Soviet Union develops new long-range missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has developed a new, long-range land attack cruise missile which it may deploy on mobile launchers as a fresh threat to Western Europe, U.S. intelligence sources said yesterday.

The missile, designated by intelligence officials as the SSCX-4, is said to have a range of nearly 1,900 miles, more than the American cruise, the GLCM, scheduled for deployment in Europe late this year.

U.S. reconnaissance satellites recently detected what analysts believe is a possible mobile launcher for the SSCX-4 at a test center in the Soviet Union. It was described as a wheeled tractor-trailer vehicle big enough to launch four missiles. American officials, speaking only on condition that they remain anonymous, said the Soviets might be able to move such missiles around relatively rapidly over long distances — and that they could bring most key targets in Western Europe within their range if they were deployed in Eastern European nations belonging to the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

There was no prediction as to when the new Soviet land attack ground-launched cruise missile might become operational.

If the U.S. intelligence assessments prove to be accurate, such new missiles would add to the perceived threat to Western Europe represented by intermediate-range nuclear ballistic missiles, such as the much-discussed SS-20, which carries three warheads, has a range of more than 3,100 miles and can hit Western Europe from well inside the Soviet Union.

Nothing official on the SSCX-4 has appeared in Pentagon reports, although the recent Soviet Military Power publication spoke cryptically of "development of a series of long-range cruise missiles intended for ground, air and sea-launch platforms."

That publication indicated a belief that the air-launched version will be carried by older Soviet bombers as well as the new Blackjack now under development.

Based on available information, it appears that the reported new Soviet ground-launched SSCX-4 may be a counterpart to the U.S. GLCM, although the American weapon has a somewhat shorter range.

The United States, with the official backing of the NATO alliance but opposition from peace groups in Western Europe, plans to deploy 464 GLCMs and 108 Pershing 2 ballistic missiles in allied countries starting late this year.

President Reagan, in a retreat from his original call for a mutual ban of European missiles, recently offered to cut back on that deployment if the Soviets will dismantle a proportionate part of its arsenal. The Soviets have balked at that, saying it still would leave the West with a huge advantage because British and French missiles, as well as weapons launched from submarines and aircraft, would not be affected.

Programming committee formed

SMC seeks to coordinate events

By TONI RUTHERFORD
Staff Reporter

A new programming committee has been formed to coordinate campus events at Saint Mary's, according to Elaine Hocter, Student Body President.

Past problems with overlapping events led to the establishment of the new committee. By seating on the committee hall and class vice-presidents, along with a Christian Life Commissioner, it should be possible to keep campus or class events from being held at the same time as hall events, explained Hocter.

She said that another purpose of the committee is to provide student support at functions through the backing of the hall and class presidents. "We hope that the support will result in a larger turnout," said Hocter.

The committee will have the same commissioner positions as does the Student Activity Planning Board (SAPB). These positions include commissioners of movies, speakers, traditional events, and entertainment. The key difference between this programming committee and the SAPB is the former's inclusion of class and hall vice-presidents.

The committee, according to Hocter, is in charge of coordinating campus events such as movies, speakers, and concerts. Traditional events like Octoberfest, the Christmas Bazaar, Founder's Day activities, and An Tostal also will be handled by the committee.

This is just a trial committee, noted Hocter, and it will be evaluated at the end of its term. If there is an improvement in coordination and response, it may become a permanent addition to Saint Mary's committees, she said.

'Bread for the World'

Hunger group seeks ND support

By CECILIA LUCERO
Staff Reporter

Representatives from the Bread for the World organization — self-described as "the only national 'citizens' lobby focusing solely on hunger" — conducted an informational seminar last night at the Center for Social Concerns.

According to Todd Dietetler, who coordinates the group's activities in the Midwest, the objective of the organization is "to facilitate the growth of Bread for the World in every Congressional district." Dietetler added that members work to obtain government policies and seek bipartisan support for measures that offer help to the poor.

Bread for the World is a Christian citizens movement which began ten years ago in Manhattan. Basically a public policy lobby group, according to Dietetler, Bread for the World has 43,000 members and also functions as an educational service to Congressional representatives.

Reflecting on her motivation for joining the organization, Campus Coordinator Bonnie Jorgensen said she became involved in order to increase campus awareness. Remaining silent on important issues, said Jorgensen, is the same as "saying Christians don't really care."

Jorgensen, a former public relations worker, said that "the first time I was given reason to pause or reflect on that particular concept it struck me as something (in which) a Christian as a person wanted to be involved. How could I possibly allow myself to continue to be silent on those kind of issues?"

Dietetler pointed out that the organization is not a direct relief service, but is concerned with specific issue areas concerning hunger. These include hunger prevention at home, which encompasses food stamp programs, medically certified nutrition programs for pregnant women (WIC), and child nutrition programs in public schools.

Resolutions that Bread for the World has introduced in Congress ask to stop federal budget cuts in programs such as these. The organization has also requested a renewal of legislation that has provided development aid for the poor this past year.

Old fieldhouse site slated for landscaping

By MIKE WILKINS
Senior Staff Reporter

The rubble remaining from the destruction of the old Fieldhouse should be gone within two weeks and work will soon begin on landscaping the site.

"It's going to take the rest of this week and maybe next week before all the rubble is cleared away," noted Donald Dedrick, physical plant director.

Work has been slow as of late because the foundations on the south side of the building are located very close to utility lines and workers must be careful to avoid those lines as they take out the foundations, said Dedrick.

Last month's snow storm and this spring's rainy weather have not slowed the project. "If anything, the weather has been a benefit because it has helped prevent a fire that could easily start if a spark hit all that old wood," said Dedrick.

Immediate plans for the area include filling in the hole left by the building and covering the ground with topsoil. After Commencement Weekend, the north road that runs along the site will be taken out and crews will begin putting in sidewalks.

The area eventually will be turned into a pedestrian mall similar to the open area in front of the North Dining Hall, said Dedrick. Work is scheduled to be completed before school resumes in August.

The president of Common Cause, Fred Wertheimer, and Terry Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, will debate and answer questions on the proper role of the political action committee in American politics. Common Cause, an organization with more than 250,000 members, recently has launched a campaign to limit political action committees. NCPAC is the nation's largest PAC, with an estimated 40,000 active contributors. The debate and question-answer session will take place at 2 p.m. Friday in Room 101 of the Law School. — The Observer

Robert Miller, director of University Libraries at Notre Dame, is one of 16 librarians named to participate in a senior fellows program at the University of California-Los Angeles. The program is designed to create a group of senior library managers who have participated in management instruction. The fellows will spend six weeks at UCLA in August and September and will complete research on topics introduced during their residency in the following year. They will complete their study at a national meeting following this year. — The Observer

An undergraduate academic course on the morality of nuclear armament will be offered at Notre Dame next fall. The course, entitled "The Nuclear Dilemma," will be taught by a team of faculty members from six departments in the University's College of Arts and Letters, using the final draft of the American Catholic bishops' pastoral letter on war and peace as a text. The course will be offered as a three-credit hour elective and may be counted towards the six credit hours in theology required of all Notre Dame graduates. One hundred thirty students will be accepted for the first semester. In addition to the primarily theological focus of the course, faculty members from the departments of Government and International Studies, Theatre and Communications, Philosophy, Economics and Sociology will teach the course. — The Observer

Laws providing for capital punishment should be abolished, according to Father Edward Malloy, associate provost and associate professor of theology. In a book entitled "The Ethics of Law Enforcement and Criminal Punishment," recently published by the University Press of America, Malloy defends the right of legitimate political authority, when acting for "the common good" and inflicting punishment "in a non-discriminatory fashion," to kill people. But in the United States, he concludes, "at the present moment of history, there is no legitimate reason for invoking this power." According to Malloy, "America has survived successfully a moratorium on capital punishment which lasted a decade. In most cases it was murderers who were spared. There seems to me to be no persuasive reason to renounce this precedent even in the case of multiple offenses." Malloy, an ethicist, received his B.A. and M.A. in English from Notre Dame in 1963 and 1967, respectively, and his master's in theology from the University in 1969. — The Observer

