Rectors delay action on food sales report until meeting next January

By DAN McCULLOUGH
Senior Staff Reporter

The Rectors Committee of the Office of Student Affairs has delayed addressing a report on the conditions of dormitory food sales until next year, said Committee Chairman Father Thomas King, yesterday.

The report recommends food sales be limited only to pre-packaged food, eliminating sales of student-prepared foods such as pizza.

"Nothing was decided completely at the meeting," King said.

Father David Noone, rector of Grace Hall, agreed that "everything was really left up in the air" at the meeting, which was held last Tuesday. "Nothing was really decided. Each rector is going to go back and review the report with the food sales managers and then decide what is to be done," he said. The next meeting of the committee will be in January.

In the meantime campus Environmental Safety Specialist Mike McCauslin will be visiting each of the halls' food sales to recommend improvements to each manager, said King.

The report on the inspections, conducted earlier this month, details health violations and recommended changes in the current food sales policy. The report was presented to Vice President for Student Affairs Father John Van Wolvlear's office earlier in the month.

The report was based upon "spot inspections" of the food sales by McCauslin, Fire Captains Mark Esenwein and Fred Schleiger, and Firefighter Wayne Bishop. The report lists several problems that were prevalent in the residence hall's food sales, including:

- Unsanitary floors, walls and ceilings
- Unsafe food storage (on floor, under sewer lines, etc.)

- Infrequent disposal of garbage
- Insect and rodent infestations
- Excessive fire hazards

Van Wolvlear told The Observer in an interview before Thanksgiving break that the inspections were conducted because fire hazards and unsanitary conditions jeopardize the University's insurance policy.

According to Indiana food laws, any and all operations that sell, serve, or distribute prepared foods must be licensed to do so. In any hall food sales-related problem, the University could be held liable.

Mike Mann, manager of Flanner Hall's food sales, one of the largest on campus, said that not being able to sell prepared foods, such as popcorn or pizza, "will probably take away some of our business and make some prices higher."

Senate undecided about disclosure

By ELIZABETH FLOR
News Staff

The Student Senate has not taken an official stand on the issue of disclosure of University investments because it has not decided whether the issue is the business of student government, said Peter DiChiara, Grace Hall president, at last night's Senate meeting.

"I would urge the Senate to spend time on things we can really accomplish," Bob Gleason, judicial chairman, said.

Other members said they believed such large issues as the disclosure of University investments need to be addressed, and long range ideas, such as installing more phones in the library pit, need to be put in motion as well.

Mike Brennan, parliamentarian and a member of the Students for Responsible University Investments, said the committee wishes to "de-emphasize" disclosure of University investments and target the University's holdings in defense industries. Callaghan agreed, saying, "If we make a few gains in this (disclosing defense investments)... then we can approach other issues."

Callaghan said a referendum on the issue of disclosure is still a possibility for next semester. Student Senator Dave McAvoy said the Senate should research issues and bring them to the student body for a referendum. Then, he said, the opinion of 7,000 people can be brought to the University administration.

"If we make it a referendum, we may call attention to it." The student body does not know what student government is doing, McAvoy said, and believes that circulating the issue as a referendum would invoke students' reactions.

Callaghan said another important issue the Senate hopes to address is "parietals, and more importantly, penalties for overnight parietals." Currently, the University policy for staying overnight in a dorm of the opposite sex is expulsion.

"I think it (the punishment) is very drastic," Callaghan said, "and as students, we should address it." He thought the penalty at least should be lessened to moving off-campus.

Actor James Earl Jones, star of more than 20 major films, will present a one-man show tonight at 8 in Washington Hall. His appearance is the climax of the Shakespeare film series, sponsored by the College of Arts and Letters.

Jones will tell the story of Shakespeare's King Lear and will intermittently perform the title role which he played in the New York Shakespeare Festival at the Delacorte Theatre in Central Park in 1973.

"James Earl Jones is commonly referred to as one of America's finest actors of all time," said Professor Paul Rathburn, one of the organizers of the event. "He is also referred to as the most distinguished black actor in the world today."

Jones has received honorary doctorates in Humane Letters from Yale, Princeton, and Columbia, as well as the University of Michigan, his alma mater. His film credits include roles in Dr. Strangelove, The Great White Hope, Conan the Barbarian, The Greatest, and Malcolm X. More recently, Jones has been the voice of the villain Darth Vader in the Star Wars trilogy.

The actor also has appeared in more than 40 plays, both on and off Broadway, including Othello, Master Harold...and the boys, The Emperor Jones, Of Mice and Men, The Iceman Cometh, Paul Robeson, Hamlet, MacBeth and King Lear. Jones also produced, directed, and starred in the Broadway play The Cherry Orchard.

Jones' television appearances include playing the role of Alex Haley in Roots - The Second Generation.

In 1970, Jones won the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's Golden Globe Award as the year's "Most Promising New Actor" for his

Jets fly over Beirut after attacks

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. jets thundered over Beirut yesterday after two overnight attacks on American Marines, and gunners shelled the capital's harbor for the first time since the summer of 1982.

In Tripoli, besieged PLO chief Yasser Arafat accused Syria of massing troops near the port city.

The American jets flew reconnaissance sorties over Beirut and nearby hills after the attacks on Marine positions. The shooting caused no casualties to the Marines and only minor damage to the Beirut airport where the Marines are stationed.

The 15-minute bombardment of the port wounded four construction workers shortly after noon, however. Police were unable to determine who was responsible for the first shelling of the harbor area since Israel's 1982 summer invasion of Lebanon.

One salvo of five shells and rockets slammed into the harbor area about a mile east of the U.S. Embassy on West Beirut's seafloor.

"Nothing fell close enough to alarm us," said embassy spokesman John Stewart.

The artillery and rocket-propelled grenade attacks on the U.S. Marine contingent at Beirut's International Airport came before midnight and at daybreak, said a Marine spokesman, Maj. Dennis Brooks.

A grenade and some small arms fire hit the southern perimeter of the base, said Brooks. He said Marines returned the fire with small arms and machine guns.

At daybreak, two artillery rounds hit the airport runway. Brooks said the origin of those shells was not determined.

In southern Lebanon, 12 Israeli tanks crossed the Awali River, which has been the self-imposed front line for Israel. The tanks apparently were a warning to warring Druse and Christian militiamen in Lebanon's Chouf Mountains to stop fighting, Lebanese reporters in the area said.

Reporters said that quiet prevailed shortly after the Israeli intervention, which followed two days of artillery and rocket exchanges that left eight combatants dead and five wounded.

