Business school given endowment

By RICHARD PILGER
News Staff

An endowment fund for outstanding Notre Dame business students has been established by the expansive May Company of St. Louis. Stephen Lourie, a company representative, presented the initial check of $2,500 last Friday.

The fund will be used to recognize up to three undergraduate marketing majors each year. Eligible students may apply in the second semester junior year, and faculty members from the Marketing Department will select the recipients based on academic achievement, extra-curricular activities, and contributions to the department.

The award itself will consist of an engraved plaque presented to the winning student at a special dinner in the fall.

Marketing Department Chairman Mike Etzel praised the endowment as a means "to acknowledge quality student performance, and make students aware of opportunities in the college of business and marketing."

Senior Mike Berry, marketing club president, commented, "The retailing industry has much to offer the marketing student. With an endowment and recognition program such as this, perhaps we can help the students look more closely at the industry as a viable option in determining career paths."

The May Department Stores Company is composed of eleven divisions nationwide, which grossed $3.6 billion last year. Several May Company stores, such as Famous Barr of St. Louis, are active at Notre Dame. They provide paid summer internships at positions comparable to those of starting executives. On-campus interviews are conducted by these stores in late February.

Lourie indicated that several universities have received similar endowments from other May Company divisions, and that, like Notre Dame, they were selected because of excellence in their schools of business.

anonymity, said "a number of military personnel have been placed on partial alert."

Turkish troops also were reported on alert.

Kyprianou blamed the new Cyprus crisis on the Turkish military government, which recognized the new state after an emergency Cabinet meeting in Ankara.

Authorities have closed the only crossing point on the heavily fortified "green line" dividing the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia.

But there was a remarkable lack of tension along the frontier.

Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot soldiers sunned themselves in the warm autumn weather outside their concrete bunkers in full view of each other across a narrow no man's land.

Both Greece and Turkey are members of NATO. In Brussels Wednesday the alliance expressed concern over this new point of tension between the two countries, but refused to get involved in efforts to solve the problem.

Kyprianou said "the use of force is not the answer, the answer is effective steps to change what has happened."

Greek and Turkish armies prepare for war

NICOSIA, Cyprus — President Spyros Kyprianou yesterday ruled out the use of force to reunify Cyprus, but Greek and Turkish troops were reported on alert after the Turkish-occupied sector of the island declared itself independent.

Kyprianou, who is a Greek Cypriot, indicated he would ask the U.N. Security Council to impose sanctions against Turkey and northern Cyprus.

Turkey, which invaded the long-disputed Mediterranean island in 1974, has 25,000 troops in the newly declared Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus — sent nine years ago, ostensibly to protect the rights of Cyprus' ethnic Turkish minority.

In Athens, Greek government spokesman Dimitrios Maroudas told reporters the Socialist government was "not contemplating to declare a mobilization or send warships to Cyprus" in reaction to the Turkish Cypriot move.

Military sources in Athens said army reservists in specialized units have been called up for duty along Greece's northern border with Turkey.

Council reviews examination code

The University Academic Council opted yesterday to delay action on a series of proposed major revisions of the existing final exam policy.

The proposed changes are the result of a study conducted by a six-member faculty board formed in March by University Provost Timothy O'Meara.

"The overriding consensus was that there had not been enough discussion on the committee's proposal within the University community," said Richard Conklin, director of Information Services. The meeting was closed to the press.

The proposal will be sent to the Faculty Senate, college councils and other campus organizations for discussion.

Father James Burtchaell, professor of theology, made a 30-minute presentation to the council detailing the committee report and proposals.

The suggestions in the report include the following:

- The current policy that "a two-hour final examination must be given at the time and place stipulated in the official exam schedule" would be enforced. This requirement would not be satisfied or replaced by a series of earlier exams, a take-home exam, a research paper or project.

- The final exam would be weighted for not "less than one-third or more than two-thirds of the semester's work in determining the final grade." The present policy specifies that the exam may not be worth more than one-third of the final grade.

- Graduating seniors would no longer be eligible for exemption from final exams if they earned a "B" grade or higher during the semester. Graduating seniors are currently eligible for such an exemption at the discretion of the instructor.

The proposal changes would not affect graduate final exam policy because of "differences in graduate education in the various disciplines," according to the report.

Burtchaell's presentation prompted an extended discussion by the Council.

"I expected that the discussion would be quite lengthy. Although I hadn't anticipated canvassing the University community at large, I think that is an excellent turn of events," Burtchaell said.

Sports Illustrated writer to give lecture

By JENNIFER MILLER

The Library Auditorium will be the stage for Sports Illustrated's John Underwood as he speaks on "The Decline in Multi-million Dollar Sport's Business and Crisis in Football" tonight at 8.

Underwood, who has been termed "the conscience of sports," has written articles for a number of anthologies, including Best of Sports Illustrated, The Wonderful World of Sports, and Best Sports Stories of the Year. His lecture, explains Student Union academic commissioner Mary Margaret Schmid, "will be primarily based on his most recent publication: The Death of an American Game."

Underwood is expected to cover such topics as brutalism, phantom courses, the hazards of astroturf, and recruiting, according to Schmid.

The writer has been the recipient of several awards for his achievements in exposing scandals in college athlete education, illegitimate money passed to amateur Olympic athletes, and the connection between organized crime and the sports concession empire.

In the January 10, 1983 issue of Sports Illustrated, Underwood published an in-depth study of Notre Dame's athletic department. After his study, he concluded that he admires Notre Dame's athletic program more for its success in turning out educated athletes than for its victories.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Student Union.

In Brief

A strong earthquake jolted the island of Hawaii yesterday, damaging homes, breaking gas and water lines and disrupting telephone service. Four people suffered minor injuries. "It was terrible. The house shook like mad; I thought it was going to come down on me," said Martha McNicoll of Hilo. "My house is a mess, everything is broken. I thought it would never quit." The quake, which struck at 6:13 a.m., registered 6.7 on the Richter scale, said the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu. Some residents said it lasted a full minute. It was centered on the southwest flank of Mauna Loa Volcano, about 70 miles southwest of Hilo, and did not generate a great wave on the Pacific, the center said. The quake was not an indication of an imminent eruption of Mauna Loa, said John Erickson, spokesman for Hawaii Volcanos National Park. Scientists are predicting a major eruption at Mauna Loa within the next year. Many businesses in downtown Hilo had broken windows and water pipes, and at least one gas main was broken, said Sgt. Charles Chai, watch commander at the Hilo police station. Police blocked off downtown streets until merchants arrived at their stores. — AP

