Proposal to disband senate meets with outrage

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

Five student leaders, including Student Body President Bill Healy, proposed last night to disband the Student Senate in a letter which stated the senate had "long ceased to be a legitimate voice of the student body."

"Student Senate doesn't do anything. A bunch of people debate things and they don't accomplish anything," said Student Activities Board Manager Lee Broussard, one of the five signers.

"It's time we start doing our job and addressing student concerns," said Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence, who also signed the letter. "The Student Senate is stopping us. It's apparent to everyone on campus."

In addition to Healy, Broussard and Lawrence, Hall Presidents' Council Chairman Kevin Howard and Judicial Council Coordinator Karen Ingwersen signed the letter asking for the abolition of the senate by student referendum.

The announcement, which was made after the senate meeting last night, was met with outrage by several senate members.

"This is the most reactionary, juvenile stunt student government has ever attempted as yet," said Senator Jim Hagan.

"They refuse to even consider taking up any issue dealing with the administration. These so-called student leaders proposing this referendum didn't even have the guts to bring up any of this just one hour earlier at the senate meeting," said Hagan.

"Three of the people who wanted to disband the senate were not elected," Senator K.C. Culum said, referring to Howard, Broussard and Ingwersen.

To abolish the senate, a proposal first would need 15 percent of the student body's signatures or a two-thirds vote by the Hall Presidents' Council, said Parliamentarian Eric Parzianello, who also is Student Body Treasurer.

The senate also could vote by a two-thirds margin to begin the process of disbanding itself, Parzianello said.

If one of the above requirements is met, then the proposal would need approval of one-half of the student body or a two-thirds vote by the HPC or the senate for adoption, said Parzianello.

The process of disbanding the senate potentially could take six weeks, Lawrence said.

Several of the signers said they believe the Campus Life Council, composed of students, rectors and administrators, is the proper forum for student concerns. The process for approving proposals, they said, would become more efficient if proposals went directly through the CLC.

In the present student government framework, the CLC must pass all senate resolutions before they go to the administration for final approval.

All of the student senators are members of the CLC, Lawrence said.

"The CLC is going to be the voice of the students," he said.

"Bill Healy has once again shown his total inability to lead," said Domagalski, who is a senate member.

"His attempt to disband the Student Senate has nothing to do with anything but his inability to organize student opinion into legislation and programming," said Domagalski.

Healy, who chairs the senate, had much criticism for the body.

"The senate is associated with the word 'joke,'" said Healy. "By the time the Student Senate dealt with something like South Africa, it would be 30 years later."

"It's proven itself ineffective," said Healy. "The students have had enough of Student Senate members tinkering with student government toys."

Healy said last night's decision was a long time in coming. "Tonight's meeting was the last straw," he said.

"The idea has been around for a long time," agreed Lawrence.

Hagan said the action came because Healy had received criticism from alumni at last weekend's Student Leadership Conference.

"(Healy) admitted being criticized over not confronting the administration and having no power as student body president," Hagan said.

"He is reacting to that criticism by turning on students because he fears the administration," said Hagan.

Domagalski also criticized Healy. "(Healy) has constantly shown a lack of understanding and vision in terms of producing tangible results for the students who elected him," he said.

"It's a slap in the face to students," Domagalski added.

Domagalski said he admits the senate has many major flaws that need correcting. He said, however,

A NEW BEGINNING

October 14, 1985

Given that the Student Senate has long since ceased to be a legitimate voice of the student body, we propose that this body be disbanded. In order that we get back to the students and serve you as we were elected to do, we call for a student initiative to begin this process. Should fifteen percent of the student body support this initiative by signature with I. D. number, it will become a student referendum. The support of one-half of the student body for this referendum will eliminate the Student Senate and will allow student government to serve the students without the encumbrance of this "debate forum." We ask for your support on this student initiative, which will be available for signature tonight. Thank you for your continued interest.

Officials vow to find leader of ship takeover

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Top Reagan administration law enforcement officials insisted yesterday that a Palestinian guerrilla leader accused of masterminding the Italian cruise liner hijacking be brought to the United States to face trial.

But the administration, rebuffed earlier by Italy in an attempt to have Mohammed Abu el Abbas arrested, made no headway in getting his provisional arrest in Yugoslavia, pending a formal extradition request.

In fact, the Yugoslav news agency reported that Abbas, 38, was out of the country. The White House said it had no independent confirmation of that.

CBS news, however, said its correspondent in Tunis, Tunisia, had spoken to Abbas by telephone in Yugoslavia shortly before 8 a.m. - after the Palestinian leader was already said to have left.

CBS quoted Abbas as saying that Yugoslav authorities had told him he could stay as long as he wanted. The network did not say how its correspondent knew that the man to whom he spoke was Abbas.

The State Department said the United States was asking Yugoslavia for confirmation that Abbas had left the country.

The statement also said: "We have not yet received a response from the Yugoslav government to our request that Abbas be provisionally arrested pending a formal extradition request."

Educator to address importance of testing

By BOB MUSSELMAN
Assistant News Editor

Stanley Kaplan, educator and founder of test preparation centers throughout the United States and Canada, will speak today at Notre Dame about standardized tests and testing.

Kaplan's presentations, at 4:30 p.m. in the LaFortune Little Theater and at 6:15 p.m. in the Library Auditorium, are being sponsored by the Notre Dame Preprofessional Society, Alpha Epsilon Delta, and the South Bend Kaplan center.

The early program, which will concern the national medical boards and their relation to residencies, will be directed by University of Indiana medical students who study in Hagar Hall.

At 6:15, Kaplan will discuss "The Role of Standardized Testing in the Admissions Process," with premed, prelaw and any other students preparing for admission tests.

Tony Bevilacqua, president of the professional society, said his group asked its advisor, Father Joseph Walter, "to get somebody in here to talk on the role of testing." Walter, chairman of the department of preprofessional studies, contacted Kaplan.

"Who could be more fitting than Stanley Kaplan to talk about testing?" Bevilacqua said.

Kaplan has been associated with education since 1938, according to promotional literature. He began tutoring in high school and continued the technique of one-on-one instruction in college.

During the 1950s, Kaplan developed courses which reinforced skills tested in the Scholastic Aptitude Test, then proceeded to develop preparation courses for dental, medical, law and other graduate programs.

He currently operates more than 120 test preparation centers throughout the continent.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte, whose oldest daughter was kidnapped a month ago, said yesterday he sent his other daughters and grandchildren to the United States after telephoned threats were made to kidnap another of his relatives. An American plane left Ilopango military air base yesterday carrying what sources said were 15 to 18 people. "The question of the trip that my children and grandchildren are taking today is because I received more threats of another kidnapping, and I'm taking the precautions to protect my children and my grandchildren, and the men of the family are all staying with me," said Duarte, president of El Salvador and graduate of Notre Dame. -AP

Condemned murderer William Vandiver had lunch and talked with his wife, Mariann, yesterday, less than two days before his scheduled execution for the murder of her father, authorities said. Prison officials refused to release details about the meeting, which was granted at Vandiver's request. Vandiver has asked for pizza for his final meal this evening, a prison official said. T. Edward Page, a Lake County, Ind. court commissioner, said Vandiver had given up hope of avoiding the death penalty and wanted to spare his wife a lengthy prison term. -AP

Americans touring other lands face real possibility of hostile treatment

The release of the luxury liner Achille Lauro brought to an end yet another act of terrorism in a long string affecting American citizens while travelling abroad this year.

