Honor code courses to be tried in early '88

By KENDRA MORRILL
Senior Staff Reporter

On April 28, the Academic Council of the University unanimously passed a resolution implementing a four-year experimental program designed to accustom students to a full honor code. The new honor system will go into effect in January of 1988.

Beginning in the spring semester, certain freshman and upperclass courses will be conducted under a full honor code.

The proposed honor code contains:

- unproctored examinations
- a pledge signed by each student indicating willingness to abide by the code and a pledge signed by each student when submitting work indicating that the student has neither given nor received unauthorized aid
- a requirement that any student aware of an honor code violation report the violation (a student not acting on a known violation will be considered to be violating the code)
- student participation in the investigation and determination of guilt or innocence of alleged offenders
- a system of sanctions.

Jesse Jackson '88 frontrunner

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH- Jesse Jackson, declaring he has a good chance of becoming America's first black president, said Monday he will announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination on Oct. 10 and pledged to campaign for "jobs, jobs, jobs, peace and justice."

A Time magazine poll published Sunday said Jackson remained the leading choice for president among likely Democratic voters, with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis a distant second.

"In a real sense, I'm trying to fulfill the best dimension of the Constitution," Jackson said. "If I can in fact become president, indeed as (John) Kennedy became as a Catholic, indeed as (Franklin D.) Roosevelt came riding in a wheelchair... every woman can, every man, boy and woman and girl can," he said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

"So in a real sense, I'm giving America a chance to make a choice to fulfill the highest and best of an authentic and honest democracy," he said.

SMC Board raises club allowances

By MIMI TUOHY

An increased budget, a self-defense program, and a committee comprised of off-campus students were the main topics discussed at the Saint Mary's Programming Board meeting Monday night in Haggar College Center.

Smith Hashagen, vice president of Student Affairs, explained that the allowances for various clubs, classes and halls are being increased due to a higher student activity fee this year.

"We are trying to even out the allotments given to classes and halls. Also, clubs will be included and an off-campus account will be formed, due to the severe increase in off-campus students this year," Hashagen said.

The student government is considering instituting a safety awareness program, Hashagen said. The plan would include signs warning students of the dangers of walking alone and a self-defense demonstration in each dormitory.

Leprechaun looking for new pep rally site

By PATRICK O'CONNOR

This year's first pep rally will be held at the traditional Stepan Center location, but future rallies may take place at a new site.

The Office of Student Activities Monday confirmed that Stepan Center has been reserved for Sept. 18, the night before Notre Dame opens its home football season against the Michigan State Spartans.

The location of the remaining pep rallies, however, has not been set, said Grant Weidner, co-chairman of the Pep Rally Committee.

Weidner said the rallies may be moved from Stepan Center in the near future.

Some students, however, are adamant about finding a new pep rally site.

Brian Stark, the Fighting Irish leprechaun, said the problems and detractions involved with holding the rallies at Stepan Center have led Stark and other concerned and spirited students to actively seek a new venue.

The major drawbacks of holding pep rallies in Stepan Center include poor acoustics, stifling heat during crowded events, and a reputation for being associated with a number of recent disappointing football seasons at Notre Dame, Stark said.

Originally, Stark and others hoped to find a new place in time for this year's home opener but time and the administration among other things have proven to be formidable obstacles.

Senate sets inauguration

By GREG LUCAS
Senior Staff Reporter

Last night, the Student Senate announced the agenda for Father Edward Malloy's Presidential Inauguration on Wednesday, Sept. 23.

Laurie Bink, student body vice president, encouraged students to attend the inaugural mass at 10 a.m., the ceremony at 3 p.m. and the reception at 4:30 p.m.

There were several other announcements made at the meeting.

Brian Holst, student senator, gave details on the finalization of a student survey conducted by the Student Senate.

"The survey will consist of a two part comprehensive questionnaire that will be distributed to the student body," Holst said.

According to Holst, the first part is composed of standard questions that are designed to indicate the evolution of the student body and changes that students' opinions undergo as they move through their four years at Notre Dame.

"The second portion deals with issues of the day," said Holst.

In other news, Pat Cooke, student body president, asked senate members to suggest ideas for senate priorities. The goal of these priorities is to develop senate subcommittees to examine and present solutions to existing problems, said Cooke.

Ideas presented by members of the Senate included improving student athletic facilities, revision and clarification of du Lac's vague description of student government, greater opportunity for student input into administrative decisions, the creation of co-ed dorms and improved academic counseling for upperclassmen.

In other business, Jennifer Gilhool, executive coordinator of student government relations, discussed attempts being made to reinforce communications between off-campus students and the South Bend City Council.

According to Gilhool, Mike Murphy, off-campus liaison to South Bend government, is going to meet with Roger Parent, mayor of South Bend, with hopes of obtaining a monthly or bimonthly appearance before the city council to voice the concerns of off-campus students.

"The goal of this plan is to improve Notre Dame's reputation in South Bend" said Gilhool, adding that recent problems with crime have sparked this move for better communication.

Chris Grahdpre, student body treasurer, announced that the budget subcommittee will consider appeals and original applications for additional funds from the student affairs fee budget on the first Monday of each month.

Commitment to service is rare attribute today

"Today, colleges may be producing well-trained, but only half-educated graduates," said a recent article concerning college campuses of the 1980's.

Specialization and a narrow academic focus may prepare an individual for his eventual career, the article said, but it is questionable as to whether the student prepares himself for real life experiences and, indeed, if specialization does promote "good" education.

Seventy-four percent of almost 300,000 college students recently surveyed marked "affluence" as a life goal they considered essential or very important.