Virginia has been spending about $26,000 a day to contain the oily runoff from a pile of 7 million used tires that has been burning at a dump for more than two weeks. About $600,000 has been spent since the fire began 10 miles west of Winchester on Oct. 31. Mitzi Saverline, a spokeswoman at the state Office of Emergency and Energy Services, said Tuesday. More than 456,000 gallons of water and chemical runoff have been removed from around the fire, which is expected to burn for several more months. — AP

Holy Cross Chapel at Saint Mary's will be reopened Sunday, says Director of Campus Ministry Thomas Reid, who supervised the minor renovations. "Statues which had been blocking windows were removed," Reid said. In addition, the chapel will have different chairs. "The old ones have been replaced by nicer ones from the Old College Church. Also a platform has been constructed for an altar," added Reid. It replaces the old-style altar that was no longer appropriate. Reid said, "No formal ceremony has been planned to mark the reopening. Sunday masses will take place as usual." The chapel's renovation was completed slightly behind schedule and was funded by the Campus Ministry's budget. — The Observer

The Day After to reveal horrors of nuclear warfare

The television movie The Day After has been called by some the most important contribution to the public's understanding of nuclear war.

Others, such as arch conservatives William Buckley, Rev. Jerry Falwell, and Phyllis Schlafly, have termed the movie peace-nik propaganda intended to scare persons into thinking the U.S. should capitulate to the Soviet Union.

But no matter what anyone thinks about the implications of The Day After, no one can deny ABC executives think enough of the production to air their multi-million dollar investment Sunday from 8-11 p.m. in hopes of getting U.S. moderates to make up their own minds about the dilemma of nuclear war.

Michael Brennan, founder of the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's chapter of Ground Zero, saw the movie last month and calls it "a landmark movie which will bring nuclear war into America's living rooms." Ground Zero, which calls itself a "non-advocacy, non-partisan nuclear war education project," sees the movie as an expression of "horrors of that which we would rather not think about," according to Brennan.

University professors and administrators share Brennan's belief that the movie is a major event, so big in fact, that Sr. Elaine DesRosiers, director of Educational Media, has planned to show the The Day After on a $16,000 TV projector in the Engineering Auditorium. And she expects an overflow house for the free showing.

But the event will not stop when the movie ends. ABC will devote its "Nightline" program on Sunday to a panel discussion of the movie. Among those invited to participate are former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, scientist Carl Sagan, and former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

Ground Zero and the Center for Social Concerns at Notre Dame also are planning a discussion of the film Monday at 7 p.m. to give proponents and opponents of nuclear war a chance to air their comments on the movie.

At the discussion, communications and theatre department chairman Mitch Lifton and physics professor Bill McGinn will appraise the film according to the success of its dramatic effects and the factuality of its scientific content.

ABC has prepared a viewer's guide to the movie which includes a synopsis of the plot, sample discussion questions, and a selected bibliography. Free copies of the guide are available at the Center for Social Concerns.

Two notable resources for the film include an Arts and Letters Core Course book, Jonathan Schell's The Fate of the Earth, and a Congressional study, "The Effects of Nuclear War."

The movie, says Brennan, is not without faults. Brennan says the film is "somewhat condescending to the American public" as it presents the horrors of nuclear war "in the context of a contemporary American soap opera."

Yet ABC defends its technique, saying entanglements in the private lives of five Kansas City residents stand to make the movie more human and more painful than highly technical programs which examine the effects of nuclear war on black and white graphs.

The film transforms 38-year-old memories of the destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki into realistic screams from men and women who melt into the ground as the first missiles explode over U.S. cities.

Exposing the horror...

Brennan also criticizes the movie because it "assumes no knowledge of nuclear war." Such criticism assumes an audience is well-acquainted with the atomic weapons debate. Most Americans, unlike college students, have little spare time to discuss effects of nuclear warfare.

Although the movie probably will not change the minds of those committed to either the pro- or anti-nuclear camps, the vast majority of undecided Americans who watch the movie should undoubtedly be forced to decide what they really think about nuclear war. And what they find out about the effects of nuclear warfare may not be what President Reagan wants them to discover.

New manager enlivens Senior Bar operations

By JOHN MCGREEVY
News Staff

The appointment of M.J. Murray as part-time administrator overseeing the Senior Bar, has given the establishment a continuity it has lacked in previous years, according to bar staff members.

Since last July, Murray has been in charge of both the financial and managerial aspects of the bar. In previous years, Senior Bar was managed by four student administrators. It is now managed by Murray and three students.

Mark Ruelhman, a current student manager, said, "Senior Bar is simply being run more efficiently now. If something went wrong in the past, there was more of a panic atmosphere because there was no continuity in personnel. The financial records and organization are also much better."

Murray, herself, is extremely happy with the organization of the bar this year. "The operation of the bar is a huge job; this is a big facility. It doesn't let the students do much else if they have complete responsibility."

"In the past, this responsibility, which is a privilege, had been abused but I have been overwhelmed with the maturity that the students have shown working here. The managers and bartenders have done an outstanding job. So far, they have lived up to the challenge laid out to them three months ago: to run the bar properly."

Comparing the management of the bar to that of a dormitory, Murray said, "Imagine what would happen if not only the RA's left each year but the rectors did also." She added that managing the bar is much easier when someone with experience can offer advice on problems related to the situation.

In discussing the financial situation of the bar, Murray stressed its service aspect. "The bar is not a profit or loss institution. It is an organization that offers a service to the students," Murray added that the bar attempts to promote responsible drinking, not simply selling as much alcohol as possible.

Murray also observed that Senior Bar is trying to broaden its appeal and become more of a well-rounded club. New attractions include Chicago-style pizza, hot pretzels, an upgraded stereo system and live disc jockeys. The facility also houses video games, outdoor seating and a dance floor.

Both Ruelhman and Murray feel that the response of the seniors to the bar has been positive, on the whole. "Our goal," said Ruelhman, "is to show seniors that Senior Bar is a great place. We think we're seeing a growing number of faces at the bar this year. We would like Senior Bar to be the place to be."

Recent events at the bar to encourage student attendance have included Budweiser nights, Halloween parties, special liquor promotions and wine-tasting parties. Plans are also being made in conjunction with student government for another non-alcoholic undergraduate night.

A piece of the gym floor from the old fieldhouse is handed over to Kentucky Basketball Coach Joe Hall by Notre Dame alumnus Jack Considine.

Bricks and other precious relics were snatched in droves by students and passers-by alike when the building was demolished last spring.

Kentucky coach given ND souvenir

Special to The Observer

Kentucky Basketball Coach Joe B. Hall now owns a piece of Notre Dame's old fieldhouse floor, thanks to a Notre Dame alumnus.