The Lake Shore Limited, Amtrak's New York-to-Chicago run, will cut nearly 90 minutes from the scheduled time in both directions beginning April 24. The effective date of the new schedule will coincide with the national changeover to Daylight Savings Time. Under the new schedule, the train will leave Chicago at 6:20 p.m. CDT and arrive in New York at 1:15 p.m. EDT the following day, trimming the old schedule by one hour and 22 minutes. The Lake Shore Limited makes four stops in Indiana: Hammond, Whiting, South Bend and Elkhart. According to Amtrak officials, the faster time is possible because of improved track and tighter scheduling. The scheduling was negotiated with ConRail, over whose tracks the train operates. — AP

LaPorte officials sought state approval yesterday for a plan to pump water from flood-swollen Pine Lake, while lakefront residents awaited more sandbags to battle the rising water. Homes along Pine Lake, on the northwest edge of LaPorte, have sustained thousands of dollars in damage from the floodwaters that rose a year ago and never subsided. "We're losing streets by the gross," said LaPorte Mayor William P. Angrick, who wants to pump the lake water through a city water main into the Little Kankakee River. Previous solutions to the year-long flooding problem at Pine Lake have been tied up by bureaucratic red tape and court battles. More than two inches of rainfall over the weekend has worsened the situation. — AP

'Spend the money'

MATAMOROS, Mexico — "What you need?" the young Mexican merchant asked as I cast a sideways glance at his wares. Before I could mutter a response, he began showing me a stack of hand woven blankets. "Look," he pleaded, proceeding to unfold one of the massive articles. With a cool "No, gracias," I moved on to the next shop, where the episode was repeated.

Meanwhile, I could hear the same vendor behind me repeating the same line to another tourist. And up ahead, a Mexican shopowner ran out of his shop and yelled, "Spend the money. Spend all your money."

This is the old market in Matamoros, a city of about 200,000 across the border from Brownsville, Texas. A half-hour drive away, South Padre Island serves as a spring break haven for thousands from the lower Midwest.

The old market, resembling its American cousin, the flea market, attracts thousands of tourists in search of bargains. Shops offering identical goods compete for space in the narrow mall that winds its way through the market.

To say that shopping in Mexico is a good value is truly an understatement. With the devaluations of the peso, the floating exchange rate stands at 153 to the dollar. Last spring, a dollar only bought 48 pesos. Those blankets, colorful six by eight foot creations, can be had for seven dollars. Liquor prices are one-third of those in the States.

Those Americans who live and work on the U.S. side of the 1,933 mile border are painfully aware of the exchange rate of the peso. It's driving many of them out of business.

Laredo, a border town up the Rio Grande from Brownsville, is suffering 27.3 percent unemployment. It is one of a number of cities that thrived when affluent Mexican shoppers, many of them benefiting from Mexico's petroleum industry, flocked to purchase expensive goods such as designer clothes and the latest electronics from U.S. stores.

Laredo's Chamber of Commerce president is quoted in the April issue of Texas Monthly as saying in 1979, "The Mexicans don't even look at the price. That's their last priority. They want quality, fashion and availability." With the peso's collapse, these customers have stopped coming, and Americans reversed the trend, shopping for their goods in Mexico.

Complicating the problem, Mexican immigrants illegally are fording the Rio Grande and climbing fences in unprecedented numbers to escape the economic ills of their native land. On a single day last month, the U.S.

Mark Worschhe

Inside Thursday

Border Patrol in one sector of Southern California captured a record 2,442 immigrants, according to a recent Newsweek report.

The incoming Mexicans see the United States as their only hope to attain a decent living for themselves and their children. Who could blame a Mexican parent for wanting to do the most for his or her family? In the same Newsweek story, Border Agent Larry Richardson says, "Look, there ain't ever going to be a Mexican who if really wants to be here ain't going to be here."

Nevertheless, the influx has created havoc in U.S. border cities, whose city services have been strained to meet the needs of citizens and aliens.

Laredo's sales tax revenue is expected to decrease by close to 60 percent this year. The greatest impact, however, has been on school districts. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that aliens — illegal or not — have the right to attend public schools. In Brownsville, of the 1,032 new students in the school district, only 30 of them are American born, reports Newsweek.

While this policy is wise in the long run, the strain on resources and quality has become evident as districts rush to construct makeshift buildings.

Billy Joel has never written a ballad about the tough times along the border. Likewise, many people who live away from the area have no idea of the poverty there. Some of the poorest counties in the nation lie along this division from Mexico.

Indeed, as I was walking through the market — proud of my bargain purchases — and as I took my 10 cent bus ride back to the States, I found myself trying not to dwell on the border's problems, knowing that the carefree sands of South Padre were only minutes away.

Yet this attitude has prevailed for too long in the actions of officials from both countries. These politicians turn their backs to the problem, preferring to act on real domestic issues. President Reagan would do well to understand that Laredo and Brownsville are as domestic as Allentown, Youngstown and Detroit.

Callaghan / Prevoznik

New SB administrators learn ropes

By CAROL CAMP
Copy Editor

Though their time in office has been brief, Student Body President Brian Callaghan and Vice President Peggy Prevoznik already have appointed the members of their cabinet and are investigating the progress in plans to renovate the first floor of Lafortune, the Engineering Auditorium, and Washington Hall.

Before taking office, Callaghan and Prevoznik worked with outgoing Student Body President Lloyd Burke and Vice-president Bob Yonchak. They also met with the newly-elected Senators and class officers in an effort to, in Prevoznik's words, "get over the formalities of getting to know each other."

Now that the introductions have been made, Callaghan and Prevoznik have begun to examine the status of several unfinished projects. Before the end of the year, they hope to have lights installed for the Stepan basketball courts, and benches set up around campus.

In what he terms an effort to increase the role of the rectors and faculty members who comprise the membership of the Campus Life Council (CLC), Callaghan plans to hold a "brainstorming session." Through this meeting, he hopes "to generate discussion about the purpose and the role of the CLC, and to increase the role of the other members. After all, most of the proposals that are considered are student-initiated, and then they are either accepted or rejected by the rectors. I'd like to see that change."

Callaghan said he hopes to develop a close working relationship with the director, comptroller, and commissioners of the Student Union. Such a relationship, in Callaghan's view, "be essential, especially since Peggy, Julie (Vormezelee), and I will be members of the Steering Committee." Callaghan expressed his optimism about Student Government's ability to work with Student Union, noting that "they have appointed really good commissioners who will be willing to put the time into their jobs. Also, (Student Union director) Dave Drouillard is definitely one of their best assets."

Other goals which Callaghan and Prevoznik have established and begun work on include renovating Lafortune, Washington Hall, and the Engineering Auditorium. Concrete plans are still in the development stages right now, but Callaghan is considering a list of suggested improvements for Lafortune which was submitted by Student Activities Director Jim McDonnell. Callaghan also stated his intention to continue advocating the establishment of a new student center, commenting that "we have good people, such as John Gallagher, interested in it, and a large number of faculty members have come out in favor of it."

Considering the Farley-Stanford coed dorm proposal which was approved by the Senate, Callaghan observed that it is his and Prevoznik's

Business lectureFinancial plans trigger success

By CINDY BOYLE
News Staff

In order to begin a successful business, one must start with good financial plans, said the owner of a local advertising agency last night at Saint Mary's.

Sandra Bate, President and owner of Imprint, Inc., presented a lecture on "Starting Your Own Business" as part of the "Women in Workplace" lecture series.

In addition to her job with Imprint, Inc., Bate is the owner of the magazine Today in Michiana.

"You have to have an awful lot of confidence in yourself," Bate advised those interested in starting their own businesses. "You also have to have an awful lot of confidence in your ideas and capabilities."

Bate attributed her personal success to being "able to attack problems from a different perspective. People appreciated a non-traditional approach to things."

Bate encouraged potential business owners to know from where the money for the business is coming, and to be honest and realistic about future expenses and income. She stressed that, in your own business, "you have to be the organizer and the manager."

Bate also said that the three main assets in starting one's own business are skills, plans, and resources.

The early years are the most difficult for small businesses, said Bate, and the challenges begin only after the business starts work. But, in terms of reward, Bate said that "nothing is more rewarding than getting the idea for a small business."