Recent hijacking victims have been lucky in a sense. No crazed terrorists have opened fire randomly. Instead, the few killed seem to have been chosen carefully after a search of passports by hijackers. American tourists seem to be susceptible if Leon Klinghoffer is any indication. Klinghoffer, a 69-year old stroke victim confined to a wheel chair, was shot and thrown into the sea by attackers.

An article in yesterday's Chicago Tribune told of an American couple on the ship who concealed their U.S. passports and passed themselves off as Austrian citizens, producing identification issued by the Austrian government. Donald Saire was a United Nations diplomat based in Austria. His wife hid their passports, fearing her husband would be the first killed.

Last summer Robert Stetnam, a Marine leaving for a vacation was the only victim of the hijacking attack of a plane leaving Greece.

According to a Chicago area couple, the hijackers aboard the Achilles Lauro announced they were Palestinians, and directed remarks to passengers such as "America no good. Reagan no good."

What can facts such as these mean about the image of the United States abroad? Obviously, hijackers are not rational about their hatred. But when American citizens have to think twice before travelling to foreign countries, American foreign policy may need closer examination.

What about the consequences of such acts on American travel? Overseas businessmen have always enjoyed American tourists and the money they can pour into a country's ailing economy. However, this contribution can come to a grinding halt if the present state of events continues.

Students in foreign studies programs may also think twice about some of their travel this semester. But according to Notre Dame Foreign Studies Director Isabel Charles, students may be "more and more realizing that these are isolated incidents possible anywhere in the world today."

"The result (of such attempts) is more security rather than less," she continued.

Charles said that Notre Dame students travelling abroad are instructed to keep updated about possible trouble spots, and to avoid those areas. Students check with the director of the particular program before travelling and are asked to leave an itinerary with the director.

Theresa A. Guarino

Saint Mary's Executive Editor

"One thing we're very careful about is being sure we get responsible carriers to book flights on," Charles said.

At Saint Mary's Ireland and Rome programs, directors try and encourage students to "use common sense," said Ellyn Bussing-Pugh counselor of the Ireland program.

"We don't have any jurisdiction over students while they're travelling," she said. "They're on their own when they do that, although most stay in West Europe."

Should Americans be wary of travel, and is this a legitimate concern? On one hand, they seem to be singled out when terrorist acts occur. On the other hand, in spite of recent well-publicized events, statistics-wise, travel still remains relatively safe in most commonly toured areas.

Events such as the Achille Lauro can have two meanings to Americans, if something can be gained from that and other such incidents.

Ronald Reagan can fume, and threaten international terrorists with retaliation all he wants. But until the administration starts to deal with what is behind such acts, threats of revenge will not serve to deter terrorists who are beyond reasoning anyway.

Secondly, while the government needs to look into the causes of hijackers' actions, Americans cannot be fearful of leaving the country because of them. When that happens, we will know that American esteem and confidence has hit an all-time low at home and abroad.

Common sense is the precaution to be considered these days for American citizens travelling overseas. But in this case, simple prevention will not be the best cure. Examining the symptoms of the epidemic can only serve to stop the disease from further spreading.

"Whistle Stop" highlights Board of Governance talks

By PEGGY PROSSER
News Staff

Security precautions recently taken were among the topics discussed at the Saint Mary's Board of Governance meeting last night.

"I couldn't believe it, but a lot of students were getting mace and flashlights in their care packages from home," said Regina Hall President Mary Flynn, speaking about security concerns.

To allay those concerns, Representative Ann Conte described "Whistle Stop," a program instituted as a safety precaution for the Saint Mary's community.

She said a letter was sent to Saint Mary's students detailing the purpose for the sale of whistles, which are meant to scare away attackers and attract attention when blown.

"Security on both campuses has been told about the program," said Conte. "But we do stress that the possession of a whistle does not guarantee your safety."

Those interested in purchasing the $1 whistles can contact their resident assistants, Conte said.

Another topic raised at the meeting was the benefit for Notre Dame student Kevin Hurley.

Although the original idea for a benefit dance was not employed, Saint Mary's Campus Ministry has donated $500 to the trust fund Hurley's parents have established.

In other business, Jeanne Heller, vice president of student affairs, said those at the meeting should continue their efforts in collecting for the United Way.

The survey results from the possible change in library hours were announced, with only 39 percent of the campus responding.

"Until we get at least a 50 percent response from the students, we can't draw up any type of proposal, so we're urging those who wish to see a change in the library hours to return their surveys," Student Body President Anne Marie Kollman said.

Saint Mary's governing body adds eight members in annual selection

By CHRIS SKORCZ
Senior Staff Reporter

Eight new members will join Saint Mary's Board of Regents Oct. 24 when the College's governing body convenes for its first meeting of 1985-86, said William Hickey, acting president.

The elections to the 30-member board are based upon nominations sent to a separate committee of the board designated to select the new members annually.

There are no specific criteria for election to the board, Hickey said, although he quipped that "board members at any institution usually have one of the three W's: wealth, wisdom, or work."

"On a more serious note, our nominations are people who have the concerns of the College at heart," said Hickey.

"The board is like the stockholders of a corporation who are responsible for making all policy decisions for the College. These decisions include such policies as the budget, the curriculum, etc.," he said.

The new members of the Board of Regents include Paula Lawton Bevington, a 1958 Saint Mary's graduate now serving as vice president for community relations at Servidyne, Inc. in Atlanta.

Margaret Hall Cushwa, a 1930 graduate of the College, also has been named to the board. Cushwa and her husband have been longtime benefactors of Saint Mary's and the Cushwa-Leighton Library bears their name.

Olivia Maria Espin, coordinator of special projects for the International Student Office at Boston University, also will begin her first term on the board.

The sole male member elected to the board this year is Joseph Fahey Jr., a Notre Dame graduate who has had four daughters graduate from Saint Mary's. Fahey is a financial consultant from Stamford, Conn.

Representing the Sisters of the Holy Cross are Sister Basil Anthony O'Flynn, Sister Rita Slattery, and Sister Mary Turgi.

O'Flynn, who has served the College in various capacities since 1956, is currently the assistant to the vice president for College relations. O'Flynn, like Cushwa and Fahey, has served previously on the board.

Slattery, a graduate of the University of San Diego, has been director of the associates program for the Sisters of the Holy Cross for the past five years.

Turgi, assistant director of Campus Ministry and coordinator of Social Ministries at Saint Mary's, graduated from the College in 1969.

The student representative to the board is Anne McCarthy, a senior English literature major from Ash-tubula, Ohio.

Each member is elected to a three-year term and may serve no more than six consecutive years, although he or she may be reelected to the board after a one-year absence, Hickey said.

Ten of the 30 board members must be Sisters of the Holy Cross, Hickey said. They are selected directly by the General Council of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, he said.

Senior named as member of Regents

By ALEX PELTZER
Staff Reporter

While many Saint Mary's students will be relaxing during their week-long October break, Anne McCarthy will be busy making their opinions known.

McCarthy, the student regent on the College's Board of Regents, will be attending the board's three-day meeting beginning Oct. 24.

"My main concern is voicing student opinion on decisions made and making sure they take students into consideration," McCarthy said.

McCarthy, a full voting member on all issues addressed by the board, has several responsibilities that allow her to accomplish this, she said.

Among those responsibilities include orienting the new regents to student life and government and sitting on the committee for student life.

McCarthy is confident she will have an impact on decisions made by the board, she said.

"The regents have an open ear for the students," McCarthy said. "Student government does have a large role in administrative decisions at Saint Mary's."

McCarthy, who sees her position as a "student representative between the body of students and the administration's executive board," said she expects to be involved in several issues at the October meeting. Those issues, she said, include the sexuality survey taken last year and the College's financial matters.

