Videos aim to entice young GOP voters

By DIANE SCHROEDER

News Staff

In a special effort to communicate with younger voters, the Republican campaign for Indiana's governorship has produced America's first political "music video." Republican Robert Orr's video, which first aired Oct. 5, is aimed at 18-24 year olds.

The two-minute video is receiving air time on MTV as well as on commercial television programs where viewer demographics show a concentration of younger voters.

The video features Gov. Orr with recording artist Henry Lee Summer. The title song from Summer's new album, "Stay with Me," is the music soundtrack for the video.

Commenting on the video, Orr said, "This video is a unique effort to reach young voters with our central message - that the real issue of this campaign is Indiana's future, and that the Orr-Mutz team is the most qualified, most experienced, and best prepared to lead Indiana into that future."

The governor went said although the polls show that young voters are

Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, supported Gerry Faust, the alcohol policy and single-sex dorms in a question and answer session last night in the Library Auditorium. For more details, see the story at right.

Head Football Coach Gerry Faust can relax.

If the alcohol policy doesn't work, it will get tougher.

And coed dormitories have no place at Notre Dame.

All three statements are according to Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, who spoke at a question-and-answer session at the Library Auditorium last night.

When asked whether the football team's performance called for action on his part, Hesburgh stated that ND was a place of integrity and that he would not dishonor Faust's contract. "Five-year contracts are standard for new coaches," Hesburgh said, "and coaches deserve that period to establish themselves."

Hesburgh is more concerned about the student body's reaction to the team's performance. "I think it's bush when ND students boo their own team," he said, in response to the students' negative reaction after last Saturday's loss to Air Force. "That's not what ND is about. They're our team and they deserve our support," he said, adding, "I've seen much worse teams that weren't booed."

Hesburgh said he completely supported the alcohol policy. When asked if he foresaw further restrictions, he said the policy would get tougher only if the current policy didn't work. Hesburgh reminded the audience it was he who had first allowed alcohol on campus and said ND is a place where students can learn responsible drinking.

Hesburgh admitted liability was part of the reason for the formation of the alcohol policy, but declared the unacceptability of public drunkenness was the primary reason for the formation of the policy.

Hesburgh declared there will never be coed dorms at ND as long as he is president. In defense of this he cited the need for privacy for both men and women, the ample opportunities for interaction already available and the fact other universities are returning to unisex dorms.

Other topics discussed included the male-female ratio at Notre Dame, the renovation of LaFortune Student Center and the student body's ability to be involved in world issues.

Hesburgh, when asked whether ND would ever reach an equal male-female ratio, emphasized the Saint

Pre-meds serve as patient/family liasons in area hospital

By MARK DILLON

News Staff

Pre-med students at Notre Dame are involved in a program in which they become part of the emergency staff at Elkhart General Hospital by serving as patient/family liasons in the emergency room.

The program involves students who volunteer four hours a week at the hospital. Professor of Anthropology Dr. Irwin Press initiated the program last September in response to a suggestion of Dixie Smith, head nurse of the Elkhart General Hospital Emergency Department. She thought a link was needed between patients, staff and families.

Many times in the emergency room setting both patients and their families are hysterical. They cannot understand the waiting, the lack of news, or the treatment they or their loved ones are experiencing. It is these problems which the student as a patient/family liason attempts to solve.

The liasons have four basic responsibilities according to Press.

"First they keep a patient company who would otherwise be left unattended. Second, they keep relatives informed of where the patient is, the patients' status, etc. Third, they act as a communication link between the patient in the treatment room and the family in the waiting room. Finally, the pre-med students keep an eye on the patient to make sure there is no unattended crisis," he said.

Press said, "The liasons are not glorified candy strippers. They are integral members of the emergency staff. They gain hands-on experience right in the thick of the emergency process."

The students have become such integral members of the staff, said Press, that when the students left for the summer, the emergency room became less efficient and therefore hired two students as full-time liasons for the summer.

The program, which last year was strictly volunteer, has become a credited course involving 16 students and meeting every other week. Students are assigned readings on the cultural aspects of medicine and are required to hand in a report of their experiences at the end of the year.

The classes focuses on values and attitudes patients and staff members bring into the emergency room setting. Press cited prejudices based on ethnic background or socioeconomic position as examples.

Press said his course tries to deal with the fact that "medicine is not just a scientific endeavor but has to do with the cultural backgrounds of those who manage it."

Tutu greeted by joyous crowds of countrymen

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Bishop Desmond Tutu, telling a crowd of jubilant supporters that "we have done well, all of us," returned to his troubled homeland yesterday as winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize.

"God is saying to us, He is on our side," the black Anglican clergyman declared to more than 200 people who greeted him as he emerged from customs at Jan Smuts Airport. He was accompanied by his wife, Leah, and daughters Naomi and Mpho.

Supporters held up placards saying: "apartheid: goodbye to You," and "Tutu: freedom a Reality." The crowd sang "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrica," (God Bless Africa), the unofficial black national anthem.

Tutu, 53, a leader in the struggle for equal rights for South Africa's 22 million blacks, joined in the singing and danced a little as he worked his way through the crowd.

Tutu embraced the Rev. Allan Boesak, a mixed-race minister of the Dutch Reformed Church who, along with Tutu, is one of the most prominent clerics in the campaign against the white-dominated government's system of racial separation, known as apartheid.

Boesak said Tutu's Nobel prize is "a tremendous boost for us at a time when the South African gov-

The Palestine Liberation Organization's arms industry - with factories in operation throughout the Moslem world - recently developed the PLO's own fighter plane, Yasser Arafat was quoted yesterday as saying. The independent Tunisian weekly Er Rai quoted the PLO chairman as saying Palestinian scientists and engineers were in charge of the factories "which have just put the final touches to a combat plane." He gave no details of the aircraft and did not indicate when it would go into production, the paper said. The guerrilla movement has never had combat planes of its own. -AP

A man shot and killed his six children, then killed himself, Evansville, Ind. police said yesterday. The children ranged in age from 3 to 15 years old. Police Chief Ray Hamner identified the man as James Alan Day. Hamner said Day's wife, Candace, returned home from her overnight shift at the Evansville Post Office this morning and found her husband dead in a chair with a gun in his hand. She then discovered the children in their beds. Hamner said there was no immediate indication of motive in the killings on the city's far southeast side. -AP

Budweiser beer can't stop a local florists association from using the slogan "This Bud's for You," a federal judge in Cleveland has ruled. "If there is anybody in this country that can use the word bud in connection with their product line without interfering with Anheuser Busch, it's got to be florists," Christopher B. Fagan, attorney for the Florists Association of Greater Cleveland, said Wednesday. "We're happy the court agreed with us on that point." Anheuser Busch Cos. The Air Force sent investigators Wednesday to the remote Monument Valley where an unarmed B-52 bomber crashed during a low-level training flight, killing one crewman, injuring five and leaving one missing. The bomber, flying from Fairchild Air Force Base at Spokane, Wash., crashed about 9 p.m. Tuesday on the sprawling Navajo Indian reservation in northeastern Arizona near the Utah border, about 13 miles northeast of Kayenta. The cause of the crash was not immediately known. Seventy B-52s have crashed on non-combat missions. -AP

A drug that apparently mimics the action of a brain chemical shows promise as a treatment for Alzheimer's disease, a progressive form of senility that afflicts about 2 million Americans, researchers at the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center in New Hampshire say. Four victims of the disease showed improved ability to speak and care for themselves after treatment with the drug, called bethanecol chloride, according to a report in the current issue of the Journal of Neurosurgery. -AP

A former ambassador who was involved in a heated Vietnam War dispute over how to count enemy troops testified Wednesday in New York he did not "conspire" to suppress truthful intelligence reports. Westmoreland's suit charges a Jan. 23, 1982 documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: a Vietnam Deception," falsely accused the general of a plot to undercount enemy troops in order to convince President Lyndon B. A panel of prominent educators, bidding to turn the reform spotlight from America's high schools to its colleges, is warning that higher education is suffering serious problems, from underpaid faculty to deteriorating buildings to students abandoning the liberal arts. The panel, in a report prepared for Education Secretary T.H. Bell and his National Institute of Education in Washington, called for sweeping changes in campus life, including more faculty attention for freshmen and sophomores, fewer part-time professors and less emphasis on vocational courses. -AP

Alcoa, AT&T and the bookstore: A campus monopoly gone wrong

"Curses to the Bloody Monopoly!"

When aimed at Notre Dame's bookstore, it is an understandable and just plea, and one that is probably not vindictive. Plain and simple, the bookstore prices are high; some, according to a Student Government survey, are as much as 45 percent higher than the average drugstore. In response, the Student Senate has proposed a student-run "general store," a benign creature on the order of a newsstand which could nonetheless display the banner of "Holy Competition."

Students were asked last week if they liked the idea, and nearly nine in 10 said they did. Most probably answered "yes" for the simple reason that low prices seem better than high. Americans are often asked in polls if low taxes are better than high, and most answer "yes" even though Walter Mondale and his cronies have argued convincingly that lower taxes are not always a good thing.

Thus, if the senate's case for such a store relies solely on student impressions and drug-store comparisons, it won't be much of a case at all in front of University financiers who will raise economic considerations that haven't been addressed.

