President Reagan ends six-day trip to Communist China on good note

Associated Press

SHANGHAI, China — President Reagan received the warmest welcome of his six-day visit to China and said at a farewell banquet that the United States and China are planning "to write a new chapter of peace and progress."

Winding up his final day in China at a banquet given by Shanghai Mayor Wang Daohan, Reagan said, "My trip to China has been as important and enlightening as any I've taken as president."

Reagan also finally got an opportunity to speak directly to a Chinese television audience with out having his remarks censored, but there was still a hitch — his speech was not translated into Chinese.

Observing that 12 years ago Richard M. Nixon visited the People's Republic of China, becoming the first American president to do so, Reagan said at the Shanghai banquet:

"Today, America and China share the commitment to go forward together to write a new chapter of peace and progress for our people."

"My visit to China leaves me confident that U.S.-China relations are good and getting better," he said.

The president returns to the United States today, crossing the international dateline and landing in Fairbanks, Alaska, after first visiting a child care center and modest private residence at a commune on May Day, the international workers' holiday.

As China prepared to celebrate the two-day holiday, workers placed towering portraits of four communist heroes of the nation — Karl Marx, Frederick Engels, Josef Stalin and V.I. Lenin — in Tiananmen Square in Peking, along the motorcade route Reagan took from the Great Hall of the People and a farewell meeting with President Li Xiannian and Premier Zhao Ziyang.

In his farewell meeting with Li, Reagan was said by White House spokesman Larry Speakes to have told the Chinese president:

"We have seen your great monuments such as the Great Wall. But we're not working in mortar and stone here. My hope is that we can accomplish something between ourselves that will also be remembered 1,000 years from now."

From the farewell ceremony in Peking, Reagan flew south to this teeming city of 12 million.

Addressing more than 1,000 students in a handpicked audience at Fudan University, where a huge statue of the late Mao Tse-tung adorns a campus plaza, Reagan quoted from the opening of the Declaration of Independence, and also from the late Chinese leader Cho En-Lai.

Reagan's comments on democracy and on the Soviet Union were deleted earlier in the trip from Chinese television coverage of the president. Regional television here broadcast in full his speech at the university, but the coverage was in English and no translation was provided.

Students study in the Chautauqua ballroom, part of LaFortune targeted for renovation under the proposals by the LaFortune Renovation Committee. Plans for the second floor include an undergraduate club and a pizzeria.

LaFortune renovations planned

By MARK POTTER

Copy Editor

The new Student Center students have been asking for is not probable in the immediate future but a remodeled LaFortune is, according to Executive Assistant to the President Father David Tyson.

The first stages of renovation and addition to LaFortune are underway, said Tyson. The LaFortune Renovation Committee, composed of five students and Director of Student Activities James McDonnell, submitted ideas for the LaFortune renovation to Tyson yesterday morning.

"Basically now we have to meet with the architects and have them draw up the preliminary drawings which we will then show to the Officers of the University for approval," said Tyson. Right now the University's Officers are waiting for the plans to be drawn up. Tyson said the process "normally takes three to four weeks."

"I don't know what the response of the Officers will be," said Tyson. He added, "Father Hesburgh has been waiting for a program from the students for us to work with, and he is supportive of a program to renovate LaFortune."

Tyson said part of the delay towards remodeling LaFortune has been that the administration did not have a plan from the students that they could work with. McDonnell submitted a renovation plan last year but it was not adequate, according to Tyson. It was not "interpretable by the people at Physical Plant," said Tyson. They were not able to interpret McDonnell's ideas into a concrete set of plans for the building.

McDonnell said he has been "working with student government for two months coming up with ideas, we (the committee) have been meeting weekly since February." He submitted one set of ideas a couple of weeks ago and gave a revised copy yesterday to Tyson.

"The University is interested and wants to make improvements," said McDonnell. He said he believes this to be especially true since "the alcohol report was approved by the Officers and Trustees and it calls for action and for immediate plans to be developed."

McDonnell said, "Maybe we have all those alcoholic parties in the halls because we don't have a college town, a big city, or a good student center, like other universities have."

Although McDonnell is pleased that something is finally going to be done to LaFortune he added, "I don't think what we are coming up with is the ideal solution. I think there is a question of commitment on the part of the University. Perhaps there should be a presidentially appointed committee to look at this problem, just like there was one on alcohol," McDonnell said. "Maybe we should bring in an outside consultant to look for the ideal solution, as is standard in this sort of situation."

McDonnell said, "I know that especially with the new alcohol policy we need something outside our residence halls." Notre Dame needs a better student center for several reasons, said McDonnell, "Because we don't have a college town or the big city amenities that other universities have we need a good student center." He says he believes, "something will be done but I'm not in a position to know what."

McDonnell said, "What we need is too big for the present structure." Plans for adding on to LaFortune above the game room on the east side of the building have been dis-

Hart contends he is only Democrat to beat Reagan

Associated Press

ANDERSON, Ind. — Democratic presidential contender Gary Hart portrayed himself yesterday in this auto industry town as the only candidate in his party who could beat Ronald Reagan.

The Colorado senator was greeted by a crowd of more than 300 supporters who waited at the Anderson Municipal Airport in winds gusting up to 40 mph. Eighty-pound bags of water-softener salt were used to anchor the amplifiers to broadcast Hart's message to the group.

Hart proclaimed that the 1984 campaign will be a "watershed election."

"This country cannot afford four more years of Reaganomics for the rich," he said as the crowd cheered.

He warned that the country cannot afford a "costly and unnecessary and dangerous nuclear arms race."

Hart also put in plugs for Indiana's farm economy, saying that farm exports must be encouraged to improve the lot of agriculture.

He called for an industrial policy that would modernize the auto industry rather than protectionist legislation that would bail out a few hurting companies.

The candidate drew more cheers when he called for restoring money cut from the nation's education budget, saying it should be used to finance everything from free lunches for schoolchildren to guaranteed student loans for college students.

"I say to Mr. Reagan that if you think education is too expensive, wait until you find out how much ignorance costs," he said.

Hart proposed to find the additional money for education by canceling the MX missile and the B1 bomber.

Hart made a veiled reference to former Vice President Walter Mondale, who was in South Bend Monday, saying "I hope this party will nominate a candidate who has not taken political action committee special interest money."

