Peace Corps looks to ND for support for the future

By JAMES BRENNAN
Staff Reporter

Dan Smolka is looking for Notre Dame students who do not want to enter the job market next year.

Smolka, area representative for the Peace Corps, will be on campus to promote the corps' causes and provide information to interested students. He will be in the Memorial Library concourse both days and will present a film at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Center for Social Concerns.

Smolka will also be at Notre Dame on February 25 and 26 to conduct interviews with prospective volunteers. At that time, interested students should return completed applications, which can be found in the Placement office. Last year approximately 25 to 30 students submitted applications, said Smolka. Seven eventually went overseas.

Smolka said he is expecting the same number of Notre Dame applicants this year.

According to Smolka, the Peace Corps is looking especially for graduates with degrees in math, science, or engineering. "Africa is having a bad time right now with their education system, particularly for math and science teachers. Also civil engineering is a big area for us. Developing countries need help with bridge construction, road construction and water and sanitation projects," Smolka said.

He added that there is also a need for graduates with general degrees in areas such as psychology or sociology. "These people could fit into programs," Smolka said.

Only one from area interested in peace walk

By MARK MELLETT
News Staff

Although no Notre Dame student may support nuclear disarmament enough to walk across America for it, there is one South Bend resident who is.

No one from Notre Dame has yet volunteered to participate in the transcontinent walk known as the "Great Peace March".

"Nine months is pretty tough commitment," said Bill Healy, student body president, referring to the duration of the march. The student would have to be extremely dedicated to leave school for that amount of time to walk across America, he said.

There is, however, one local person who is interested in making the trek.

Mike Stevens, a South Bend resident, will participate in the march. Stevens, 27, is a self-employed handyman.

After reading about the march in Rolling Stone magazine, he said that it just came to him to get involved. "I think Americans need to take some responsibility," said Stevens. "Annihilation is not for the progress of society."

Asked to respond to the present nuclear situation of the United States, Stevens said, "Reagan is just keeping a lot of buddies in business, the Great 500 Club."

Nuclear power serves a purpose, but nuclear weapons just threatens the existence of life, said Stevens. "We wouldn't have anywhere to go."

Sex questions, problems discussed at campus counseling services

Editor's note: This is the first of a three-day series examining sex issues at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. Today's story takes a look at counseling services and programs at the two schools. Tomorrow's story will deal with sexual attitudes and rules.

By CHRIS SKORCZ
Senior Staff Reporter

Students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's with questions about sex have somewhere to turn to.

Students who have questions pertaining to or problems with their sexuality can take advantage of a variety of programs, services and support groups.

Patrick Utz, director of Notre Dame's Counseling and Psychological Services, estimated that his staff sees approximately 600 students annually, about 25 percent of whom have questions pertaining to sex.

"By nature, a university prolongs adolescence," said Utz. "What happens is many students have identity concerns with their sexuality. Some of these concerns are caused by certain religious values and the students have trouble reconciling these beliefs with their sex drives."

Utz said Notre Dame students tend to be very idealistic and to have high expectations of themselves. He said that in dealing with members of the opposite sex, some students feel that they have failed and they become confused. It is at this point lowers students to talk with counselors who are in the same general age group as the students themselves. There are no paraprofessional (peer counseling) groups at Notre Dame.

Not all of the students concerned about their sexuality turn to Psychological Services, however. Many people take their questions and/or problems to University Ministry.

Father Andre Leveille, director of University Ministry at Notre Dame, said that University Ministry deals with counseling in a manner slightly different from that of Psychological Services.

Leveille said the biggest way his department helps students is hearing confessions.

"A lot more people go to confession than you may think. We at University Ministry are looking at the faith aspect (of sexuality)," he said. Leveille added that he lectured on the sacrament of reconciliation and helped to clarify for students the moral stance of the Church on sex.

that it becomes necessary for the students to realize that they have somewhere to turn to for help, he said.

The staff at the Counseling and Psychological Services Center located in the Student Health Center, is comprised of doctoral trainees in psychology. Students tend to be comfortable with this arrangement, said Utz, because it al-

Joe Murphy to lead 1986-87 Observer

Special to The Observer

Joe Murphy, a junior from St. Louis, Mo., has been elected editor-in-chief of The Observer for 1986-87.

Joe Murphy

He was elected by a majority vote of The Observer's general board and will assume his responsibilities April 2.

Murphy, who joined the newspaper's staff as a news staff reporter his freshman year and served this year as Viewpoint editor, is anticipating the challenge of building upon The Observer's foundation.

"This year we opened the doors to many members of our community, especially Saint Mary's. Hopefully, next year we will continue to do so," Murphy said.

"The newspaper will only be as objective and credible as its editor-in-chief," he said. Explaining the role of the editor-in-chief, Murphy said, "Internally, he must oversee the content of the pages, to see that we have produced the best paper we can. Externally, the editor-in-chief must maintain good relations with our readership and the people we cover."

Stressing communication, Murphy described The Observer as a place to learn, both for its staff and its readers. "Our major goal," he said, "will be to improve communication inside the newspaper, therefore extending it throughout the community."

In Brief

The Patty Curran ticket won the senior class runoff election on Friday with 58 percent of the vote. The Katie Sullivan ticket garnered 40 percent. Fifty-six percent of the class of '87 participated in the election- an increase of 10 percent from the original election last Wednesday. The Curran ticket consists of Patty Curran, president, Maureen Erny, vice president, Chris Rashid, treasurer, and Mary Roe, secretary. The new senior class officers will assume their positions April 1. - The Observer

The space shuttle crew is being rembered by workers at a Veterans Administration hospital. The workers are wearing blue ribbons pinned to their lapels until the next orbiter lands safely. The ribbons are blue to symbolize the sky the astronauts disappeared into, and tied in a bow "because this has tied us all together," said Bette Emry, the surgical intensive-care nurse at the Roudebush VA Hospital who initiated the idea. - AP

Got the South Bend blues? Head for the Second City

You say you've had it with the stifling South Bend scene? You say you wish Michiana would be engulfed by Lake Michigan? You say if you hear another waterbed commercial you'll throw up? Well, friend, do I have an opportunity for you.

Step right up and experience the second largest population center in the United States of America (or third, if you believe people from Los Angeles). See the sights of a truly thriving metropolis, population 2 million plus. Be overwhelmed by the vastness of a truly titanic town.

That's right, I'm speaking today of the Windy City, the City of the Big Shoulders, the Hog Butcher for the World, That Toddlin' Town:

Chicago, Illinois.

Chicago is such an underutilized resource among Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students. Too often, Senior Formal Weekend is the only time students ever make it into the city. Or maybe to get dropped off at O'Hare, always a pleasant experience. That's too bad.

It's a great place to visit. It's even nice to live there.

Unfortunately, many people are put off by Chicago because the city's sports fans are so obnoxious, especially this year with the Superbowl Champion Chicago Bears.

But sports is only a very small sliver of the Chicago experience. The city has much to offer students culturally, intellectually, and even socially.

Orchestra Hall is home base for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, one of the foremost orchestras in the world, conducted by Sir George Solti. This is truly something to experience. Unfortunately, for the struggling student it can be somewhat of an expense. The cheapest seat in the house is $30, and even with the half-price student discount it can be an expensive entertainment event.

While the theatres in the city may not rival Broadway or Drury Lane, many of the plays that make it to those places are first given trial runs in Chicago. And there are enough theatres in the city to offer even the most choosy theatre-goer something of interest.

If you do nothing else in the city before you graduate, go to the Chicago Art Institute. Some of the most famous artists in the world, from Rembrandt to Picasso to Warhol, have paintings hanging there. And it's conveniently located in the heart of Chicago right on Michigan Avenue. It's the building with the stately lions out front.

Dan McCullough

News Editor

If you want to do the tourist thing, Chicago also has a lot to offer. The world's tallest building, the Sears Tower, is probably the most popular tourist attraction. At the top you can see four states, supposedly.

Tourists also love Rush Street, home of singles bars and truly unusual characters. Especially during the warmer months, Rush Street takes on a carnival-like atmosphere which can be pretty amazing.

The sports thing is also popular among first-time Chicago visitors. Wrigley Field, Comiskey Park, the Chicago Stadium and Soldier Field all offer lively sports entertainment.

And the beaches are very nice in the summer months, although they're pretty barren right now.

But for the initiated, Chicago has much more entertainment opportunities to offer. Forget Rush Street. The place to go for the best bars and nightclubs is farther north, up in Wrigleyville (near the ballpark) and around North Clark Street.

It's really the diversity that separates these areas from any others. You'll find a country-and-western bar next to a punk club next to a blues joint. And if you have enough money, you can hang out with the famous at the Limelight disco. You have to dress the part, however, as the owner chooses who can enter and who can't. This ridiculous policy might change, however, as soon as they finish building the Hard Rock Cafe across the street.

But before you go into the city, check out what's happening in the Chicago Tribune or Sun-Times. Friday editions are especially informational.

Getting to the city is simple. If you're driving, just get on the I-80 West and follow the signs. The South Shore Railroad also runs daily, dropping passengers off in the middle of downtown. It costs something like $7 one-way and it leaves from the Amtrak station on West Washington street here in South Bend.

Do yourself a favor. Get a group together and check out this city at least a couple times before you're out of here. It's worth the trip. See you there.

How you live
may save your life.

Barbie doll helps toothpaste team

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - A team of Purdue University students used a picture of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, a Barbie doll and a Hostess Ding Dong cake in a 27-motion toothpaste device to win the school's 1986 Rube Goldberg Machine Contest on Saturday.

A $150 cash prize and traveling trophy were awarded to Robin Barnett and 13 teammates for inventing "the world's most complicated toothpaste dispenser," the school announced.

The prize money will be donated to the Tippecanoe County Council for the Aging, said Barnett, a senior from Indianapolis.

The contest's goal this year was to design and build a complicated machine to squeeze toothpaste onto a toothbrush. The winning device, dubbed the "Magnum Opus Gossamer Penguin III," beat out four other working models by adding an extra step to remove the cap from a tube of toothpaste and by showing a bit more "team spirit," said Vernard Foley, one of three judges.

