Only Tyson's approval stands in way of new student general store

By BOB MUSSELMAN
News Staff

The only thing now standing between a proposed student store and its implementation is the approval of Father David Tyson, vice president for Student Affairs.

That's the result of action taken yesterday by the Campus Life Council, which unanimously passed a student government proposal to open a student-run general store.

Tyson's approval would allow the store to open in LaFortune Student Center next semester.

Student Senator Pat Browne made the general-store proposal to the council. He said surveys conducted by his committee and the Ombudsman's office indicated there is enough demand for a store which will sell discounted and generic health and beauty aids and school supplies at a lower price than the bookstore.

The store would not compete with the bookstore, Browne said, but will offer Notre Dame students a chance to purchase "discounted, second label, and generic" products without going off campus. The fact that the bookstore is an on-campus monopoly means students are "forced to buy quality products that they don't want and can't afford."

Browne said monopolies on campus aren't necessarily bad, but they do provide a "hindrance to one of the primary aspects of a campus community - variety." He said the store is not a bookstore replacement, "is only feasible if we don't compete with the bookstore," and is "not going to sell books in the future."

After the presentation, which informed the council of various statistics and cost estimates, several questions were asked by council members about the proposal. Most concerned the possibility of success and exact costs involved.

Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick was especially vocal during the question and answer period, expressing his own doubts as to whether the store will succeed. However, he did not

Weidenbaum questions UN's right to regulate transnational enterprise

By MARTIN RODGERS
News Staff

The national equivalent of E.F. Hutton was on campus yesterday and attentive ears stopped and listened.

In the Notre Dame Law School, Dr. Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers from 1981-82, delivered a lecture on "The United Nations as a Regulator of Private Enterprise."

Weidenbaum, currently director of The Center for the study of American Business, began his lecture by stating he had come before a "group of lawyers to tell why we have too much law" in the specific instance of "the United Nations and its specialized 'alphabet soup' agencies: TAD, ILO, UNESCO..."

One of the major topics of the lecture was the paper, authored by his Center for the Study of American Business, which disputed the right of the U.N. to create regulations on "transnational enterprises" and the regulations themselves. These regulations, Weidenbaum argued, were not based on such issues as health and environmental protection, but rather were "politically aimed attempts to bring about the worldly redistribution of wealth and power."

He also emphasized that the role of the U.N. as a regulator needs to be rethought and perhaps the U.N. was "running afoul" of its purpose. He also theorized it was a matter of "(foreign) aid vs. trade" with the latter being the route which should steadfastly be supported by the U.S. and its large multinationals.

Weidenbaum said his lecture was primarily educational, and was intended to bring about an awareness that the U.N. was attempting to do more than just its stereotypic "peacekeeping" activities.

The presentation was the final segment of the Thomas J. White Center Lecture Series, a series which, in the words of Director Douglas Kmiec, effectively "bridged the distance from Washington to South Bend."

Weidenbaum also held a press conference in which he entertained many questions concerning President Reagan's newly unveiled flat tax plan.

He stated he was not a strong supporter of the plan, feeling it was similar to "the cart coming before the horse."

To attempt to reconcile the budget deficits by tax reform is avoiding the primary problem of reducing federal spending, he said. Good budgeting of federal spending must be effected and carried out by "uniform distribution of dissatisfaction."

Furthermore, he stated the tax proposal removed incentives for investment and would lead to rising unemployment and a lower gross national product.

He did, however, indicate the new bill was only a "first draft" of sorts

EPA administrator resigns after restoration of morale

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - William Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, submitted his resignation yesterday to President Reagan, who accepted it.

Ruckelshaus said he is returning to private life with "both regret and a sense of accomplishment."

He said that during his term of office, the second time he has held the job, he has succeeded in restoring employee morale that had been shattered during the controversial direction of EPA by his predecessor, Anne Burford.

"Employee morale and competence is high," Ruckelshaus told Reagan.

"First-rate presidential appointees are in place," said Ruckelshaus. "A management system has been installed that is functioning well and all of the programs have generated momentum."

"In short, the ship called EPA is righted and is now steering a steady course."

WVFI-AM looks for ways to improve broadcast signal

The following is the second of a three-part series on WVFI, the student-run radio station serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

By DAVID BROWN

Representatives of the Notre Dame student-run radio station WVFI-AM and the administration are currently considering ways in which to improve the station's broadcast signal.

The station has introduced several plans to the administration in an attempt to become a major part of student life, said Assistant Director of Student Activities and former WSND-AM Adviser Paul Matwiy.

Father Francis Cafarelli, assistant vice-president for student affairs said, "The administration is already making a commitment to WVFI and at this point the administration is open to a thorough discussion of the role and needs of the AM radio station facility."

Matwiy was involved in the plans either to convert WVFI-AM to a 300-watt FM station or to install AM-stereo facilities. The main reason for initiating these plans was that WVFI-AM was not as effective as it could be because most dorms could not and still cannot receive a clear signal from the station.

This poor reception is caused by two things, according to Matwiy. First, the carrier current system, a system used to send radio signals through the electrical outlets, is deteriorating. This is because the system is 20-30 years old, said Matwiy.

Secondly, many dorms have been renovated since the founding of the radio station and the electrical wiring in these dorms has drastically changed. These combined problems cause the reception problems throughout the campus.

WVFI
Series

Matwiy said, "the reception problem is not inherent to the system but is caused by the deterioration of the system due to its age. Aside from the deterioration there is no reason why the carrier current system could not be as good as any AM station picked up in town."

To remedy these problems, Matwiy and the administration pursued the possibility of converting WVFI to an FM station.

This began last year when a study was conducted to determine the cost of a possible conversion. The estimate was $20,000. The administration went as far as applying to the FCC for a license to broadcast.

This plan fell through, however, because a second study revealed the actual cost of converting the station would be closer to $100,000. This gap between the planned budget and the actual costs forced the administration to withdraw their request for a license in late August.

Matwiy also said there were "several other negatives involved" in pursuing the conversion. The major negative aspect of the proposition was the lack of student control.

By definition, the license the administration would have obtained from the FCC would have required them to maintain ultimate control of the station rather than turning control of the station over to the students.

The license would have forced the station to sell advertising differently than it does now. This would cause the station to

Tighter control on guns needed before more senseless deaths occur

The tragic shooting death last week of high school basketball star Ben Wilson in Chicago brought into focus once again the urgent need for gun control in the United States.

Wilson, possibly the number one high school player in the country, and under recruitment by Illinois and DePaul, obviously had a promising college and pro career ahead of him. He was gunned down by high school students- 15 and 16 years old.

The thousands of others murdered in the country by handguns each year do not get the publicity Ben Wilson did. But their deaths are just as great an indication of the fact that one-half of all murders in this country occur by handgun.

Since 1963, Americans have killed more people with handguns than World War II did. That statistic seems unbelievable, but it shouldn't. After all, a handgun is so easy to purchase in this country that in many states, anyone can walk into a store and buy one. The ease with which anyone can get a handgun- strictly meant for no other purpose than killing human beings, explains why there is a handgun sold every 13 seconds in this country.

Americans are arming themselves like they still lived on the frontier, and were afraid of the wolves. Only now they're afraid of each other. But it's not strangers they should fear. You are six times more likely to be shot by a member of your family than an intruder.

The gun laws in this country are a mess of inconsistent, unorganized local bill and laws. And a ban in one city won't work if the neighboring city doesn't also have a ban. That is why a nationwide handgun ban is such a necessity. And bans can work. In Massachusetts, a gun law giving an automatic one year jail term to anyone with an unlicensed gun dropped homicides by 55 percent. Think what outlawing handgun possession could do.

Recent polls indicate 65 percent of the American public favor tighter gun laws. So why don't we have restrictions on handguns?

The answer of course is the National Rifle Association- the nation's most powerful single interest group and the most effective lobbying organization in Washington.

The NRA spends most of its' $30 million budget lobbying against gun control laws as they are introduced in Congress. They target pro-gun control members of Congress at election time. Basically, they scare them into vetoing or dropping gun control bills. It proves to what extent money can buy power, or members of Congress, in this country.

Tess Guarino

Assistant News Editor

Inside Thursday

What it comes down to is this: we will regulate drugs, toys, dogs, and T.V.'s, but not handguns.

What about the NRA's slogan- "Gun's Don't Kill People, People Kill People?" Well, what they seem to be ignoring is the fact that people with guns are more likely to kill people than those armed with anything else.

There are indications that Congress may even loosen handgun restrictions. No recent action has been taken on gun control, and bills introduced by Sen. Ted Kennedy in the past have been gone nowhere. President Reagan, himself a shooting victim, is an opponent of gun control.

Overseas, the U.S. murder rate is almost 10 times that of Britain, West Germany, or Japan. Our murder rates leave the rest of the world astounded, cynical, or appalled. And it is amazing that a nation so internally stable is so violent.