The bookstore is a case study on the economics of market power. What's needed is evidence that the bookstore's use of such power makes it a monopoly per se. Market power and monopoly are not synonyms (more than one firm in an industry can have market power), and it is wrong for the senate to assume as much.

A monopoly is any market structure in which there exists only one seller of a product that has no close substitutes. Should the Notre Dame market for day-to-day products be defined within Juniper, Angela, Douglas and U.S. 31? Are students without cars truly captive customers of the bookstore? The Student Senate has only assumed, not proven, that this is so.

And the distinction is important. Even monopolies cannot set prices without considering the demand of the market. But profit-maximizing monopolies (if truly monopolies) always produce less and charge more than firms in a competitive market. Thus, if the bookstore is proven as a monopoly, it becomes much easier for the student senate to show that its prices are not competitive.

Competition would mean that the demand curve facing the bookstore is not also the demand curve of the market, and such a development would be a step in the direction of pure competition. And economists agree that pure competition is economically more efficient.

Bob Vonderheide
Editor-in-Chief

One final point: Markets controlled by monopolies are also characterized by substantial barriers to entry. The University has argued, though not in these terms, that in the case of the student store, the barriers to entry are "natural." It simply would be too expensive to open and operate the store.

Baloney. The barriers against opening the student store are essentially legal, the same kind of barriers that ensures the U.S. Post Office's monopoly on delivery of first class mail. If there was no law protecting the Post Office, the monopoly would certainly break down in the face of competition, and postage prices would probably drop.

The same is true of the bookstore: the University's presumed ban on direct competition is protecting a monopoly that really is artificial. There is nothing "natural" about it. The University is simply fearful that the student store would be successful, which would mean at least a partial goodbye to profits.

Notre Dame's ban on direct competition has not been challenged, and you can't change a bad regulation until you break it. The challenge now is on the Student Senate not to settle for a store that merely sells generic or low-quality products. The student store should carry brand-name items, matching the bookstore product for product.

The University can argue as much as it wants that the store won't make it, but nothing changes the fact that the students are right on this one. The only reason the University would deny a directly competitive student store is to keep the profits of the bookstore protected - profits of which we know neither the magnitude nor the use.

And on this campus, that's not supposed to be a very good reason at all.

Hey, let's be careful out there.

Beatrice Companies Senior Vice President and Director of Marketing Harold Handley speaks about Beatrice's "You've Known Us All Along" ad campaign. The lecture was held yesterday in Saint Mary's Hagggar College Center and was sponsored by the Saint Mary's American Marketing Association.

Beatrice executive Handley tells of advertising campaign

By RAY MULERA
News Staff

Beatrice's recent multi-million dollar ad campaign is the beginning of an "overall metamorphosis" which will give the company a status similar to Proctor and Gamble, said Harold J. Handley, senior vice president and director of marketing for Beatrice Companies. Handley made his remarks yesterday in a lecture at Saint Mary's Hagggar College Center.

Beatrice is the nation's largest food company and the second largest in the world with annual sales of over $13 billion. The new campaign is aimed at increasing the consumer's awareness of the Beatrice Companies.

The advertisements feature Beatrice's better-known subsidiary products while stating "You've Known Us All Along." Handley describes this as an attempt to "borrow equity" from the already established products.

The advertisements have allowed Beatrice to "leapfrog over" the other companies in terms of recognition according to Handley. He believes the success of the campaign from their ability to appeal to a wide range of people. Each commercial features several products, each appealing to a different group of people. This, according to Handley, gives the advertisements "rifle shot accuracy" at the targeted group.

Handley said this campaign is a "unique, specific, conclusion to Beatrice's communication needs" and would not work as well for other, better known companies. The advertisements are specialized to identify Beatrice with the better known products instead of the usual attempt to identify the product with the better known company.

The lecture was sponsored by the Saint Mary's chapter of the American Marketing Association.

Bauer supports state lottery to help fund Indiana educational system

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
News Staff

Democratic candidate for the Indiana House Burnett "Burnie" Bauer said yesterday that if elected he will support legislation for an Indiana state lottery providing the proceeds go to education.

Bauer, a candidate for the 8th Indiana House District, spoke at a news conference from Democratic Headquarters in South Bend. He said he is "dedicated to education that is sorely in need of funds."

Bauer also said, "Indiana ranks 47th among the states in SAT scores, 41st in expenditure for education per capita income, and 39th in expenditures per pupil." The state universities are losing some of their best professors to other states because Indiana can't afford to pay them enough, he said. He added the state needs a well-educated work force to attract industry.

Bauer has found many people are now traveling to Michigan and Illinois to buy lottery tickets on a regular basis. He said, "The money is going to the states around us and not to Indiana." He also said he has found those people traveling to other states for lottery tickets would prefer to spend their money in Indiana.

Bauer pointed to a study done by Larry DeBaer, economics professor at Ball State University, that estimates a lottery would generate 108.2 million dollars, netting 42.4 million for the state. Prize money and promotion would take 47 percent of the revenue and the rest left would go to help Indiana education.

Bauer said his race is important to getting a lottery because his district is considered important by the Democratic party if they are to gain control of the Indiana House. In the House the Republican speaker, Bob Daily, has killed every effort so far to bring a lottery bill to a vote, although he now says he will allow such a bill to come to the floor. Bauer said, "The best bet is to put in candidates in favor of it (the lottery) and who have supported it in the past."

Debate won by Mondale say voters; most stick to Reagan

Associated Press

NEW YORK - A majority of likely voters questioned in an NBC News poll released yesterday said Walter Mondale won his first debate with President Reagan, but the debate - and the later vice presidential debate - seemed to have little effect on Reagan's commanding lead in the presidential race.

The poll, conducted between Oct. 14 and Oct. 16 among 1,556 likely voters nationwide, showed Reagan and Vice President George Bush ahead of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro by a margin of 60 percent to 35 percent, a slight change from their respective 62 percent and 32 percent figures in an early September survey.

The margin of error in the latest poll was plus or minus 3 percent. About one-fifth of those questioned said they had not watched or heard the presidential debate, but Mondale was declared the winner by a 3-to-1 margin by those who watched or listened.

Almost one-half of the likely voters - 47 percent - said they had a more favorable opinion of Mondale after the debate, and only 17 percent said they had a more favorable opinion of the president.

Almost one-third of the likely voters questioned said they did not watch or hear the debate between Bush and Ferraro, but those who did thought Bush did a better job by a margin of 35 percent to 20 percent. Both candidates emerged with more favorable ratings.

NBC said there was little movement to the Democratic ticket in the last five weeks, but the change that did occur came primarily from five groups - union members, Easterners, the elderly, Democrats and Jewish voters.

Two-thirds of those polled said Reagan's age does not decrease his ability to handle the duties of the presidency.

The poll found Ferraro's presence on the Democratic ticket represented a net loss of votes to the Democrats. Almost one-third of the likely voters said they were less likely to vote for the Democrats because she is the vice presidential nominee, and only 19 percent said they are more likely to vote Democratic. About half said her presence makes no difference.

Iran breaks quiet in Iran-Iraq war by launching major land offensive

Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Iran said yesterday it had launched a major offensive at the center of the Iran-Iraq war front and killed hundreds of Iraqi troops. But Iraq said it had crushed the attack and killed more than a thousand Iranians.

The new battles were reported after months of relative quiet in the four-year-old war. There was no indication the new fighting signalled the start of Iran's long promised "final offensive," which was widely expected at the southern end of the front during the summer.

Both sides said the battles started Wednesday night along the border about 70 miles northeast of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, and continued yesterday. Iran also reported that it had smashed an Iraqi attack in the south, near the Iranian city of Khorramshahr.

Baghdad radio quoted an Iraqi military communique as saying the latest of the three Iranian assaults along a 12-mile front was "repulsed and crushed" yesterday morning in the central Saif Saad area.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, reported Iranian success both in the advance across the mountains of the central sector and in repulsing the Iraqi attack in the south.

It said Iranian forces "advanced and liberated dozens of square kilometers" of Iranian territory in the center of the front that had been under Iraqi occupation since the war started in 1980. Twenty Iraqi tanks were destroyed and hundreds of dead Iraqi troops had been left on the battlefield.

Iraqi forces that attacked in the south were "repelled by the heavy artillery fire of the Iranian forces, and the enemy was forced to retreat," the news agency said.

Chernenko's interview politically motivated, say Western diplomats

Associated Press

MOSCOW - President Konstantin Chernenko's interview with the Washington Post was his first meeting with a Western journalist, and Western diplomats said Wednesday it appeared timed to influence the U.S. presidential election.

Diplomats, who spoke on condition they not be identified, were unanimous in saying the interview seemed designed to influence Sunday's debate on foreign policy issues between President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale.

Some also said they believe Chernenko hinted at positive changes in superpower relations.

"You can be certain that they (the Soviets) thought exactly about when they would give the interview. You don't get such a thing by chance," one West European diplomat commented.

The interview, which Washington

Post correspondent Dusko Doder conducted on Tuesday, focused on disarmament and superpower relations. Chernenko singled out four major arms control issues and asked the United States to try to reach agreement on at least one.