"The team also used a more precise method to squeeze the toothpaste onto the bristles," Foley added. "Because the contest was so close this year, we had to take some of these things into consideration."

A $75 second place award was given to Raja Kadiyala and his group for their machine called "Dr. Plaque's Toothpaste Dispenser." The $25 third place award went to the Theta Tau fraternity's Torque Racing Team.

The Magnum Opus Gossamer Penguin III is the third in a series of "mostly successful" machines for the group, said team member Rich Kulawiec, a graduate student in electrical engineering.

Last year, after winning first place in the contest to open and pour a can of soda into a cup, several team members traveled to New York to appear on "Late Night" with David Letterman. Their winning entry also was featured on public television's "Newton's Apple."

In this year's contest, seven student teams entered machines in the contest. Five of the machines worked successfully, four on the first try.

"This was by far the best group of machines we've had in the four years since the contest was revived," said Evan Patton, a senior in materials engineering and student chairman for the event.

The winning entry included a spring that released a Hostess Ding Dong, which flew through the air and hit a picture of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

Two croquet balls caused a water-loaded rocket to shoot out and pull a string, which released a pin. The pin release then activated the Barbie doll and a King Kong doll to climb the side of a model of the Empire State Building. The climbing action pulled a string that set off a switch turning a water wheel in an aquarium. The water wheel set off another switch, which started a drill press that squeezed the toothpaste tube, forcing toothpaste onto a waiting toothbrush.

The device also used about 20 other motions.

"All this in less than four minutes," said Kulawiec. "You can brush your teeth in a jiffy."

No tampering at plant, Tylenol producer says

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The chairman of Johnson & Johnson yesterday disputed suggestions that cyanide was put in Tylenol capsules at the plant or distribution center, saying it seemed too great a coincidence that two bottles would "end up at two stores a block and a half apart."

At least 14 states and the District of Columbia, along with Italy, have banned sales of Tylenol capsules or ordered them off store shelves, and one official called on the federal government to control production and sale of all drugs in capsules.

A young woman died in suburban Westchester County after taking two capsules that contained potassium cyanide. A second poisoned bottle of capsules was found later in a store less than two blocks from the market where the woman's pills were bought.

Investigators reported no new leads in the case, according to the chairman of the company that manufactures the popular painkiller.

Interviewed on the ABC news program "This Week with David Brinkley," Johnson & Johnson's James Burke said FBI director William Webster told him yesterday morning that, "Unfortunately, there's nothing new at this time."

Burke disagreed with Westchester District Attorney Carl Vergari, who said FBI test results led him to believe the capsules were poisoned "at the plant."

Vergari said FBI officials told him that tests indicated the seals on both tainted bottles had not been broken after they left the factory.

But Burke said the bottles came from two plants, one in Pennsylvania, the other in Puerto Rico. He also rejected a theory that the pills were tainted at a distribution center, also in Pennsylvania, where both bottles were handled last summer in the space of two weeks.

A tamperer at the distribution center would have had to penetrate "an awful lot of material" in which the capsules were packed, he said.

Then, Burke said, the tamperer would have to ensure that it would "end up going through the A&P (supermarkets) distribution center which goes to 38 states. . . . And then you've got to get (the other bottle) into a packing center that goes to the F.W. Woolworth distribution centers in 26 states."

Finally, he said, the pills had to "end up at two stores a block and a half apart at the same time."

Vergari said he would send investigators to the Pennsylvania Tylenol factory this week.

Frank Young, head of the federal Food and Drug Administration, noted that the bottles had several layers of protective coating. "It really sounds like it's much more of a professional-type job," he said.

Westchester County Executive Andrew O'Rourke called on the federal government to ban the use of such capsules, except where medically necessary or prepared by local pharmacists for sale only from behind the counter.

Economists predict further growth

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The U.S. economy, bolstered by falling oil prices, should enjoy significantly better growth this year than in 1985, many economists now believe.

The new optimism represents a sharp turnaround from expectations little more than a month ago. At that time, many analysts felt the economy would muddle through the new year much as it did last year, with sluggish growth and a stagnant unemployment level.

However, plunging world oil prices have altered that view. In the last month, oil prices on the spot market have fallen by one-third, dropping from $25 per barrel to around $17 per barrel.

Such a precipitous decline could spell trouble for countries such as Mexico, which depend on oil revenues to finance their heavy debt, but it is likely to be good news for most Americans.

The beneficial impact of falling oil prices will be felt in two ways, economists believe.

U.S. output will rise because consumers and businesses will have more to spend on other items, since their oil bills will be less, and inflation in this country will be lower.

Wharton Econometrics, a private forecasting firm which in December was forecasting that the economy would grow 3 percent this year, is now predicting growth of 3.7 percent, when measured from the fourth quarter of 1985 to the fourth quarter of 1986.

That is sharply higher than the weak 2.5 percent growth turned in during 1985 and is not far from the Reagan administration's optimistic prediction that the economy will grow at a robust 4 percent rate this year.

Economists at the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith are forecasting the economy will expand at a 3.5 percent rate this year, up from a prediction of 3.1 percent growth made just a month ago.

And the latest monthly survey of four dozen leading economists made by Blue Chip Economic Indicators, a Sedona, Ariz., newsletter, found that two-thirds of them were revising their forecasts upward.

These changes are not going unnoticed by the administration, which caught a lot of criticism last year for projecting 4 percent growth in 1986 when many private analysts were calling for growth below 3 percent.

theme of John Lennon's song "Imagine." The lyrics of the song include the lines: "Imagine all the people, living life in peace."

The march's organizers had originally planned on approximately 5000 people undertaking the journey, but they are nearly 3000 short of their original goal, according to media coordinator Peter Kleiner.

As the march progresses eastward, however, he anticipates that many "short-term marchers" will join the ranks.

Even though there has been a lack of interest in actual marching, there are people at Notre Dame who want to help support the march, said Healy. He went on to add that the student body, as a whole, could take part in the march with monetary contributions.

With the anti-apartheid movement receiving headlines, the nuclear armament issue has not been as emphatic on the Notre Dame campus as it has been in past years, said Healy. The social concern group Ground Zero, which has changed their name to SANE, is presently functioning on campus to keep the nuclear armament issue alive, said Healy.

PRO-Peace, an organization solely existing for the disarmament of nuclear weapons and the founder of the "Great Peace March," is in the initial stage of formation at Notre Dame, said Roger Voelker, Indiana coordinator for PRO-Peace. An on-campus group is being started to help in the financial backing of the march. "We are just getting started," said Voelker.

Students who are interested in learning more about PRO-Peace and the "Great Peace March" or would like to make a donation can do so by writing to PRO-Peace, 10814 Dunn Rd., Osceola, IN 46561.

Corps

Smolka described today's Peace Corps as being "mature" as compared to that of the 1960's. "We have less volunteers now than we did in the 60's when it was brand new under Kennedy. But it's a different kind of volunteer going into there now," Smolka said. "Generally it's a more highly skilled person."

The average age of the volunteer has increased from about 23 to 29 and there are more retired people joining. There are also more Hispanics and Blacks joining today, said to Smolka. The Peace Corps now works in all areas of the world, primarily in Central and South America, Africa and Asia.

A common misconception is there is no financial reward for Peace Corps volunteers, Smolka said. Volunteers receive a salary that covers food, housing and miscellaneous expenses. Medical and transportation costs are paid for and in addition, volunteers receive a $4,500 "readjustment allowance" upon returning from their two year service.

The Peace Corps also offers many career and personal benefits, said Smolka. "Probably the greatest single career benefit would be the on-the-job experience," he said. "Generally, the Peace Corps is going to place an individual in a position of responsibility that might take five to ten years to get to here in the United States. Volunteers come away from there with self-confidence and real solid job experience."

University Ministry also engages in personal counseling, said Leveille. He personally had 167 appointments with students last semester.

The choice of a particular counseling service rests with the individual, said Leveille. He acknowledged that Psychological Services and University Ministry work together "because the people in Psych Services are Christians too. One is concerned with the soul and one is concerned with the mind."

Mary DePauw, director of the Counseling and Career Development Center at Saint Mary's, classified sexual counseling "under the general rubric of counseling."

"People usually come in and see counselors because they don't feel good about something. In students who have sexual concerns sometimes all they need is information. All students don't come to college with the same sort of background," so her department often dispenses information or refers students to other related departments.

Like Utz, DePauw emphasized the role her department often plays in "value clarification," specifically religious values.

"Any time we work with a student, we ask her about the value-related aspects (of her own situation)," DePauw said.

"Sexuality, like any aspect of our culture, has a body of research, a body of literature, and from that body of literature, I think there ought to be some certain standards of care."

Within the department of Health Services at Saint Mary's, sexual counseling is part of the department's regular counseling services, said Colleen Hart, director of Health Services. Hart said that one of the existing services is the weekly visits by a gynecologist, although "if students have any major questions, they are referred to the Health Center."

Regarding specific programs and services offered at Saint Mary's, Mary Feeley, director of Saint Mary's Campus Ministry, said that her department is currently engaged in an "on-going planning" process during which Campus Ministry hopes to expand its counseling services.

"We have started a series of discussions on health and body issues," said Feeley, in reference to "Sexuality: Don't Keep it in the Bag," which concludes Wednesday with the lecture "Optimism: The Worst Contraceptive."

"We are planning on having another series after spring break on values and morals in relationships. Basically, these programs are designed more or less as we go along," she said.

Marcos to U.S.: future of military bases uncertain

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - One day after being declared winner of the Philippine election, President Ferdinand Marcos threatened yesterday to abrogate the military bases treaty with the United States if the Reagan administration cuts off aid to his government.

"If that happens, we'll have to talk about renegotiating the bases," Marcos said yesterday on CBS' interview program "Face The Nation."

Marcos added, however, "We have to renegotiate those bases anyway because you have not paid the compensatory package for the use of military facilities, to the tune of about $70 million."

During his 20 years in power, Marcos has repeatedly used the treaty covering the bases - the two largest U.S. military facilities outside the United States - as a bargaining chip to assure support from Washington.

He also brought up the issue during the election campaign, accusing challenger Corazon Aquino of being ready to break the treaty, while denying he ever fathomed the idea.

