Shakespeare marathon attempts to set record and raise needed funds

By PAT SAIN
Senior Staff Reporter

Spring hath arriveth, and people's thoughts turneth to Shakespeare. Well, at least for the next three days. The words of the English bard are being read non-stop for 100 hours during a Shakespeare reading marathon on the Fieldhouse mall.

The marathon is both an attempt at the world record for Shakespeare reading, and to raise money for the family of Accounting Professor Kenneth Milani, whose son, Adam, was injured while playing hockey last year.

Campus personalities have been participating regularly — Digger Phelps started the marathon at midnight on Tuesday, followed yesterday afternoon by such notables as Emil T. Hofman, Bishop Crowley, Gerry Faust, and Father Van Wolvlear. Yesterday evening saw the Esophagus Constrictors and the Student Senate spouting Shakespeare.

Milani's son was critically injured December 7 in a high school hockey game at Culver Military Academy. The accident occurred when Milani went after a puck and was knocked backwards onto a ledge by another player. The impact crushed a vertebra in his neck, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down.

The marathon is being organized and run by Paul Rathburn, a Notre Dame professor of English, specializing in Shakespeare.

"The entire campus is responding as a community," said Rathburn. "Instead of just hearing about something, people are doing something. . . It's been years since I have seen response like this," he said.

The readers have come from both the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities, with members of the administration, faculty, and staff participating in addition to students, said Rathburn.

Notre Dame Food Services donated $200, and are supplying nighttime readers with coffee and food, and two South Bend companies have donated a hot air balloon and a tent.

All money raised during the marathon will be put in the Adam Milani Fund, and will be used to help the Milani family with medical expenses.

Some residence halls have donated money, said Rathburn, and Dan Vogl, a Notre Dame professor of art, has donated several paintings to be sold, with the profit going to the Milani Fund. The marathon is also raffling a bound volume of the complete works of Shakespeare, and selling t-shirts and buttons. The Tempest will be shown Monday, April 30 at 7 and 10 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium and admission will be

Robert Kennedy's son, David, dead at age 28

Associated Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. — David Anthony Kennedy, 28-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, was found dead in a hotel room yesterday in this oceanside resort where his family has wintered for 40 years. Investigators seeking the cause of death said, "We're now looking for drugs."

Young Kennedy had a history of drug and alcohol problems, but the cause of his death might not be known for several days.

"We're not ruling out a natural death but we're now looking for drugs," said Rick Black, chief investigator for the Palm Beach County Medical Examiner's office, after the autopsy was completed. Tests of tissue and body fluid to find evidence of drugs would take "four to eight days, minimum," he said.

"The cause of death is pending the results of these further studies," Black said, adding that suicide was ruled out because of Kennedy's psychological profile, and no evidence of heart attack or brain injury was found.

"Anything (else) is possible at this point in time," he said, refusing to rule out even homicide because "we always have it in the back of our minds." Earlier, police had said there was no sign of foul play.

Kennedy's body, on a stretcher covered with a red blanket, was moved from the medical examiner's office to a hearse shortly after 8 p.m., accompanied by his brother, Joseph II.

Columnist Kempton praises Smith, criticizes Reagan and Hart in talk

By MAURA MANDYCK
News Staff

Murray Kempton, columnist for the Long Island newspaper Newsday, began his lecture at the Center for Continuing Education last night by denying that he is, as George Will described him, "the best columnist the United States has ever produced." He then praised Red Smith, the honoree of the lecture series sponsored by the American Studies department and Coca Cola. Red Smith, said Kempton, was "about as awesome a presence as anyone that self-effacing could ever be."

Red Smith developed "the rarest of all art forms in the stockrooms of journalism . . ." Kempton maintained. "The ability to see through another's eyes. He had the unlucky sort of talent that makes its possessor feel as if he has been cheated somewhere along the line."

Kempton spoke about democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart. "Hart is to politics what a master of business administration is to the business world. He reduces the concrete to the abstract." He expressed his concern about Hart's campaign slogan of "New Ideas."

"It is at least rooted in the English language," he conceded, but "an idea can stand between us and true feeling." Kempton perceives Hart's alteration of information concerning his past as not flaws of character but defects of reason.

Also present was Max Lerner, chairman of the American studies department, who worked with Kempton on the New York Post. Lerner commented that perhaps Gary Hart's presence at Kempton's lecture would have been beneficial. "It is better to be lauded than roasted, but when the roasting is as elegant as Murray Kempton has just committed, it is not to be missed even if you are the victim."

Lerner spoke of working with Kempton as a "sweet and sour time for me." The sweetness was the "comradship of newspaper men" as well as the "sense of joy that comes in the writing itself." The sourness was from the "toughness of competition." Lerner described having his column published on the same page as Kempton's as "falling off a cliff step by step." He felt, after reading

Kempton's column, that his should be signed, not Max, but "anticlimax."

Concerning Kempton's writing, Lerner said "To read him is to be stretched, if not to your best, at least to something you shouldn't have to be ashamed of." He described

Hauerwas to accept post at Duke

By PAUL MCGINN
Senior Staff Reporter

Stanley Hauerwas, a nationally prominent theologian, confirmed yesterday he will take a position at Duke University's divinity school Sept. 1.

Hauerwas, a tenured professor in Notre Dame's theology department, said, "It's with deep sadness in many ways that I leave Notre Dame because it has provided me with my basic education both as a teacher and as a theologian."

Hauerwas, in his 14th year at Notre Dame, thanked those persons who had shown him "an act of hospitality I will always value."

"I will be taking a great part of Notre Dame and Catholicism with me to Duke," he added.

Dennis Campbell, dean at Duke's divinity school, told The Observer, "We're thrilled that Professor Hauerwas is coming to Duke."

Plans for Hauerwas' new position as a tenured professor of theological ethics at Duke were made final April 18, said Campbell.

"It's a very significant appointment for Duke. Without question, he is a major figure in theological ethics in North America," Campbell said.

Father Richard McBrien, theology department chairman at Notre Dame declined to comment about Hauerwas' departure.

In Brief

"Hansel and Gretel," an opera by Engelbert Humperdinck, will be staged by the Saint Mary's music department at 8 tonight and again Saturday, April 28 in the Little Theatre. Humperdinck and his librettist, Adelheid Wette, first adapted the Grimms' fairy tale to lyric form in 1981 as a "singspiel" for children. Humperdinck expanded the work to an opera two years later. It is the first opera produced at Saint Mary's in almost a decade. Tickets for "Hansel and Gretel" are $1 for adults. Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students and children under 14 will be admitted free. Tickets may be purchased at the door. — The Observer

"Human Rights Abuses: The Cause of Chile" will be the topic of Professor Alejandro Foxley's lecture this evening at 7 in the Center for Social Concerns. The lecture will kick off a human rights awareness program of Amnesty International. Foxley is a professor of the Helen Kellogg Institute. — The Observer

The fourth annual Campus Scream, an unofficial An Tostal event, is scheduled to begin tonight at midnight. Leaders of the People's An Tostal Committee, the organizers of the event, say they hope for a larger turnout than last year. "We are running an apolitical event; however, we will be unable to control political cheers," says the chairman of PATC. — The Observer

Of Interest

Nine prominent literary and critical theorists will meet at Notre Dame today through Saturday, April 28 for a conference titled "Criticism Without Boundaries: Directions and Cross Currents in Postmodern Critical Theory." According to Joseph A. Buttigieg, associate professor and director of graduate studies in English and the conference organizer, "We want to examine ways in which recent changes in literary theory have affected developments in other academic disciplines. The participants, who come from a variety of fields, will be uniquely suited for this task." — The Observer

It's going to take cooperation to keep social life alive and well

As alcohol policy protests and demonstrations go on, effects of the new policy continue to be debated. One thing is certain, though — weekend life on both campuses will be drastically altered. Yes, Saint Mary's students also will be "victims" of the new rules, although not to the extent of Notre Dame students.

For years, Saint Mary's students have taken full advantage of Notre Dame's former, rather liberal alcohol policy, while the drinking age on their own campus remained 21. Saint Mary's students, unlike their neighbors, are used to alcohol rules and the "sneaking around" accompanying them. The fact remains that Saint Mary's underclassmen have made full use of Notre Dame alcohol, and now the tap has run dry.

But how will this new policy affect the relationship between the two schools? They do share much more than a Friday and Saturday night social life, of course. Nothing will alter the clubs, classes, and projects of the two schools. But the weekend social life could swing either way, depending on how students look at it.

