Aquino seeks cease-fire, orders release of prisoners

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino ordered the immediate release of 33 political prisoners today, and her government announced that the cases of another 400 people were being studied.

Gen. Fidel Ramos, the new military chief, announced the releases after an early morning Mass, where one prisoner, identified as Jaime Verdan, told the crowd, "I cannot say how happy I am. I thank 'people's power' and God."

Human rights groups have estimated approximately 500 people were held under the Presidential Detention Act, adopted during the 20-year rule of Ferdinand Marcos.

The government-run broadcast station said yesterday that a military task force would meet during the night to prepare a list of the prisoners and said the new administration was "hoping" for the release of approximately 50 percent of them.

Aquino said earlier yesterday she would seek a cease-fire with communist guerrillas but not the extradition of Marcos, who was driven into exile by her "people's power" revolt.

Salvador Laurel, the new vice president, had announced plans for a general political amnesty

University contributed to successful boycott, says farm union leader

By CLIFF STEVENS and FRANK LIPO
Staff Reporters

"Why suffer to make a big corporation more wealthy instead of working to make something better for your family?" asked Baldemar Velasquez, president of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC) last night.

Earlier in the day, Velasquez announced the suspension of the 7-year-old boycott of Campbell Soup Company products, during a press conference at the Center for Social Concerns. Notre Dame had endorsed the boycott for six years.

The actual agreement was signed Feb. 21 by the Toledo, Ohio-based FLOC, the Campbell's Soup Company and Michigan and Ohio tomato and cucumber farmers. A 1978 strike of 2,300 migrant farmworkers led to the formation of FLOC and the subsequent boycott.

The agreement grants FLOC union recognition. For that reason, Velasquez said during the press conference that this agreement is a momentous one, not just for farmworkers covered by FLOC, but for farmworkers across the nation.

"That is really all that the farmworkers have lacked over the years," said Velasquez. He said that every other U.S. worker-group has received union recognition, through the National Labor Relations Board.

This agreement sets a precedent for guaranteed improvements in living and working conditions for farmworkers, according to Velasquez.

"Farmworkers are not unemployed. You are talking about hard-working American citizens. So the question is, if they are hard-working American citizens, why can't they feed, educate, and clothe their families from the sweat of their backs?" asked Velasquez.

Velasquez said that Notre Dame made a difference in the boycott effort and was the first major educational institution to join the boycott.

"When you boycott a product for six years, and you have students who can lead this and carry on the tradition, I think that's phenomenal and a credit to the students at Notre Dame," he said.

Velasquez said that the Notre Dame effort must continue. "We have to keep this thing going. Campbell's should not be kept in an uncompetitive situation. We have to bring Heinz, Del Monte, and the other big companies in," he said.

Velasquez asked the audience to write a letter to Heinz, Campbell's major competitor, asking for "negotiation," not just talk, with FLOC.

Referring to Heinz, Velasquez said, "It (a labor agreement) is going to happen, these guys do not stand a chance. It took us six years to build the Campbell boycott, but we were nobody. It took us six years to get to the people in this country who can make things hap-

Friends, not phone taps prompt drug investigations at ND

By ALEX PELTZER
Copy Editor

There is no unit of Notre Dame Security that investigates drugs exclusively, according to Security Director Rex Rakow.

"We're a relatively small staff. We aren't out actively soliciting information," Rakow said. "We don't have a unit per se that just deals with drug investigations."

He said most information Security receives does not come from investigations, but instead from concerned friends. He also said the administration rarely initiates an investigation.

"Once in a while through other channels of the University, we might get a referral. There might be a drug problem with a student or a group of students and we investigate," Rakow said.

Rakow said that for Security to search a room, "we have to have a complaint. It has to be reasonable and probable cause must exist."

In most cases, information comes to the administration or to Security in inadvertent ways. John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, said in the case of the Flanner and Keenan room searches of Feb. 3, the information was offered to them.

"Information had been brought to our attention by people who were concerned that something might be going on. The suggestion was that the goings-on had something to do with drugs," Goldrick said.

Both Rakow and Goldrick denied rumors that phone taps had been used in any investigations.

Rakow said although Security does have tracing equipment for harassment calls, they have never used phone tapping in drug investigations.

"We haven't used anything off the phones," said Rakow. "That's not to say that we might not use phones as a tool at some point. But we would have to have permission from at least one person in the room. That has not been necessary."

He added that the permission is a legal requirement, not a University requirement.

But Goldrick said that phone tapping would be against the philosophy of the University.

"I couldn't imagine that we would for any reason listen in on the conversation of a student," Goldrick said. "That's not the kind of relationship we have with our students."

Rakow said investigations have to be checked with the Office of Student Affairs before they are carried out.

He said the University has the right to enter a room at any time. He cited the housing contract, signed when a student first enters a residence hall, as giving Security that right.

The contract states, "The University reserves the right . . . to enter rooms without a search warrant for the purpose of maintaining security, discipline and the orderly operation of an educational institution."

Drug offenses recently handled differently

By TRIPP BALTZ

At Notre Dame, drug offenses typically have been handled first by the residence hall staffs, in a similar fashion to other in-hall offenses.

Security and the Office of Student Affairs, however, recently have dealt with drug violations differently.

Brother Michael Smith said he was not told beforehand about Security's search of two rooms in Flanner Hall, where he is the rector.

"I have received a letter that dealt with one person," said Smith. Smith said he has no idea if the administration or Security is conducting a campus-wide investigation.