In Damascus, Syria, municipal leaders of Tripoli joined talks on the evacuation of warring Palestine Liberation Organization forces. No agreement on an evacuation timetable has been announced.

University receives grant from Illinois corporation

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame is one of 64 colleges and universities chosen to receive an unrestricted grant from Household International, a multi-industry corporation based in Illinois.

The $20,000 grant is the maximum given to any one school.

Donald Clark, president and chief executive officer of Household International, said, "We base this grant on the institution's interest in economic issues. Household's program is designed to support institutions which encourage discussion of the principles of a free-market economy consistent with a free society."

The corporation has contributed almost $4 million to American colleges and universities since its program was established in 1956. This is the first year Notre Dame has received a grant.

In addition to unrestricted operating grants, Household's Support of Higher Education program includes scholarship programs for children of employees, employee matching gifts, miscellaneous grants in support of education-related organizations, and research grants to departments specializing in finance, merchandising, engineering, transportation and insurance.

Household International is a multi-industry, diversified corporation with major businesses engaged in financial services, merchandising, manufacturing and transportation.

In Brief

Jury selection began yesterday in Crown Point, Ind. in the murder trial of a Hammond woman and her 18-year-old son who are accused of killing a relative, dismembering him and burying the parts in garbage bags along Lake Michigan. On trial in Lake Superior Court for killing Paul Komyatti Sr., 62, in April are his widow, Rosemary Komyatti, 57, and their son, Paul Jr. Prosecutors contend that the two defendants joined with Komyatti's daughter and her husband to kill the man for a $50,000 insurance policy. Court officials expect a two-week trial. The family had been poisoning Komyatti over a period of time, prosecutors said. His stabbing death came after an aborted attempt to inject air into his veins on April 19, they added. Komyatti's body was cut into pieces using a home carpenter's saw and other tools found in the family garage, investigators said. His body was placed in a half dozen garbage bags and discovered in April buried along the Lake Michigan shoreline near Hammond. William Vandiver, Komyatti's son-in-law, is also charged and faces the death penalty if convicted. His trial is set to begin in two weeks. — AP

President Reagan proclaimed the next 10 years the National Decade of Disabled Persons today while criticizing federal programs for the handicapped that he said too often foster "unjust, unwanted and nonproductive" dependence. "Paternalism is the wrong answer," Reagan told a group of more than 200 handicapped people invited to the signing ceremony in the East Room of the White House. "The disabled want what all of us want: the opportunity to contribute to our communities, to use our creativity and to go as far as our God-given talents will take us." Reagan said voluntary efforts by the private sector help, "But too often, federal programs discourage full participation by society. Outmoded attitudes and practices that foster dependence are still with us. They are unjust, unwanted and nonproductive." "Our own efforts in the White House," Reagan said, "have helped generate a number of private projects involving transportation, elementary school tutoring, eye diagnosis and surgery." He noted the courage of those present at the ceremony, citing his own press secretary, James S. Brady, who was wounded in the March 30, 1981, shooting of Reagan; and Jennifer Boatman of Idleyld Park, Ore., a 13-year-old girl born with a disabling spinal disorder that he said "didn't stop her from saving the life of a 5-year-old boy." — AP

Family or community?

The Notre Dame family.

The Notre Dame community.

The terms "family" and "community" are used frequently — and usually interchangeably — in University rhetoric.

Yet the words are far apart in terms of definition. Can a family be a community? Is a community a family? Isn't the Notre Dame of 1983 best described as one or the other, and not both?

Notre Dame was founded on the family structure. For decades the concept of the family formed the cornerstone of University life. Notre Dame students arrived here from similar backgrounds. They had similar goals and beliefs. They lived together, dined together, played together, studied together and prayed together. They all existed under a single roof — like a family — until the building of Sorin, the first separate residence hall.

Several thousand early students began their Notre Dame careers as children. The University actually was a family for those students who gained their prep school, undergraduate (and sometimes graduate) educations here.

But the University has changed markedly since those days.

The Notre Dame of today is not a family.

But it is a community.

Notre Dame is not lodged under one roof, unlike a family. It is a community, however, in that it consists of members living in the same general area engaged in common work and interests.

The people of Notre Dame today are not of the same background, unlike a family. Notre Dame has striven for and gained diversity in its students and faculty. By giving up the image of the family, Notre Dame has become a university and a community. Much of a family's success depends on its small size. A university — as the word implies — succeeds through constantly striving to expand and diversify.

A family does not operate on business like a community. Family members do not pay for what they gain by being associated with that organization. And parents can expect little reward beyond personal satisfaction for their efforts.

A family depends on daily personal contact with a parent. The University claims no longer to operate under a system of parental authority. Without parental authority, there is no family. Students now have some limited say in University policy through the college councils. In ridding itself of In loco parentis, a university changes from a family to a community.

Unlike a community, a family is built on trust. Because the needs of members of a community are so widely differing, one cannot always trust that other members of the community are working in his best interest. Sometimes it is hard to tell what is in the best interest of the community itself.

This question of trust is the reason some University members are not eager to give up the concept of the family and join the community. A community is based on respect, not trust. When all members of Notre Dame recognize that the concept of family trust no longer exists, community respect will take its place.

A community is a political organism. It has territory, a population and government composed of all members of the society. While the University community is not necessarily a democracy, it can be utilized as a transition from the family to the "real" world.

Certainly this definition is more appropriate to modern Notre Dame than the wornout family analogy.

As part of this community, the Notre Dame administration no longer has sole responsibility for monitoring and protecting a student's intellectual, social, moral and spiritual growth. All members of the community — administration, faculty and students — provide guidance, but the student's protection is ultimately his own.

Notre Dame is no longer a family, but this change was desirable.

A community is in the best interests of all members of the university society. A child remains a child until he is allowed to do something that merits respect and can prove that he deserves to be treated as an adult.

Once it is accepted that there is a difference between a family and a community — and that Notre Dame is the latter and no longer the former — the University will make vast strides. Once Notre Dame no longer needs the concept of the family to explain everything that goes on within her boundaries, the University will at last have reached maturity.

Space shuttle blasts into orbit; nine days of experiments ahead

Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Columbia blasted into orbit yesterday carrying six astronauts who quickly put the $1 billion Spacelab to work, beginning one of the most ambitious scientific expeditions ever undertaken — nine days of non-stop experiments that will study the heavens, the Earth and man himself.

Astronauts Owen K. Garriott and Byron Lichtenberg started turning on equipment in the 23-foot-long Spacelab, in the cargo bay of Columbia, just three hours after they and four crewmates were launched from the Kennedy Space Center.