Fighting continues in Nicaraguan revolution

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Nicaraguan government's troops battled rebels yesterday in northeastern Zelaya province trying to create a "liberated" zone there, government military sources reported.

The sources, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said fighting also intensified below the other end of the Honduran border, in the northwestern provinces of Nueva Segovia, Jinotega and Matagalpa.

The Sandinista army killed 23 guerrillas who were trying to reach a gold mine in Zelaya, the Defense Ministry said.

A rebel broadcast said anti-Sandinista Indians killed 30 government soldiers and wounded ten. It also said four air force planes bombed Indian communities all day Tuesday in Zelaya province, on the east coast, and killed "dozens of women, old people and children."

One government source said, "Our army is centering its operations in Zelaya, because the rebels are trying to take an area and declare it liberated territory that could be supplied from Honduras."

The sources would not say how many government troops were in the area. Defense Minister Humberto Orea said earlier that 150 anti-Sandinista exiles were headed toward the region after crossing the border from Honduras.

A defense Ministry communique said the 23 rebels killed were part of an "invading force" that traveled by river to within 11 miles of the Bonanza gold mine, 270 miles north-east of Managua. It said nothing about army casualties.

The rebel radio station said fighting continued yesterday in the areas of the Bonanza mine as well as the nearby Siuna and La Rosita mines.

The government said the deaths raised the total in two months of fighting to 450 guerrillas and 72 government soldiers. Its estimates of rebel strength range from 1,200 to 5,000.

The rebels, from the Honduras-based Nicaragua Democratic Force, include former members of the late dictator Anastasio Somoza's national guard, disenchanted supporters of the Sandinista revolution that ousted him in 1979, and Miskito, Sumo and Rama Indians driven from their east coast villages by the Sandinista government.

In the northwest, the military sources report, about 2,000 troops supported by reserves and militiamen were pursuing exile-guerrillas from Honduras in the mountains near Quilali, in Nueva Segovia 115 miles north of Managua, and Wiwili, on the Nueva Segovia-Jinotega border 105 miles north of the capital.

Unemployed steelworkers

Reagan greeted by demonstration

PITTSBURGH (AP) — President Reagan, taking his pitch for high technology job retraining amongst a sea of unemployed steelworkers, ran into one of the largest protest demonstrations of his presidency yesterday.

After a tour of the Control Data Institute, where 125 jobless steelworkers are being trained to repair computers, Reagan spoke to the National Conference on the Displaced Worker while thousands stood outside in a cold rain waving signs and chanting.

"Reagan, Reagan, he's no good. Send him back to Hollywood," they said.

Among the banners: "Reagans Friends Get Tax Breaks. Steelworkers Get Pink Slips." And: "Buck Stopped Here When Ronald Reagan Took Office."

The president, whisked into the hotel through an underground garage, could see only a smattering of the crowd, which police estimated at 3,500.

But he acknowledged that he was in hostile territory when he departed from his text to say, "I come to you not only as a speaker but as a possible victim."

He noted that many at the bipartisan gathering might like to see him dislocated from his job.

"We as a nation owe an obligation as well as a helping hand to those who pay the price of economic readjustment," the president said in the prepared part of his speech. "Government — federal, state and local — should provide support for job training and re-employment assistance."

Anger and skepticism were evident in the computer classroom as well as on the street outside the conference hotel.

At Control Data, several of the students, most of whom had lost jobs in the steel mills, asked Reagan if they were wasting their time retraining for jobs that might not exist by the time they finish their training in several months.

A man who identified himself as Ron Bricker approached Reagan after the president's brief remarks, handed him a resume and said, "I've been looking for a job for a year and can't find one."

Reagan took the resume and shook the man's hand, telling a corporate executive afterward that Bricker was "typical of the kind of person we want to help."

Couple arrested in rape case of adopted child

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A white man who claims his adopted daughter was taken from him because he's married to a black woman was arrested yesterday on a rape warrant. His wife also was arrested.

A Memphis newspaper said the warrant from Monroe County, Tenn., accused Robert Yeary, 42, and his wife, Carolyn, 30, of raping their 7-year-old adopted daughter.

Elliott LaBarre, a detective with the Memphis Police Department, said the Yearys would be held for authorities in Monroe County.

"Rape my own daughter? Hell no," Yeary yelled as he was taken into custody.

Yeary and his wife, residents of Indianapolis, were working as counselors at Tellico River Camp Ministries, a religious camp for underprivileged youngsters in Monroe County, when the rape supposedly occurred, the Commercial Appeal of Memphis said.

Yeary said he and his wife adopted the child in Indiana two years ago, but Juvenile Court authorities have questioned that claim since the Yearys have criminal records.

Authorities said Yeary pleaded guilty in Indiana to charges of theft, assault, rape and sodomy. His wife served time on a forgery charge, authorities said.

The child was put in the custody of the Memphis Juvenile Court on March 28 when the Yearys were arrested in Chattanooga with Dianne Hamlin, 28, of Huntsville, Texas.

Mrs. Hamlin subsequently pleaded guilty to abandoning her four small children at a McDonald's restaurant in Memphis on March 24.

She was sentenced to 11 months and 29 days in jail.

Child abuse charges filed against the Yearys were dropped after Mrs. Hamlin's guilty plea, but Judge Kenneth Turner ruled Monday that the couple's adopted daughter must stay in court custody.

Turner issued that ruling after he was given a stack of sexually explicit pictures seized at the time of the Yearys' arrest.

The judge said the pictures show

LaPorte Republicans

Nixon to speak at fundraiser

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — Response to the LaPorte County Republicans' fund-raising dinner featuring Richard Nixon has been so great that organizers say they have sold out the event and have had to return money to people wanting to attend.

The former president is scheduled to appear at a $50-a-plate dinner for the LaPorte County Republicans on April 20. Republicans sold 200 tickets within days of the announcement and quickly printed another 200, which sold almost as rapidly.

"Now we're in the process of returning money to people who wanted tickets," said John J. Hanberg, chairman of "An Evening With Richard Nixon." The fund-raiser is to be at the Holiday Inn.

Hanberg said LaPorte Republicans were quite surprised — and happy — when Nixon accepted their invitation to speak.

"He will talk about international affairs. But there will be no press coverage. Reporters could buy tickets, but with the condition that they could not write or broadcast stories about the talk," Hanberg said.

The former president has accepted speaking invitations from associations, universities and civic groups, said Nicholas L. Ruwe, Nixon's chief of staff. Last week he was in Palm Beach, Fla., and on April 15 he will appear in Atlanta.

"And I've got stacks of other invitations from other organizations," Ruwe said, "too many to accept."

When Nixon resigned in 1974 in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal, he was unwelcome in most circles, political or otherwise.

Friends close to Nixon said he, like Rodney Dangerfield, wants a little respect and acceptance, particularly among Republicans.

Nixon received more than a little respect last April 21, when more than 700 persons each paid $150 to attend a fund-raiser for Orange County Republicans in Anaheim, Calif., the former president's home turf. He was greeted by a standing ovation and a band playing "Hail to the Chief."

"Of course, he wants senior statesman status," said L. Keith Bulen, a former Republican national committeeman from Indiana who is commissioner of the International Joint Commission of the United States and Canada. "He's a very serious person and has a wealth of information and knowledge, particularly about foreign affairs. It's understandable that he wants to contribute."

Bulen and Gordon K. Durnil, chairman of the Indiana Republican State Committee, were within the inner circles of the Nixon campaigns of 1968 and 1972, and both were contacted by the former president when he was weighing the invitation from LaPorte.

Both said they advised Nixon his appearance in LaPorte would help the GOP there.

"Whoever has Nixon as a speaker is going to make money," Durnil said. "I believe he would outdraw (former) President Ford, (civil rights leader) Jesse Jackson or any other public figure. But there are other risks."

Those other risks include the possibility that people may harbor ill feelings about Nixon's role in Watergate and transfer some of that sentiment to the politician so unwise as to invite the former president into his backyard.

Mayor Richard Berkley of Kansas City, Mo., for example, said he will boycott Nixon's appearance at a fundraiser scheduled by Missouri Republicans the day after the former president appears in LaPorte.

The mayor of LaPorte, however, said he is happy and plans to attend the LaPorte dinner.