The West European diplomat said the substance of the interview - asking the United States to make a policy shift in order to get a response from the Soviets - differed little from Soviet statements of the past months.

Yet, he said, the interview contained "a recognition of the need for dialogue" and was "more positive" than negative in tone.

"I think it's quite important," the diplomat said. "Overall, I think it's the beginning point of a process which, as before, will be long and difficult. We just have to wait for the Soviets to shift their position a little."

Other Western diplomats concentrated on the timing of the interview and said it seemed aimed at putting certain issues on the agenda for Sunday's televised debate between Reagan and Mondale. The debate is planned to focus on foreign policy.

Although they saw it as an attempt to influence the presidential election, the diplomats said Chernenko's interview was being carefully studied for substance.

The Soviet reaction to any suggestions the United States has made since Chernenko assumed the leadership post eight months ago has not led to major progress on disarmament.

The United States made a new proposal on banning chemical weapons to the Geneva disarmament conference in April. In June, Reagan offered to discuss the non-use of military force at the Stockholm disarmament conference.

Neither suggestion drew a positive Soviet response.

Transients leave Oregon commune

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. - At least 150 homeless people who had been bused into Oregon from across the nation by followers of an Indian guru were dropped off in downtown Portland on Wednesday night, the largest single exodus from the religious commune.

The latest batch of transients were among more than 1,000 who have decided to leave the commune-city of Rajneeshpuram without money to return to their cities of origin, crowding social service agencies in Portland, The Dalles and Madras.

A spokeswoman for the Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh said the homeless had been taken to the Salvation Army's Harbor Light center in downtown Portland on Wednesday because they wanted to leave Rajneeshpuram, and she denied they were being "dumped" because they were not registered to vote and were no longer of any use in the upcoming election.

"That's absolutely silly - completely ridiculous," she said.

In recent weeks, the commune has come under fire by foes of the Rajneeshes who say they fear the new arrivals could upset the electoral balance among the county's approximately 12,000 registered voters. Rajneeshpuram's population has mushroomed as the community bused in about 2,300 homeless people from cities such as Washington, D.C., New York, Los Angeles, Cincinnati and El Paso, Texas.

Saying he sympathized with those students who are eager to become directly involved in world problems, he said the best thing to do is "to get the best education you can. Learn all you can to prepare yourself and then decide what you're going to do - you can make a difference in life."

Take the time out and have a good break

While watching one of the recent Notre Dame football games, this thought occurred to me: just how much life in the U.S. is scheduled around the concept of time. Hardly a game where seconds do not count (every single break in a football game used for a few quick commercials paid by the second); hardly a ND professor who, seeing that he still has two minutes left, will not start on a new topic. Executives find it time-saving to eat at a restaurant rather than to go shopping and to prepare a meal at home. The time thus saved is used to work more and to earn more money.

When you work with the ND mainframe computer and want to know what time it is you type in (from READY mode) "time," and the computer responds not by saying "about 10 a.m." but rather by something like "9:53:47". When you have an appointment to see someone at 3 p.m. you better be there on time. We all know that joggers love their Walkman - why do your joggers love their listening to music or language tapes at different times when you can do it at the same time? Recently, I noted, someone had the brightest time-saving idea of all: he took some LIFE back issues off the library shelves and deposited them in the men's restroom on 10th floor - why lose any time, why not continue your education while you are attending to some, say, other urgent business? And as I recently discovered to my dismay: when you are in graduate school there's no time to recuperate from sickness. The graduate school simply doesn't allow for people to get sick.

In Europe things are a little more relaxed. There are exceptions, of course: a former professor of mine was said to be fully capable of studying the newspaper's business section, watch a political program on TV and to discuss economic theory with his Ph.D. candidates all at the same time! Time is important in Europe, too. But, generally speaking, not as important as in the U.S. Professors would let their classes go five minutes early rather than commence with a new topic. Commercials are shown at set times rather than at any in-between opportunity. The general trend among workers is to work less for the same money rather than to work more for more money.

I liked Africa best of all - Southern Africa to be precise - where I spent three years living. There you generally would not want to schedule an appointment with someone: you would just go and see if the person you wanted to talk with is available or not. If he was there, the next two hours would be spent talking. If he wasn't there you'd come back the next day, and the next, and the next, and so on. Or sometimes you would meet the person and he'd say "come back tomorrow," which you would (perhaps meeting him, perhaps not). If you happened to meet a friend or a friend's friend at the marketplace or in the bus or just about anywhere else you'd start talking and keep going for as long as you wished. There simply wasn't any time constraint! Oh sure, there was always lots of work to be done, but somehow that didn't qualify as a constraint on your time. If your brother got sick, you would leave your work for a day or two to go and visit him.

If you read your newspaper regularly, you may have noticed that a number of airline representatives recently got together to work out new takeoff and landing schedules for overcrowded airports. They talked about delays of an hour or two that they wanted to tidy up. In Africa you would talk about days of delay and perhaps even using the word "delay" would be inappropriate.

A woman, working in Sudan, once told me she was boarding a bus, scheduled to reach another village in eight hours. As it turned out, the bus took eight days. The Africans on the bus didn't seem to be worried. Trying to organize community meetings was a probing experience for the Western-minded. You would schedule something for next Saturday at 11 a.m. and no one would show up. The following Saturday the same would happen. Then, more by accident than by design, you would be in the same area at anytime on any day and a huge crowd would turn up for a meeting, all eager to get started on a project you wanted to have implemented some two months ago. You want to visit a rural church on Sunday morning at 10 and the worshippers would begin to arrive at 11:30. Why? Probably they just gave you a time because you wanted to have a time at which to come. But how could they be "on time" if they perhaps do not even have watches?

I said before that I liked Africa best of all with respect to time. But I am not quite sure why this is so. I was never able to completely let go of my concept of time since, after all, I was there to help "develop" the area, and time is a very important thing in our notion of "development." But I did let go a little, and I certainly enjoyed it. Somehow life was more fun, more livable, more enjoyable when there wasn't anything I absolutely had to have done by such and such a time.

See, in Africa you certainly could work as much as you wanted to, but you didn't have to. Here in the U.S. it appears that you almost have to. Why? Perhaps because your social status depends so much on how much you get done (in terms of material wealth) in the few years that make up your life. In Africa, social status came from other things - things like age, your family name, how many kids you had, the length of your beard, and so on.

I certainly do not want to suggest that one concept of time - the U.S. American, the European, the African - is superior to any other but I just as certainly wish that all of you here at Notre Dame community take some time out and have a good break!

The future of Grenada remains an uncertainty

Remember Afghanistan? It seems like yesterday, but the Soviets pulled that one almost five years ago. Meanwhile a much more recent invasion is silently celebrating its first anniversary this month.

Who cares about Grenada? Everything that had to be known was written during the days of the invasion: "U.S. vs. Cuba on Caribbean Island of Grenada." - The Washington Post. "(Grenada was) a Soviet-Cuban colony being readied as a major military bastion . . . we got there just in time." - Ronald Reagan. Even "U.S. battled Soviet troops in Grenada." - The New York Post. The intervention was supported by the majority of the Grenadians and applauded by most Americans. So what?

A year ago 7,400 Marines, Rangers and paratroopers backed by an aircraft carrier battle group stormed this island of 30,000 inhabitants and defeated a few dozen "soldiers" who often lacked shoes and shirts, and used WWII weapons. During the invasion a children's hospital was "accidentally" bombed, killing at least 17 Grenadians.

The administration decided to bar reporters from covering the first crucial days of the invasion. News organizations quietly printed handouts from the Pentagon, ignoring the questions raised by the unprecedented government censorship. With such coverage it is easy to understand why the American public sided with the bully that kicked sand into the face of a 95-pound weakling.

For the first time black Marines were put into a combat situation against black nationalists. The experiment was apparently successful. Black nations will never again be excluded from the Pentagon's invasion plans.

Grenada's deposed New Jewel Movement was inspired by late reggae star Bob Marley no less than Karl Marx. Founded in 1973 by Maurice Bishop, the NJM was a mixture of Caribbean populism with the Black Power movement that was sweeping the U.S.A. at the time. Bishop and the NJM overthrew a 28-year old dictatorship headed by the eccentric Eric Gairy, who was best known for his secret police (the "Mongoose Gang"), and his obsession with UFO's. Under Gairy, Grenadians suffered from a 50 percent unemployment rate and a 40 percent dependency on imported food. The NJM coup caused Gairy to flee to San Diego, Ca., where he kept busy preparing a counter-coup. Currently Gairy is back in Grenada.

Maurice Bishop attempted a social revolution based on tourism. He set up an office in Miami, Fla., and licensed an English firm to construct an international airport that could compete with other nearby Caribbean islands. In his two years in office Bishop reduced unemployment to 14 percent and food imports to 28 percent. For the first time in Grenada's history, milk, school lunches, and medical care were free. Emergency sanitary measures instituted by Bishop during the Dengue fever epidemic that swept the Caribbean helped Grenada escape its reach.

But with the Grenadian government's continued involvement with Cuba, with the emergency measures it installed, and with the supposed threat of Cuban MIGs being based in Grenada, the U.S. felt compelled to act.