To become a board member, McCarthy and approximately 15 other students wrote Sister Karol Jackowski, dean of student affairs, telling her why they believed McCarthy was well qualified, she said.

From there the letters went to John Duggan, then president of Saint Mary's, who passed them on to the Sisters of the Holy Cross, where the final decision was made, McCarthy said.

Although McCarthy is president of the senior class, she said being involved in student government was not a requirement for the position.

"They were looking for someone who was experienced in working with the problems with the administration and students," she said.

Three senators walk out in protest

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

In what could have been one of the Student Senate's final meetings, three senate members walked out destroying the quorum and ending the meeting.

The quorum, which is a sufficient number of senate members present, is needed to approve any senate resolution.

The senate had been debating a proposal by Student Body President Bill Healy to take a referendum on students' views regarding divestiture in South Africa.

When Healy was reminded by Kevin Howard, Hall Presidents' Council chairman, that he didn't need the senate's approval to sponsor the referendum, Healy ended debate on the matter and told the senate, "I will bring the referendum to the student body."

According to parliamentary procedure of the senate, however, Healy could not end the debate and it began again.

At this point Howard, Judicial Council Coordinator Karen Ingwersen and Student Activities Board Manager Lee Broussard walked out.

"I think it's awesome," said Healy, referring to the walkout. He added he was glad to see some action taken.

Earlier in the meeting, the senate had elected Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence chairman of a committee that will investigate a restructuring of student government.

Lawrence was nominated by Healy, igniting an argument with Junior Class President Jim Domagalski and Senator K.C. Culum.

"It cannot be Bill Healy's restructuring committee. It should be the Student Senate's," said Domagalski.

Culum added, "Until we see the type of committee I don't think we should select a chairman."

Healy then told the senate that all committee members had to be approved by the senate as well as the committee's future actions.

Earlier in the meeting, senate members had reported on what they learned during last weekend's Student Leadership Conference.

"I got a lot more out of the weekend than I thought I would," said Ingwersen.

"I learned to set realistic goals. Leadership is not just a position but making people believe you can do something," she said.

Many problems plaguing the current student government discussed with past student leaders during the leadership meetings, Sophomore Class Vice President Laurie Bink said.

"Student relationships with the administration aren't where they should be," Bink said. "Some mutual respect would go a long way."

"One voice needs to come out of student government," said Broussard, adding, "We have too many right now."

"Maybe we have to redefine our goals to gain the student's respect," said Senior Class President John Spatz.

"If you're going to be a leader you've got to lead and get things done," said Howard. "It reminds the administration that we are still here."

Parliamentarian Eric Parzianello said arguing with the administration is not showing disrespect but is a good way to cause change.

"We can't be complacent with the administration," he said.

Time travellers

Disband

"It is the only forum that offers students a say in what happens at Notre Dame."

"I only hope that one of America's most intellectual student bodies will look at the compulsiveness of Healy's decision and the potential for improvement in the Student Senate and work with those of us who continue to believe that our efforts in working with students can improve Notre Dame."

Senator K.C. Culum also strongly disagreed with Healy. "I question the prerogatives of the people who signed the letter," he said. "Who is the legitimate voice of the student body?"

Culum said he believed better organization on leadership's part would make the senate more effective.

"I think Student Senate has the people who could make it effective," he said.

Both Healy and Lawrence said the action would be in students' best interest.

"We have to start leading the students and meeting their needs," said Lawrence.

Added Healy, "It might look bad but it's the best thing."

Tests

South Bend Ave., offers students classroom and supplemental material, according to Katie Shaughnessy, manager of the center.

The classroom materials, Shaughnessy said, make students aware of what the tests are like, while the supplemental information allows students to concentrate on weak areas.

Shaughnessy said the center annually serves 150 to 200 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's premed students and 60 to 80 law school hopefuls, plus students preparing for the GMAT and the GRE.

"It's impossible to make guarantees (for success)," she said, "but we have consistently found that for the students who work hard on the supplemental materials, their score is a function of that effort."

Bevilacqua said Kaplan's talks will not concern the Kaplan centers. He said Kaplan is a "really outgoing dynamic speaker and a very learned man."

Walter called Kaplan a "great entrepreneur" who "has done a lot for education." He said Kaplan will discuss "the importance of preparing for standardized exams in general."

Kaplan's preparation program is unnecessary for students who are well prepared and self confident, Walter said, but for others it's a "perfect review."

Walter said the program also gives confidence to students who are apprehensive about standardized exams.

As Walter said he tells his students, "It's here, it's available if you feel you need it for review or self confidence."

Robert Waddick, assistant dean of arts and letters and advisor to the prelaw society, said he does not advise students to invest in the relatively expensive test preparation programs.

The Kaplan Law School Admission Test preparation, for example, costs $400.

guest column

"The Trumpet of the Swan," a classic story about a swan named Louis who is born without a voice, was read to me and my siblings by my mother, who always had a sense for great books. I later read "Charlotte's Web" and "Stuart Little" on my own, and then, on entering junior high, I decided I had outgrown E.B. White.

What I didn't realize was that White is considered one of the most talented and versatile writers in American history.

White's love for writing developed early in his life. He kept a serious journal as a boy, and as a teenager he published a series of poems, essays, and short stories in his high school newspaper. After graduating in 1921 from Cornell University, where he served as editor-in-chief of the student newspaper, White spent a few years traveling and working at odd jobs before joining the New Yorker full-time in 1927.

White soon became the New Yorker's most important and influential writer, contributing serious essays and humorous articles in addition to his regular introductory and editorial sections.

Even when his prolific career had taken him elsewhere, White maintained a close relationship with this magazine and continued to contribute to it for over 50 years. His career culminated with a series of prestigious awards, including the Pulitzer Prize in 1978.

I rediscovered White when I entered college and picked up a small, thin handbook titled "The Elements of Style," known to many college students as "Strunk and White." It sits on a shelf next to two other books to which I refer whenever I write a paper: a dictionary and a thesaurus.

White's pithy, 85-page book is written in the same concise style that it preaches to the reader. It contains a long list of one-line instructions which read something like the ten commandments:

Be clear.
Do not overwrite.
Do not overstate.
Omit needless words.
Revise and rewrite.

The list goes on. A brief explanation and usually an example follow each command. "The Elements of Style" is the product of White's revision of the first edition, commonly referred to as "the little book," published by his former English professor at Cornell. White's revised edition has become state of the art among books of English and composition and style, and it probably will be a long time before anyone suggests doing a second revision. This book would be difficult White's command of the structural and stylistic aspects of the English language marked him as a great craftsman. It was his humanity, however, that made him famous.

It is for his humanity that he will be remembered. His novels and essays emanate a love of the world and all of its creatures, great and small. Common themes were his hatred of war, his love for animals and especially his love for young people.

In an essay titled "A Slight Sound at Evening," White reflects on Thoreau's "Walden," and offers some advice to both universities and students: If our colleges and universities were alert, they would present a cheap pocket edition of the book to every senior upon graduating, along with his sheepskin, or instead of it. Received at such a juncture, the book is like an invitation to life's dance, assuring the troubled recipient that no matter what befalls him in the way of success or failure he will always be welcome at the party - that the music is played for him, too, if he will but listen and move his feet.

Coming from such a phenomenally-successful man, these words of advice offer hope and inspiration to all students worried about their future. I, a senior whose real major (who am I trying to kid?) remains undeclared, read "A Slight Sound at Evening" for a class last week, and was floored by it.