For the immediate future, Notre Dame student government would like Saint Mary's student support at tomorrow's rally outside LaFortune. This would be appropriate, since Saint Mary's students will also have their social life affected.

On a broader level, such as protests of violations of student rights, a number of restrictions backing this up come to mind. Few have much to do with Saint Mary's student life, however.

But if Saint Mary's students think the Notre Dame administration acted unfairly, and their presence tomorrow would help, then support is a good idea. But Saint Mary's women should not plan on attending the demonstration just because it should be a "good time." Support the protest because you believe it to be a good cause.

Cooperation on this immediate level will last until the end of this year. But what about next year? Changes in social life at both schools will have to occur if there is still to be a social life. The way things stand now, going to a Notre Dame dorm to watch TV for a night will be illegal if there are too many people present. Hopefully, student protests will result in some changes in policy details, but the main points unfortunately will stay.

This is where the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's weekend relationship can go either way. Will students make the effort to get to each other's campuses?

Planning activities without alcohol is an area where Saint Mary's has had practice. Some events have been

Theresa Guarino

Assistant News Editor

Inside Thursday

successful, others have been failures.

The two Five Hall Dances easily come to mind. Both, in the Haggar College Center, were extremely well attended. In fact, more Notre Dame students attended than did Saint Mary's. Because of the success, more are planned for next year, according to Saint Mary's Student Body President Lee Ann Franks. The Keenan Revue party earlier this semester was also extremely successful.

Other dry activities at Saint Mary's have not gone over so well. "We've had some attendance problems in the past," said Franks, "but all along we've had to plan with no alcohol. Now Notre Dame too will have to plan alternate activities."

The alcohol policy could hurt both schools much more than it will help. Whatever the outcome, students are going to have to adapt.

Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students should use next year, when social activities may seem scarce, to open lines of communication. Cooperation is needed to plan weekend events more than ever. Students should work together to give each other more reasons to cross U.S. 31.

Individual halls and classes could sponsor more joint activities. Maybe the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's women could interact more closely. Stories of animosities between the two are very much exaggerated.

The rally tomorrow should be well attended. Let's hope students will be able to get some of the more restrictive details of the policy changed.

Let's also hope students will work together next year to make the social life on both campuses a success — even though it may be dry.

American Red Cross active at Notre Dame

By ANNE GALLAGHER
News Staff

When you hear the words "American Red Cross," do you think of disaster relief, life saving, or the little white card that has been stuck in your wallet for six years?

Most are familiar with a few of the volunteer services that are provided by this national organization, but few know how active the American Red Cross is at Notre Dame.

The Red Cross has always provided first aid at major athletic events through the St. Joseph County Chapter.

Four years ago, the chapter approached freshmen Dan Edmundowicz and Chris Weyers, asking them to become student coordinators and to get more ND/SMC students involved.

Edmundowicz, who has been actively involved in the ARC for more than six years, is an emergency medical technician, and is still the student coordinator. He has also become a member of the Board of the County Chapter. Assistant Coordinator Chris McFarland, as well as juniors Steve Liese and Glenn Standish, also have helped maintain student involvement.

In 1982, Edmundowicz and fellow volunteers successfully petitioned the county chapter to form a branch chapter on the Notre Dame campus. According to Peter Womer, staff advisor for the branch, and vice chairman of the county's First Aid Station Program, the branch has proven to be a huge success and has "paid off in great dividends."

The branch chapter now has 20 active members, including seven EMT's, and several qualified in advanced and standard first aid who have volunteered many hours in training and serving the American Red Cross is its non-varsity athletic role. In conjunction with the NVA office, the Red Cross provides first aid teams at almost all men's and women's club sports. In addition, the branch also serves non-athletic events, such as the Collegiate Jazz Festival, Mardi Gras, and Junior Parents Weekend, as well as campus-wide events like Bookstore Basketball.

Another program started by the branch in September 1983 was the QRS Program. The Quick Response Squad, designed by students and Notre Dame Security, is manned by volunteers from Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and is on call every day from 5 to 11 p.m. The QRS team primarily transports injured students to the hospital, thus alleviating some of the Security Department's workload.

QRS utilizes a van donated by the University's athletic department. The QRS Program is not an ambulance service, yet the team's proximity allows its volunteers to stabilize a patient well before an ambulance arrives.

Womer said, "QRS can mean the difference between life and death." Joanne Beissel, a dispatcher for Notre Dame Security where QRS is based, recalled one incident in which a Flanner student had a severe reaction to a food dye found in oranges, and began to have difficulty in breathing. Fortunately, Edmundowicz, who is a Flanner resident, was on duty at the time and was able to administer oxygen and stabilize the student.

Beissel added, "People don't realize the types of problems that arise, and working together, the Red Cross and Security provide a much more efficient service to the community."

The branch also provides several educational courses. Water Safety is taught through the Physical Education department at the Rockne Memorial, as well as nightly CPR and standard first aid courses taught by students from the branch. The branch also has a service for veterans, and can provide almost any service the county chapter can provide.

Edmundowicz feels it is important that other students realize Notre Dame "does have a group of students who are interested in providing these services, and these services are priceless." He also emphasized that the Red Cross is always looking for volunteers. The branch provides the training, so all that is needed is an interest in helping others. According to Womer, "The program's future depends on the students and maintaining an interest to get involved."

Kempton's campaign pieces as good short stories focusing on a single detail to illuminate the whole person.

"You rarely find him (Kempton) talking about the issues," Lerner said. "The issues change but it is the total man who has to make the decisions."

Journalism of this kind, much maligned as it has been, can establish a kind of linkage, a liaison, between the authentically human and the realm of ideas," Lerner continued. "I miss him," he admitted.

Kempton responded to Lerner's remarks by insisting that, "four-fifths of what I said is probably nonsense." He claims that, "the man you are writing about will eventually give himself away" and that any one columnist's opinion is more or less irrelevant. Lerner added jokingly, "But they give themselves away after they're elected."

Kempton spoke of the difference between Hart and Reagan. "Gary Hart loves show business. Ronald Reagan is show business. Lurking around in his mind are 150,000 movie scripts," Ronald Reagan's "saving grace," Kempton asserts, "is knowing in his heart of hearts that it's not his fault."

The lecture concluded with a question and answer session with both Kempton and Lerner responding.

Presidential elections bid defeated in Brazil

Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — The military-backed government party early this morning defeated an opposition-sponsored bill to reinstate direct presidential elections this year in Latin America's largest country.

With a majority of the votes counted, the constitutional amendment — which had broad public support — stood no chance of passage. A two-thirds majority, 320 votes, was needed. With 439 of the 479 votes counted, there were 276 votes in favor, 106 absent, 54 who voted against and three abstentions.

The vote came after a day-long debate yesterday.

The government of President Joao Figueiredo, the fifth general to lead this nation of 131 million people since a 1964 right-wing coup, plans to install a new president through an electoral-college vote next Jan. 15. The electoral body is weighted in favor of the government's Social Democratic Party.

The constitutional amendment debated yesterday, proposed by the center-left political opposition, called instead for direct presidential elections Nov. 15, elections that would probably favor the opposition Party of the Brazilian Democratic Movement.

Under the existing plan, the first direct presidential election would be in 1990 — 30 years after Brazilians last voted for a president. But Figueiredo recently introduced a compromise proposal that would set direct elections for 1988.

Figueiredo last week declared a limited state of emergency in the Brasilia Federal District, saying he wanted to prevent "caravans of demonstrators" from "coercing" Congress. Public gatherings were banned and censorship imposed on political news reports by broadcast media, and classes at two universities were suspended.

On Tuesday, 500 students occupied the main lobby of Congress for several hours. About 75 federal police troopers surrounded the building, the students left, and at one point police reportedly fired shots into the air. No injuries were reported.

The government's broadcast regulatory agency allowed brief broadcasts by television and radio from the congressional chamber, which had been prohibited under the government's limited state of emergency. The regulatory agency later said all transmissions must go through federal censors.

The government had put a virtual blackout on all direct news on television or radio about the restrictive measures and the vote, saying all material must be viewed first by censors.

Motorists had honked automobile horns as they passed the Congress building, in support of the bill. Other protests were staged in cities across Brazil, where millions have rallied in favor of direct elections in recent weeks, after 20 years of military regimes.

Outside the modernistic twin-towered Congress building in Brasilia, about 1,500 people chanted and waved banners in illegal demonstrations, calling for "Direct elections now."