Hart shared a platform with local Democratic officials, including Rep. Craig Campbell, D-Anderson, who described Hart as "our party's best chance to beat Ronald Reagan." Campbell remarked about the presence of local United Auto Workers officials and said "don't believe for a minute that just because the UAW made an endorse-

A Notre Dame junior David F. McGonigle has been awarded an Edwin, Frederick and Walter Beinecke Memorial Scholarship from the S & H Foundation, to help defray expenses of his senior year and two years of graduate study. Valued at up to $30,000, the award is one of five given to outstanding scholars, with preference given to students in arts or sciences with an announced goal of college teaching. McGonigle, of Beaver, Pennsylvania, is majoring in philosophy and plans to pursue either philosophy or literature in graduate school. — The Observer

The new assistant vice president for business affairs at Notre Dame will be James J. Lyphout, director of general services at Northwestern University the last seven years. He succeeds the late Brother Kieran Ryan. At Northwestern he supervised a staff of 138 full-time and 30 part-time employees in directing several operations. His appointment is effective July 1. — The Observer

The Observer and Scholastic were the recipients of several awards at this year's Indiana Collegiate Press Association Convention held April 13-14 in New Albany, Indiana. The Observer was named the third best daily college newspaper in Indiana, and Scholastic, the second best literary magazine. Scholastic staff members received seven first place awards, including best cover, Dan Price; best non-photo art, Elizabeth Carlson; best makeup of issue, Tom Sapp; best photo, Mike Delaney; best column, Jim Ganthier; and best investigative article, Brian Couch. Observer staff members won two first place awards: best sports story, Jane Healey; and best news analysis, Dave Dziedzic. In addition, The Observer received three second place and seven third place awards. Scholastic won nine second place and three third place awards. The United States and the Soviet Union have held a third round of discussions aimed at making technical improvements in the hot line between the two countries, the State Department said yesterday. State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg had no comment on the meeting except to say that the American delegation presented its views on ways to improve direct communications between the two countries. The Washington Post said Monday the United States is proposing that Soviet diplomats open consulate in New York in return for the opening of an American consular office in Kiev. — AP

Van Smith, chairman and president of Muncie, Ind.'s Ontario Corp., became chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce yesterday in inauguration ceremonies here. Smith, who has been the chamber's vice chairman for the last two years, is the first Hoosier to hold the top post in the U.S. Chamber, which represents nearly a quarter million businesses nationwide. In an interview with The Indianapolis News last year, Smith, 55, said his election to leadership roles with the U.S. Chamber reflected an effort to gain greater visibility for small businesses. — AP

Chinese frontier guards "wiped out" intruding Vietnamese troops along the border yesterday, the state-run television reported. The broadcast did not say how many Vietnamese entered the Chinese province of Yunnan or give casualty figures for either side. China and Vietnam have accused one another of shelling each other's territory and of killing civilians in recent weeks. China claims the Vietnamese had built fortifications on Chinese soil. China was allied with Vietnam during its war against the United States but has clashed frequently with it since. Sociologist Gordon Zahn: Pacifist and Roman Catholic

Paul McGinn

Inside Tuesday

Though many U.S. Catholics have yet to recognize pacifism as a viable option in today's world, the U.S. bishops' pastoral letter on peace and war gradually is making more persons aware of the Christian commitment to pacifism, says Catholic pacifist Gordon Zahn.

The 66-year-old Zahn, a professional sociologist and historian who served four years in a U.S. Civilian Public Service camp as a conscientious objector to World War II, is the author of In Solitary Witness, a biography about Franz Jagerstatter.

Jagerstatter, a Catholic Austrian peasant, against the advice of family, friends and his local bishop, refused to serve in Hitler's army on just war grounds and was beheaded Aug. 9, 1943.

What follows are excerpts from an interview Zahn gave while at Notre Dame last month:

Have U.S. bishops, in issuing their pastoral letter on peace and war, taken the prophetic edge away from the laity and assumed the role of prophet in the Church?

It (the pastoral letter) is really rather a cautious step ahead, a step toward viewpoints which do have more radical connotations. For example, the elevation of pacifism as a legitimate option for Catholics is a pretty big step even though in the final version they (the U.S. bishops) do go back a bit and seem to put it entirely on an individual basis. Even so, that's important.

With the discussion of non-violence, the same thing happens. But they recognize it to an extent that it has never been recognized before — as a group position. And in this case, they go beyond the question of legitimacy and treat it as a viable possibility, as possibly efficacious. They strongly recommend further study in it. And I think that's important.

In the pastoral you've got that instruction that we must regard as normal the path of persecution and the possibility of martyrdom. That's a very important reversal. And to that extent, you have at least the beginnings of prophecy.

The biggest contribution of the pastoral is that which was previously dismissed as the type of thing (pacifism) you get from heretical sects is now something worthy of examination by the Catholic community. It spoke of it favorably, in fact. That's an important difference. And it's a starting place. They haven't spoken a final word and they give no impression of having spoke a final word.

You say this is a starting place. What is the next step?

There's going to be continuing stress on defending conscientious objection (by the bishops). I would imagine one of the things that I would certainly be pushing for is a more explicit condemnation of certain forms of military service.

It could be in keeping with the spirit of the document to say that a Catholic can't serve on the Trident or in a missile silo, or something like this. Or even that a Catholic can't train to do it.

Until now, a person has had to establish his right to classification as a C.O. I would like to see the emphasis of the bishops and the Church be on basically you assume that a Christian is not supposed to take part in war and would have to justify accepting military service. It would be a switch of emphasis. It would bring us back pretty much to what the early Christians were doing.

How do you make the average Catholic aware of pacifism as a viable option?

There are different forms of education programs (which can be) undertaken at the parish level. Obviously that's very important — that's where you can reach these middle-class Catholics who have never heard of the whole idea of pacifism.

As far as the people at parish levels, there is a task of undoing what has already been learned (about pacifism). The best you can expect out of a parish education program is at least an awareness of the new trend and the implication.

What do you see as the major problems with the peace movement itself?

In terms of the Catholic peace movement, (there) is the problem of liberation. My full sympathy is with liberation movements, but I would reject aligning myself with those groups which incorporate violence as a way of seeking resolutions to problems. There are those (such as Jesuit Father Daniel Berrigan and his brother, a former Josephite priest, Philip Berrigan) who feel it (liberation) has to be confrontational.

The good and bad thing is that confrontation gets notice. The good thing about the notice is that people contest their position in courts and certainly get press attention.

The negative effect that goes along with it is that confrontation sometimes distorts the message. It's a communication problem, I think.

I think the first two Berrigan actions (the first, on Oct. 27, 1967, when Philip Berrigan and three others "annointed" draft records in a Baltimore Selective Service office with duck blood bought at a nearby delicatessen; the second, on May 17, 1968, when Daniel and Philip Berrigan and seven others burned, using homemade napalm, hundreds of draft cards outside a Selective Service office in Catonsville, Md.) were magnificent.

But as he (Daniel Berrigan) seems to escalate both in numbers of participants and frequency of action, I think the point got lost and if not lost completely, was at least clouded by the resentment of many people.

I don't intend to dismiss their recent actions. For myself, I have more individual (ways of protest).

The important thing that we have to recognize is that there is no dichotomy between prayer and protest.

Panama Archbishop ordains priests at ND

By KERRY HAVERKAMP
Staff Reporter

Four priests were ordained into the Holy Cross Order by the Archbishop of Panama last Saturday at Sacred Heart Church. The new priests are Michael E. Connor, Joseph V. Corpora, James E. McDonald, and Arthur Wheeler.

Following their ordination, the newly-ordained clergymen have a variety of plans. Connors is intending to do parochial/pastoral work. Corpora wishes to teach foreign languages at Notre Dame or one of its extensions, and is also contemplating missionary work in South America.

McDonald will be on campus in a residence hall next fall, and is preparing to do doctoral work on a Ph.D. which he may complete in London. Wheeler, who has a Ph.D. in history, wishes to continue working at the California parish where he has been a deacon. He is also considering teaching at Notre Dame or in London where he has taught before.