The Chicago suburbs of Oak Park and Morton Grove have both enacted tough handgun laws, among the first of their kind. Oak Park passed their anti-handgun law when a young lawyer from the suburb was shot by a client in a Chicago courtroom last year. The judge in the divorce case being heard at the time was also killed. The lawyer's widow began a crusade to get guns banned in the suburb, and earlier this year got the law passed.

The results of such bans have not been determined yet. But we can only go up from here. Our crime statistics are a disgrace, especially when compared to those abroad.

Americans must not allow the self interests of a wealthy few dictate the way we live. Our individual freedom in this matter must yield before the public need for safety and sanity. And as long as we let the NRA decide our policy regarding gun control, Americans will continue to live with one of the world's worse murder rates.

Record store to reopen with change in hours

By BUD LUEPKE
Staff Reporter

The Student Activities Board Record Store in LaFortune will reopen Friday after being closed for more than a week, said Student Activities General Business Manager Chuck VanRavenswaay.

The temporary closing began last Wednesday when the store's full-time employee, Judy Gorski, left the record store for better employment.

Ravenswaay said employees had to be found before there was a reopening. "We are now hiring student workers," he said.

The record store will be student run, and Ravenswaay also said new hours, more convenient for students will be implemented. "We're trying to have it opened from 12 to 2 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday; so it will be open during lunch," he said. "And from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday." The store's hours had been 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

There were rumors the store's $6,572 loss last year could have prompted the closing, but Student Body Treasurer Al Novas said there is no deficit at this point in the store's operation this year.

Novas also said the Student Activities Board used the closing to consider possible changes. "We're thinking of changing the format, making it so you can walk in and look around maybe," Novas said. Ravenswaay said they were also looking for new suppliers and ways to cut costs due to competition from the bookstore. "We're very constrained," he said. "We can't raise record prices."

Originally, the record store was known as the ticket store. Only cut-rate movie tickets, ACC tickets, and bus trips were offered through it. It was strictly a ticket outlet until a few years ago when it started selling records and tapes.

The store makes no profit. Novas said, "It is still budgeted for zero dollars. It's not even a business venture."

Former intelligence worker arrested on spying charges

Associated Press

NEW YORK - An investigation that led to the arrest of a former CIA employee accused of spying for the Czechoslovakian intelligence service took more than two years and included an interview in which he admitted spying, a federal prosecutor said in court yesterday.

Karl F. Koecher, 50, gave the Czech intelligence agency "virtually any classified or other material, information, assessments and CIA personnel identifications" that he obtained, an FBI affidavit said.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani refused to give details of the investigation, saying only that it took more than two years. He also refused to describe the seriousness of the intelligence leak. The CIA has declined to comment on the case.

Giuliani said Koecher worked for the CIA for four years, not two years as initially reported.

Giuliani said yesterday that after working as a translator for the agency in Washington from 1973 to 1975, Koecher became a "contract employee" for the CIA in New York from 1975 to 1977. He would not discuss the type of work Koecher performed in New York.

Koecher was arrested late Tuesday as he and his wife Hana were preparing to fly to Switzerland and begin a new life in Austria, the FBI said. They had sold their Manhattan home just hours before. Hana Koecher, 40, was held as a material witness and authorities refused to say whether she would be charged.

Koecher admitted his involvement with the Czech agency to FBI agents in an interview last Friday, but was not immediately arrested, the prosecutor said, because "the FBI believed it was in their interest to string this thing along to develop additional evidence."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Barry Bohrer told the magistrate he will ask the couple be held without bail indefinitely. He noted that the espionage charge against Koecher carries a maximum of life in prison and said there is a substantial risk that the couple would flee if set free.

According to FBI court papers, Koecher was recruited by the Czech intelligence service in 1962, was trained in Czechoslovakia for two years and then moved with his wife to the United States in December 1965. They eventually became naturalized U.S. citizens.

Karl Koecher, center, a former CIA contract employee, is escorted from the agency's headquarters in New York following his arrest on charges of delivering national security information to the Czechoslovakian intelligence service. See the story at lower left for more details.

Calypso becoming political forum

Associated Press

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados - Calypso, the Caribbean music that combines a driving beat with catchy lyrics delivered rapid-fire by colorfully named singers, has gained increasing use as a political forum.

"The calypsonian is the political satirist extraordinaire. In West Indian life there's a strain of ribald irreverence. Calypso reflects this and it is frequently a mode of social or political criticism," said Gordon Lewis, a University of Puerto Rico professor and a leading Caribbean historian.

"I write calypsos because I believe it's the strongest way people can express themselves. As far as my songs are concerned, you can love them or you can hate them, but you can't ignore them," said Tony "The Mighty Gabby" Carter, Barbados' controversial calypso star.

In a region which prides itself on adherence to democracy and freedoms, governments have shown sensitivity to the political calypso:

on Barbados, Carter has been censored by the government-owned Caribbean Broadcasting Corp. and criticized by Prime Minister Tom Adams.

on Grenada, survivors of the deposed leftist government scrapped plans for a calypso festival marking the fifth anniversary of their 1979 coup d'etat last March when foreign calypsonians were refused entry into the country.

on Dominica, the previous administration banned all calypsos for two years in 1978-79. In 1983 the state radio banned a song that referred to the current Eugenia Charles government as "Mafia La" and another song criticizing government policies and religious leaders.

on Jamaica, the indigenous Jamaican music, reggae, similar to calypso but with more rock 'n' roll influence, often drew censorship during the tumultuous late 1970s.

Calypso, reflecting roots in both Africa and Europe, originated on Trinidad, where the region's major pre-Lenten carnival dates to the 19th century. The annual highlight of Trinidad's carnival has been the calypso competition, during which the island's stars unveil their latest songs.

The politicization of calypso goes back to anti-colonial sentiment such as expressed in the 1950s by Trinidad's "Attila the Hun," according to Lewis, continuing through the current star "The Mighty Sparrow," who summarized the social problems of oil-producing Trinidad's rapid growth in "Capitalism Gone Mad."

One of the region's most popular calypsos is The Mighty Gabby's "Boots." The lyrics criticize Adams' decisions to build up Barbados' tiny Defense Force and send Barbadian soldiers to St. Vincent and St. Lucia to quell unrest on those islands.

"Boots" asks: "Can we afford to feed an army, while so many children naked and hungry? Can we afford to remain passive, while that soldier army grow so massive? Well, don't tell me, tell Tommy."

Soon after its June 1983 debut, the lyrics of "Boots" were banned on the state-owned CBC.

"We banned the words, not the whole version. We felt the words would hold up members of the defense force to contempt and ridicule," explained Ronnie Hughes, CBC chairman.

The Independent Voice of Barbados also banned play of the lyrics because they were considered "in poor taste," said Julian Rogers.

Adams, in a 1983 parliamentary debate in which he denied that the government directed banning of calypsos, said calypsonians shouldn't take themselves too seriously and shouldn't hurt other people with songs full of "spite and hate."

"Boots," with its anti-military message, became a regionwide hit following the Oct. 25, 1983, U.S.-led invasion of Grenada.

depend on the administration for more funding than it already receives. It would increase so much, in fact, that the budget would have to be three times what it is now.

AM Stereo is now being looked at as an alternative. Matwiy began this process soon after the FM conversion failure by making the necessary arrangements with Motorola and two other corporations for the loan of $30,000 worth of equipment to put together an "experimental" AM Stereo broadcast facility. This would also include the revamping of the carrier current system.

Having been to many demonstrations Matwiy has concluded if installed properly AM Stereo could be almost as good as FM Stereo.

This alternative would also allow for continued student control. Assuming the experimental AM Stereo improves the listening quality of the station and it is possible to override any problems with the carrier current system, it will be recommended to the administration to convert the entire campus to AM Stereo.

Continued student dedication to the station is also a major factor in improving the station. "The administration is not going to pour money down the drain," said Matwiy.

If the students, both listeners and station members, show they are interested in the station and wish to improve it the chances the administration will further support them will increase, he added.

Sen. Robert Dole succeeds Baker as Senate majority leader

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Sen. Robert Dole, wisecracking chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and a likely 1988 presidential aspirant, defeated four rivals yesterday in the hotly contested battle to succeed Howard Baker Jr. as Senate majority leader.

The 61-year-old Kansas Republican was elected 28-25 over his closest competitor, Ted Stevens of Alaska, on the fourth secret ballot in a caucus of all 53 GOP senators who will serve in the upcoming 99th Congress.

Three other contenders - James McClure of Idaho, Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Richard Lugar of Indiana - were eliminated one by one in the first three rounds.

The outcome also touched off a chain reaction among key Senate committee chairmanships, catapulting Bob Packwood, a frequent administration critic, into the chairmanship of the Finance Committee. As leader, Dole is banned by Senate rules from heading any panels.

Lugar will become chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, while arch-conservative Jesse Helms of North Carolina will stay on as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, both senators confirmed following the four-hour, closed-door caucus.