Jack Considine of Lexington, Ky., a 1949 graduate, presented the souvenir to Hall at a meeting of the Lexington Rotary Club, on behalf of the Notre Dame Club of Central Kentucky. Considine is founder of his local alumni club and president-elect of the Rotary.

The inscription on the gift said it was "in recognition of a great series between two great schools."

"I also told Joe that we found a few blood stains on it," said Considine.

"The stains were too old for analysis, but we figured it had to be Wildcat blood."

Kentucky, coached by the late Adolph Rupp, played many hard-fought games on the fieldhouse floor. The fieldhouse was torn down in March, and a mall was put in its place. Hall-coached teams never played on the floor.

New dry cleaning shop opens at Saint Mary's

By JENNIFER BIGOTT

S & S Dry Cleaners is now open for business at Saint Mary's, according to Earl May, director of purchasing at the College.

Under owner Harold Niemer, the new store will provide a drop-off/pick-up service very similar to the previous cleaners, who left two weeks ago due to a disagreement about next year's contract.

Alterations, repairs, and summer storage off-campus will be provided by the company, along with regular cleaning services. The store is open Monday through Friday from 1 to 5 p.m., and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

One notable aspect of the new cleaners is the absence of a shoe repair service. However, there has been a good student response to the cleaners, said S & S employee Ellen Aiken.

"I think it's great that they're going to be open on Saturday, because it's hard to find time during the week to get the laundry done," said freshman Coquis Casavantes of McCandless Hall.

Campus Cleaners, operated by Sandy Shawhan, left after seven years of service due to a contract dispute involving the locking system on campus, according to May. "Since we couldn't come to an agreement she asked to be moved out at the end of October," he stated.

May, along with Saint Mary's Controller Jason Lindower, had the final word on the new cleaners opening on campus.

ND professor approves of new King holiday

By JOAN GIBLIN
News Staff

Martin Luther King deserves to be only the second American honored with a national holiday in his memory, according to Edward Goerner, a professor of government and international studies.

Goerner said King merits the honor, previously held only by George Washington, because "he represents a major coming-to-consciousness that we haven't yet fully solved in this society." Goerner noted that King had earned the prestigious distinction because he "took a powerful and moving stance on the race problem."

King, a celebrated civil rights leader was assassinated in a Memphis, Tenn., motel in 1968.

The bill saluting the slain activist would designate the third Monday in January as a federal holiday.

Goerner said that he didn't think that the bill should be held up to allow history to put King's achievements into perspective, an objection raised by some Senate members, saying, "the interest in the holiday now is both to honor King and to call attention to the fact that we haven't yet solved the race problem; it is still with us."

Goerner continued that in the case of George Washington's holiday, "there was not any burning public problem with Washington's action that needed to be addressed immediately, and he was honored simply because he deserved it."

President Reagan is expected to approve the bill, which begins official observation of the holiday in January, 1986.

Grenadan officials not strict on enforcement

Associated Press

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — When Sir Paul Scoon assumed control of Grenada's government following the U.S.-led invasion, he issued a proclamation granting police sweeping emergency powers, banning public meetings and imposing a nighttime curfew.

"But the phrase 'emergency powers' didn't mean a thing," says the new legal adviser to Scoon and the newly formed Advisory Council which will govern the tiny Caribbean spice island until elections can be held.

"They (the powers) were only temporary and not really enforced," said Anthony Rushford, the English lawyer hired through the British Commonwealth to advise the new civilian administration in Grenada, a former British colony and a Commonwealth member.

Government documents indicate that when Scoon proclaimed a state of emergency on Nov. 4, a set of regulations was published by the Government Printing House outlining his powers and broadcast by Grenadian radio.

"The Governor General was only trying to prevent any potential danger to security," said Rushford, a constitutional law expert who drafted the constitution under which Grenada gained independence in 1974.

"Arresting persons without necessarily bringing them to trial will not be continued any longer than necessary."

He said he thought this detention would last only another week or two. But neither Rushford, Police Commissioner Patrick MacLeish nor individual members of the Advisory Council could say how many arrests had been made by police under the emergency edict.

At the time of the invasion, about 100 political opponents of Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop's were in prison. Bishop was killed Oct. 19 following a coup by more militant members of his government. The invasion occurred six days later.

The U.S. embassy said Tuesday the military prisoner-of-war camp at Point Salines had processed 530 Grenadians and 600 Cuban prisoners since the Oct. 25 invasion and will be dismantled.

Embassy spokesman Jim Dandridge said the Cubans were sent to Havana while all but 40 of the Grenadians were released. Those 40 were turned over to Grenadian authorities and sent to Richmond Hill Prison in St. George's.

Rushford and the Council's temporary chairman, Nicholas Braithwaite, a former chief education officer in Grenada, indicated that the panel would be considering the possibility of continuing, modifying or eliminating the emergency powers in the next few days.

"There is bound to be an element of political tension during a situation such as this," said Rushford. "Some people may want not to cooperate with the civil government, and these would certainly be picked up."

He said the temporary restraint on public gatherings was considered necessary at the time it was issued but may no longer be valid.

And he indicated the nighttime curfew "was simply an exhortation by the Governor General: 'please stay off the streets.' It was never enforced. It was never meant to be."

The informal curfew's hours were from 8 p.m. to 5 a.m., but they were ignored by virtually everyone who had a need to be out at night.

Five of the nine members of the new Council were sworn in Tuesday at Government House, Scoon's residence. Scoon plans to hold elections in about six months.

A White House task force arrives in Grenada today to discuss long-term, economic aid.

GI's coming home for Christmas

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan won't ask for authority to keep U.S. troops in Grenada past the Christmas deadline set by Congress, because the administration expects all combat forces to be withdrawn before then, a White House spokesman said yesterday.

House and Senate leaders are split on whether to allow American forces to remain on the island under the War Powers Act. But the administration's plan would avoid another confrontation like the one that resulted in the compromise with Congress in September that allowed U.S. marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 more months.

Larry Speakes, the spokesman, said, "We have indicated to the Congress that there is no need for any congressional action, in our opinion, on war powers. We don't anticipate there will be any additional hostilities, and combat troops will be out, as Department of Defense said, before the 60-day period expires."

The 1973 War Powers Act requires the president to withdraw troops within 60 days from situations of combat or imminent danger of hostilities, unless Congress declares war or authorizes an extension.

"We do not acknowledge the need for a 60-day period," Speakes said, but "combat troops will be out" nonetheless.