"I've been county chairman for the Republican Party three times," said Mayor William P. Angrick, "and I've talked with Nixon on a one-to-one basis several times. And I'm personally glad he's coming."

Other Republicans will not be available, however, reportedly because of prior commitments. Gov. Robert D. Orr previously had accepted a speaking engagement and Sens. Richard G. Lugar and Dan Quayle had previous engagements.

Rep. John P. Hiler, whose 3rd District includes LaPorte, will not attend because of budget sessions in Congress, his press aide said.

Oxide dust transfers to Indiana

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Forty-nine truckloads of zinc oxide dust will be transferred from a Butler County strip mine to a hazardous waste landfill in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Jack Watkins, a field representative with the state Division of Waste Management, also announced that all parties involved in the removal met Tuesday and agreed on what group would pay for all or parts of the cleanup.

But the state has not been told who will pay for removing the dust from a Bowling Green warehouse and the strip mine, he said.

Charles Schaffner, attorney for TLC corp., which owns the dust along with RAD chemical Co. and is responsible for the cleanups, declined comment on the meeting.

Schaffner did say he expected the total cost of the cleanups at both the Beech Street warehouse and Butler County sites to be $400,000.

Watkins said RAD, TLC, Triangle Resources Industries, which is overseeing the cleanups, environmental officials and attorneys for each group met for hours. The environmental officials then left the meeting.

The new sound of Notre Dame

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series on possible changes in the works at the student radio station, WSND.

Tim Neely

My Turn

If the plan to transform the WSND-AM format onto the FM band at 100.9 megahertz gets past the formative stages and actually happens, it will be good for those who work there as well as the community in general. A student-run commercial station serving the entire South Bend area should have positive results. Without the proper thought and planning, however, there might be problems.

There are a few items that the new station will have to consider because of the wider scope of its operations. Successfully tackling these potential problems should mean there will be few difficulties overall.

The first, and foremost, of these is the Federal Communications Commission. As a low-powered carrier-current station, WSND-AM is not bound to FCC rules, yet tries to follow them informally. The new station will have to become much more strict about these regulations. Legal identification every hour will have to be according to FCC guidelines; personal attacks and the like, which occasionally pollute the airwaves, will have to end entirely; and obscene language, which most WSND-AM announcers do a good job of avoiding on the air already, must be watched on record as well.

The station will also have to stay on the air during breaks and over the summer, as the FM station does, in order to keep its license. Right now WSND-AM goes off when students are not here. This may mean it will have to pay some of its employees to work the breaks.

This leads to another potential bugaboo: money. Currently WSND-AM gets most of its operating budget from the Office of Student Activities, with the rest from advertising revenue. As a commercial station, it is only logical that the new FM station should meet more of its expenses through advertising — not so much, however, that the airwaves become cluttered with commercials; after all, this is supposed to be the students' radio station.

As such, the target audience for the station is one of the least of anybody's worries. First and foremost, it should cater to the tastes of the community. This is not as easy as it sounds, however, because of the widely varying tastes of ND-SMC students. My suggestion is to try to fill some void in South Bend radio, of which there are many. It should not try to duplicate another local station's format.

Once it has begun to establish its niche, then the last step is looking at the ratings. If the new station hopes to succeed among advertisers, eventually it will need to have some indication of the size and type of audience they are reaching. At the same time, it should remember its main purpose — to serve the community; the Arbitrons must not rule the station's every move, as they do in so many other places. If it is felt a change is necessary, it should be done not with higher ratings as the sole motive.

Hopefully, after all this, FM 100.9 will become a real alternative to a very bland South Bend radio scene. Then will come some hoped-for fringe benefits: a greater sense of pride in working for the station; more respect from record companies, some of whom make WSND-FM pay for their product, others of which send new LPs out late, if at all (A&M is an example of the former, Capitol-EMI the latter); and greater respect from the students who don't work for the station, reflected in more stereos tuned to the student station. When the latter happens, then the Notre Dame student radio station will truly be, as it now claims to be, "The Sound of Notre Dame."

USA Today revolutionizes news

The change in the three "local" newspapers since the debut of USA Today in the South Bend market has been startling.

Skip Desjardin

On the Media

The two Chicago papers, and South Bend's own, have taken to featuring a great deal more color pictures on the front pages. This move is no doubt an effort to compete with the colorful, brash national paper that began publication here in early March.

USA Today has no home delivery, and relies heavily on newsstand sales. It was thought that fact would, at least in Chicago, hurt the Sun-Times greatly. The tabloid also relies heavily on newsstand sales, from which it gets some 60 percent of its circulation.

In anticipation of USA Today's appearance, the Sun-Times revamped its sports section, with new typeface reminiscent of the old Chicago Daily News. The new type has since been expanded to much of the paper, making it more pleasing to the eye, and easier to read.

The staid Chicago Tribune was the first to go the color route, with a different masthead for each edition. The color has expanded to the fashion and, particularly, to the sports section.

All three papers have beefed up the sports coverage, with the Tribune's vastly expanded Scoreboard section the most evident improvement.

Changes here in South Bend have been more gradual. Graphically, the paper has shown a slow but dramatic improvement. While they have had some problems with the color pictures, they are making an honest effort.

The South Bend paper is limited in the amount of expansion it can achieve in the sports department by a relatively small staff. There is, after all, only so much a few people can cover.

The real question is whether the appearance of USA Today in this market has improved the coverage of the news. I don't think it has had much of an effect at all. Yet.

It is still too early to say how the new paper has affected circulation at any of its competitors. Figures are still not accurate due to the "novelty" factor attributable to any new paper. But circulation will be the key.

If USA Today makes a significant dent in the circulations of any of these papers, greater news coverage, particularly of local and regional stories, will be the key to survival.

As a national paper that appears in the exact same form from coast to coast, USA Today cannot devote column inches to local stories. The only way to get the news from home will continue to be the local papers.

Local papers must be flexible. And the South Bend Tribune, which has the most to lose, has shown the greatest willingness to do so. Their move to Saturday mornings is a trial balloon of sorts. With the changing economic make-up of the area — from heavily industrial to more white-collar — it may be that there are more "morning newspaper" people out there.

The Chicago papers may be forced to do what the Detroit Free Press did this week, and the Boston Globe has done for some time — publish an afternoon edition to gain a whole new type of audience.

The signs are hard to see, but they are there. USA Today is improving the way we get our news.

P. O. Box Q

Emergency "care"

Dear Editor:

Recently in the North Dining Hall I witnessed a diabetic seizure and was one of four or five individuals who aided the victim (a term I will continue to use because of subsequent events). I do not care to dwell on my disappointment with the reactions of all those who simply stood around gaping; I chose to help because I felt I had some knowledge of what to do in the situation. What I do wish to address is the total inadequacy of the medical treatment that the victim received.

As a result of a fall at the beginning of the seizure, the victim suffered a severe knock to his head and seriously bit into his tongue. After approximately ten minutes the violent effects of the seizure had subsided and the victim had regained some facsimile of coherence. He still was extremely confused and could not remember his last name, much less anything else. About this time Notre Dame Security arrived on the scene. I, and the others around me, assumed that an ambulance would be forthcoming, but we learned that none had been called by security. We were forced to convince the officers that indeed this was a situation that might warrant medical attention, and a paramedic squad was summoned.

It was this paramedic squad that was able to first discern from the victim that he was a diabetic. For some reason, this knowledge caused them to completely disregard the head and tongue injuries. Some twenty minutes after the incident began the paramedics had the victim sitting in a chair signing a release form stating that he refused transportation to a medical facility. He was still dizzy, completely oblivious to the pain of his injuries, and in a state of extreme confusion and memory loss. Yet these supposed professionals were allowing him to determine whether he should go to a hospital or be released on his own recognizance. We were told that the paramedics "couldn't do anything to (the victim) that he didn't want." There was not even a suggestion that he be taken to the infirmary until the four of us who had aided him forced the issue upon the "experts," who reluctantly agreed that it might not be a bad idea.