A beaming Dole emerged from the meeting with Baker, who did not seek re-election to the Senate this year, and told a jammed news conference he would work his hardest to shepherd President Reagan's second-term initiatives through the GOP-controlled chamber.

"Deficit reduction is at the top of everyone's agenda," Dole declared. He added he shared the president's view that a tax increase would be "a matter of last resort."

However, quipping his way through his first news conference as leader, Dole said he hadn't thought much about other agenda items. "I'm going to find out first what you do as leader," he said.

Asked if he would bring more discipline to the Senate than had the easy-going, diminutive Baker, the six-foot Dole retorted: "I'll bring more height."

Dole, who described himself as "a little euphoric, a little high," was the best known nationally in the field of five candidates. He was President Ford's 1976 vice presidential running mate and unsuccessfully sought his party's presidential nomination in 1980. He is married to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

Hard-driving and with a cutting wit - Democrats unflattering dubbed him Ford's "hatchet man" in the 1976 campaign - Dole presents a much different, higher-profile leadership figure than Baker, known for his calm caution and for his ability to force compromises by soothing ruffled Senate egos.

But the two men are both middle of the road in the GOP political spectrum, suggesting that Dole's election will not result in an ideological shift in the chamber that Republicans regained from Democrats in 1980 and held onto in the elections earlier this month.

Dole, who won't actually take command until the 99th Congress convenes on Jan. 3, has consistently supported Reagan's programs as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. However, the committee's next chairman, Packwood, has been less of a cheerleader for the administration, and this could become a problem for its tax-overhaul proposals.

Dole said he would meet soon with Packwood to determine when hearings will be held on that plan.

In other GOP leadership contests yesterday, Alan Simpson of Wyoming was elected to the No. 2 position of majority whip, a job now held by Stevens. Simpson defeated Slade Gorton of Washington, 31-22. John Chafee of Rhode Island beat Jake Garn of Utah, 28-25, for the the chairmanship of the Republican Conference. And John Heinz of Pennsylvania defeated Malcom Wallop of Wyoming for the chairmanship of the GOP senatorial Campaign Committee.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina was re-elected unanimously as Senate president pro tempore and William Armstrong of Colorado was elected without opposition as chairman of the Republican Policy Committee.

Overall, the new Senate leadership team is made up of more political moderates than the current one. Baker - who has presidential ambitions of his own for 1988 - told reporters: "I can't think of a better management team and I can't think of a better man to lead it than Bob Dole."

Democrats will pick their leaders next week. Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia has no opposition.

Yesterday's vote, taken in the ornate Old Senate Chamber, where the Senate met in the 19th Century, climaxed a month of intensive, heavy lobbying by all five candidates.

For the first three ballots, no candidate drew the required 27 votes needed for election. On the first ballot, Dole drew only 14 votes.

Stevens, the current GOP whip, was second with 12 votes and Lugar, current chairman of the Senatorial Campaign Committee, third with 10.

Domenici, chairman of the Budget Committee, had nine votes and McClure, chairman of the Energy Committee, had eight votes. McClure, the low man, dropped out.

Results of the second ballot: Dole, 17; Stevens, 14; Lugar, 12; Domenici, 10.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - An "alert and cooperative" William Schroeder joked with his nurses yesterday and ate his first solid food since receiving a mechanical heart - warm porridge fed to him by his wife.

Doctors said the 52-year-old retired quality assurance specialist continued making an excellent recovery and they expected to have him sitting up in bed later yesterday.

Schroeder explained to his nurses how to make the ideal glass of lemonade and told them that "Ronald Reagan should be so lucky as to have to go through this," an apparent reference to the assassination attempt upon the president, said Dr.

Allan Lansing, who assisted at Sunday's surgery.

While Schroeder was being weighed, an uncomfortable process that required him to roll to one side in bed so a scale could be slid beneath him, he said, "I'm going to remember the names of everybody in here, starting with the big guy," meaning his surgeon, Dr. William DeVries, a former college basketball player.

Schroeder's "positive mental attitude is a very important factor and a very strong factor in his favor as far as recovery is concerned," said Lansing. "He is alert and cooperative."

Lansing reported that Schroeder had told his nurses, "You are doing a super job."

Tests of Schroeder's kidneys were still slightly abnormal but were beginning to move back toward normal values, Lansing said.

Schroeder has gained 14 pounds since surgery, when he weighed 202 pounds, Lansing said. The weight gain is caused by fluid build-up, Lansing said, which was being corrected with drugs that would increase the rate at which Schroeder's kidneys excrete fluid.

The Jarvik-7 artificial heart was beating smoothly at 70 beats per minute. "The progress report continues to be excellent," Lansing said.

With the help of his wife, Margaret, Schroeder ate a breakfast of apple and grape juice, warm porridge, milk and chocolate milk.

Ruckelshaus resignation "with great regret," told him in a letter that he has "justified fully the faith which I and so many Americans have in you."

"You have made absolutely clear our commitment to wise stewardship of the environment," Reagan said.

"In doing so, you have established the firm foundations on which your successor can continue to build - and in which Americans can have complete confidence."

Reagan said in his letter that he chose Ruckelshaus to take over once again at EPA during a period of turmoil inside the agency because of a "reputation for leadership, thoughtfulness and personal integrity ... based on a record of outstanding performance in every job you have held."

The president said he knew at the time that Ruckelshaus' decision to return to Washington "was very difficult, since it involved an extraordinary personal sacrifice in putting aside your career in the private sector and moving, with your family, across the continent."

"I knew you did what you have consistently done: you looked first and foremost toward the public interest."

Ruckelshaus told Reagan that he is convinced "that properly led, the dedicated people of EPA will continue to serve well your administration and this country."

And he assured the president that in spite of his decision to return to private life, "you can call on me to help any time, should the need arise."

There was no immediate word from the White House as to who might be under consideration to replace Ruckelshaus as the nation's environmental chief.

The resignation will take effect Jan. 5, 1985.

Ruckelshaus was the first chief of the EPA, serving as administrator from 1970 to 1973. He moved from there to the Justice Department, serving as deputy attorney general before resigning in October 1973 rather than follow President Richard Nixon's order to fire Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

He was a senior vice president of Weyerhaeuser Co., a Seattle-based forest products company, in May 1983 when Reagan tapped him to succeed Burford as chief of the embattled EPA.

Even the administration's sharpest environmental critics have had praise for the job done by Ruckelshaus in restoring morale at the agency. But many have been upset at the administration's failure to take action to control acid rain.

and revision was inevitable.

Weidenbaum also indicated at the press conference there have been "four big tax reforms in five years" and this has had a "destabilizing" effect.

He also forecasted that 1985 will not be as good a year as 1984. This year should show at least 7 percent real growth, whereas he estimated the 1985 growth would only be approximately 3 percent.

Weidenbaum is widely recognized for his work in analyzing governmental regulation of business and has written several books on economic policy. In addition, he has written several articles for Fortune, The Wall Street Journal and the Christian Science Monitor.

Treasury Dept. discourages amnesty on delinquent taxes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Treasury Department claims its plan for revamping the federal tax system will do much to recover the $90.5 billion a year lost to cheaters, but the agency flatly rejects temporary amnesty as an incentive for delinquent taxpayers to settle their accounts.

"Amnesties can only reinforce the growing impression that the tax system is unfair and encourages taxpayer non-compliance," the Treasury said this week in a voluminous report to President Reagan on ideas for overhauling the income tax.

Several states' recent success with amnesty has prompted members of Congress to suggest a similar program at the federal level.

In general, those who had failed to file a return or had cheated on their taxes would be given a brief time to pay up without the government imposing a penalty on past-due taxes or threatening criminal prosecution. In return, advocates say, the government would get a substantial amount of revenue that otherwise might be lost.

The Treasury report concluded that amnesty is not worth the risk.

Even without amnesty, the agency said, its sweeping overhaul plan will make a big dent in the $90.5 billion tax gap, the Internal Revenue Service's 1981 estimate of what cheaters cost the government each year in lost revenue.

Primarily, the report said, the department's proposal to restrict itemized deductions would cut the number of taxpayers who itemize and, in the process, the number who cheat on their deductions.

The IRS estimated that it loses $52.2 billion a year because people fail to report all their income from legal sources; failure to file any return costs $2.9 billion. Another $6.3 billion is lost to overstated business expenses and $6.6 billion to exaggerated personal deductions, exemptions and adjustments.

Failure of employers and individuals to submit what is owed costs another $6.8 billion. Corporate cheating boosts the tax gap by $6.2 billion.

Unreported income from illegal drugs, gambling and prostitution deprives the federal government of about $9 billion a year, but the Treasury report said that going after that money is essentially hopeless.

In addition, no amount of "tax reform" will wipe out all cheating, especially in such "off-the-books" activities as bartering and small businesses that deal primarily in cash.

Windy storm dumps snow on western U.S.

Associated Press

A windy storm piled snowdrifts up to two feet high yesterday in Utah, avalanches closed an isolated Idaho highway, snow closed schools in Idaho and Washington, and scores of elk hunters were stranded by snow and downed trees in Oregon.