Wheeler said he decided to join the priesthood because he felt a call. "I wanted to be a priest all my life and felt that it wasn't a choice but an answer to God's call." He described it as a "nagging of the Holy Spirit."

According to Father Andre Leveille, head of vocations at Moreau Seminary, there are two main reasons young men choose the Holy Cross Order. One is that the order is committed to a community-centered life. The second is the wide variety of ministries to choose from, such as missions, parish work, and teaching. Wheeler said he had been leaning toward the Jesuit Order until he came to Notre Dame for his doctorate. His experiences with the Holy Cross priests turned him toward that order.

To become a Holy Cross priest a man spends a year as a candidate, a year as a novitiate, three graduate years in theology, and a year as a deacon. As a deacon, the priest-to-be serves an internship with a master priest and can perform all services, such as marriages and baptisms, with the exception of Mass and confessions. Father Leveille called it a type of "on the job training."

Father Leveille commented that on the whole, the number of men in the U.S. choosing the priesthood has fallen, but the Holy Cross Order has increased its intake. The order has 120 seminarians now and more seniors are entering this year than ever before.

CSC sponsors lunch programs open to all

By FRANK LIPO
Senior Staff Reporter

Today from 11:30-1:30, Alicia Garcia, a Chilean immigrant, invites you to a Spanish lunch she has prepared at the Center for Social Concerns.

This lunch is the latest in a series of once-a-month ethnic lunches sponsored by the Center for Social Concerns to benefit a community service program or a family.

Mary Ann Roemer of the CSC is the coordinator of the program. She said the service has been run on an experimental basis this year, and it has been so successful that next year it will occur about twice a month.

The CSC allows a community service organization or a family to use its facilities. Usually with the help of about four students, the group prepares the meal. The meal is advertised and served to the public. Any profits are used for the charitable purposes of the organization or family.

Roemer said, "We wouldn't allow an organization to come in just to make money. Our criteria is that any money made goes to an area of real need."

Such organizations as the St. Augustine Soup Kitchen and La Casa Mexican-American Day Care Center have served lunches. There have been other Spanish lunches and also Cambodian lunches prepared by Asian refugees. Roemer said that from 50-100 people have attended each of the lunches, which have ranged in price from $2.50 to $3. She added, "We try to connect our work with students here on campus as well as the outside community."

Roemer said, "Through coming to these type of activities, we would like to have the students become aware of the other opportunities we offer at the Center." Some of the other activities the CSC sponsors are the Urban Plunge, the Senior Reflection Group, the semester in Mexico and various peace and justice activities.

She said, "We realize that many students are active in such activities and we encourage others to participate. We feel that such activities have been and should be part of the education here at Notre Dame."

Roemer stressed the hospitality and fellowship of the Lunch Program. She said, "We see a lot of suffering and sadness but fun times are a part of any service activity. It's not just the grim aspects that should gain publicity. Celebration is also a part of our work."

Today's lunch will consist of salad, bread, vegetable soup, dessert, and coffee or tea, for $2.50. There will be live Spanish music and the meal will be outdoors, weather permitting. Proceeds from the lunch will go to the Garcia Family, who recently arrived in America from Chile. Anyone interested in helping with this or other programs may contact Roemer at the CSC.

Reagan signs nuclear agreement with China

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The U.S.-Chinese nuclear cooperation agreement signed yesterday gives American manufacturers like Westinghouse and General Electric an entree into an already spirited bidding war with the British, French, Japanese and West Germans.

While there's no guarantee the pact will bring new business to the American nuclear plant makers, industry experts are confident they'll get their share of work on the 10 to 12 units the Chinese will build in the next decade.

"The other countries have certainly had a head start, but we've got a good product," said Bob Szalay, senior vice president of Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry trade group.

Szalay, who accompanied about 25 American scientists and manufacturers' representatives to Peking and three other cities in October, said he's sure the other countries have been busy "trying to negotiate for the other plants."

"But I'm sure the American manufacturers will be ready to get off the starting line and get in there with the information and proposals necessary to make them competitive," he said.

General Electric, for example, has been meeting with Chinese nuclear representatives since 1979, awaiting government approval to take the process further.

Despite lagging sales in the United States, both GE and Westinghouse have been doing extensive nuclear business overseas. Both are building or have built plants or parts of plants in Japan, Spain, Taiwan and Italy.

Center to open soon

By BUD LUEPKE

Last year, ND/SMC Right to Life decided to establish what John May, the club's vice president, called "an alternative to abortion for women seeking help with their pregnancy" in South Bend. Through hard work and donations from many, the idea has materialized at 417 N. St. Louis Street, next door to South Bend's abortion clinic.

Official opening of the Woman's Care Center is being delayed while students finish work on the building. In the week since the center unofficially opened, 14 clients have come to it for help. "These clients have come mainly from our listing in the phone book and our side walk counselors," May said. He said a large advertising campaign will begin after the center's official opening in about two weeks.

May said 15 counseling volunteers have just completed a training period to offer these services. Rogers is the only paid counselor at the center.

The center offers personal counseling, a 24-hour phone line, and help in obtaining financial aid, medical care, and employment. The building is too small to offer housing for women, but May said the center will help them find housing or temporary residence with consenting families.

Debra Rogers, director of the center, said the center begins to counsel the client after a pregnancy test. "We have seen a variety of cases where a person has had to get out of a home situation. We try to contact the boyfriend and we offer counseling. It is all very confidential," she said.

Counselor emphasizes social alternatives

By CHRISTOPHER RYAN
News Staff

"If two years from now the social life at Notre Dame is a more positive, less alcohol-dominated world, the committee will have accomplished its job," said Dr. Patrick Utz, Notre Dame's director of alcohol counseling, regarding the Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol.

Utz strongly supported the committee's decision to conform to state drinking laws and its efforts to decrease alcohol's central role in Notre Dame social life, but he pointed out that a major issue to be addressed now is the lack of social alternatives.

He said "like the majority of the people in the Notre Dame community, I feel that these issues had to be dealt with, and that the committee has made excellent recommendations for change." Utz added, "it seems the challenge is now for all members of the Notre Dame community to look at the overall social life on this campus and to make a concerted effort to improve it."

Alcohol abuse at Notre Dame isn't any more serious than at other colleges or universities, Utz believes.

But he sees a problem in Notre Dame's "centrality of alcohol use in social activities" and the lack of alternatives to replace it. He hopes one positive result of the new policy, if any come about, will be to put "pressure" on all those concerned to make an effort to expand, improve, and develop alternatives to alcohol.

Regarding the efforts needed to develop social alternatives, Utz said that "Our role as faculty, students, and staff of the University is to work towards this goal" and that it is up to members of the community to find the answers needed to reach it.

Student Senate criticizes alcohol directives set up by Dean Roemer

By MIKE MILLEN
Staff Reporter

The student senate blasted Dean Roemer's Alcohol Directives at last night's meeting. According to Student Body Vice President Cathy David, the trustees "will be discussing the directives and voting on them" at their meeting on Thursday. David, along with Student Body President Rob Bertino and several student senate members, will be present at the meeting to express their views on the issue.