"The idea of U.S. Marines storming one of the tiniest islands in the Caribbean seems laughable, but not to the Grenadian government, which claims a U.S. invasion is imminent . . . Caribbean Task Force Commander Admiral Robert McKenzie added fuel to the flames by referring to Cuba, Nicaragua, and Grenada as 'practically our country', and saying the U.S. must be prepared to 'interfere where possible and install a government friendly to the way of life we espouse.' - Radio report from The Pacific News Service, Oct. 9, 1984.

After two years of economic, political, and military pressure from the U.S. government, the invasion finally occurred. The American public, having a lot of "pride" to swallow the day after the Marine bombing in Beirut, was more than ready to support the invasion.

But today, one year later, the future of Grenada is uncertain. Free elections cannot take place because the only organized political movement on the island - the NJM - has been deposed. Happy anniversary, Grenada.

An education must last a lifetime

As the days of summer draw to an end, hundreds of thousands of people across this nation, like you and me, head to institutions of higher learning. The quest for a piece of paper "suitable for framing" has both noble and practical consequences. Still, I challenge each of you to ask yourselves the following question: "What was your prime reason for going to college?"

Historically the answers have ranged from it being a great way to avoid the military draft, all the way to it being an easy way to move out of the house and still have someone else to pay for it. There are certainly a multitude of reasons to go to college and there are probably several reasons which have drawn people to places like this.

What I am mainly concerned with, though, are the two reasons which are basic to all of us, so I must once again put the question to you, but in a more specified form: Are you going for an education or a job? I know it is probably a combination of these two reasons and many others, but what was your prime motivating interest, brains or bucks?

I feel that I can say with some degree of certainty that your average aerospace engineer or accounting major faces a higher salary scale and better job prospects than someone who studied English literature or art history. But what of it, is it really so terrible that a person went to college to study engineering or business?

In my mind, no, not if it is something you really want to do. Some people truly enjoy working out the schematics to computer hardware and still others are fascinated by the world of finance. For those people, I wish you much success in your career endeavors. But, for those of you who are banging your heads against the wall studying something you don't like, solely for its job prospects, then I have no sympathy for you when you find out a diploma isn't an immediate ticket to the promised land.

To study a specified field on the college level is not to learn only practical knowledge in a given area, but it is to learn how to analyze a problem and think creatively. I remember an old line which says, "If you are an arts and letters major and your roommate is an engineer, fear not, you'll get a job someday, but he'll be boring forever." While I can't agree with this statement wholeheartedly, I must admit that we will all get jobs eventually, maybe with different pay scales and opportunities for advancement, but we will all find gainful employment.

The point I am trying to make is the following: Study what you enjoy and find interesting, not what you think will get you a job. Too many people spend four years (or more) studying something they hate only to find there isn't a pot of gold waiting for them immediately at the end of the rainbow. There is a lot to be said for pursuing a "liberal education." While mechanical engineers may design bridges and physicists may help send men into outer space, the humanities give us beauty, art, music, etc. and they help us to better understand ourselves in philosophy and the social sciences.

So the next time someone says that they are only in a certain field for the financial rewards, be quick and remind them that money and jobs may come and go, but an education must last a lifetime.

P.O.Box Q

I was once proud to be a Domer

Dear Editor:

I was once proud to be a Domer.

Now I'm not so sure, thanks to the total lack of class shown by certain elements of the student body at the Air Force football game. Despite the accusations of our sports editor, our team and its coaches have tried their hardest to win every football game. Should we fault them just because they haven't brought home a national championship in seven years?

Apparently, some students think so. They booed for much of the second half and also as the team was leaving the field. This is a "spoiled brat" attitude. Many schools would be happy to be 500, especially with the tough schedule played by Notre Dame.

Listen to the players. They are proud to be here, no matter what the record. They have gone all out, every game. It is sad to see that some of our students do not have as much class.

Reeling Irish take on undefeated Gamecocks

ND must stop veer in order to break two-game losing streak

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

The Gamecocks of South Carolina are the next team to invade Notre Dame Stadium, and they will be trying to extend their five-game winning streak over a team that has seen its brighter moments reduced to only a dim glimmer of hope that the tide will turn around. Notre Dame is in the midst of a two-game slide at home. The last time the Irish lost three games in a row in Notre Dame Stadium was in 1960 under Joe Kuharich, when the Irish lost four in a row and finished 2-8 for the season.

South Carolina is in its second year of rebuilding under head coach Jim Morrison. The team did not have a lot of experience last season, as the Gamecock roster was packed with underclassmen. Last year the Irish travelled down to Columbia, S.C., and handed the Gamecocks a 30-6 defeat. But this year, the South Carolina players have come back and appear to be using last season as a building block towards their 5-0 record.

"I think last year's outcome will help us in this game. We got so far behind in the first half that we were playing catch-up after Notre Dame's first five possessions," says Morrison. "The second half was an improvement, however. I think last year's outcome will help us in this game."

So far this season, the Gamecocks have beaten Georgia and Pittsburgh, and are well-deserving of their 11th-place national ranking. Even though it is already halfway through the season, however, South Carolina will be playing its first game away from home.

"I'm not concerned about playing away from Columbia," offers Morrison. "I think sometimes you play a little better on the road than you do at home."

If you happen to be on the other side of the fence, though, it is hard not to notice that the two consecutive losses have devastated the morale of the fans and caused the Notre Dame players to lose at least a little confidence in their own talents and in the abilities of the coaches.

"We are playing a team with a lot of momentum and we don't have that," says Irish head coach Gerry Faust. "But that doesn't mean that things won't change."

Another thing that remains the same for Notre Dame this week is that it must overcome some key injuries in order to perform well on Saturday.

South Carolina's offense against Notre Dame's defense:

The Irish will have another chance this Saturday to prove themselves against an option offense after the Air Force destroyed Notre Dame with its wishbone attack last week as the Gamecocks will bring with them their veer offense.

Morrison has used this offensive formation to become the successful coach that he is and has the talent at South Carolina this season to run it very effectively. Carolina is eighth in the nation in scoring with an average of 32.6 points per game and 12th in total offense with 425 yards per outing. The Gamecocks have an incredible amount of depth in the offensive backfield and have been able to utilize a lot of players, keeping fresh people on the field at all times.

Allen Mitchell

Morrison has had success using a dual-quarterback system, doubling the effectiveness of juniors Allen Mitchell and Mike Hold. This will be the second time this season that the Irish will have faced the problem of the opponent having two good signal-callers to choose from. Notre Dame was able to contain Missouri's combination of Marlon Adler and Warren Seitz in its last victory.

Mitchell is the starter, and has proven that he can run as well as throw. The 6-0, 175-pounder has completed 37 of 65 passes for 559 yards and five touchdowns, while giving up only four interceptions. He poses a threat to run with the football also. He has accumulated 209 rushing yards, but his actual figure is less because of yardage lost in quarterback sacks.

Hold has performed well in a backup role. Although he throws less frequently, he is still a threat running with the ball. Hold has connected on 14 of 20 passes for just under 300 yards, well over 20 yards per completion. At 5-11, 195 pounds, Hold is well-suited to run the football and has gained six yards a carry, again neglecting yardage lost via sacks.

South Carolina has a quartet of running backs to choose from when running the veer option, and has balanced the number of times each one carries the ball very well.

The top two rushers from '83 return, juniors Thomas Dendy and Kent Hagood, but are only in second and fourth positions in rushing yardage this season although they have over 1,700 and 1,200 career rushing yards, respectively. Hagood has 236 yards (6.9 yards per carry average) and Dendy has rushed for 186 yards (6.2 average). Both are compact, but possess strength as well as speed.

Even though injuries in the beginning of the season got both Dendy and Hagood off to a slow start, the Carolina running offense did not suffer. Quinton Lewis and Raynard Brown capably filled the voids, and now are the number one and three ground-gainers for the team. Lewis, at 6-0, 198 pounds, is not an overpowering runner, but has picked up 316 yards and has an impressive 7.3 average. Brown has contributed 199 yards (5.1 average).

Although South Carolina has not passed a lot so far this season, when it does it rolls up yardage in huge tracts. The main target for Mitchell and Hold is senior flanker Ira Hillary. Hillary led Carolina with 30 receptions in 1983 and has 12 catches so far this year.

Injury-plagued Mike Larkin finally will get his chance to take field once again

By JERRY MELIA
Sports Writer

Many things haven't gone right for the Notre Dame football team the last two weeks. Not only did it lose important games to both Miami and Air Force, but the team also has lost many key players in starting positions because of injuries.

Although the Irish have many starters and other important players on the injury list, there is one player returning from the disabled list who could turn this team around both in the physical and the psychological sense. This athlete is Mike Larkin.

Larkin, a 6-1, 221-pound senior, will return to the lineup for the first time since the conclusion of the 1982 season. Two major injuries have kept him out for the last year-and-a-half. He did not play a single minute last season because he broke his arm during preseason drills. The unfortunate coincidence about this injury was that he broke it in exactly the same place he did just prior to the end of the 1983 spring drills. He will receive an extra year of eligibility because of the injury.