Both Marcos and Aquino have said the United States should pay a higher rent for use of the bases.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who led the official U.S. delegation that observed the election, said Marcos' refusal to carry out reforms has jeopardized the security of the bases.

"As a matter of fact we believe our bases are in jeopardy because the Philippine army doesn't have the efficiency it ought to have," said Lugar, who also appeared on the program.

The United States considers its two principal bases in the Philippines, Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base, strategically important to its security interests throughout the Pacific, particularly since the Soviet Union took over use of Cam Ranh Bay from the United States after the Vietnam War.

Lugar said the United States is "growing weary" of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos claiming to be a strong anti-communist "but consistently playing the Soviet card."

Speaking at a news conference before a B'Nai B'rith luncheon yesterday, Lugar said "it would seem the Philippine people do not want the Soviets."

"They apparently are not enamored with President Marcos either," he said, referring to the close, disputed election between Marcos and opposition candidate Corazon Aquino.

Marcos has hinted at stronger ties with the Soviet Union by sending his wife, Imelda, to the Soviet Union "at the same time he was calling the election," Lugar said.

"If he was anti-Communist, he certainly wasn't very good at it," he said. "After a while, Americans become weary of somebody who's supposed to be a strong anti-Communist but consistently playing the Soviet card."

The disputed election had "a flawed outcome," the senator said, which could affect not only the amount of congressional aid appropriated to the country but also negotiations for a continued American military presence in the Philippines.

"For the moment, if we were to give aid to a government that has had a flawed election, we might court more difficulty with the people and more long-range difficulty in support of our base rights," Lugar said.

Lugar said he may support halting aid to the Marcos government. "The problem is trying to separate aid for military reform from an endorsement of President Marcos. I think that's a very delicate problem, maybe not impossible, but one we will have to consider carefully."

Aquino calls for peaceful protests

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - Corazon Aquino called yesterday for non-violent protests against newly re-elected President Ferdinand Marcos, who declared, "I am the president. They are not going to drive me out."

Marcos, president for 20 years, also announced yesterday the resignation of his most powerful military commander, Gen. Fabian Ver.

A day after the National Assembly declared Marcos winner of an election marked by charges of fraud and terrorism, more than half a million Filipinos joined his opponent in a downtown park rally - a much bigger rally than any that had gathered in the campaign leading to the Feb. 7 presidential election.

Aquino called for strikes and school shutdowns on the day after Marcos' Feb. 26 inauguration for a new six-year term, and urged a boycott of banks and newspapers owned by Marcos' "cronies."

Aquino, who had vowed to lead daily demonstrations if she was cheated at the polls, also called on the military and police to disobey orders that were "unjust."

"Although unarmed, I feel like the young boy David prepared to face the giant Goliath," she said. "If Goliath refuses to yield, we shall escalate our non-violent struggle."

In a news conference at the presidential palace, Marcos again rejected charges he won through fraud and said he would not step down.

"I am the president. They are not going to drive me out. The people are behind me," he said.

Marcos also announced that Ver, the armed forces chief, had resigned, and he had accepted the resignation. But he said Ver would remain available as a consultant.

Constabulary Chief Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos was appointed interim chief of staff, Marcos said.

Ver, 66, was charged in the August 1983 assassination of Aquino's husband, opposition leader Benigno Aquino. But a court later acquitted him, 24 other military men and one civilian also accused in the murder.

U.S. officials, concerned about a growing communist insurgency in the Philippines, saw Ver as a hindrance to military reforms.

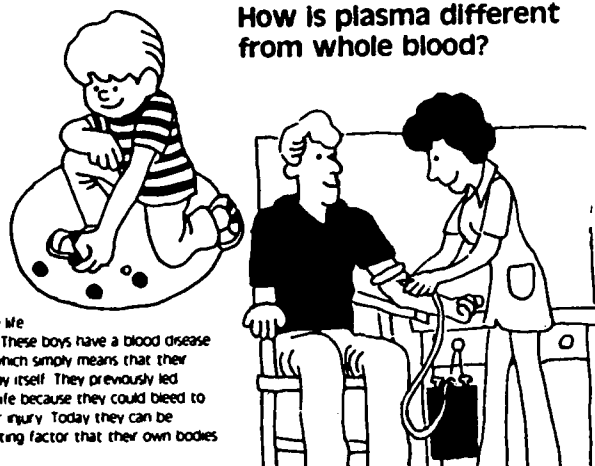

Ver's resignation was announced a day before Marcos, Aquino and other Filipino leaders were to meet with Philip Habib, a special envoy sent by President Reagan to observe the aftermath of the divisive election.

"I am convinced that if there was any fraud, it may have been committed by the lower levels and was not authorized by the upper leadership," Marcos said.

Your plasma makes a difference.

How is plasma different from whole blood?

Have no doubts about it—your donation makes a difference. The difference between a boy leading a normal, active life or being an invalid. These boys have a blood disease called hemophilia, which simply means that their blood cannot clot by itself. They previously led a pretty sheltered life because they could bleed to death from a minor injury. Today they can be treated with a clotting factor that their own bodies do not produce.

And that clotting factor is taken from the plasma you donate.

How much plasma is needed? A lot. For example, one unit of plasma yields less than a teaspoonful of the clotting factor hemophiliacs need, so you can see the need for large volumes of plasma just for hemophiliacs. And thousands of units of plasma are used in hospitals and emergency rooms every day to save many lives.

Plasma is the liquid in which blood cells are transported. Approximately half of blood is plasma. The blood cells are separated from your plasma at the donor center by a process called plasmapheresis and returned to your body. The plasma taken from your blood is about 92% minerals and water. Most of the remainder is proteins. It is these proteins that are used to treat people with various diseases or injuries.

Plague strikes ND: Murphy feels no pain

Kris Murphy

Altered

I struck suddenly one morning. I woke up sick. At least I felt sick. My throat hurt so bad I could hardly swallow, there was enough junk in my sinuses to fill up the Great Lakes, and for every breath I took I sneezed twice.

Great, I thought, just what I need. I'm eighteen years old and I might live for ten more minutes. Maybe I should go back to bed and die in my sleep. I wrestle with this idea and decide to go to class instead. I look for aspirin but there is none. We do have some Tylenol but that would only kill me faster so I go without. I dress slowly listening to some germs hold a conversation in my larynx.

Germ One: Let's kill him now!

Germ Two: Will you relax, we just got here. Anyway his white blood cells should show up soon and then the party's over.

Germ One: Boring. Boring. Spell that B-O-R-I-N-G. I don't know why I hang out with you anymore, you're no fun at all. You used to be so crazy too. Remember that wild party those guys from Asian Flu had at Michigan last year? Everybody in that dorm must have thrown up at least twice.

Germ Two: Oh lay off, I'm not happy just making people throw up anymore. I mean, being a virus is fun and everything but I think I'd rather be a brain cell or a neuron or something useful like that. I wanna be somebody! My life now is just and endless stream of one night stands and I need security. I want to live in one body and have a family of mucous cells or something.

Germ One: You really are weird. I'm going to go give this guy a headache so stay away from me.

By the time I leave my room I do have a headache. A splitting one. When I cross my eyes it feels better so I cross my eyes and walk to class. People are probably looking at me funny but my eyes are crossed so I can't see them.

My Western Civ class passes through a haze of Hall's Menthol-iptis that I get from the girl next to me. She's sick too so we snuffle in unison for a while and I let her use my Kleenex. The romance ends too quickly though as she feels sick and has to leave the room. I fall asleep and as usual I drool on my desk. How appealing. Class ends and my professor thanks me for making the room smell like menthol. I thank him for putting me to sleep for the umpteenth time and we part the best of friends.

Calculus is even better as I groan in pain and run out of tissues. I become delirious and am asked to leave. I go home and get in bed, whereupon one of my roommates enters with good and bad news. The good news is our section RA has mono. This means that we can feel free to become as drunk and liscentious as we please. Unfortunately the bad news is that my roommate is also sick. He proceeds to cough a lot and drink all my Nyquil.

It soon becomes apparent that lots of people are sick. The bookstore is running out of cherry cough syrup and everybody talks funny. They say "Exscuzz muh, cud you reputt thet. I hab a cud and muh hedd es all stubbed up." Then they cough in your face. I start to worry. All these people sick; disease, pain, gross stuff in your nose. Maybe it's plague! You remember plague right? The Middle Ages, rats, everybody yelling and dying in the streets, whole villages wiped out in days. Scary.

I think about it a little longer though and it doesn't sound so bad. If you thought that you only had a couple days to live what would you do? That's right, you'd probably throw a great party. You could call it "The Countdown to Plague Party: Go Nuts Before It's Too Late."

Everybody could come dressed as their favorite viral disease and we could have great mixed drinks like vodka and cough syrup or gin and Nyquil. Snacks would include a pretzel-aspirin party mix and Contac pills on a Ritz.

Afterwards everybody could call the same ambulance and we'd all go to the emergency room together. It would be the party to end all parties. Get it? OK, OK, I know it's sick but that seems like the only alternative when the plague comes.

I guess we could all run off to the monastery but I have the feeling I just wouldn't fit in there.

It's probably not plague though. In fact, I feel better already. What day is it anyway? Friday? Why imagine that. Will the wonders of modern medicine never cease?

Zahm's Rabid Bats: Fun both on and off the ice

features copy editor

On the Notre Dame campus, there is interhall, intrahall, interquad and even interroom sports competition. With oodles and oodles of squads, teams and battalions like these, fan support is often minimal or nonexistent.

But one interhall team is out there making a name for itself, performing stunts like giving out kazoes to the fans and displaying a mascot dressed like Batman. It attracts at least 200 fans to most of its games, which is more than many teams get in a whole season. This team is the Zahm interhall hockey team, better known as the Rabid Bats.

The evolution of Zahm's hockey team is a Cinderella story of sorts, as Al McGuire would say. In the 1982-83 season, Zahm was the worst team in the league. The Rabid Bats had never won a game in all the years of their existence. Then, in the 1983-84 season, Zahm combined with Stanford and finally won a game.

This year's Rabid Bats coach, senior Al Parkin, said of the teams of past years, "They had some fan support (in '82-'83), because it was such a joke to see these guys skating around." Then something happened. It started becoming fun to watch the Rabid Bats in action.