Only 57 percent of the class of 1991 classified "helping others in difficulty" as being an important trait to hold.

Another independent survey showed only one-quarter of the students surveyed had a feeling of involvement in the government (this included voting).

"The idea of service and citizenship is a relatively low priority on campuses," the article continued.

"Today's undergraduates are products of a society in which the call for individual gratification booms forth on every side," wrote an educator, "while the claims of community are weak."

One set of figures and a doomsday comment by an educator can be dismissed easily.

Additional comments and polls can make one suspicious.

All of these mentioned above have me concerned, as a college student and the leader of a leadership, service and social organization which has been losing members nationwide for the past six years.

This is not a lecture.

And, I refuse to accept the claim by many that today's campuses are morally bankrupt. The column is designed to lay out these statistics for you to decide whether there is a problem, and, if there is, how serious it is. Are you one of those who wish to be affluent?

If you are, good. I, too, hope to be well-off. There is no harm in this.

My concern is not that people want to have financial success but rather about the lack of involvement in issues, leadership development, and the obligation to contribute back positively in some way to yourself and others around you.

There is a compromise between a desire to do well and "service."

One does not have to sacrifice all for the sake of helping others. Service can be working with the Little Brother you adopted or helping to organize the senior trip to Chi-Chi's.

It simply means taking a little time to get involved in something outside the narrow personal focus we all can have sometimes.

"Service can and should be a part of undergraduate education, offering opportunities not found elsewhere," one college student said. "When you're worried about whether you are going to get an 'A' or a 'B' on an exam, it does something to you to be working with a disabled child who's struggling just to learn to eat," the article quoted another college official.

Scott Bearby

Assistant News Editor

Even organizing the trip to Chi-Chi's, giving college students the chance to get together for an activity, is its own kind of service.

Not only does it improve campus social life, but also it gives the individual organizing the event a small taste of what it takes to organize, something invaluable for the real world after college.

The narrow academic focus, looking solely at career training, is being re-evaluated by corporate recruiters. More and more liberal arts majors are being hired, for their general education and reasoning skills.

In more technical fields, those individuals who show additional leadership skills and an interest in something outside their chosen career field are being given the edge over those who do not.

There may be a problem on today's campuses, concerning individual involvement, but I do not really care to get involved in a philosophical debate.

If there is a problem, we need to do something about it and get active. If there isn't a problem, then we can continue as we always have been.

In either case, we both should have better things to do than argue, taking a little time to help ourselves and make a positive impact on something for which we believe.

Wish your friends a Happy Birthday through Observer advertising.

Funeral remembers slain heir

Associated Press

KANKAKEE, Ill.- A private funeral was held for kidnap victim Stephen Small on Monday, while police investigated whether his abductors modeled their crime after a 1968 case in which a Florida woman was buried alive for more than 80 hours.

Small, a businessman and member of a prominent media family, was buried alive last week in a plywood box by his abductors, who fashioned a ventilation system that apparently failed to provide sufficient air for the 40-year-old man.

His body was discovered under several feet of sand Friday in a remote wooded area about 13 miles south of Kankakee.

Two men and a woman were in custody, and police said each would be charged with kidnapping and murder Tuesday when courts reopened after the Labor Day weekend.

Several dozen people attended a private ceremony for Small, great-grandson of former Illinois governor Len Small, at a chapel at Mound Groves Gardens of Memory.

Except for Small's death, his abduction bore striking resemblances to the kidnapping of Barbara Jane Mackle, who survived after being buried for more than 80 hours in 1968.

Like Small, the 20-year-old debutante was buried in a coffin-like box and provided with water, battery-powered lamps and a ventilation system.

In Small's case, a length of narrow-diameter plastic tubing ran from the box to the surface. Kankakee County Coroner James Orrison said after a preliminary autopsy that he believes Small may have suffocated because the tube delivered insufficient air and may have been blocked by sand.

In the Florida case, the ventilation system of two large-diameter pipes proved adequate, and FBI agents dug Mackle out alive from under 18 inches of earth after her family paid a $500,000 ransom.

"I just wonder if these idiots got a lot of ideas there," said Deputy Police Chief Robert Pepin, who acknowledged there were "a lot of parallels" between the two cases.

Police Chief Timothy O. Nugent said the possibility of such a connection was "being looked into."

In Mackle's case, all but $20,000 of the ransom was recovered and a man and woman pleaded guilty and are serving life terms.

Small's kidnappers made a futile $1 million ransom demand, recording their instructions for its delivery on tape and then holding the recorder up to a telephone after they called Small's wife, Pepin said.

'Ferris Bueller' star charged in Ireland auto death

Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland -Actor Matthew Broderick was charged last night with causing death by reckless driving stemming from an automobile accident that killed two people. Broderick, 25, was traveling in Ireland on Aug. 5 with his girlfriend, Jennifer Grey, when his car collided with a vehicle carrying two women about 80 miles southwest of Belfast near Enniskillen in County Fermanagh.

Walking on crutches, the actor appeared in a temporary court set up in a small, private room in the Royal Victoria Hospital and was charged with causing the death of Anne Gallagher, 28.

Broderick has been in the hospital recovering from a broken leg and minor injuries suffered in the crash, which also killed Mrs. Gallagher's mother, Margaret Doherty, 63.

Police could not immediately say why the charge concerned only the death of Mrs. Gallagher.

Ms. Grey, 23, was treated at a hospital for shock and released.

The actor was remanded on bail of $4,150 and ordered to appear in Enniskillen

Magistrates' Court in February.