Once at the infirmary the situation grew worse as three of us were subjected to a nurse's attempted powerplay. The nurse in charge brushed off any explanations which those of us who had witnessed the incident tried to provide. She preferred to get the information from the victim, even though one of the doctors had suggested that, in his state, he would not be reliable. Fed up with this seeming lack of concern, I sought the attention of another doctor down the hall and explained our predicament. He immediately stated that the victim should be transported without delay to St. Joseph's Hospital emergency room. I returned to the nurse and relayed this information to her, at which point she jeered at our group's concern with such questions as: "Who's in charge here anyway?" and "Did you boys take a vote on this?"

At this point the security guard who had transported us to the infirmary asked the nurse if he would be needed right away to take the victim to the hospital. She told him no and he began to leave. I couldn't believe that she was countermanning a doctor's recommendation and stepped in to reiterate what the doctor had said. With this she tore some papers from her clipboard and, with an abusive comment, relinquished her hold on the victim.

It was almost an hour and fifteen minutes from the beginning of the seizure to the time that we finally arrived at the hospital. The victim was still in a state of confusion; he could not remember his campus phone number, social security number, or his father's name when asked to fill out an entrance form. Ten minutes later, after receiving the proper treatment, he was fine except for a bump on his head and a swelling tongue. He left the hospital an hour later after being treated for a possible concussion. The attending doctor also recommended that he be examined in the near future for a possible seizure disorder.

I am horrified by the treatment this person received at a time when he was in serious danger. I dread to think of what mistakes will be made in the future and the consequences that might arise. St. Joseph's Hospital has promised a formal investigation into the paramedics' actions and I intend to hold them to their commitment.

A television shot shows the aft section of the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite in the cargo bay of the Shuttle Challenger Monday after the blastoff from Cape Kennedy. A problem apparently developed with the rocket engines of the satellite after it was deployed from the Challenger cargo bay. NASA officials say they have regained contact with the satellite and that it is not in the desired orbit.

First in nine years

Shuttle astronauts ready for walk

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Now comes the fun part of Challenger's first flight: a three-hour excursion into the open cargo bay today during which two astronauts may "kind of hop straight up" to see what's flapping loose on the ship's tail.

So eager was mission specialist Story Musgrave to get on with the dress rehearsal for the walk he'll take with Don Peterson that he began checking out their space suits five hours ahead of schedule.

At White Sands, N.M., meanwhile, engineers firmed up plans to correct the orbit of the huge communications satellite that went astray after being ejected from Challenger on Monday. But they ran into trouble, again — and got out of it, again.

The astronauts' practice session involved putting on the bulky space suits and pressurizing the airlock — everything short of actually leaving the spaceship.

The purpose is to pinpoint any problems in advance. On the last flight of Columbia problems with both space suits were discovered hours before the astronauts were to make their space walk. The exercise was canceled.

During today's excursion, the pair are to test the suits and tools and techniques for servicing and repairing satellites on future shuttle missions. It will be the first space walk by Americans in nine years.

Flight Director Randy Stone was asked yesterday whether Musgrave and Peterson had plans to float out of the cargo bay to inspect loose nylon material near Challenger's orbital engines that was noticed by the astronauts after launch.

"I suspect, knowing the crew, their enthusiasm for doing things, if we give them the opportunity, they'll go back and take a picture of it," Stone said. "I don't think it means climbing out." He said he isn't involved in the planning but suspects they will, "on their long tether just kind of hop straight up and take a picture of it."

A NASA spokesman said no firm decision had been made on whether Musgrave and Peterson will be given the choice.

On the third day of Challenger's five-day flight, astronauts Paul J. Weitz and Karol Bobko, commander and pilot, were busy with experiments and they photographed lightning over the Gulf of Mexico.

There were few complaints about Challenger's performance. "It's very easy to babysit this vehicle when it's operating so well," said Stone.

A jet thruster on the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite stuck in a closed position and it began tumbling late Tuesday. A radio command from White Sands, which is ground control for the TDRS, stopped the spin.

Some of the satellite's 24 small thrusters will be used to send the satellite to its proper orbit. NASA's Robert O. Aller told reporters that the operation, once it begins, will take about a week.

Bad storms ravage parts of country

By The Associated Press

A snowstorm blamed for eight deaths has postponed the arrival of spring from New Mexico to Michigan while 10 inches of rain has flooded part of the Mississippi Valley, driving some people to the rooftops.

Hundreds of people in the Mississippi Valley from Illinois and Missouri to Louisiana and Mississippi were driven from their homes by rivers overflowing near record levels.

Many highways were awash in floodwaters and many schools closed while tornadoes danced through Dixie and baseball-size hail bombarded Natchez, Miss.

The storm first hit California with tree-toppling winds and then unloaded snow up to five feet deep across Utah, Colorado and Wyoming, where temperatures have been at record lows all week — including seven degrees yesterday morning in Denver and one degree in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Nolan Duke of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said, "There is no let up in sight that we can see."

A foot of snow fell overnight in El Paso, Texas, more than the city of 450,000 perched on the Mexican border usually gets in an entire season. The city virtually was closed down, including the airport and the Army's nearby Fort Bliss. Roads were strewn with abandoned cars.

In neighboring New Mexico, 21 inches of snow had fallen at Cloudcroft by morning, with 19 inches measured at Ruidoso.

As some residents worked their way around El Paso on skis or snowmobiles, Mayor Jonathan Rogers urged city workers to stay home "unless absolutely necessary."

A half a foot of wet snow caused many traffic accidents at rush hour in Minnesota's Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

About 300 people had been evacuated from their homes along the Illinois River, mostly in Peoria, Ill., where the river was six feet above flood stage, and farther south in Grafton, where the river was nine feet above flood stage and the main street through the town of 1,000 was under 18 inches of water.

Near the Mississippi-Louisiana border northeast of Baton Rouge, La., ten inches of rain fell overnight and about 40 people fled their homes as the Bogue Chitto River climbed as fast as 11 feet in six hours.

The National Weather Service predicted "a flood of major proportions" on the the Amite, Comite, and Tickfaw rivers.

Before We Put You In Charge Of The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Equipment,

We Put You Through The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Training.

It takes more than 16 months of intensive training to become a fully qualified officer in the Nuclear Navy. You begin with four months of leadership training. Then as a Navy officer, you get a full year of graduate-level training unavailable anywhere else at any price.

Navy training is based on more than 1900 reactor-years of experience. Right now the Navy operates over half the nuclear reactors in America. And the Navy's nuclear equipment is the most sophisticated in the world. That's why your Navy training is and must be the most sophisticated in the world.

As an officer in the Nuclear Navy, you have decision-making authority immediately. You get important management responsibility fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so does your responsibility.

Your training and experience place you among the country's most qualified professionals. (No surprise that most of the men who operate the reactors in private industry started in the Nuclear Navy.)

It takes more time and more effort to become an officer in the Nuclear Navy. But the rewards are greater, too.

The rewards can begin as early as your junior year in college. Qualify, and the Navy will pay you approximately $1000/month while you finish school.

After four years, with regular promotions and salary increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned every year. More responsibility, more money, more future. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, and you want to know more about a future in nuclear power, fill in the coupon.

Today's Nuclear Navy is an opportunity like no other in the world.

Friend also arrested

Handicapped man accused of rape

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 20-year-old man who has been confined to a wheelchair since a policeman shot him in the spine was accused yesterday of raping a young woman with the help of a friend.

James Robinson, 21, the woman's former boyfriend, allegedly helped Ja-Wan McGee out of his wheelchair and onto the ground beside the woman, police said.

The two were charged with first-degree rape and first-degree sex offense, officers said.

McGee was being held in lieu of $12,000 bail. Bail for Robinson, who was on probation for a theft charge, was set at $30,000.

McGee, a black, was paralyzed from the waist down in a pizza parlor shooting. Robinson was with McGee that night and was a key witness against the white off-duty detective who did the shooting.

According to police, the 20-year-old woman met Robinson and McGee on Tuesday night in a park in East Baltimore, and the three went to a secluded area.

The woman said Robinson and McGee told her they had a gun and a knife and would hurt her if she failed to cooperate, police reported.

Sgt. Mike Bass, a police spokesman, said the woman told authorities she was forced to have sex with both men. The woman said she never saw a weapon, according to police.

Police arrested McGee and Robinson early yesterday, Bass said.

The woman was treated for rape and bruises at City Hospitals and released, officers said.