"In '84-'85, the program really picked up. It was started by Coach Mike Sullivan and Ed Graber. They just decided to make this into a big, fun thing," said Parkin.

That tradition of fun continues today in a big way. Where else could you go to a hockey game and see doormen dressed in jackets and ties? The Zahm team does things just a little bit differently than everybody else. They sponsor a raffle to benefit multiple sclerosis victims, they have a hockey banquet each year, they have a mailing list and they distribute programs and newsletters. And last year, as kind of a salute to their coach, the Rabid Bats let Sullivan play goalie against Pangborn in his final game.

This year, the team has been active, thinking of new twists to add to the program. Parkin said the team is working on getting a band to play at each game. Senior Chris Athaide has been filming each Zahm game for a highlight film at the end of the season. To add a definite professional touch to the team's image, freshman Steve Highter and sophomore Bob Lach designed an official Rabid Bats logo which now graces the team's flag.

Now you're probably saying, "Well, all this stuff is really nice, but does it actually help the team win games?" The answer to that is a definite maybe.

Zahm's record is 3-2, but Parkin said that winning games is not why the team plays. "It wouldn't be any fun without the fans. They're the people who make it worthwhile," said Parkin. "That's the reason why we have all these little things, kind of to pay them back for their support. The fans want to make us play harder, knowing there's someone watching us."

In particular, the enthusiasm from the rest of Zahm's residents, from women's dorms like Farley, Lewis and Breen-Phillips, and from ex-Zahm residents now living off-campus is what keeps the team going, according to Parkin.

One Zahm resident, sophomore Alex Dalal, thought the Rabid Bats were doing some good for the dorm: "It supports the hall spirit, especially because Zahm is a tightly knit team." Sophomore Ed Hickey, a goalie on the team, added, "I think the fans have as much fun as the players."

As for next year, Parkin said he hopes the team carries on the tradition. "I think that the team has learned everything. I just hope they want to do it again next year," said Parkin. Freshman Bill Weinsheimer, a member of the team, added, "There's great fan support, and everyone's out there having a good time. We have a lot of good freshmen on the team, so I think we have a bright future."

Perhaps Hickey summed it up best when he stated, "We're starting to come together this year and I think we'll be even better next year. With the good young players we have now, we'll be a force to be reckoned with."

The Zahm Hall Rabid Bats are already a force to be reckoned with in terms of having a good time. Going undefeated next year wouldn't be bad, either.

Senate Republicans are obstacles for tax reforms

Politicians reign as perhaps the most contradictory individuals in our Camelot. Somehow our national representatives can stand on both sides of a fence and point fingers across

no easy solutions

the divider in disgust. A troublesome paradox: Republican senators are for tax reform; Republican senators are not for tax reform.

Like most tough economic choices, individual elected leaders find it hard both to support and to oppose tax reform. It is much like the federal deficit. Sure, I'm for cutting the deficit, but geez, not in my district.

The House Ways and Means Committee tax reform bill will have a tough time getting Senate support. It seems the bill does not have enough loopholes, gimmicks and preferences for the senators. Everyone feels the bill can be improved, but no one agrees how.

The New Republic last week declared this is the last chance for tax reform for a long time. Opportunities come so infrequently, "if you oppose the legislation ultimately approved by the House on Dec. 16, you oppose tax reform," they maintain. But the senators are forced to wrestle with this one.

The ones having the most trouble are the Republican senators. The Senate Finance Committee is headed by Oregon Republican Bob Packwood, and lost tax breaks for the timber industry is one trophy he will surely restore to the bill. And Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole fears losing the bill to the Democrats. From all indication, he will allow a fair amount of pork-barreling by the Republicans just to get the credit.

There are 22 Republican seats up for election in November, and the Republican majority is already in jeopardy. Tough tax legislation may be unpopular among incumbent Republicans. To help House Republicans, Reagan has promised to "improve the business side" of the bill.

Big business in general opposes the tax reform. But many business people are resigned to its passage, which seems likely. Their lobbyists carry a shopping list of amendments that will favor their industry, clothe it in patriotic dress, push it under the noses of the lawmakers, and hope the key provisions will pass.

The surest ticket to passage is getting Reagan on their side. For example, the so-called value-added tax, which taxes each level of distribution and production, has found some support among tax reformers. But Reagan was successfully courted by both big business and incumbent senators unwilling to tax local businesses. Result? Chances for passage are slim.

Lawmakers with an ear to business feel the pinch. A proposed oil-import fee on each barrel of crude would net the treasury anywhere from $22 billion to $31.5 billion annually. Surprisingly, its chances of enactment are gaining favor. Witness, however, what may happen. A possible deadlock between energy-producing states and Northeastern states that are heavy energy consumers could kill it.

While the oil-import fee is not part of the House Ways and Means Committee bill, it gives an example of how personal interest causes legislators to dissect and ambush tax reform.

The White House is determined to keep the tax reform revenue neutral. Although the case can be made that the Republicans lost their claim to be the party of tax reform (most House Republicans opposed the bill), the image of Reagan pushing tax reform aligns him with any tax bill passed this year. Forget a tax increase this year.

So we face another paradox. Supporters of the bill include congressional Democrats, a few House Republicans and Reagan. The Senate Republicans have sold out. They stand as the great obstacle for tax reform this year.

Athletic scores should not replace academic scores

Six hundred forty. Buried underneath the incredible statistics, the All-Everything honors, the recruiters' fantastic reviews and Lou Holtz's verbal platitudes lies one cold hard fact that might traumatize new football recruit Tony Rice's honeymoon with Notre Dame. A 640 combined SAT score.

Terry Kibelstis

guest column

Holtz may be the new coach here, but Notre Dame's reputation for academics is so renowned that even in Minnesota he must have heard about it. The University's de-emphasis on "football factory-building" is a direct response to it. The community is composed of students first, athletes second.

Or so I thought. But obviously, Holtz does not. Through statements released in The Observer it has become noticeable that only Rice's athletic talents were considered during his recruitment.

Consider the following: "He has taken all the subjects that everyone else around here has taken, and he has received excellent grades."

Tony Rice has a 2.65 grade point average. "To my knowledge, he's a good student." Really? And how far does that knowledge go?

"I'm not even familiar with Rice's SAT scores."

Oh. Around this time last year, many of Notre Dame's present freshmen were involved in the process of awaiting admissions decisions from various colleges. The anxiety of that process is still fresh in their minds. SATs. GPAs. Recommendations. Essays. And while other qualities factored in that admissions process, it is a given fact that those numbers weigh heavily in the decisions. Having experienced Notre Dame's tough admissions standard, I am shocked to read that 7,000 yards total offense counts for more than 640 SATs.

Football and other athletics are an integral part of this university. They increase school spirit, give Notre Dame national prominence, offer scholarship possibilities to students who otherwise might not have had that chance, and are a source of revenue for the University. Yet a line must be drawn between alumni satisfaction and academic reputation. The acceptance of a ridiculously underqualified candidate compromises the community and mocks those standards.

The wisdom of considering athletic talent as the sole basis of acceptance is dubious indeed. Once Rice does get here, what type of academic future will he have? Can his scholastic talents measure up to Notre Dame's intense courses, combined with the long hours of football practice? Will 7,000 yards total offense compensate for his obvious lack of high school academic success? Tutors can only go so far.

By filling in three circles - correctly or incorrectly - on the SAT and signing one's name, one receives 400 points. The remaining 1,200 are earned by answering correctly. In those terms, therefore, Rice scored 240. Can his athletic scores make up for this?

Rice has some incredible statistics: 7,000 yards total offense, 40 touchdowns, only two career losses and some incredible seasons. He is the star of Holtz's first Notre Dame recruiting class.

But can he read? Does the admissions office have enough guts to ask?

Despite our great wealth theft is still occurring

To steal. According to Webster, to steal is to take the property of another wrongfully and especially as an habitual or regular practice. Thou shalt not steal. It is even a commandment, remember? And here we are, amidst tests and papers, crazy unpredictable weather and, for some, the unsatisfied desire called greed.

guest column

We proudly praise our Christian schooling. We teared when the Grotto caught fire. We support Oxfam and we rally against apartheid. And the list goes on. Yet despite all of our worthy efforts there are some who feel they don't have enough stuff. There are some among us who feel they can just take whatever they want, even if it is not theirs.

I can tolerate a great deal, but one thing I cannot tolerate by any means is someone stealing from others. Stealing is wrong and uncalled for. It is an invasion of privacy. Stealing is a crime. Here we are, the beautiful Christian Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community; we really have nothing to complain of. We by far have more than most. None of us are deprived, poor children.

But despite everything, things are stolen. Shoes are "taken," dresses "disappear," books are "borrowed" and the list goes on. This is wrong and it all must end. At the expense of others someone's greed is satisfied.

Whoever feels they have the right to take someone else's property is definitely in the wrong and I feel sorry for them. Their dreams must be empty and they obviously don't see the essential through their hearts. Whoever who feels that through stealing they have more, I hope their conscience pangs with guilt continually. I pity those who don't feel discomforted by these pangs, for they are the ones who really need help.

Wouldn't it be nice if we could trust everyone? It is possible. I read about it once in a book.

Coverage of computers is only the beginning

Dear Editor:

I was pleased to see The Observer providing coverage of computing facilities available to Notre Dame students (Jan. 28 Accent: "Computers make life easier for ND students.") Information on the availability of computers and computing services is becoming increasingly vital to University students.

I was somewhat disconcerted, however, that despite its headline, the article focused entirely on just one lab, the Arts and Letters microcomputer lab.

One should not overlook the large PRIME terminal network in the College of Engineering, the VAXes and workstations in the College of Science, the microcomputer lab in the College of Business Administration or the terminal clusters throughout the campus which connect to the IBM mainframe in the Computing Center.

It might also be of interest for students to know that the Computing Center not only provides the IBM mainframe and its timesharing system, but also free consulting, free short documents, free minicourses and the only 24-hour microcomputer lab featuring IBM PC's, Apple II's and MacIntoshes open to all members of the Notre Dame community.

The lab also boasts a variety of printers including an Apple Laserwriter and dozens of software packages which can be checked out any time of day or night for use in the lab (requires a Notre Dame or Saint Mary's ID).