The actor, from New York, has starred in such hit films as "WarGames" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." He won a Tony award for his role in Neil Simon's stage play "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

Weather gets better, but forest fires still burning

Associated Press

Firefighters concentrated on 200 major forest fires still burning in the West and allowed more evacuees to return home Monday after containing hundreds of the blazes that had charred 1,000 square miles.

At least 3,000 people in California were still being kept from their homes because of fire danger.

In California, the damage estimate from just one fire, the 120,000-acre Paper Complex blaze in the Stanislaus National Forest, was $119 million.

"We had enough of a break in the weather that we were able to contain some of the smaller fires and medium size fires. That enables us to shift some resources to those that are still uncontrolled," assistant regional forester Ken Clark from Sacramento, Calif., said Monday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"It's still hot, dusty and dirty out there, but the winds aren't as erratic," Clark said.

Crews in Idaho brought a 10,500-acre blaze in the Sawtooth National Forest under control Monday, allowing most of a 600-man force to be reassigned to the huge fires still out of control in California and Oregon. One Idaho fire was allowed to continue burning in extremely rough terrain, and a small fire was burning in Washington.

About 22,000 firefighters have battled the blazes and 600 Army soldiers were added to fire crews in Oregon on Monday to take over some mop-up chores.

Three firefighters had been killed in vehicle accidents in California since lightning began setting the woods on fire on Aug. 28, and the Forest Service said 34 had been injured.

An estimated 496,800 acres had been charred by more than 1,000 fires in California as of Monday, and nearly 105,000 acres had gone up in smoke in Oregon.

Including about 30,000 acres that burned in Idaho, plus smaller fires in Washington, Arizona, Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming, the total estimated burned area was about 636,000 acres.

didate, said he will make his candidacy official in Raleigh, N.C., at the national convention of his Rainbow Coalition.

Relying heavily on his support from organized labor, Jackson formally disclosed his plans during a Labor Day swing through Pittsburgh, Cleveland and New York City.

He made his first announcement on ABC-TV from Pittsburgh, attended a Roman Catholic mass at a racially mixed inner city church, and marched through a supportive crowd of more than 5,000 people watching the city's 100th Labor Day parade.

From the pulpit at the Roman Catholic Church, the Baptist minister led pre-parade worshippers, including many laid-off steel workers, through a 10-point "Workers' Bill of Rights."

Jackson said workers have rights to a job, to union representation, a living wage, safe work place and pension security. He played to the local audience, saying American steel workers should not lose their jobs to foreign "slave labor."

"Let us fight together and not one another," he said.

"We agree that what we need is not just a new occupant for the White House. We need a new direction for our nation," said Jackson. "We need a government that cares, a president committed to the well-being of the American family who will protect them from the exportation of jobs and the importation of drugs."

Jackson, who in 1984 won primaries in Louisiana and the District of Columbia, becomes the most liberal in the Democrats' sizable field of presidential contenders for 1988.

He said his new campaign will work on broadening the party's base of support, widening its "mainstream into a river," in part by continuing his old theme of registering new voters.

"The leadership of the Democratic party is going to be much fairer to me in part because I'm part of the leadership of the Democratic party," Jackson said.

has refused to permit rallies to use either the Loftus Football Arena or the Eck Tennis Pavilion because of possible damage to the artificial turf and tennis courts.

Other possible locations soon to be investigated include the Krause Stadium and the south quad in front of the Rockne Memorial.

The Joyce ACC has already proven itself impractical because of its "unacceptable acoustics" evidenced last year, Stark said.

Despite the uncertainty of the location of future rallies, this year's opener promises to be among the most memorable in recent years according to Stark.

One in a series of events for the weekend, centered around rallying and uniting the student body for Notre Dame's 100th football season, the first pep rally will include: a well organized program, a number of enthusiastic speeches, band performances, a surprise emcee, and at least one special guest.

"This will be one of the best pep rallies in history," the Leprechaun Stark said.

ND Law School prof helps in mob busting

By KRISTIN SWENERTON
News Staff

In an attempt to combat organized crime, the federal government has initiated a new attack using a 1970 statute written in part by a Notre Dame Law School professor.

The RICO, or Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, was written and researched by a Senate subcommittee of which Professor G. Robert Blakey was a member.

The law has just been "discovered" as a possible method of crippling the powers of crime families. Civil lawsuits using the RICO act, like the one filed last month against New York's Bonanno family, seek to prevent future crimes.

If successful, these civil suits could do more damage to the Mafia than any previous legislation. A courtroom victory for the Government in this case would lead to others, and as

Blakey stated, "Society can only benefit."

Last week Blakey wrote an article in the New York Times in which he praised the government's "imaginative step, which marks a historic departure in law enforcement."

Professor Blakey has been involved in researching organized crime since 1960, when he served under then-Attorney General Robert Kennedy in the Justice Department.

Blakey began teaching at Notre Dame in the mid-1960's and then returned to Washington to help research and draft crime legislation. He served as chief counselor for the Senate subcommittee on criminal laws and procedures, which produced the RICO act after a year of work.

Blakey received his degree from Notre Dame, and has taught at the Law School since 1980. He also works with federal law enforcement agencies in teaching specifics of the RICO act.

Violations of the honor code will be reported to the dean of the college in which the violation has occurred. The dean will then refer the reports to Honesty Committees which will exist to determine whether the alleged violations have occurred. Both students and faculty will be on these committees.

For a first infraction, the penalty will be an "F" in the course under which the code was violated. For a second infraction, the penalty will be dismissal from the University.

Faculty members teaching upperclass courses may volunteer to use the honor code, with approval of the dean of the college in which the class is taught.