"I guess it's pretty clear (the searches) were for drugs," said Smith. Smith added that the students have

Once the investigations have uncovered a problem, either with drug use or with sales, the students involved would then be dealt with by Student Affairs.

"We would like to deal with our students in disciplinary matters internally as much as we can, said Goldrick.

He explained that instead of turnot been expelled from the University. He said he was told they have withdrawn "for the time being."

In a Feb. 5 story in The Observer, Keenan Hall Rector Brother Bonaventure Scully stated he knew nothing about investigations conducted in a room in his dorm prior to the night on which they occurred.

Scully later refused to offer commenting the matter over to officials outside the University, the administration prefers to discipline the students themselves.

How the student's case is handled depends largely on what kind of violation is involved. Father David Tyson, vice president of student af-ments on the affair. He said the whole thing was "a security matter."

"I can't tell you anything that wouldn't be confidential," Scully said.

Rex Rakow, director of Notre Dame Security, said he would not comment on either affair because they are private matters between the involved students and Student Affairs. Rakow added that the hall staffs normally do not contact Security directly about a drug-related offense. "Usually they contact Student Affairs first."

At a dorm-wide meeting in Morrissey Hall earlier in the semester, Hall Rector Brother Edward Luther announced that a sophomore resident had been expelled last semester for selling drugs.

Commenting on the matter later, Luther said "I got a call from the Office of Student Affairs that (the student) would not be coming back." Luther said he was not involved in the student's case before his expulsion. The student was call-

U.S. city maps at College show racially segregated areas

by MARILYN BENCHIK
Staff Reporter

Timothy Kenny, consultant for the South Bend Human Rights Commission, has compiled a collection of 700 maps indicating areas of racial segregation in cities across the country.

The Cushwa-Leighton Library at Saint Mary's is now displaying a portion of Kenny's duplicated works. Milwaukee, Chicago, and South Bend are the cities that comprise the Saint Mary's collection.

"The overall collection took me five years to work on. These maps range from 1940-1980," said Kenny.

"Only South Bend has a map for 1980 on display at the Cushwa-Leighton Library. Due to a lack of funds the government decided to put Chicago's and Milwaukee's maps on microfiche," said Kenny.

He added that the Saint Mary's collection is a duplication of the original maps at his home.

According to Kenny, he researched his information from U.S. Census Reports (1940-1980) and the Notre Dame Memorial Library Statistics Reports.

"Blocks equalling a 50 percent or more black population are colored black. Areas with less than a 50 percent black population are shaded tan, and blocks with no blacks are left uncolored," he said.

"The patterns showed that there are usually one or more predominantly black areas in most cities across the country," Kenny added.

"The percentage of segregation is usually quite high in American cities. Usually this percentage varies between 70 and 90 percent. In some places it even reaches 98 percent," he said.

Kenny said that there are no major differences concerning the rate of segregation in cities across the country.

Each city that Kenny studied has its own segregation patterns.

"The south side of Chicago, which now has a large black population, grew a great deal after 1950. Before the fifties the black area was only 5 square miles. By 1960 it had expanded from the Loop to 99th Street.

"In 1986 this area had dipped down to the Calumet River where 129th Street lies. This land area exceeds the land area of the entire city of South Bend. It is also densely populated. Three quarters of a million people live here," said Kenny.

He said Milwaukee is an interesting city to study segregation patterns.

"Milwaukee was one of the most segregated cities until after 1960. The black comprised the inner core of the city.

"In the sixties many blacks were able to disperse to the northwest.

Now in the near north side of the city there is a large black population that covers 10 square miles," Kenny said.

In South Bend the problem of racial segregation has had a devastating effect in many of the city's neighborhoods, Kenny said.

"On the southeast side of South Bend, surrounded by Michigan, Miami, Broadway and Sample streets, that neighborhood piled up with poor, black people.

"What you find with this factor are landlords who really don't care about their tenants.

"As a consequence of this situation, an area that equalled 6,000 resident in 1960 was reduced to a population of 2,000 in 1980.

"The housing in this area fell apart, and it was very difficult for black people to find jobs or get jobs because geographically they were separated from many businesses or other places of employment, Kenny said.

According to Kenny this information will be helpful to students and professors of the sociology, government, and history departments at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

The maps will be stored in the History Seminar Room, Room 350 of Madeleva Hall at Saint Mary's.

pen. What took us six years to do with Campbell's, we can do in six months with Heinz."

Souzen Deavers, a representative from Campbell's, had joined Velasquez in praise of the agreement at the press conference.

"We feel we can look forward to good labor relations in Ohio and Michigan," Deavers said of the agreement.

Deavers said the boycott had no economic impact on the Campbell's Company, saying the agreement was finally reached because of Campbell's traditional commitment to the interests of minorities and women.

Later, Velasquez questioned claims by Campbell Soup officials that the boycott was ineffective. "They can say all they want, but you know very well there is no way they can measure how successful they could have been (without the boycott)," he said.

Velasquez said that these companies, not the taxpayers, should be responsible.

Open house shows off new computer center

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
Senior Staff Reporter

Students had the opportunity to see the new Saint Mary's student computer center and to discuss with staff members the best way to utilize these resources at an open house and workshop yesterday.

Complete renovations were needed to build the center, located in the basement east wing of LeMans Hall. "It was basically just a big shell with pillars before the renovation," said Peter Smith, associate professor of mathematics.

The funds for the center's computers, a total of approximately $500,000, were provided by the College, Smith said.