The launch was precisely on time, 11 a.m. EST, despite a looming weather front that threatened a two-day delay. Columbia carried into space the largest crew ever and was the first U.S. launch to include a non-American, West German Ulf Merbold.

Mission commander John Young, a 53-year-old veteran making his record sixth flight, sounded like a rookie as Columbia orbited 155 miles above the Earth.

"It is so neat up here," he said. "It is really something." Earlier he noted: "Things don't change any."

"It's a beautiful flying machine," radioed pilot Brewster H. Shaw Jr., 38, who was making his first flight. "It's really some ride. It's the smoothest way to go you ever saw."

The crew had a bit of trouble opening the hatch that covers the tunnel from Columbia's cabin to Spacelab. NASA beamed down TV pictures that showed the astronauts tugging and yanking to no avail for several minutes, until finally they freed a recalcitrant latch and the hatch swung free.

Then Garriott, Lichtenberg and Merbold floated through the 19-foot tunnel and made a joint entry into Spacelab, smiling broadly and shaking hands. They turned on the lights and quickly set to work activating the experiments. Young also paid a brief visit before returning to the cabin.

Young and Shaw will fly Columbia, performing some 192 maneuvers, while Garriott, 53, Lichtenberg, 35, Merbold, 42, and Robert A. R. Parker, 46, operate more than 70 experiments designed by scientists from 14 countries.

Powerful telescopes and sensors will probe the life and death of distant stars and gauge the energy exploding from the Earth's own star, the sun.

Other sensors and cameras will focus on the Earth, mapping the land surface and electronically sniffing the planet's atmosphere and gauging its magnetic fields.

A keen-eyed German camera, capable of capturing views with a resolution of 32 feet, will take pictures not before possible, while a radar sensor will penetrate clouds to probe the surface.

Sixteen experiments will study how life forms from Earth react to the weightless environment of space. Included are investigations into the space sickness phenomena that has affected nearly half of the 26 shuttle astronauts. The tests include the response of human blood cells and of the immune system to zero gravity. The astronauts will take and analyze blood samples throughout the mission.

There also will be studies on the growth in space of sunflower seedlings, a fungus and four types of microbes.

Death toll climbs to 56 in record blizzard; airports, highways closed

Associated Press

A record November blizzard trapped thousands of travelers and brought Midwestern cities to a standstill with head-high drifts yesterday while the death toll climbed to 56 from back-to-back snowstorms.

The storm closed major highways and key airports in seven states as heavy snow fell from Oklahoma and Colorado to upper Michigan. Snow accumulations of 2 feet or more in some areas were whipped into 9-foot drifts by 50-mph winds.

"There just isn't anything going on out there because you plain can't move," said a dispatcher for the Nebraska State Patrol.

The wind made it feel like 40 degrees below zero in some areas and residents were warned to stay home. Houses went dark and cold as power lines snapped under the weight of ice.

Schools, businesses and government offices closed in many cities such as Minneapolis, Omaha, Neb., and Sioux Falls, S.D.

Across the hardest hit states of Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, and Minnesota, motorists by the hundreds sought shelter in National Guard armories, churches and truck stops.

Nothing was moving in many towns except snowmobiles, some used to fetch food for the stranded.

Snowplows were useless in the blowing snow, but a physician rode one to deliver a baby boy at a home in Limon, Colo., a town on Interstate 70 about halfway between Denver and the Kansas state line where an estimated 2,000 motorists were marooned.

About 3,000 people spent the night at Stapleton International Airport in Denver, where 22 inches of snow fell, but the airport began operating at 50 percent capacity by yesterday morning.

It was the second storm to sweep across the Rockies into the Great Lakes area in a week. Forecasters said a third — but smaller — blow was expected in the mountains by today, bringing heavy snow to parts of Utah and temperatures of 10 to 15 degrees below zero in Colorado.

But Denver forecaster Ronn Irving said, "It really does not have the power or punch this past one did." In the past year, Denver has received 100 inches of snow, including three storms of 18 inches or more.

Major highways across Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa were closed early yesterday. Drifts were up to 9 feet high in southwestern Nebraska, 8 feet and western Kansas and about 4 feet near the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

By late morning, however, snowplows had opened some of the highways, although the blowing snow still made driving hazardous. One of the roads to open was Interstate 80 which had been closed all the way across Nebraska.

In southeast South Dakota, snowplows rescued about 150 people from deep drifts on Interstate 29 and took them to the Super 8 Motel in Vermillion, where about 50 people spent the night in a basement meeting room because the guest rooms were filled.

"We've got a baby that hasn't eaten since last night," said Audrey Hochhalter, who owns the motel with her husband, Derry. "We're trying to get a snowmobile to get some food."

Vermillion banned all travel except by snowmobile. Union County Sheriff Bud Rasmussen said 35 cars had been towed into town from nearby highways, but many remained stuck in deep drifts.

In Sioux Falls, S.D., hundreds of people were stranded at truck stops and motels on the north side of the city near Interstates 29 and 90.

Striking bus drivers reject proposal

Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Striking Greyhound bus drivers and other workers resoundingly rejected a company proposal to reduce wages by 7.8 percent, with 96 percent voting against the contract offer, union officials said yesterday.

But Harry Rosenblum, acting president of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, said he did not think "we'd be that far from a settlement" if the company and union resolved certain other issues in the three-year contract, such as a proposed reduction in pension benefits.

Rosenblum, who told the company's chief negotiator the results of the vote, expressed optimism that talks would resume soon.

But when asked the company's reaction, he said, "They play good poker."

Greyhound Lines planned no comment until today, when John Teets, chairman of the parent Greyhound Corp., holds a news conference in Phoenix to "announce important plans regarding Greyhound Lines."

Dorothy Lorant, Greyhound's vice president for public relations, said Teets would discuss the union's election results and other matters. She declined to elaborate.

The Amalgamated Transit Union, which represents 12,700 Greyhound workers, struck Nov. 2 over a proposed contract calling for a 9.8 percent salary cut. Greyhound said it needed the pay cuts to remain competitive with deregulated airlines and other bus lines.

Rosenblum said the company's argument that many of the drivers would be willing to come back had been rebuffed by the voting.

"They turned down the first contract offer by a margin of 98.3 percent and the 96 percent vote on this offer doesn't show that much erosion," said Rosenblum.

Asked about the company's statement that about 1,500 union members had crossed picket lines to return to work, Rosenblum said, "I don't have any count on the scabbing. I don't know how many have, but I know that a few who did have recrossed" to rejoin the strikers.