Shortly after the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada on Oct. 25, Congress invoked the War Powers Act which meant American troops must be withdrawn by Dec. 24.

Speakes would not say whether the administration regards military construction workers, military police or medical personnel as "combat troops" under terms of the law.

Russians to deploy cruise missiles

Associated Press

LONDON — The Soviet Union is expected to deploy its own version of the American cruise nuclear missile next year aboard its Yankee-class submarines, the authoritative Jane's Defense Review reported yesterday.

Though its guidance system will be less sophisticated than the U.S-built Tomahawk cruise missile, the SSN-X-21 "reportedly uses turbofan (propulsion) and microelectronic technology which the Soviets have obtained from the West," the Defense Review said. It did not elaborate and did not disclose the source of its information.

NATO plans to deploy 464 land-based cruise missiles and 108 Pershing-2 ballistic rockets in Western Europe over the next five years. The first of the cruise missiles arrived Monday at Greenham Common U.S. air base west of London.

Cruise is a generic label for slow missiles that fly at roughly the speed of a commercial jetliner at low altitutes to evade enemy radar. Ballistic missiles fly many times faster and rocket high into the atmosphere before stabbing down at their targets.

The American Tomahawk cruise weapon is ground-launched. It contains a sophisticated computer guidance system that follows an electronic map to keep the missile hugging the ground until it strikes its target.

It has a range of 1,500 miles, a margin of error at its target of just 50 yards and a warhead of 200 kilotons — 16 times times the destructive power of the bomb that leveled Hiroshima.

Indiana bishop meets Russians

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bishop George Fulcher of Lafayette, Ind., met briefly yesterday with a Soviet Embassy official inside the embassy, but the aide rebuffed the Catholic bishop's effort to deliver thousands of letters pleading for exit visas for three Soviet citizens.

Fulcher had hoped to talk ith Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, but met instead with a low-level embassy aide for ten minutes.

Fulcher said the Soviet aide believes the letter-writing campaign by Lafayette area residents was an attempt to link the visas with the issue of nuclear weaponry.

"He says he thinks that's playing on people's fears and that's propaganda," he said. "And that's not addressing the issues as they should be," according to the aide, he said.

Feminist leader declared innocent

Associated Press

GRETNA, La. — A jury found California feminist leader Ginny Foat innocent yesterday of murdering an Argentine businessman 18 years ago, rejecting as lies the testimony by her ex-husband who had implicated her.

"Thank you, thank you, everyone," Foat, 42, said to friends and supporters who cheered in the packed state District Court chamber as the jury returned its verdict after less than two hours of deliberations.

The six-man, six-woman jury had gotten the case after a plea from Foat's attorneys to look on John Sidote, her ex-husband and the prosecution's star witness, as "a crazy man and a liar."

Foat was charged with clubbing

Argentine toymaker Moises Chayo to death with a tire iron in a New Orleans suburb in 1965 while robbing him of $1,400 cash.

Jurors said the verdict was unanimous for acquittal on the first vote.

After the verdict was read, Foat was mobbed by people from the audience offering congratulations. Even members of the jury approached her, some asking her to autograph placemats which they had picked up at lunch.

"We covered all the angles. There was no disagreement," juror Anna Marie Whited said. "We voted. There was just one vote."

Defense lawyer John Reed told the jurors, "You are a wonderful jury. You were just great. This is why we have juries."

When the verdict was announced Foat dropped her head to the table in relief, then jumped up and started hugging her two attorneys.

"You now have the rest of your life, the rest of your life," said her 72-year-old mother, Virginia Galluzzo of New Paltz, N.Y.

"She is finally free, she is finally free," said her sister Emilia Guigi, also of New Paltz.

Had the jury found her guilty of murder, she could have been sentenced to life in prison. A manslaughter verdict could have brought a 21-year term.

Sidote, serving an unrelated prison term in Nevada, was promised immunity from prosecution in the Chayo case in return for his cooperation.

Sidote testified that she lured Chayo out of the bar and the two of them killed him after robbing him of the money he carried to pay his son's hospital bill.

Assistant District Attorney Tom Porteous said the jury was being misled if it accepted Foat's attempts to picture herself as a weak person dominated by someone else.

"It would be more helpful to extend our consideration of it long enough for the faculty at large to become aware of the report and to consider it and express their own thoughts on the matter," he said.

Michael Smith, one of five student representatives on the council, said "The feeling of the Council was that there was not enough input by students and faculty." The senior noted that many of the professors who questioned the proposal were from the College of Arts and Letters.

Smith called the Council meeting "very constructive," noting that the committee's primary objective is "just improving the University."

Philip Gleason, professor of history and another member of the council, said "A good number of people were in agreement that it was a good issue to be raised." Gleason said he felt the outcome of meeting was "very satisfactory."

Burtchell said he did not expect the council to vote on the proposal yesterday. The proposal, he said, "raises very large pedagogical issues, and it's been so long since the Council has had the opportunity to discuss something pedagogical."

Bring Out Your Best...

That's our philosophy at Anheuser-Busch, and that's the opportunity we're offering you in terms of a meaningful and rewarding career to look forward to. Bringing out the best in our people demands creative management, well-defined career objectives, reasons to succeed, and tangible rewards for doing so. Some call it winning. We call it tradition. If you'd like the opportunity to bring out your best, consider the following fast track challenges.

B.S.M.E. - CENTRAL ENGINEERING
If you're on your way to a B.S.M.E. degree, we'll provide you with the opportunity to advance in such diverse fields as material handling, equipment layout, piping system development, steam generation, compressed air systems, ventilation, heating and air conditioning, and high speed bottle and can packaging.

And You'll Come Out A Winner.

B.S.E.E. - CENTRAL ENGINEERING
Individuals graduating with a B.S.E.E. degree can expect involvement in such areas as electrical machine design and application, power distribution, substation layout along with industrial and commercial lighting, electrical control circuits and systems control.

Both of these CENTRAL ENGINEERING opportunities are project-oriented, and present the challenge of taking the project from conception through completion.

Soldiers loyal to Yasir Arafat fire 84mm mortar into rebel PLO and Syrian-backed positions during fighting in Tripoli Tuesday.

Guerrillas run Arafat's fighters from last stronghold in Mideast

Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Lebanon — Guerrilla mutineers drove Yasser Arafat's fighters out of their last Mideast stronghold in fierce hand-to-hand combat at the Baddawi refugee camp yesterday.

At the same time, Israelis flew reprisal raids against Moslem extremist bases in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Unconfirmed radio reports said 100 were killed and 600 wounded in the final Syrian-backed onslaught on Baddawi, and that 33 were killed and 80 wounded in the Israeli air strikes on the Janta and Shaara camps in the Bekaa Valley, just three miles from the Syrian border.