The center, which is comprised of two student labs, currently houses a total of 34 computers. The microcomputer lab, primarily for those students taking the introductory computer course, holds 21 computers. The terminal lab, which is connected to the College's main frame, holds 13 computers and is for those students with a minor in computers.

The computers chosen for the center are the Zenith model 158, which are IBM compatible. "We got a good deal with Zenith," said Smith. The computers were also chosen for their quality. "They are a good computer with sound architecture," he said.

For those students interested in learning how to use the new computers, workshops are available as well as a four-week course. The class entails the basics of word processing along with an introduction to using spread sheets.

A two-hour workshop, taught by Dan Mandell, academic specialist at the center, will be held on Sunday at 2 p.m. The workshop is geared towards those students who need a quick course in the basics of word processing.

The center plans to expand in the future. "We intend to continue increasing the number of microcomputers available to students," said John Cook, director of Computer Services. "Our tentative plans are to add more of the MacIntosh computers," he said.

Genetic engineering debatable, says author

By CHRIS SKORCZ
Senior Staff Reporter

Although economist and author Jeremy Rifkin yesterday called genetic engineering "the most important technological innovation since the harnessing of fire in 4,000 B.C.," he remained wary of it.

Speaking at the Notre Dame Law School student lounge, Rifkin, president of the Foundation on Economic Trends, said, "There has never been a neutral technology in history."

"The bow and arrow, a locomotive, a gun-technology is power. It gives us an advantage we wouldn't normally have," said Rifkin, whose speech was "The Age of Transition: From the Industrial to the Biotechnical Era."

Yet such scientific advances as genetic engineering merit lengthy debate, said Rifkin, who has spoken at more than 250 universities on the subject.

According to Rifkin, ethical considerations of genetic engineering are significant and the efficiency of it "should be the most challenged idea today."

Rifkin warned that excessive genetic manipulation could result in a serious lack of genetic diversity within certain species, rendering those species highly vulnerable to extinction by a single genetic disorder. He stated the need to establish certain criteria by which genetic engineers can decide what genes are functional and what genes are not.

In order to deal with the ecological and moral implications of genetic engineering, universities have adopted a "new formula," he said. These new techniques represent a "revolutionary change" in higher education, said Rifkin, whose lecture was sponsored by the Thomas J. White Center on Law and Government.

"Faculties are teaching a new approach to cognition. They are teaching a new formula - knowledge is sympathy with the environment," he said.

"We must relearn how to participate with the environment. And it behooves us to ask the big questions now. Should we engineer social life by design? This is the most impressive question facing families today except for whether we should drop the atomic bomb," said Rifkin, who has served as a consultant to congressional committees, industry and labor.

ed to a meeting with John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, according to Luther.

When asked if he knew whether the University was conducting an investigation, Luther said, "I know very little about it. There's not much I could tell you."

Asked if the expelled student had left a list of the names of users to whom he had supplied drugs, Luther said, "I cannot verify that."

A student from Lyons Hall was expelled for drug dealing, according to a source that chose to remain anonymous.

Lyons Hall Rectress Sister Jodie Screes said she refused to affirm that the individual was kicked out. She said only Student Affairs could answer the question. "I think you should get that answer from the horse's mouth," Screes said. She also would not say whether she was involved in the matter.

When asked if she felt that a drug problem existed on the campus or in Lyons Hall, Screes said, "I would rather not answer that."

Father Gerald Lardner, rector of Grace Hall, said if a drug problem exists at Notre Dame, it "is analogous to the problem of closet alcoholics." He said that rectors and hall staffs are therefore going to be oblivious to the problem.

Lardner said he issued a resolution prohibiting the burning of incense in the dorm. The ban on incense lasted just one week and was voted down by the residents, according to Lardner. "It is not a current rule in Grace," he said.

"We talked it over, and it was taken out." He said the initial reason for installing the rule was to prevent "the possibility (incense) was being used to cover up smoking pot."

When asked how he has been involved with Security or Student Affairs with drug offense cases, Lardner answered, "I don't deal with Security at all. I have not worked with Student Affairs on drug affairs this year."

Lardner said he believed most drug offenses are handled by the hall staff. "I don't think that comes as much of a surprise," he said.

Board passes representative swap

By ROBERT RAPHAEL
Staff Reporter

Saint Mary's Board of Governance approved a proposal to replace the current Christian Life Commission representative to the board with a Campus Ministry representative Monday night. The proposal came as an effort to strengthen the link between student government and Campus Ministry.

"CLC (Christian Life Commission) does not have the link with Campus Ministry that we want," said Anne Marie Kollman, student body president, who helped to write the current proposal.

The Christian Life Commission is a student community that works to increase awareness of the need for spiritual growth and social action at Saint Mary's. The group sponsors activities such as soup kitchen visits, blood and food drives and the mini-urban plunge.

According to Kollman, the problem is that the CLC does not have a direct link to Campus Ministry, but is rather an extension of Campus Ministry. Because of this, student government is not able to obtain desired information from the CLC representative, she said.

"The current system can be improved. It doesn't do what we want it to do," said Kollman. She added that student government would like information on Campus Ministry programs such as the sexuality education program.

Cath Dahle, current CLC commissioner and representative to the board, expressed strong support for the proposal, citing that the CLC does not have full knowledge of the activities of Campus Ministry.

"All three groups involved, student government, CLC, and Campus Ministry, support the proposal," Dahle said.

Sister Mary Turgi, assistant director of Campus Ministry and advisor to the CLC, also advocates the proposal. "We are unhappy with the way things have worked out and we know that student government is unhappy," Turgi said.