I sincerely hope your Accent writer is aware of the journalistic hazards of covering only one part of a story under a headline that implies the whole, and that the O'Shaughnessy article is only the first in a series of articles covering this campus-wide topic.

Notre Dame is teaching in non-Christian ways

Dear Editor:

Once again we observe another Lenten season. As a Protestant freshman, I am experiencing meatless Fridays for the first time. This is only a minor irritation, and I was expecting this sort of thing before I came here, since Notre Dame is the great American Catholic university.

However, there is an underlying problem that exists here; and as a fellow Christian, I feel it should be brought to the surface.

Here at the Christian university, I find theology professors who teach that the Old Testament is just a group of borrowed myths that have been adapted to the Bible. I find priests who accept evolution as fact. I hear of priests teaching that Christ was not the Son of God, but a man used by God. I find the use of Catholic bibles that attempt to explain miracles as natural occurrences, and that these same bibles are used in classes.

I am appalled to discover this, and am even more disgusted to find it here at Notre Dame. I am led to believe Notre Dame is only a Christian university on the surface. That underneath, where the distinction between a non-Christian and a Christian university should be made, Notre Dame conforms to the non-Christian way of teaching.

I ask, is Notre Dame a Christian university in name only?

Forcing Rice into ND is cruel and exploitive

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the article in the Feb. 13 sports page in which the academic qualifications (or possible lack thereof) of a football recruit were discussed.

I do not wish to make any rash judgments about any individual student, because I realize that various sources not available to me may make up for Tony Rice's shortcomings as described in The Observer.

For example, letters of recommendation from his teachers may suggest that he has more academic potential than test scores or GPA currently show, or perhaps he is active in a wide variety of extracurricular activities (not just football) and so appears to be a well-rounded person. However, Holtz's recruitment of him may indicate some misconceptions about the life of a Notre Dame student.

Contrary to what some outsiders may believe, we students care about more than just sports, and we do more than party. A Notre Dame student must often work quite hard to keep up with classes. We attend challenging lectures, work on labs, participate in class discussions, write more papers in a few weeks than most high school students do in four years and read many books and articles on diverse topics.

This is not child's play for even a very bright student; to force such a life on someone who is not equipped to handle it is cruel, and to do so in order to obtain that person's athletic performance is exploitive. We at Notre Dame have long been proud to say that we do not exploit our scholar/athletes in this way, and it would be a terrible shame not to maintain that sensible and sensitive tradition.

To me, the article in The Observer showed clearly that Holtz has not yet grasped what kind of preparation a high school student requires to make it as a Domer. He said he was not even "familiar" with Rice's extremely low SAT score (roughly half that of a typical Notre Dame student), and he claimed that the young man's grades were "excellent."

If Rice's GPA was a 2.65, he probably was getting grades mostly of B and C. (Remember, these are high school grades, not the University's.) I'm afraid if Holtz sincerely believes such grades in high school are "excellent" from a Notre Dame perspective, he is sadly mistaken.

For most students now successfully studying here, a high school B would have been okay and a high school C would have been poor. I think it is questionable whether a student whose level of "excellence" is a high school B- will be able to survive here academically.

Instead of declaring in bold print newspaper headlines that we are not "lowering our standards," why don't we simply keep up those standards in the first place?

Baltz uncomfortable with expression of love

Dear Editor:

In his Feb. 7 movie review of "The Color Purple", Tripp Baltz contended that the aspect of lesbianism was handled well "in an appropriately uncomfortable interchange between Shug and Celie." Actually, the issue of lesbianism was quite poorly handled. In the novel by Alice Walker, Celie's slowly deepening relationship with Shug Avery is the event that changes Celie's life. Anyone who has seen the film or given the book even a cursory reading must agree that the change wrought in Celie's life is a change for the better. Celie's transformation from a befuddled, benumbed, bedraggled and abused girl to a woman of dignity, strength and integrity is the direct result of her lesbian relationship with Shug. This is evident in Walker's novel. Spielberg, however, has essentially gutted the story of this most powerful bond. The issue of lesbianism was hardly handled at all. But maybe that's why Baltz thought it was well handled.

Furthermore, the so-called interchange between Shug and Celie was not uncomfortable in the least. Neither of the characters exhibited any discernible discomfort, nor was it Spielberg's intention to convey such an emotion. Perhaps it was Baltz who was uncomfortable. This is understandable considering the carefully maintained environment of sexual repression and unenlightenment that he no doubt finds himself a part of.

It is a sad commentary that such a healing, life-giving, even salvific love as that between Shug and Celie - or between any two people of whichever sex - should cause one to be uncomfortable. Indeed, it is inappropriate. In screenings of Spielberg's biggest box-office hit, audiences sat dabbing at their eyes as the tender story of love between a boy and his alien developed. How odd that the concept of love across species lines is more acceptable than the love of two flesh and blood humans of the same gender.

Not having any choice is not a large sacrifice

Dear Editor:

Lent began on Wednesday. For many, this is a time to pray, make sacrifices and to give of ourselves. For other people, it means about two months full of Fridays of alfalfa sprout casserole and filet of breaded catfish. The policy of not serving meat on Fridays is unfair to all the non-Catholics and non-practicing Catholics that attend the university. The idea of Lent is to give something up, not to have it taken away. If meat isn't offered then we aren't making a sacrifice by abstaining from it. It is the same with Mass; Mass means a lot more when you choose to go on your own, rather than being dragged by your parents. I don't think that it is asking too much to have one dish with meat served at each meal. If the university won't allow us to make our own decisions about eating meat on Fridays, how can we expect more freedom with respect to alcohol and parietals?

team has really matured - it really showed with the comeback at the end.

"I think we'll get results later on. No matter where we go or who we have to play in the (NCAA) tournament in March, I think this team is ready. And I've always believed these things balance out, so maybe we'll win one like this later on."

The Blue Devils, 25-2, jumped out to a 6-0 lead at the start as the Irish struggled to get untracked. But a foul-line jump shot by Barlow, who lead the Irish with 21 points and six rebounds, tied it up at eight with 15:35 left in the first half.

The game stayed close until about three minutes remained in the half. Rivers lead the way for the Irish by scoring 10 of his 20 points.

Duke went on a 10-2 run to finish the half with Dawkins exploding for six of those points, and the Blue Devils left the floor and their appreciative home crowd with a 37-30 lead at halftime.

But the Blue Devils would not blow the Irish out - as perhaps they expected.

Notre Dame closed to within three points on a Rivers layup with 2:28 gone in the second half. A travelling call by the officials, after they had at first called a foul on Irish forward Donald Royal, gave Notre Dame the ball back with a shot to close within one.

But Royal missed a short jumper in the lane, and Dawkins made a fast break layup and drew a foul on Price. Center Jay Bilas rebounded Dawkins' missed foul shot and put in a layup to push the lead back to seven at 43-36.

Duke continued to dominate, and with 14:48 left to play it lead the Irish, 49-39. But even with the crowd noise reaching its peak, Notre Dame kept its poise and remained within striking distance of the Blue Devils.

"Even when we got down 10 points, I thought we had a good chance," said Phelps. "I liked the way we came back and didn't let the crowd affect us."

"We shot 74 percent from the field in the second half, and that showed me we are finally conditioned to crowds. The thing that beat us was Duke hitting some great shots under pressure late in the game."

In fact, the Irish came within four points of the Blue Devils four times in the next 11 minutes, but each time Duke would come up with a clutch basket and stretch the lead back out.

Patience and excellent shooting in the second half (89 percent from the line in addition to the 74 percent field-goal shooting) enabled Notre Dame to stay just behind Duke as the Blue Devils shot 60 percent themselves in the second period.

After a jumper and the slam by Dawkins gave the Blue Devils their eight-point lead with just over two minutes to go, a delay tactic nearly backfired on Duke. Four shots and the missed free throws gave Notre Dame a chance to mount its final charge.

"We would always like to get great shots off the delay if we could, but you have to credit Notre Dame's defense down the stretch," said Duke head coach Mike Krzyzewski. "The more possessions that occur at the end of a game that we're leading is worse as far as we are concerned."

"So, I'd do it the same way again. If we hit our free throws, everything looked great."

But Dawkins, who played magnificently all day, dashed Irish hopes at the buzzer, topping off a seemingly perfect game.

"I'm very proud of our guys," said Krzyzewski, "especially since we played last night (a 72-70 win at North Carolina State). Johnny showed why I think he is the premier player in the ACC. He scored, played excellent man-to-man defense on Rivers and handled the team when (point guard) Tommy Amaker was out."

Phelps agreed, but remained upbeat about his team's performance.

"Dawkins showed today why he's a quality player," said the Irish coach. "He simply made a great play at the end. And Duke showed what it can be as a basketball team."

"But we've got nothing to be ashamed of. This is what we need to get ready for March, and this year it's going to be up for grabs."

Next up for the Irish is Manhattan Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Men's interhall basketball playoffs arrive, Morrissey number one seed

By MICHAEL KEEGAN
Sports Writer

For six men's interhall basketball teams, it's playoff time. Last week marked the end of the regular season. For the playoffs, team records no longer matter because every team now plays in a double elimination playoff system.

Representing the ACC division are Morrissey and Alumni I. From the Big 10 it will be Sorin and Dillon II, while the Big Sky division will bring the winner of the Grace-Keenan preliminary game and Flanner IA.

Games played over the last week helped to determine each team's playoff status. In the Big Sky division, Dillon II earned its playoff spot by beating league champ Sorin as well as Alumni II during the final week. Because of this impressive closing stretch, Dillon was given a bye in the first round in accordance with its number two seeding.

Sorin, who defeated Howard in its final game, was given the number six seed in the tournament.

Morrissey gained the title of ACC division champ as it defeated Flanner II in its final game. If Morrissey had lost the game, there would have been a tie between Alumni I and Morrissey.

As a result of a dominating season in which they never suffered a loss, Morrissey gained a bye and the number one seed in the tournament. Alumni, as number-four seed, will face the winner of the Grace-Keenan preliminary game. Ken Schuerman, the captain of the Alumni Dogs, believes that his team has a realistic shot of winning the tournament because of the team's balance.

