are the reasons for this. Benak, the 6-0 center, has helped out Boswell up front by pouring in 13 points a game. A good example of her offensive potential is the fact that she scored 14 points in the first half against Louisiana Tech's Debra Rodman.

The 5-10 Hallett, Boswell's partner at teammate, is the third Redbird in double figures, averaging 12.5 points a game. She has a good outside shot, allowing Boswell and Benak some room underneath.

The guard positions are filled by two 5-7 players. Senior Jan Bowers averages almost seven points a game, while her teammate Cathy Beesley is the outside scoring threat.

The Bradley and Illinois State games will begin the final stretch of regular season games for Notre Dame. Last year at this time, the team tired out and dropped its final five games of the season, losing any chance at a tournament bid. DiStanislao and the players realize that they must avoid the collapse this year.

"We have to finish stronger than last year," says Irish guard Laura Dougherty. "We know that we have to be the best in the Midwest if we're going to make the tournament."

This weekend will tell a great deal about whether Notre Dame will, indeed, be Best in the Midwest.

At Columbus

Irish look for revenge against red-hot OSU

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — One of the hottest teams in the nation will oppose the Notre Dame hockey team this weekend. Ohio State, holder of second place in the CCHA and ranked 10th in the country, has lost just once in its last 20 games.

The two teams last met in early December at the ACC, and the Buckeyes swept the Irish by scores of 6-4 and 6-5. In that series, the Irish were outthrusted both offensively and defensively. The team was also without the services of standout defenseman Sean Regan.

Regan has since returned, and the defense has looked much better. Coach Lefty Smith indicates, though, that improvement is still necessary.

"We're hopeful that we can cut down on some of the turnovers in our own end," says Smith. "We're also hoping that we can prevent some shots; we gave up far too many shots last weekend (against Bowling Green)."

Notre Dame's offense has given Smith reason for encouragement lately, especially the line of center Kirt Bjork and wings John Higgins and Brent Chapman. The top Irish line has figured in 37 of the team's last 50 goals. Smith, however, prefers to key on Notre Dame's depth.

"The top three lines have really made tremendous improvements week after week," says Smith. "But we hope to do a better job as far as creating turnovers in the other end."

Before their December series with Ohio State, the Irish split a series with powerful Michigan State. This time, the Irish are coming off of a series with league-leading Bowling Green — in which they earned an impressive win and a tie.

"We've worked very hard," says Smith. "But, if there is any letdown, we'll find ourselves out of playoff contention."

"I think the team's got a real good attitude going into this weekend," says senior Rex Bellomy. "Especially after coming off a big win over Bowling Green."

The Buckeyes, who are 19-5-4 in CCHA competition and 16-1-3 in their last 20 games, boast two of the league's top three scorers. Junior Andy Browne (66 points) and classmate Dave Kobryn (55) are second and third respectively, behind Bowling Green All-American Brian Hills.

Browne has already broken the CCHA record for goals in a season, pumping in 35 to date to tie Hills atop the league.

Joining Browne and Kobryn at the forefront of the Buckeye offense are the Pooley brothers, Paul (47 points) and Perry (with 43).

Once again, it will be goalie Bob McNamara who must stop the Buckeye attack. His excellent performance against Bowling Green, which earned him CCHA Player of the Week honors should prove to be a great confidence-builder for this weekend.

"I've got to look at this series the same way I looked at last weekend," says McNamara. "Ohio State has lost once in their last 20 games, so there can't be a mental letdown just because they're not in first place like Bowling Green was."

Distance men hopeful

Runners prep at Central Collegiate

By DEAN SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Colleges from all over the Midwest will be invading Kalamazoo, Mich. this weekend for the two-day Central Collegiate Conference meet.

Twenty-five schools from a variety of conferences will be competing for the top spot in the prestigious event. The Big Ten, the Missouri Valley, and the Mid-American are just three conferences which will be represented.

"Wisconsin won this year's NCAA cross country championships and Eastern Michigan has a great team," says Head Coach Joe Piane.

In addition to Wisconsin, the other Big Ten teams are Michigan, Michigan State, and Purdue. Eastern Michigan, Central and Western Michigan will be the main threats from the Mid-American Conference. Seven of the ten teams of that conference will be competing.

Reigning Missouri Valley co-champs Southern Illinois and Illinois State should also give the Irish runners fits. Marquette and De Paul will be present as independents.

The Irish strong point, distance, will again be tested by the fine distance crews of Marquette and Wisconsin. Piane is hoping to place in the top seven, but with the way the team has been performing as of late, they could place higher.

So far this year nine Irish have qualified for the IC4A championship meet. The IC4A is the oldest track championship meet hosts 111 teams, mostly from the Atlantic Seaboard.

Co-captain Steve Dziabis and Van Percy have both qualified for the quarter mile and the mile relay (along with Jan Kania and Dean McFarlane). Jim Tyler has qualified for the 1000 yard run and Allen Pinkett (60 yard dash), John McCloughan (high hurdles), and Ed Juba (3 mile) have also qualified for their respective events. Piane expects more people to qualify this weekend, hopefully in the distance medley, 2 mile relay and more distance events. The IC4A meet will be held March 5-6 in Princeton, New Jersey.

Bengals back Sunday

Sunday afternoon marks the opening round of the 1983 Bengal Bouts. The 53rd edition of the Bouts, originated by Notre Dame legend Dominic "Nappy" Napolitano, will kick off at 2 p.m. under the South Dome of the ACC.

The Notre Dame Boxing Club trains fighters throughout the year for appearance in the Bengals. A large field has been whittled down to 51 in nine weight divisions.

Last year's heavyweight champion, Larry Andre, and defending super-heavyweight champ Mark LeBlanc headline the week's list of fighters. Both are slated to compete in the super-heavy division this year.

Angelo Perino, Pat Serge and Don McLaurin return as champions in lighter weight classes.

The finals of the Bengals are traditionally televised as part of NBC's Sports World St. Patrick's week package.