"The goal of the proposal is obvious and good. Exactly how it is accomplished will have to be worked out," Turgi said.

The proposal also provides for a service commissioner on all hall and class boards, just as these boards have social and athletic commissioners. Thus, the CLC will no longer be directly involved in student government.

Physicist says nuclear waste safer than burning of coal

By THERESA WEITHMAN
News Staff

Buried nuclear waste results in fewer deaths per year than the burning of coal in the production of electricity, according to Bernard Cohen, a University of Pittsburgh physicist.

Cohen, winner of the Tom W. Bonner Prize in Nuclear Physics in 1981, spoke last night at Nieuwland Science Hall about the growing concern over the dangers of buried radioactive waste.

Using colorful overheads equipped with many complicated equations, Cohen demonstrated to the audience that more deaths per year result from the burning of coal than from buried nuclear waste.

Author of the book "Before It's Too Late: A Scientist's Case for Nuclear Energy," Cohen said this finding resulted from research into the risk of cancer from contact with buried high level waste, the probability per year of contact, and the number of deaths per year resulting from this contact.

According to Cohen, high-level waste is less stable than average rock because of the increased temperature, the drilled holes needed to bury the waste, and the higher instability of the chemical compound.

These instabilities, however, are mostly compensated for by sealing the holes, encasing the waste, and converting the high level waste to glass or other rock-like material, said Cohen.

"High-level waste is, in some respects, however, more secure than average rock," said Cohen, whose lecture was sponsored by the department of physics.

fairs, said he considers drug sales a much different issue than drug use.

He explained that incidents of drug use in a residence hall is usually dealt with in the same way as alcohol abuse. On a first offense, for example, a person caught smoking marijuana in a dorm would be dealt with by the rector, as is the case with alcohol violations, Tyson said.

"WE have a totally different perspective on those who distribute and . . . on those who make money on the distribution," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, (distribution) is the epitome of being violent to other people and to the community.

"Anyone who knows me knows that I am rabid about anybody who is a pusher," he said.

Goldrick said the student is given a hearing, in which the seriousness of the offense is determined. Then a decision is made to either punish the student, provide counseling or a combination of both.

But in the case of sales and distribution, Tyson said the decision is very clear cut. "I don't know of any case where sales are involved that a student has not been suspended or expelled," he said. He added that in these cases, there is very little chance that the student would be allowed to return to the University.

Tyson said for other cases, suspension is not necessarily permanent. "If a person has gone through a drug rehabilitation program . . . we're wide open to that student returning," he said.

Goldrick said that after the Flanner and Keenan incident, in which several students were suspended, "the decision was made (to suspend them) on everything we discussed in our conversations (with them)."

Goldrick said before the recent investigations he did not consider the presence of drugs a large problem on campus.

"Now that this has happened there must be some problem, but I don't know the extent of it," he said.

Your plasma makes a difference.

How is plasma different from whole blood?

Have no doubts about it—your donation makes a difference. The difference between a boy leading a normal, active life or being an invalid. These boys have a blood disease called hemophilia, which simply means that their blood cannot clot by itself. They previously led a pretty sheltered life because they could bleed to death from a minor injury. Today they can be treated with a clotting factor that their own bodies do not produce.

And that clotting factor is taken from the plasma you donate.

How much plasma is needed?

A lot. For example, one unit of plasma yields less than a teaspoonful of the clotting factor hemophiliacs need, so you can see the need for large volumes of plasma just for hemophiliacs. And thousands of units of plasma are used in hospitals and emergency rooms every day to save many lives.

Plasma is the liquid in which blood cells are transported. Approximately half of blood is plasma. The blood cells are separated from your plasma at the donor center by a process called plasmapheresis and returned to your body. The plasma taken from your blood is about 92% minerals and water. Most of the remainder is proteins. It is these proteins that are used to treat people with various diseases or injuries.

Cash For Your donation

WORLDWIDE DEMAND FOR PLASMA IS NOT BEING MET. That's why your donation is important, so important that we'll pay $7.00 for your first donation and $9.00 if you donate a second time within the same calendar week. In addition, if you meet the physical requirements you'll be given a FREE physical and $60.00 worth of FREE Lab Tests.

Tarheels win over Virginia ending streak

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Jeff Lebo scored 17 points — all in the second half — and Brad Daugherty added 16 to lead third-ranked North Carolina to an 85-79 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Virginia last night.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Tar Heels, 26-3 and 10-3 in the ACC, and exacted some revenge for the loss to the Cavaliers earlier this season when North Carolina was undefeated and top-ranked.

North Carolina, which trailed 37-33 at intermission, came back to take a 51-50 lead with 12:22 left before Daugherty was fouled by Tom Sheehy in the lane.

A TRIP TO PADUCAH
I asked a guy named PETEY, to join me in a trip to my hometown, city. We left at six and got in afix when we discovered my parents weren't in the vicinity. So until Bill and Ede came home all over Paducah we did room, then to Jeremiah's to chow on grilled frog-legs end 20oz. of cow. Back to the house we flew to watch Miami be embarrassed by the gold and blue. We left Paducah in the afternoon but realized this wasn't to soon for midway up the Illinois state we ran into snow coming down at an incredible rate. So we stopped at the Holdome, in Kankakee whirpoiled, swam, but NO violation of section 8. Now we are back in South Bend so my take must end, 'til another weekend we'll try it again.