At least 1,000 people were reported killed in the first week of the PLO war in Tripoli, which broke out Nov. 3. On Nov. 6 the mutineers overran the loyalist camp of Nahr el-Bared, and Arafat's men fled to Baddawi. It was not known how many loyalists were in Baddawi when the mutineers fought their way in.

"They entered the camp in the early afternoon," said one Palestine Liberation Organization official who asked not to be named. "Eventually, we had to get out. We can't match them."

The official said that some clashes continued on the southern edge of Baddawi after nightfall, but "very limited."

Arafat appeared at his headquarters in Tripoli early in the afternoon, but made no public statement. He left the headquarters a few minutes later, along with his military adviser, Khalil Wazir, for another location in Tripoli.

The beleaguered Arafat has said he will leave Tripoli only when he has guarantees of safety for his fighters and Palestinian civilians. He has given his probable destination as Tunis, where he set up headquarters 15 months ago after the Israelis forced him and his guerrillas out of Beirut.

Beirut radio said the mutineers were led by Ahmed Jibril, the head of a small, radical PLO faction backed by both Syria and Libya, which accuse Arafat of abandoning military struggle against Israel. The attack began with a Syrian artillery assault, followed by either a Syrian or rebel tank charge.

Just after noon, the camp appeared to be surrounded except for an area to the south and southeast, where heavy fighting raged.

As reporters watched from a ridge just south of the camp, shells from the rebel side crashed into the camp, into orange groves near the sea on the camp's western edge, and into Tripoli itself.

The loyalists in Baddawi fired with multiple rocket launchers and anti-aircraft guns that had their muzzles lowered to meet the attack.

Israeli jets pounded Shiite Moslem guerrilla bases near Lebanon's border with Syria in reprisal for the suicide bombing Nov. 4 that killed 29 Israelis and 32 Lebanese prisoners in Tyre, and two others Oct. 23 that killed 239 American and 58 French troops in Beirut.

Military sources quoted by Israel radio said Israel launched the air strikes after it became clear the United States did not intend to retaliate for the Oct. 23 bombing of the Marine headquarters.

A U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be named, said the United States would not comment on possible retaliation, and that it was not consulted in advance about the Israeli raid.

Senate defeats tuition tax credit bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate, by a 59-38 vote yesterday, spurned P.T. resident Reagan's call for speedy enactment of tuition tax credits for parents of private-school children.

Calling the vote "a sharp blow to tuition tax credits," Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said supporters would have to do a lot of work and organizing before bringing up the matter again.

He said he proposed the legislation at Reagan's request. "It's a matter he had on his must list," Dole told reporters after the vote.

Hoping to leave town Friday for a lengthy recess, senators tabled a motion to add the legislation to a minor Olympic games bill when opponents threatened a filibuster against it and the prospect of numerous amendments arose.

Dole, who introduced the amendment, said Reagan "reaffirmed the strong commitment he's had for a long time, emphasizing the importance of this on the president's agenda." He said Reagan especially wanted the Senate to express itself on the issue this year "because he made a pledge over a year ago that we'd have a vote."

The president, terming the legislation seeking support for it.

But concern over the $200 billion federal deficit as well as the timing of the proposal marked the debate along with arguments over whether the credits would reduce support for the public school system.

The legislation would allow parents of pupils in private elementary and secondary schools a tax credit for up to half of a school's tuition.

The credit, a dollar-for-dollar reduction from taxes owed, would start at a maximum $100 for tuition paid for the 1983 school year, rising to $200 in 1984 and $300 in 1985.

The maximum credit would be available only for families with gross income of less than $40,000 a year. There would be no credit for those with incomes above the $50,000 level. Saying the legislation would cost about $800 million each year by the time it became fully effective, Dole acknowledged "these costs are not insignificant" but added that they would be "a sound and prudent investment in our nation's future."

He said families that send their children to private schools must bear a double burden in having to support the public schools with their taxes at the same time. And he said the legislation was weighted to help those in the lower- and middle-income brackets.

But Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, contended the legislation would "rip a revenue hemorrhage in the economic fabric" and called it "a ripoff for the rich" that would undermine the public school system.

Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., responded that "this is not at odds with the public school system. ...What we're trying to do is introduce or give encouragement to greater pluralism, diversity and competition in the American education system."

Parents warned of ABC film

Associated Press

These days before "The Day After" have thousands of teachers and parents across the nation preparing for the fallout from a TV movie about nuclear war that they say could trigger nightmares, depression and hopelessness in young children.

The film, to be telecast at 8 p.m. EST Sunday on ABC, depicts in graphic detail what might happen in the days before, during and after a nuclear strike on Kansas City, Mo. In one scene, a class of grade-school children is irradiated, their bodies turning into glowing skeletons.

The network's last-chance warning, "parental discretion is advised," is not enough for school officials who have previewed the film. They are sending notes home to parents, consulting psychiatrists and setting aside class time Monday morning for discussions of the film.

"To a person we found it powerful, gripping, graphic and depressing," the board of the National Association of Independent Schools said in a letter to school principals, many of whom forwarded the letter to parents.

The program will be shown at Notre Dame Sunday night at 8 on a large-screen TV in the Engineering Auditorium.

Why does the state visit?

It was a close one for the senators when the bomb exploded while they were not in session. For a number of them it could have spelled an endgame. And it would have been witnessed by millions on TV — which is what the little band of plotters wanted.

Max Lerner

Fortunately, the Senate had canceled its session. So it has again tightened its security and become an armed camp. But can it totally? And why do we have to turn our government institutions into a zoo, to be watched by tens of thousands of the curious and provide a confusion within which the mischievous and murderous can operate? Surely we can contrive saner ways of doing things.

I apply this to presidential state visits as well. There are always reasons for them. If ever a trip by a president makes sense by the traditional logic of state, it ought to be the trip to Japan and South Korea, both of them vital to American interests in the Asian perimeter of challenge and power. Yet I am troubled that Ronald Reagan had to take it on.

There are some presidential trips that became history on a grand scale. FDR's wartime trysts with the coalition heads of state, Eisenhower's I shall go to Korea visit to the front, Kennedy's Ich bin ein Berliner assertion to the cheering citizens of the walled city.

The rest? I doubt whether much of it was worth the tension and exhaustion and danger it took.

In a world of plots and terrorism the danger is there for all heads of state. But some are especially vulnerable. On a state visit to Burma, almost the whole of the South Korean cabinet was massacred, and the prime minister barely escaped. President Reagan prudently canceled the Manila segment of his trip. The risk would have been clear and present.