In addition, on the first day of class a professor of such a course may indicate that he is thinking about teaching the class as an honor code course.

If one person objects to this proposal, the honor code cannot be used in the class. Everyone in the class must agree to be governed by the code.

Any classes regulated by the honor code will be indicated in the pre-registration course bulletin.

Dr. Emil Hofman, dean of the Freshman Year of Studies, said he is now in the process of deciding which freshman courses will be designated as honor code courses. He said he is "seeking agreement with professors" as to which classes will be taught under the new honor system.

Hofman said he is choosing the classes so that all freshman will experience the honor code in different types of courses, such as writing courses, courses that test using essay questions, and courses that involve calculation tests.

All freshmen came to the University this year with the knowledge that they would be required to take some courses under the honor system, said Hofman.

They were informed of this policy in the Academic Guide and in a newsletter that was sent out this summer, and through an announcement that was made during orientation, Hofman said.

Hofman said he hopes to have two types of orientation programs for freshman and faculty on the honor code before the end of the semester.

One program will focus on "the concept of honor as the fundamental principle underlying the honor code," said Hofman.

The second program will concentrate on the policies and procedures within the honor code.

"These programs will be done in such a way that faculty and freshman will have an opportunity for a clearer understanding of the honor code," Hofman said.

Father Oliver Williams, C.S.C., associate provost, will oversee the honor code program as chairman of the University Academic Honor Code Committee.

Other members of the committee are Stephan Batill, College of Engineering; Gerald Jones, College of Science; Kevin Misiewicz, College of Business; Ronald Weber, College of Arts and Letters; Emil Hofman, dean of Freshman Year of Studies; Daniel Gerlach, student member.

The committee met for the first time on August 25, said Williams, and will continue to meet every two to three weeks.

Random ideas give much to consider

After a long hiatus (which was sort of beyond my control) I have returned to the Viewpoint page to express whatever opinion comes across my mind.

Eric Bergamo

20 seconds into the future

Unfortunately, I don't have a specific opinion that I could write a substantial column about. I have much to write about, maybe too much.

So bear with what may be an enjoyable, though muddled, column.

Our good friend G.I. Ollie North spilled his guts about the whole Contra-gate mess and his circumventing of the Constitution and became a national hero in the process. I guess if Ghengis Khan had testified in front of a Congressional committee the reasons for his rampaging across Europe ("We live in a dangerous continent and we need dangerous barbarians to take risks," he would have said), he would have been a hero.

I also have this image of the founding fathers at the Constitutional convention back in 1787 and Thomas Jefferson saying, "We'd better put in something about separation of powers because I have this feeling some looney Marine lieutenant colonel is going to do something stupid in the future."

I just can't see anyone hero-worshipping Mr. Step-on-the-Constitution. Ollie North posters, videos, action figures and other memorabilia are just fine for the ultra-conservative. I'll pass and go to Australia.

Speaking of Australia, Senior Bar has made a boffo move and is now serving Foster's Lager (good day, mate!). Senior Bar can make me happier by serving Coors, so get to work on it.

My next comment is directed at the Office of Student Activities. If you don't realize it, the number of working washers and dryers in the laundry room of LaFortune is dangerously low. I've heard of waiting in line for tickets and meals, but for doing my laundry is where I draw the line. Take care of this problem, Mr. Cassidy.

The dining halls are now giving us new plates whenever we go for seconds. Now if you ask me, I really don't care if I get a new plate every time I get more Hungarian Noodle Bake. It just doesn't matter to me. And anyway, doesn't that just make more dishes to wash? I don't think any of the dining hall workers want that.

I think the title of Michael Jackson's newest album describes it perfectly. And of course the local radio stations have already played it over and over and over...

Can you believe Dallas Green didn't want to pay Andre Dawson $500,000 to play for the Cubs this season? Gee Dallas, you got a bargain. Let's see; 43 home runs at $500,000 for the season equals (so far) $11,627.90 per home run. Dallas, just give him the moon when he asks for a new contract.

I hope, I pray that the Cardinals do not win the Eastern division. I can't believe that I, a die-hard Cubs fan, would actually root for the Mets.

Will somebody, anybody, spend massive amounts of quarters and get to the end of the "Rolling Thunder" video game in LaFortune and rescue the girl that's held prisoner by the ultra-nasty and evil organization?

I think my mom is selling my childhood exploits to the guy who writes "Calvin and Hobbes." It just seems too familiar for my liking. If Mom is doing this, I'm going to ask for a chunk of the royalties.

Dolly Parton is going to have a one-hour variety show on ABC this fall? And this from the network that brought us "Max Headroom" (one of my favorite shows)? Just when you think ABC is showing some intelligence, they go ahead and do something like this.

I, for one, will be watching "Star Trek: The Next Generation" when it premieres in October. So what if Kirk and Spock and the rest of the old crew won't be on. What do those "Trekkies" think, that the old cast is going to live forever? Come on, be real.

I wonder if Sports Illustrated will pick the Cleveland Indians to win it all next year? They'll probably do it one better and pick the Seattle Mariners.

The people in Arcadia, Florida, who in ignorant fashion ran a family who had three young boys with AIDS out of their town, should get what's coming to them. I'd have them spend one-hour as talking dummies for the football team.

Refuting an earlier prediction on this page, Tim Brown will win the Heisman Trophy convincingly, and Notre Dame will be playing in a major bowl game.

Eating at the North Dining Hall is no longer a job, it's an adventure.

If you open a can of 7-Up inside a building, will it set off the sprinkler system?

The New York Giants will repeat as Super Bowl champions. I'm not going to guess who they're going to beat.