Bill upsets U.S.-China relations

Associated Press

PEKING — Two measures in the U.S. Congress that support Taiwan have disturbed Chinese-U.S. relations and have cast some doubt on President Reagan's plans to visit China in April.

Reagan is expected to sign an appropriations bill, passed by Congress in mid-November, which backs Communist China's application to join the Asian Development Bank. But the bill also says that Taiwan — which still claims to be the legitimate government of all China — should remain a full member of the bank.

The vote prompted a formal protest from the Chinese government on Nov. 25, the second in a week, warning of "grave consequences" for relations with the United States.

The first time U.S. Ambassador Arthur W. Hummel was summoned by Zhu Qichen, assistant Chinese foreign minister, was Nov. 18. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee had passed a resolution saying Taiwan's future should be settled "peacefully, free of coercion and in a manner acceptable to the people on Taiwan."

Peking, which claims Taiwan as one of its 22 provinces, said both votes betrayed a lingering "two-Chinas" policy in Washington and infringing on China's internal affairs.

Hu Yaobang, secretary-general of the Chinese Communist Party, said that without an acceptable U.S. response to the protests, Reagan's visit might be canceled, as would Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang's planned trip to the United States in January.

At a banquet for visiting Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada last night, Zhao indicated he planned to make at least the Canada leg of his North American trip.

When the vice-foreign minister, Qian Qichen, who is one step higher than Zhu, was asked how China would react if Reagan signed the appropriations bill, he replied, "You'll just have to wait and see."

The last president to visit China was Gerald Ford in April 1976. Richard Nixon broke the ice in U.S.-China relations with his February 1972 trip.

rectors earlier this year informed them that failure to report student infringement of parietal rules would result in loss of their jobs. In the last academic year, five to six students were expelled for parietals, Callaghan said. Senate members agreed that some rectors, as well as some resident assistants, still do not adhere to the rule of turning a student over to the Dean of Students, but take each situation under consideration individually. "Although there is inconsistency, there always will be. If they lighten up a bit, there would be more consistency," Callaghan said. In other news, Callaghan announced that the structure of the LaFortune Student Center will probably change this summer. Other businesses such as University Hairstylists and the travel agency will move into the building. The campus "will be rid of the Nazz, as such, and incorporate it with Chautauqua." Students who now study in the basement of LaFortune can study in the ballroom upstairs, Callaghan said, or perhaps the library can remain open 24 hours. Further suggested moves include the yearbook from the fourth floor to the basement, the radio station from O'Shaughnessy to LaFortune and even individual offices for senate members.

Group discusses experiences of fall trip to Appalachians

By RICHARD INGRASSIA
News Staff

After seeing firsthand the poverty of the southern Appalachian area, a group of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, Holy Cross priests and hall rectors met recently at the Center for Social Concerns to discuss what they experienced during their week-long expedition to the area during Fall Break.

The students agreed the principal value of the trip came from the personal interaction with the mountain people themselves.

"The number of distractions at Notre Dame sometimes leads you to ignore the more important things that people can share," said John Gray, a junior from Washington.

The social analysis, direct and indirect, is the main reason why the program should continue, said Moira Baker, Lewis Hall rector, who has been associated with the project for four years.

In "living the value system the others experience," Baker said, the students gained a rare variety of education in humanity.

Other students who participated in the trip agreed that the interaction helped to eliminate many of the stereotypes held against the people of the deep South.

The group, which was divided into three smaller groups, visited different towns in the Tennessee-Kentucky region of the Appalachian Mountains.

Brother Frank Rotsaert, rector of Holy Cross Hall, and the assistant rector of Pasquerilla East took ten students to Harriman, Tennessee. Fifteen students accompanied Gerry Kleba and Jim Greene of CILA, which helped sponsor the trip, to Vanceburg, Kentucky. Baker also organized an excursion to the town of Milton, Kentucky.

The students all contributed a minimum fee to cover various expenses, and each group's accommodations were provided by the ministry in the area: Brother Donald MacIntyre and three other Holy Cross brothers at the parish CCD building in Harriman, another group at the Glenmary Home Mission Farm in Vanceburg and a third at a branch of the Christian Appalachian Project in Milton.

The participants prepared themselves for the trip by reading and attending an orientation session. But the unique type of enjoyment and personal satisfaction that followed the close interaction with the mountain people could not have been anticipated, believed Mary Miltenberger from McCandless Hall.

The group's primary objective was physical and social work. Projects included rebuilding a home for handicapped adults, helping with the construction and development of a new schoolhouse and painting the house of a poor, elderly woman.

Greene has proposed that an independent student organization, similar to one at Harvard, be formed to organize such cultural relocation and experimentation.

Sale of helicopter parts delayed

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, upset over a resurgence of human rights violations in Guatemala, is delaying the sale of helicopter parts to the Central American nation's rightist military government, officials say.

State Department officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said the delay in the sale reflects U.S. concern over the upturn in political violence — including attacks against employees of U.S.-funded educational programs.

The officials said an earlier approval for the sale is not formally under review, but some senior officials want it withdrawn and, in the meantime, final permission for a $2 million purchase of military helicopter parts is being held up to signal U.S. displeasure.

The latest chill in U.S.-Guatemalan relations also complicates President Reagan's strategy of drawing Guatemala more directly into regional efforts to reduce leftist influences in Central America. Before adjourning 10 days ago, Congress barred direct military and economic aid to Guatemala and 51 congressmen urged cancellation of the helicopter parts sale.

The delay on the helicopter parts sale also coincides with the return to the United States of Ambassador Frederic Chapin for the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays — an absence which, though officially characterized as "routine," is regarded as another sign of American displeasure.

Last January, the Reagan administration ended a five-year embargo on military assistance to Guatemala, approving the sale of $6 million in helicopter parts and citing "significant steps" by then-President Efraim Rios Montt to improve human rights.

But the Guatemalans said then they lacked the money to buy the parts and the deal did not go through. In February, an AID linguist and three companions were seized by soldiers and killed. That incident prompted a brief recall of Chapin to Washington.

On Aug. 8, Rios Montt was ousted by a coup led by his defense minister, Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores.

Although having supported Rios Montt, the Reagan administration praised the new government, which began working with Honduras, El Salvador and Panama to revive the Central American Defense Council, known by its Spanish acronym CONDECA, to counter leftist Nicaragua.

But on Oct. 18, another AID-sponsored linguist disappeared. His body along with those of a coworker and her daughter were reported by authorities to have been found burned in a car crash that foreign diplomats considered highly suspicious.

Another linguist has also disappeared after reportedly being pulled from his home by seven armed men.