The Cincinnati native is one of four current Notre Dame players to play under Gerry Faust at Moeller High School. The others are Mark Brooks, Hiawatha Francisco, and John Askin. Larkin, like his team, had a very successful career while he attended Moeller. His individual honors include being a consensus prep all-American after being mentioned in the Parade, Adidas, National High School Athletic Association, and Catholic All-America squads. Larkin was also a three-year starter at the linebacker position where he earned all-city, all-state, and all-Greater Cincinnati League recognition. His efforts also helped the Crusaders to unbeaten seasons and state titles in his junior and senior years.

Obviously, this American Studies major holds fond memories of his high school years. "At Moeller we never worried about winning or losing," says Larkin. "It was taken for granted."

Larkin came to Notre Dame the same year as Faust with similar ideas of success. However, these hopes have not materialized as yet.

In his freshman season, Larkin played in all twelve games while seeing a great deal of time in the latter part of the year. He played mostly behind Mark Zavagnin at weakside linebacker during the 1981 campaign.

In 1982, the Howard Hall resident had a great

The Builder of Programs

SC's Morrison has turned around Gamecocks

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

Joe Morrison's coaching career has thus far mirrored the success he enjoyed playing professional football for the New York Giants. He thought he would give it a shot, but who would have ever dreamed that it would turn out this well?

Morrison, in his second year as head coach at South Carolina, is a no-nonsense type of person who goes about his business in a quiet, professional manner. In his first year, he went about the business of turning the Gamecock football program into a winner. His youthful team, faced with the second-toughest schedule in the country, finished with a respectable 5-6 record.

But this year has been the season that many South Carolina football fans have been waiting for. The Gamecocks have won their first five games, providing another example of Morrison's ability to turn a team's fortunes around. Carolina was 4-7 in 1982 before Morrison appeared on the scene.

The 14-year veteran of the Giants earned the nickname "Old Dependable" in his days as a tight end, but also deserves it for his won-loss record in his young career as a head coach.

Morrison began his coaching career at Tennessee-Chattanooga in 1973. After two straight 4-7 campaigns and a 5-5-1 slate the following year, Morrison guided UT-Chattanooga to a 31-10-3 record over the next four years, including two nine-victory seasons.

In 1980, he was challenged again to put a program back on its feet — this time New Mexico's. His first two seasons at UNM ended with identical 4-7 records. But, in his third year in Albuquerque, the Lobos enjoyed an outstanding 10-1 record — capping an incredible turn-around.

"The job that Coach Morrison accomplished at New Mexico was recognized by football people all over the country as truly outstanding," says Gamecock athletic director Bob Marcum. "Joe Morrison has proven himself as a head coach — he's a winner."

Morrison knows how to turn a team around. While he will say that there is no secret formula to guarantee success, those who have been associated with him during his three head coaching jobs attribute a lot of the good results to his coaching knowledge and the positive attitude that he passes down to his players.

Frank Sadler is entering his sixth year as an offensive coordinator under Morrison. Sadler spent three years with Morrison at Tennessee-Chattanooga and stayed there for two more years before rejoining Morrison at New Mexico for one season. When Morrison switched to South Carolina, he brought Sadler and four other assistants with him for his third college football rescue effort. "Coach Morrison has taken teams from their lowest point and turned them completely around," says Sadler. "New Mexico was coming off of that big scandal (many coaches and athletic officials were fired because of payoffs to basketball players) and the young people just got tired of losing. They had the right attitude to turn things around."

"We would have liked to turn the program around here the first year," Sadler continues. "But some injuries prohibited us from doing that. This season, the kids have responded well, and we're 5-0."

Even though Morrison has seen such good results at South Carolina, few people expected the Gamecocks to have an outstanding season so soon after the rebuilding started. "I'm not sure how we turned it around," Morrison says modestly. "The team has experienced and devoted football players. The players have had a lot to do with it."

What is even more impressive about his accomplishments at South Carolina is that he has done it with essentially the same players that went things before the season. We're very happy to be where we are."

A lot of his successes have come about because he has used an offense that he knows very well and has found the right coaches and players to coach and execute it. "We've run the veer offense for nine years now," Morrison explains. "It's a very tough offense to attack defensively and gives you a better passing dimension than the wishbone, but is similar in concept."

Morrison is slow to accept some of the credit he deserves for his accomplishments, but Sadler, a close associate of Morrison, knows the man's value to rebuilding a program. "There are three things about Coach Morrison that I have noticed since I've known him that make him successful," says Sadler. "First, he knows how to interview assistant coaches and which ones are going to be right for his staff. Second, he is intelligent himself, so he knows what kinds of things in the game of football are successful. Third, he's a great administrator. He lets good coaches do the coaching and he handles the team at team meetings."

"He is very thorough in his preparation, knows what he wants to do, and goes out and does it. He rarely makes mistakes. But if he does, he'll take it and learn from it. He doesn't make the same mistakes twice."

A mistake Morrison will never make is to under-emphasize the team concept. "Most of the men are now used to doing things the way we do them after being here for more than a year," Morrison says. "We want them to be able to work together under our system and for them to recognize the importance of working together."

"Being a professional player gives you insights to attitude and how players will react to certain things you might try," he expands. "I think I've used that knowledge to get to our players."

Morrison has the insights and the knowledge to explain his success in college football coaching. Some of the things he does can already be seen appearing at other universities. But whatever techniques Morrison uses deserve to be examined. After all, it is difficult to find fault with his success.

4-7 two seasons ago. While Mike White has built a team at Illinois with a flood of junior college transfers, Morrison has brought in only two: quarterback Mike Hold and substitute free safety Rick Rabune.

"We're doing essentially the same kind of things as coaches," Morrison states. "Our coaches try to follow the guidelines that have been successful in the past. In no way did we ever envision being 5-0 at this point, but we, as coaches, don't look at those averaging nearly 22 yards per grab. Hillary has outstanding speed and has burned more than his share of defensive backs in his career. His longest reception this year was a 62-yarder.

Junior split end Eric Poole has seven receptions and also averages 22 yards per catch. The tight end is Chris Corley, a hulk-like 6-3, 252-pound senior. Corley has made only six catches this year, but has to be respected for his size and ability to run after catching the ball. Morrison has not thrown to his running backs very much yet this year, but indicated that he might try it more often if the Irish defense can stop the run.

One of the major strengths of the South Carolina offense, according to Morrison is having an all-senior offensive line. The Gamecocks are big up front, but also have decent speed, making their linemen well-equipped to block for the veer.

Four starters return from 1983, with only senior Tom Garner at center new to the lineup. Carl Womble and Bill Barnhill return at the tackle positions and guards Jim Walsh and Del Wilkes are also back. The success Carolina has had on the ground this season, averaging 246 yards per game, has been a result of the blocking and execution of the offensive line.

"Offensively, they present a lot of problems to you," Faust says of the multi-threat attack of South Carolina. "They're also playing with a lot of enthusiasm, a lot of intensity, and they've got a lot of momentum going."

As if Notre Dame did not have enough problems already, a significant portion of the Irish defense is keeping the sports medicine staff very busy. Strong safety Joe Johnson is listed as doubtful with an ankle sprain sustained in the Air Force game. Add to that the loss of free safety Steve Lawrence, who suffered a bruised shoulder against Miami, and the Notre Dame secondary will be a little thin. Hiawatha Francisco will probably play, but is not expected to be at full speed.

"Anytime you're up against a big, strong football team, you're going to have to put the ball in the air a little more," Morrison says, seemingly noticing the weakness in the Irish defense.

Also expected to be out are cornerback Mike Haywood and tackle Eric Dorsey. Tony Furjanic's knee may not be healed before the season ends, but Mike Larkin will have the chance to play for the first time this season after straining knee ligaments before the season.

Notre Dame's offense against South Carolina's defense: In the past three weeks, the Irish offensive unit has moved no faster than molasses, and has scored at a lethargic one-touchdown-per-game rate.

At least part of the problem will be addressed this week, as quarterback Steve Beuerlein will return to the starting lineup after sitting out the Air Force game with a shoulder problem.

In the past few games, Notre Dame has been stuck with completing the short passes, while the deep threat has been combatted well by opposing secondaries. Look for Joe Howard and season. He finished second among all Irish players with a total of 110 tackles, only three behind leader Zavagnin, while starting in every game. He also led the team in tackles for losses with 13. This ability to trap the opposition behind the line of scrimmage is attributed to his quickness and capability of reading an offense.

The entire 1983 season and the first half of this one have been very frustrating for Larkin. It has been a time period plagued with injury on top of injury. A broken forearm caused his absence during the '83 campaign, and a knee injury prevented him from participating in the first six games this year. The latest injury occurred during fall practice exactly one year and a day after his previous injury. It was a freak accident on a practice day where the players weren't supposed to hit hard. Larkin pulled the running back over his leg and it twisted in such a way to cause torn ligaments in his knee.

Larkin admits that his knee has not yet fully recovered. "I don't have full movement yet," he says. "My north to south motion is good, but when I move laterally, it bothers me." To protect the injury from re-occurring, Larkin has been wearing a double brace. "It's sturdy and doesn't allow much movement."

The coaches are going to work the hard-hitting linebacker back into the system gradually. Larkin, himself, doesn't feel that he deserves to come right in and start because John McCabe has been doing a good job. "Although he (Larkin) has been a great player for us in the past," says Faust, "he must prove himself and earn his spot back."