It's neat that we're going to have a day off for Monk's inauguration. Maybe the University will declare some snow days later on if we're lucky.

Well, you were warned that this column would be a muddled ramble.

Concerned service marks our students

Dear Editor:

Paul Newett's September 3 Viewpoint column certainly comes as a relief. Why I had been so foolish to believe that some students actually came here for something called an education, rather than a four-year reprieve before the inevitable pursuit of wealth and power that he describes.

I would like to thank Mr. Newett for informing naive people such as myself that we attend "a finishing school for automatons," rather than a place where one can actually grow as a student and human being.

And, if any reader still resists the idea that "individual identity (is) absent from (our) campus" - the title of Newett's masterpiece - then let him forget the fact that hundreds of Notre Dame students are involved in community service activities, that our alumni include priests, nuns, teachers, public servants, Peace Corps volunteers, as well as businessmen, and remember that heterogeneity at the University of Our Lady is a farce. Others who say different are simply hypocrites, fools like Dr. Thomas Dooley, a Notre Dame graduate who lived for others, and not Newett's pursuit of wealth.

Women of Howard continue traditions

accent writer

Despite the message frequently seen on sweatshirts around campus, the Howard Hall tradition established in 1924 did not end in the spring of 1987. Howard Hall continues to make its mark on the University of Notre Dame, but in a slightly different way than in the past.

When Howard was converted into a womens' dorm this year there were complaints from the former residents. Yet, in spite of the controversy, residents are working toward continuing proud traditions and beginning new ones.

Sister M. J. Griffin left her position as rector of Farley Hall to come to Howard to help begin the new womens' residence. She decided to leave Farley because she said she was completely committed to residential life at Notre Dame. She said, "It is part of my vocation as a Franciscan to be flexible and respond to needs. I enjoy the challenge of beginning a new endeavor."

Howard Hall differs from all the other residence halls on campus in the fact that every upperclassman wants to live there. Unlike other dorms, the women were not processed into the dorm as freshmen who had little idea of campus traditions. The upperclassmen decided to come to Howard to help begin its new life as a womens' dorm.

Senior Gail Page said, "I think Howard is going to be one of the best dorms on campus because it's small, it's in a great location and everyone who's here wants to be here."

Unlike some other womens residences, Howard already had a tradition behind it before the women arrived. A senior R.A. said, "The building itself has a lot of tradition, but yet it is a new tradition being a womens dorm."

Freshman Kathy Mudra said, "Living in Howard gives us a chance to make new impressions on campus, and not have to live with any of the bad images that other dorms have."

Most people on campus are willing to accept the change at

Howard. Page said, "I am impressed with how positive people have been, considering the controversy."

Former Howard residents are interested in the changes that took place to convert the hall. The bathrooms, lounges and study areas were all remodeled before the new residents moved in.

Mary Dandurand, a freshman at Howard, was surprised how friendly the ex-Howard residents were when they came to look at their old room which they claimed she was now living in. Yet, she was a little dismayed that at least five gentlemen claimed her double room as their old home.

Howard residents will prove to be a close group. Freshman Laura Rossi said, "It's good being in Howard as a freshman because everyone is new to each other."

Griffin said, "I would like to see Howard become a strong womens' hall which makes a positive impact on the whole university community."

Howard Hall 1987-?, the new tradition begins.

Back in the High Life

Summing up in one or two phrases nine months of traveling, meeting people from all over the world, living in a different culture with a host family and missing Notre Dame is no easy feat. This summer someone asked me to find one word to describe my year in France. Needless to say, I was unable to find just one word that could tackle the total description, but there are a few key words which can capture most of my experience.

"Great!" is usually the first word past my huge smile when someone asks me myself; I just did not want to be forgotten and could not help but be curious about what was happening back here in good old South Bend.

So what was so GREAT about my year? Quite frankly, the fun I had and the growth I experienced. Not only did I have the independence to do whatever I wanted but I had the opportunities to do what I wanted.

Traveling was the realm in which I enjoyed myself and learned the most. It was educational to visit places, to learn foreign customs and traditions firsthand, to at-

Although summer is winding down in South Bend, Wednesday evening will be hot as the Jamaican-born reggae band S.W.A.M.M.P. kicks off their 1987 Midwest tour at Mitchell's Indiana Club. S.W.A.M.M.P. is an acronym that stands for sound, wisdom and many musical powers.

The S.W.A.M.M.P. sound is a combination of African and Jamaican rhythms. David Alert, WSND host of "88 Reggae Street", describes them as a "hard working, diverse band." He says their style incorporates "funk and jazz as well as the Jamaican blend of rhythm and blues, rock and gospel that makes up reggae music."

S.W.A.M.M.P. was one of the most followed and respected bands in Jamaica. They played the Caribbean circuit for many years, performing with such well-known reggae artists as Third World and Bob Marley and The Wailers. The band was discovered in 1982 and moved to Pittsburgh.

S.W.A.M.M.P. began attracting a large college following. They wrote "College Town, U.S.A." for Athens, home to Ohio University. Last year the band played at Indiana University in Bloomington. Says Alert,

"The band has been successfully crossing-over for years." "Crossing-over" refers to a recognizable commercial sound that has helped the band gain popularity.

The band members are Rastafarians, but not wishing to cause any religious misunderstanding, their music is straight-forward, traditional reggae. Reggae music delivers a spiritual message originating from the African tradition of oral poetry.

Catch the tropical sound of Zap Clarke on vocals and keyboards, Froggie Francis on percussions, Cookie Willacy playing lead rhythm guitars and doing background vocals, Devon Green on bass and J.J. I MUST SAY, THE FUTURE IS QUITE A BIT DIFFERENT THAN I EXPECTED.

about my time in Europe. I am quick to add, however, that the experience was not all "wine and roses." In fact, it was tougher than I ever imagined it would be.