Amid these events, U.S. officials said the Guatemalans indicated they were prepared to move ahead with the purchase of $2 million in helicopter parts. But one official said the Guatemalans were told "don't hold your breath" on the sale during a meeting in Guatemala with Fred C. Ikle, under secretary of defense, and Abrams early this month.

The anguish of missile politics

In the shadow the nuclear missiles cast, the focus of Great Power politics has become missile politics. It is an anguished battle at best, whoever claims the victory in any phase of it. But in the sharpest phase of the battle

Max Lerner

The Lerner Column

thus far — starting in 1979 with the NATO decision to deploy new missiles and ending with the German vote in Bundestag — the victory can be claimed by the West.

In his duel with Yuri Andropov, Ronald Reagan has luckily been bolstered by three formidable West European allies — Helmut Kohl, Margaret Thatcher and Francois Mitterrand. Kohl's and Thatcher's sturdiness was expected but Mitterrand, who could have sat this one out, was an extra bonus.

In the struggle inside Europe's Socialist parties, the influence of Willy Brandt on the Social Democrats has prevailed, with his silly tactic of competing for German youth with the Greens by swallowing their far-out doctrines.

But in France under Mitterrand — and in Italy under Bettino Craxi — the Socialists have retained their sense of reality, putting freedom ahead of class struggle. "The East," says Mitterrand, "has developed missiles and the West has developed passifists." It is a devastating summary which took courage.

Mitterrand, Kohl, Thatcher, Craxi and Reagan have all been helped by Yuri Andropov's maladroit handling of missile politics. Given his pass to power Andropov was played up as a sophisticated tactician. But he has proved the wrong man at the wrong time for Soviet Policy.

He is the exact opposite of Nikita

Khrushchev, who was at his best in open dramatic moves, while Andropov is at his best in covert operations. But missile politics, bidding for world opinion have to be largely in the open.

Andropov blundered in his historic gamble on the German Social Democrats and the "peace" marchers. At the same time, he involved himself in destabilizing global moves, especially in the Middle East, which raised the specter of terror. Combined with his tactics of nuclear intimidation, this didn't make his various missile proposals very credible.

Nor did the missile politics of the American media do much to help him. ABC's "The Day After" scared many Americans, but Reagan's popular acceptance was greater after the film than before. Besides, it omitted Western Europe completely.

In the end, Andropov had nothing left to do except an indecisive walkout of his delegate at Geneva, and a threat to deploy more missiles against Europe in his satellite countries and against America on the oceans — which makes the Soviet image more menacing, not less.

Meanwhile, a prime event has taken place in France, where the Catholic Bishops have signed a pastoral document which is a direct answer to the letter of the American Bishops.

It speaks of "the domineering and aggressive character of Marxism-Leninism, which holds that everything, even a nation's hopes for peace must be used as a tool for world conquest." And it puts the central moral question — "does a country threatened in its existence, its liberty or its identity, have a moral right to meet the threat with an effective counterthreat, even if it is nuclear?" — and answers it with a resounding "Yes," supported by a vote of 93-2 among the Bishops.

In the anguished battle of missile politics, this has not been a good time for the Soviets.

There's no business like bowl business

While one can sympathize with our students who participate in varsity football and thus thirst for a post-season (bowl) encounter, the recent declaration or should one say edict, which assigns our football team the task of playing in the Liberty Bowl demands examination. Examination in the light of explicitly stated norms set forth by the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics some moons ago when, on that historic occasion, we abandoned a 45-year-old policy against post-season encounters.

James Carberry

Guest Columnist

As a member of the Faculty Board at that time, I can attest to the fact that we then per-sueded ourselves, and so declared, that Notre Dame would engage in post-season competition under three clearly enunciated conditions:

(1) Only "major" Bowls would be considered, if and only if:

(2) Our appearance would promise the possibility of our achieving or approaching top national ranking;

(3) In the event, all profits so secured would be utilized exclusively for non-athletic scholarships.

Item (3) was my suggestion. In its wake, Father Hesburgh quite rightly modified my qualification to read "non-athletic scholarships for minorities."

Thus did we move into that arena, previously described by Father Hesburgh as a "circus," with clean and noble instinct.

In general both press and public applauded our nobly inspired change of policy in re: post-season encounters. After all, what other school had laid down such severe conditions (1 and 2 above) for so lofty a purpose (3 above)?

So now a well meaning, talented array of football players with less than an awesome record of success is dispatched to a post-season "circus." Surely not to compete for national honors! Surely not at a "major" bowl! To what end? To enhance recruiting, we are led to believe. Hah! In my 22 years at this institution I've never been witness to more football talent than that which now graces our campus — even excluding Dillon Hall's scholars.

But some potential recruits will only select ND if we are bowl-bound on a routine basis, we are told! To hell with such recruits, say I.

Let such fools flock to Oklahoma or Nebraska. They'll get little else at such academic slums than a bowl appearance.

Which brings us to the point — a sad one. We, at Notre Dame, are now about to lose our innocence in inter-collegiate football. We've entered the bordello. Patently, we'll now be assigned to play anyone, anywhere, in any money-making post-season "circus."

Yet, one must suppose that some benefits might emerge from such otherwise meaningless, indeed demeaning, post-season circuses:

Consider the grand consequences which might ensue with our Liberty Bowl contest with Boston College:

a) The Jesuits might return to the Church.
b) A gutted Liturgy might be featured at halftime.

c) The American Bishops might call for a freeze on blocking and tackling.

Thus all is not lost save what was once our unique integrity in intercollegiate football. James Carberry

Spirit vs. practice

Dear Editor:

In the November 17 Observer, Gerry Foley accuses Kairis and Bouley of "wallowing in... ignorance and over-generalizations" more specifically, of professing to see the fundamental differences between the spirit and practice of Soviet policy and that of the United States. Let the wise and learned Mr. Foley ponder a few questions.

1) In the last days of World War II did millions of central European soldiers and civilians flee eastward to escape the barbarous British and American armies?

2) Was the Berlin Wall erected to prevent millions of west Germans from fleeing to the German Democratic Republic in the east?

3) When Fidel Castro seized power in Cuba did thousands of Americans of Cuban descent sell or abandon their possessions, rush to Miami, and board anything that floated in their anxiety to get back to Cuba?

4) In Vietnam did millions of the unfortunate subjects of the corrupt, cryptofascist, CIA-backed southern despotism flee northward to enjoy a more rewarding life under the mild and beneficent Ho Chi Minh regime, so much admired by those brilliant stateswomen Shirley MacLaine and Jane Fonda

5) Did tens of thousands of "boat people" in southeast Asia die fleeing oppressive western-dominated regimes there for sanctuary in Communist Vietnam and China?