Injuries which paralyze the legs do not always affect a man's ability to have sex.

McGee's family has filed a $15 million civil suit against the city stemming from the March 20, 1980, shooting.

Detective Stephen McCown, who was on his way home from a class at Johns Hopkins University that night, testified at an administrative hearing that he believed McGee, then 17, and Robinson were about to rob the pizza parlor.

An object that McCown saw McGee take from his pocket turned out to be a cigarette lighter. The officer said he thought it was a gun.

Civil rights groups and a coalition of more than 200 black clergymen protested the shooting, particularly after then prosecutor William Swisher decided not to press criminal charges against McCown.

A police administrative review board found the officer had acted improperly, and McCown was dismissed from the police force.

In addition to the civil suit, McGee is also appealing a June decision by the Maryland Criminal Injuries Compensation Board that he was ineligible for financial assistance from the state, said John Enoch, his lawyer in the civil cases.

The board previously ruled McGee eligible for compensation as the victim of a crime, but later reversed itself.

... Bread

The purpose of the Bread for the World seminar last night was to inform students how to work with the organization in conjunction with Notre Dame's World Hunger Coalition, said Dietetler. According to the organization's Campus Resource Kit, a folder of informational pamphlets for interested students, Bread for the World works with universities "to fully integrate public policy information and action for hungry people into campus life."

Jorgensen elaborated on procedures that students could take to facilitate Bread for the World and World Hunger Coalition objectives. Among the ways to increase awareness of public policies regarding food assistance programs and related legislation is organization of events such as a Hunger Awareness Week, according to the Resource Kit.

The kit notes that these endeavors would "increase sensitivity to and knowledge of the world hunger situation."

responsibility "to present it to the administration." He added that "while this proposal is only a first step, we would like to do something to break down the barriers between guys and girls. So many guys and girls aren't pursuing normal relationships — the inhibitions that exist are really bad. That's why our number one thing is to help out the social life on campus."

Jokingly, Callaghan specifically proposed to do his share to alleviate the problem by noting, "I'm available for most formals and SYR's... as long as I'm given 2-3 days' notice and there's a dinner involved."

On a more serious note, Callaghan emphasized his willingness to work with the students and that he is one of their own, "not some guy who lives and dies for student government, but one whose sense of humor is his best asset." Callaghan added, "I'd like to get that across to the people."

Yearly said the pictures were taken several years ago when his wife worked as an exotic dancer.

After Turner's ruling, Yearly claimed he and his wife were being persecuted because of their racially mixed marriage.

LAWYER'S ASSISTANT: A GROWTH CAREER FOR THE 80's

Training as a Lawyer's Assistant can give today's college graduate a valuable edge in the job market.

Entry-level positions in the Chicago area pay as much as $12,000 to $15,000—and some paralegals are now earning as much as $32,000.

It takes just three months of daytime study (six months in the evening) to prepare for a career as a Lawyer's Assistant. The program at Roosevelt University is the largest A.B.A.-approved program in Illinois, and its record of graduate employment assistance is the best there is.

complement their inside power games with good speed to the outside.

Both have displayed flashes of brilliance in their first two years. Smith gained 61 yards in only eight carries in his very first game in a Notre Dame uniform against LSU. Two weeks later he scored his first Notre Dame touchdown as a tailback in place of Phil Carter and Greg Bell in a 15-14 loss to Purdue. As a result of having to play behind talents like Carter and Bell, though, Smith carried the ball only eight more times in 1981.

Thus, with Carter and Bell returning again for 1982, along with a freshman prospect named Pinkett coming in for the fall at tailback, Smith requested that he be moved to linebacker to help out the team. In the first half of the season, he was the backup to weakside linebacker Mike Larkin. Then he asked to be moved to fullback.

Brooks rotated in his freshman year with Moriarty and John Sweeney at the fullback spot. He ran the ball 24 times for 126 yards while scoring a touchdown. Last year he served as a backup to Moriarty and started his first game against Arizona when Moriarty was out with an injury.

Like Smith, Brooks admits that accepting his new role at Notre Dame was quite difficult at first, but he sees the benefits it reaps now.

"I like to carry the ball a lot," explains Brooks, who carried it 493 times for 2,776 yards at Moeller. "My duty here so far, though, has been to block. It was a tough adjustment since I wasn't used to blocking that much at all when I came here, but it has helped make me a more complete player and given me more confidence."

The most amazing thing about Brooks and Smith has nothing to do with statistics. It is the way they view their current competition that is a credit to their attitudes and an asset to the team. When two such talented athletes compete for the same position, something usually has to give and frequently the result is team disunity, talks of transfer, or the old silent treatment.

This is not the case in this situation, though.

Best of friends on and off the field, the two are not competing against each other but for each other.

"It's really a lot of fun in practice knowing that we can give advice and help each other out in any way we can," says Brooks. "We really look after each other so that we can both be the best we possibly can be.

"I have to take a back seat to the efforts of what the team wants and strives for — a national championship. I just want to blend in to what the team wants, not vice versa."

"This moving from position to position in my career was for the purpose of benefitting the team as a whole at that time," says Smith. "I just want to contribute for the best of the team. If that means playing the whole quarter, or just a minute, fine."

For two years the dynamic one-two punch has engaged in mostly dress rehearsals. The curtain call comes this fall.

Volleyball signs recruits

The Notre Dame volleyball team has announced that two recruits for the 1983 squad have announced their intentions to come to the school. Mollie Merchant and Kathy McKeown, teammates at Laguna High School in Laguna Beach, Calif., are the first recruits to officially commit themselves to the school.

Merchant was a setter for her Laguna team that captured the league title this past fall. She has competed in the Junior Olympics and the Junior Nationals. She was also named Most Valuable Player in the South Coast Volleyball League.

"Mollie is an excellent defensive player and she has very good technique, which is a credit to her high school program," says Irish coach Sandy Vanslager. "She sets the ball from anywhere on the court with excellent proficiency and consistency."

McKeown also competed in the Junior Olympics and Junior Nationals and played a big part in her team's success.

"Kathy is an outstanding defensive player who can move quickly to the ball," says Vanslager.

Gandy, 7-5, 6-2, and Spengler topped off NU's day with a 6-0, 6-4 win over Camille Cooper.

The match was played indoors in the North Dome, and took over five hours to complete.

"When you can't get on all the singles at one time, the match drags for a while," said Petro, who had to leave the match early because of a recruiting trip. "Instead of being three hours long, the afternoon lasts for five hours."

The women's tennis squad, the only Division II team left at the University, fell to 2-4, mainly against a Division I schedule.

"I think playing teams (like Northwestern) will pay off in the long run, whatever the outcome," says Petro. "You just won't see the dividends until the tournament."

Clubs are busy as year nears end

Rivalry is an essential element in club sports as it is in varsity sports. It promotes a team spirit even stronger than usual. Notre Dame's rivalry with teams like Michigan, Southern Cal, Penn State, and UCLA, has traditionally captured the imaginations of sports fans across the country. This weekend, many of Notre Dame's club sports faced some of their fiercest rivals.

RUGBY — Notre Dame's Rugby Club won two of the three games it played this weekend against Ohio State. This weekend's match marked the first meeting between the two teams in several years.

The B and C teams defeated the Buckeyes 8-4 and 18-0, respectively, while the A team dropped its game to the Buckeyes 3-6. Notre Dame's loss to Ohio State in the A game caused the Irish to lose possession of the Cantwell Cup which is awarded to the winner of the A game.

The president of the Rugby Club, Sean Sullivan, believes the team played well despite adverse field conditions. The game also pointed out a few of the team's weaknesses.

Next weekend, the Irish will play Lincoln Park University in Chicago. "Lincoln Park is not one of the better clubs in Chicago so I think we will beat them," predicts Sullivan.

SOFTBALL — At the end of the fourth inning of Tuesday's opener against the Saint Mary's varsity team, the game was called because of "April showers." The Irish were leading at the time, 14-9. The game was Notre Dame's first of the season and, if it were not for the poor weather conditions, the Irish might have claimed their first victory.

"We wanted to play another inning, but the field was unplayable and it was drizzling the whole time," said Club President Chris Callahan.