Whether he starts or not, Larkin can hardly wait to get back out on the field again. "I am ready to give it my all," says Larkin, "I have been cheerleading for too long."

This potentially dominant player on the defense isn't the only one pleased with his return. "Just having him back is a great boost," says Faust, "he is a leader, a competitor, and an inspirator."

Now that Larkin is back on the field, he wants to do all he can to help the team. He has his sights on South Carolina in particular. The Gamecocks come to Notre Dame Stadium Saturday boasting a 5-0 record. They are a team that has a well-balanced attack as they use both the run and pass effectively. "To shut them (South Carolina) down, we must stop their quarterback," says Larkin, "It's going to be tough, but I think we can do it."

This week has been a rather eventful week for the Irish football team. The team been working hard to find and solve the problems that have hurt it in recent weeks, but, at least, with Larkin's return, there is some good news.

Senior fullback takes events in stride

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

It is said that adversity builds character. If this is true, then any athlete that plays for Notre Dame should expect to build some character after four years. Simply by donning a Notre Dame uniform, an athlete is taking on the challenge of representing the university for football, and with this task comes an awful lot of pressure. But one competitor who has taken this challenge and done well is senior fullback Chris Smith. "There is a lot of pressure at this place," says Smith. "Once opponents see those gold helmets, they get just as charged up as we are wearing them. They want to upset Notre Dame."

Smith, a 6-2, 231-pound Cincinnati, Ohio, native, is one Ohio football player who did not attend that famed high school. Rather, he played out his high school career at a rival institution, LaSalle High School. "It wasn't an intense rivalry, but we were overshadowed by Moeller," recalls Smith. "My freshman, sophomore and junior years, we never beat them on the varsity level. Finally, my senior year, we felt a little more optimistic. We had beaten their seniors a few years earlier in junior high play. But I guess it just wasn't to be. We lost again. In fact, in the history of my school, we had never beaten Moeller. So when Coach Faust went to Notre Dame and recruited me, I thought, if I can't beat him, I'll join him."

Smith completed his senior year as a consensus prep all-America choice following mention on Parade and Adidas/Scholastic Coach. A three-time letter-winner at running back, Smith totaled 2,110 career rushing yards at LaSalle and was named captain of an all-Greater Cincinnati League squad as a senior. But Smith was not satisfied. He set high goals for himself upon entering Notre Dame as a freshman. "When I came to Notre Dame, I wanted to contribute to the team as much as possible," explains Smith. "In fact, I wanted to letter. And I felt it was within reach for me."

As extra incentive toward accomplishing this goal, Smith was rooming with fellow Ohio native and rival fullback, Mark Brooks. "Mark is like a brother to me," Smith says. "So it was a little hard to be so competitive with him. We had our few, rare occasions that were trying, but nothing real serious. In fact, the competition really helped us in a way. The better he got, the more I was pushed, and vice versa, both on and off the field."

In the 1981 season opener against Louisiana State, Smith came out strong, gaining 61 yards on eight carries. He continued to contribute, playing in eight games as a freshman and finishing fourth in rushing with 161 yards and one touchdown. Smith didn't letter at the fullback position, though. Instead, he made his contribution at the tailback slot. But after the successful rookie campaign, a new kid arrived on the block by the name of Allen Pinkett, and some position juggling was required. The coaches knew the athletic ability and potential of Smith, and felt a talent like his didn't belong on the bench.

Smith was tried with the linebacking corps at the beginning of the 1982 season. But despite his hard work and dedication, it was decided that linebacker was not the position where Smith's talent would be best utilized. So midway through the season, Smith found himself back at the more comfortable position of fullback. Because of all the movement, his sophomore year was not the most productive statistically. But he kept plugging away.

By 1983, it seemed as if Smith was settled in at fullback, as he split playing time with Brooks. But the '83 offense wasn't geared all that much toward Smith. "It was very frustrating not to be used more in the season," Smith recalls. "Our offense just wasn't geared for incorporating the fullback frequently. I knew what I could do to help the team and I just wanted to go out there and do it. It was really an incentive, though, to play with an Allen Pinkett. It inspired me to watch him because I realized, here was a talented runner who has accomplished so much. He got where he is today because of hard work and team work. He needs the linemen and the backs to do what he does, so I feel that I am some small part of his success, too."

A bruising runner and blocker, Smith carried more than his share of responsibility for the Irish in '83. He racked up 421 yards on 77 carries while starting 11 games. But Smith's time to shine came in post-season action when the Irish took on Boston College in the Liberty Bowl. He carried the ball 18 times for 104 yards, his best game as a collegian. Many eyes stood up and took notice of this new force emerging from the backfield... especially the coaches. "I think the Liberty Bowl opened the coaches' eyes more to see how my position could be better utilized," says Smith. "Now their philosophy is to get the fullback into the scheme of things and integrate the position into the offense. You won't hear any complaints from me about that."

And if Smith continues to produce, you certainly won't hear any complaints from Irish fans either. But when the negative comments do flow, Smith can understand why. "Whether it's deserved or not, the fans will comment," Smith says. "When we win, we get credit for the win. When we lose, we should get credit for the loss. And I think the team has matured because of it. I feel I have in my four years. Our maturity and growth, however, isn't measured in the tangles, in the win-loss column. But it's there."

... Gamecocks

Milt Jackson to utilize the deep patterns more on Saturday as Carolina has had difficulty defending against the bomb.

The other major stumbling block for the offense has been the absence of the running game. The holes just have not been there for Allen Pinkett and company. Notre Dame will have to solve those problems or resort to opening up the ground game by being more successful with the passing game.

"I wish I knew what the answer is as far as why our running game has had such difficulty," says Faust. "We're just not controlling the line of scrimmage at all."

The injury list for the Irish on offense is less extensive than it has been recently, with Larry Williams finally back to full strength after suffering various knee and ankle ailments. Alonzo Jefferson is also slated to play after missing the Air Force game with a foot injury.

South Carolina will counter with its reknown "Fire Ant" defense, named because of its all-out, swarming style of play. So far this season, the Gamecocks have allowed only 112 yards per game on the ground and just 268 total yards per game.

"South Carolina is as impressive as anyone we've seen on defense," says Faust. "They're a lot like Miami in terms of their team speed and their ability to have people around all the time. They pursue well and make it tough to move the football."

The Carolina secondary is a veteran group, with three players returning with considerable experience, and two sophomores who have been impressive so far this season. Bryant Gilliard, a senior free safety, leads the secondary with 44 tackles and two interceptions. Sophomores Chris Major and Otis Morris will get the starting nods at the cornerback positions, even though seniors Gilliard and Hilton Tayloe started in those spots last season. Joe Brooks, another sophomore, gets the nod a strong safety.

The Gamecock linebacking corps is also a strength of the defense, with seniors Paul Vogel and James Seawright leading the team in tackles. Vogel has 49 tackles and six stops for lost yardage, while Seawright adds 47. The weakside linebacker position is filled by freshman Carl Hill.

Maybe the biggest weakness of the South Carolina defense is in its line positions. "We have a small defensive line," says Morrison.

"We hope we will be able to contain Notre Dame's size."

Carolina's defensive ends are small, but have been able to handle anything they have confronted so far this season. Tony Guyton, a 6-0, 210-pound junior, and sophomore Willie McIntee, at 6-2, 222 pounds, are major reasons for the low rushing figures for Gamecock opponents.

The balance of the defensive line has some experience, with tackles Frank Wright and Glenn Woodley having respectable size and returning as starters. Backup Fitzgerald Davis leads the team in stops for lost yardage with seven.

The kicking game and specialty teams:

The Gamecocks lost career record-holding kicker Mark Fleetwood after last season. Fleetwood was 39-of-53 in field goals in his career. Sophomore Scott Hagler has taken his place, but has connected on only three-of-five attempts, (one-of-three over 40 yards), but has proved to be solid in the extra-point department, hitting on all 22 of his attempts.

Junior Tom O'Connor handles the punting duties for South Carolina, averaging 41.4 yards per effort. O'Connor is also replacing a record-setter in Chris Norman, who holds the single-season punting record.

Returning punts will be sophomore Terry Dunlap, who is averaging 9.6 yards per return. The team as a whole is rated 18th in the country with a 9.5 average.

Probably the most consistent part of the Notre Dame football squad has been the punting and placekicking. Mike Viracola, although he had a sub-par performance last week, is averaging 40.3 yards per boot. John Carney, although the offense has not been getting the ball within his field-goal range, has come through on all six of his field goal tries and 13 PAT's.

Keys to the game:

It is no secret that Notre Dame is not at an emotional peak at this point in the season, and a loss to South Carolina would seemingly doom the Irish to feelings of despair.

There is no doubt that Notre Dame should be able to stay in the game, and could pull it out if some breaks go its way. The Irish have to regain its composure and a win would do that.

"This is a good football team that will be out to prove something after losing their last two games at home," states Morrison. "We don't have a whole lot to say whether Notre Dame losing two games in a row is going to work for or against them. That will be up to them."

Faust is calling Saturday's game "a chance for redemption." He may be right. There is no reason why his team should be stagnating on a losing trend.