Those unlucky people in the world who have firsthand experience of communist rule, or the immediate threat of it, know the difference between the spirit and implementation of American policy and that of Marxist states, even if Mr. Foley does not.

Routs Louisville

Kentucky replaces N.C. as No. 1

By DICK JOYCE
Associated Press

Kentucky, an impressive winner over Louisville, replaced North Carolina, which was unimpressive in beating Missouri, as the No. 1 college basketball team by two points in the first weekly Associated Press rankings announced yesterday.

Kentucky, second behind North Carolina in the preseason ratings, received 24 first-place votes and 988 points from the nationwide panel of 51 sports writers and broadcasters. The Tar Heels also landed 24 No. 1 votes but 986 points.

Both teams played their season-openers Saturday. Kentucky routed No. 6 Louisville 65-44, while North Carolina downed unranked Missouri 64-57.

Georgetown, No. 4 in the preseason, moved into the third spot with 868 points after whipping Hawaii-Hilo twice over the weekend. The Hoyas attracted the remaining three No. 1 votes.

Memphis State also moved up a notch to fourth with 819 points after winning its first two games.

Iowa, 1-0 and seventh in the preseason, jumped to the No. 5 spot with 706 points. Maryland, 1-0, advanced two places to sixth with 612 points.

The biggest leap was made by defending NCAA champion North Carolina State, which upset Houston, ranked No. 3 in the preseason, Nov. 19 and then swept three games to capture the Great Alaska Shootout, beating Alaska-Anchorage, Santa Clara and Arkansas, ranked No. 14 in the preseason.

The 4-0 record put the Wolfpack, unranked in the preseason, in the No. 7 spot with 602 points.

Houston, which bounced back with a victory over Kansas Saturday, fell to the No. 8 spot with 589 points, while UCLA, 2-0, remained No. 9 with 562 points.

Oregon State, which opens its season Friday, stayed No. 10 with 454 points.

Michigan State, 2-0, ranks 11th, one notch higher than the preseason. The rest of the Second Ten, in order, consists of Louisiana State, Georgia, Arkansas, Boston College, DePaul, Fresno State, Wichita State, St. John's, and Virginia Commonwealth.

Boston College and Virginia Commonwealth have yet to play.

In addition to N.C. State, other newcomers in the Top Twenty, are Wichita State, St. John's, and Virginia Commonwealth. Dropped from the rankings were Kansas, No. 17 in the preseason, and Indiana and Oklahoma, previously the bottom two teams. Both Indiana and Oklahoma suffered losses over the weekend.

Nebraska loses ground to Texas

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press

Top-ranked Nebraska continued to rule college football yesterday, but the Cornhuskers lost a little ground to runner-up Texas in the next-to-last regular-season Associated Press poll.

Nebraska received 52 of 55 first-place votes and 1,097 of a possible 1,100 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters following Saturday's 28-21 victory over Oklahoma.

Meanwhile, Texas crushed Texas A&M 45-13 and received three first-place votes and 1,048 points. The Longhorns have been second for 11 consecutive weeks.

Last week, with 59 voters participating, Nebraska led Texas 58-1 in first-place ballots and 1,179-1,118 in points. Nebraska, 12-0, and Texas, 11-0, finished the regular season as the only unbeaten-untied major college teams in the country.

Auburn, Illinois and Miami held onto the 3-4-5 positions with 973, 910, and 885 points, respectively. Auburn, 9-1, winds up Saturday against Alabama, while Illinois and Miami have completed 10-1 regular seasons.

The Top Ten remained the same as last week, with Southern Methodist, Georgia, Michigan, Brigham Young, and Iowa completing the list.

SMU defeated Houston 32-14, Georgia shaded Georgia Tech 27-24, while the others finished the season earlier. The points were 824 for SMU, 732 for Georgia, 694 for Michigan, 649 for BYU, and 586 for Iowa.

The Second Ten consists of the same teams as a week ago, although there was some shuffling in the order.

This week shows Clemson, Florida, Boston College, Ohio State, Pittsburgh, Maryland, Air Force.

West Virginia, Alabama, and East Carolina.

Last week it was Florida, Clemson, Alabama, Ohio State, Boston College, Pitt, Maryland, Air Force, West Virginia, and East Carolina.

In the only action involving members of the Second Ten, Boston College defeated Alabama 20-13.

Dolphins sign Shula for 'a few more years'

Associated Press

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, saying he's happy and at home in Miami, signed on yesterday for at least a few more years with the National Football League club he has directed to four Super Bowl appearances since 1970.

Neither Shula, 53, nor Dolphins owner Joe Robbie would disclose any terms of the new deal, saying they were "personal to both of us."

Last month Shula turned down an offer of at least $1 million a year to coach the rival United States Football League's New Jersey Generals.

He was already the NFL's best-paid coach, earning a reported $450,000 a year under a contract that expires this February. There have been reports that Robbie wanted to make Shula the league's first $1 million-a-year coach, but neither would elaborate yesterday.

Shula said "tremendous loyalty" from Miami fans, players, and assistant coaches was one of many factors that convinced him to stay with the team he has directed to 138 victories in 197 games.

"I could have waited until February or March (to see what other offers he might receive), but I decided instead that I've been happy here and this is where I want to be," said Shula, who was 209-80-6 overall with four regular season games to play in his 21st season as an NFL coach.

The 1983 Dolphins were 8-4 and atop the AFC East going into last night's game against the Cincinnati Bengals.

Raise record to 9-0-0

Hockey team sweeps Dearborn

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — Junior captain Brent Chapman and junior forward Tim Reilly paced the Notre Dame hockey team over the holiday weekend as it swept the University of Michigan-Dearborn by scores of 6-4 and 4-3 in a non-conference series.

Chapman scored the hat trick and added one assist in Friday's victory. He tallied the winning goal on Saturday besides contributing two assists. Reilly was credited with three assists on Friday, and scored two goals in Saturday's win.

Freshman goaltender Tim Lukenda turned in two fine performances in the Irish nets.

The weekend sweep raised the Notre Dame record to a perfect 9-0-0 overall and 5-0-0 in the Central States Collegiate Hockey League.

The icers return to action this weekend when they travel to Green Bay, Wis. to take on league foe St. Norbert.

Michigan-Dearborn was only the second varsity opponent for the team this season. And just as with the previous weekend against St. Thomas, the Irish showed that a solid performance is a key to success.