"The fact is that we have ten good basketball players," said Schuerman. "All the players on the team are approximately the same height which allows us to play any combination without losing any rebounding advantage from one line to another."

"We play a man-to-man defense where we do a lot of switching. All the players like to play an up-tempo game; a fast break game would be to our advantage."

In the Big Sky division, Flanner IA, despite losing to Cavanaugh, 64-62, won the divisional title. The second place team in the division has yet to be decided as both Keenan and Grace I ended the season with identical divisional records. The two teams will face each other to decide which team will make the playoffs as the number five seed.

Eric Grasberger, Flanner's team captain, believes this week's loss to Cavanaugh was just a minor setback.

"The team's loss to Cavanaugh was just unbelievable," said Grasberger. "They were hitting all their shots from the field whereas we were not. Even though this defeat was right before the playoffs, I still think that if the team plays well, Flanner could be tough in the end."

Morrissey and Sorin are the pre-tournament favorites. Schuerman believes Morrissey is the team to beat. Grasberger feels Sorin could dominate, but this will depend on the team Sorin puts on the floor.

"Morrissey is definitely the best team going into the playoffs," said Schuerman. "As a team, they play extremely hard. Morrissey can beat you in so many different ways. When we played them earlier in the year, they used strong free throw shooting down the stretch to beat us. They are a sound club; they are the team to beat."

Grasberger feels Sorin also has a strong team.

"The main question right now is whether or not certain football players will be playing for the Sorin team," said Grasberger. "If Steve Beuerlein and Rick Dibernardo play, Sorin will be a very tough team to beat. Sorin will have a definite size advantage that could prove detrimental to other teams' chances."

In other ACC games last week, Dillon I gained a forfeit victory over OC I. Grace II defeated OC Bombers 72-59. In the Big Sky division, Keenan defeated Zahm 66-42 and Stanford 61-50.

St. Ed's beat OC Slugs and OC Crime 56-45 and 61-54 respectively. In addition, OC Crime salvaged a 68-61 win over Stanford. The Big Ten division saw OC II forfeit a game apiece to Howard and Holy Cross, Fischer forfeit to Pangborn, and Dillon II assure its playoff spot by defeating Alumni II.

With the regular season past, the playoffs begin tonight at 7:00 p.m. in Gym number 2 at the ACC with Alumni taking on the winner of the Grace-Keenan game to be followed by Flanner IA-Sorin at 8:00 p.m.

Indiana guard Steve Alford, shown here against Purdue, broke out of a foul shooting slump by hitting 14-of-15 performance at the line against Ohio State in Indiana's 84-75 victory. See the story below.

Alford hits free throws as Indiana beats OSU

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Indiana guard Steve Alford says he's been in a slump at the free throw line lately. Coming from a player who's making 84.9 percent of his attempted foul shots, that's something.

Alford scored 32 points and made 14-of-15 free throw tries to spell the difference yesterday in an 84-75 Big Ten Conference college basketball victory at Ohio State.

"I liked my free throw shooting today," said the 6-2 junior. "I've been in a little slump. But I told a reporter the other day that I thought the slump would end here."

Indiana coach Bob Knight welcomed Woody Hayes, Ohio State's former football coach, into his locker room after the game.

"He talked about listening. They'll think about it now when they go home tonight. Their coach (Knight) has been saying that for four years, but they haven't listened yet," laughed Knight.

"Obviously, it was a very good game for us. I really thought we were in trouble when we were not able to maintain a 10-point lead just before the end of the half, but we came out in the second half and played well."

Indiana, which led 38-34 at the half, built that short-lived 10-point lead on Alford's free throw marksmanship, including four in a row during a strange play that turned the game around late in the half.

"That's what did it," said Ohio State's Dennis Hopson. "I won't say it was because of the technical, but from then on."

The Hoosiers moved to 17-5 overall and 9-3 in the Big Ten, one-half game behind league-leading Michigan. Ohio State dropped to 12-10 and 6-6.

Alford scored 19 points in the second half, but it was a six-point flurry in the first half that gave the Hoosiers the lead for good.

Alford hit a pair of free throws to draw Indiana even at 22-22. After a free throw by Ohio State's Hopson with 5:47 left in the half gave the Buckeyes their final lead of the day, Alford made four consecutive free throws, two of which were the result of a technical foul.

Alford was fouled by Kip Lomax at the 5:37 mark, was awarded two foul shots, and hit his first free throw. Ohio State's Brad Sellers then was called for a dead-ball technical for throwing an elbow after the shot. Alford hit his second shot and both ends of the technical to make it 26-23.

Indiana never trailed again, taking a 38-34 lead at the half. Ohio State got as close as three points several times in the second half, but Indiana hit 16 of 20 free throws down the stretch to pull away.

Leadership

from the point in Mary Gavin to break the press in the second half."

The 5-6 sophomore dished out 10 assists in a full 40 minutes of playing time, and teamed with 5-9 freshman Diondra Toney in the backcourt for most of the second half to get the ball up the court against the quick Titans. Gavin was pleased with their success in controlling the tempo of the game after appearing a little rattled at the end of the first half.

"We knew it was going to come and their girls were really quick," she said. "I'm glad that Diondra and I handled it well."

"In the first half I think the press picked up the pace too much for what the coach wanted us to play. She didn't want us to play that quick a pace. We talked it over in the locker room and I think we handled it a little better in the second half."

Trena Keys added nine points for the Irish while Lynn Ebben, Heidi Bunek, and Toney added eight each.

Detroit was sparked throughout the contest by 5-9 junior Cassandra Pack, who pumped in her 18 points from everywhere on the court. Mary Kay Whalen added 12 for the Titans and Brenda Hawkins came off the bench for 10, but it was Pack who keyed the Detroit press and came up with the big points.

DiStanislao could only praise the speedster after the game.

"Cassandra Pack is a great, great player," she said. "She has so many different skills. She's a great leaper, she's strong, she has good court-sense, she's a good shooter and a good rebounder. Where Cassandra was on the floor dictated what defense we were going to be in. That's how much regard we have for her."

Notre Dame outshot Detroit 46.8 percent to 31.8 percent, but the game was much closer than those figures and the final score indicate.

"It was another one of those games that was up for grabs," DiStanislao said. "Nobody had control. At some points it was totally out of everyone's control."

"It was a good game for us to win because, despite what we were doing wrong on our end of the floor, we were able to force them into turnovers and then capitalize."

IRISH ITEMS - Freshman guard

Diondra Toney's eight points came in her first start for the Irish, as she logged 35 minutes of floor time. . . Trena Keys' layup with 10:41 remaining was career field goal number 617, surpassing Shari Matvey's record of 616 set between 1979 and 1983.

Saint Mary's drops one to Franklin but defeats illness, Bethel College

By LINDA BAILY
Sports Writer

Coming off of a humiliating loss to Franklin College, 72-40, Thursday night, the Saint Mary's basketball team pulled together to defeat Bethel College, 64-35, Saturday at Angela Athletic facility.

Leading the Belles against Franklin College in scoring was senior co-captain Beth Kreber, who scored 16 points. Following close behind was junior co-captain Kris Pantelleria contributed ten points. Kreber and Pantelleria are among the few varsity players who have managed to escape illness during the season.

Outstanding sophomore, Tammye Radke has not been as fortunate. Radke, who is ranked number two in the district in scoring, was unable to play the last two games because of illness. Stephanie Duke, Sheila Zenter, and Tricia Hug also missed the Franklin College game.

Despite the absence of several key players, Saint Mary's head coach Marvin Wood did not give any excuses for the Belles performance against Franklin College.

"We played a very strong team," said Wood. "Franklin College's record is 17-6. We started out strong but we were overpowered with their size and their overall strength as a team." Although the team was still fighting off sickness and playing without the starter Tammye Radke, the Belles found enough strength to beat Bethel College by a large margin.

Kreber lead once again in scoring with 18 points. Wood was very pleased with Kreber's performance.

"Kreber played well defensively and offensively against a tough girl," he said. "She didn't even let her girl get the ball. She really took their best girl out of the game."

Wood also mentioned that freshman Kellie O'Brien played extremely well. O'Brien had four assists along with freshman teammate, Laura Danch.

Jennifer Harte, another promising freshman, was the Belles top rebounder with seven, followed by Zenter and Kreber who both had six.

By half time, Saint Mary's already had a strong lead over the Pirates, 32-17, even though the Belles were not playing at their usual level of intensity.

"I am a little disappointed that we didn't play with the intensity we need," said Wood prior to the second half. Since we do not have the size, we can't afford to play without intensity."

Wood also mentioned that Bethel College had improved since Saint Mary's had scrimmaged them earlier in the season.

During the second half, several new faces appeared on the court who helped Saint Mary's defeat the Pirates.

"It was nice to have a game where everyone got a chance to play," said Wood. "It's a hard thing to realize that these girls come to practice every day and work just as hard as those who play all the time."

Pantelleria expressed the same thought. "Everybody got to play," she said. "Duke and Zenter played really well especially since they have both been sick."

Wood is not looking forward to the end of the season.

"This group has a real togetherness," he said. "Coaching basketball is my recreation. It's really enjoyable for me, and I hope it's enjoyable for them too."

The Saint Mary's basketball team will be playing their last home game on Feb. 19 at 7:00 p.m. against Aquinas College. The Belles will finish up the season at Purdue University-Calumet Feb. 20 at 7:00 p.m.

Bodine takes Daytona

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. - Geoff Bodine outdueled Dale Earnhardt Sunday to win the crash-marred Daytona 500 NASCAR stock car race.

Bodine took the lead for the final time 33 laps from the end and was holding off the determined Earnhardt when the latter suddenly slowed and drove into the pits for gas on lap 197 of the 200-lap race.

When Earnhardt roared back onto the track, his engine blew, allowing Bodine to cruise to his first victory at Daytona International Speedway and the fourth of his career.

Bodine won a stock-car record $192,715. That broke the record of $185,500 set in this race last year by Bill Elliott. Terry Labonte wound up finishing a distant second, 11.26 seconds behind Bodine's Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, followed by defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip. Labonte drove a new Oldsmobile Delta 88, while Waltrip and Earnhardt also were in Chevrolets.

Bobby Hillin Jr. was fourth and Benny Parsons was fifth.