To make such state visits in an age of terror involves bringing along a small army of security men and imposes on the host nation the massing of an even larger army of police and militia. Its only substantive contribution would seem to be to employment in both nations.

It also engages a battalion of writers of speeches and communiques, which usually show the signs of prefabrication. Few decisions are made which have not already been reached on both sides.

Their real function is in the area of national psychology. It would have shored up President Marcos' faltering regime if the U.S. president had ventured a visit. The trip to Tokyo was expected to enhance the image of Prime Minister Nakasone and President Reagan together. The visit to Seoul could be a useful defiance thrown at the terrorists of North Korea.

But is it enough? There are extreme situations in the world because there are extreme states of mind. From Oswald to Agca, despite the Marxist theory that leaders don't count in history, the KGB has been able to find recruits whose fires of hatred are used against important leader targets in the West. Why make it easier for them to reach those targets?

Alcohol problem

Dear Editor:

In response to Tuesday's article on the Student Senate discussion of the alcohol problem on campus, it sounds as if the Senators have finally hit on the end-all solution to the drinking problem here at Notre Dame: simply have our incompletely committed rectors lock up all male freshmen and sophomores, as well as all Black students coming from non-Protestant backgrounds, every Friday and Saturday nights.

Please, Mr. Callaghan, leave your sparse social-psychological knowledge out of the discussion and address the problem at hand. As you do so, you will see that it does not lend itself well to these type of generalizations. The article also makes it sound as if every alcoholic beverage consumed on the campus is done so with the intent to get irretrievably inebriated. Again, I beg to differ.

And if Notre Dame is made a 21 campus, will students remain on-campus due to a lack of initiative to move off? Possibly, but witness their migration en masse every weekend to parties and bars off-campus in order to imbibe freely. This, of course, entails returning to the campus at all hours of the night, more often than not in states unsuitable for driving. I say far better to drink here, in a controlled atmosphere, than to be forced to go elsewhere and face the grim prospects of driving while under the influence.

And so, realizing that newspaper accounts may unwittingly alter the facts, I invite Mr. Callaghan or any other member of the Student Senate to offer a rebuttal if he or she sees fit. My guess is that I am not alone in my confusion.

Steven F. Kranz

On ignorance

Dear Editor:

As a college student striving to become informed about the day's issues, I am angered and frustrated by the gross overgeneralizations and irresponsibility demonstrated by John C. Kairis and Joseph A. Bouley in their respective (but not respectable) letters to the editor. The ignorance of their statements exemplifies the ill effects of being narrow-minded and shallow in one's reasoning.

Mr. Kairis and Mr. Bouley, unfortunately enough, would have us believe that the Soviet Union is singular in its "disregard of treaties, peaceful governments, and people's lives" in asserting its global will.

However, it seems to me that America has supported her own share of repressive regimes (e.g. the Shah of Iran) and has often resorted to even the most questionable methods of intervention in order to secure its economic and political interests (e.g., its shady involvement in the Chilean elections of 1972). How soon we forget!

Grenada, incidentally, does not represent the first time the United States has intervened militarily in a Latin American country (Guatemala, 1954; the Dominican Republic, 1965, among others). Although the Soviets occupy Afghanistan and parts of Africa and Asia, the United States continues to occupy southeast Asia (even after 30 years!) and, of course, Latin America. The truth of the matter is that both superpowers are attempting to assert their own wills on countries that would best be without them; both play in the mud while calling the other "dirty." Funny how we simply fail to see that!

I love America. And if one really loves something, he or she must be able to see the good and the bad in it. Only by acknowledging the bad can one strive to correct it, ultimately bringing about truth and justice.

However, ignorance keeps us from seeing the truth of the matter at hand. Ignorance, for example, sees the world in terms of black and white (e.g. the Soviet Union represents "terrorism" but the United States "democracy" alone — as Mr. Kairis suggests). It is this same ignorance that results in wreckless labelling, such as Mr. Bouley's use of the term "flower children." Would that life were so easy!

Unfortunately, it is not, and I suggest that Mr. Kairis, Mr. Bouley and their sympathizers come to terms with this reality soon.

However, should they choose to continue wallowing in their ignorance and over-generalizations, may I suggest the following course of action:

- 1) Stick your head in the sand (that way you will not have to contend with the truth of such matters — after all, ignorance is bliss).
- 2) Let your posterior wave in the breeze (we're getting used to seeing it).
- 3) Do not examine the issue too hard.
- 4) Then, take a hard look at who really might be the dumb a-- after all.

The umpires ruled Brett had pine tar too far up on handle of his bat when he put the ball into the seats at Yankee Stadium.

Brett's two-run homer put Kansas City ahead 5-4. But the umpires' decision gave the Yankees the game.

The Royals appealed to MacPhail, who ordered the game continued from the point of Brett's homer.

After considerable objection on Steinbrenner's part that the game should be completed after the regular season, he finally bowed to MacPhail's order. The game was completed Aug. 18 with the Royals holding their one-run lead and winning.

Steinbrenner has questioned whether Kuhn could give him an objective hearing in the matter. In the past, the two have engaged in numerous disputes. Kuhn leaves office Dec. 31.

Phil and Steve

Mahre brothers lead U.S. ski team

By JOHN MOSSMAN
Associated Press

COPPER MOUNTAIN, Colo. (AP) — The upcoming World Cup season figures to be the last hurrah for twin brothers Phil and Steve Mahre, two of the best ski racers ever and the backbone of the U.S. Men's Alpine team.

"Skiing is still fun, but the traveling is more difficult," Steve Mahre said this week during training for World Cup competition, which begins Dec. 1 in Yugoslavia. "I have a family now, and that makes it harder. I'm looking at this year as being my last."

"It's getting old," echoed Phil. "This is probably my last year."

Phil, 26, of Yakima, Wash., sounded the same warning a year ago but decided to give it another season, partly because this is an Olympic season. But both twins insist that the Olympics be kept in the proper perspective.

"The Olympics is just another race, really," said Phil, the three-time World Cup overall champion. "You make a mistake if you put too much emphasis on it."

Adds U.S. Alpine Director Bill Marolt, "The Olympics is just part of the season. It's a one-shot deal and so much luck is involved. But that doesn't mean we won't be gunning for victory."

Phil is the favorite to capture Olympic gold medals in both the slalom and giant slalom events at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, in February because of his past record and the expected absence of his chief nemesis, Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark.