In Friday's contest, Notre Dame jumped out in front quickly as Chapman knocked in his first goal of the evening just six minutes into the game. UMD's Ryan Willette then tied the score at 13:24 of the period.

A four goal barrage in the second period put Notre Dame up 5-3 and the icers never looked back. UMD took its first lead of the game early in the period as Willette picked up his second goal of the game. It was the first of five goals by both teams that would come over a six-minute span.

The Irish came right back, though, scoring twice in the next two minutes. Sophomore Bob Thebeau, with an assist from Reilly, tied the score at two. Just 1:33 later, sophomore Jeff Badalich, with help from both Chapman and Reilly, put Notre Dame in front 3-2.

To keep the game close, UMD's Greg Everson knotted the score at three. But Chapman's second goal of the night at 9:21 put the Irish in front to stay. Chapman then rounded out the period's scoring on a power play goal at 19:51.

Both teams scored twice in the final period. UMD pulled within one at 5-4 just fifty-six seconds into the period, but that was all the scoring it would see for the evening. Freshman Tom Smith iced the victory for the Irish at 6:47 of the period. Senior Mike Metzler picked up the lone assist.

On Saturday, the Irish found themselves trailing 3-2 going into the final period. The team regrouped, however, and came out to score two quick goals to salvage the win.

"We were behind by two goals at home against St. Thomas and the kids came back," said Notre Dame coach Lefty Smith. "Being down on the road was a big test and the kids responded very well. They weren't intimidated by being away from home."

Notre Dame grabbed a two goal lead after one period on goals by Reilly and senior Adam Parsons. Chapman and sophomore Mark Benning were credited with the assists on the Reilly goal, which came on a power play. Metzler and Smith got the assists on Parsons' goal.

The second period was all UMD as three unanswered goals by Everson, Gary Charison, and Tony Macari put the home team on top 3-2 with one

The Irish, feeling that their win string could be in jeopardy, quickly tied the score at three just thirty-nine seconds into the period. Reilly got the goal. It was his second of the game. Chapman had the assist.

The winning goal came at the 5:48 mark as Chapman banged a pass from Badalich past UMD goalie Brik Pardo.

Lukenda made 29 saves in Friday's victory and another 16 to turn back UMD on Saturday.

"Overall it was a good series," said Smith. "It was a real team effort on both nights. Lukenda played extremely well. And the penalty killing was really good too."

The Irish held UMD to just one goal in 15 power play tries. Notre Dame was two-for-six in the same department.

The two losses dropped UMD's record to 8-9-0 on the season. Notre Dame now holds a 2-0-0 mark in the series.

It's Christmas Eve and my fireplace is lit;
I am, too, for I have sipped a bit.
My stocking is hanging;
my tree is aglow;
I'm anxiously awaiting

Everything is perfect;

I know the man in the sleigh

Tonight, Notre Dame travels to Bloomington to play Indiana in what will be their first big test of the young season. See the two related stories on this page for a summary of the weekend's action and for a preview of tonight's game.

Young squads square off tonight as Irish travel to Bloomington

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

Two relatively young basketball squads will square off tonight in Bloomington, Ind., each trying to get their season off the ground by beating the other.

For Indiana, it will be a chance to show that their No. 19 ranking in the Associated Press pre-season poll was no fluke. In addition, the Hoosiers will be out to prove that there is life after Ted Kitchel and Randy Witman.

For Notre Dame, the Indiana game is an opportunity to establish itself as a team to be reckoned with in the 1983-'84 college basketball season. The Irish will be out to improve upon their honorable mention in the pre-season poll.

"That (becoming a ranked team) would be a great goal for us," says Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps. "To do it, we could start by beating teams that are ranked."

Indiana returns only 7-2 Uwe Blab from their top six players of a year ago. The junior from Munich, Germany figures to be the one the Hoosiers will look to for much of their scoring.

Blab averaged 9.4 points per game for the Hoosiers last year to be their fourth leading scorer. He came on to shoot 56.9 percent over Indiana's final 13 games, showing signs of improvement and maturity.

"Uwe is one of the big men in the country that is improving," says Phelps. "I think he is a good player.

He's just looking to get comfortable right now."

Blab has also led the Hoosiers in the blocked shot department during each of his two previous campaigns in Bloomington.

Looking to step in to fill a forward spot for Indiana is 6'-8" sophomore Mike Giomi. Playing in 19 games last year in a relief role, Giomi could muster only a 2.3 point scoring average, but more impressively, shot at a 54.5 percent clip.

More importantly for Indiana, Giomi lead their scoring with 14 points in their 73-72 win over Italy earlier this year.

"Giomi's playing a lot better," says Phelps.

Another sophomore, Stew Robinson, hopes to contribute on a more regular basis this year after appearing in 26 games last year as a freshman. The 6-1 guard is probably the quickest player on the Hoosier squad and should fit into the playmaker role well.

But the Indiana player to watch could turn out to be freshman guard Steve Alford. Named "Mr. Basketball" in Indiana, the 6-1 native of New Castle notched 12 points in IU's win over Italy.

Alford averaged a remarkable 37.2 points last year in leading New Castle High School to state runner-up honors.

Others who could see some action for the Hoosiers tonight include 6-8 junior college transfer Courtney Witte, the first junior college player to join up with Indiana coach Bobby Knight; 6-5 junior Dan Dakich; 6-8 freshman Todd Meier; 6-4 sophomore Tracy Foster; 6-5 freshman Marty Simmons, last year's Illinois "Mr. Basketball" who averaged 32 points a game; and 6-7 freshman Daryl Thomas, who attended the same high school as former Indiana star Isaiah Thomas but who is of no relation to the Detroit Piston guard.

"Daryl Thomas is going to do something soon," commented Phelps. Indiana will probably be without junior swingman Winston Morgan tonight, as he has been plagued by a foot injury recently.

Indiana will also be trying to bounce back from last Saturday's 63-57 upset at the hands of Miami of Ohio.

Knight apparently was not very happy with the way his team played in that game. He was quoted afterward as saying, "I wasn't pleased with anything we did today. I'm not pleased with the way we've been playing or rebounding."

Notre Dame will try to play its more run-and-gun game of this year against Indiana's notoriously stingy defense.

"We are trying to up-tempo as much as we can and we'll make adjustments as the year goes along," says Phelps. "We want to run and shoot as much as we can."

The Irish will probably have to shoot better against Indiana than they did against Marist (44 percent) to win tonight.

But according to Phelps, the key to the game will likely be another factor.

"We just can't play with mistakes in the game with Indiana," says the Irish coach. "The team that wins is the one that plays with poise, the one with the rebounding and the foul shooting at the end of the game."