On arriving in class the next morning, I was told E.B. White had died the night before.

When I remarked on the irony of the timing of his death with regard to our assignment, I was greeted with a double irony - I had read the wrong assignment. I'd like to think that White would have appreciated the humor in this.

The book "Charlotte's Web" tells of a friendship between Wilbur the pig and Charlotte the spider. Charlotte uses intelligence, ingenuity, and stamina to save Wilbur's life, and then worn out, dies at the county fair. She leaves in Wilbur's care an egg sack, which he holds safely in his mouth until he is brought back to the barn at home.

When, after a long winter's wait the eggs begin to hatch, the baby spiders begin to spin little balloons and float away and out of Wilbur's life. Wilbur breaks into a panic, and after watching desperately as spider after spider takes to the wind, he closes his eyes in despair and cries himself to sleep, only to awake later and find that three of Charlotte's children have decided to stay and make their homes in his barn.

Charlotte leaves him a legacy of friends which lasts the rest of his life, although none of them ever quite take her place in his heart.

E.B. White died on October 1. Like the spiders which drifted out of Wilbur's life, the man will be missed. But he leaves a legacy of writing which offers warmth, beauty and inspiration to all who will read it.

Grace must understand only performing counts

Dear Editor:

Since my graduation from Notre Dame four years ago, I have attempted to keep up with the news on the varsity soccer team. I have become very disturbed on many occasions recently by some of the comments that have come from the head coach, Dennis Grace, concerning this team and teams of the past coached by my friend, Rich Hunter, and I would like to make the following points:

- All teams coached by Hunter were very competitive. He never skirted any contest and tried to play the very best competition available. Notre Dame played Indiana in just our second season; St. Louis in the third season and consistently played such great teams as Ohio State, Dayton, Xavier, Western Michigan and Purdue.
- Notre Dame was a consistent winner in the years Hunter coached. No excuses, no alibis. Just a hard-nosed brand of soccer that achieved results. Hunter never had a scholarship to give out either, but that did not mean that the team did not play with the class or intensity of a scholarship team.

- Hunter was an individual who was totally committed to the University. He never took the credit for the team's successes - even when he deserved it. He worked long hours for the soccer program, for the Bengal Bouts and as the best instructor on campus. And yet the soccer program rose to midwest prominence and even achieved a national ranking after the stunning upset of St. Louis. No excuses, just performance.

- Hunter was and is the best friend a soccer player could have at Notre Dame. On and off the field, he was a great guy and we enjoyed playing soccer for him. The lessons we learned about soccer and life in general will not be forgotten.

It is not that I or any of my teammates wish the present coach or team bad luck or ill will, but when we read in the paper about Grace "building soccer," or about how he has so little to work with, it makes us mad. We know, however, that Rich Hunter left Notre Dame with a solid team and with many solid building blocks to work with: the beautiful field, the bleachers, the camps and a record of achievement that would make any university proud of its coach and team. Coach Grace, wake up and realize that it is only performance that counts in life.

Hesburgh's apartheid views insult students

Dear Editor:

We were disappointed that even the closing statement of Father Hesburgh's speech last Friday did not seem to address the issue of apartheid and the Notre Dame investments that support that system. As rare as political movements on this campus are, an opportunity like Friday's rally should not have been wasted on the rhetoric and name-dropping that could only serve to divert people's attention from the matter at hand. Although we were glad to hear of a Notre Dame alumnus' involvement in the 1985 peace prize, the hundreds in attendance outside the golden dome on Friday were there to protest and show solidarity with the plight of the black majority in South Africa.

We appreciate Hesburgh's participation in the rally. His apparent opposition to Notre Dame's divestment from South Africa, however, is wholly unacceptable to many of us. To begin with, his theory that the Japanese and West Germans would fill the economic vacuum created by divestment is insensitive and insulting to those people's social concern. Second and more importantly, this line of thinking is believed by many informed scholars on the issue to be one of the more fallacious arguments about divestment. Third and finally, let us follow in the footsteps of other fine institutions that have already divested their shares in South Africa, and not be among the last to wring our hands of the crime in South Africa.

We believe that whereas President Reagan's policy of constructive engagement has only allowed the flames in that country to continue to smolder, constructive dis-engagement (i.e. divestment) will help to extinguish the fire outright.

RING! Notre Dame firemen blaze into action

features staff writer

It's about 11 p.m. You're studying for a midterm or you're in the shower with shampoo in your hair. The dreaded occurs - the fire alarm blares and an R.A. directs everyone out of the dorm...

Though not uncommon, fire drills are something you never get used to. As you stand in the cold, shivering and yawning, you might notice the red fire truck parked nearby and people running around the dorm looking for the hypothetical blaze.

It all seems to be a joke when you have a million things to be done, but the Notre Dame fire department has been serving a serious purpose since 1939.

It was at this time that Fire Chief Brother Borromeo Malley C.S.C., then the director of utilities, started the fire department in cooperation with the utilities department. According to Malley, who constructed the University's first fire engine himself, "There was no fire station at first, so we kept the engine and equipment at the power plant."

In the beginning, the fire department was run entirely by the Holy Cross brothers. The fire station, which is located on the north side of campus, was finally built in 1945 and the brothers slept at the station to provide around-the-clock service.

It wasn't until 1978 that the fire department was recognized as a service independent of the utilities department. At this time, highly qualified firemen were hired from outside the University and put on payroll. Also, the position of director of fire safety was filled by Jack Bland, and Malley became the official fire chief.

So for 46 years, the campus has been drilled, inspected, instructed, and asked to abide by certain fire safety policies. Grumblings over untimely drills or policies that limit creativity when decorating SYRs can be quieted by the fact that throughout the 46 years of service, there have been no fatalities as a result of fires at the University.

According to Bland, the general attitude of students during fire drills seems to be one of unconcern. "This is understandable," said Bland. "Very few people will enter a dorm wondering 'am I safe in this building?'" Recently, this question has been raised by many when entering hotels across the country. Some visitors to hotels will refuse to stay in a high rise. If this is the case, then perhaps more concern should be shown by students in regard to their safety in dorms; in the uniform building code for the state of Indiana, dorms are treated as hotels for purposes of inspection and fire codes.

At the very least, it seems a certain level of awareness is needed for students. "Students hold a certain amount of responsibility to each other," said Bland. "What each does can affect the lives of 200 or 300 people."

Considering some common components of dorm rooms - big, over-stuffed chairs from Goodwill, posters on the walls, wooden lofts, shaggy carpet where various chemicals may have spilled and dried - it's easy to see that a room could become a blazing inferno within a matter of moments.

Grumblings over untimely drills or policies that limit creativity when decorating SYRs can be quieted by the fact that throughout the 46 years of service there have been no fatalities as a result of fires at the University.

An incident at Providence College in the early 1970s affected fire safety policies at many institutions, and Notre Dame was no exception. According to Bland, one student was trying to dry her socks with a hair dryer when a fire ignited and spread quickly into the hallway.

Because it was Christmas time and the halls were lined with paper decorations, there was a flash fire effect which claimed the lives of ten women who had opened their doors and entered the corridor. "This is why we enforce decorating rules so strictly," said Bland.

There have been incidences of damage done to buildings and campus structures. Most recently, the result of an overabundance of candles burning at the Grotto called the department into action.

As far as dorm fires go, a fire in St. Edward's Hall on June 25, 1980, probably was the most serious. It began when sparks from a cutting torch used by a workman to remove a fire escape set the roof on fire. Extensive smoke and water damage was done to the entire building, but the fire never reached below the fourth floor.