Last season, the Irish won three of the four games they played against Saint Mary's and will attempt to reschedule the game for sometime later this season. "It's frustrating," commented Callahan, "because we really can't call it a win."

Today, the Irish will host Saint Francis College at 3 p.m.

SAILING — Last weekend, the Notre Dame sailing club traveled to Miami University of Ohio to capture third place behind Ohio Wesleyan and Miami. The club president, J.B. Kuppe, was pleased with the outcome of this weekend's regatta since Miami and Ohio Wesleyan are ranked among the top 15 sailing clubs in the nation. Kuppe was also pleased with the consistency of this year's sailors.

Next weekend, the Irish will compete in a regatta at Marquette University. Kuppe anticipates a strong finish at the regatta because the freshman sailors will accompany the club on the trip. "All we have to do now is get our freshmen pumped about the rest of the regattas and we will do well this season," he commented.

MEN'S VOLLEYBALL — On Saturday, the men's volleyball team will travel to Bowling Green, Ohio to compete in the Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association's championship tournament. The club president, Clark Gibson, expects to win the tournament since the Irish have defeated all the other teams competing in the tournament at least once.

Club Corner

The Irish are 55-17 this season and are ranked in first place in the league. Gibson believes the Irish are well prepared for the tournament and that "this is the year for a league championship."

GYMNASTICS — The Notre Dame gymnastics team will travel to Purdue University on Saturday to compete in its last meet of the season. The men's team is 3-4 this season while the women's team holds a 6-5 record. Scott Fortman, the club president, describes the rivalry between Purdue and Notre Dame as "friendly," despite the men's loss to Purdue in their last meet by a fraction of a point.

Fortman is optimistic that the women's team will defeat Purdue this weekend but anticipates a close contest between the men's teams. "I think we can beat both teams, but the race is going to be on the men's team," he said.

ROWING — The Rowing Club's meet which was scheduled for this Saturday was changed to Sunday due to a conflict with the MCAT exams. On Sunday, the Irish will host the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, and Lincoln Park University. Notre Dame will encounter its toughest competition from Lincoln Park who holds last year's club championship title.

Jim Feider, Club President, believes Sunday's meet will indicate how the Irish will fare for the remainder of the season. "Right now, the whole team is strong and no one crew stands out at this time," said Feider. "We should have a better indication after Sunday's meet."

WOMEN'S TRACK — Notre Dame's women's track team will travel to Hope College on Saturday for its second meet of the season. Club president, Rose Marie Luking, expects to do well at the meet and believes that her runners will be competitive against Hope.

The track team has been seriously affected by injuries this season and will be missing a number of runners. If the injured runners return to complete the season, Luking is confident that the squad will perform well during the final two meets of the year.

Keith Marrero of Love and the Shooting Stars goes up for a dunk in his team's easy 21-7 victory over The Even Worse Off in the Bookstore Hall of Fame game. The game was highlighted by some humorous antics by the losers. The main competition begins today.

Dziabis pulls hamstring

Irish beat weather, win two relays

By DEAN SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

If Dick Addis had been in Cape Girardeau, Mo., last weekend with the Notre Dame track team, he would have been at a loss for one weather word. A few would have come to mind, such as cold, windy, and wet.

The track team traveled to the campus of Southeast Missouri to compete in the S.E. Motion Relays. Despite the poor conditions and injuries to key individuals, the Irish gave a fine performance.

Led by Co-captain Jim Moyer, the 4 by 1600 meter relay team captured first place. Moyer, a senior from Downers Grove, Ill., ran the first leg in a blazing 4:11 to pave the way for teammates Jim Tyler, Tim Cannon, and Andy Dillon, each of whom finished strong to outdistance the field by 20 seconds.

The other Notre Dame victory came in the 4 by 800 meter relay. Paced by All-American Steve Dziabis and freshman John McNelis, Notre Dame set a track record with a time of 7:32.6. Tyler and Moyer also turned in sparkling performances in that event.

Because of the weather, results were sub-par. This was most evident in the 110-meter high hurdles. Miguel Williams of Middle Tennessee holds the nation's fastest time this year in that event, but he could only muster a time of 14.3, one-tenth of a second ahead of third-place finisher John McCloughan, a Notre Dame graduate student.

Van Percy, Jan Kania, Dziabis, and Tyler, sometimes called the Sprint Medley team, fared well in the adverse conditions, placing fourth in 3:30.6. In the open 1500-meter run, sophomore Tim Cannon ran a 3:54.1 to finish third. Teammate Ralph Caron finished sixth in the same race.

In the field events, Notre Dame also made a good showing. Sophomore James Patterson gave a superlative effort on his final jump to place second in the long jump. Chuck Constable high jumped six-foot-eight inches to tie for third place and Charlie Brady hurled the javelin 174 feet which was good for sixth place.

In the 4 by 400, Notre Dame and Dziabis dodged a bullet. The relay team was headed for an easy victory when Dziabis had to step off the track. The co-captain, who has a history of leg problems, had felt a twinge in his hamstring.

Coach Joe Piane was not sure whether the injury was a pull or scar tissue from a previous injury tearing. Nevertheless, Dziabis will not compete in this weekend's Midwest Catholic Championships. He is expected to be back for next week's Indiana State Championships.

Freshman hurdler Dean McFarlane also suffered a leg injury, causing him to be scratched from the 4 by 110 shuttle hurdle relay. Freshman John Gleason did an admirable job filling in at the last minute, helping the relay team to a sixth place finish.

Hurricanes arrive a bit early

By STEVE LABATE
Sports Writer

The latest change involving the Notre Dame football team does not involve any personnel, instead it pertains to the 1983 Irish schedule.

The originally scheduled Nov. 26 game with the Hurricanes of Miami in the Orange Bowl has been moved ahead eight weeks to Sept. 24. The reason? What else? National television. This time it's CBS's turn to alter the Irish schedule.

Not only is there a date shift, but a time slot change as well. CBS has switched the game to Saturday evening instead of the afternoon so that it can draw a larger audience.

Notre Dame head coach Gerry Faust does not seem to mind, however.

"We're not displeased with the change," said Faust. "It puts us in a situation where we play 11 straight games again, but it moves the game back into September where we think it has some advantages for us."

"You worry about the heat down there at that time of year. But what we like about it is that we were going to have to play Miami in the last week and they would have two byes out of three weeks. It would have given them two or three weeks to prepare for us whereas we would have had to play them straight through."

The last game of the year will now be against Air Force on Nov. 19. The game, at Notre Dame, will be the first time the team has closed a season at home since 1969. This too pleases Faust who, no doubt, would like to get even with the Falcons.

Chris Smith, Mark Brooks

Big chance has arrived for friends

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

For two years now, sophomore fullbacks Mark Brooks and Chris Smith have been anxiously waiting.

With the completion of Larry Moriarty's career at Notre Dame, the duo now have the chance this spring and fall to finally fully display the talents that left recruiters throughout the nation in awe two years ago.

Ever since the two Cincinnati natives stepped onto the Notre Dame campus in the fall of 1981, phrases such as "unlimited potential," "has all the tools," and "loaded with talent," have been used repeatedly to describe them.

Spring Football '83

They were thought to be the major gems of what was described by some sources as the greatest array of football recruits ever hauled in by a school in a single year.

Brooks was the 1980 Ohio Class AAA Player of the Year as he led Gerry Faust's final edition at Moeller High to the state championship. He was ranked as the No. 1 freshman backfield prospect by Parade Magazine for 1981 — an honor bestowed upon Eric Dickerson in 1979, Herschel Walker in 1980, and Marcus DuPree in 1982.

Smith was another Parade All-America who starred as a fullback and linebacker at LaSalle High School in Cincinnati. At times he actually raised more eyebrows than even Brooks as a top backfield prospect. Joe Terranova, considered the top scout of high-school talent, was so impressed by Smith that he stated that he "may be the only player in America to compare favorably with Herschel ("My body is like an army") Walker from a pure strength standpoint."