Since Tuesday morning, the storm had dumped 12 to 21 inches of snow on Nevada's northern mountains.

High wind whistled through parts of the northern Rockies with gusts up to 80 mph in Wyoming and Colorado, one day after 93-mph gusts lashed part of the Oregon coast.

By midday, snow extended from western Montana across the mountains of Colorado and from eastern Idaho through northern Utah. Rain extended from Washington across northern California, changing to snow in the mountains.

On Tuesday, the storm had dumped up to 16 inches of snow in the Northwest, knocked out power to 35,000 homes, closed highways and shaken San Francisco skyscrapers. Three people died Tuesday in traffic accidents that were blamed on icy roads and one died when wind blew down a tree.

A winter storm warning was in effect yesterday for central and eastern Idaho. Travelers' advisories warning of snow and strong wind extended over much of the remainder of Idaho, northwestern Montana, northeastern Oregon, the western mountains of Washington and Oregon, western Utah and the mountains of Colorado.

Schools were closed yesterday in several districts in Idaho and a number of districts in eastern Washington closed or delayed classes.

Wind gusted to 40 mph and more at Salt Lake City and at the top of the Snowbird Ski Resort, and threw snow into drifts two feet high in the western Salt Lake Valley, the weather service said.

On Tuesday, 10 inches of snow fell in 24 hours at Meacham in northeast Oregon. Up to 16 inches was reported in the Oregon and Washington Cascades, and state police in Oregon measured 13 inches of new snow by early yesterday at Mount Bachelor. A foot of snow fell on California's Mount Shasta.

Ski instructor John Seymour scampers through the snow in Steamboat Springs, Colorado, along with the rest of the Western United States, has been experiencing severe weather since Tuesday. More about the severe winter weather in the story at left.

Ball State professor says it is 'likely' he killed wife in alcoholic blackout

Associated Press

LONDON - Ball State University professor Jerry L. Kasperek said in court yesterday it was "likely" he beat and strangled his wife to death while he was suffering a blackout associated with drunkenness.

On the fifth day of his murder trial at London's Old Bailey criminal court, the 45-year-old professor of foreign languages was asked by the prosecution if he believed he inflicted the injuries that killed his wife, Carol Ann.

"I realize that is likely," Kasperek testified in a deep, composed voice. "But I have the hardest time possible accepting it."

Kasperek, the first witness called by the defense, told the jury of his wife's and his own alcoholic problems. He said he suffered amnesia after taking alcohol on up to 15 occasions in the three years before his wife was found dead Jan. 26 in their apartment in London's Paddington district.

The lanky, bespectacled professor brought his 42-year-old wife and two daughters to London in the fall of 1983 to run a series of courses for Ball State students.

He pleaded innocent to the murder charge, telling police he believed his wife was mugged on the night before she was found dead and had taken an overdose of anti-depressant pills while drunk.

Dr. G.K. Shaw, a senior psychiatrist at Bexley Hospital near London, claimed Kasperek was suffering from alcoholic amnesia, a condition where a person, after drinking heavily, can turn violent but later not remember anything.

It is an ailment where "forgetfulness is complete" and sometimes is accompanied by "irrelevant, irrational kind of behavior," testified Shaw, a defense witness.

He said he interviewed Kasperek three times and carried out electroencephalogram tests to trace changes in electric potential in Kasperek's brain while he was intoxicated.

He concluded that Kasperek suffered a blackout after drinking heavily on the night on Jan. 25.

"I found it entirely possible," he said.

Kasperek "had all the characteristics of alcoholic blackout...I think the evidence is that he would have less ability to control his actions in that state," said Shaw, who is expected to be cross-examined today by the prosecution.

Kasperek, who broke into tears twice while giving testimony, was asked by prosecutor Michael Worsley if he could be "taking refuge in pretended loss of memory."

"I am definitely not," he said.

He said he had no recollection of ever striking his wife and, though he racked his brain, he had only vague "indirect memories" of events on the night before she was found dead.

"I tried (to remember) for months upon months because I was so confident I hadn't done anything...and I can't recall, even with maximum effort," he said.

Kasperek said he and his wife began the evening of Jan. 25 drinking whiskey and wine. Later, after running an errand at the London House Hotel, where he was teaching 50 students from Ball State University, he stopped at the Prince Edward pub and had two pints of beer.

After returning home, his wife, who he said suffered from deep depression, alcoholism and "periods of violent rage," accused him of hiding the whiskey and went into their bedroom. He returned to the pub alone, an event he said was "exceptionally unusual," had another pint and arrived home late, he said.

His next vivid recollection, he said, was "waking up the next morning," finding his wife's body cold and her face bruised and fearing she had taken an overdose of pills he saw on a bureau beside their bed.

Kasperek said his telephone was not plugged in, so he ran two blocks to the London House Hotel to call police.

As he ran, he began to remember vaguely some events of the night before, he said. He recalled his wife leaving the apartment to buy alcohol and later coming back and saying she was hurt.

"I recall her saying about a hand being put over her face," he testified.

Kasperek said he last suffered a blackout six days before her death. He also recalled an earlier, "rather frightening experience" after he drank heavily at a party in Muncie.

He said he was supposed to drive 20 miles north to his home but was found in his car the next morning parked in a driveway 20 miles west of the party. He was cited for drunken driving, he said.

The trial continues today.

U. S. space program lacks goals and purpose

"There is a fifth dimension beyond that which is known to man. It is a dimension as vast as space and as timeless as infinity. It is the middle ground between light and shadow, between science and superstition, and it lies between the pit of man's fears and the summit of his knowledge."

The late Rod Sterling wrote the preceding to describe the Twilight Zone, but as a result of approximately two decades of pioneering work, it applies equally as well to man's newest frontier - outer space. As the space supposedly would destroy nuclear ICBM's, using laser or particle beam cannons, within an instant of their launch. The result would hopefully make long range missiles obsolete. A lofty goal to be sure, and it carries an equally lofty price tag - $26 billion. Almost $2.5 billion has already been appropriated.

Another major space project in the works is the construction of a permanent space station in Earth's orbit. After the U.S. Skylab missions, the Soviets logged over 88,000 hours in space aboard their Salyut platform. Fearing a Soviet monopoly on prolonged orbital activity, we are quickly gearing up for a massive (read expensive) catchup effort. What benefits will we reap from this costly endeavor? Scientists say we will have new communications facilities, be able to produce new super-pure drugs and metal alloys, possess a launch pad for deep space exploration, among other benefits. The question that arises from this, however, is whether we need all this technologically sophisticated gobbledygook.

When asked about the necessity of "Star Wars" and the space station, a NASA official said not to worry, as "its ultimate use will evolve." Translation: "We don't know, but it'll look good and get all we scientists some fame and some big grant bucks." Everyone has an explanation of the what, but they fall flat trying to confront the why.

Conflicts notwithstanding, our continued exploration of space has its numerous benefits, vague as they may seem, that transcend the military, industrial or scientific. Space exploration is a standard bearer of national pride and might, and current and past administrations have used this rod to stir the drink of public sentiment. Unfortunately, this sense of pride and accomplishment can turn to narcissism or even recklessness.

We must not let the heady thrill of extraterrestrial accomplishment blind us to the more mundane problems on Earth. We enjoy perhaps the highest standard of living in the world, yet significant numbers of our children go to bed hungry each night. Masses are out of work. Diseases formerly regarded as eradicated have returned to haunt us, and new maladies appear without warning to belittle our medical professions. Exploration for the sake of exploration itself is meaningless. It is only when these quests are carried out in the context of mediating our present ills and preventing future ones that they acquire meaning. One can look to the heavens for aid, but the reasons behind our problems are rooted firmly on Earth. We need to seek out new worlds, but our goals must serve the world we already know - that world upon which we all live.

shuttle Discovery's recent rescue of two wayward satellites demonstrated, we have reached a stage of technological achievement where both launching and recovering large and complex objects in space are almost routine. Compare the media blitz surrounding the early shuttle missions with the comparatively tepid coverage of late. Stories of NASA's derring-do are practically passee. People like Joseph Allen, Dale Gardner, David Walker, Anna Fisher and Frederick Hauck - the latest shuttle crew - do not come close to receiving anywhere near the publicity that NASA's first astronauts did. It seems that the era of the Right Stuff has ended. In the near future, a school teacher and even a congressman will visit the previously elite neighborhood of Earth's orbit.

What lies ahead in America's quest to expand, literally, its horizons? President Reagan wants to launch a permanent space station by 1992. Furthermore, he wants to have a "Star Wars" complex of orbiting anti-missile platforms to defend the United States from a nuclear ICBM attack. Last August he announced a new long-term space strategy calling for the private commercialization of space, a return to the moon and even an exploratory mission to Mars.