As a result, the department now requires that any welding or use of cutting torches on campus be approved by Bland. "If there's any chance of combustion as a result of the job, we won't allow it," said Bland. "If we do approve, there will be someone from the fire department nearby to supervise."

Besides Malley and Bland, the department is staffed by eight experienced firemen (two of whom act as captains) and three students who also live in the fire house and juggle their academics with the responsibilities of fire prevention. "At least four or five of us will answer a call during the day," said Bland, "and at least three will respond at night." Bland also added that if those responding to the call were to spot any smoke coming from the building at all, the South Bend Fire Department would be called immediately.

Because more smoke detectors continue to be installed in various buildings, the department is being called out by more false alarms. According to Bland, however, they leave the station hoping each time that it is just a case of burnt popcorn or toast. "I'd much rather answer 4000 false alarms than one real fire."

The department's domain of responsibility is not limited to the University's campus. "We also respond to alarms at Saint Mary's College and Holy Cross Junior College," said Bland. Besides responding immediately to any and all fire alarms, the department has a number of other responsibilities. Among others, they conduct training sessions, test equipment, install sprinkler systems, clean smoke detectors, check all safety systems regularly and participate in the orientation of resident assistants each year.

Possibility of fire, destruction and tragic loss are not things we want or need to be reminded of every day. In this respect, the Notre Dame Fire Department does what it can to make them the least of our worries. Although "National Fire Prevention Week" was last week, the sentiments that abide at the Notre Dame fire house are reflected well in a comment made by Malley: "We have fire prevention every day here."

Student learns to handle 'hot' occupation

Margaret McCabe

When the fire alarm sounds in a dorm, the reactions are fairly predictable - a lot of reluctant shuffling towards an exit. On the other end of the scenario (at the fire station), there's another student responding to the alarm - except his responsibilities involve a little more than simply getting himself out of the building.

Pat Lorch, a senior biology major, is a fireman for the Notre Dame Fire Department. It doesn't seem likely that preventing fires would fit easily into any student's lifestyle. But according to Lorch it has its definite advantages, an obvious one being the compensation Lorch receives in the form of free room and board.

"It's a unique opportunity," said Lorch, "in more ways than the room and board aspect."

Lorch, a former resident of Cavanaugh Hall, now lives on the second floor of the fire station with the other firemen. This aspect presents a great number of advantages to Lorch. "I love the quiet," said Lorch. "I can study or go to bed early if I want to, which is tough to do in a dorm."

The people Lorch lives and works with, mostly firemen who've worked in South Bend or Elkhart for a time, add interest to life in the firehouse. Lorch is pleased not only to see how these firemen live, but also to get to know them as people.

Lorch feels that most students at Notre Dame only come into contact with the people from the community in the dining halls or when they meet janitors or maids in the dorm, but very few try to get to know them. For Lorch, getting to know the firemen has been an enlightening experience. "For instance," he said, "how many people know the best techniques or locations for perch fishing or the best places to buy tools... much less how to operate the self-contained breathing apparatus or how to handle a one-and-a-half-inch hose line?"

Lorch is pleased not only to see how these firemen live, but also to get to know them as people.

Of course wherever there are advantages to a situation there are usually one or two disadvantages, and Lorch needs no time to decide what they are: "It's tough getting up in the middle of the night to answer calls," said Lorch. However, one (probably a male one) would think there is a slight advantage to roaming around a women's dorm at three in the morning looking for a fire. "We joke about it from time to time," said Lorch, "but when we're actually there we don't really notice anything because we have our minds on other things."

Lorch's experience began last summer when he found out that the department would hire during the summer. He started working then and when the summer was over, he applied for one of the open positions.

Although Lorch was trained on weekends for the first five or six weeks of the semester, "I'd never be required to enter a building if it were actually on fire," said Lorch. "I'd remain outside and assist the other firemen in any way possible."

It's inevitable that students at Notre Dame share many similar experiences when it comes to dorm life, social life or extra-curricular activities. Without a doubt, Pat Lorch has managed to create an admirable variation in an otherwise homogenous collection of Notre Dame adventures.

Desperately seeking stars at the observatory

features writer

Many Notre Dame students probably have never heard of the Astronomy Observatory located on the roof of the fourth floor in Nieuwland Science Hall. Yes, folks, we really have an Observatory here. Isn't that great? Now you'll have an interesting place to visit on some boring weeknight.

The observatory set-up parallels that of a modest science laboratory. The equipment available may not be as sophisticated as some major research-oriented observatories, but it does have some hardware that's adequate for the facility's present purposes.

According to Terrence Rettig, associate professor of physics, the primary purpose of the observatory is to stimulate visitors and students, especially those of science-oriented disciplines, to be aware of our universe and those beyond. Besides just looking at planets, constellations and quasars, the audience is further encouraged to think about the existence of mankind and our planet, and its relationship to the vast unknowns in the heavens above.

This prospect rewards all. For the science student, it develops an appreciation of the other side of science - that of the extra-terrestrial and astrological realms; and for the rest, it augments the liberal arts atmosphere that a Notre Dame education impresses upon us.

For the more interested student, several astronomy courses presently are offered. Physics 471 is designed for the science student with a more established background in physics and other fields.

On the other hand, there's also Physics 110 (introduction to astronomy) which can be handled by almost any student. This course focuses on everything from the simple beauty of the night sky to concepts on the formation of the universe, and it is intended to provide the student with a basic background in astronomy which should lead to an understanding of how science progresses. In fact, for most of us, this may be our only opportunity to operate a telescope on campus.

The observatory presently has four Celestron telescopes on hand. On a clear and moonless night, students and visitors can observe stellar formations, foreign galaxies, star clusters and other intergalactic phenomena. And even if your intention in going to the observatory is only one of a casual visit, just being on the roof in the cool night air and gazing at the numerous serene spots in the darkness above sometimes can have an influence on the emotional, and even spiritual, sides of us. It's a nice sensation.

As mentioned previously, the observatory is not intended for research and big-time investigation of astrological phenomena. The present situation will not permit such a large undertaking. Rettig said the best location for an observatory would be in the country pastures, where there's minimal smog, light, and pollution effects. South Bend does not quite fit this bill. So even if the right finances were available, expanding to create a major observatory at Notre Dame probably would be a mistake.

But finances are still helpful, however. The observatory at present is hardly deficient in equipment, but it could use some new facilities. The biggest need right now is for a permanent observatory-type shelter from the elements. The viewing deck presently has no shelter, so the heavy telescopes have to be kept in the storage room downstairs and transported by hand to the viewing deck every time a viewing session commences.

In the cold winter months, night observations can be quite chilling affairs. In fact, last winter a class had their pens freeze up on them on the deck. A modern shelter really can help the program, and pens. It will also make star-gazing a much more pleasurable and romantic experience. But just like anything else, this will cost. Finances will have to be obtained from special funds such as grants and civil-minded alumni.

The observatory welcomes both the student of astronomy as well as the curious visitor. It is open on any clear night from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m., Sunday through Thursday. So if it rains, forget it.

However, Wednesdays are more suitable for visitors; the assistants are better prepared on this day. There will be a teaching assistant in the facility during the stated times and days, and they will be willing to answer any questions.

The observatory is located on the roof of the fourth floor in Nieuwland Hall, right past the research section. There are signs posted. So pay a visit when you can, because it's an out-of-this-world experience.

The story of Joe Shmoe and Shelly the bus driver

features copy editor

I was sitting around my room totally bored one day, and I couldn't find a single thing to do. You know what I mean.