With this year's Reviewing Officer — University President Father Theodore Hesburgh — looking on, the Navy, Army, and Air Force ROTC Units were presented yesterday in the annual Tri-Military Presidential Review.

Also on the reviewing stand were the Commanding Officers of the ROTC Units; Captain John D. Rohrbough, USN; Lieutenant USAF. Six seniors from the three units who were to receive awards were also on the reviewing stand.

The following awards were presented to the six seniors:

The Reverend John J. Cavanaugh, C.S.C., Award: cMAJ Joseph F. Trustey

The Patrick Dixon Award: cCPT Edward P. Grogran

The Strake Foundation Award: MIDN 1c Kirk A. Shawhan

The Reverend J. Hugh O'Donnell Award: MIDN 1c Peter Quast

The Notre Dame Air Force Award: cLtCol Kerry M. Zalud

The Noel A. Dube Memorial Award: cMAJ Kevin M. Benner

Immediately following the presentation Father Hesburgh delivered a short address, encouraging the cadets, and voicing his thoughts on the need for good leaders in our armed services. This was followed by the passing in review of the approximately 700 cadets and midshipmen, who comprise nearly 10 percent of the undergraduate student body.

Music was provided by the 74th U.S. Army Band from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Included in the review was a flyover by two A-10 Thunderbolt II Aircraft from the 434 Tactical Fighter Wing of Grissom Air Force Base, Ind.

Hart looks to Utah for boost

Associated Press

Gary Hart looked yesterday to his Utah neighbors for another boost in his comeback drive in the Democratic presidential race, while front-runner Walter F. Mondale asked supporters to shut down union-backed delegate committees that have raised tens of thousands of dollars in independent contributions.

But Mondale spurned the Colorado senator's recommendation to "Give the money back, Walter. That's the way to solve the problem."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, blasted Mondale and Hart for "perpetrating a scam on the American people" by proposing increased spending both for defense and social programs.

Jackson leveled his charge as he and his rivals awaited the results of Utah's Democratic party caucuses at long distance.

As Hart looked to Utah to give credence to his claim to the West, the state's Democratic chairman, Patrick Shea, joined Gov. Scott Matheson yesterday in urging the state to take an uncommitted delegation to the national convention.

Twenty-two delegates were at stake in the caucuses yesterday night.

Hart, trying to fashion a comeback in the second half of the campaign season, won the Vermont caucuses handily on Tuesday, although he still trails Mondale, 1,128.8 delegates to 626. Jackson has 167.2, of the 1,967 needed to win the nomination.

The next tests after Utah are primaries on Tuesday in Washington, D.C., and Tennessee, followed by party caucuses on Saturday in Texas.

Jackson, campaigning in Texas, said both his rivals have called for better education and an increased commitment to social programs, as well as more spending on defense.

"They cannot have it both ways," he said. "To go in the same direction as the warmongering Reagan administration, only a bit slower, is not offering an alternative."

"It is perpetuating a scam on the American public."

Hart has filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission charging the Mondale campaign broke the law and was using the delegate committees to circumvent spending limitations.

Mondale said, however, that it was "entirely legal and proper" for the independent committees to take contributions from political action committees, even though his formal campaign committee does not.

At a news conference in Chattanooga, Tenn., he said he wanted the delegate committees "terminated, period, ended" because the "clatter... undermined my capacity to make my case clearly on the issues that counted."

There was no precise estimate of how much the PACs had contributed, although the committees have reported raising about $250,000 overall.

In addition, FEC records indicate that some of the staff aides laid off by Mondale's campaign have gone to work for the independent committees, which have sprouted up in several key primary states and relied heavily on contributions from PACs established by labor unions.

Mondale and his aides have insisted that the money raised and spent by the committees not count toward the $20.2 million limit the federal government has set for candidates.

Democratic Presidential hopeful Gary Hart works out on an exercise machine before embarking on a full day of campaigning last Tuesday in Cleveland and Youngstown.

Reagan commences first state visit to Red China since Nixon summit

Associated Press

PEKING — President Reagan, who spent a generation as one of the United States' harshest critics of China, arrived in Peking yesterday afternoon.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, stepped off Air Force One at 1:03 a.m. EST into a chilly, cloudy drizzle to begin the first presidential visit to the Communist Peoples Republic of China since U.S.-Chinese relations were normalized in 1979.

Aboard Air Force One on the five-hour flight from Guam, the president was given a final briefing by Secretary of State George Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

Mrs. Reagan, chatting with reporters, said she was prepared. "If I'm not set now, I'll never be," said said.

Was the president ready?

"Oh yes, oh yes," she said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president's first meeting with Chinese head of state

Li Xiannian was intended to "set the tone" of the visit. More substantive, lengthier discussions will be held Friday with Premier Zhao Ziyang.

As he stepped from the plane, Reagan waved to reporters and a few Americans from the U.S. Embassy awaiting his arrival.

The president wore a suit and Mrs. Reagan a two-piece blue and white spring outfit, both coatless despite the unseasonably cold weather.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hummel went up the steps to the plane to welcome the Reagans, who then alighted to be greeted by Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, Culture Minister Zhu Muzhi and the Chinese ambassador to Washington, Zhang Wenjin. Twelve black limousines, led by the president's own armored vehicle, and followed by Chinese-made Red Flag limousines, waited to take the entourage into the city. But when the Reagans boarded the motorcade for the 30-minute drive into downtown Peking, they got into one of the Chinese cars bearing an American flag, leaving the American lead car as a decoy.

There they were to receive a formal welcome, including a 21-gun salute at Tiananmen Square, the largest public square in the world.

UAW official blasts policy

Associated Press

DETROIT — A United Auto Workers union official yesterday called Chrysler Corp.'s proposal to award $51.6 million in executive bonuses "a scandal and an outrage."

The automaker announced in its proxy released Monday that shareholders will decide at their June 7 meeting in New Orleans how to distribute the $51.6 million to 1,465 executives, including Chairman Lee Iacocca.

"I am deeply disappointed in the management of the North American auto companies for demonstrating such greed, given the fact that we are just now seeing some flecks of recovery from one of the deepest recessions this country has experienced." UAW vice President Mark Stepp, who heads the union's Chrysler department, said in a statement.

Stepp called the Chrysler proposals "a scandal and an outrage that give more ammunition to the enemies of the North American auto industry."

He also claimed that the "spectacle of executives feeding at the trough" would hurt efforts at continued import restraints on Japanese cars.

to start at Saint Mary'sBy KAREN THOMPSON
News Staff

Renovations at Saint Mary's will be taking place in the science building and in Holy Cross and LeMans dorms during the next three years. Saint Mary's will be investing "nearly $10 million in renovating, expanding and updating our current physical plant," said Controller Jason Lindower.

The new wing of the science building, designed by Clinton Sathrum, will provide more classrooms and lab space by adding a circular hallway with faculty offices and research space on the north side of the building.

The crucial part of the renovation, according to Lindower, is that "there are a great deal of mechanical, heating, and ventilation materials involved." He added, "We looked for an architect who would take this into consideration, and who had previous experience in designing science buildings."

Construction on the new wing will take approximately 16 months. When the addition is finished, faculty will move into the new building and renovation will begin on the existing building.

Cost for this task has been estimated at $6 million. Funds will be raised by gifts and pledges, and by selling tax-exempt bonds during construction.

Funding for the Holy Cross-LeMans remodeling will be provided by a $3.5 million College Housing Loan from the U.S. Office of Education.

The cost will cover a wide variety of renovation projects. Among these are the installation of fire alarms and smoke detectors in both dorms. In Holy Cross, an emergency light will be installed, and the fire escapes will be repaired. Plans for LeMans call for the replacement of both elevators, and the completion of the two dead-end stairwells. Also to be included in the changes are renovation of the restrooms, and the addition of more electrical currents in both Holy Cross and LeMans. The projects will honor 15 different contracts.

The target date for the start of the renovations is June 1, although some of the work will not be completed until the following summer.

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three year enlistment cancels 100 percent of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

Trying to argue on an empty stomach

He was a nice, rotten old columnist. Sincere in his belief. Committed to his cause. Convinced he was a victim of injustice. And he was asking for my help.

So it was easy, almost painless, for me to reject him; to tell him that though I respected him for having the courage to take a stand, I couldn't really give a damn.

Keith Picher

Profundity's demise

Our conversation didn't really go like this, because I jazzed it up for my column:

"Keith, this is Mike Royko, I'd like your help. You've probably read my columns."

"No, I don't recall. Who are you?"