Phelps knows his counterpart Knight well. Knight, who will coach the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, has beaten the Irish seven times out of

Finish fourth

Irish women lose two in tourney

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women's basketball team continued to find that life among the national powers can be very tough as it finished fourth in the four-team Notre Dame Classic this weekend. However, the Irish also found that the gap between them and the present powers is not as big as it used to be.

Mary DiStanislao's squad lost both of its games in the tournament, falling to No. 3 Tennessee in the first round, 71-56, and to No. 8 Maryland, 86-68, in the consolation game. The two losses told different stories about Notre Dame's progress, though.

The loss to Tennessee showed an Irish team that had come a long way since last year when nationally-ranked teams were able to pound Notre Dame easily. The losing margin was Notre Dame's smallest against a powerful team since a seven-point loss to Rutgers more than a year ago, and the Irish were within ten points with a few minutes remaining.

The Maryland loss destroyed the optimism of Notre Dame fans as the Irish played poorly and were never in the game against a team that many people thought Notre Dame could beat. The Terrapins shot 68 percent from the field in the first half and the Irish could never get closer than 11 in the second half.

"I thought Notre Dame played a beautiful game against Tennessee, but showed a little disappointment about the loss when they played us," said Maryland coach Chris Weller. "They seemed to be thinking too much about the past game and looked awfully frustrated against us."

DiStanislao was certainly frustrated as she watched her team play without the intensity that it had showed against Tennessee. The Irish fell behind, 4-3, less than three minutes into the game and never recovered. In fact, after closing to within three points, 18-15, Notre Dame never got closer than nine points the rest of the way.

"I was surprised by the lack of determination of our players," said DiStanislao. "Maryland got a lot of breaks early, both fast and lucky, but when you know what you have to do to win — as our players did — you have to do it."

What Notre Dame did not do was stop the offense of Terp guard Marcia Richardson and forward Chequita Wood. Richardson, Maryland's all-American, was virtually unstoppable as she made 10 of her 15 shots, most of them from more than 15 feet out. She ended up with 23 points, seven assists, and four steals.

Wood was the force in the middle as she pulled down 14 rebounds and scored 22 points. It was her play inside that forced the Irish defense to give up the outside shot to people like Richardson and Belinda Pearman, who finished with eight points.

However, as much damage as the potent Maryland offense did, it was Notre Dame's inability to do anything on offense that proved to be the killer. The Irish shot 37 percent from the field and were unable to get the ball inside of the sagging Maryland defense. The telltale stat was the number of assists for each team. While the Terps were able to pass the ball inside to set up baskets and compile 20 assists, Notre Dame could only pick up three assists.

"The lack of authority with which our team executed was really surprising," said an obviously-disappointed DiStanislao. "There was a lack of confidence and determination that emanated from a few players to the whole team. Some people played well against Tennessee, but fell flat against Maryland."

DiStanislao was a little more pleased with her team's performance against Tennessee. Although the game was sloppy (52 turnovers and 36 fouls by the two teams), Notre Dame was able to keep up with the talented Vols after falling behind early.

Except for the first eight minutes of the game, the Irish played very tough defense and were able to keep Tennessee within striking distance. However, the 11-point lead that the Lady Vols built up early in the game before the Irish realized that they could play with their nationally-known opponents.

Gradually, the Irish began to gain confidence and closed the gap to eight while Tennessee's all-American forward Mary Ostrowski was on the bench with foul trouble. However, Notre Dame let the big opportunity slip by and Tennessee began dominating the boards. The lead ballooned to 21 before the Irish made an impressive comeback to cut the lead to 10 with two minutes left. It was too little, too late, however.

"We had them right where we wanted them," said DiStanislao, "but it is the mark of a good team that when one person isn't doing the job, another picks up the slack. And Paula Towns (14 points, 8 rebounds) picked up the slack."

"It was obvious that Tennessee was the aggressor. They made situations and we didn't. It says a lot about their experience. They knew where the defense was and took advantage of it."

"I don't think we're very far away at all," she continued. "We just need to play with intensity for 40 minutes."

The performance the next night against Maryland changed her optimistic tone. Only the impressive showing of freshman point guard Vonnice Thompson gave her reason to be happy. Thompson has played nearly every minute this year and Game experience.

That is what Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps wanted for his team last weekend and that is what he received as the Irish won a pair of home games.

The victims were St. Joseph's of Rensselaer, Ind. on Friday night and Marist College on Saturday afternoon. After bombing the Pumas, 104-56, Notre Dame struggled the next day in beating the Red Foxes, 75-68.

In Friday's game, Tom Sluby topped the scoring parade with 17 points on 8 of 10 shooting. The Irish jumped out in front of St. Joseph's 50-19 at the end of the first half and then cruised to the easy win.

The Irish again were aided by their impressive crop of freshmen.

Forward John Bowen led all rebounders with 10 and also chipped in with 14 points, all in the second half. Scott Hicks, a first-year guard, was impressive in netting 16 points and adding four steals.

Sophomore Joe Buchanan earned a start at the point guard spot, and made the best of it by contributing nine assists.

"I thought Joe Buchanan did a good job of getting us into our game plan," said Phelps. "I told John Bowen, who scored 14 points, to thank Joe Buchanan for his points because it was Joe's defense that got John the easy shots."

In all, it was no contest for the Irish as they pounded the Division II opponent.

"I was shocked to say the least," said Puma coach George Waggoner, "but I expected it. Our young kids didn't handle it very well, but they'll learn from it and we'll bounce back."

If the game was a heavyweight fight, it would have been stopped in the first round, as Notre Dame raced to a 25-6 lead in the first 8:10.

"For us, this was an opener to give us confidence, especially our younger players," stated Phelps. "We set the tempo of the game early."

Notre Dame applied a relentless full-court press forcing 31 Puma turnovers.

The next game featured more of the same as the Irish raced to a 38-19 lead over Marist in the first half.

But Steve Eggink's hot shooting and Notre Dame's cold second half shooting allowed the Red Foxes to cut the large margin to just 63-58, forcing Phelps to call a timeout with just 7:23 to go.

Sophomore forward Jim Dolan then led an Irish rally of nine straight points as Notre Dame iced the game.

"We had a two minute lapse when the game was very close," said Eggink. "But the key to the game was the first half, where we were just too jittery."

Those jitters resulted in just 38 percent shooting while the Irish hit 61 percent and gained a 47-33 halftime edge.

"We had not faced that kind of man-to-man pressure before," said Red Fox coach Ron Petro. "Once