How much will all this cost? Who will pay for it? Do we need any of it? These questions and many more will take center stage when Congress reconvenes in January. The Pentagon, scientific groups, aerospace industry and many other interested parties will each try to get a word in edgewise. The heart of the problem is a lack of clear direction and purpose behind the U.S. space effort. As astronomer Carl Sagan commented, "We do not have a space program if one assumes that a program has goals and purposes."

The newest, most immediate space objective is the Strategic Space Defense Initiative - the aforementioned Star Wars system. It

Justice demands better treatment of employees

"It's futile and senseless and even hypocritical for we who call ourselves Notre Dame to discuss justice, mercy and love... if we are not constantly asking ourselves if we are living those concepts."

Professor John Fitzgerald 1983.

The dignity and rights of workers has become a major theme to Church leaders in recent years. Pope Paul VI addressed the subject in his Populorum Progressio, Pope John-Paul II did the same in his Laborem Exercens, to demonstrate its support for the fired workers and wrote to Father Hesburgh asking for a reexamination of the incident. Father Hesburgh responded with a letter to CILA members stating that he had investigated the matter and was convinced "that justice was done."

With all due respect to Father Hesburgh and regardless of the guilt or innocence of the parties involved, justice is never done where due process is ignored. The three managers were denied guaranteed University rights of oral warning, written warning and suspension before termination. They were never allowed to defend themselves in front of their accusers, there was no public disclosure of the evidence against them, and they were denied any avenue of appeal.

The firing of Eileen Bender, English professor, is yet another example of the autocratic nature of employer-employee relations at the University. Bender was let go despite recommendations by the English department that she be retained. The administration has yet to give a public explanation of why it ignored the recommendations of Bender's peers. The summary nature of these firings should leave all University employees with questions about their own job security. Are they, too, being asked to accept Father Hesburgh's personal assurance that justice will be done?

In 1977 the University hired a union-busting law firm, which threatened to permanently "lay off" employees attempting to unionize and used other questionable methods to oppose a unionizing attempt by University groundskeepers. Personnel Director Thomas Bull explained the University's actions saying, "We would like to think that Notre Dame is a good place to work and union presence isn't necessary." Once again the University assures us that justice will be done.

If the University wishes to be taken seriously as an advocate of worker rights, it must first reexamine its own behavior. Notre Dame may be a "family" as Father Hesburgh likes to believe, but it is no one's patriarchy. Personal assurances must be replaced by objective organs of justice and forums for worker grievances. The University must recognize and respect its workers' right to organize. Leadership in any moral crusade must be leadership by example. Notre Dame has yet to set that example.

John Neblo

outside, looking in and now the U.S. Catholic Bishops have taken up the banner in their Pastoral Letter on the U.S. Economy.

Closer to home, the University has spoken on behalf of the worker through the efforts of student organizations like CILA and the influence of University leaders like Father Hesburgh. Unfortunately, while the University has been speaking on behalf of the worker, it has often acted quite differently. In recent years the University has taken actions wholly inconsistent with its position as an influential role model in the fight for worker's rights.

On Nov. 22 of last year, two pantry workers and three managers were fired from the North Dining Hall for allegedly extorting money from another worker. The pantry workers were accused of the actual extortion while the managers were fired because the administration believed they knew of the extortion and did nothing to prevent it.

The firings took place despite the fact that William Hendl, a University security investigator assigned to the case, said that he found "no evidence of any wrongdoing" on the part of the pantry workers and that "security was not involved at all" in investigating the role of the three managers. Furthermore, all three managers claim they were denied the chance to defend themselves before Food Service Director William Hickey. Even the victim of the alleged extortion, Barbara Davis, maintains that the managers had no knowledge of the incident. The results of a second investigation by the personnel department were never made public.

In response to the circumstances surrounding the firings, CILA organized a picket in front of the North Dining Hall on May 1 of last year

"Airwolf" flies circles around its competitor

Eric Bergamo

features staff writer

Television

Imagine this if you may: an attack helicopter with the ability to fly at speeds in excess of Mach One, armed with missiles and machine guns, protected by bullet impervious armor, and has all the capability of annihilating the air forces of both superpowers without suffering a scratch to its finish or a dent in its armor. If you said this helicopter was "Airwolf", you have seen this CBS entry on Saturday night at eight.

"Airwolf", in its second season on CBS, was a mid-season replacement to offset ABC's "Blue Thunder." Needless to say, Airwolf the helicopter flew circles around its competitor, as did the show "Airwolf" itself. ABC's "Blue Thunder" moved away from the characters and situations that had been created in the movie version that spawned the show. "Airwolf", on the other hand, stuck by those concepts and came out the better show because of it.

The movie pilot of "Airwolf" had its creator steal the helicopter and offer it to the Libyans. The head of the agency, Michael Archangel (Alex Cord), sought out Stringfellow Hawke (Jan-Michael Vincent) to retrieve the helicopter and bring it back. Instead, Hawke hides Airwolf to prevent it from falling into the hands of the military and having them abuse its capabilities in the conflict between the superpowers. Archangel offers to keep the government from finding Airwolf on one condition, that Hawke use Airwolf to help the agency's work. To this, Hawke gives his own condition, that the agency find his MIA brother in Vietnam.

It is Jan-Michael Vincent who carries the show as Stringfellow Hawke. Hawke is a loner who would rather stay at his cabin in the mountains and play his cello than fly around in the futuristic Airwolf. Vincent plays the part perfectly, projecting that need to get away from the maddening crowd but being denied because of the complications of subterfuge between the superpowers. It has been said that Vincent lacks in showing outright emotion, but the character of Stringfellow Hawke doesn't need the emotion. What is shown is enough indeed.

The show is blessed with a fine supporting cast. Ernest Borgnine is effective as the gruff Dominic Santini as Alex Cord does well with his sophisticated Michael Archangel. Jean Bruce Scott has been added to the cast as a love interest for Hawke and is doing well with the task.

Yet, it is the helicopter that steals every show. When Airwolf appears in the sky with its machine guns blazing and roaring in at great speeds, you see a kind of beauty in its movements as it maneuvers around to avoid Soviet Migs and to gain the advantage to win. (The powerful background music helps a lot at this point in the show) The climax is always the same, Airwolf unleashing its power on the enemy and then flying off into the sunset. I must admit it sounds ordinary, but once you see it, it is an ending well worth waiting for.

Suicide slot kills potential of "Miami Vice"

Eric Bergamo

Television

With the growing popularity of rock videos, it was only a matter of time before the major networks discovered this new medium and incorporated it into its new fall programming. But to do this with a police drama, well, then they are treading into unsure waters. NBC has successfully traversed this gap and has produced a winner with "Miami Vice."

"Miami Vice" focuses on two detectives, Sonny Crockett (Don Johnson) and Ricardo Tubbs

(Phillip Michael Thomas), in their fight to keep the Gold Coast free of drug dealers, pornographers, and the rest of the unsavory types that vice squads deal with. Its premise is basic police melodrama - police detectives go undercover to stop something from "going down" and win in the end. For some police shows, this format would become stale after a few episodes. However for "Miami Vice," the plotline remains interesting for one good reason. The producers, writers, directors, and actors have worked a high degree of quality into the show.

The characters are believable, not the usual stereotyped "perfect cop" found on police dramas in the seventies. Crockett and Tubbs present direct opposites of each other. Crockett is tough and cynical, while Tubbs projects a smooth and stylish image. They have problems that the viewers can relate to. One episode had Crockett on the verge of reuniting with his separated wife. After an attempted hit on Crockett, in which his wife and son were caught in the cross-fire, his wife realizes that there could be no way for them to get back together, no matter how much they loved each other.

The scripts are well crafted, moving quickly to the climax and building the tension at the same time. There are no gaps in the action or holes in the believability of the plot. The production is well above average as the exotic locations in and around Miami are used to the fullest. The glamour and glitz of Miami is felt, yet there is a sense that something ugly exists underneath all the polish.

And finally, there is the music. It does not overpower the scene to the point where it becomes more interesting than the action itself. The music enhances the action to the stage where the music and action merge into one arresting image that makes the viewer want to watch and not just listen.

There is only one fault with the show, and it is of the network's own doing. "Miami Vice" has been scheduled in a veritable "suicide slot" against "Falcon Crest." NBC had hoped "Miami Vice" would put a dent into the CBS hit by taking some of the audience away with its action-oriented show. Unfortunately, they underestimated the drawing power of the CBS hit. The best thing NBC could do now is to move the show to another time slot. Tuesday at ten would be the best for it, drawing the audience that watches The "A-Team" and "Riptide" into its fold.

"Miami Vice" has been recently compared to "Hill Street Blues" in a microcosm, probably because one of the producers is Anthony Yerkovich, who was one of the creators of the NBC phenomenon. He has hit paydirt again with "Miami Vice." The only thing that remains to be done is to give it a decent time slot. Once this is done, "Miami Vice" will match the success of "Hill Street Blues." It might even exceed it.