The late battle between Bodine and Earnhardt lent drama to what had been until that point a race highlighted by attrition.

Bubka clears 19 feet to win event, fails to set pole vault indoor record

Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. - Sergei Bubka cleared 19 feet, 0 inches yesterday to win the pole vault at the Bally Invitational Track and Field Meet, but failed in three attempts to crack the world indoor best.

Bubka was the only one of three pole vaulters who have set the world indoor best in the past six weeks to compete in the meet.

Bubka, who holds the outdoor world record at 19-8 feet 4 inches, missed three times at 19-5 feet, 4 inches.

He said through an interpreter that he missed because he isn't used to the surface.

"I am physically very strong now, but I have to repeat that I am not used to this wooden surface," he said. "The runway was too short for me and it prevented me from setting the new world record."

Bubka cleared 19-0 on his third attempt at that height.

Billy Olson, owner of the indoor best at 19-5 feet, 12 inches, was too tired to compete after Thursday's games, said his coach, Tom Jennings, executive director of the Pacific Coast Club.

Joe Dial decided not to compete because his poles were still in New York, said Neal Robinson, organizer of the meet.

In the women's 50-meter hurdles, Gayle Watkins edged defending champion Stephanie Hightower in 6.99 seconds. Hightower, who won the event three of the past four years, was timed in 7.00 seconds.

Irish wrestlers take two against Marquette, IU

By ED JORDANICH
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame wrestling team took a decisive step towards its goal of a .500 or better season with two big wins over the weekend. A 24-15 victory at Indiana on Saturday followed by yesterday's 37-6 wipeout against Marquette in the ACC pit upped the Irish's record to 7-6 and put a smile on Notre Dame head coach Fran McCann's face.

"Our goal was to finish the season even," said McCann, "and, with one weekend left in the regular season, we definitely can accomplish that. I was concerned going down to IU. They have a similar program to ours except for greater experience. They have some seniors in key positions, and I was really happy with the way we handled them."

A quick start for the Irish in the lower weight classes set the tone at Bloomington as the first four Notre Dame wrestlers won. The biggest boost was freshman Pat Boyd's 11-1 decision over IU's fifth-year senior and most successful mat man, John Dehart.

"Pat beating their best guy really set them back and gave us an edge," said McCann. "They seemed to lose their confidence after that, and we took it to them the rest of the way. We out hustled them at the beginning and wore them down near the end."

Other strong performances were turned in against the Hoosiers by Dan Carlin, Jerry Durso, Chris Geneser, and John Krug. All won decisions which built up a healthy lead before Indiana rallied to score the last nine points of the match with a decision and a pin.

McCann's fears of a letdown against Marquette were unfounded. The Irish dominated the lightweights again and led 31-0 before Krug lost 3-0 in the 177 pound division.

Carl Hildinger began the afternoon with an impressive 13-4 win over the Warrior's Kevin Giglinto. Durso won by forfeit, Boyd by decision, and Carlin and Geneser completed their weekend sweeps with pins.

Ron Wisniewski and Dan Carrigan won close one and two point matches respectively, and Dave Helmer pinned Mike Avani to round out the Irish scoring.

Although McCann was somewhat disappointed with Krug's, as well as heavyweight Spero Karas' losses on Sunday, he was pleased with his wrestlers' overall performance.

"With the schedule we've played I like our position right now," said McCann. "We have a real challenge next Saturday at Nebraska against BYU and the Huskies. Both of those schools have excellent wrestling traditions. It will be our last competition before the regionals. It should be great."

The Observer/Hannes Hacker

Men's swim team beats N. Illinois in preparation for Championships

By SCOTT INGLIS
Sports Writer

A winning season, a balanced team effort, and high hopes for the upcoming championships were the three prizes that the Notre Dame men's swim team was able to bring home with it this weekend.

The Irish posted a 78-62 dual meet victory Saturday at Northern Illinois University, raising their final season record to 5-4.

"What made this such a big win for us is that it gave us a winning record for the season," said first-year Notre Dame coach Tim Welsh. "This had been one of our chief goals at the start of the season, and I'm really excited that we achieved it."

Notre Dame started the meet in fine fashion against the Huskies, taking first in the 400-yard medley and a first and second place finish in the 1000-yard freestyle.

The two senior co-captains for the Irish, John Coffey and Charles Brady, anchored the Irish in racing to this 15-1 advantage early on. Coffey, swimming a leg in the medley, helped Notre Dame to the winning time of 3:43.03, while Brady put in a winning time of 10:46.12 in the freestyle.

"Winning those first two events and taking that early lead was a big lift for us," said Welsh. "From that point, we knew we were capable of staying out in front for the remainder of the meet."

The key word from then on for the Irish was balance, as the men moved on to win 9-of-16 events on the day from the Huskies. Demonstrating their overall team depth and superiority, Notre Dame captured the nine first place finishes without a single swimmer claiming two victories.

Facing this balanced Irish lineup, Northern Illinois, although swimming well for the second half of the meet, was never able to close their early deficit to less than nine points, at 71-62. Balance will also be playing a big role for the Irish in the near future, according to Welsh.

"This meet gives us great hope and optimism going into the championships," said Welsh. "This team has worked very hard, is a very enthusiastic group, and the balance we demonstrated today could only help us down the road."

As an added bonus for the Irish, seniors Mike Roberts and Blaise Harding placed first in the 200-yard backstroke (2:07.67) and the 500-yard freestyle (4:52.01), respectively, enabling the Irish to complete the senior-sweep started by co-captains Coffey and Brady earlier in the meet.

"That was a nice way to complete the dual-meet season for us. We took four seniors on the trip, and each one was able to win an event in his last meet at Notre Dame," Welsh said.

With all these positive signs working for them, the Irish will be spending the early part of this week preparing for the upcoming Midwestern Collegiate Conference championships starting Thursday in Evansville, Ind. Notre Dame placed second last year in the three-day championship meet, and they will go down to Evansville this year looking for a major victory.

"One of our major goals for the season has been to win this meet," said Welsh. "We achieved one of our goals on Saturday with the winning season, and we are quite optimistic about achieving this one."

"Notre Dame has never won this championship meet, which is certainly something we would like to change. With our team spirit and enthusiasm and the way we have been swimming, we are well prepared to do it."

The Irish will be short a few juniors this weekend with Junior Parents Weekend claiming some swimmers, but Notre Dame's chances are still looking good. After this weekend's championships, the Irish will come home for a week before heading to Illinois-Chicago for the season's grand finale, the Midwest Independent Invitational meet in the Windy City.

Pavin wins with eagle taking Hawaiian Open

Associated Press

HONOLULU - Corey Pavin used an eagle-3 to destroy Tom Watson's hopes and then hung on for a two-stroke victory yesterday in the Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

Pavin, 26, came from three strokes back with a wind-blown 66, 6-under-par, and claimed his third victory in as many years on the PGA tour with a 272 total, 16-under-par.

The triumph was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and pushed Pavin's earnings for the season to $103,907.

Watson, the third-round leader who was seeking an end to a lengthy non-winning string, simply couldn't keep pace with Pavin's front-nine putting heroics in the gusty winds that raked the Waiialae Country Club course.

Pavin scorched the front with a 31 that included three birdie putts from more than 20 feet, then applied the clincher on the par-5 13th.

The slightly built young man threw his second shot in about two feet from the flag and tapped in the putt that put him three shots clear of the field.

But he had to work hard to make it stand up.

A three-putt bogey on the 17th cut his margin to two, and he faced a six-foot par putt on the 18th. When the ball dropped in, Pavin happily hopped into the air, the victory secured.

Fencing teams remain undefeated in road meet, looking to Nationals

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's and women's fencing teams maintained winning traditions once again after competing on the road at Cleveland, Oh. against Cleveland State, Oberlin, Carnegie-Mellon and California (Pa.) The men came away from the weekend with a perfect 21-0 slate while women compiled a 19-0 record.

"We are just fencing superbly," said Notre Dame head coach Mike DeCicco. "The team's intensity is high and they are proving their talents on the strip time and time again. We let the championship get away last season and the team refuses to let that happen again."

"We have been blowing the lesser teams out with our reserves, and beating the better teams by similar margins with our starters. The kids are hungry and are working their hearts out for the chance in March to be the top team in the country."

While some of DeCicco's top fencers were off competing in the Junior Olympics, the team didn't show any lack of talent. Once again, the foil squad has proven to be the bread and butter for the Irish, starting the team out strong and gathering some key victories.

Leading the foilists in Cleveland were seniors Mike VanderVelden and Dave Reuter, who registered 6-0 ledgers for the weekend. Their individual season marks currently stand at 28-6 and 14-1 respectively.

Also finishing strong for the Irish were sophomore Yehuda Kovacs and senior Matt Kirsch. They took foil honors with 5-0 records and are 29-3 and 17-1 respectively for the season. Overall the foil team defeated Cleveland State, Carnegie-Mellon and California by a 7-2 margin and Oberlin by 9-0.

The sabre team did just as well, with victories over Oberlin and California (9-0), Cleveland State (8-1) and Carnegie-Mellon (6-3). The top finishers for the Irish were seniors Sean Reardon and Mike Bathon with a 9-0 slate against the four opponents. Reardon owns a 23-3 mark for the season while Bathon is 24-2.

The epee squad, while coming away with top honors, registered the only loss to an individual team during the weekend. They beat Cleveland State (7-2), Carnegie-Mellon (8-1) and California (5-4) but lost to Oberlin (4-5). Junior John Haugh led the team with a 7-1 score to up his season mark to 23-8.

The women's team found the same success in Cleveland with wins over Cleveland State (13-3), Carnegie-Mellon (16-0) and California (10-6). The top foilists for the Irish were junior Cindy Weeks and senior Janet Sullivan who both finished 12-0. Weeks leads the team overall with a record of 54-9 while Sullivan owns a 28-2 record.

"The girls all have been fencing very well so far this season," said Irish coach Yves Auriol. "We have the potential to be one of the top teams in the country at the NCAA tournament in the spring."

The next Irish opponents are Michigan State, Illinois, Michigan, Wayne State and Oakland on Feb. 15 at East Lansing, Mich. The Irish hope to continue their win streak while on their way to the nationals which take place on Mar. 25-29.