Grace dominates interhall hockey, undefeated Alumni beats Carroll

By ORLANDO RUBIANO
Sports Writer

The interhall hockey regular season ended Tuesday as Grace remained undefeated through some tough police work on Off-Campus Crime in their 3-0 victory over last year's champions.

In the night's first match, Alumni defeated Carroll by a score of 7-2. Alumni (7-0) was the only other team besides Grace to finish the regular season unbeaten.

In what interhall referee and varsity hockey player Pat Foley said was one of the best played interhall games he had ever seen, both Grace and OC were very aggressive, and both received fine performances from their goalies.

"We stuck to our game plan, and we forced mistakes," said Grace player-coach Jim Rataczak. "It is always an emotional game when we play OC since they have beaten us in the last three championships, and tempers flared but we kept our heads about us."

"We played a good two-way game, and we felt that we had the edge offensively. We forechecked well, keeping the puck in their zone, which is our strong point."

Grace goalie Phil Coghlan's first shutout this season came at an opportune time as he continuously stopped numerous OC scoring plays, many during Grace penalty minutes.

Grace scored their first goal after its relentless offensive pressure finally broke through the sharp goaltending of OC's Glenn Wagner when defense man Tom Elliott fired a shot from the blue line and right wing Mike Prendergast tipped it in.

The second goal for Grace came off of a Tim Kirk slapshot as Rataczak chipped the puck past Wagner. In the second half, center Drew "Tripper" Spesard netted the last goal with a broken stick, as defense man Mike Marino recorded the assist.

"We blew numerous scoring opportunities but still prevailed through our strong goaltending," said Marino. "The freshmen, including Steve Bishop, played well as we outclassed OC," said Spesard, who had two tripping penalties.

Grace will face Pangborn in the first round of the playoffs. "We have to take one game at a time," said Elliott. "We came together on defense, and we backchecked well, as the forwards covered on defense. We have to improve on rebounding around the net for easy goals."

"Pangborn played Alumni tough, and they are capable of the upset because they have explosive players," said Rataczak. "We have to work on bench organization, and we have to cut down on the penalties."

Alumni, the Corrigan League champion, will face Cavanaugh/Howard, the runner-up in the Krause League, at the ACC on March 6 in what promises to be a great playoff battle.

Alumni features a high powered scoring machine to go along while giving up only an average two goals per game. Meanwhile, Cavanaugh/Howard favors a solid defensive style of play to complement a well-balanced scoring attack.

Alumni was never seriously challenged as they constantly hounded Carroll's side of the ice. Carroll (3-4) finished its season on a three-game losing skid.

Alumni was paced by Pat Hogan's five goals, and Bill Harrington scored twice to account for the Dogs' scoring. Despite the easy win, Alumni captain John Kaltenmark said his team will have to play better come playoff time.

"We will have to come up with a complete game against Cavanaugh/Howard in order to win," said Kaltenmark. "Our backchecking especially will need to be better." If Kaltenmark's squad does not heed his advice, look for Alumni to be in the championship game.

Last Thursday night, Cavanaugh/Howard (4-1) secured a playoff berth by skating past Flanner (0-5) by a 7-1 score. Its victory put the final nail in Off-Campus' coffin, as last year's interhall champions were eliminated from post-season play. Jim Mejia led the way with two goals for Cavanaugh/Howard.

Cavanaugh/Howard has one remaining regular season game left to play against Morrissey. Flanner will try to avert a winless season as they take on Holy Cross/St. Ed's in its finale.

Captain John Oteri of Cavanaugh/Howard is viewing the Morrissey game as a chance for his club to fine tune its game. "We want to play Morrissey as if it were a play or game to get the guys in a good frame of mind," said Oteri. "I think we can beat Alumni if we play our game, this means the key for us is to play solid defense. Our most encouraging sign, though, is that we should be our healthiest since the beginning of the season, since we have really missed the services of some of our guys."

In other games, Stanford (0-5-1) managed to tie Fisher (2-3-1) at 2-2. Zahm (4-2), who has played very consistent all season, won easily over Sorin (0-6) by a 7-1 margin. Dillon (3-3) finished its campaign with a 7-2 victory over Morrissey (1-3-1).

NCAA head says recruiting is root

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Recruiting is the only thing wrong with college sports, and alumni and boosters must be disassociated from athletic programs, NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said Tuesday.

"The only weakness we have is in the area of recruiting," Byers told a group of sports writers and coaches who attended the NCAA's annual College Football Preview.

"The contest, as I see it, is essentially whether the presidents and chancellors uphold the stewardship of higher education and set the policy for college athletics or whether a minority of unscrupulous coaches and inflated, immature boosters and alumni are going to set policy."

Byers threw his support behind a Southwest Conference amendment, proposed and then withdrawn at last month's NCAA convention, which would have limited all recruiting contacts to a school's staff members.

Current rules prohibit what the NCAA terms "representatives of an institution's athletic interests" - i.e., alumni, boosters - from any off-campus recruiting.

Byers called the action of the NCAA Presidents Commission at last June's special convention in pushing through tougher penalties for major rules violations "a good first half."

He said it is "time now to move forward," citing the mood of most NCAA members as "a renaissance of a spirit and a willingness to conduct intercollegiate athletics in an honorable fashion."

But he said the NCAA needs help from its members in cleaning up violations, which he said will "never reach 100 percent purity."

"The next step is to embrace at least the concept of the Southwest Conference proposal and remove outsiders, boosters, non-staff members from the recruiting process."