Julie Jensen has attained celebrity status in her own right although few know how or why she can be claimed a celebrity. Jensen's play, "Kitchen Gothic," was produced off Broadway last spring under the title "Old Wives Tale." Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre first produced the popular "Kitchen Gothic" last fall.

Jensen, besides a playwright, is a theatre professor at Saint Mary's College. When asked how a Saint Mary's production landed in New York, she said, "I submit plays to any number of theatres and they (The American Place Theatre) picked it up having read my stuff."

While the Saint Mary's production ran three nights to a standing-room-only theatre, the New York counterpart ran March 20 through April 1. "This theatre was doing the project in a particular slot. That was all the time it could get," explained Jensen. "Old Wives Tale" received reviews in The New York Times, Village Voice, and The New York Post, thus giving it much exposure.

Besides changing the play's title in making it's transition from Saint Mary's to the New York stage, "We changed the end," said Jensen. There were also slight interpretation changes because Jensen directed the College's production while Alma Beckes directed the New York production.

Jensen said of the New York production that it was "very much a stepping stone." She added, "Whenever you have got anything in New York wonderful things can happen to you."

This was not Jensen's first endeavor in New York; she has had readings of her plays in various theatrical companies in the Big Apple. This was also not the first play she had ever written. She has an impressive resume of award-winning plays, readings, and productions in progress.

Jensen is going on sabbatical next semester. Her future projects include putting together three one-act plays and making them an evening production. She is currently directing "The Dramatist" which opens at Saint Mary's this weekend.

Ueberroth thinks TV stations are a problem

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Commissioner Peter Ueberroth warned yesterday that the proliferation of TV superstations had become baseball's "most serious problem," casting in doubt the proposed transfer of Texas Rangers' stock to Gaylord Broadcasting.

Rangers owner Eddie Chiles said the minority stock deal would be on the agenda for baseball's winter meetings Dec. 3-7 in Houston.

However, Ueberroth's attorney, Ed Durso, confirmed yesterday that the commissioner's office had suggested Gaylord make "some modifications to make a deal that looks better from our perspective."

Durso said the suggested modifications were "not focusing on the superstation issue."

During a wide-ranging briefing on the upcoming winter meetings, Ueberroth told reporters he would look very closely at any stock transfer involving superstations - cable networks that use satellite signals to transmit games throughout the country.

Ueberroth called the superstations' effect on baseball revenue "insidious" and said they had curtailed the ability of other teams to make money from their own market.

"It does, without question - in all our research - dramatically affect attendance negatively," Ueberroth said. He said TV saturation created by the superstations also "dramatically affects television ratings," and therefore reduces the amount of money filtering down to baseball through television advertising.

He said the fact that all or parts of seven franchises currently were for sale was one of the "manifestations" of baseball's financial difficulties, in part created by the superstations.

The Georgetown Hoyas hope to be doing a lot of celebrating this season as they will be trying to defend their NCAA championship. So far, the Hoyas are off to a good start, having won their first two games. Georgetown is currently top-ranked in the AP Top Twenty poll, which appears on page 10.

Rose Bowl is most lucrative

Six Big Ten teams got bowl bids

Associated Press

CHICAGO - A record six Big Ten football teams will be going to bowl games this holiday season - aiming more for prestige than riches.

Except for the lucrative Rose Bowl, where champion Ohio State will face Southern California, most of the bowl games will provide little more than expenses.

Ohio State will haul away more than $5 million, which will be split 11 ways, with the conference office receiving a share. Most of the other bowls will not exceed the $750,000 minimum payment.

Participating teams get to keep everything up to $750,000, which presumably will cover expenses - especially with most of the schools taking their hands along.

Prestige, however, is a big factor, according to coaches interviewed Tuesday in a series of telephone calls. Michigan has the biggest opportunity to provide most of that prestige because the Wolverines get a shot at top-ranked, undefeated Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl at San Diego on Dec. 21.

"We lost five games and didn't anticipate having such an opportunity," said Coach Bo Schembechler, whose Wolverines finished 6-5. "I might add that every game we played was close and hard.

"Brigham Young is No. 1 and the most prolific passing team in the nation," Schembechler said. "We are schooled in handling that kind of assignment. We played Miami, Illinois, Iowa and Purdue - all nationally ranked passing teams - and we were 2-and-2 against them.

Teammate Johnson thinks Byars should win Heisman

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Thomas "Pepper" Johnson, Ohio State's All-Big Ten linebacker, says yardage comes harder for teammate Keith Byars than Boston College's record-breaking passer Doug Flutie, the leading candidates for the Heisman Trophy.

The Heisman, which goes annually to the nation's No. 1 college football player, will be announced Saturday night in New York. Miami (Fla.) quarterback Bernie Kosar, Flutie and Byars, the three leading candidates for the 1984 award, have been invited to the ceremonies announcing this year's selection.

Johnson, the sixth-ranked Buckeyes' top defender, said of Flutie, "He may throw a 12-yard pass and then the guy who caught it may run for 20 more. And Flutie gets all the credit."

Johnson then spoke of his 235-pound junior teammate: "Keith lines up eight yards behind the line to begin with, so he's working with a deficit. And then, when he gains yardage, he's got to get through 11 guys to do it. He's getting help from his offensive line, sure, but every team we played this year was pointing toward Byars.

"So what he has done has been remarkable. People don't realize it, but he's playing in the Big Ten, probably the most physical league in America."

Byars needs 41 yards against Southern California in the Rose Bowl to break former Ohio State tailback Archie Griffin's conference and school single-season rushing records of 1,695 yards.

Byars said of the Heisman, "My bid is in. You do that with how you perform in the ball games. I gave it my best shot. Now all we can do is sit and see how the votes go. There's no doubt Flutie is an outstanding football player. He means a lot to their team. He's had an outstanding year also. But I'm not going to take a back seat."

The Buckeyes' tailback, the son of a Dayton, Ohio, minister, was asked about his thoughts if he loses the award to Flutie. "It would be disappointing because I feel I have had a good enough year, worthy of the Heisman Trophy. It would be a setback to me," he answered.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said of his star runner, "I don't know if he'll be the Heisman Trophy winner, but he is sure the Heisman Trophy winner in my book."

Cross-country team finished season in fine form

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The 1984 Notre Dame cross country team surprised many people by qualifying for the NCAA Cross Country Championships for the first time since 1966. Even though the Irish placed 19th at the NCAA's after having hopes of a top-ten finish, the season and the meet cannot be considered a disappointment.

Irish head coach Joe Plane took a positive view of both the season and the NCAA's.

"The whole season was a big plus," Plane commented. "even the NCAA's. The meet went well because we were there, and because of that I'm pleased. Most of the runners felt they could have run better, but we were just happy to be there."

The Irish began their quest for a place in the NCAA's with a victory in their opening meet on September 14. The team scored 30 points (lowest score wins) to easily defeat Ohio State, Northwestern, Western Michigan, and Missouri.

The Irish were led by sophomore Mike Collins, senior Tim Cannon, and senior co-captain Bill Courtney, who placed third, fourth, and fifth respectively. Freshman Dan Garrett and senior Ed Willenbrink finished eighth and tenth to round out the scoring for the Irish.

Two weeks later Notre Dame faced stiffer competition at the National Catholic Meet, but the team prevailed and scored 57 points to capture the meet championship over 22 other teams. Boston College finished second with 81 points, while Marquette followed closely behind with a third-place total of 85 points.

Courtney, Cannon, and Collins finished seventh, ninth, and twelfth respectively. Willenbrink placed 14th, and was directly followed by Garrett in 15th. Even though they didn't count in the scoring, junior John Magill and senior co-captain Jim Tyler finished 17th and 18th, which was good enough to displace scoring runners from competing schools.

It was at the National Catholic Meet that the Irish displayed most vividly the traits that would lead them to their successful season. The team ran in a group and pushed each other to run better, which is shown by the fact that all seven runners placed in the top 18 and within twelve places of each other. In addition, all seven runners ran the five-mile course in under 25 minutes.

Notre Dame continued its unbeaten string with a victory one week later in the Notre Dame Invitational. The Irish tallied 77 points to defeat runner-up Southeast Missouri State and 44 other teams.

Cannon finished tenth to lead the Irish, while Willenbrink had his best race of the year in placing 12th. Garrett and Collins finished 15th and 17th, respectively, while Tyler rounded out the scoring with a 23rd place finish.

The Irish had a week off, and then came back on October 19 to capture the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet. The team accumulated only 36 points, to easily outdistance second place Purdue with 48 points and third-place Indiana with 60 points.

Once again Cannon led the way for the Irish with a second-place finish. However, Garrett and Courtney deserve much credit for the victory because they passed three Purdue runners at the four-mile mark and held them off to the finish. Collins placed tenth for Notre Dame, while Willenbrink finished 15th.

The Irish travelled to Butler University in Indianapolis for their first away meet of the year, the Midwestern City Conference Meet. The change in courses didn't bother the Irish, as they captured the meet title with the incredibly low score of 21 points. Loyola finished far behind in second with 65 points, while defending-champion Oral Roberts captured third with 74 points.