David voiced displeasure at the "beer and wine only" directive, noting "it is unfair to impose a strict limitation." Joan Cahill, President of Lyons Hall, found fault with the "number of people in a room" policy, stating "you can have a lot of people in a room and it's really low key, while half as many people might be a real party." Student Body Treasurer Al Novas felt that a clear set of rules are necessary. "It would be nice to formulate a uniform policy. I'm sure that some dorms will be more lenient than others," he said.

Other senate members disagreed. Grace Hall President Todd McMullen believes interpretation of the policy should rest with the hall staff, commenting "the rector should decide whether it is a party or a gathering." Doug Wurth, executive coordinator, warned that the policy should take RA responsibility into account. "We must be careful about how much pressure will be put on RAs," he said.

The "no bars in rooms" point, thought to be rather non-negotiable by David, was critically discussed by Novas. He believes bars do not promote increased alcohol consumption, noting "I don't know a lot of people who have a well-stocked bar — they can't afford it."

Duane Lawrence, president of St. Edward's Hall, was unhappy with the "50 percent alcohol, 50 percent food" budget which the directives advocate. "We have a 30 per cent food requirement here," he said, adding "it's always enough."

The senate at large disagreed with the last two proposed rules. No one was in favor of the directive which demands that transported alcohol be "in original, unopened packing with the original receipt."

The rule requiring students from other colleges to give IDs when requested also met with general disapproval. Senate members cited the impracticality of a student from the University of Illinois giving his ID to a Notre Dame Security Guard and having it mailed back to school weeks later.

In other matters, Student Body President Rob Bertino said letters requesting support for the student government position on the directives and alcohol policy will be sent this week. "We are going to have these letters signed by students to show support, and we will show them (to the administration) at the CLC meeting."

Government reports economy lag

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's main gauge of future economic activity turned down sharply last month after 18 consecutive increases, signaling slower growth but no recession, economists said yesterday.

The Commerce Department reported that its Index of Leading Indicators dropped 1.1 percent in March, ending the longest string of advances for the index since the end of World War II.

The Reagan administration sought to minimize the significance of the decline, blaming much of it on bad weather.

While no one believed that the steep drop signaled a recession, all analysts said it was further proof that the nation will see much slower economic growth for the rest of the year.

The decline was the first since a small 0.1 percent drop in August 1982. Since that time, the index made solid advances as the country pulled out of the 1981-82 recession.

The March decline was not unexpected because of a string of reports indicating much weaker business activity during the month. Housing construction posted the steepest decline on record, unemployment failed to show improvement for the first time in six months and retail sales were down sharply.

In addition, the government reported Monday that sales of new single-family homes were down 4.9 percent in March.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the March setback for leading indicators "exaggerates the extent of the slowdown in economic growth."

He said the decline was aggravated by unusually bad weather during the month and that a better measure of the economy was obtained by looking at the 0.5 percent average increase in the past six months. He said this reflected the more moderate growth which is expected in coming months.

"An occasional dip in the leading index is normal at this stage of the economic expansion," he said.

Private economists agreed.

"I don't think one negative leading indicator in the past 19 months indicates we are plunging back into a recession," said Robert Wescott of Wharton Econometrics.

Wescott forecast economic growth at a rate of 3.7 percent from April through June, compared to an 8.3 percent pace in the first three months of the year.

Gordon Richards, of the National Association of Manufacturers, said the index "points to the emergence of a major slowdown during the latter part of 1984" of 3 percent growth in the third quarter.

Jack Carlson, of the National Association of Realtors, said the decline in the indicators should "allow some softening of interest rates in the months ahead" as fears in markets of an overheated economy begin to subside.

David Tierney, who opened his home for an overnight stay in 1980 to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., when he campaigned in Anderson, presented Hart with a blue and gold UAW cap. Hart slipped it on and just as quickly slipped it off.

Chris Sheets, a Middletown housewife, brought her two children to the airport where she first saw Bobby Kennedy in 1968. Mrs. Sheets said she supports Hart "because he looks to the future. He's not in the past like I feel some of the other candidates are. I feel like he's for the people and not the corporations. I'm sick of the president being for corporations. The little guy is the one that counts as far as I'm concerned."

Supreme Court gives more power to appeals courts in cases of libel

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in a decision that could save news organizations millions of dollars annually, ruled yesterday that appeals courts have broad power to second-guess trial courts in libel cases.

The 6-3 ruling, greeted with a sigh of relief by news media representatives, killed a $210,905 award to a stereo loudspeaker manufacturer that had sued Consumer Reports magazine.

"The requirement of independent appellate review ... reflects a deeply held conviction that judges — and particularly members of this court — must exercise such review in order to preserve the precious liberties established and ordained by the Constitution," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court.

The Libel Defense Resource Center, a New York City research group supported by news organizations, said in a recently released study that the average award in 80 libel and privacy cases from 1980 to 1983 was $2.2 million. But the study showed that on appeal, about 80 percent of the awards were thrown out or sharply reduced.

Bruce Sanford, a Washington lawyer for the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, praised Monday's ruling.

"The Supreme Court has affirmed resoundingly the critical need for cool, dispassionate appellate scrutiny of jury verdicts against the press," he said. "In an era of punishing libel mega-verdicts, the decision will have practical and salutary benefits."

In other actions Monday, the court:

- Cleared the way for political action committees to spend unlimited sums in this year's presidential campaign. The justices, reviewing the issue for future elections, refused to speed up deliberations, thus giving conservative PACs the green light to proceed with plans to spend as much as $20 million to help re-elect President Reagan.

- Agreed to hear government and chemical industry appeals aimed at permitting the Environmental Protection Agency to ease regulations for some companies that discharge toxic wastes into sewage systems.

- Ruled unanimously it is illegal to send FBI or Secret Service agents on a wild goose chase by telling them a phony story. The decision apparently reinstated an indictment against Kansas City man who concocted tales to get agents to seek his estranged wife.

In past decisions, the Supreme Court has said public officials and public figures who sue for libel must prove that the allegedly libelous statement was false and was made with "actual malice" — with knowledge or reckless disregard that it was false.

The case decided Monday arose when Consumer Reports, a monthly magazine published by the Consumers Union of the United States, evaluated 24 loudspeakers in a May 1970 article. The report said that sounds from a Bose Corp. speaker "tended to wander about the room."

The 1st Circuit Court of Appeals, throwing out the award, said the magazine was "guilty of using imprecise language" but did not act out of "actual malice." The Supreme Court agreed.

Tyson said, "I think some improvements that don't require structural work could be done this summer."

The plan, which could be altered considerably by the University's Officers, calls for quite a few changes to LaFortune. It suggests a "student media center" to be developed on the top floor, to include WSND, The Observer, and Scholastic. The Dome and the Juggler would be housed on either the top floor or the 1.5 floor.