First I had to deal with my frustration at not being able to knock down the language barrier like I had planned. Simple questions and tasks like "Please pass the salt" and "I need ten aerograms" became situations I had to plan and consciously complete word by word. In the beginning I had to rely a lot upon my friends' translations, and I just plain felt ignorant at times.

The most difficult aspect of studying abroad for me was being away from Notre Dame and all of the people who are special in my life. Now that I was off in the land of wine, cheese and supposed romance, all of the things which had become such a huge part of my life were no longer within my grasp.

I missed campus life and the spirit which abounds at Notre Dame. Always in the back of my mind were tempt getting along in a different language and to really see all those other people who make up this world around us. It was fun to walk the ramparts Lady Jane once did. I felt lightheaded at the thought of riding a carousel at the foot of the Eiffel Tower. And spending a weekend on the beaches of Spain was definitely hot.

Back on campus flipping through photos and telling tales, I realize how fantastic my year abroad was. Sure it was tough at times, but I am a firm believer in learning something from every situation, good and bad. What I learned this past year was how to spend a lot of time alone, how to handle myself in almost any situation, how to cross culture barriers and how to better deal with and overcome frustration, loneliness and fear.

Spending an extended period of time in another country was one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. I had a lot of fun, I saw a lot of the world, I made a lot of friends and I learned a lot about myself. It was an education all its own.

Nathan, Moore, Hartenstine among NFL final releases

Associated Press

Nat Moore and Tony Nathan, two of the mainstays of the Miami offense for the past decade, and Tony Hill, a one-time star with Dallas, were cut Monday, while the Chicago Bears put Jim McMahon on injured reserve with the expectation that he can help their young quarterbacks develop.

Hill, released by Dallas earlier this year and picked up by San Francisco, was among a group of veterans released by the 49ers. They also included linebackers Tom Cousineau and Jim Fahnhorst and running back Carl Monroe, who scored the first touchdown in the 1985 Super Bowl.

McMahon, who missed the second half of last season with a shoulder injury and underwent surgery late last year, will have to miss at least six weeks.

That move at least temporarily kept a spot on the Bears' roster for Doug Flutie, the 5-foot-9 Heisman Trophy winner. Mike Tomczak has been starting in McMahon's place and Jim Harbaugh, the team's top draft pick this year, had been virtually guaranteed a spot.

Coach Mike Ditka said McMahon will spend his time on the sidelines helping him and coaching the younger players.

"Even if I have to make McMahon an assistant coach, I want him to be out there because the Bears will need all the help they can get," Ditka said.

Moore and Nathan were cut as Miami made the unusual move of keeping four quarterbacks- Dan Marino, Don Strock, Ron Jaworski and Jim Jensen, who also doubles as special teams captain and backup wide receiver. The Dolphins also placed linebacker Hugh Green back on injured reserve, where he spent most of last season with a knee injury.

Nat Moore

The Bears released veteran defensive linemen Mike Hartenstine and Henry Waechter along with punter Maury Buford.

Among the other players cut was defensive end Daryl Sims, Pittsburgh's first-round draft pick two years ago.

McEnroe

when he took a break to marry actress Tatum O'Neil. No luck. Same old Mac.

Perhaps he will mellow when he hits his mid-30s. But until then, he will always draw the ire of tennis' hierarchy.

As long as he continues to infuriate umpires, though, he will have a certain following. This may be, in part, because he is part of a vanishing breed - an American who can compete among the game's best. In addition to that, he makes the game more akin to more familiar sports - football, basketball and baseball - where players are allowed to argue their case.

Players in these sports have to touch an official, kick dirt on him or use words that would even make McEnroe blush to get fines. Fans of these sports aren't used to players being on their best behavior when the outcome of the contest is in doubt.

These fans like to see some-one scratch and claw when they feel they are wronged.

Managers get loud support when they stalk out to the mound to lay into an umpire. A confrontation between a player and umpire is always interesting and often something to look forward to. And who says the player is always the one out of line?

Tennis, however, has a certain degree of etiquette. John McEnroe's behavior does not conform to the laws laid out. Hence, he is always considered to be out of line when these outbursts occur.

Maybe McEnroe is not an uncontrollable evil. He may just be misplaced. If he were a baseball star, his tantrums wouldn't be abnormal, they would make Billy Martin green with envy.

One Irish team placed third, behind only Purdue and Michigan, and the other group finished eighth.

Freshman Roberta Bryer was the low Irish scorer and placed third overall in the tournament with two rounds of 79. Junior Carolyn Burke finished eighth in the individual competition.

Other freshmen leading Notre Dame included Heidi Hansen and Kristin Kolesar.

The Irish continue their season this weekend with a tournament at Purdue.

Having been dealt a convincing season-opening loss by the University of Michigan last year, the Rugby Club will try to get its revenge on the Wolverines this Saturday.

Notre Dame will meet Michigan at Ann Arbor on Saturday morning before the football game between the same two schools.

"Michigan will be really tough," said Sean Evers. "They beat us last year by about 15 points, so it will be interesting to see how we hold up against them."

The Sailing Club also starts its season in the state of Michigan this weekend. Notre Dame will be competing in a regatta at the Diamond Lake Yacht Club.

Among the 19 schools competing are all the schools from the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association and the United States Naval Academy.

"The Naval Academy will definitely be tough," said Club President Mark Ryan. "Michigan and Wisconsin will also be tough. We're looking to finish in the top five or top three."