Cannon won the individual title, and was followed by Tyler in third place and Garrett in fourth place. Collins placed sixth while Courtney followed in seventh. The Irish, who were allowed to run extra men in the meet, so thoroughly dominated that they had 11 men in the top 18 finishers, and would have still won the meet if their top four men had not run.

On November 10 the Irish faced their toughest competition of the year at the NCAA District IV Qualifying Meet at Illinois. The district, which is the toughest in the country, included five teams ranked in the Top Twenty, and several other strong teams that were ranked at one time during the year.

The Irish scored 131 points to capture the fourth and final NCAA qualifying spot. The team finished behind Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan.

Garrett ran a fine race to finish 15th overall in a time of 30:33 for the 10,000 meter course. Garrett's placing was the highest of any freshmen in the district, and good enough to qualify himself as an individual if the team had not qualified.

Collins and Cannon finished 21st and 23rd respectively. Courtney placed 38th, while Willenbrink rounded out the scoring with a 44th place finish.

On November 19, the Irish competed in the NCAA Cross Country Championships at Penn State as one of the top 22 teams in the country.

Notre Dame scored 369 points to finish 19th. Arkansas won the meet with 101 points, and was followed by Arizona with 111 points. Even though the Irish finished far back in the standings, they were only 41 points away from their pre-meet goal of a top ten finish.

Much of the credit for the team's incredible success must be given to Plane. He became the coach of the Irish cross country and track teams in 1975, and the teams have improved each year.

"Coach Plane did a great job," says Magill. "He pushed all the right buttons, because look at where we got this year.

"Plane trusted the team more than in other years. We had a good group of kids so we could train on our own and help design our workouts. He opened himself up to be more like himself, and he should be commended for that."

Despite the somewhat disappointing finish in the NCAA's, the whole experience of the national meet will help the Irish in coming years.

"Next year the team will be more comfortable in a tough race," Cannon said. "They will handle it with more perseverance and confidence."

Although the team is losing four seniors, the remaining runners have confidence about the years to come.

"The program is coming of age. Its improved every year, and this year is just another step up," Magill says. "We're dedicated and working together so we can get better times and win some more big meets. Our next step is to go back to the NCAA's and do better."

The Irish, while having a lot of individual talent, succeeded because of teamwork and consistency. The team displayed a special character and togetherness that allowed them to stay strong in the final miles of each race and emerge as the winner of the meet.

"This is not my most talented team," Plane explains. "However, this was my best team in terms of chemistry and commitment to being the best."

stage for our going to Notre Dame." The Wildcats, plagued by 60 percent free throw shooting last season, missed three of their first four attempts Monday night before Peterson made a three-point play to put them up by 12 points eight minutes into the game.

Defensively, Falk hopes his Wildcats will be able to equal last year's aggressive style of play, when Northwestern was ranked in the nation's defensive top five for most of the season. It allowed just 54 points per game last season, holding six opponents under 50 points.

Although Northwestern usually falls back into a zone defense that Falk calls a "modified man-to-man," the Wildcats played an all-out man-to-man in their victory over Loras.

"We wanted to take the game to them," said Falk, explaining the defensive switch. "We didn't want any laid-back attitude."

Falk's defense will be trying to stop an Irish team that hasn't put its starting lineup on the court in two weeks. Junior forward Jim Dolan suffered a bruised shoulder November 15 against the Zadar Club of Yugoslavia and sat out Sunday night's opener against Manhattan.

Dolan should be in the starting lineup tonight, joined in the frontcourt by fellow tri-captains Ken Barlow and Tim Kempton. Kempton has been hampered by a recent leg injury, but should be available for duty.

Phelps will start freshman David Rivers at the point guard spot, while working both sophomore Scott Hicks and junior Joseph Price at the shooting guard position.

"We're going to look at different combinations early in the year and see what we can accomplish," says

Phelps of the backcourt situation. "Right now we want Rivers and Hicks and Price to become comfortable playing with each other in game situations. Dan Duff and Jeff Peters will have their chances to fit in there as well."

IRISH ITEMS - Rivers became the first Irish player since Adrian Dantley to start the first game of his freshman season when he started against Manhattan Sunday. A limited number of upper arena tickets, priced at five dollars apiece, still remain for tonight's game as well as Saturday's game against St. Francis. Tickets are on sale at gate 10 of the ACC.

competition, it is tough to tell how they will perform. Leading a host of promising freshmen swimmers is James Dowd who will challenge in the freestyle sprint."

The Irish won the Notre Dame Relays last year and Stark hopes to do as well this year.

"We have a few tough meets back-to-back in order to get the competition in, so we have to ask our strong swimmers to double events," said Stark.

The Irish face a tough Bowling Green team, as well as Cleveland State, and St. Bonaventure this season.

One of the goals of the Irish is to improve their second place finish at the Midwestern City Championships against Evansville last year.

"Without scholarships, we can only hope to fill the holes left by graduation and we can't plan for the season," says Stark. "We will combine the swimmers to find the right relay teams and do the best we can. We plan to draw recruits from the new pool construction due for completion in August."

improving."

Despite the loss of five swimmers to graduation last year, Stark suspects several of the nine freshmen joining the Irish line-up will take their places.

"We hope the new people will give additional depth," says Stark.

"There are a lot of freshmen this year and they always add a lot of spirit," says Amico. "We're all real close and although I can't make all the practices, I still feel included."

The Irish remained on campus during the Thanksgiving Break, holding double practices to prepare them for the next two weeks.

"We had an intersquad meet to see how we were progressing," says Stark. "It gave us a little pulse."

With the Notre Dame Relays and four dual meets slated for the next two weeks, Stark will test the improvement in the team's pulse.

Irish volleyball team showed positive signs in '84

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

It began as a season full of promises. And it ended on a sour note. But in between, the Notre Dame women's volleyball team put together a very fine season and gave glimpses of the success that Irish fans hope is on the way.

With a 15-9, 15-4, and 15-7 loss to the Spartans of Michigan State before Thanksgiving, the Irish ended a 14-13 season. Notre Dame experienced its share of ups and downs during the year, and this was certainly one of the latter.

After the team took second place in the North Star Conference tournament the weekend before by playing some inspired volleyball, the Irish coaches were afraid the players would suffer a letdown. As it turned out, that is exactly what happened.

"We weren't happy at all (with the MSU game)," commented Irish assistant coach Renee DeGraff. "We were so high for the NSC tournament, and then we hit an extreme low."

"I wonder if some of the girls might have thought the season was over after the tournament. But it's hard to get up for a single match after a tournament. It's a roller coaster."

One might be justified in calling the whole season a roller coaster. At times, the Irish played brilliant volleyball, controlling their matches with solid fundamentals and consistency. On the other hand, there were times when the Irish seemed neither physically nor mentally ready to compete.

Looked at in perspective, however, the season has to be considered a success. After finishing with an 11-30 record last year, the team was able to move back above .500 against a very fine group of opponents.

Although seemingly too short a team to control net play, the Irish parlayed their jumping ability into 719 kills during the season, while limiting their opponents to 662. The Irish were also able to match their opponents' totals in the categories of aces, blocks, and digs.

"We were happy with the season," said DeGraff. "We finished 14-13, we were tied for first in the conference after the regular season, and we lost in five games to Xavier in the conference tournament finals to finish second."

"We turned the program around. We've got a long road ahead of us, but compared to last year I think we really had a good year."

At the beginning of the season, head coach Art Lambert placed one goal ahead of all others as he talked of the upcoming season. He wanted all the players to improve so as to build for the future. It is in that respect that the season can be seen as most successful.

"Every single girl got better," said DeGraff. "We've got a lot of work to do, but everyone improved a great deal."

Although most of the team will return next year, two seniors played their final game for the Irish last week. Josie Maternowski led the team all year long with her inspired and consistent play, contributing 123 kills, 97 digs, and a .173 spiking percentage. Mary Jo Hensler, although hampered often by injuries which limited her playing time, also helped the Irish at the net.

But many young players who contributed greatly to the success of the team will be back next year. Sophomore Karen Sapp rebounded from a slow start, and led the team with 161 kills and a .180 spiking percentage.

Freshman Kathy Morin was a pleasant surprise, leading the Irish with 28 aces and helping out at the net. Junoir hitter Tracy Bennington contributed with her team-leading 92 blocks.

In addition, freshman Jill Suglich and junior Mary McLaughlin improved tremendously at the setter position over the season, and will be back to run the offense again next year.

And so, with a strong base in place, good things are hoped for in the future. Neither of the coaches are going to take it easy until these good things materialize. Both have already left on recruiting trips to prepare for next year.

"Next season we're going to surprise an awful lot of people," says DeGraff. "Now that we've got a chance to recruit heavily, I think we're going to be able to bring some very good athletes to Notre Dame."

"The teams we played this year got a taste of what Art and I are going to do for the program. Notre Dame is going to become a power in volleyball in the midwest."