The second floor would contain all of the student government offices, the Student Activities Board, and student clubs. A "commercial zone" is proposed for the basement. The proposed businesses would include a flower shop, the computer shop, a hair stylist, the travel bureau, the record store and ticket office, and other small businesses. A

Former Nazi victims finalize plans for Holocaust Memorial Museum

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Survivors of Nazi horrors gathered in a dreary rain yesterday to begin transforming two death camp-like buildings into a U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum that will show "the dark side of human civilization."

The symbolic ground-breaking for the $100 million, privately financed museum near the Washington Monument was a focus of the annual Days of Remembrance for the 6 million Jews and countless other European minorities slaughtered and persecuted under Adolf Hitler.

"If you remember, you shall live," said Elie Wiesel, who survived Auschwitz and came to America to write, teach, campaign for human rights and become chairman of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council.

Wiesel told Vice President George Bush and more than 400 people at a noontime commemoration in the Capitol Rotunda that memories of the death camps provide lessons for now and warnings for the future.

"The world unleashed madness more than 40 years ago, and that madness is still dominating the minds and souls of too many countries," said Wiesel.

"No cause is more noble, no endeavor more sacred," he said, than to offer future visitors a graphic portrait not only of "the inhumanity of the killer but also the humanity of his victims."

Wiesel and other survivors are raising funds to create a memorial illustrating the horrors of genocide and the daily lives of death camp victims. There also will be computerized archives of Nazi extermination records seized by the United States after World War II.

Seen by Wiesel as a "magnet for all who visit Washington," the museum will be housed in two century-old buildings, donated by the U.S. government, that have served federal agencies in the past as auditors' offices, warehouses, stables and a fish hatchery.

cussed. But these are subject, as are all of the points in the submitted plan, to approval by the Officers of the University.

McDonnell said, "some of the Committee's recommendations can be implemented immediately.... Ninety percent of the work needed for an Undergraduate Club in the ballroom could be done rather quickly."

Although Tyson said, "cost has been a barrier," McDonnell said, "if it is really a priority, if Notre Dame really wants to do it, it can do it." Tom McCaffery, one of the students on the LaFortune Renovation Committee, also believes this. He said, "I think if the University was serious on making a commitment it would get done. If they are serious on providing an alternative to alcohol abuse they would renovate LaFortune."

Mike Quinn, a student on the committee, said, "I would be surprised if some of it doesn't get done this summer because of the alcohol policy. It is a must, a requirement to provide an alternative to our current social life."

The ROTC, just war theory: At peace at Notre Dame?

Editor's note: The following is the first of a two-part series on the Reserve Officer Training Corps program at Notre Dame.

When Saint Augustine wrote to Publicola, "Do not think that it is impossible for anyone to please God while engaged in active military service," he was suggesting to Christians that taking another's life is not automatically sinful.

To a people whose Master instructed them to "love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, pray for those who treat you badly" (Luke 6:27-28).

Michael Baxter

such a suggestion must have been startling. But, recognizing the human propensity for violence, Augustine thought it wise to make accommodation for circumstances (namely, defense of the innocent against murderous aggressors) in which lethal force might be justified.

Out of this reasonable, though not indisputable, moral provision has come the "just war" tradition. The Catholic community endorses it as one of two perspectives Christians may adopt in taking up their vocation of peacemaking — a vocation which the U.S. bishops, in their pastoral letter on war and peace, call "a requirement of our faith."

This perspective is probably a more useful approach to the issue of the moral legitimacy of R.O.T.C. on Catholic campuses than is its alternative — pacifism. In this and the following article, I want to suggest that just war ethics can, and should, be more fully integrated into the R.O.T.C. program at Notre Dame.

Pacifists often urge the university to live out its peacemaking vocation more radically, more prophetically. But, at the risk of sounding overly pragmatic, I don't think that is going to happen right away. Moreover, pacifists tend to sell the just war tradition short.

But, if taken seriously and applied practically, just war theory could mold Notre Dame students in R.O.T.C. into honest, effective, even radical peacemakers; and in ways that pacifists, because of their refusal to engage any foe in combat, find morally inaccessible. After all, students enrolled in R.O.T.C. are likely to find themselves in a position to do exactly what their Christian community calls them to do: to protect the lives of the innocent against violence.

Indeed, the most frequent justification given for the presence of R.O.T.C. on Catholic campuses is that it is far better to let officers schooled in Catholic morality "lead the military than it is to let people who consider themselves free of moral restraints monopolize the job.

Just war ethics is a set of principles designed to guide such restraint. The principles are of roughly two types: those limiting the right of a nation to go to war, ius ad bellum, and those defining the proper conduct within a war, ius in bello.

Even though future officers at Notre Dame will have little control over the decisions that send the United States to war, they will have some authority over specific military policies within a war waged by the U.S.

Thus, the principles of proper conduct within a war are most relevant. Of these, the principle of proportionality, which forbids actions that result in more evil than the good they seek to achieve, is an especially murky area for just war ethics (Cf. "The Pastoral Letters on War and Peace," paragraphs 101-102).

The principle of discrimination, however, remains quite clear. Since its purpose, preserving civilians from the tyranny of combat, springs from the same sentiment as Augustine's, it should be given particular attention in considering the moral obligations of Catholic military officers.

The Second Vatican Council did just that when, in the strongest terms found in those documents, it declared that "any act of war aimed indiscriminately at the destruction of entire cities along with their population is a crime against God and humanity."

It merits unequivocal and unhesitating condemnation" (Gaudium et spes, paragraph 79). It also insisted that "actions which conflict with these same principles, as well as orders commanding such actions, are criminal. Blind obedience cannot excuse those who yield to them."

Viewed in this light, the issue of having R.O.T.C. on Notre Dame's campus depends on the ability of the program to produce future officers who are willing to participate only in military actions that are just and who aren't willing to collaborate in actions that are not just.

Notre Dame officers must be ready, therefore, to challenge strategic plans that involve inflicting harm on noncombatants, and they must be willing to go so far as insubordination to do it. They must be willing openly to criticize, for example, a command policy intended to cripple the adversary's industrial capacity and to demoralize the enemy population — policies such as the Allied obliteration bombing strategy of World War II.

They must be willing to refuse combat assignments in wars such as the Vietnam War, which U.S. bishops had judged to be unjust by 1971. And it is entirely reasonable, on this score, to expect that Notre Dame officers would never contribute to military policies involving the use of nuclear weapons, such as working in nuclear missile silos or designing weaponry with first-strike capability.

In concluding their pastoral letter, the American bishops recognized that Catholics in military service "carry special responsibilities" (paragraph 309) concerning peacemaking. The responsibility is awesome. Waging war efficiently is a prodigious enterprise. Waging war justly is a more difficult, yet far nobler task. The Christian community, which tries not to recoil from difficult, noble tasks, asks much of those entrusted with military service. It asks no less than for officers to put the lives of the innocent before their own.

As Michael Walzer puts it in Just and Unjust Wars, (a defense of the principle of discrimination which should be required reading for all R.O.T.C. students at Notre Dame), "The rule is absolute: self-preservation in the face of the enemy is not an excuse for violations of rules of war. Soldiers, it might be said, stand to civilians like the crew of a liner to its passengers. They must risk their lives for the sake of the others." (page 305).

The Church shares this wisdom and wishes to pass it on to the officers-to-be at Notre Dame.