Another club that has seen a large number of new people this year, the Rowing Club, will wait until Sept. 26 to start its season.

The crew teams will begin the year at Pittsburgh in the Head of the Ohio. The regatta will benefit the Mercy Hospital Foundation.

Lendl, Graf, Connors advance

Associated Press

NEW YORK- Top seeds Ivan Lendl and Steffi Graf advanced to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships Monday, but No. 4 women's seed Hana Mandlikova lost after being penalized a game for smashing her racket against a scoreboard.

Sixth-seeded Jimmy Connors and No. 8 John McEnroe also moved into the quarterfinals at the National Tennis Center.

Connors, hobbling on an injured right foot, beat No. 11 Henri Leconte 6-7 (0-7), 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

McEnroe, who faces fines and a two-month suspension for a tirade during his third-round victory, was relatively calm as he defeated No. 9 Andres Gomez 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Connors said his injury, which doctors have been unable to diagnose, won't force him out the tournament. "I'd play out there on a peg leg if I had to," he said. "It's the U.S.

Open. It only happens once a year."

Mandlikova, who lost to No. 9 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-1, was the second player to be penalized a game for poor behavior at the tournament. In his victory over Slobodan Zivojinovic Saturday, McEnroe was penalized for cursing and yelling.

Lendl, the two-time defending champion, beat No. 16 Anders Jarryd 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4 while Graf downed No. 13 Sylvia Hanika 7-5, 6-2.

Other women advancing to the quarterfinals were second-seeded Martina Navratilova, No. 3 Chris Evert, No. 6 Helena Sukova, No. 8 Gabriela Sabatini and No. 11 Lori McNeil.

In men's play, 14th-seeded Emilio Sanchez lost to unseeded Ken Flach in a third-round match delayed by rain.

Mandlikova got her first warning after cursing an official who had just called a foot fault on her in the fifth game of the first set.

Her temper flared again after she lost the second game of the third set by hitting a shot wide. When she cursed at the line official, Mandlikova was given a point penalty that forced her to start the next game down 0-15.

Mandlikova lost that game to fall behind 2-1 in the set. During the changeover, the 25-year-old Czechoslovakian slammed her racket against the scoreboard, prompting head referee Georgina Clark to penalize her a game.

Kohde-Kilsch won the next three games to close out the match. After shaking hands with Kohde-Kilsch, Mandlikova again smacked the scoreboard with her racket before leaving the court.

After the match, Clark said Mandlikova would be fined $500. Mandlikova could be fined EAST LANSING, Mich. - Michigan State ended Southern Cal's 13-year mastery of the Big Ten Conference by defeating the 19th-ranked but error-prone Trojans 27-13 Monday night as Spartan tailback Lorenzo White ran for two touchdowns.

Southern Cal had won 17 consecutive games against Big Ten opposition since a 42-21 loss to Ohio State in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, 1974.

It was the college football opener for both teams and made Larry Smith the fifth consecutive Southern Cal coach who failed to win his debut.

Returning to the number-one spot is sophomore Jennifer Block. Block improved her game over the summer by working with a professional at the Kalamazoo Country Club. A strong performance is also expected of junior Charlene Szajko. Sophomore Elizabeth Heinz and freshman Sarah Mayer will also be major contributors.

"The team may be young, but we have a lot of depth which I'm especially excited about. The top six have a lot of experience," said Laverie.

This experience will be crucial early, as the Belles will be competing in seven tough dual matches to prepare for the seven-team Saint Mary's Invitational on Sept. 26-27. The squad will face three Division-I schools before this tournament.

The tournament will include NCAA power and defending Mid-American Conference champion Bowling Green and Saint Francis College of the NAIA among others.

Also returning are junior Sandra Hickey and sophomores Jane Schnell and Kelly Seppi. Freshmen Mary Kate Coyle, Michelle Cheney, Carrie Goethals and Mary Turk fill the remaining spots.

Dillon pair emerges victorious in biathlon

By PAT KEARNS
Sports Writer

Many Notre Dame athletes spent Saturday afternoon swimming and running in a grueling competition known as the biathlon.

Organized by Non-Varsity Athletics, the biathlon consisted of a half-mile swim in St. Joseph's Lake directly followed by a two-mile run around the lakes.

The tandem division was won by the team of Brian Rini and Dave Steigerwald of Dillon Hall, who crossed the finish line in 19 minutes and five seconds. Twelve other teams finished behind the winners.

Dave Ledrick of Morrissey took the men's singles division in an impressive time of 21 minutes, 53 seconds. Ledrick finished before several tandem teams and was first in a field of 18 men in winning the event.

The women's division was captured in a time of 30 minutes, 31 seconds by Amy Jenista. The Breen-Phillips resident crossed the finish line before eight other biathletes to win the race.

The competitors were grouped into three different categories, all beginning the swim at the same time. The tandem team classification had one person swimming and a teammate running. There were also singles categories for men and women.

In the tandem division, the runner began his leg as the team's swimmer emerged from the water. In the singles divisions, the competitor had to leave the water and change quickly into shorts, a shirt, and shoes in order to begin the two-mile run to the finish line.

It takes a well-trained athlete to compete in a biathlon and an even better one to finish it. A few biathletes were forced to drop out of the race, but to the athletes' credit most finished the competition.

The biathlon had a good turnout this year. A total of 53 athletes competed, enough interest for the NVA to run the event again next year.

McEnroe's antics hard to swallow

Some things just never change, and John McEnroe's behavior on the tennis courts may be one of those things.