"I'm a world-famous syndicated columnist who writes for the Chicago Tribune, now that the Alien runs the Sun-Times."

"Come to think of it, I have read your work — you're the sarcastic guy who always whines about how bad everything is with your cutesy style."

"That's right, but I do pay a little attention to issues."

"Maybe, but you always make the most noise about tangents."

"Anyway, Keith, some of my colleagues are demanding that I base my columns on facts. I think I'm mature enough to gloss over real issues, but my bosses are being unjust and exceeding their authority. I hoped you would write something in The Observer to help me."

"I'm touched and flattered by your plea, but I have to decline."

"For what reason?"

"Throwing up."

"Huh?"

"You heard me. Throwing up."

"Throwing up? What does that mean?"

"You don't know what throwing up means?"

"Well sure, but I don't understand what you're trying to say."

"That makes two of us. Half the time I don't know what you're trying to say. Anyway, after I read your April 20 column on Notre Dame and alcohol I threw up."

"Are you sure it wasn't something you ate?"

"Let me tell you something, Mike, this is a serious issue. Every time I read your column I throw up."

"But I don't throw up."

"Don't give me that. In a recent survey, four out of five dentists surveyed preferred Trident for their patients who chew sugarless gum."

"Keith, I find that hard to believe."

"Yeah? well here are some more stats. After an independent sampling of 2,673 Notre Dame students was forced to read your column on alcohol, throwing-up increased 1,705 percent!"

"Keith, I find those figures incredible."

"Really? When we took your column away, the incidents were reduced by 96.3 percent. Thank goodness."

"But I'm not talking about Notre Dame, I'm talking about throwing up."

"I don't care if you like throwing up. You see, after a student called to tell you that the Notre Dame protests were over more than just getting drunk, you declined to listen. You figured you knew everything about Notre Dame based on the media coverage you'd seen."

"Now don't appeal to any sense of fairness."

"I'm not, I'm just appealing to common sense in journalism. When our student body president called and offered to explain what the protest was all about, you treated him coldly, the way I hear you treat most people. You'd already written your column, and you didn't want to be bothered by the facts."

"Keith, I expect you are guilty of hypocrisy."

"It's a good thing I wear contact lenses or I'd throw up on you for saying that. In what way am I being hypocritical?"

"Can you honestly say that you research everything you write?"

"No, but I try to. So what?"

"Then how can you oppose my doing the same thing all the time?"

"Because you're not a student, thousands more people read your column and you get paid a hell of a lot more than me."

"So?"

"I also don't like to throw up on the sneak, like you."

A student perspective on dining hall work

"Lettuce serve you" — a phrase known and loved by every true Notre Dame student, with the possible exception of that peerless personae: the dining hall worker.

As a student employee at North Dining Hall, I am well acquainted with serving the student population, and with all the minor irritations and grievances associated with the job. How often have you thought about what goes on behind the scenes (not counting the many times you've wondered just what makes the gravy its peculiar yellow hue)?

Mary Heilmann

People have many misconceptions about student workers. Probably the most common of these misguided maxims is the belief that the student who serves the food has also cooked the entire meal, and therefore deserves to be told in a menacing tone that the Hungarian Noodle Bake actually contains foreign elements, or that the Roast Beef au jus is fatal. I hear the latter less frequently, since one must survive the meal to register a formal complaint.

Another misconception is that every server has tasted every entree, and is therefore able to give a rundown of the culinary merits of each. If something needs a formal identification, I generally avoid it, and, accordingly, am not qualified to recommend it.

An entire evening spent not knowing the composition of Noodle Kugel can become rather tedious. A good rule of thumb: scan the dining hall first, looking for prostrate bodies and taking note of the half eaten remnants on their plates.

There are a few benefits to working in one of our fine eating establishments. For instance, I have learned how to flip glasses into the green racks, with my personal record standing at two simultaneous triple flips. I have also enhanced my meager knowledge of physics by studying the napkins which ride by on the mornings of departmental exams, covered with Feq ma and qeq CV.

Most importantly, my driving skills have immeasurably honed by the feat of maneuvering tray-laden carts through the dining rooms at the lunchtime rush hour, managing to knock over two chairs, a stack of bowls and one unsuspecting freshman.

Dining hall work is often very educational. In fact, a day on the slop line should be mandatory for all psychology majors, since it would provide them with several possible topics for their doctoral papers.

Why, for example, do students insist on scraping the chocolate icing off their chocolate eclairs, while leaving the cream filling on the side of their plate? Why must students mix peanut butter, honey, maple syrup and various other leftovers into a paste so thick it has to be sandblasted off the bowl?

Why do people construct monuments to their architectural genius by stacking ten glasses into a pyramid that glides perfectly along the conveyor belt until it crumbles with a shattering crash? As a mere English major, I could not profess to discover the answers to these idiosyncratic conundrums, but I would love to see the psychological secrets such a study would reveal.

Well, there it is — the harangue of a student dining hall worker. Try to remember it the next time you feel the urge to shred your napkin as if North Dining Hall were the Pentagon, or to inquire as to the edibility of an obviously unappetizing entree. Make my day!

An opportunity to set the record straight

Tomorrow a scene will unfold on the steps of the Administration Building that undoubtedly will mark a turning point in the Notre Dame student's effort to achieve an improved campus life and a true voice in those decisions and issues which affect the quality of our campus life. This turning point, however, can be either positive or negative. Many eyes will be upon us, and the proper perception of our cause is vital.

R. Bertino & C. David

It is up to us.

The first few spontaneous rallies of a week ago were rare instances of students rising together to voice their dissatisfaction. Slogans deriding the administration were chanted, beers were guzzled, and banners waved. The student body was shocked from apathy by so drastic a change occurring so suddenly.

Even last Wednesday's noon rally reflected our anger. Students spoke out against Father William Beauchamp and the recommendations of his committee with a heady passion. Alcohol consumption was brazenly flaunted in public. The result was the occupation of the building by an agitated mob of students — and a willing and eager media covered the entire dramatic episode.

Not surprisingly, the nation laughed at the immature and spoiled brats crying for the alleged right to have their university assume liability for an underage alcohol fix. The nation wondered why good Catholics would put aside such relevant issues as the fight against social injustice in order to retain the right to drink beer.

We looked like fools.

The nation did not understand what we have yet to understand ourselves. We were — and still are — angry with this particular decision, despite the fact that the policy is what was expected by most. It is not so much what was done, but the way in which it was done, that we find disturbing. We have now come to realize that we are more upset with the process involved than we are with the actual policy.

We are not as frustrated with losing drinking privileges as we are with the fact that the policy and the directive are typical of the administration's desire to control the quality of student life with nothing more than token student input.

Now that the cause of our discontent is clear, it is not too late to regain the integrity we have lost. Tomorrow will be a test of the true character of the student body of Notre Dame. We must shift our emphasis away from alcohol and toward a better social life, toward having a meaningful and effective voice in the decisions affecting our student life. We must abandon our beer chants and our obscene banners, refraining from violence or vandalism. We must reverse the perceived attitude prevalent across the nation and gain the respect of the administration.

We must come out tomorrow with strength, character, and responsibility.

Everyone knows we are enraged, but by demonstrating that we have a valid claim to an active voice in University decisions, the legitimacy of our cause will become self-evident to the ill-informed spectator. The nation will be watching, and the media will be their eyes and ears, ready to tell the story they want to tell: "Students Cry For Beer." Let's not give them that chance.

Robert Bertino is the student body president, and Cathy David is the student body vice president.

P. O. Box Q

Aim of the protests

Dear Editor:

Are we "spoiled brats," just crying over lost beer? No we are not, and it is time we remind the nation and ourselves about our cause! The issue at hand is not the alcohol policy, but the policy-making procedure here at Notre Dame.

The nation views Notre Dame as a magnificent marvel where all of the students are well bred and reside in a tranquil atmosphere beneath the glorious "Golden Dome." Certain administrators would die to maintain this "image." Let us be reminded that university policies are created in the "best interest of the students," and especially in the best interest of the University.

Notre Dame is no longer a University consisting of students, but the University of Notre Dame is comprised of a Board of Trustees, Officers of the University and a President-in-Absentia.

Let us remember that they are just taking care of us — it is for our own good. This issue will not cause me to transfer. I'll endure my remaining two years. Notre Dame still is a special place despite the fact that I'm unable to make my own decisions.

I have one question to ask of this glorious University — in five to 10 years will you be there to help me decide who I want to marry, where I want to live and the number of children I want to have?