I tried practicing moonwalking for a while, but even doing my once-favorite activity bored me. I looked through my Felix the Cat coloring book, but I already had filled in every picture. (Yes, even the one of Master Cylinder.) What was I to do?

As most normal people do at least once in their lives, I started to reminisce about my past experiences and friends. Hey, I thought, this should take up at least three or four minutes of my time. What a great idea!

Going all the way back to first grade, I recalled a strange lad in my class named Joe Shmoe (names have been changed to protect the innocent). Joe had a nasty habit of eating way too much sugar-coated cereal for breakfast, and he would vent his extra energy in some unusual ways.

One day, Joe stuffed spaghetti up his nose during lunch, then proceeded to take a couple cartons of milk and whip them against the outside wall during recess. I figure he ate two or three huge bowls of Kaboom that morning. And five or six doughnuts.

Another time, he devised a marvelous scheme - to make our teacher, Mrs. Jones, go crazy. He went about this by saying the word "three" every minute or so. It wasn't the word that caused the class to break out into high-pitched guffaws so much as the way he said it. He'd contort his face into a moronish grin and let it fly, a drawn-out, idiotic "threeeeee." Don't ask me what's so funny about it, but I assure you, back then the class thought it was just about as hilarious as Curly of the Three Stooges doing his "woob woob woobs."

Mrs. Jones didn't take too well to it, though, and in her usual fashion grabbed poor Joe's earlobe and scooted him to the principal's office. My guess is that he had one bowl each of Count Chocula, Frankenberry, and Booberry cereal that morning. What a nutty guy.

As if those memories weren't fond enough, I began to recall my glory days in Cub Scouts, back in third and fourth grade. My dad was our pack leader, and boy, were we bratty.

To achieve the cherished bobcat, bear, and wolf badges, we had to do several dopey projects, like collecting leaves and taking out the garbage. On one of our pack's many excursions, we collected as many acorns as we could find. Now if that isn't entertainment, I don't know what is.

To spice up the festivities, we took the whole bucket and began beaming one member, Eddie, (a made-up name, of course), with the things. We chased him all the way back to my house, whereupon my dad viewed our empty bucket and Eddie's crying face and asked us just what the heck was going on. We all shuffled our feet and grinned sheepishly until he let us off the hook. Then we ran to the basement and cracked up laughing while we teased Eddie. And I went on to become a Boy Scout, too, ladies and gentlemen.

My mind was beginning to strain from all that thinking, so I decided one more memory would be enough. This time, I thought back to our daily bus ride to school in sixth grade. We had the coolest driver. Her name was Shelly, and she even played the radio while she drove. She was the neatest. Even her name was cool, because it reminded us of Shelly the Turtle, an ill-fated character who was featured on the box of some ill-fated cereal back then.

One day, Shelly must have been sick because we had a substitute driver. She was old and crusty, kind of like one of those ladies you see in aspirin commercials who are always complaining about their gargantuan headaches before "hidden" cameras (wink wink). Well, being the brats we were, we leaped on the opportunity to harass her. We sang every song in our repertoire of toilet humor, and gosh, we were having a good ol' time. That is, until we got to school.

When we arrived at school, she slammed the bus into park and yelled, "You kids stay right there." She left, and minutes later returned with our principal, Mrs. Kidhater (not anybody's real name), who was pretty old and crusty in her own right. Mrs. Kidhater proceeded to slap on us one of the stiffest fines imaginable - two demerits. Aauughh! I never lived that one down.

Coming back into the present, I wiped the sweat off my brow after that intense mental workout. I thought about how lucky I was to have grown and matured into the great guy I am now. Yeah, I've come a long way. You just better I hope I don't eat a big bowl of Frankenberry and come after you with some acorns.

Cardinals win on Smith's homer

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - Ozzie Smith, the least likely man in the St. Louis lineup, homered with one out in the ninth inning to give the Cardinals a 3-2 victory over Los Angeles in the pivotal fifth game of the National League playoffs yesterday. With the victory, the Cardinals swept the three games in their home park and took a 3-2 lead as the best-of-seven series headed back to Los Angeles.

The homer came on a 1-2 pitch from Tom Niedenfuer and was the first that the switch-hitting Smith has hit batting left-handed in 2,968 career at-bats. He had only six homers this season.

After an off day, the series resumes tomorrow afternoon at Dodger Stadium. In a rematch of Game 2, won by the Dodgers 8-2, Los Angeles will start right-hander Orel Hersher against the Cardinals' Joaquin Andujar.

In American League action, Kansas City travels to Toronto tonight to take on the Blue Jays in a game starting at 8:15 p.m. EDT.

Before Smith's dramatic homer yesterday, the two teams had played a 2-2 tie after Bill Madlock's two-run home run for the Dodgers in the fourth inning.

In and out of trouble, Dodger left-hander Fernando Valenzuela finally left after throwing 132 pitches through eight innings, and Niedenfuer, who saved Game 1 for Valenzuela, came in to pitch.

He got Willie McGee to foul out to third and ran the count to a ball and two strikes on Smith before the slightly built shortstop launched one into the second deck in right field, bringing his teammates rushing onto the field and eliciting a huge ovation from the 53,708 at Busch Stadium.

Tommy Herr gave the Cardinals their only two other runs in the game with a two-run double in the first inning, and Madlock evened it up in the fourth. It was the most closely contested game of the series. In fact, it was the only game decided after the sixth inning and only the second game of the playoffs decided after the third.

The winning pitcher was Cardinal bullpen ace Jeff Lahti, the fourth St. Louis pitcher of the day, who retired the Dodgers in order in the ninth.

Valenzuela pitched eight innings, giving up four hits and two runs with seven strikeouts and eight walks. The walks established an NL playoff record, surpassing the six allowed in 1974 by Pittsburgh's Bruce Kison and in Game 3 of this series by the Dodgers' Bob Welch.

The Cardinals played their second straight game of the series without left fielder Vince Coleman, whose left leg was injured Sunday when he was partially trapped under the machine that rolls the tarp onto the field.

"I wouldn't wish what happened to me on my worst enemy," said Coleman, whose only real injuries were scrapes and bruises. He could play Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Cardinals right-hander Bob Forsch, a spot starter this year, lasted only 3 1-3 innings before he was relieved by left-hander Ken Dayley after giving up the tying runs in the fourth inning. The 35-year-old Forsch is the senior member of the Cardinals, having been with the club since 1974.

Cards manager Whitey Herzog elected to go with Forsch on yesterday instead of bringing back Andujar on three day's rest. Andujar was ineffective in losing Game 2 in Los Angeles, going 4 1-3 innings and giving up six runs on eight hits.

In Game 1, Valenzuela had to pitch his way out of minor trouble in the first two innings. This time, he was only half as lucky. And this time, the trouble was of his own doing, the result of wildness.

Valenzuela walked Willie McGee on a 3-2 pitch to start the first inning. McGee checked his swing just in time to avoid striking out, and the next batter, Smith, walked on four pitches. Valenzuela then threw a strike to Herr before the Cards' RBI leader pulled a ground double down the left-field line.

McGee scored easily and Smith ran through the "stop" sign of third-base coach Hal Lanier to score as Pedro Guerrero's throw from left field sailed over the head of catcher Mike Scioscia. Valenzuela backed up the play, and Herr held at second. Herr, who homered in Game 3, wound up at third shortly thereafter, however, when Valenzuela threw the ball into center field on an attempted pickoff.

The Cards failed to score Herr as Jack Clark lined out hard to Bill Madlock at third, Cesar Cedeno struck out and Tito Landrum, Coleman's replacement in left field, flied to center.