Boston bench comes on for Celtics as Walton, Carlisle defeat Lakers

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. - Dennis Johnson and Larry Bird were the big scorers, but it was the play of the Boston bench that made the difference yesterday as the Boston Celtics completed a sweep of the two-game season series against the Los Angeles Lakers.

"It was a monumental team effort," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said after the Celtics' 105-99 NBA victory. "We got big lifts from Rick (Carlisle) and Bill (Walton)."

Johnson led the Celtics with 23 points and Bird added 22 points and 18 rebounds, but a better-than-average performance from the Boston bench spurred the victory.

"They came in and did the job today," Bird said. "It was our defense and the subs coming in that made the difference. The guys off the bench did the job and that picked us up."

Lakers Coach Pat Riley downplayed the importance of the game.

"Boston made all the plays when they had to," he said. "I'm sure they feel good about themselves with their two wins. But the playoffs are a long way away."

The Celtics opened a 10-point lead early in the fourth quarter and then held off the Lakers in the waning moments.

The Lakers, who were led by James Worthy's 35 points, went cold in the final two minutes and could not cut the Celtics' lead to less than six. The Lakers missed seven straight shots in the final minute.

Boston, winning its third straight and 15th of its last 16, had three reserves in double figures. Guard Jerry Sichting had 11 points, and Rick Carlisle and Bill Walton each had 10.

The Lakers also got 23 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 12 assists for Los Angeles, but failed to make a field goal and had just six points.

Boston opened its biggest lead, 71-59, by outscoring the Lakers 13-2 over a four-minute span early in the third quarter. Dennis Johnson keyed the run with six points.

The Lakers, behind Worthy, trimmed the margin to 81-79 with 1:08 left in the period. Worthy, in addition to making two spectacular layups and a resounding dunk, scored 13 points in the quarter.

The game was interrupted three times by flaring tempers in the second quarter.

Midway through the period, Lakers guard Byron Scott had to be restrained after receiving a technical foul for throwing the ball at Sichting.

Just 35 seconds later, players again had to be held apart after Celtics reserve Greg Kite fouled Michael Cooper hard from behind on a layup try.

Tempers again got hot in the final minute of the half when Kite sent Abdul-Jabbar to the floor with another hard foul.

The Lakers sank nine straight free throws in the final three minutes to cut Boston's halftime advantage to 58-55 after Sichting's nine points in the second period helped the Celtics lead 55-48.

Irish lose in last six seconds, despite impressive comeback

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Assistant Sports Editor

DURHAM, N.C. - Irish basketball coach Dig-ger Phelps was right where he wanted to be just before the end of yesterday's game at Duke. Unfortunately for Notre Dame, there would not be a happy finish.

"If someone would have told me we could be one point down with six seconds left in a game down here, I would have taken it - no doubt in my mind," said Phelps after the Irish had lost a heartbreaker to the Blue Devils, 75-74.

David Rivers had his last-second jumper blocked by outstanding Duke guard Johnny Dawkins as he tried to give the Irish the win, and Notre Dame ran out of time in its quest to knock off the second-ranked Blue Devils.

The Irish, 17-5, gave themselves that chance for victory with an outstanding effort in the closing minutes, coming back after Duke had taken an eight-point lead with only 2:16 left to play.

A slam by Dawkins, who finished with 18 points and eight rebounds, gave the Blue Devils that lead. But the Irish refused to die, and a seven-foot jumper by Rivers and two foul shots by Jim Dolan brought Notre Dame within four with 58 seconds left in the contest.

Two foul shots by Duke freshman Danny Ferry pushed the lead back up to six, but Rivers followed quickly with a double-pump layup. Jim Dolan's three-point play, after a miss on a one-and-one opportunity by Blue Devils swingman David Henderson, then brought the Irish within one.

A steal by guard Scott Hicks in the Duke backcourt brought Notre Dame fans out of their seats, but the Blue Devils were able to take the ball back and the Irish had to send Duke forward Billy King to the line with 13 seconds to play.

King, a 50 percent foul shooter, missed his first shot to give the Irish a final chance. But Dawkins came up with his big play in the closing seconds to protect the 75-74 lead as a wild crowd at Cameron Indoor Stadium poured onto the floor in joyous relief with victory preserved.

"I was trying to create for myself and my teammates," said Rivers of the final play. "He definitely got a part of the ball, but there was contact. But you're not going to get those foul calls down the stretch. It's too bad things just didn't work out."

"He was penetrating and I cut him off," said Dawkins. "He went up before me, but I went up for the block and fortunately I got it. I figured it would be either him or Ken Barlow. I knew I'd have to play some defense."

Phelps later explained what was supposed to happen on the final play.

"The play was designed for David to get the ball and take the shot if he could get open," said the Irish coach. "We put Price in one corner and Stevenson in the other for a pass. We wanted Barlow and (Tim) Kempton around the basket for a tip."

Despite the one-point loss, Phelps remained pleased with the play of his team.

"It was one of our better games," he said. "I feel really good about this game today. This

Blue Devils' student body has different character

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Assistant Sports Editor

DURHAM, N.C. - Different, definitely different.

That seems to be the only way to describe the antics of the Duke student body at yesterday's Blue Devils-Irish matchup at Cameron Indoor Stadium. Often called the most innovative student body in the nation, the "little Devils," as they are called, were their usual self.

The fun began for some the night before the game as a number of students slept outside the arena. Students are allotted the lower seats all around the court (approximately 2,500 of the 8,564 capacity), and these seats are filled on a first come-first served basis.

The action inside started about 40 minutes before game time. Most of the students had arrived and had filled the lower section, while most of the upper seats remained empty. None of the players were on the court, and none of the "older folks" had yet arrived. It was clear at this point that this stadium was the domain of the students.

As the rest of the crowd filed in up until game time, the students remained vocal. It started with the Blue Devil mascot tearing up a Notre Dame sign, while the student body sang and danced to the band's performance of "Devil With A Blue Dress On."

Tennis balls flew back and forth over the court and an Irish fan with a green hat was accosted in unison with chants of, "Green hat, green hat" until he removed it.

When NBC-TV announcers Al McGuire and Dick Enberg arrived, McGuire was greeted by cheers of, "Take a spin, Al, take a spin." This appeared to be old stuff for McGuire as he responded by spinning on the ground a few times, faking a dunk with a 360-degree spin.

Seemingly everything the students chanted, they chanted together. When McGuire was hugged by a woman, they yelled, "Al's got a girlfriend, Al's got a girlfriend."

Some signs that decorated the arena were: "Notre Dame - No Big Challenge," in reference to NBC, and "Now we want the Celtics," whose talents the Duke fans may be underestimating.

One interesting group of young men sat directly behind the Notre Dame bench and never failed to harass the Irish during timeouts. Representing Duke's only all-male dorm, they wore sweatshirts with the letters "BOG" (Bunch Of Guys) sewn across the front.

Activity during Notre Dame foul shots varied. Sometimes there was conventional loud noise and hand waving, while other times there was quiet with a loud shout just as the Irish released the ball.

For Tim Kempton, the fans had special treatment. When he stepped to the line with 6:20 to play, the students jeered, "Oh no, not Kempton." The noise seemed to matter little to Notre Dame as Kempton made both those foul shots and the Irish as a whole made 91 percent for the game.

The mention of a North Carolina Tar Heel at halftime brought a response of, "Go to hell, Carolina, go to hell," showing that the "little Devils" were not even using their best stuff on the Irish.

One Duke student had this to say on the new basketball arena at nearby North Carolina.

"They make the students sit far away from the court," he said. "The boosters get the best seats, and half the time they don't even show up. That's not the way it should be. Gyms should be for the students."

And that was never more evident than yesterday at Duke.

Lavetta Willis, pictured above, hit 9-of-10 from the foul line and 5-of-6 from the field to lead the Irish over North Star Conference rivals Detroit, 67-56 Saturday. Notre Dame rebounded from a 24-24 tie at halftime to pull away on Willis' hot hand. Marty Strasen has the story at right.

Willis dominates boards, scores 19 in 67-56 victory over rival Detroit

DETROIT - Lavetta Willis lives in nearby Wayne, Mich., but Saturday night she made her home in the paint at Calihan Hall.

With her parents and sister in the crowd, Willis took control under the boards in the second half to lift the Notre Dame women's basketball team to a 67-56 victory over North Star Conference rival Detroit. The win lifted the Irish to a 15-7 overall mark and gave them their seventh conference victory against only one defeat.

Willis scored 15 of her 19 points in the second half, and Notre Dame head coach Mary DiStanislao thought her play turned things around for the team after the Lady Titans had played the Irish to a 24-24 tie during the first 20 minutes.

"It's easy for a person of her size to get lost inside behind those big people," DiStanislao said of the 5-11 junior. "She definitely has the advantage of being quick. But unless she's using that by stepping up and looking for the basketball or making a move to the basket, she's not going to get the ball, and she's not going to go anywhere if she does get it.

"Today she moved for the ball, she moved for position and when she received the ball she made good moves going for the basket."

Notre Dame played a slow game for most of the first half, with 6-2 Sandy Botham taking advantage of openings in Detroit's man-to-man defense and dumping in 10 points.

It appeared the Irish might pull away when they went on top 24-16 with under four minutes to play, but the Titans used their speed and a full-court press to force turnovers and put the final eight points of the half on the board.

But in the second half it was all Willis. When she wasn't hitting jumpers in the lane she was getting fouled, connecting on 9-of-10 from the charity stripe to go along with her 5-of-6 from the field, for a game-high total of 19 points.

Willis attributed her success to being in the right place at the right time.

"They were banging around in there, but we were screening for each other and helping each other out," she explained. "(The guards) were getting the passes in. We knew we had to keep screening and it just happened that I was the one open. Detroit was pretty tough inside."

Another key for the Irish in the second half was their ability to figure out the Detroit press which caused so many problems in the final four minutes of the first frame. DiStanislao expected the Titans to try to use their speed.

"No matter how much you prepare for it, people in different-color jerseys are going to do it to you," she said. "It worked for Detroit. They got real aggressive and started coming after us. It worked. Detroit plays much better when they can play an up-tempo game."

"We got some good leadership