Youth volunteer

Cochiolo leads Irish swimmers

by KATHLEEN McKERNAN
Sports Writer

In the past few years, Venette Cochiolo has done more than break school swim records. She has become involved with programs involving the area's youth such as the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Program, the Early Childhood Development Center, and research projects at the Psychiatric Center.

The senior co-captain, while not working on her breaststroke, is preparing for a future in psychology through her volunteer work.

"I enjoy working with young people," Cochiolo said. "Especially adolescents. I've always enjoyed them a lot."

As a freshman and sophomore, Cochiolo worked with a South Bend teenager in the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Program.

The program is similar to the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program as Cochiolo explained it, with one major exception — the volunteers are supposed to be a friend to the student.

"The kids in the program have a problem," Cochiolo said. "They have problems within their families. They really need a friend."

"I think it really helps them a lot. You go out and play softball with them, show them around campus, just be their friend."

"It was a lot of fun, too. I stopped doing it junior year because the things started going a lot better with the girl, but it was enjoyable for both of us."

In her junior year, Cochiolo helped at the Early Childhood Development Center at Saint Mary's with the three-year-olds. This year, she has been doing a research project with adolescent mothers in the area.

"We've been studying their parenting styles," Cochiolo said. "Right now we're in the process of collecting data and conducting interviews."

Cochiolo hopes to continue similar work after graduation. She is in the Arts & Letters Pre-Professional Program with a major in psychology. While at one time she aimed to go on to medical school and eventually practice pediatric medicine, now she is planning to become a psychologist.

In addition, she has led the swim team to an 8-3 final regular season record. As co-captain, Cochiolo has been a steady influence for the team.

"Venette's a strong team leader," Notre Dame head coach Tim Welsh said. "She has been around big meets, and she has strong individual and relay team performances. She is a good model for the younger swimmers."

Cochiolo has finished second in only one breaststroke race this season. Since Dec. 8, when she lost the 200-yard event by only one-tenth of a second in a meet with Ball State, Cochiolo has gone undefeated in the individual breaststroke competition.

She will put that string on the line starting today as the women's swim team travels to Chicago for the weekend's Midwest Invitational Championship meet. She is confident of the team's chances of performing well and perhaps of breaking some records.

"This will be the big meet to break the records," Cochiolo said. "Most of the records from last year were set at this meet. It's a matter of timing. The whole season we try to work up our season's best times. We feel strong right now."

"We're going to try to re-set as many records as possible and do as well as we possibly can at this meet," said Welsh. "The dozen or so teams at this meet are significantly faster than some of the others we've faced. We do have the luxury this year, though, of being both a dual meet team and a championship team."

Since relay scores will have twice the value of individual events at this meet, the five relays will be especially important for the Irish. With Cochiolo and company at their strongest after a calculated tapering of their training, Notre Dame expects to do make the most of this championship meet.

To The Staff Of University Food Services

Congratulations on the Professionalism and Excellence displayed in your work for the 1986 Junior Parents Weekend.

Friday night's "Broadway Comes to Notre Dame" was an extraordinary display of Food, Service, and Showmanship - 4000 attended.

The Quality of Food and Service provided to the President's Dinner was accomplished with Class - even though attendance was staggering!

College and School Workshops - V.I.P. and Parents Receptions - numerous orders for evening Dorm Parties - were accomplished in the middle of all these programs without a hitch.

The Closing Brunch on Sunday was prepared elegantly, though it was a cruncher with 600 more people than planned for.

And the tremendously long hours put in by all of you, from early morning to the wee hours of the next morning, showed true dedication.

MY HIGHEST ADMIRATION!

Engineering student

Willis is Irish defensive stalwart

By MIKE SZYMANSKI

Sports Writer

Lavetta Willis of the Notre Dame women's basketball team is the type of player who normally eludes the headlines of the sports pages, since she is a combination defensive specialist and student-athlete.

"She is the unsung hero of the team who does a lot of little things," says Irish assistant coach Mary Murphy. "She draws the tough defensive assignments against either the big kid or the smaller, quicker guard. She blocks out very well, while doing the intangible things."

"And in another sense, she is comparable to (Notre Dame football player and stand-out student) Greg Dingens in that she majors in electrical engineering and has a large academic load. She misses some practices because of labs and such."

Willis was academically ineligible for the latter portion of her sophomore season, but since then she has rebounded and made her presence felt for the Irish.

She believes her own personal philosophy matches up pretty well with the team's.

"I like defense and when I came here they pronounced defense as the way to win, and I got into that," says Willis, a 5-11 junior from Wayne, Mich. "On offense, you make all the moves, but on defense, you react to other people, and that is exciting. We are ranked third in the country in defense because every player is thinking the same way."

On such a young team with many freshmen and sophomores, leadership from the upperclassmen can shape the character of the team.

"Willis is a hard worker, positive in a quiet way, who leads by example," says Murphy.

"She is an example in the classroom, showing that you can challenge yourself academically and still compete well. And she really goes after it when she is angry."

"When I saw Trena Keys work hard, I wanted to work hard, so I try to set the same example," says Willis. "Engineering is something I really wanted to do, and the coaches are very understanding. When a round of tests comes up, I may miss practice, and they accommodate."

For Willis, schoolwork always comes before basketball. When she was in high school, she registered and paid to attend the Five Star basketball camp during the summer. But when she was accepted to an engineering camp at Ohio State, she deferred basketball camp and lost her entry fee.

"What motivates me is the desire to do my best," she says. "In high school, I made basketball something I like to do, want to do, and take pride in. But I always knew that I wanted to be an engineer, especially after that camp focused my area of concentration. I know it will be hard, but I am going to do it no matter what."