The double was Herr's fourth of the playoffs, tying a record set by Pete Rose of Cincinnati and Matty Alou of Oakland, both in 1972. And the RBIs were the fourth and fifth in the series for Herr, who had 110 during the season.

The Cardinals again had the first two runners of the second inning aboard on a double by Terry Pendleton and a walk to Darrell Porter. Forsch sacrificed the runners to second and third, but McGee struck out and Smith popped deep to shortstop Mariano Duncan to end the threat.

Correction

Because of an editing error, a headline in yesterday's paper incorrectly reported the status of the American League Championship Series. Toronto leads the series, 3-2, over Kansas City.

Clubs find success in competition

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY: The Notre Dame women's cross country team took this past weekend off. After having run in the Loyola Lakefront Invitational two weekends ago, the Irish ready themselves for a big meet at Indiana University next weekend where they will be competing in the Little State Invitational Cross Country Championship.

"We should do real well at the meet because we are really beginning to run well," said team captain Mary Beth Fiske. "At first, we didn't know how many women were going to run because of break. But now we know that Kathleen Lehman, Julian Merkel and Nancy Loughlin will be, we should place well. Also, I intend to run in the tournament and hopefully, I am completely healed from my tendonitis injury."

After the Indiana meet, the Irish will run in the North Star Conference Meet on October 26. The team feels pretty optimistic about the meet.

"This year has been a little bit disappointing because we have had a problem with injuries," said Fiske. "But all the runners have done real well this season and I expect good results at the conference meet."

One of the women who should do real well is Julian Merkel, who at the Loyola Lakefront Invitational placed 13th overall and was the first of the Irish to cross the finish line. Overall, the Irish as a team finished 10th out of 15 teams.

ROWING CLUB: When the members of the Notre Dame Rowing team went to Des Moines, Iowa on September 28, they went into the regatta expecting good results. They weren't disappointed. They entered four boats and three of them came away with medals. In fact, one of the lightweight boats duplicated last year's feat when it came away with the fastest time of the day. And in accomplishing this feat, the boat was awarded the Traveling Trophy.

In the lightweight division where the Irish enter two boats, the A boat won the gold medal and the trophy, while the Irish B boat settled for the silver. The participants in the winning boat were: Jeff Coil, Joe Brunnetti, Chuck Lumb, Tod Waffner, Eric

Tom Yoon

Club Corner

Adams, John Crilly, John Gibbon, Le Keogh and coxswain Lisa Thummus.

In the heavyweight division, the Irish won the silver medal, losing only to Kansas State. On the women's side, the Irish won the gold in the Open and Lightweight division.

Last weekend, the rowing club traveled to Petersburg, Canada and participated in the Head of Trent regatta. The Irish were one of two American squads in the race which had 54 boats total. Notre Dame entered three boats and they placed 17th, 23rd and 28th.

"It was a very big trip and gave our club more exposure," commented team member Chris Richardson. "Hopefully, by our results in Des Moines and Canada, the Administration will realize that our club is growing quickly and maybe give us varsity status."

This weekend, the women's rowing team will travel to Boston and race in a very big regatta. The reason why the men's team cannot go is that this regatta has many varsity teams and can only accept a few club teams. Last year the men's team, which placed 18th, received priority over the women's team. So this year, the women will go, and maybe before the week is out the men's team, which is on the waiting list, will be accepted.

"We really hope to be expected this year because this year, we have a much better team," said Richardson. "I believe that we could do real well in Boston, but since we are only a club team, we can only wait."

Novice boxing tournament begins this afternoon at ACC

The Notre Dame Boxing Club will hold its annual novice boxing tournament beginning today. This afternoon at 4:00 the tournament begins in the boxing room at the ACC. The finals of the tournament will be held Thursday at 4 p.m., also in the boxing room. Final practices and weigh-ins were held yesterday.

For the last six weeks these novice boxers have been training hard with this tournament in mind. This novice tournament serves as preparation for the Bengal Bouts in the spring, giving it added importance. Spectators are urged to attend and lend their support to the aspiring boxers.

Iowa retains No. 1 spot in poll; Wolverines move up to challenge

Associated Press

Iowa remained No. 1 in the Associated Press college football poll yesterday but Michigan edged ahead of Oklahoma to set up a 1-2 showdown this Saturday, while surprising Army cracked the rankings for the first time in 23 years.

The top three teams received 59 of the 60 first-place votes, with the other one going to sixth-ranked Penn State.

Iowa is No. 1 for the third week in a row after defeating Wisconsin 23-13. The Hawkeyes received 27 first-place votes and 1,146 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Michigan, which blanked Michigan State 31-0, received 20 first-place votes and 1,126 points in exchanging places with Oklahoma. The Sooners slipped from second to third with 12 first-place votes and 1,124 points despite a 14-7 victory over Texas that knocked the Longhorns out of the Top Twenty.

Southern Methodist, a 21-14 loser to Baylor, was the only other team to fall out of the rankings. The Mustangs lost to Baylor 21-14.

Florida State, which had been No. 4, lost to Auburn 59-27 and fell to 13th place. Oklahoma State dropped from fifth to 12th after losing to Nebraska 34-24. Meanwhile, Arkansas climbed from sixth to fourth with 936 points following a 30-7 triumph over Texas Tech and Florida rose from seventh to fifth with 905 points by defeating Tennessee 17-10.

Penn State, a 19-17 winner over Alabama, received the one first-place vote and 902 points. Alabama slipped from 10th to 15th.

Nebraska moved up from ninth to seventh with 868 points and Auburn's bombing of Florida State enabled the Tigers to jump from 12th to eighth with 777 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten are defending national champion Brigham Young, which trounced San Diego State 28-0 and vaulted from 11th to ninth with 685 points, and Air Force, which trimmed Navy 24-7 and shot from 13th to 10th with 624 points.

The Second Ten consists of Ohio State, Oklahoma State, Florida State, Baylor, Alabama, Georgia, LSU, UCLA, Army and Tennessee.

Army's 45-14 rout of Boston College gave the Cadets a 5-0 record for the first time since 1950 and put them in the rankings for the first time since a No. 10 listing on Oct. 1, 1962.

A Dillon interhall football player (35) shows his form in action from two weeks ago. The Big Red pulled off a big upset this weekend by defeating previously unbeaten Morrissey, 7-6. Greg Stohr details this game and others that were played this weekend in his story at right.

Interhall races tighten with final games near

By GREG STOHR
Sports Writer

Two major upsets Sunday complicated the interhall football playoff situation as the teams prepare for the final round of regular-season play Wednesday and Thursday.

Cavanaugh pulled the biggest upset of the year by shocking Holy Cross, 12-8, to muddle the playoff outlook in the Leahy Division. Cavanaugh had not scored in its last 15 games and had not won in its last 17 contests prior to the victory. Cavanaugh team captain Tory Patterson credits the victory to his team's unexpected wishbone offense.

"The only reason we beat Holy Cross was because we came out in the wishbone," he said. "Holy Cross was not even prepared for it."

At no time was that wishbone more potent than on Cavanaugh's final touchdown drive. The Cavemen rolled 74 yards on just two plays, both option pitches to Mark Bradshaw. Earlier, Curtis Takigishi had plunged two yards for Cavanaugh's first score.

Cavanaugh, 1-2, will challenge defending champion Stanford on Thursday at 9:00 at Cartier Field. 2-1 Stanford will be fresh off Sunday's 10-0 blanking of Zahm. A 30-yard Dan O'Donnell field goal and a 31-yard Vince Calouri run provided the scoring for the victors.