Remember — the issue at hand is not the alcohol policy, but the policy-making procedure.

Roemer disappointing

Dear Editor:

Recently, I read an article in the Chicago Tribune on the alcohol protests. I was very disappointed to see Dean Roemer quoted as saying, "It's a reflection of students today that they would demonstrate about alcohol instead of nuclear war or hunger issues."

First, the administration does not seem to realize the recent protests are aimed at the poor quality of social life as much as the new alcohol policy. The students tried to reason with the administration through representation on the Committee, yet this representation apparently had no effect.

It was only after this approach failed that students decided that vocal demonstrations might cause the administration to re-examine a poor policy.

More distressing, however, is the implication that students today are more concerned with where their next beer is coming from than the social problems of today.

Perhaps Dean Roemer is unaware that one of the most popular classes on campus today is "The Nuclear Dilemma." Does he know of the many Notre Dame students who recently took part in the recent CROP walk to raise money for the hungry? How about student volunteers at NISH and Logan Center? Or what about the recent Mock Convention? More than 500 students spent four days discussing issues ranging from abortion to nuclear power.

Unfortunately, direct, constructive, and realistic approaches to these various problems do not merit the attention of the media. But don't these approaches accomplish more than any large public demonstrations could accomplish?

True there is much more each student could do, but it is sad that Dean Roemer, a man supposedly in touch with today's students, would do such a disservice to the many actively-involved Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who are trying to understand today's problems and deal with them in an intelligent manner.

Misdirected values

Dear Editor:

In the 60s and 70s, when the horrific situation in Vietnam was taking place, the demonstrations on the Notre Dame campus did not make the headlines of the national newspapers. It took taking beer away from underage drinkers in the 80s to give Notre Dame its much-wanted national prestige.

Student Body President Rob Bertino, who seems rather intoxicated with his position concerning this issue, was quoted in the April 18 issue of The Observer, promising national magazine coverage for this Friday's rally.

Well, good for Bertino — it is very patriotic to scream for the media to scrape up a story on why the University shouldn't uphold the law. Unfortunately, Bertino and his mob of protestors are just one more example of the mixed up value system here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

As men and women indoctrinated in Christian beliefs and ideals, we should channel our outrage toward real injustice; we should pay more attention to social justice issues rather than where our next beer is coming from.

If Newsweek and Time arrive on Friday as Bertino hopes, they will witness well-educated young Catholics arguing with the administration for an alcoholic solution to their "social" problems.

Denying education

Dear Editor:

I would like to relate some of my feelings of frustration and anger concerning university policies on pre-registration. In particular, I am speaking about courses supposedly available for Arts & Letters students in the A.L.P.A. Program, which normally are only offered to Business majors. I will be a junior next year, and has of yet been unable to get any entry-level business courses because of a lack of space. Since this University boasts about its goals for higher education, I, along with several hundred other students, feel that the administration should do everything in its power to provide the courses that so many students want.

One must first understand that an Arts and Letters student who has also had the opportunity to take business courses, has a much better chance of getting a job after graduation. After paying close to $9000 each year, I don't feel like camping out in O'Shag just to get a class. (I'd rather pitch a tent in D-6 with the Business majors protesting the Alcohol policy.)

The College of Arts & Letters agrees with this standpoint, but contends that it is the Business College that is the root of the problem. After several meetings with my advisor, he told me that there might be some spots left in a few of the Business classes, and that I should go see the Associate Dean, Vince Raymond. After my brief and very unpleasant encounter with the dean, I can see why the problem lies with the Business College. The meeting lasted no more than forty-five seconds.

When I walked in to his office, he told me to give him some background. I repeated to him what my advisor had told me, and in mid-sentence, he cut me off, saying, "End of conversation." He would not give me an explanation, and repeatedly stopped me from adding any comments. Furthermore, as I approached the door, he told me to "Go and get an education." It is this kind of boneheaded attitude that prevents hundreds of students from taking classes in the business field and expanding their practical education. Mr. Raymond is the most rude and inconsiderate person that I have met on this campus, totally unbecoming of a representative of this university.

I feel that the Administration should step in and bridge this communication gap between the colleges of Arts & Letters and Business.

Perhaps people like Raymond would not be such boneheads if he took some of his own advice and got a real education. I could recommend several Arts & Letters courses that would improve his communicative skills and teach him some common courtesies. But, knowing those stubborn people in the College of Arts & Letters, the courses are probably closed to Business majors.

Gutierrez assessment

Dear Editor:

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith has recently asked the Bishops of Peru to undertake an "assessment" of the work of Father Gustavo Gutierrez.

News of this investigation (or is it an inquisition?) of Father Gutierrez comes as a shock and a humiliation. A shock because anyone who knows Father Gutierrez and his work will find it hard to imagine how he could have inspired such serious suspicions, such grievous doubts, such profound questions as to distract the Vatican from its financial scandals and its Polish "problem."

A humiliation because the many Catholics who have looked up to Father Gutierrez as a symbol of the renovation of the Church's commitment to the unprivileged and the dispossessed will now feel crushed by the re-emergence of an old authoritarianism — the Holy Spirit is once again being allowed to speak only through the voice of the Roman Curia.

The news from Peru should make us set aside our current preoccupations so we can discuss and reflect on an issue of the greatest importance to a Catholic university, especially to our university which has evinced a special interest (at least academically) in the problems of Latin America.

What is at stake here is the nature and direction of Catholic activity among the peoples of the developing world. There is a great risk that the lessons of history may be forgotten and that the valuable examination of conscience which the Catholic Church has undertaken in the past two decades will go for naught.

There was a time when the cross accompanied the sword, when the preacher of the gospel was the trusted companion of the conquering colonizer. Slowly and painfully through a process that has taken centuries, we have learned how to start separating the two.

Yet there is much more to learn, and Father Gutierrez is among our best teachers. He has been showing us how Eurocentric our theology still remains and how necessary it is to remove the cultural and economic barriers that separate his people from the authentic gospel of Christ.

Now, however, we risk a regression to a rigid concept of orthodoxy, to self-righteous intolerance, or at best to bureaucratic as well as doctrinal narrow-mindedness.

I hope we all use this occasion to undertake a serious effort to understand the extent to which Father Gutierrez has helped bring the Catholic church back to the service of the poor and the humble, and how he has helped us who are the privileged members of the Church to participate in the authentic mission of evangelization.

Through his theological writings he has reminded us of the basic task with which Christ entrusted his Church, and through his work with the downtrodden he has enriched us all. I hope also that the various groups and individuals at Notre Dame will recognize the seriousness of this case and that they will vigorously express their concern, their sadness and their solidarity with Father Gutierrez.

Show some decorum

Dear Editor:

Student overreaction to the alcohol policy has simply provided the University with more ammunition. Signs advocating drug abuse, no matter how humorous, coupled with screams of "Let's get drunk," serve only to further the administration's position.

This Friday, national attention will be focused on the Notre Dame student body. Banners are sure to show up on network television, unruly students' pictures will be transmitted over the wire services.

If "we are N.D.," we owe it to ourselves to show some decorum. We need not act like fools to prove our point.

Big Ten i votes in shot clock

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Big Ten Conference on Wednesday voted to use a 45-second clock on a one-year experimental basis, beginning with league play in January 1985.

Acting on the recommendation of the conference's basketball coaches, the Big Ten athletic directors approved the measure at their regularly scheduled meeting. The conference now will seek approval from the NCAA's rules committee to begin using the clock next season.

Non-conference opponents that play in Big Ten arenas and do not normally use the shot clock will have the option of using it.

"Big Ten basketball offers a great entertainment value, and this should make it even better," said Jim Dutcher, head coach at Minnesota and a member of the NCAA rules committee. "This will add a new element to Big Ten basketball."

The Big Ten set an all-time NCAA conference record for attendance during the 1983-84 season, when an average of 12,779 fans witnessed the 90-game league slate. Forty-one of the 90 conference games last season were decided by seven points or less.