Willis came from a sports-oriented family. Her father played basketball for Lane College, and was an important influence on her. Her sister Kim ran hurdles at Ohio State, coached at Michigan State, and is now involved in corporate physical therapy.

"I enjoyed all sports and was very versatile," says Willis. "My greatest achievement in high school, outside of getting a scholarship here, was first-team all-state. When you work hard, you want to be rewarded."

The Irish coaches would like to see her improve on the offensive side.

"Willis has to develop more confidence in her offensive shooting and play," says Murphy.

"I'm not confident in my offensive skills, and I cannot expect my teammates to be confident in me under these circumstances," says Willis.

"I'm fine in practice, but I lack it (offense) in the game. I have to practice outside shooting because I'm not big inside. I cannot post up, so I have to play face-to-face. My hand injury earlier this season affected my shooting because I thought about it too much, but I'm over that now."

Donald Royal matured into a steady contributor. This change, however, did not affect Dolan's powerful play underneath or the court savvy that he had built as a trademark over the previous seasons. And this year, the steady play has continued, so much so that Phelps feels that his big inside player may have saved his best season for his last.

"Dolan has been to the front line what David Rivers has been to the back court," notes Phelps. "Where he's improved this year is scoring, as was obvious in the Marquette game here. His screens, his passing, and his defensive rebounds that lead to fast breaks all go unnoticed in the box score. But he's made us that much more effective this year."

The soft-spoken Dolan agrees that his current role has made him a more complete player, and hopes his play can continue to mesh with his teammates as well as it has thus far on the 20-5 Irish season.

"Everyone on the team has a certain role and I enjoy mine," said Dolan. "My scoring has picked up (from 4.3 points per game in 1984-85 to his current 5.5 ppg.), and my rebounding has improved. Once you get a couple of easy shots off rebounds you begin to build confidence and take better shots. That should help the team because I can help pick them up or maybe take some the attention off the other guys."

Drawing attention has been difficult for Jim Dolan ever since he left his native New Jersey. There, he would trade elbows and sharpen his passing skills right on his favorite court along the shore line of the Atlantic.

Now opponents are finding out that being on the same court as Dolan is no day at the beach. And coaches, commentators, and opposing players are all paying attention.

winter, Boggs lost his bid for $1.85 million, settling for the club's offer of $1.35 million.

Joe Marelle of Boston radio station WRUR joked Monday about starting a bottle and can collection to help Boggs after he had to settle for the lower amount, and within five hours the studio was flooded with bottles and cans.

Nevertheless, the decision was an example of the seemingly more conservative attitude of arbiters this year. Other talented players who lost out included Alvin Davis of Seattle, Ron Darling of the N.Y. Mets, Ron Kittle of the Chicago White Sox and Gary Ward of Texas.

For example, Davis, the 1984 American League Rookie of the Year, hit .287 in 1985, with 18 home runs and 78 RBIs. He was asking for $550,000, but had to settle for the Mariners' offer of $400,000.

Some big names won their cases, of course, with Orel Hershiser of Los Angeles winning a $1 million salary, Charlie Leibrandt of Kansas City winning $770,000, and World Series MVP Bret Saberhagen of the Royals receiving $925,000. And if the arbiters were truly bent on keeping salaries, they probably wouldn't have awarded Dave Van Gorder of Cincinnati (who's he?) a $150,000 salary, $80,000 above what the Reds were offering.

However, the events of the off-season seem to signal a brighter future for baseball. The growth of player salaries could not continue at its astronomical rate for long before financial trouble would creep in.

Bunek leads balanced Irish attack as four players record double digits

By TERRY LYNCH
Sports Writer

Heidi Bunek scored 18 points and grabbed eight rebounds as the women's basketball team won its sixth straight game by a score of 77-48. Four Irish players scored in double figures in a genuine team effort last night at the ACC.

Senior All-America Trena Keys sat out the entire game, and did not suit up for the contest. Keys, who leads the Irish averaging 20 points a game and the latest recipient of the North Star Conference player of the week award, sported a blue sling on her right arm and sat next to Coach Mary DiStanislao during the game.

"She hurt (her arm) in the DePaul game," said DiStanislao. "It's the old rotator cuff injury. She's just going to have to learn how to throw a spin ball," joked the Irish coach.

"We didn't think it was as serious as it turned out to be. We're evaluating it on a day-to-day basis." Keys is expected to return to the Irish lineup in her last home game on Friday against Evansville.

In spite of Keys' absence, the Irish had control of the game from the opening tip, and towards the end of the first half, the Irish fast break had the Lay Bulldogs' heads spinning. Sophomore guard Mary Gavin pushed the ball relentlessly up the court, and the quick point guard ended up with eight assists in the game.

The Notre Dame defense stiffened at the end of the first half, as the freshman Bunek blocked three shots and helped keep Butler to only four points in the last 5:41 of the half.

In the second half, the Irish took control of the game on the strength of Bunek, who scored 16 of her 18 points in the second half, while also hitting 6-of-7 from the line.

The Irish stretched the lead to 31 points on three occasions, and DiStanislao freely substituted in the second half.

The Irish bench chipped in 34 points collectively, and for Bunek, last night's performance came at an opportune time in her season.

"I was really confident out there tonight," said the 6-4 freshman center. "I'm coming off of a stress fracture, and I've been trying to regain my confidence." Before she was beset with the injury and hampered by the flu, Bunek had scored a career-high 21 points in the Western Michigan game.