Though this may seem to be little more than optimism run wild at this point, the coaching talent is there, as are some skilled players, with some more on the way. After considering this, there seems to be no harm in a little optimism for the future.

St. Mary's Wood sets playoffs as goal for '84

By PAM CUSICK
Sports Writer

Leading the Belles to a 1-1 record so far this season, Marvin Wood, head coach of the Saint Mary's basketball team, has one goal in mind: to qualify his team in the NAIA District Playoffs this year.

Wood was first interested in the job this summer when he heard there was an opening. With 28 years of coaching experience, he decided to give coaching at Saint Mary's a try.

"Coaching is like recess to a small boy. You enjoy it. You become a part of it," says Wood, Mishawaka's 1983 Man of the Year. "I was pleasantly surprised about this job because I didn't know what to expect."

Currently a counselor at Mishawaka High School, Wood has coached a total of 28 years - two years at French Lick High School, two years at Milan High School, two years at New Castle High School, nine years at North Central High School, three years at Shelbyville High School and 13 years at Mishawaka High School.

In 1974, he was named District Coach of the Year boasting a 20-3 record as Mishawaka's varsity basketball coach, and was elected to the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame one year later.

Wood then began to successfully coach girls high school basketball at Mishawaka in 1983 where his team became both sectional and regional champions, Holiday Tournament Champions (six times), and AAU 18-and-under state champions.

Last season, the Belles record was 4-18 which, Wood hopes, has room for improvement.

"We have to be competitive and play like winners," he says. "I hope to win most of the tournaments on our schedule."

A Butler University graduate with a B.S. in Physical Education, Health and Zoology, Wood followed with a Masters in Educational Administration, a Superintendent Certificate and a Guidance Certificate at Ball State University.

Concerning his first year coaching at Saint Mary's, Wood describes it as "better than expected."

"The Administration has been cooperative and the young ladies have been class both on and off the court," he added.

"He is a fair person because he respects us as people, not just as players," says sophomore guard Mariclaire Driscoll. "He teaches us the fundamentals--he tells us not only what to do but why we are doing it."

"He keeps everyone's spirits up," says freshman forward Rachel Bir. "He's a terrific coach and is very optimistic."

Wood apparently has exhibited a smooth transition for the Belles in his first year as coach, because he knows the game and is very positive.

"He's doing a fantastic job because he is intelligent, calm, positive and knows the game," says freshman center Stephanie Duke.

Rebounding off a close 79-77 defeat by NAIA District runner-up Huntington College Tuesday night, Wood plans on preparing his women for this weekend's Goshen College Tournament where they will take on Defiance College on Friday at 6 p.m. and will compete against Franklin College at noon on Saturday.

If the Saint Mary's basketball team sweeps the tournament this weekend, Wood's goal for the Belles to qualify in the NAIA District Playoffs may not be as unattainable as most may think.

Notre Dame looking for revenge as Northwestern Wildcats visit ACC

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's basketball team will be looking for revenge tonight when the Wildcats of Northwestern University visit the ACC for a 7:00 clash. Northwestern has defeated the Irish each of the past two seasons - last year in a 40-36 overtime contest in Evanston, Ill., and the year before in a 71-57 opening-round NIT game.

Seventh-year Northwestern coach Rich Falk hopes to see more balanced scoring and continued strong defensive play from his Wildcats as they visit the ACC for the first time since a 101-57 Irish win four years ago. Falk has 12 lettermen returning from last year's 12-15 team.

In order to beat Northwestern, Digger Phelps' squad will have to stop 6-10 senior forward Andre Goode, the Wildcats' leading scorer among returnees, who averaged 10.8 points per game last season. Goode also was Northwestern's top rebounder with 5.7 per contest.

Joining Goode in the 'Cats frontcourt will be 6-9 senior forward John Peterson and 7-0 senior center Colin Murray. The first man off the bench is another seven-footer, junior center Brian Pitts.

In the backcourt for Northwestern are 6-1 sophomore point guard Shawn Watts, who led the team in assists last year with 98, and 6-2 sophomore off guard Elliot Fullen.

Falk's third guard is Chris Berg, a 6-7 sophomore who can fill in at the forward position as well.

"I like Northwestern's personnel," says Phelps, "knowing that they beat Michigan and Indiana at home last year as well as a few other people. They have some good players that I feel can make them a strong team in the Big Ten this year. They've got Peterson, who plays very aggressively for a big man and shoots the ball very well against zones, and Andre Goode, who's as talented as any forward around - even though they've been playing Murray or even Pitts in the inside position.

"Fullen and Watts are two pretty good guards and Berg is a pretty good shooter, so they've got some depth. The fact that they beat us the last two years has us pretty concerned."

The Wildcats opened their season on a winning note Monday night, beating tiny Loras College of Dubuque, Ia., 69-50. Goode led the scoring attack with 12 points, while Peterson, Fullen and Watts netted 11 apiece. Falk was particularly pleased with the defensive play of top reserves Berg, who had a game-high five assists, and Pitts, who had two blocked shots.

"It was a good opener for us," said Falk of Monday's game, "because we won big, as we were supposed to. A lot of people got in the game. It was a boost to our morale. This set the

Men's swimming team opens '84 season Friday

By MIKE SZYMANSKI
Sports Writer

As the Notre Dame men's swimming team opens its season with the Notre Dame Relays Friday at 7 p.m. at Rockne Memorial, Coach Dennis Stark will begin to rebuild a competitive team that has lost nine seniors from last season's 7-4 club.

"I really can't say how the season will go, considering the loss of nine seniors, including the entire free-relay team," says Stark. "It is tough to replace swimmers like Al Harding and Dan Flynn, Notre Dame's best flyer ever. This may be a rebuilding year, where we will put people where they will do the team the most good."

The team will be led by co-captains Tim Bohdan and Brian Casey, both three-time letter winners. Bohdan is the varsity record-holder in the 500-yard and 1000-yard freestyle events and swims the backstroke and freestyle relay. Casey specializes in the butterfly events and holds the record for the 100-yard breaststroke.

Other returning monogram winners include senior Paul Benz in the backstroke, senior Richard Yohon in springboard diving, junior John Coffey in the backstroke and middle-distance freestyle, and junior Blaise Harding in the breaststroke. Senior Mike Kennedy will dive for the Irish, and sophomore Mark Jensen will swim the sprints.

"This year's freshman class will be counted on to contribute quickly and throughout the season," Stark says. "Until they prove themselves in

Notre Dame Relays tomorrow

Women face tough competition

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

While most students will spend this weekend trying to catch their breath as they approach the last push before finals, members of the Notre Dame women's swimming team will plunge into action, kicking off the 1984 season.

Notre Dame's first match will start tomorrow at 4 p.m. in the Rockne Memorial Pool as the Irish welcome teams from Butler University, Valparaiso University, Xavier University, the University of Illinois-Chicago and Saint Mary's College to the Notre Dame Relays. The contest allows each of the six teams to see how they measure up in action before their seasons officially begin.

"Our keenest competition will come from Illinois and Xavier," says Notre Dame head coach Dennis Stark.

Although the men's team used the Relays to start their last 20 seasons, tomorrow is the first time the women's squad will sponsor the pre-season event on its own.

"They're short and intense and they're always a lot of fun," explains Stark, who coaches both the men's and the women's teams. "Everyone gets excited and gets into the spirit of the thing."

Notre Dame's season officially opens here on Saturday at 11 a.m. when the Irish swim their first dual meet against a tough squad from Western Ontario University. Last season, the Canadian team soundly defeated Notre Dame by a 30-point margin and the Irish are looking to even the score.

"They beat us handily last year," says Stark. "They've always had a good women's team."

Junior Tracy Bennington (8) and sophomore Karen Sapp (12) both had impressive seasons for the Notre Dame volleyball team, as Bennington led the team in blocks, and Sapp topped the squad in kills and spiking percentage. Nonetheless it was an up and down year for the team. Eric Scheuermann reviews the '84 volleyball season in his story on page 14.

Pinkett wins second straight MVP award

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

Allen Pinkett repeated as the winner of the MVP award from the Notre Dame National Monogram Club to headline the awards presented at the 65th annual Notre Dame Football Banquet last night.

Seniors Mark Bavaro and Mike Gann took the honors as the outstanding offensive and defensive players, respectively. John Carney was named the outstanding specialty team player.

Four seniors - Pinkett, Tim Scannell, Mike Larkin and Tony Furanic - were elected by their teammates to serve as captains for the 1985 Irish football team.

Head Coach Gerry Faust introduced the graduating seniors and announced the winners of the 57 monograms awarded. "This team, when most people had given up on them, had not given up on themselves," Faust noted. "They have a lot to be proud of, and they're a lot of people who are proud of them."

Greg Dingens, a junior pre-med major, received the Notre Dame Club of St. Joe Valley Scholar-Athlete award.

Don Criqui, most known for his role as an NBC sportscaster, served as toastmaster for the program.