"We had one surprise for Holy Cross (the wishbone)," warns Patterson, "but we're going to have two for Stanford."

In the other Leahy game on Thursday, 1-2 Zahm will face Alumni, 1-2, at Cartier at 7:00. All five of the Leahy Division teams are still in contention for post-season action.

Dillon produced the other big upset of the week by conquering previously unbeaten Morrissey, 7-6. Dillon's triumph means that the winners of Wednesday's 7:00 Dillon-Grace game and 8:00 Morrissey-Flanner contest will reach the playoffs from the Parseghian Division. Both games are at Cartier Field.

A 28-yard touchdown pass from Pat Marget to Stash Marczyk helped Dillon triumph on Sunday. Morrissey countered with a 12-yard, fourth-quarter John Mundo-to-Tom Hardiman scoring pass but failed on a two-point conversion attempt. Dillon raised its record to 2-1-1, while Morrissey dropped to 3-1.

Flanner, meanwhile, improved to 2-1-1 and remained in control of its own destiny with a 8-2 win over hapless 0-4 Off-Campus. A 51-yard Greg Smith interception return provided the winning touchdown.

"It won't be up to any other teams now," said Flanner captain Tom Sullivan. "We know we just have to win."

Grace moved into a first-place tie with Morrissey by stopping Keenan, 9-7. Butch Shnur kicked a 35-yard field goal, and John Mihalovich added a 10-yard touchdown reception of a Tom Doyle throw for the 3-1 winners.

In the Rockne Division 3-0 Sorin, despite not playing Sunday, became the first squad to clinch a playoff spot. Carroll's 2-0 win over Pangborn/Fisher eliminated the losers and secured Sorin's post-season berth.

Carroll will face fellow 2-1 squad Howard Thursday at 10:00 at Cartier in a battle for the final Rockne playoff position. Howard won its second consecutive game, a 7-6 triumph over winless St. Ed's. Mike Dooley hit Tom Passinault for a 24-yard touchdown pass for Howard.

Carroll's lone two points in its victory came through no merit of its own. An errant snap by the Pangborn/Fisher center sailed over his punter's head and out of the end zone for a safety.

Sorin hopes to secure a first-round bye in the playoffs at Cartier at 8:00 Thursday when it faces 1-2 Pangborn/Fisher.

Two Sundays ago in the Leahy Division, Holy Cross blanked Zahm, 14-0, and Stanford conquered Alumni, 13-6. In the Parseghian Division, Flanner blanked Keenan, 8-0, Dillon shut out Off-Campus, 7-0, and Morrissey thrashed Grace, 13-0. In the Leahy Division Pangborn/Fisher edged St. Ed's, 7-6, and Sorin defeated Carroll, 7-0.

Basketball ticket sale to begin soon

Student ticket applications for the 1985-86 Notre Dame basketball season are in the mail and should be received by all Notre Dame students by Thursday. A lottery for the 200 Saint Mary's applications will be conducted tonight at Haggar College Center.

Any Notre Dame student not receiving his or her application by Thursday should go to the ticket office on the second floor of the ACC to pick one up.

Saint Mary's students must register for the lottery at the Haggar Information Desk today by 5 p.m. with their ID card in order to be eligible. After the lottery is conducted, a list of winners will be posted in all residence halls, the dining hall and at Haggar. Winning students are to pick up their applications between Wednesday and Friday at the information desk.

Do not mail the application in to the ticket office. Instead, bring it with you on the appropriate day for distribution.

Distribution will be according to the following schedule:

- Seniors - Monday, Oct. 28
- Juniors - Tuesday, Oct. 29
- Sophomores, Graduate and Law - Wednesday, Oct. 30
- Freshmen - Thursday, Oct. 31

Students are to bring applications, payment and their ID card to Gate 3 of the ACC on the specified day, and each student may present up to four applications and IDs.

Married students who would like a ticket for their spouse must show proof of marriage to receive their tickets.

This year's student package includes a ticket for 13 of the 16 scheduled home games. Omitted because of Thanksgiving and Christmas breaks are the Butler, Valparaiso and Creighton games. Included in the package is the Nov. 20 exhibition game with the Smelt Olimpija team of Yugoslavia.

Cost of the package is $52 for lower arena seats and $39 for bleacher seats.

Kleine out 4-6 weeks following knee injury

By JEFF BLUMB
Sports Editor

Junior starting defensive tackle Wally Kleine will be lost to the Notre Dame football team for the next four to six weeks, it was announced yesterday. Kleine underwent successful arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Sunday afternoon after injuring it during a rigorous team practice on Saturday.

The injury, which at first was thought only to be a slight sprain, was fully realized on Sunday morning when Kleine awoke to find that the knee had locked up on him. Upon further examination, it was discovered that he had torn some cartilage in the knee, as well as straining some ligaments.

"It's a tough loss for us," said Irish head coach Gerry Faust. "We hope to have Wally back for the last two to three games of the season, though. He couldn't have gotten through the season without the surgery."

It is expected that senior nose tackle Eric Dorsey will move over to see time at Kleine's right tackle spot. In turn, senior Mike Kiernan and sophomore Matt

Wally Kleine

The 6-9, 274-pound Kleine ranks seventh in tackles for Notre Dame this season with 22 and is credited with causing one fumble.

As a sophomore, Kleine started every game as he racked up 48 tackles. He led the Irish in tackles for lost yardage and was a first-team pick on the sophomore All-America team of Football News.

Tennis team finishes up fine fall; looks forward to spring season

By ED JORDANICH
Sports Writer

A 9-1 dual match record. The North Star Conference Championship, the Irish Invitational Championship and an impressive top-ten finish in the Northwestern Invitational.

If Notre Dame women's tennis coach Michele Gelfman had set her fall season goals any higher, she would only have been pleased with perfection. As it turned out, she almost got it.

Last weekend's conference championship in St. Louis was the caper on an outstanding fall warm-up for Gelfman's squad. Making its debut in Division I tennis, the Irish sailed through a schedule of second-class opponents and held their own against the challenging competition it faced.

"I'm estatic about the way the girls played in these last six weeks," said Gelfman. "They played hard, practiced hard, and they drove themselves to improve the entire fall. I can't say enough about the dedication of the girls to achieve what they have. Their play was remarkable under the pressures of academics, and the balance they demonstrated was excellent."

After a three week break from competition, which will consist of conditioning, lifting and some hitting, the Irish will play in the Rolex Invitational in mid-November. The experience will be essential because the spring season will formally introduce the team to big time women's tennis. Some tough Big Ten teams combined with other Division I heavyweights will provide enough reasons for more hard work and Gelfman is aware of necessary improvements.

"We have to work on changing strategies, our serve and volley games and our baseline consistency," said Gelfman. "We also have to improve our tenacity when it comes to putting points away."

Led all season by the steady play of senior captain Susie Panther, the Irish will make few changes in personnel over the winter. The singles lineup of Panther, Mary Colligan, Michele Dasso, Izzy O'Brien, Joanne Biafore and Tammy Schmidt proved their strength and will try to extend the momentum gained in the fall.

The doubles teams of Panther-Dasso, Colligan-O'Brien, with Biafore and freshman Natalie Illig, were formidable as the season ended and can only get better as their court time together increases.

The future looks very bright for the Notre Dame women's tennis program. The fall season was both a confidence builder and an indication for Gelfman of where improvement is needed, both in singles and doubles play. The hard work has paid dividends already and the spring should be an interesting and exciting season. Division I powers beware. There's a new kid on the block.