Notre Dame still has five games left in the season, and now is no time to give up on this team. However, the Irish need a win, and they need one badly. A victory over the Gamecocks would be as good as gold for Notre Dame fortunes.

Sherry fired as San Diego pitching coach

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Norm Sherry, a seven-year colleague of Dick Williams, was fired as San Diego's pitching coach because of "conflicts" between him and members of the staff, General Manager Jack McKeon said yesterday.

Sherry had confirmed his dismissal Wednesday night, three days after the Padres lost the final game of the World Series to Detroit. He said he'd been offered a job coaching for the Padres at the minor league level.

"It was a shock to me," Sherry told the San Diego Union. "When you win, you never expect something like that."

McNamara named Bosox new skipper

Associated Press

BOSTON - John McNamara, who rejected an offer to continue as manager of the California Angels, was named yesterday as manager of the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox made the hiring official at a news conference 10 days after McNamara met with Haywood Sullivan, Boston's co-owner and chief operating officer, and General Manager Lou Gorman.

McNamara reportedly will be paid $150,000 a year, the same salary Ralph Houk received for four seasons before he decided to retire three weeks ago.

McNamara, 52, and the Red Sox executives met after he rejected a California offer to remain as field boss. He took over as pilot of the Angels in 1983 after being fired by the Cincinnati Reds during the previous season.

The friendship between McNamara and Sullivan goes back to their days with the Kansas City A's, then owned by Charlie Finley, in the early 1960s.

When Don Zimmer was fired in 1980 season, McNamara was considered a leading candidate for manager in Boston. However, Houk, bored by two years in retirement, wanted to return to baseball and signed with the Red Sox.

McNamara, a journeyman catcher in the minor leagues, became a manager at the age of 26 in 1959. He has managed in the major leagues for 10 full seasons and parts of three others. He also has coached for the Oakland A's, the San Francisco Giants and the Angels.

Tom Newell scored a unanimous decision over Steve Hillsman last night at the ACC, as the Notre Dame Boxing Club had the finals of its novice tournament. Fighters competed in seven different weight classes, from lightweight to heavyweight. Complete results are at left.

Edges Howser by one point

Anderson named top AL manager

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Sparky Anderson, who guided the Detroit Tigers to the best record in their history and a World Series championship, has been voted the American League's Manager of the Year by one point over Dick Howser of Kansas City, it was announced yesterday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Anderson received 13 of 28 first-place votes and a total of 96 points. Howser, who led the Royals to the AL west title, got 11 first-place votes and finished with 95 points.

Billy Gardner of Minnesota got the other four first-place votes and finished third with 48 points. The balloting was done by two writers from each AL city and scored on a 5-3-1 basis. The voting was conducted prior to the playoffs and World Series.

Detroit rushed to a 35-5 start, the best in major-league history, and became only the third team in history to be in first place every day of the season. The Tigers never were seriously challenged after their quick start and went to finish with a 104-58 record in winning their first AL east title since 1972.

Anderson became the first manager to win World Championships in both leagues when his Tigers swept the Royals in the AL playoffs, then beat the San Diego Padres in five games in the World Series. Anderson guided the Cincinnati Reds of the National League to World Championships in 1975 and 1976.

Hagler set to fight Hamsho tonight in NY

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Marvelous Marvin Hagler will fight for the first time in Madison Square Garden, where most of the great middleweight champions have displayed their skills, when he defends against Mustafa Hamsho tonight.

The bout is scheduled for 15 rounds, but most boxing observers feel Hagler will win inside the distance, as he did when he stopped Hamsho in the 11th round of a title defense Oct. 31, 1981, at Rosemont, Ill.

If it should go the limit, at least one of the three judges making the decision will be a woman.

John Branca, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, which is running the fight with the World Boxing Association, said it was possible Eva Shain and Carol Castellano of New York and Carol Polis of Philadelphia would judge the fight.

It is expected that one of the women will judge the middleweight fight and the other two will work the McCallum-Mannion bout.

The Saint Mary's Volleyball team has received veteran leadership this season from senior co-captain Ann Boutton, shown here demonstrating her flair for net play in a recent Belles's victory.

The Observer/Vic Guarino

fense into their play since the arrival of Goralski.

"He's a great coach to play for," adds Boutton, and he has taught me a lot about the game."

Goralski is pleased with Boutton's accomplishments also.

"In the last few years she has improved a lot," says the Saint Mary's coach. "She is a really aggressive player, who always tries extra hard."

Being named one of this year's co-captains along with senior Molly Baker, has brought on additional responsibility for the Brecksville, Ohio native.

"As captain I try to bring the players to work as a team," says Boutton. "Unlike years past there is no one player that stands out more than anyone else. All the players have to be strong at every position."

"She is definitely a team leader," says Goralski. "The girls looked up to her through the year and she has done a great job in motivation. When things get down out on the court she keeps pushing herself and her teammates to play harder."

Freshman Anne Williard agrees with Goralski's observation.

"She's a big motivator and a great player," says Williard.

Along with Williard, freshman

Erin Smith credits Boutton for being very supportive of the whole team and for giving Smith the encouragement and confidence she needed as an incoming freshman.

Boutton, a graduate of Holy Name High School in Ohio, where she earned the Athlete of the Year and Most Valuable Player awards along with being named MVP of the Cleveland Catholic Conference, remembers what it was like to make the transition from high school to college ball and has been trying to make it easier for the freshman.

She noted that in high school, volleyball is more a central part of the player's life. At Saint Mary's, studies are more demanding, there is less fan support, there is traveling, and there are always other extra-curriculars one might be involved in.

Boutton seems to have handled the student-athlete role rather well. The twenty-one year old accounting major carries a 3.4 grade-point average while serving as the college's Athletic Commissioner.

When looking at colleges, volleyball did enter into her decision.

"I wanted to go to a school in order to receive a quality education and have an opportunity to play," reflects Boutton.

Saint Mary's does not give athletic scholarships, and Boutton sees the positive side of that situation.

"You are playing out of your own choice," says Boutton, "and all the other girls are too, or they wouldn't be out there."

Although she only stands 5-6, Boutton likes the middle blocker position, despite the fact that it inevitably puts her up against taller players on the other side of the net.

"The middle blocker position is what I enjoy most about the game," says Boutton. "It's a challenge."

Her coach also has confidence in her at this position.

"She is not intimidated at all," says Goralski.

Even though she is a versatile player in every aspect of the sport, namely, serving, setting, blocking and passing, Boutton feels hitting is the strongest point of her game. And she won't find too many people to disagree with her, especially her opponents.

Though she has rightly earned all of her achievements, Boutton is quick to point to all those who have been behind her.

"Without the support of my family and friends I might not have had the opportunity to attend Saint Mary's and play volleyball," Boutton notes. "Their understanding of the time and commitment it takes to be a student athlete has been great."

Boutton is now looking forward to a good finish to the 1984 campaign. The Belles are gearing up for a key match against Marion after fall break and then are hoping for a successful showing in the District tournament.

"I'm hoping the team really comes together in District," comments the 1983 all-district nominee and Saint Mary's MVP award winner.

Although it's been a career of adjustments, Boutton says she would do it all again because she has enjoyed it so much.

"I'm glad I had the opportunity to play for four years," says Boutton. "It has taught me a lot about myself and has helped me to realize my fullest potential."

Boutton sees that she won't have another chance to prove herself athletically, and is grateful for all Saint Mary's has done for her.

"It's an experience that I would have never given up," says Boutton. "I love the game, the competition and knowing I'm in shape."

The team has enjoyed her play just as much.

Plays four conference matches

Volleyball team plans busy break

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

Everyone is looking forward to next week as a time to sit back, relax and forget the pressures of Notre Dame life - everyone except the Notre Dame volleyball team.

Starting tomorrow night, the Irish travel to Butler University for the first of four important North Star Conference matches slated for October Break. On Tuesday, Notre Dame visits Evansville, Ind., to face an aggressive team from the University of Evansville. Then the Irish return home to host the University of Dayton and Xavier University in the main arena of the ACC over the weekend.

"It's going to be a long weekend for us, and we'll have to play one match at a time," says Assistant Coach Renee DeGraff. "We can't expect to walk over any of these teams because they're all good."

Notre Dame's 3-1 conference record gives the team a strong foothold in the conference, but the Irish must win all of next week's matches if they want to keep their chances for top seeding in November's Conference Championship Tournament alive.

"The girls are ready for next week," says DeGraff. "They feel they've got to get the conference title and they know what to do to get it."

DeGraff believes the Irish will play to their potential and combine the finesse displayed in previous matches.

"We've plateaued since Saint Francis (of Illinois) and we've been unable to improve," DeGraff noted. "We're up for the conference matches but not others. We need to strike a balance."

On Wednesday, the Irish saw their season record slip to 7-9 after dropping their second match of the season to the Purdue Boilermakers, 15-3, 15-7, and 15-6. The team was hoping to avenge an embarrassing 15-12, 15-6, 15-8 loss to the Boilermakers in the season opener.

"It's disappointing because we could have taken them in five games if we'd put it all together," says DeGraff. "We scored more against them in the season opener."