When McEnroe smashed and grunted his way into tennis prominence, experts viewed him as a great talent with a sometimes-damaging temper. His scouting reports read very much the same way today.

Saturday, in the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament's third round, McEnroe broke into one of his patented outbursts, and now he's paying for it. He was hit with a two-month suspension and fines that total $17,500. McEnroe will appeal the decision, so he is eligible to continue competing in the Open.

Rick Rietbrock

Assistant Sports Editor

Naturally, everyone must hate this guy.

But despite constantly hearing about 'Big Mac Attacks' and other deplorable acts by 'McNasty' and reading what a disgrace his behavior is to the gentlemanly sport of tennis, how vulgar and objectionable a picture he presents to the youth of our nation and what an out-and-out imbecile he is, he still has a decent fan following.

That is not to say he's the fans' darling, of course. The folks at Wimbledon will not honor him with too many ovations. He was also booed by American fans in Davis Cup competition. He seems, however, to command a certain amount of respect that carries over the tantrums and the 'brat' image. Why?

A large group of tennis fans will say that they greatly admire McEnroe's tennis ability (especially before he took time off from the game), but abhor his whining and constant complaining. Great player, but lousy person.

This group prefers the cool demeanor of players such as Mats Wilander. Perhaps the best example was the highly-respected Bjorn Borg, who was a great competitor but did not let that turn him into an intimidating maniac.

But these fans are drawing a fine line. Ivan Lendl has one of the game's coolest approaches, yet he is viewed as cold and distant.

Detractors of Lendl will say they prefer someone who shows some emotion, someone who they know is giving a great effort. Who better to display that mode than Boris Becker, who dives more often in a year than Greg Louganis. The fans seem to want assurances that the game requires all-out effort and Lendl makes it look too easy.

No one can say that McEnroe does not play with intensity, but he carries it too far for the refined, cultured fan that wants the game to be a montage of courteous smiles and sportsmanlike handshakes. He swims against the tide.

Not too long ago, another American player, Jimmy Connors, was the game's bad boy. He was the one lashing out at the umpires and then he couldn't even get along with Chris Evert, the ultimate sweetheart.

Now Connors is wearing a white hat. He's the old guy, still hanging in there, battling the young turks and the fans love him. He has mellowed with age and most of his demonstrations are poking fun at himself, not the umpires. What a great guy he turned out to be.

The tennis world held its breath and hoped the same process would bring McEnroe's antics down to a simmer

Stebbins adds spark to Irish

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team will put its spotless 2-0 record on the line this week as it takes to the road to play Detroit and Western Michigan.

One of the keys to a successful road trip that will tally two more victories for the Irish will be the play of freshman Dan Stebbins.

The Milwaukee native has only two games experience coming off the bench for the Irish, but his play has already made an impact on the team.

"He is a tremendous athlete," says Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "He's good soccer player with good technique and he has shown a lot of maturity."

Stebbins declined scholarship offers from Indiana, Evansville and Wisconsin-Milwaukee, opting instead for Notre Dame's program which has become competitive among regional powers and offers a student-athlete a chance for a strong academic background.

Stebbins has accepted his position as a forward coming off the bench and has been able to make a smooth transition into the ranks of college soccer.

Although used to more scoring responsibilities, he has not been pressured to come up with the goals that Grace insists "will come experience."

"I'd like to become a stronger finisher in scoring and possibly earn a starting position," says Stebbins, "but for now I'm glad to have a chance to push some of the seniors into playing harder and in doing so make them better players."

He hopes that scoring his first goal will break the ice and lessen the nerves that have slightly hampered his play thus far. He has compensated for a lack of experience with his intense play.

"He has the work ethic and the attitude that we are looking for," says Grace. "He has been cooperative in trying to grow and learn and we are very pleased with him."

The Irish will need strong performances out the entire team to do well against a tough Detroit team. The Titans have already defeated the Great Lakes region's sixth ranked team, Bowling Green, despite beginning only its first year with varsity status.

Much like Notre Dame, Western Michigan will enter tomorrow's game with momentum gained in a victory over Drake. The Broncos will be looking to avenge last year's 2-0 loss to the Irish.

"Western Michigan is a young team that starts five to six freshman," said Grace,

SMC tennis opens year at Valpo

By ANNE GALLAGHER
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's varsity tennis team plans to open its season at 3 p.m. today at Valparaiso.

Belles coach Debre Laverie expressed strong optimism for the season.

"There is no reason we can't go undefeated in our division," said Laverie. The squad returns with two juniors and four sophomores. Almost half the team this year will be freshmen.

"As usual we've drawn a great recruiting class without scholarships," said Laverie.

Other reasons for optimism are the increase of a competitive attitude among the players and their good physical condition.

Laverie's goal is to win the Indiana State Championships and advance to the NAIA national championships, which escaped the team's grasp by a

Women's soccer ties Illinois

While most club teams are planning to begin their seasons in the next week or two, the Women's Soccer Club started its season last weekend.

The Irish traveled to the University of Illinois last Saturday and played the Fighting Illini to a scoreless tie. Goalkeeper Helen Gilboy was a key to the defense's strong performance on the road.

"The defense was definitely strong," said Club Secretary and right halfback Karen Logsdon. "We didn't get enough shots off. We're a young team, and we'd only been practicing a week."

Notre Dame will play two games this week, traveling to Wheaton tomorrow and meeting Marquette on Sunday in the squad's first home game.

"We'll be competitive," said Logsdon. "Our middle's inexperienced, but I think we're going to have a good season."

Another team competing last weekend was the Women's Golf Club, which hosted an 11-team tournament last Saturday and Sunday.

Notre Dame split into two squads for the tournament.