The Big Ten's decision comes on the heels of the NCAA's ruling earlier this month to delay for at least another season the use of a 45-second clock in all Division I basketball games.

fourth inning and three in the fifth. The five runs were not enough, as the Crusaders tied up the game at 5-5 with three runs in the sixth off Irish starter Tom Conlin. After neither team scored in the seventh, the stage was set. Conlin held the Crusaders scoreless in the first half of the first extra inning. With two outs and the bases loaded in the bottom of the eighth, Vuono launched a grand-slam home run that gave the Irish the welcome 9-5 victory. Conlin raised his record to 2-3 with the complete-game performance. Besides Vuono, Jim Dee also contributed to the Irish attack with a three-run homer in the fifth. Tom Shields had three hits and Steve Pasinault stroked two. In a wild second game, second-baseman Moran singled home Dan Harrington in the seventh to give the Irish the 8-7 win. In a see-saw battle, the Irish took an early 2-0 lead. Valparaiso came back against starter Mark Watzke with one run in the fourth, three in the fifth, and one in the sixth to take a 5-2 lead. The Irish erupted for five runs in their half of the sixth, making the score 7-5. After Irish reliever Steve Powell gave up two runs to the Crusaders in the top of the seventh, Clementz came on to halt the rally. He was the beneficiary of Moran's clutch single in the bottom of the inning, and lifted his record to 2-4. Moran led the Irish with two hits and two RBI's, while freshman Ken Soos doubled. Going into a doubleheader yesterday against the Bowling Green Falcons, the Irish simply could not get the sweep they needed to reach the desired .500 level. "It would have been nice to get over the .500 mark, but we'll just have to wait for the weekend," said Gallo of the doubleheader split. In the first contest, five errors by the Irish helped the Falcons get four runs off starter Dobosh. Scoring once in the first, once in the third, and twice in the seventh, Bowling Green took a 4-0 win. Although they stroked six hits, the Irish were unable to score once. Amazingly, in the second inning they lashed out four singles in a row, but two pickoffs killed the rally and left the Irish empty-handed. "How can we have four hits in one inning, not score, and expect to win?" Gallo asked. "It was very crucial at that time in the game. Joe Dobosh pitched an exceptional game and lost. Offensively we broke down. I was sorry to see him lose." Vuono led the team with two hits, while Dobosh's loss dropped his record to 2-5 on the season. The Irish looked like a different team in the second game, pounding out ten hits and seven runs off Falcon pitching. Notre Dame scored twice in the third on Vuono's two RBI single and Dee drove in another run with a single in the fourth. Soos' two RBI single highlighted a four-run fifth. Irish hurler Clementz pitched another strong game, allowing the Falcons only five hits. He gave up only a single run in the sixth, and the Irish took home a 7-1 victory. Clementz improved his record to 3-4, and Soos led the Irish offensively with three singles, two runs scored, and two RBI's. With the 17-18 overall record and the 2-4 mark in the MCC, the Irish face a critical weekend series with conference rival Butler. On Saturday, the Irish face the Bulldogs in a doubleheader at Jake Kline Field starting at 12:00. On Sunday, both teams travel to Indianapolis for another twinbill at Butler's field. "It's a crucial series, because it's a conference series," said Gallo.

Spring goals met

Coaches evaluate progress in Irish spring workouts

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

With practice nearing its completion for the school year and the Blue-Gold game fast approaching, the Notre Dame coaching staff is taking a look back on spring workouts to evaluate the team's progress.

Offensive coordinator Ron Hudson and defensive coordinator Andy Christoff are pleased with what they have seen and believe that their respective units have accomplished the goals they set forth at the beginning of the spring.

With ten starters returning on offense in the fall, Hudson has what seems to be an enviable position getting ready for spring drills before they started five weeks ago.

There were some concerns about the offensive unit dealing with depth that needed to be addressed. Hudson also wanted to experiment with some different alignment and insert additional plays into the offensive arsenal.

Even though there was some experimentation with new things, a major goal for Hudson's unit was to become more proficient in the fundamentals.

"Our offense is fundamentally sound, and that was one of the things that we looked at," says Hudson. "We are very pleased with the team's progress, especially the young linemen."

Hudson notes many things have been accomplished during the spring.

"We got Allen Pinkett to catch the ball better — we ran him on pass patterns even though he didn't rush the ball much; we found that we had two very competent backup tailbacks in Alonzo Jefferson and Hiawatha Francisco, before he (Francisco) got a chance to play defense."

"We were also really happy with what we saw at quarterback," Hudson continues. "Steve was more proficient at picking up secondary receivers, and Scott Grooms established himself as our backup."

Depth was an important issue during spring practice, especially on the offensive line. That uncertainty was settled somewhat with the emergence of some new faces to take the second-team positions on the depth charts.

"We found good, young backup players for our offensive line," notes Hudson. "We had the first team pretty much settled, but we were a little concerned about backups."

Jon Askin, Robbie Finnegan, Marty Roddy, Jerry Weinle and Sean Hefern are the people who figure to be on call in case of an injury. Ron Plantz and Tom Doerger continue to battle for the quick tackle position.

"We feel confident that if one of the players went down that those guys behind them could show that they are real competitors," Hudson says.

The depth charts may be more complete than at the outset of spring practice, but lack of game experience is always a concern to a coach who has to use young players.

"Lack of experience is something that teams contend with every spring," explains Hudson. "Even though we are young in some positions, we feel good about how we stand."

In addition to completing the depth charts, the offensive unit also has done a lot of experimenting with different formations and put in a few more plays, since the basic offensive structure will carry over from last season.

"We took a look at a lot of different things, such as naked passes and using false keys to divert the defense," Hudson says. "We also tried incorporating the flanker into option plays and putting him in motion to keep things moving."

Overall, Hudson was pleased with the progress that he saw during the spring. "From the standpoint of meeting specific goals, we feel we accomplished a great deal."

"We are pleased and excited to see that the sun is out finally," comments Hudson. "That is one objective that we did not accomplish this spring."

The picture for Christoff may not be as bright as it is for his offensive counterpart, but the Irish defensive coordinator is pleased with the improvements he has seen.

"Our major goals were to become more fundamentally sound, to try to improve our squad's team concept and mental toughness," says Christoff. "In those aspects, I think we improved a great deal, but we're still not exactly where we want to be."

"What's important is the improvement, and we've made strides in that direction. When we come back in the fall, the players should be where we want them to be."

At the beginning of the spring, the area where the most amount of improvement was needed was in the secondary, because of the heavy losses suffered due to graduation.

Some personnel changes have occurred in the search for the best players to fill the open positions in the secondary, and Christoff wants to find five or six players who he can rely on in the secondary.

The learning has been a little slow for Christoff's liking. "Mentally, they aren't where I wanted to be as far as letting their mistakes affect them, but I've liked their eagerness to learn and their physical toughness."

"At the present time, I think that we've made great improvement in the secondary," Christoff continues. "There are players that we can count on to play for us in game situations, and at the start of the spring we couldn't count on those individuals."

The players in contention for the positions are cornerbacks Pat Ballage, Mike Haywood, an offensive convert, and Troy Wilson. At safety it looks like James Bobb and Steve Lawrence, who has been hobbled with an injury incurred in Bookstore action, are battling for a position alongside Joe Johnson.

"We'll have depth in the secondary in the fall, but the thing we will be lacking is experience," Christoff states. "There's no way to combat that except by playing them."

The defensive unit was involved in a lot of hitting, probably more than that is typical for spring practice. But that was needed, according to Christoff.

"We did a lot of hitting, and as far as experiencing game situations that's the way to get more experience. If you're not given the opportunity, you don't get better at it."

Christoff did a lot of position switching in order to get his best eleven players on the field. Mike Larkin was moved to outside linebacker in order for him to be able to have Mike Kovalski on the first team also.

"We feel that almost all the changes in positions we had on defense were very productive. That was so we could get the best eleven players on the field. Now we're switching players around to get the next best eleven there."

The most important achievement according to Christoff is the attitude adjustment. "Our players know that one has to do his job for a defense to be successful, rather than looking at it as an individual."

With goals achieved, and the hope of a good Blue-Gold contest, the Notre Dame football team hopes to have a positive outlook for the 1984 season.

Angels 5, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Dick Schofield cracked a three-run homer to support Mike Witt's seven-hit pitching as the California Angels defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1.

Schofield's home run, his second of the season, came after Bob Boone's bases-loaded grounder gave the Angels a 2-1 lead in the seventh. Schofield then chased Milwaukee starter Jaime Cocanower, 0-3, by blasting the first pitch into the left-field stands.

Royals 3, Orioles 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Greg Pryor slammed a pitch from Baltimore relief ace Tippy Martinez into the left-field stands with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-2 victory over the struggling Baltimore Orioles.

Dan Quisenberry, 1-1, pitched the ninth inning in relief of Larry Gura and got the victory.