As a people, we believe that those who kill the innocent suffer a death more grievous than that of their victims. The love shown to us by our Master enables us to be this kind of people and calls us to mold this kind of officer.

The question of the moral legitimacy of R.O.T.C. must be taken up with this Christian perspective in mind. The question turns on how well the R.O.T.C. programs at Notre Dame can train officers to protect the lives of the innocent, even when that might run contrary to the policies of the military organization in which they serve.

Rector responds

Dear Editor:

In response to "Rector Bans Banners" in the April 30 Observer, I would like to correct an unjust accusation.

Though I do not believe students have a right to use University-owned sheets to advertise (there are always the "Personals"), and do not think students have a right to litter the walls of the buildings, I did not initially forbid banners.

The first banner on St. Ed's was "Bend Over ND." This is insulting to all those who care about Notre Dame and alienates many who might be sensitive to students' needs. As a punishment the individuals were told to take down their banner and since they had insulted both our hall and our school, they were not allowed to put up another banner.

The second banner advertised "Coke is it in '84-'85." Despite the double entendre, I allowed it to stay.

The morning after the Student Body Vice President told hall members that banners should not center on alcohol and should be more responsible, a banner appeared on St. Ed's saying "Our Father Who art in Heaven, Give us our 7 & 7."

I then banned banners on St. Ed's because I do not intend going out every morning checking to see which is offensive and which is not — and a parody of the Lord's Prayer I find offensive.

As a member of the CLC I will work toward changes in the Directive Draft (changes that the Dean of Students has admitted are negotiable). As rector of St. Ed's Hall I will not allow anything that degrades both this hall and this University.

I think I have the support of the residents of this hall in this matter. After all, there were only 32 out of a possible 183 signatures.

(Rev.) Mario Pedi, O.S.B.

Schuler mistreated

Dear Editor:

On April 17, the Observer reported a potential lawsuit by a former secretary in the Radiation Laboratory, but extended coverage well beyond the issues of the case to include material which impugns the reputation of Florence Schuler, wife of the Director.

This material can only be interpreted to allege that laboratory supplies were used for private gain. The charges are too absurd to merit point by point refutation, but the overall content of the article is so hurtful as to require a reply from those who have known her for many years.

The Radiation Laboratory enjoys good inter-relationships among its members, both scientific and technical, without which it could not function well. Since coming to Notre Dame, Mrs. Schuler has given freely of her time and resources in efforts designed to foster and complement such relationships.

She has assisted those arriving from abroad to settle in and to deal with the problems of unfamiliar surroundings. Along with other members' wives, she has spend countless hours providing activities for all personnel of the laboratory — yearly picnics and Christmas parties for the laboratory personnel and for their children.

All these efforts have been directed to the benefit of the laboratory and the University; Mrs. Schuler has received only the satisfaction of helping others and serving the University.

As an example of the distortions in the article, one might note that the statement "she uses lab money for luncheons" could only refer to a recent working lunch for external members of a University laboratory review committee — a luncheon which she organized and served alone. Such an activity looks rather different in its proper context.

Your motives for publishing such an article without due consideration, and for inflicting such damage on a person's reputation, remain unclear. You can win no laurels for such things.

McCann named wrestling coach

Fran McCann, wrestling coach the past eight years at Indiana State University, has been named head coach of the Notre Dame wrestling team.

McCann, 44, has produced an impressive 76-48-3 dual record since taking over the Sycamore program in 1976. Three of his last four teams finished among the nation's Top 20, including the 1982 squad which ended up 15-1 in dual meets and took seventh place in the NCAA Tournament.

McCann takes over for Brother Joseph Bruno, C.S.C., who had been the Irish head coach the last four seasons. Assistant coach Toth-Fejel handled the squad on an interim basis the last half of the '84 campaign.

"Fran McCann is responsible for the national recognition Indiana State has gained the last few years," said Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan in a statement released yesterday. "We're hopeful he can do the same thing for Notre Dame."

"Indiana State gained everyone's respect at the NCAA level because of what it accomplished while Fran was there," Corrigan said. "We're awfully excited to have someone of his caliber to handle our program."

Among the six Division I All-Americans coached by McCann was Bruce Baumgartner, the '82 NCAA heavyweight champion. Baumgartner was a three-time All-American, an NCAA Top Five choice for his academic achievements and is considered a strong possibility for the gold medal in the '84 Olympics this summer in Los Angeles.

McCann takes over a Notre Dame program that is coming off three consecutive winning seasons, including 15-2-1 and 18-2 marks in '82 and '83.

A Chicago native, McCann previously was head coach at Winona State, where he compiled a 37-8-1 record beginning in 1970. He was '70 NAIA Coach of the Year after helping Winona State to a second-place finish in the NAIA tournament that season.

A standout wrestler at Oklahoma State and Iowa, McCann finished third in the NCAA meet in '62 at 115 pounds while wrestling for the Hawkeyes. He graduated from Oklahoma State in '65 and spent a year at both Oklahoma State and St. Cloud State as an assistant before earning his Master's degree in '67 at St. Cloud State. McCann then was an assistant for two seasons at Winona State before becoming head coach.

State goal. As if eight seconds was not quick enough, Franklin scored again just seven seconds after his first goal.

Ohio State never recovered from the sudden outburst as the Irish added three more goals by the end of the quarter. Meanwhile, Notre Dame goalie Rob Simpson was keeping the Buckeyes from cutting into the lead. Simpson turned away 12 OSU shots before sitting down after the first half, improving his save percentage to 70 percent.

By the time the teams reached halftime, Notre Dame held an insurmountable nine-goal lead on goals by Tom Grote, Trocchi, and Dwayne Hicks.

It was not much different in the second half, either. Steve Pearsall and Franklin scored early in the third quarter to push the lead to 11-0 before O'Leary began substituting freely.

The Buckeyes finally erased the 0 from the scoreboard when the Irish failed to clear the ball from their end, allowing Ohio State to get a man open near the goal.

Thirty seconds later, the Buckeyes cut the margin to 11-2 with a Notre Dame player in the penalty box, but that was as close as they could get. The Irish answered with two more goals in the quarter, and both teams scored twice in the final quarter as O'Leary experimented with different lineups.

Once again, Trocchi and Franklin led the Notre Dame offense. Trocchi scored three goals and assisted on two others to improve his season totals to 33 goals and 12 assists. Franklin, who has come on strong during the winning streak, scored four times.

Pearsall, Grote, and Tony Rettino each contributed two goals to the cause, while Don Gayhardt added two assists.

On the defensive end, Pat Poletti and Brian McKeon split time in the second half, picking up seven and two saves, respectively, after Simpson played the entire first half.

NFL Draft today

Teams pick from depleted crop

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Heisman Trophy winner is gone. So is the top quarterback and the top-rated defensive lineman.

Now it's the turn of the National Football League, which sat by quietly while a 2-year-old rival signed some of the Class of 1984's prime prospects, to pick over what's left.

When NFL teams sit down today at the Omni Park Hotel to divide up the rights to 336 college seniors, they will find the crop depleted — nine players considered first-rounders have signed with the United States Football League and perhaps 30 of the top 100 prospects have done the same.