Brooks, at 6-3, 228-lb., and Smith, at 6-2, 228-lb., possess the classic rock solid and statuesque build for a fullback. Both contain about as much fat in their body as Donny and Marie Osmond contain yellow in their teeth. The two can also

Mark Brooks (35) and Chris Smith (32), shown here looking for an elusive ball, are now looking for the starting fullback spot. However, the two good friends are competing against each other to see who will succeed Larry Moriarty. There is no rivalry between the two, though, as they give each other advice. Women fall to NU's powerful tennis team

By MIKE RICCARDI
Sports Editor

Sharon Petro's Notre Dame women's tennis team knew what it was in for when it scheduled Northwestern University. And it was not let down as the Wildcats, ranked No. 6 in the country, defeated the Irish women, 8-1, under the North Dome of the ACC.

"We look forward to matches like these," said Petro. "It gives us a chance to see how we stack up against the big names — and in Northwestern, we faced some pretty good players."

The 'Cats established their dominance early, whipping the Irish in all three doubles matches. NU's Maeve Quinlan and Courtney Lord took Mary Colligan and Pam Fischette, 6-4 and 6-3, Randi Rosen and Cindy Brightfield defeated ND's Laura Lee and Lisa LaFratta, 6-2, 7-5, and Caroline Spengler and Kim Gandy beat Cathy Schnell and Lisa Gleason, 6-4 and 6-0.

LaFratta and Lee held a 5-4 edge in the second set on the 'Cats pair, but Rosen and Brightfield broke the Irish women's service to win in straight sets.

The tough loss set the tone for the afternoon as Notre Dame was able to win only one of six singles matches. In the first set of three matches on the indoor courts, Susie Panther defeated Tina Oechsle in a nip-and-tuck battle, 7-5, 2-6, and 6-4. The Panther-Oechsle match was one of only two three-setters on the day.

In the other close match, No. 1 singles player Mary Colligan took Lord to a third set after winning a second-set tie-breaker, but lost, 2-6, 7-6, and 5-7.

Rosen beat No. 2 LaFratta, 6-2 and 6-0, Quinlan took Lee in two difficult sets, 7-5, 6-4, No. 4 Fischette lost to

Bookstore opens with a blessing

By JEFF BLUMB
Sports Writer

The trampoline had just been put off to the side and the show appeared to be over. "Are you ready to get killed now?" one of them jokingly asked the others.

It was now two minutes before game time and the reality of having to play Love and the Shooting Stars was quickly approaching.

Then, who should arrive but Father Theodore Hesburgh, C.S.C., for a pre-game Latin blessing?

Still, there was a game to be played. The Even Worse Off would have to take the court to play in the second annual Hall of Fame game that would open Bookstore XII.

As was expected, The Even Worse Off lost to the highly-favored Love and the Shooting Stars. But before falling 21-7 to the team led by Irish varsity forward Karl Love, The Even Worse Off put on a show to be remembered by many for a long time.

At around 6:05, a blue limousine drove up to Bookstore court 9 and pulled out to center court. Out stepped a driver who then rolled out a red carpet from the car's passenger door. One by one, they stepped out amidst assorted cheers, high fives, and clapping.

The members of The Even Worse Off had arrived — and in grand style.

A small trampoline, borrowed from the gymnastics team, quickly was set up a few feet from the basket. After a brief dunking exhibition by The Even Worse Off, made up of team members Mike Cornett, Larry Augustin, Joe Staten, Rob Snyder, and Bob Simoni, the game was ready to begin.

But not before Hesburgh had blessed the team in Latin.

It seems that Cornett had written to Hesburgh, asking for him to be there to bless them. In reply, Hesburgh told the team that he wasn't sure of his agenda for that day, but that he would try to be there.

"Contrary to popular belief, I was not there to give them their last rites," said the University President. "Before the game I told them that the only thing that would make them 'even worse off' would be if they had me on their team."

"Still, I was proud of the way they played," continued Hesburgh. "They got about, what, eight baskets. And played really well at the end."

Incidentally, this was the first Bookstore Basketball game that Hesburgh had attended since he watched Gerry Faust's team play two years ago in the Irish coach's first year at Notre Dame.

Cornett had also written to Irish basketball coach Digger Phelps asking him to be their coach. Phelps, unfortunately, could not make it because he was at the NCAA Finals in Albuquerque.

The game was fun for all, especially the crowd of about 250 assembled around Bookstore court 9.

"I had more fun tonight than I had all (Irish varsity) season," said Love. "I think that it (The Even Worse Off's sideshow) made it a little more exciting, especially for them."

The Even Worse Off worked on many ideas for the game. "We wanted to make it memorable," said Cornett.

"And we scored more points this year than we did last year," added Augustin.

Bookstore XII

Of The Even Worse Off points, Cornett, Augustin and Snyder each had two. Augustin pulled down two of his team's four rebounds.

For the winners, Love and John Frierot had five apiece, with Keith Marrero and Chris Brown each adding four. Love and Frierot had four and three rebounds, respectively.

Bookstore XII Commissioner Dave Dziedzic was pleased with the way the tournament's opening game went.

"It served its purpose in that it got interest going," said Dziedzic. "We got what we wanted — a big draw team with Karl Love and a team with a bunch of guys who just wanted to have fun."

"I think the spirit of Bookstore really shone through. And with Hesburgh there, (the game) symbolized that the tournament is for everyone."

The Even Worse Off have said that they would like to be asked back to

Baseball returns, strong as ever

Take me out to the ball game, take me out with the crowd...

Let's take a look at the calendar.

The hockey season is into the playoffs. In other words, we now get to see the real season — minus five pathetic teams.

The NBA is also getting ready for the playoffs. The big race isn't for the last playoff spot, though. It's for the worst record. Do you think that may say something about the league.

Then we have football. Football? Oh, that's right. George Allen's team is supposed to win the league easily.

Wait a second! What's this in the air? The smell of rawhide and rosin.

Ah, baseball. America's Pastime. I thought the season never would begin.

I remember my first baseball game. It was back in '68 or '69. Orioles 7, Red Sox 6. My dad and uncle, both Boston fans, bought me peanuts and cracker jacks. At least I think they did. I just remember all the lights on the scoreboard and the score — and my dad and uncle complaining about their team's loss.

This was for me. Like 99 percent of my friends, I grew up wanting to play for the Orioles. Who cared about football or basketball? There wasn't much chance of growing up big or tall enough to be great in either sport. So I played Little League baseball and, of course, my dad was the coach.

As was the case with most of my friends, however, the physical talent to go on to a much higher level of play was not there. I never lost my love for the game, though. And judging from the record-breaking crowds that see the 4,200-plus games each year, there are many who share the same feeling.

It's hard to believe that, a couple of years ago, people were saying that baseball was no longer America's Pastime. They said that football was now the No. 1 sport. Look at the crowds that football draws, they'd say. Look how many people watch on television, especially during the Super Bowl. When the baseball players went on strike, you could almost hear them play the funeral march.

Were they ever wrong. Baseball never died, it just

Mike Sullivan

Assistant Sports Editor

took a nap for a couple of months. Last year, the year after the strike, the attendance records were broken again.

All the arguments about crowd size were wrong, too. Think about it. Most football teams sell out every home game (well, at least we can imagine it) — all eight of them. Each game is one of only 16, so it is very important. Most baseball teams average at least 18,000-20,000 fans per game. That many people for one of 81 home games. To see one game of a 162-game season.

The television argument doesn't work too well either. More people watch a single football game than a baseball game, but, there aren't that many football games. The Super Bowl is another example. It's only one game, while the World Series lasts at least four.

Why, then, is baseball so popular? After all, "it's so boring, isn't it?"

The people who feel this way just don't understand the beauty of the game. They think that, because there is a lot of standing around and a lack of constant action, it's not a real sport. They don't realize that there is so much more to the game than hitting, pitching, fielding, and running. There's a lot of strategy in every move, every decision. It is such an intricate sport that it can be called, as it often has been, an art.

But there is more to baseball's secret of success than its beauty. There is also its unpredictability. The old adage about "on any given day" is fulfilled in baseball more than any other sport. If a team has a hot pitcher or hot bats on that one night, it can beat any other team, no matter how outclassed it is. Even the Cubs win at least 50 games a year.

And baseball is fun to watch. They're big summer parties. What other sport can you watch stretched out in the warm summer air, with a beer in hand? And you don't miss any big plays.

Sorry, football fans, but baseball has always been No. 1 and it will stay that way as long as it exists.