Mental errors marred Notre Dame's performance on Wednesday, preventing the team from playing to its ability. Although the Boilermakers are a tall squad, they lack speed and Notre Dame's tenativeness at the net kept the Boilermakers on the offensive.

Notre Dame's defense did not react effectively to Purdue's offensive push.

The Irish jumped out to a 3-0 lead against the Boilermakers in the first game, but Notre Dame's concentration was broken when an Irish player was caught off the court during a crucial play. The Irish failed to recapture its early momentum and fell to Purdue, 15-3.

Notre Dame was down 13-4 during the third game when the team started to rebound. Two official time-outs helped the Irish regain their concentration and the team capitalized on the delays to win two more points.

"They were good delays," said DeGraff. "But you can't start rallying that late. It should have come a lot sooner."

Midterms were a crucial factor in Wednesday's match and handicapped the Irish against the nationally-ranked Boilermakers.

Everything was there except the concentration," said DeGraff. "They forgot to close the books before they walked onto the court."

With midterms and other campus distractions removed next week, the Irish should be able to devote all of their energy to the week's conference matches.

USFL finds evidence of NFL scandal

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The lawyer for the United States Football League, which has filed a $1.32 billion antitrust suit against the rival National Football League, said yesterday it has evidence of a secret NFL committee set up to put the USFL out of business.

The charge, contained in section 40 of the USFL's 39-page complaint against the NFL, was expanded upon during a news conference by Roy Cohn, who filed the suit on behalf of the league Wednesday in federal court in New York City.

It alleges that the NFL formed a committee of club owners and other officers "to recommend means of inhibiting competition by the USFL as a competitive league in major league professional football."

Cohn didn't specify who was on the NFL committee or what exactly it had done to inhibit competition by the USFL, but he did intimate his knowledge came from inside information.

"Obviously, the information was supplied to us and obviously, when they created this USFL committee, they did not create it for the purpose of going over the airwaves or into newsprint," he said.

"They didn't expect anybody to know about it. We allege it was done in a clandestine manner."

NFL spokesman Joe Browne denied that any such committee exists. He said that after the league meetings in Hawaii last March, a long-range planning committee was formed to "deal with the many issues that confront us down the road."

The members of that committee include the presidents of the two conferences - Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants and Lamar Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs. The other members are Mike McCaskey, president of the Chicago Bears and three general managers - Russ Thomas of the Detroit Lions, Bobby Beathard of the Washington Redskins and Mike Lynn of the Minnesota Vikings.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, named as a defendant, called the suit "baseless" and "transparent."

Irish cross-country team competes in Indiana Intercollegiate today

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The undefeated Notre Dame cross-country team faces its toughest competition of the year when it hosts the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet today at the Burke Memorial Golf Course. The five-mile race begins at 4:00 P.M.

Notre Dame is ranked 16th in the country by the national poll of cross-country coaches. The Irish gained this national recognition on the basis of their convincing wins this year: a season-opening five-team meet, whose field included 17th-ranked Northwestern, the National Catholic Meet, and the prestigious Notre Dame Invitational, over 19th-ranked Michigan.

The Irish will have to continue to run well in order to defeat the 22 other teams entered in the meet. The main challengers to Notre Dame, which has not won this meet since 1967, will come from Purdue and Indiana.

Purdue is ranked 13th in the coaches' poll. The Boilermakers would like to continue their dominance in the Indiana State Meet, which they have won the last three years.

According to Irish head coach Joe Piane, Purdue will bring another fine team this year to defend their title.

"They are a very good team," says

Piane. "They are led by Jim Nagle, an excellent runner from South Bend, and Chris Novak, who is also a fine runner."

Indiana could also provide stiff competition for the Irish. While they are not ranked in the national polls, they are expected to have a strong team.

"Indiana has a dynamite squad," Piane says. "Terry Brahn has run a 3:54 mile, a Big Ten record. Also, they have good runners in James Murphy and Charles Marsala. Overall they have a fine team."

While Notre Dame is running against some very good teams, they have plenty of talent of their own. The seven runners who will compete today are seniors Bill Courtney, Jim Tyler, Tim Cannon, and Ed Wilenbrink, junior John Magill, sophomore Mike Collins, and freshman Dan Garrett. All seven runners have run consistently fine races, which is the key to a nationally-competitive team.

"Everyone is running extremely well," says Piane. "They run as competitively as any group has run at Notre Dame since I've been here (eight years). They're doing a great job and running with a lot of pride right now."

Today's meet is important to the Irish for several reasons. To date, they have convincingly defeated two nationally-ranked teams, Michigan and Northwestern. A win, especially over a tough Purdue team,

ND soccer team to play four games over break

By PHIL WOLF
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame soccer team, hoping to rebound from a disappointing loss Wednesday to Akron, will play four games over break.

The Irish will take their 10-4-2 record on the road for three games before returning home for one game.

The competition next week is not expected to be nearly as tough as that which the Irish have faced in the last couple of weeks, according to Notre Dame Head Coach Dennis Grace. The Irish are coming off games against nationally ranked teams, and none of the teams they will face next week is ranked.

Notre Dame will begin its play during break this Sunday at Kentucky. Fans in the area may come out to watch the game at 2 p.m.

The Irish will be trying for their third consecutive win over Kentucky, which has a 3-7-1 record.

After returning home for two days, the Irish will be back on the highway Wednesday, heading for Madison, Wis., to play the Wisconsin

Badgers. The game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

The only meeting between the two teams was in 1981, when they tied, 2-2. This year, the Badgers could again keep the game close.

The Badgers are 6-6-1 this season, and they recently beat Evansville, which was ranked second in the Midwest at the time. In its most recent action, Wisconsin lost to Marquette, number five in the region, Wednesday night, 5-3.

The Badgers rely on the scoring of Todd Zoschke to lead the offense. Zoschke has 12 goals and four assists this year. Joel Adams is second on the Wisconsin scoring list with five goals and two assists.

The Badgers' defense is anchored by goalkeeper Gerald Averill, who has allowed 19 goals in his 11 games for a goals-against-average of 1.73.

On Friday night, the Irish will play for the first time ever at Wisconsin-Platteville. Kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. for that contest. Platteville has a 7-4 record this season.

Boutton stays constant as SMC team changes

By KELLY PORTOLESE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team has undergone quite a few changes in the past four years. There is only one member of this year's team who has been there through all activity — senior co-captain Ann Boutton.

"Each year I played with an entirely different group of girls," says the four-year veteran. She points out that due to student teaching, nursing, and foreign studies programs some student athletes found it impossible to make the commitment necessary to remain on the team. Boutton therefore has had to continually make adjustments from one level of play to another. She has nothing but praise for this year's squad, however.

"This year's team is by far the best as far as talent and attitude is concerned," says Boutton. "I have a great deal of respect for all the players."

Not only does Boutton have respect for her teammates but she also has a great deal of confidence in them, and is secure in the knowledge that any player will come through when called upon to do the job in any situation.

Boutton's teammates have the same respect for her.

"She has been a positive leader both this year and last year, in getting everybody motivated in all ways," says sophomore Ann Brown.

Another major change which the volleyball program has encountered in the past two years is a turnover in head coaches which has brought about the introduction of a new brand of volleyball. Boutton feels with current coach Brian Goralski at the helm the overall program has benefited greatly.

"We work a lot harder and have a better time doing it," says the senior.

She adds that Goralski has given the team some valuable technical knowledge of the game. The team has also instituted the multiple of-

Irish field hockey team plays host to Western Michigan after 1-0 win

By KEVIN HERBERT
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame field hockey team continued its winning ways with a 1-0 victory over Michigan in Ann Arbor Wednesday afternoon.

The Irish dominated the first half, keeping play on the Wolverine side of the field for all but a few minutes of the thirty-five minute period. The Irish were unable to score, however.

"I did not know what to tell my team at halftime," said ND coach Jill Lindenfeld. "We had done everything right except score."

Less than ten minutes into the second half the Irish finally put the ball in the net, as sophomore Corinne DiGiacomo scored an unassisted goal to put Notre Dame ahead 1-0. The Wolverines proceeded to dominate the rest of the game, but thanks to the superb defense of goalie Patti Gallagher and junior defender Christina Weinman, Michigan was unable to score despite its numerous opportunities.

Lindenfeld attributed the Irish victory to superior defense.

"Our defense played an outstanding game," said the Irish coach. "We denied them the ball and executed our passes perfectly."

Notre Dame will take a 7-4-1 record onto Cartier field this afternoon against Western Michigan, with game time set for 4:00. The last time the two teams met the Irish were victorious in Michigan by the score of 4-1.

Lindenfeld would like to play as many players as possible, because today is Parents' Day. She is confident about the game at Cartier, noting that the Irish are 2-0-1 on artificial turf. Lindenfeld attributes this success to the opportunities afforded them by the football coaching staff to practice on the artificial surface.

Junior goalie Patti Gallagher turned in a shutout against Michigan Wednesday afternoon, as the Notre Dame field hockey team edged the Wolverines, 1-0, in Ann Arbor, on Corinne DiGiacomo's unassisted goal. The 7-4-1 Irish will take on Western Michigan this afternoon in a Parents' Day game. Kevin Herbert recaps the Michigan game and previews today's game in his story at left.