Gone is Heisman winner Mike Rozier of Nebraska, the only top-caliber running back available this year; gone is Reggie White, the 280-pound defensive tackle from Tennessee; gone is Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young, who signed a 43-year, $40 million contract with the Los Angeles Express.

In fact, the free-spending Express has snapped up more than a dozen prospects who might have been drafted in the NFL's first four rounds.

But for NFL teams — and for the many fans who treat the draft like the opening game of the next season — there's still enough left to make for an interesting, if somewhat confusing, day. Even the people who make a living at judging prospects acknowledge that doing that this year is difficult.

"It's a tough draft to make sense of," says Steve Ortmayer, director of football operations for the Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders. "It's hard to tell what's happening, which means there's liable to be more mistakes made in this draft, although maybe not on the first round."

Moreover, the USFL remains a factor. Last year, after the NFL draft, it signed two of the older league's picks — quarterback Jim Kelly, drafted by Buffalo and signed by the Houston Gamblers; receiver-running back Gary Anderson, drafted by San Diego, signed by the Tampa Bay Bandits.

That means NFL teams will be making sure a player can be signed before he is drafted.

Houston, for example, wanted to draft linebacker Wilber Marshall of Florida, but balked at his asking price of a reported $1 million a year. Philadelphia would like Penn State wide receiver Kenny Jackson, but is concerned about his talks with the USFL's Philadelphia Stars.

In fact, the first two choices have already been made and locked up.

The New England Patriots, who dealt with the Cincinnati Bengals after the Bengals declined to match the kind of money the USFL was spending, took wide receiver Irving Fryar of Nebraska and immediately signed him. Then the Houston Oilers, declining to pay Marshall's price, said they had agreed to terms with Fryar's Nebraska teammate, guard Dean Steinkuhler.

That leaves the New York Giants with the opening pick.

The Giants, who need offensive linemen and coveted Steinkuhler, may, despite one of the NFL's strongest linebacking units, pick the player scouts consider the next best in the draft — linebacker Carl Banks of Michigan State. Or they may trade down for additional compensation and take offensive tackle Bill Roberts of Ohio State.

In addition to Banks, defensive standouts include Marshall; defensive backs Mossy Cade of Texas, Russell Carter of Southern Methodist, Leonard Coleman of Vanderbilt and Don Rogers of UCLA; and defensive linemen Bill Maas of Pitt, Rick Bryan of Oklahoma, Keith Milard of Washington State and Ron Faurot of Arkansas.

Showing at relays earns three Championship bids

By CHUCK EHRMAN
Sports Writer

What did the Drake Relays mean to the Notre Dame track team this past weekend? For some, it now means a road trip to the upcoming IC4A Championships in Villanova in three weeks. Jim Tyler, Jeff Van Wie, and Mark Wozniak all qualified.

In the 1,500-meters, Tyler bettered the recommended IC4A outdoor standard time by nearly four seconds with a 3:45.00 clocking. And for freshman Van Wie, a 1:49.30 time in the 800-meters was good enough to earn an invitation. Wozniak ran the 10,000-meters in 30:14.00. Said coach Joe Piane: "They ran well."

Piane labeled the team's performance as adequate. "We can be better," he said. "But I was satisfied. We placed two out of three relay teams. And that's not bad."

Notre Dame's 4x1,600-meter relay foursome of Jim Moyer, Tim Cannon, Tyler, and Andy Dillon managed a fifth-place finish, while Moyer, Dan Shannon, John McNelis, and Cannon combined to take sixth in the distance medley event.

In the field events, James Patterson continues to impress. The fleet-footed junior jumped his way into second place in the long jump with a 25-foot, three-quarter inch effort.

The Irish return home this weekend to play host to the Midwest Catholic Championships. All track fans should attend. "It should be fun," said Piane.

went home unhappy. Joe Dobosh pitched well, but picked up the loss which dropped his record to 2-6.

"We had opportunities to score runs, but we left too many men on base," said Gallo. "Joe Dobosh pitched a good game. We just didn't score any runs for him."

The loss yesterday dropped the Irish to 19-20 for the season, and left them 4-6 in the Midwestern City Conference.

The split with Butler was extremely disheartening for the Irish, because it dimmed the conference playoff picture greatly.

"We are probably out of the playoff picture with our 4-6 record," commented Gallo. "These were very disappointing losses, because I thought we had a great chance to make the playoffs."

The Irish meet Western Michigan in an away doubleheader tomorrow, and return home for a twinbill Thursday against St. Joseph's.

"We now have to shoot for a winning season," said Gallo. "If we end up on a real good note, we can still have a relatively successful season, although it would have been nice to make the playoffs."

James Patterson set a personal best in the Drake Relays this weekend, jumping a distance of 25 feet, three-and-a-quarter inches. The jump was good enough for a second place finish for Patterson. Notre Dame also placed three members in the IC4A Championships in Indianapolis.

THE WEALTH OF EXPERIENCE YOU GET IN THE ARMY PAYS OFF IN COLLEGE

A lot of what it takes to be a good soldier is what it takes to be a good college student.

So it shouldn't surprise you that more and more young people are going to college by way of the Army.

They're getting the benefits of Army skill training. The opportunity to live and work with different kinds of people. And the chance to travel.

They're also getting the financial benefits of the Army College Fund.

If you qualify, the Army College Fund can mean as much as $15,200 for college for serving two years or $20,100 for serving just three years.

See your Army Recruiter and ask for the Army College Fund booklet. It'll tell you how to go to college a much wealthier person. In more ways than one.

Freshman Ken Soos continued his streak of impressive hitting as he hammered a home run in the nightcap. Metzler added a pair of doubles to complete an impressive day. Trudeau also had a double, while Dan Harrington contributed a triple to the Irish attack. Conlin improved his record to 4-3 with the victory.

All signs pointed to continued Irish dominance on Sunday, as they travelled to Bulldog country in Indianapolis. But a disastrous first inning, in which Butler managed to score six times, stole all hope for a sweep from Irish hearts.

"We just didn't play well on Sunday," said Gallo. "We had the 'first inning blues', and they hurt us."

Although the Bulldogs could only collect five hits off Irish starter Mark Clementz, they scored seven runs over the course of the game, including those six in the first. Two Irish errors contributed greatly to Notre Dame's demise.

Notre Dame could only score four times, three times in the third and once in the fifth. Metzler and Vuono again highlighted the Irish attack, as they once again smashed home runs. Clementz took the tough loss, dropping his record to 3-5.

Yesterday, the Irish again fell apart in the first inning, letting in three Bulldog runs. The Irish came back, and closed the gap to 3-2 in the fifth on a Metzler sacrifice fly.

But a Butler home run in the sixth closed out the scoring, and the Irish

Lacrosse team breezes to its fifth straight win

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Three weeks ago, the Notre Dame lacrosse team boasted a so-so 3-3 mark and seemed to be on the way to a rather undistinguished season. However, after the team's fifth straight win Saturday — a 17-4 rout of Ohio State — Irish coach Rich O'Leary and his players are wishing the 1984 season would not end so soon.