Tigers 9, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON, Texas — John Grubb, Howard Johnson and Lance Parrish hit home runs to power the red-hot Detroit Tigers to a 9-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Grubb's home run in the second inning gave Detroit a 1-0 lead and the Tigers made it 3-0 in the fourth when Dave Stewart, 0-5, walked Chet Lemon and Johnson homered high into the center-field.

The Rangers pulled within 3-2 in the fifth when Pete O'Brien singled and Marv Foley homered off Detroit's Milt Wilcox, 2-0. But the Tigers wrapped up their sixth consecutive victory and 15th in 16 games this season with five runs in the seventh.

Suffers letdown

Women's tennis team drops two

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

It was a disappointing Easter break for the Notre Dame women's tennis team as the Irish lost to Northwestern University on Tuesday, 9-0, and dropped an important match, 6-3, to Morehead State University last week.

Tuesday's loss to top ranked Northwestern was not surprising to Notre Dame head coach Sharon Petro. "Northwestern is the toughest team on our schedule," explained Petro. "I would have been happy with two victories."

The contest against the Wildcats was closer than the final 9-0 score indicated, as the Irish sent four matches to three sets with Northwestern.

Mary Colligan, at number three singles, and Joanne Biafore, at number six singles, both split sets with their Wildcat opponents, while the doubles teams of Colligan and Pam Fischette and Susie Panther and Laura Lee also gave Northwestern a run for its money.

"I'm surprised we didn't pull off some of those three setters," said Irish co-captain Greta Roemer. "But some people were down going into the match and it was a big factor."

"Pam Fischette and Mary Colligan played well at number one doubles, but I'm extremely disappointed with our number two doubles," said Petro. "They had the lead, then they stopped being competitive and found the match wasn't over yet."

The team's troubles began last Thursday when Morehead State snapped Notre Dame's eight match winning streak in a crucial contest.

"I'm extremely disappointed because the score should have been 5-4, and there were two matches we should have won," said Petro. "It was our most important match of the year and we blew it."

The team was down 4-2 going into the doubles competition and the match was decided after the number two doubles team of Tee and Panther fell to Morehead State 6-3, 5-7, 3-6. "We've got to remember that a match is not over until the last point is won," said Petro.

Roemer blamed Thursday's loss on a combination of factors. She felt the result of the Morehead State match effected the team's performance at Northwestern. "We knew they'd be good, but not that good," said Roemer. "We were looking forward to break and mentally we weren't there."

The loss to Morehead State eliminated the team's chances for an automatic bid to the NCAA Division II National Championship Tournament and gave Morehead State the Division II regional title. Now the Irish are competing with the University of Southern Illinois (Edwardsville) to win an at large bid to the Tournament. "If we get a bid, then things will work out in the long run," said Petro.

"Our only chance to go is if the committee chooses all three of us from the Midwest and to do that we're going to have to show that the dominance has shifted from California to the Midwest," explained Petro. "Our record speaks for itself, and we still have a good chance for an at-large bid."

This weekend the Irish travel to Toledo, Ohio to face the University of Toledo and the University of Ohio in their final roadtrip of the regular season.

To prepare for this weekend's matches, the Irish will intensify their practice and work on improving their concentration. "We'll be drilling hard and hopefully we'll get our mental game back," said Roemer.

Petro expects the Irish to win both matches this weekend as long as they play well. "I haven't given up on the season," she said. "I hope the players haven't given up either."

surge. By the time the visitors could cut the lead to one again, there were only two seconds left on the clock.

Once again, attackmen Bob Trocchi and Joe Franklin led the Notre Dame scoring attack. Scoring leader Trocchi had three goals and three assists, while Franklin added three goals and one assist. They received help from midfielders Tom Grote and Quinn, who combined for three goals and two assists.

The high final score was somewhat deceptive. Although the Irish gave up more than 10 goals for only the third time all season, they played two quarters — the second and fourth — with a very stingy defense led by goalie Rob Simpson who stopped 21 Denison shots. In fact, 18 of the 23 goals in the game were scored in the first and third quarters.

"The first and third quarters, because they come at the start and after intermission, tend not to be settled, so there's usually a little more offense," explained O'Leary. "After a while, the defense can make adjustments."

"They scored more off our middies than off our defense during the first and third quarters, but then we didn't have our defensive middies in. When we did, we had a lot more success."

The Notre Dame win changes the conference picture tremendously. Denison and Ohio Wesleyan had been tied for first with undefeated records, with the Irish one game behind. With the win, Notre Dame improved its conference mark to 6-1 (7-3 overall), putting the Irish a game behind Ohio Wesleyan which has to play Denison in the final game of the season. A Denison win could give Notre Dame a shot at the title.

Mets 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — George Foster's single scored Keith Hernandez from second base to give the New York Mets a 2-1 extra-innings victory over Montreal, snapping the Expos four-game winning streak.

Reliever George Harris retired the first two batters in the 11th before Hernandez doubled into the right centerfield gap. Foster followed by singling sharply through the left side.

Jesse Orosco, 2-0, pitched two scoreless innings to pickup the win, giving him nine scoreless innings in five appearances this season.

Cards 7, Cubs 5

ST. LOUIS — Willie McGee had three hits as the St. Louis Cardinals broke a seven-game losing streak, rallying from a 4-1 deficit for a 7-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs Wednesday.

The Cardinals took the lead 5-4 with four runs in the fourth inning.

Ken Oberkfell opened the inning with a single and McGee tripled him home. Pinch hitter Andy Van Slyke singled in McGee.

Steve Braun followed with a pinch-hit single, chasing a pitch from Dick Ruthven, 2-1. Lonnie Smith greeted Rich Bordi with a looping single over second base, scoring Van Slyke. The final run of the rally came when Ozzie Smith grounded to first, driving in Braun.

Jeff Lahti, 1-1, pitched the fourth and fifth innings to pick up the victory. Bruce Sutter worked the ninth for his fifth save.

Phillies 8, Pirates 7

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Schmidt's two-run double, and Glenn Wilson's tie-breaking single climaxed a five-run sixth inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Reliever Tug McGraw, 1-0, gained the victory while Al Holland earned his fourth save, despite giving up a ninth-inning run on singles by Lee Mazzilli and Lee Lacy and an RBI double by Bill Madlock. Pirates reliever Lee Tunnell, 0-1, was the loser.

Reds 4, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Tom Lawless belted his first career home run, and Dave Concepcion homered as Mario Soto and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Atlanta Braves 4-3.

Soto, 2-1, took a four-hitter into the eighth inning when he gave up three hits — including a two-run homer by Claudell Washington — without getting an out. It took three relievers to get the Reds out of the inning, with Brad Lesley finishing up for his first save in his first appearance of the season.

Washington's homer was his sixth, three coming off Soto, and cut the Reds' lead to one.

Padres 3, Giants 0

SAN DIEGO — Tony Gwynn belted a solo homer and Kevin McReynolds added a two-run shot, while Eric Show and Goose Gossage combined for a three-hitter as the San Diego Padres topped the San Francisco Giants 3-0 for a sweep of their three-game series.

Gwynn added a single to go with his homer off Bill Laskey, 0-2, and lifted his batting average to .464. Gwynn also extended his hitting streak to seven games, during which he has 15 hits in 26 at bats for a .577 average.

Show, 3-1, went seven innings and gave up just three hits.

Dodgers 4, Astros 2

LOS ANGELES — Fernando Valenzuela fired a three-hitter, taking a no-hitter into the seventh inning, and Terry Whitfield drove in three runs, two with a homer, as the Los Angeles Dodgers posted their fourth straight victory, beating Houston 4-2.

Valenzuela, 2-2, lost his no-hit bid when Enos Cabell lined a clean single to left with one out in the seventh. The only other hits were a one-out single in the eighth by Tim Tolman and a two-out single in the same inning by Kevin Bass to ruin the shutout, following a throwing error by Steve Sax.

Blue Jays 11, A's 0

TORONTO — Jesse Barfield drove in four runs to back the five-hit pitching of Luis Leal, and Damaso Garcia set a club record with four stolen bases to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 11-0 rout of the Oakland A's.

The Blue Jays, who had 17 hits, put the game away in the fourth when they sent 10 batters to the plate.

Red Sox 2, Mariners 1

BOSTON — Bruce Hurst pitched a five-hitter as the Boston Red Sox edged Jim Beattie and the Seattle Mariners 2-1 on run-scoring hits by Rich Gedman and Tony Armas.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 lead in the fourth. Armas grounded a single to center, took third on a single by Mike Easler and scored as Gedman hit a pop-fly double down the left field line.