The International Ski Federation has ruled that Stenmark should not be allowed to participate in the 1984 Olympics because he insists on retaining his B-license, an arrangement that has allowed him to keep estimated $4 million to $5 million from endorsements and other commercial contracts.

"A lot of people feel it's going to be a hollow victory if Stenmark isn't there," Phil said. "But I can tell you it won't be hollow for the guy who wins."

Australia II causes

yacht design changes

Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — An International Yacht Racing Union committee upheld the legality of winged keels on yesterday, a move that likely means 12-meter yachts will be redesigned to look like America's Cup winner Australia II.

The decision must still be ratified by the IYRU's permanent committee tomorrow. But delegates attending yesterday's meeting said this probably would be a mere formality.

"This decision will change the shape of 12-meter yachts dramatically," said Gary Mull, one of two Americans on the 14-member keel boat committee.

"The advantages that wings give a boat are enormous. All the old drawings will now be scrapped and new yachts designed in time for the next America's Cup" in 1987, he said.

The committee unanimously upheld a November 1982 IYRU ruling, which said: "winglets are permitted on the keel, but they shall be fixed and not capable of being adjusted in trim or retracted."

Controversy over Australia II's radical-winged keel surrounded the America's Cup this summer.

The New York Yacht Club unsuccessfully sought to have the Australian entry disqualified because of the shape of its keel. In the end, the NYYC lost its 132-year monopoly on the Cup when Australia II beat Liberty 4-3 in the best-of-seven final.

Tony Watts, chief measurer of the IYRU, said members of the committee spent about 10 minutes on the winged keel issue and endorsed the previous "unanimously and without controversy."

"I don't expect any problems tomorrow," he said. "The permanent committee will most likely discuss the question briefly, uphold the keel boat committee's decision and then move on to the next item."

Also yesterday, approval was given to an application by the newly formed 12-Meter Yacht Class Owners Association to allow a maximum keel width of 3.6 meters.

"Ironically, these could sprout much wider wings than those on the keel of Australia II which measured about 2.5 meters," Watts said.

Just when you thought it was safe to sit near the scorer's table, the fiery tongue of Irish Head Coach "Digger" Phelps returns! His mighty wrath was raised more than once during Notre Dame's victory over the Yugoslavian national team last night. See Will Hare's story on page 16.

Steinbrenner drops Kuhn injunction suit

State Supreme Court Justice Irwin Silbowitz said Steinbrenner did not waive his right to contest any findings by Kuhn that the Yankee boss might deem biased or prejudiced. Instead, Steinbrenner simply dropped his request for an injunction.

Steinbrenner was openly critical of American League President Lee MacPhail, after MacPhail overruled umpires who disallowed a two-out, ninth inning home run by Kansas City Royals star George Brett on July 24 and called him out, ending the game.

Belles are powerful

Soccer flourishes at Saint Mary's

By KATHY MURPHY
Sports Writer

The Soccer Club at Saint Mary's has come a long way in the past two years. Last year, Professor John Akers came to Saint Mary's to teach Spanish. But he also was given the opportunity to coach a virtually unheard of soccer club. Since then, the soccer program has become increasingly more competitive.

"I played soccer in college and I have coached in the past," said Akers. "I like to coach and got a chance to know the students outside of the classroom."

Last year the club consisted of just one team. This year interest in the program has increased so the club has been divided into two teams; SMC I ("A" team) and SMC II ("B" team).

Both teams competed in the Michiana Soccer Association. SMC I finished in a tie with Goshen College for first place in the A division with a 6-2-1 record. In the tournament playoffs last weekend the Belles faced Goshen in the championship game but lost 3-2 in an exciting double overtime match.

Sophomore Sue Schierl was the leading scorer for SMC I with seven goals this season, while junior Cindy Varanka and freshman Marianne Perri each scored four goals.

In addition to the Michiana league, SMC I also faced other collegiate opponents such as Wheaton College and Marquette University, as well as defeating Notre Dame 3-2 earlier in the season.

"We had an excellent season," said Akers. "We have shown that we can compete with other colleges and universities."

SMC II also had a successful season in the Michiana league. They placed first in the B division with a 9-0-2 record and also won the league championship in the playoffs last weekend by blanking Crowe-Chisek, 2-0. This division included a faculty and staff team from Saint Mary's and one from Notre Dame. SMC II defeated both of these teams en route to their league championship. The leading scorer for this squad was freshman Gloria Eleuteri who scored 16 goals.

Akers was very pleased with the club's performance this year.

"We had a very balanced team and this was our strength. We had a strong offense as well as a strong defense," said Akers. "There was a lot of competition on the team and nobody had a secure position in the starting line-up."

Akers feels that the balanced team play, the addition of experienced freshmen, better playing conditions (the addition of goal posts on the field) and harder practices have helped to improve the program. Akers has also added assistant coaches Tom Gibbons and Bill

Varanka to help with the club. Next year also looks promising for the club. "We will be stronger next year," said Akers. "We will have returning players from abroad as well as those returning players from this year including six freshmen who are on the first team."

Before concentrating on next year the soccer club still has two competitions remaining. In February, the Belles will be hosting an indoor soccer tournament featuring some of the Midwest's finest teams. Also, in March the club will travel to Wheaton College to compete.

The Soccer Club at Saint Mary's has definitely improved over the past two years, and the future ahead looks very bright.

Louisville, which made the Final Four last season for the third time in four years, received the other first-place vote and 836 points to rank sixth despite losing the McCray brothers.

Iowa was seventh. Maryland and UCLA and Oregon State complete the Top Ten.

Louisiana State topped the Second Ten, followed by Michigan State, Fresno State, Arkansas, Boston College, Georgia, Kansas, DePaul, Indiana and Oklahoma.

Nine of last season's final Top Twenty are missing from the preseason rankings.

Among them are NCAA champion N.C. State, which lost Dereck Whittenburg, Thurl Bailey and Sidney Lowe, the catalysts of that championship squad. Also missing is Virginia, which graduated 7-4 Ralph Sampson, three-time Player of the Year.

Also unranked from last season's Top Twenty are St. John's, Nevada-Las Vegas, Missouri, Villanova, Wichita State, Tennessee-Chattanooga and Oklahoma State.

ATTENTION

ND SMC Council For The Retarded of Logan Center

will be collecting Air Force Football Tickets for its special clients. Generous students can donate their tickets between 4:30 - 6:30 on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday at the dining halls (including St. Mary's).

Also, anyone interested in helping the Council accompany these special persons to the game should come to Logan Center at 11:00am this Saturday.

Tom Sluby scores two of his 12 points against the Yugoslavia national team on a jumper, but his clutch reverse layup in the closing moments of the game proved to be the winning shot in the Irish victory, 75-73. See Will Hare's story at right.