The surprising ease with which Notre Dame handled Midwest Lacrosse Association opponent Ohio State is the latest chapter in what has turned out to be the lacrosse team's greatest season in its short history. The victory improved the Irish record to 8-3 (7-1 in the MIA) with only a game this Saturday against Michigan State remaining. The win also kept Notre Dame in the thick of the race for the MIA title.

The Buckeyes, who were supposed to give their hosts a tough time, found themselves swamped by the Irish who were still riding the momentum from their big upset of Denison a week earlier. By the time the visitors scored their first goal with 6:42 left in the third quarter, Notre Dame already had scored 11 times. In fact, the margin was never less than nine for the entire second half.

"I was really shocked that we beat them as bad as we did," said O'Leary. "I thought they'd dominate us at midfield, but they didn't. I think they're capable of matching up with us, though."

On Saturday, Ohio State matched up with Notre Dame for about three-and-a-half minutes. Then the astroturf of Cartier Field swallowed up the Buckeyes as the Irish scored three goals in 15 seconds and added a fourth less than two minutes later.

Sophomore Tim Corrigan started off the scoring by getting past an Ohio State defender for an open shot. Eight seconds later, attackman Joe Franklin took a pass from Bob Trocchi and dumped it in the Ohio

Weekend split leaves playoff outlook dark

By ERIC SCHEUERMAN
Sports Writer

Inconsistency ruled again last weekend over the Notre Dame baseball team. After an easy sweep of a doubleheader over Midwestern City Conference rival Butler on Saturday, the Irish came back with a shoddy performances in single games Sunday and yesterday, and ended up splitting the weekend series.

On Saturday, in a pair of games at Jake Kline Field, the Irish brought out the lumber like never before this season, crushing the Bulldogs by scores of 10-5 and 16-2.

In the first contest, the Irish fell behind 2-0 in the first inning as the Bulldogs scored quickly off starter Buster Lopes. But in the second, Notre Dame scored four runs to take the lead.

Butler put a scare into the Irish by slowly chipping away at the lead, and finally went out in front 5-4 with two runs in the top of the sixth. The Irish then put the game out of reach by exploding for six runs in the bottom of the inning.

The Bulldogs could score no more, and the final score favored the Irish by a score of 10-5. Lopes picked up the win with a fine five-hit performance, and moved his record to 4-3.

Mike Metzler and Carl Vuono pounded homers for the Irish, while Mike Trudeau and Tom Shields lashed doubles to lead the 11-hit attack.

Notre Dame played in the second game as if the first one had merely been a chance to warm up. While Irish hurlers Tom Conlin and Jason Schoner held the Bulldogs to four hits, the Irish hitters unleashed a 17-hit attack of their own.

The Irish jumped out a 6-0 lead after three innings and never looked back. They continued to build on their lead and gradually increased it to 16-0 after six innings. Only two meaningless Bulldogs runs in their last at-bat averted the shutout.

"Tom Conlin pitched very, very well," said Irish Head Coach Larry Gallo. "We also scored sixteen runs. It makes it a lot easier to pitch with that many runs behind you."

Joe Franklin scored four goals to help the Irish lacrosse team to a 17-4 defeat of Midwest Lacrosse Association opponent Ohio State. The win gave Coach

Rich O'Leary's squad an 8-3 record, best ever in Notre Dame's short history. Mike Sullivan's story at left.

Belles heading for Indianapolis

By KATHY MURPHY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's softball team finished off its home season over the weekend with four victories to boost its overall record to 22-3.

On Friday the Belles took a doubleheader from Franklin College, jumping out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when freshman Anne Trapp tripled in classmate Janine Adamo. Both teams went scoreless over the next three innings, but Franklin ended the dry spell in the fifth, tying the game 1-1.

The Belles broke the tie in the sixth inning, scoring two runs. With Trapp on first and Adamo on third, junior Teresa McGinnis laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to score Adamo. Junior Mary Lynne Mulcahy singled in Trapp, and Franklin went down 1-2-3 in the seventh to insure the Belles' 3-1 victory.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Belles got on the board early with two runs in the first inning. Adamo hit a home run with junior Barb Theiss on to put Saint Mary's up 2-0, and the lead grew to 4-0 in the second when Elaine Suess scored on a Franklin error and freshman Lorri White singled in Mulcahy.

Franklin managed to score a run in the third, but the Belles buried Franklin in the fourth with three runs to go ahead 7-1. Franklin added a run in the seventh to make the final 7-2. Winning pitcher Cathy Logsdon struck out six and walked none.

"I was very pleased with our performance," said Head Coach Scott Biesel. "Franklin had the best defense we've seen in Division III and I was pleased how we executed to win the game."

On Saturday Saint Mary's faced Anderson College and after more than a two-hour delay the game finally began. Anderson jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first, and the Belles came back with a run of their own in the second to make it 3-1. However, they missed a golden opportunity to take the lead in the third.

After a single by freshman Kris Pantelleria and walks to Theiss and Adamo, the bases were loaded with only one out. Trapp stepped up to the plate and hit a grounder back to the pitcher who forced Pantelleria out at home and Trapp was thrown out at first, ending the Belles' hope of a big inning.

In the bottom of the sixth with Anderson leading 5-3, Suess reached first on an Anderson error. Singles by Mulcahy, junior Trish Nolan and Logsdon followed, giving Saint Mary's two runs to tie the game at five. Three more runs scored after a bases-loaded walk and a two-run single by Adamo, and Anderson went down in order in the seventh to give the Belles the 8-5 win. Nolan went 2-for-3 with a triple and 3 RBI.

In the second game, the Belles sent Anderson home a little early, winning 11-0 in a five-inning "slaughter rule" game. Anderson could only manage two hits off winning pitcher Julie Keigher, a junior. McGinnis went 2-for-3 with a triple, 2 RBI, and three runs scored. Nolan went 2-for-2 with 3 RBI.

"We had some trouble getting ourselves into the game after the delay," said Biesel. "But I was proud how we worked ourselves out of it, got intense and executed well to win."

The four victories over the weekend should give the Belles a definite boost as they travel to Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics District 21 playoffs. Eight teams of the 17-team district have qualified for the tournament.

Saint Mary's has been seeded No. 2 behind a powerful IUPUI. The Belles will play No. 7 seed Taylor, who they beat twice last week, at noon Friday.

"We're going to take each game one at a time and not look ahead," said Biesel. "You cannot underestimate any team in tournament play because anything can happen."

The Belles have an added incentive to do well in the tournament. They were denied the opportunity to participate in the playoffs last year and therefore were unable to defend their state crown.

With a team batting average of .333, a pitching staff including senior Annie Day (0.82 ERA) and Keigher (1.22 ERA) and three of Indiana's top 10 fielders in first baseman Theiss, shortstop Nolan and second baseman Pantelleria, the Belles look strong.

"The way we've been playing defense we can stay with anyone," said Biesel.

A consistent attack has been the key to a successful season for the Belles. Biesel is looking forward to this weekend's tournament.

"At the tournament we will play our same consistent type of ball that we've been playing all year," said Biesel. "We'll be aggressive with the bat and on the bases. We want to force errors and capitalize on the other team's mistakes."