Lacrosse squad gains 'most important win'

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Notre Dame's 12-11 lacrosse victory on Cartier Field yesterday over perennial Midwest power Denison College may not be comparable to the Irish football team's surprise defeat of Army in 1913, but, just as the Army win was so important to the relatively unknown football program, the lacrosse victory marks the most important win in the history of the young program.

"This was the biggest win in the history of the program," said Irish coach Rich O'Leary after watching his team use a third-quarter offensive explosion to beat its nationally-ranked Division III opponent. "We've come close to them in a couple of games, so it was real nice to finally beat them. They had seemed to be on a real roll coming in, but our guys played a great second half."

Ironically, it was a strong third quarter, in which Notre Dame outscored the visitors, 6-4, that turned the game toward the Irish. In the past, poor play in the third quarter frequently has taken them out of games. However, in yesterday's game, Notre Dame rebounded from a two-goal deficit to score six goals in barely over six minutes. The explosion allowed the Irish to grab a lead that they never relinquished.

Notre Dame's ability to win faceoffs proved to be quite valuable throughout the game. Midfielders Mike Quinn and Bob Carillo split the faceoff duties, but each had great success as the Irish controlled 20 of the game's 25 faceoffs. Notre Dame's ability to stay on the offensive through most of the third and fourth quarters kept Denison from getting many opportunities to erase its deficit.

An adjustment in shooting was another key. Throughout the first half and the first few minutes of the second, the Denison goalie was having great success blocking low shots. When O'Leary told his players to aim their shots higher, the lead quickly changed hands.

"We noticed that their goalie was going low even before we shot the ball," O'Leary explained. "We just told the guys to concentrate on getting their shots up."

The Irish offense having put the team ahead, it was left to the defense to keep Denison at bay. And, with the exception of a brief breakdown that allowed the visitors to cut the lead to 11-10 with 10 minutes left in the game, the tough zone defense did what it was supposed to do — keep Denison away from the net and make it throw the ball away.

Meanwhile, Notre Dame was taking its time when it had control of the ball and Denison found that it was running out of time to avoid the upset. When Quinn bounced a shot into the Denison net with 4:21 left in the game, Denison came slightly unglued and made some bad passes, keeping itself from a last-minute

Free shots decide Bookstore games

Bookstore Basketball XIII finally has its Sweet Sixteen, as Round Five saw the demise of half of the 32 teams in action yesterday.

Many of the games were close battles, and in several contests it was free-throw shooting that made the difference.

The Modern Lovers grabbed a 23-21 victory over Team 136, as Dennis Ryan scored his only point of the game on the winning free throw. The shot looked at first as though it would not fall, as the ball bounced off the rim and sailed about six feet straight up in the air before dropping back through the hoop for the winning point.

Mike Cannon took the honors as the best Lover yesterday, hitting six of his 13 shots for his team, which shot 23-for-66 overall. Team 136 hit 21-of-45 in its losing effort.

Motown was another overtime winner in yesterday's games, downing Bleeding Ax Wounds II, 27-25. Motown hit only 23-of-62 from the field to Bleeding Ax Wound II's 25-of-67, but the winners hit four of their 10 free throws, while the losing team missed all eight of its attempts from the line. Vince Antonacci paced Motown with 11 points.

Return of Pigbag was able to win in the regulation minimum 21 points, but it was foul shooting that gave the team the 21-18 victory over Padres. The losers scored all 18 of their points from the field, while Return of Pigbag made only 17 field goals. Padres gave the eventual winners eight trips to the charity stripe, and Return of Pigbag converted the opportunities into four points.

The Padres made a run for the game late in the contest by scoring four unanswered points to come from six points behind at 20-14 to within two at 20-18, before David Gaus hit a free throw for the victory.

Rousseau's Noble Savages was another team that escaped defeat by hitting the clutch free throws. WBBS on the Air Again outshot the Savages, 19-18, and trailed by only one at 18-17, but two late foul shots by Jim Sower negated two field goals by Dan Dressel, and WBBS went off the air for the remainder of Bookstore XIII.

Brian Behmer hit a short jumper from the key to give Rousseau's Noble Savages the 21-19 victory. Behmer was high scorer for the game on 10-for-17 shooting from the field and 1-for-2 from the line.

Some of the teams playing yesterday did not have to rely on free throws, as their opponents failed to provide the challenge of close games.

Brick Throwers was one team that was able to coast over an outclassed opponent, as Short on Height came up short on defense as well. Greg Russell shot a perfect 7-for-7, and Bob Micheal hit 8-of-9 to lead Brick Throwers to the easy 21-8 win. As a team, the Brick Throwers shot 21-for-27, the best team percentage thus far in Bookstore XIII.

Macri's Deli rolled to a 21-5 victory over Where's the Queef? on 21-for-36 shooting, and The Windy City Five destroyed Spoofohounds IV, 21-7, also on 21-for-36 shooting.

In other fifth-round action, Jimmy G and the Spots downed Corby Tooters, 21-15, while Shysters took Big Swahilis by the same score. Armed and Dangerous II beat Sometimes You Just Got to Say . . . 21-16, and Scratch Twice and the Three Itches edged Over the Limit, 21-18.

Anyplace, Anytime found that the place was Stepan 2 and the time was 5:30 p.m. yesterday when the team eliminated John 3:16 by a nine-point margin. Now or Never made it "now" at 6:15 p.m. on Stepan 2 and dismissed Virtual Unknowns, 21-17.

In the Battle of Sorin, Tequila White Lightning IV overcame Sorin rector Edward "Monk" Malloy and The Shootist, 21-12. The Shootist never trailed by more than two in the first half, but Tequila White Lightning IV went on a scoring spree and took a 20-11 lead in the second half before Malloy scored his team's last point on one of his familiar 22-foot jump shots.

The other winners yesterday were Fun Bunch Five (21-11 over Corby's Three Reverends of Jesse Jackson and Two Guys to Attract the White Vote) and Ed Smierciak and Four Other Guys That Are Better Than John Paxson (21-11 over Showtime).

Today, the Sweet Sixteen will go at it at 5:15 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. on the Bookstore and Stepan courts. The sixth round promises to be even more exciting than previous rounds, as the competition begins to peak, and the finals are in sight at last.

Stepan I is the site of the matchups of Shysters against Now or Never at 5:15 and Fun Bunch Five against Rousseau's Noble Savages at 6:15.

The Modern Lovers meet Return of Pigbag in the first game on Stepan 3, followed by Jimmy G and the Spots against Armed and Dangerous II.

Irish diamondmen improve record

A busy schedule of games over Easter break changed nothing for the Notre Dame baseball team. The Irish continue to play inconsistently and are still struggling to reach the .500 mark.

After a string of eight games in which the team went 5-3, the Irish now stand 17-18. The team's record in the Midwestern City Conference is 2-4.

The Irish started the string of games with a doubleheader last Wednesday at Purdue. An errorless first game by Notre Dame led to a 4-1 victory.

Captain Carl Vuono led the Irish with two hits, including a solo homer in the fourth inning, and drove in two runs. Buster Lopes pitched a fine game, allowing only four hits. He improved his record to 3-2.

In the second contest, Notre Dame jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first, but the Boilermakers quickly came back against Irish starter Mark Clementz. After six innings, Purdue led 3-2.

Notre Dame took the lead back in the seventh inning, scoring two runs on an error and a sacrifice fly by Mike Metzler. Irish hopes were crushed, however, when Purdue came back with two doubles and a single off reliever Joe Dobosh. Two runs came in, giving the Boilermakers a 5-4 win.

The Irish returned with a 13-16 record to the friendly confines of Jake Kline Field for a crucial series against conference foe Detroit.

In the opener of a doubleheader on Saturday, the Irish suffered a 7-1 loss. Detroit scored three times in the first and once in the second off Irish starter Lopes. Reliever Dobosh fared no better, allowing three more runs to score in the fourth.

A sterling pitching performance by Clementz in the second contest led Notre Dame to a 1-0 victory.

"Mark pitched a great game in the nightcap," commented Irish Head Coach Larry Gallo on the senior southpaw's performance.

Clementz held the Titans to only three hits over eight innings, but the Irish could not hit Detroit hurler Bob Martin until Mike Dorning singled home the game's only run in the bottom of the eighth.

Still struggling to climb over the .500 mark, the Irish faced Valparaiso in a doubleheader on Tuesday. In a pair of close games, Notre Dame swept the Crusaders by scores of 9-5 and 8-7.

The Irish pounded Valparaiso pitching for 11 hits in the first game, managing to score two runs in the