The absence of Keys, who scored 27 points at Butler in the last game, did not seem to particularly bother the Irish, who were able to run both the fast break and the set offense without problems. Still, the Irish would not mind having that right arm healthy on Friday.

"We definitely need Trena," said Bunek. "But by not having Trena, it shows that if she gets into a bad foul situation, we can still play well."

Senior Lynn Ebben was the second leading scorer for the Irish with 11 points, and Lavetta Willis and Sandy Botham each had 10 points apiece. Willis had a particularly strong game, and led the team with nine rebounds and shot 5-of-6 from the field. Botham hauled down eight rebounds.

The Observer/Hannes Hacker

The Observer/Paul Paboresky

Clutch Player

Dolan is physical, defensive leader

By MARTY BURNS
Assistant Sports Editor

The backbone of the Irish defense. A lunchpail player. The smartest player from the free-throw line in to the hoop. A coach on the court. An upcoming bruise in basketball shoes.

Notre Dame forward Jim Dolan has been called a lot of things over his four years of college play. While most of the these raves have come from coaches or commentators, not all of the things the 6-8, 230-pound senior has been called could even be termed raves. Some could not even be termed printable.

Just ask some of the opposing players who have been cajoled out of a key rebound, suffered a bone-crunching pick, or had a ball stripped from their surprised hands over the past four years. Just ask North Carolina's Brad Daugherty, who failed to get off a field goal attempt over Dolan in the entire second half of Notre Dame's NCAA tournament loss last year. Or ask the Marquette basketball team, which was stung by Dolan's 22 points and last-second tip-in Feb. 1.

"I take it all as a compliment," said Dolan. "My role is playing solid defense, fighting for rebounds, passing it inside, and doing whatever it takes to win games. We play the physical game against everybody, and I really enjoy it. It's just that the guys on the other team don't like it. But it's part of the game."

Dolan's persuasive play underneath has been a part of the game for Irish head coach Digger Phelps ever since he first landed the prep phenom from St. Joseph's High School in New Jersey. Since that time Dolan has played more varying roles than a matinee idol, stepping in as a freshman to boost a struggling Irish team, then bringing the ball up court as a small forward for much of his sophomore campaign, and, finally serving as a tri-captain last year.

"Over the last four years, Jim Dolan has been the most consistent, intelligent, and reliable player on the team," said Phelps. "His ability to come in and think on the floor rubs off on the other players. And I think he has played to his roles very well over his years here at Notre Dame."

Many recent observers to the Irish basketball scene would assume that role always has been that of the hustling bench player, similar to the one he has played throughout this season. In reality, however, Dolan's name was once engraved in Phelps' starting lineup.

In fact, Dolan's name now rests atop the Notre Dame record book under minutes played in one season, as he checked in for a total of 1,133 minutes as a sophomore. Along with obtaining that record in 1983-84, Dolan tied a mark for most minutes played in one game (50 vs. Washington), and led the team in assists and rebounding.

Last year saw a move to the bench for Dolan when forward

Spiraling baseball salaries are coming to an end

"It now takes a 36-month payment booklet to get a hot dog and beer at Fenway Park."

— Boston radio announcer Andy Moes on how baseball's rising salaries have trickled down to the average fan.

The time of year has come to turn one's attention to the baseball diamonds of America — spring training is here. But considering the complaints of many people, including Moes, that major league baseball salaries never seem to stop their upward spiral, it is interesting to take a look back at this past winter's contract disputes and settlements.

It was, all in all, a year in which the owners were declared "winners" in the annual salary sweepstakes. "Winner" does not seem like the right term to use, since most owners had to increase player salaries yet again, some by quite a substantial margin. But there were a few developments that seem to signal that the days of the runaway baseball salary may be behind us.

One could sense a change beginning last December, when Detroit Tiger outfielder Kirk Gibson charged publicly that he felt baseball club owners were conspiring against him in his free agency bid for a new contract. Gibson, considered a top talent in the baseball world, seemingly had no offers for his services coming in from other teams.

Eric Scheuermann

This was certainly surprising, considering that in past years baseball owners had spent ludicrous sums of money on such talent as Darrel Evans (Tigers), Goose Gosage (San Diego Padres) and Bruce Sutter (Atlanta Braves). Admittedly, these players had proven their worth in the baseball world, but for some reason the money was not thrown at Gibson after a few outstanding years of his own.

No strong evidence has come out showing that the owners collectively decided to keep their hands off Gibson. Whether it was an intentional tactic or not, it worked. Gibson was forced to resign with the Tigers on the deadline day, still claiming that he had been unable to test his worth in an unencumbered free agency market.

Despite an overall free agency market which the players claimed was not as satisfactory as in previous years, there was still the arbitration period to look forward. But this year's recently concluded arbitration period brought results that further disappointed the players.

Before the deadline on Jan. 15, 159 players filed for arbitration, a process where an impartial third party decides after a hearing what a player should be paid. 124 players reached agreement with their teams without going through with the arbitration. Of the remaining 35, only 15 won their cases and received the salaries they were asking. Twenty players lost their cases to their teams, and were forced to take the salary the team offered.

In past years, the arbitration process has seemed like a gift to the players, with most taking home huge pay increases. For instance, Boston Red Sox third baseman Wade Boggs won his case last year, and received $1 million to play in 1985. And he played very well, hitting .368 on the year. But when it came time for arbitration this year, the tables were turned on him. In one of the most publicized cases of this