Last second Sluby shot shoves Notre Dame over Yugoslavians

By WILL HARE
Sports Writer

Exciting. No, it was not picturesque. But, yes, it was exciting. Although only an exhibition game was on the line, the Irish reached back and pulled a 75-73 victory away from the Yugoslavian National team at the ACC last night. Tom Sluby scored a driving layup on a pass from Jim Dolan for Notre Dame's winning goal.

Dolan, a 6-8 sophomore, had just forced a Yugoslavian backcourt violation to give the Irish the ball with 10 seconds remaining.

"We double-trapped and he (Yugoslavia forward Mihovi Nakic) just lost the play," said Dolan.

The Notre Dame basketball fans saw something they have not seen for a couple of years: an exciting team.

Behind freshman guard Scott Hicks, the Irish rallied to overcome sloppy passing and earn the narrow win. Hicks, a 6-3 native of Indianapolis, led the Irish with 20 points.

"It was a real physical game," said Hicks. "At the same time, it was a very paced game and it involved a lot of transition."

But it was Hicks who created much of the action with three crafty steals, three assists, and a slam dunk follow which left the crowd agape.

"He (Hicks) did a lot of good things out there on the floor," said Irish coach Digger Phelps. "In fact, he was our third leading rebounding out there tonight."

Playing against a team which beat them three times this summer during Notre Dame's European tour, the Irish outrebounded Yugoslavia 41-29.

"Notre Dame is a very good team," said Yugoslavian Head Coach Rusimir Halilovic. "This was a very good game for us because they played good defense and rebounded well offensively."

"They (Yugoslavia) know our personnel pretty well, especially the up-points.

Petrovic, a 6-4 guard from Club Sibenka, scored 13 points in a game here last year and came back to hit on 10 of 15 shots last night. He is a member of the Yugoslavian Army and is returning from a long basketball layoff.

The National Team is now 1-5 on their tour of the United States with losses to Marquette, Illinois, Michigan State, and Ohio State. Their lone win came against Wisconsin.

The Irish showed that they have a very quick team by picking up ten steals. However, there were a few defensive lapses in the first half that resulted in easy baskets for the opponents.

Turnovers are characteristic of young teams and Notre Dame was no exception last night, committing 16. Tim Kempton did not particularly have a very good game, committing nine turnovers.

"This was not Tim Kempton's game," stated Phelps. "Sluby and Price weren't on tonight but Hicks picked us up."

Notre Dame began the game with Sluby, Ken Barlow, Kempton, Joseph Price, and Dan Duff. At the first substitution, Phelps sent in five new players who turned a four-point deficit into a nine-point lead.

"It's great to be able to substitute five for five," said Phelps. "That really impressed me the way the younger kids (2 sophomores and 3 freshmen) turned the game around."

"That's how competitive this team is going to be."

perclassmen," added Phelps. "What bothered me was the fact that they came in here after losing four straight."

The Yugoslavian team consisted of about seven players that will be playing for their Olympic team in Los Angeles in 1984. One of these is 19-year old phenom Drazen Petrovic, who led all scorers with 24

The Epic of Blair Kiel

The man supposed to be a legend, but turned out to be just a nice guy

Editor's note: This is the first part of a two-part article on Blair Kiel and his career at Notre Dame.

Emily Dickinson.

Today marks a very special anniversary for Notre Dame quarterback Blair Kiel. It was exactly four years to this day that he led his Columbus East High School football team to the Indiana AAA state football championship. His touchdown pass to his brother, Kip, provided the winning margin in a 21-14 triumph over traditional state power, Hobart.

Life was good. He made every high-school All-American squad, and was generally regarded as the number-one prep-prospect in the nation. He received the highest honor in Indiana, the Phil Eskew award, which goes to the high school senior who best excels in mental attitude, scholarship, leadership, and athletic ability in football. Recruiters from coast to coast pleaded for his talents, but there was only one place to be for such a talented individual — Notre Dame, the home of legends.

This Saturday marks another special day for Kiel. It marks the final time he will don the blue and gold in Notre Dame Stadium.

Well, it was supposed to have been a special day, anyway.

Life was fun the following November for Kiel once again. He was the No. 1 quarterback for the nation's No. 1 team. His role was marginal, though, — mostly handing off to a tailback tandem that gained over 1,800 yards that year — and so were his statistics. The first calamities were in the making of a disheartening career.

"The emphasis was totally on the running game," recalls Kiel. "We passed only on obvious passing downs for which the defenses were ready. I was just simply never taught the concept of reading defenses that year. I thought it was somewhat of an unfair situation since I didn't know what to look at."

What the fans and press looked at was a final stat sheet that showed a 39 percent pass completion rate, only 531 yards through the air, and zero touchdown passes.

Kiel's freshman year typified what the rest of his career would hold at Notre Dame — an admiration of his politeness and the way which he carried himself as a person, but a suspicion about his capability to carry on the Notre Dame quarterbacking tradition. One writer for the Scholastic summed up a prevailing attitude about the freshman quarterback.

While I had admired Blair for his honesty when he said after a game that his passing performance stunk, I also had to admit I had to agree with him.

Some leaks had opened up, but the arrival of Gerry Faust the next year opened up the floodgates.

Confused with Faust's system of alternating him with Tim Koegel, blasted for his mistakes, and mocked from the stands for his inability to live up to the balleyhooed potential he arrived with, Kiel's spirit was being shattered.

A horrendous start that year immediately put him in the doghouse. Letters to the editor piled up. Blair Kiel is not a good quarterback; hell, he's not even a good punter. Is this player supposed to lead the Irish? Be serious. Is there no one better?

A nightmare in Miami to close out Notre Dame's first losing season in 18 years was the final straw.

"I was gone," says Kiel about his intention to transfer from Notre Dame while the getting was good. "It had nothing to do with the school and its students, it was totally football related. I don't think that an individual should have been treated the way I was that year."

He changed his mind over Christmas break because he still valued the more important things in his life.

"I came here first for the quality education that I knew I would receive," says Kiel with sincerity. "There were also quality students here who were great to me. I made a commitment to come here and I didn't want to back down on it. I didn't want to be known as a quitter."

"If it hadn't been for some great friends to help me through, and the arrival of Coach Hudson the following spring, I would have had a very Quarterback Blair Kiel, once considered the next Theisman and Montana, is now regulated to backup duty behind freshman Steve Beuerlein. On the fourth anniversary of Kiel leading his high school team to the Indiana state championship, Louie Somogyi starts his two-part report on Blair at left.
